Cavern Explored

Several days ago, an expedition from Carrizozo explored a large cave only thirteen miles southeast of this place, near the Sears Crockett ranch.

The cave unfolded, showing a surprisingly large central room, and many beautiful and rare formations such as stalactites, stalagmites, mushroom and sponge deposits, alabaster and gypsum walls were found. Quite a few bats were evident.

The party was made up of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Snow and son Charles, Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Hall, sons Bobby and Tommy, C. Evans of the C C C a m p, small son and Scoutmaster Phil Bright.

One of the above party recently visited the 'Cave of the Winds' in Colorado where 120,000 people paid 50c to enter last summer. If 120,000 people will drive 50 miles out of Denver to see a cavern a third as large as the one above mentioned, only 18 miles out of Carrizozo, judge for yourself the possibilities.

The tiny "life line" which is carrying milk to the stomach of sweet little Nancy Lee Vogt will, according to latest reports, save the little 15 ounces of loving humanity, at Oakland, Calif. At first, she was given but 25 drops of mother's milk, but physicians have increased the diet to two teaspoonfuls every two hours. At first, a medicine dropper was used, but now they have designed a special feeding tube. Latest reports say that the wee piece of humanity has gained to the weight of nearly two pounds.

Henry Reider of the Nebraska University should have a medal. He has created what he has named a "Bonaphone." The queer musical instrument was made out of the ribs of a prehistoric rhinoceros, found in Ainsworth, where workmen were excavating for a cellar. He has arranged the ribs uniformly, taking the heaviest ribs for the bass and the smaller keys in order to produce the range of sound, much like the xylophone. Henry is an expert on his queer instrument and makes a hit every time he appears in public. Some of the ribs bear a close resemblance to those of a human. Ladies, more especially, are interested, on account of the bible narrative of Eve being created from the rib of Adam.

It took two policemen and three bystanders an hour to relieve the child, which they did by thawing the ice from the pole with luke warm water. The only words she uttered after being freed were, "no dood tase."

Jim Purvis of Louisiana, was tried, convicted and hung for the murder of a man by the name of Buckley. The murder was committed on a lonely road and one witness swore he saw Jim shoot Buckley. Purvis produced evidence that he was at work in his father's field at the said time, but the evidence of the sight-seeing witness had the most weight. He was taken to the scaffold, bound hand and foot, the black cap drawn down over his eyes—and the trap sprung. Then something happened. The noose slipped, but the jolt rendered him unconscious for two hours. He was re-sentenced and ordered to again be hung. Before the time came, a neighbor confessed being with the killer, who had been dead 1 year. The state gave Jim $5,000, he has a farm, is married, has three children and still votes the Democratic ticket.

Lesson for February 16

JESUS' REPLY TO JOHN THE BAPTIST'S QUESTION

LESSON TEXT—Luke 7:19-23. GOLDEN TEXT—I believe; help thou mine unbelief.—Mark 9:24. PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Answers John's Question. JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Answers John's Question. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Meeting Doubts With Facts. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How Jesus Answers Honest Doubts.

The title, "Jesus Helps a Doubter," given by the lesson committee, is not a good one. John was not a doubter, though somewhat perplexed. Jesus specifically defends him against such a charge (see Matt. 11:7-11 as well as the present text). It is to be hoped that no teacher will perpetrate this error. John was a great man. In announcing his birth the angel said, "He shall be great in the sight of the Lord." He was great, also, when measured by the standards of men. In teaching this lesson a surmise should be made of John's life and work.

I. John's Birth and Ministry Foretold (Lsa. 40:3; cf. Matt. 3:3). He was thought about and his work planned long before he was born. He came as God's messenger.

II. John's Character. 1. Humble (Luke 3:4). He did not seek human praise and commendation, but shrank from them. His supreme concern was to proclaim Christ. 2. Courageous (Luke 3:7). He faced a great multitude and struck hard at their sins. He did not trim his message to suit the crowd.

III. John's Preaching (Luke 3:3-8). 1. He sounded forth a ringing call to repentance (vv. 3-6). Suddenly emerging from his seclusion, he came into the region of the Jordan as a messenger of God, calling upon the people to repent as a means of preparation for the coming of the Messiah.

2. He demanded proofs of penitence (vv. 7, 8). He insisted that their false prophets had to be abandoned, their stultified hearts had to be renovated; showing them that the vile passions of their souls must be uprooted. The turning of a soul from sin to God, was necessary.

IV. John Sent a Deputation to Jesus (Luke 7:19-23).

1. Their question (v. 19, 20). "Art thou he that should come? or look we for another?" Because John did not see the interval between the sufferings of Christ and the glory that should follow—between the cross of Christ and his second coming—he was perplexed; therefore, he sent a deputation to Jesus for light. This perplexity was not something culpable in John because the prophets did not see, or at least did not make clear, the interval between the crucifixion of Christ and his second coming. The Messiah, he knew, had to be the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world (John 1:29). The trend of events puzzled him. It was not a lack of faith, but confusion of mind, that prompted his inquiry. There were two lines of predictions concerning the Messiah; the one set him forth as the suffering One, as in Isaiah 53; the other as an invincible conqueror, as in Isaiah 63. Indeed, in Isaiah 60:1, 2 the two are joined together (Luke 4:17-20).

2. Jesus' action (v. 21). In that same hour, doubtless in the presence of John's disciples, Jesus cured many of their infirmities and plagues, and of evil spirits, and to many that were blind he gave sight. 3. Jesus' message to John (vv. 22, 23). Jesus said to them, "Go your way, and tell John what things ye have seen and heard."

V. Jesus' Defense of John (Luke 7:24-28).

1. He declared that John was not vacillating like a reed swayed by the wind (v. 24). 2. John was not doubting because of the hardship of prison life (v. 25). 3. John was not a mistaken prophet (vv. 26-28). He makes John equal to the greatest of the Old Testament prophets by declaring that among those born of women there hath not arisen a greater prophet than John.

4. The response of the people (v. 29). The people who heard this defense, even the publicans, accepted it as a vindication of John. They justified God. They not only accepted the vindication, but were baptized with the baptism of John.

VI. John's Martyrdom (Mark 6:14-29).

While John was in prison Herod had frequent interviews with him. John boldly told him that it was unlawful for him to have his brother's wife. He did not place matters even with a king. This so enraged the licentious Herodias that she caused his death.

Love and Faith
As love is deepest in the being of God, so faith is the mightiest principle in the soul of man. Let us distinguish their several essences. Love is the essence of duty, faith is the essence of humanity which constitute it what it is.

Humility and Pride
Humility is the true proof of Christian virtues. Without it, we retain all our faults, and they are only hidden by pride, which conceals them from others, and often from ourselves.

The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

TO SAVE the bindings of books either because they are choice or because they are shabby, make paper covers or use textiles instead of the stiff paper. Both the cloth and paper covers can be smart and ornamental today, as novelty papers in suitable weight are procurable, and decorative fabrics are to be found in profusion.

Waterproof cloth is best for book covers, and those which are handled in the kitchen. If these covers get wet or spotted, they can be restored merely by rubbing the cover with a wet cloth, or by using soap and water or a cleaning agent on the spots. Textile covers can be made in either one of two ways. One long strip of material, lined, can be bound along edges, this binding to be put on after each end of the goods has been turned toward the inside in a hem of several inches. The depth of this hem depends on the size of the book to be covered. The length between hems must be adequate for the front and back bindings to be slipped under the hems and the book to close without tension on the textile.

Method for Paper.

The other way to cover a book applies both to paper and textiles. Make a paper pattern by centering the open book on a strip of paper wider than the volume and several inches longer. Make slightly diagonal cuts for edge of top and bottom of paper as far in as the back of the book, leaving the space between these cuts, the width of the back. Fold slashed portions under the book. Close the volume and fold the paper over lengthwise edge of back and front bindings. Fold side portions over bindings and at corners, tuck paper or textile under front of bindings to form uncut but mitered corners.

The various folds of paper or material provide extra durability. Paper, being stiff and firm, will stay in place, but where the mitering comes in corners of textiles, there should be a few stitches put in to prevent covers from slipping.

The choice of smart patterned papers such as are imported, and choice textiles, determine the handsome character of these covers. Brocades are exquisite, glazed chitzis is recommended also in fabrics. Never use wallpapers, however good looking, as they are by no means strong enough, and they will rub with constant handling.

Unit Furniture.

Unit furniture, that is furniture that is made not merely of separate pieces in themselves, but also to combine so that the units form other pieces, is one of these modern era styles. Many possibilities lurk in unit furniture. It is especially desirable in small apartments, or in rooms which serve double purposes as instances in living room bedrooms, which the English term "bed sitting rooms."

Another good feature of the unit furniture is that it can be combined to save space, or separated to afford extra furniture. Also it can be shifted about and used in other combinations so that different furnishings can be secured at a moment's notice and with little effort, and the needs of the hour can be supplied with no extra outlay.

An interesting arrangement of unit furniture consists of three chairs, or two chairs and one ottoman and an end table, which is also a bookcase and which can form an arm for one chair, or the head of a studio couch when the three chairs or two chairs and one ottoman are positioned in a straight line. By pushing the ottoman into the angle of a wall by an open fire, and using large pillows for the back, and placing a side chair close to each end, you will have an inglenook, or a corner couch. By separating them you have two chairs and an ottoman. These three units prove living room furniture, or bedroom to fill these respective needs at different times in the twenty-four hours.

Brightening Dark Rooms

Stronger contrasts of colors can be used in rooms inclined to be dark than in well lighted interiors, according to F. N. Vandewalker in his new book "Interior Wall Decoration." Here, the lover of brilliant hues may use yellows, reds, and tints of orange. Fabrics with prominent patterns and wall finishes with rough textures are also effective in dark rooms.

Get Painter in Time

Painting is one of the things that costs money to do without. Wear from weather is continually taking place and if there is insufficient paint protection, the house suffers.

Painting Preparation

When preparing to do a painting job, be sure that your paint is well mixed. It's a good idea to pour the paint from one can into another and back again four or five times.

USE OF SPICES HELPS COOKERY

Gives Flavor and Zest to All Kinds of Dishes.

By EDITH M. BARBER
COOKERY as an art has been said—perhaps justly—to have begun with the introduction of spices into it. For thousands of years spices had been highly prized for medicinal uses. They were literally worth their weight in gold and were considered fit gifts for a king.

While salt is not a spice we group it with spices as a condiment—the oldest condiment in the world. Some of the earliest trading between groups of people began with the exchange of other products for salt. In the days of the Romans the soldiers were given a special appropriation for this purpose.

The spices used today in largest proportion are peppers of various types, mustard, cinnamon, ginger, nutmeg, and clove. Among the peppers are black, white, cayenne, paprika and chili. Mustard is used in a number of forms—the dry powdered mustard flour, the whole seed and in its mixed form.

English mustard is usually strong in flavor and at its best is very good. Indeed, The well-known Bahaman mustard is of the English type. French mustard is more delicate in flavor, as it is usually mixed with wine or wine vinegar, sometimes flavored with tarragon. Epicures are very particular about the flavor of blended mustard. If you wish to mix your own you may use wine, vinegar, cream or milk.

In this country the mustard pot usually accompanies cold meat, hot corned beef and sometimes roast beef. A hot mustard sauce is delicious with either meat or fish. Dijon, on account of its famous mustard, has given its name to many French dishes. If you see the word Dijonnaise on the menu you may be sure that mustard will be used as a seasoning.

While mustard is usually used with main dishes, cinnamon has its largest use in combination with sweets.

Nutmeg may be used as a seasoning or as a flavoring. There is much discussion as to whether nutmeg or cinnamon should be used with apples. The nutmeg is the kernel of the fruit of an East Indian tree. Mace comes from the same fruit and is found around the kernels. Grated nutmeg is satisfactory as long as it is fresh. The whole nutmeg, of course, retains its flavor longer.

Ginger is also a tropical product. The roots are used for flavoring. When they are used in their natural form they are known as green ginger or ginger root. The roots are sometimes preserved or crystallized. The great majority, however, are dried and powdered.

Cloves have a long history of warfare over their possession. They come from the so-called Spice Islands, the East Indies, East Africa and the West Indies. Cloves have a varied use in the preparation of meats as well as of desserts and pickles. They are used in their whole form about as much as they are in the more modern powdered flavorings.

Cover and cook over a low fire about two hours. Crumble ginger snaps and add with the sugar to the liquid around the meat. Cook ten minutes more. Add more salt to the gravy if necessary.

All Around the House

Cacti plants grown in the house should be given air and light. To water set pots in a pan of water and do not remove until soil has become moist.

Apply paint remover with a brush. When paint begins to curl remove with a putty knife. Remover takes time and cannot be hurried.

Water should never be poured on burning fat. It will spread the blaze. Flour will extinguish the blaze.

If hot paraffin is poured over paint left unused in a can it will not harden.

Tips of canned asparagus may be removed whole if the bottom instead of the top of can is opened.

When poaching eggs let water come to a full rolling boil, drop eggs into it, turn out gas and eggs will finish poaching in the boiling water.

For roasting pork 20 to 25 minutes to the pound is required. Pork should never be roasted in a quick oven.

To clean artificial fruit dip it in white soap suds several times, then rinse in clear water to which a few drops of ammonia has been added.

To tighten springs in curtain rollers, hold roller firmly, put end of spring between tines of fork and turn until spring is tight.

A suds made of napha soap and sprayed over house plants will destroy small insects that infest them.

Man Is Wise, Asleep, Fool or Child—Arabic Proverb

An old Arabian proverb says that men are four: "He who knows, and knows he knows,—he is wise—follow him. "He who knows, and knows not he knows,—he is asleep—wake him. "He who knows not, and knows not he knows not,—he is a fool—shun him. "He who knows not, and knows he knows not,—he is a child—teach him."

Given Freely, but Most Scrupulously Taken: Advice
Advice is almost the only commodity which the world is lavish in bestowing and scrupulous in receiving; we seldom ask it until it is too late, and still more rarely take it while there is yet time to profit by it. A Grave Mistake for a Mother to Make
GIVING CHILD UNKNOWN REMEDIES WITHOUT ASKING DOCTOR FIRST

GIVING your child a medicine or remedy you don't know all about—without asking your family doctor first—is a bad risk for any mother to take. Doctors and child authorities say health, and sometimes life itself, depends on this. So—when you're offered a "bargain" in a remedy for your child; ask your doctor before

A Kansas Investigation Would be Greatly Beneficial

The present administration could do nothing better than to lay off for a given length of time and spend it on an investigation of affairs in the state of Kansas.

Bear this in mind! The state has no debt. It has a fine highway system developed on the pay-as-you-go plan. It has very few of the so-called nuisance taxes that so handicap most of its sister states.

The federal government under Democratic rule, has been on a maniacal spree of spending the people's money, the major portion of which has gone to willful waste. Such tactics has added many burdens in taxation where it could have been avoided.

It has set the spending example to the states, many of which are now calling on the people to get into the yoke of additional taxation burdens so excessive as to discourage business and frighten honest capital into withdrawing from the industrial field.

Gov. Landon of Kansas has set the example of lowering taxes instead of the suicidal policy practiced by the present administration. People in the ordinary walks of life are not afraid to live in Kansas. They know that the state is free from debt. They know that taxes are lower than any other state in the union.

Kansas can boast of less unemployment than any other state in the union. And it's all due to the economical policy of Gov. Landon and the Kansas Legislature.

A man who has done that much for his home state, can do the same for the nation.

The coming Republican Convention could do nothing so wise in these trying times as to nominate a man like Gov. Landon. —Look well to Kansas.

The Gong for Borah

Senator Borah lost all the feathers in his head dress when he went into the secret chamber with President Roosevelt last week. Borah refused to state the nature of the mouth-to-ear confab which he had with the President, but in view of the fact that he gave his support to every New Deal measure for the past three years except the NRA, would cause the people to think the result of that talk was like this: "If I don't get the nomination on the Republican ticket, I'll support you." In other words, "you tickle me and I'll tickle you."

People Alarmed by 'New Powers'

President's Admission of Peril to Liberties Stirs Critics.

President Roosevelt's statement in his message to congress in which he said he had built up "new instruments of power," has caused widespread discussion. Among those criticizing the President's assumption of increased authority and his public defense of it are individuals who previously have supported certain of his other policies. These critics point out that Mr. Roosevelt admitted the power he had "built up" would endanger liberties of the people if transferred from him to a successor in the presidency.

One of the discussions of this threat to constitutional safeguards appeared as an editorial in a recent issue of the Topeka Daily Capital, owned by Senator Arthur Capper, farm leader and publisher, of Kansas. Senator Capper has been notably friendly toward most of the New Deal policies. Citizens Will Protest. The editorial declares that every citizen of the United States who loves liberty will protest against the admission of the President that he has built up instruments of power that threaten the people's liberties. The editorial is entitled, "An Astonishing Declaration." Portions of it follow: "In his remarkable message to congress last Friday evening, President Roosevelt made the following astonishing statement: "In 34 months we have built up new instruments of public power. In the hands of a people's government this power is wholesome and proper. But in the hands of political puppets of an economic autocracy such power would provide shackles for the liberties of the people."

Charges Fascist Regime. "In other words we see the President of the United States boldly and defiantly declaring that he and his associates have built up a Fascist regime which by inference safeguards the liberties of the people of the United States only so long as he, Mr. Roosevelt, continues in power. "Every dictator in the world makes exactly the same claim. Neither Stalin, nor Mussolini, nor Hitler will admit that he is making slaves of the people he rules or is placing shackles on their liberty.

"Liberty Already Lost." "If what he says is true then we have already lost our liberty and there is no longer a government of the people, but it is a government of an autocratic organization headed by Franklin D. Roosevelt."

The editorial concludes with this paragraph: "President Roosevelt's own admission that he, in the last 34 months, has built up new instruments of power that makes it possible for any President—no matter how autocratic—to shackle the liberties of the people, ought to defeat him for re-election."

2,354 Employees of AAA Discovered on Pay Day

When the AAA decision was rendered the latest official figures of the Civil Service commission showed the AAA payroll carried 6,646 employees. Two weeks later it was announced 9,000 employees had been paid off. The extra 2,354 employees, it seems, had been working for AAA but had been listed as employees of the Treasury department.

As a matter of fact, however, the 9,000 employees thus disclosed are but a small part of the great army of men and women who have been working for AAA. Literally tens of thousands of persons have been hired by county agents throughout the country, the agents being allowed a free hand as to the number of persons put on these "temporary" and "special" payrolls. Use of these extra employees has been particularly heavy in local administration of the Bankhead cotton act.

New Deal bookkeeping and records present so many complexities that it is practically impossible for outsiders to "sort out" the horde of 800,000 "emergency" employees, to say nothing of the many thousands of others on special rolls. The salaries of the 800,000 alone approximate $120,000,000 a month.

Budget Message Assailed as 'Deceptive,' 'Confusing'

Conclusions drawn by President Roosevelt from the figures presented in his 1936 budget message are challenged by the American Liberty League. A statement issued by the League says:

"The government under the Securities Exchange act compels private corporations to file unequivocal and complete information as to their fiscal affairs. If any corporation should offer a statement as deceptive and confusing as the President's budget message, it would be prosecuted under the penal section of the statute."

BANKERS SUPPORT ACTIVE AGRICULTURAL COMMISSION

The Agricultural Commission of the American Bankers Association is promoting widely among bankers the practice of aiding their farm customers in installing on their farms better financial, accounting and operating methods. It also cooperates in the endeavors of the state bankers' associations along similar lines.

The commission has published a book on "Making Farm Investments Safe," presenting a compendium of helpful material published over a period of years as a reference guide in the daily routine of banking and farming relationships. It has also published "Factors Affecting Farm Credit," discussing in an illustrative way how farm credit can be obtained on a sound basis.

Another publication is the monthly Bulletin of the commission which circulates to about 10,000 persons, among them the county agents throughout the United States, who make frequent use of the material and suggestions prepared by the commission. Likewise, the commission has appointed 2,800 key bankers covering every county in the United States, who act as focal points in their districts in fostering better understanding between bankers and farmers.

A HUGE BANKING SYSTEM

The latest official figures covering all banks in the United States show that there are 16,032 licensed banking institutions of every kind and that over 63,000,000 persons have entrusted them with their deposits to the amount of $44,800,000,000.

The Way of Inflation

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN National Chairman Sentinels of the Republic

If a merchant, or a farmer, or the average householder persistently spends more than he earns, he goes broke. He pays for his folly in the wreck of his business, his property, and, perhaps, his career.

With governments it can be different. From time to time various nations have indulged in continued reckless expenditures, yet escaped immediate collapse. How? By resort to the desperate remedy of inflation—whether of currency or of credit.

The difference is that the individual bears the brunt of the blow himself, while governments pass it on to their citizens.

History has demonstrated this on many occasions. Perhaps the best remembered example of recent years is that of Germany, where post-war inflation brought hardship and hunger to millions of workers. Records do not show that the clever politicians who brought it all about, or the very rich, went hungry. That was reserved for the average run of citizens, who saw prices rise so swiftly that neither earnings nor savings could keep pace with them.

For a while the situation grew so serious that workmen found it necessary to demand pay for their services at the end of each day's labor. They knew that if they waited, prices might mount so rapidly that even a week's pay couldn't buy one bowl of soup.

Germany's experience was not an isolated one. It has been duplicated to a lesser degree in many countries and in many periods of history. It is because of the evidence such experiments offer, that an increasing number of thoughtful Americans oppose the course of reckless government expenditure that causes inflation.

The concern of such citizens is not for the very rich and the very shrewd—who know just when to buy and sell, or how to rig or play the stock market. It is rather for the average family that depends on a weekly or monthly wage for income, and a savings account or life insurance policy for security. These are the people who shoulder the burden and suffer the hurts of inflation.

And these are the people who can stop its course. They face a great responsibility. Under our Constitution the conduct of national affairs rests ultimately in their hands. If they insist on reasonable economy, the men who represent them in government must obey the mandate. If they remain indifferent, they encourage either the burden of increased taxes, or the still heavier toll of inflation with all its golden opportunities for the speculator, and its grim penalties for the worker.

Great Lakes

Business and Pleasure Craft Pass on the Great Lakes.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

BELIEVE it or not, the Great Lakes of North America contain half the fresh water on earth; enough to cover the continental United States 10 to 18 feet deep, or to fill a 200-foot ship canal from here to the moon!

Africa's largest lake, Victoria Nyanza, would cover most of Lake Superior, but it would take 71 Victorias to fill it. Asia's premier lake, the Aral sea, is a bit larger than Lake Huron, but it would take four Arals to fill one Huron. Two Lake Balkas would scarcely reach beyond the edges of Lake Michigan, although they would contain nearly three times as much water.

If they only lay there, banking in the sun or raging with storms, our inland seas would be impressive. But they have served America as no inland sea has served another land. At every corner of the Great Lakes, and because of them, busy cities have risen. On the banks of a hundred tiny creeks commerce has planted its loading piers or elevators.

Our bridges crossed our lakes as ere before they crossed a river. Scarcely a skyscraper whose framework has not followed in the swell of our "Big Sea Water" before combing our urban skies. The story of our Great Lakes is one of unbelievably cheap freight rates, of marvellously active freighters, of fur and lumber, iron and grain.

Early Route to the Midwest.
In the days when the principal crop of America was cold-bred fur, the St. Lawrence was the gateway to our Midwest. While the English were seeking the Northwest passage to the alluring Orient and colonists along the Atlantic were consolidating their position against the wilderness, French voyagers and missionaries were following stream and portage to the heart of America.

Colonization was caught between sea and mountain. Exploration paddled its swift canoes on lakes and rivers. The fur was the incentive, and temporal or spiritual empire the dream. Of Nicolet, Joliet, Marquette, and La Salle, to whom the watershed between the Great Lakes and the wide Mississippi basin was familiar while the British were still settling the seaboard. An early "M" one could ride horseback from Portland, Maine, to Richmond, Va., sleeping each night in a village. But the Appalachian barrier held. Meanwhile the French, more nomadic, were spread thinly over a tremendous inland empire.

In 1803 most of this land became ours through the Louisiana purchase, and the vast territory which fur traders and Indian alliances had won for France gave trans-Appalachian colonization new impetus. For a little less than four cents an acre the young American republic acquired rich agricultural lands stretching to the headwaters of the Missouri and the Yellowstone.

Buffalo an Aquatic City.
At the northern end of the lakes where vast red mountains are stood ready for the steam shovel. Coal moved north and iron south, a combination involving profitable return cargoes. However a creek reached the south shore of Lake Erie, coal and ore were tossed back and forth by car tiple and "mammoth".

Protected from early traffic competition by the Niagara falls, which were later to furnish its light and power, Buffalo, rich inland port, stands at the east end of the upper lakes and the west end of the only convenient break in the Appalachian Superlatives, which swarm around the Great Lakes, here at Buffalo.

This favored spot no more suggests the lion than Rome does. It is not a city, but an aquatic city, founded on the creek that still sustains it. Its real greatness began on October 25, 1825, when the Seneca Chief started down the 4-foot-deep Erie canal. The news of its departure thundered by steamers from Buffalo to New York 200 miles in 30 minutes—about which like those of the Minutemen, were heard around the world.

On November 4, 1825, the canal-boat flotilla arrived at Sandy Hook, where Governor Clinton poured Lake Erie water into the Atlantic near New York City, which "Clinton's Ditch" was to lift to the position of America's premier port.

Connected With the Gulf.
On June 22, 1833, at Chicago, salt water from the Gulf of Mexico was blended with Lake Michigan water, when a flotilla of Mississippi river barges, bearing spices, coffee, and sugar, arrived at Lake Michigan. Bascule bridges, pointing like howitzers at the tall-peaked phalanx of skyscrapers, aroused the raucous protests of a chorus of klaxons, and pseudo-Indian war-whoops sounded over the busy waters beside which lonely Fort Dearborn first rose on a swampy shore.

The 9-foot channel does today what river and glacier did more than once in the past—links the Great Lakes with the Gulf. St. Louis has become an export port for northern wheat. It took 200 years for Joliet's dream of a Lakes-to-Gulf waterway to come true, although Lake Michigan water has flowed into the Mississippi basin since 1871.

Try to force your way through underbrush or struggle along on foot beneath such a burden as is easily carried in a light canoe, and you will realize why the French penetrated this continent by following Indian guides upon its rivers.

Canals extended the natural waterways. Then wagon wheels overrode the objections raised by the owners of pack horses and railroads won their share.

The motorcar, bringing broad, smooth highways, set the tax-collecting filling station in the place of tollgates, and passenger car and truck invaded the steel-webbed empire of the Iron Horse. The Panama canal, opened in time to do its bit in the World war, brought our coasts together.

Four Routes to Tidewater.
The new Wolland canal and the Illinois waterway are additional transport factors in a region where motor manufacturers, having vied with steam engines, now face competitive traffic problems involving railways, lake steamers, truckways, now car convoys, and widely distributed assembly plants.

Each form of transportation, fighting for its share, now forges ahead, now lags behind. But were traffic stopped on our inland seas, our industrial life would sustain a major shock.

Four routes to Tidewater.
The Illinois waterway, with a 9-foot channel; the New York state barge canal and its branch to Oswego, both with a depth of 12 feet; and the St. Lawrence canal, in which there are 14 feet of water. The deepest artificial link is the new Wolland canal, which not only has 30 feet of water on the sills of its spectacular locks, but also accomplishes the steepest lift—32½ feet in 25 miles.

Even before the war occasional tramp steamers entered the Great Lakes from tidewater, and today ocean bottoms are no novelty. In 1855 over a hundred steamers from overseas ports brought in codfish, oil, canned fish, and merchandise from Europe to Detroit, and departed with pitch, wood pulp, and motorcars.

Shiphoads of automobiles have been sent direct from Detroit to London and Hamburg. Rumanian oil, coming direct from the Black sea, competes with American gasoline in Detroit. Ships regularly sail from the River Rouge to ocean ports around the world. The economic balance beam is seldom at rest.

The Permanent Wave Gland
A DISCOVERY that might easily save American women millions of dollars every year has been reported from Prospect, Conn., by Carl Louis Mortison, artist and correspondent for the Waterbury (Conn.) Republican. According to Mr. Mortison, Mrs. Lester Green of Prospect and her daughter have permanent waves that are the envy of the neighborhood.

It seems that Lester Green, while butchering, discovered a minute gland which produces a fluid responsible for the curl or kink in a pig's tail. This fluid, when extracted, diluted with water and rubbed on the hair produced a wave for Mrs. Green and his daughter that not only promises to have lasting qualities but also defies rain. In fact, shampooing only freshens it and makes it more potent.

Mr. Green visualizes great possibilities for this magic fluid. He believes that its greatest value will be demonstrated in manufacturing bed springs. He says that by immersing steel or brass wire in the solution it coils immediately into a spring and he predicts that his discovery may revolutionize the bed spring manufacturing business. So far, he has not patented the process and anyone who wants to try it and make their own bed springs is welcome to do so.

The White Cliffs of Dover

BACK in the days when we had iron men on wooden ships instead of wooden men on iron ships, said Cap'n John of Marblehead, "I signed on for my first cruise with Old Stormaloug. A big feller the skipper was—just four fathoms and a compass width from the deck to the bridge of his nose.

"He had to be, of course, for his vessel, the Courser, was the biggest ship on the Atlantic. Why, I mind the day he sent a young feller aloft to push a cloud of the top of the mainmast . . . when he came down he was dripping wet with somethin' white. 'Danged near drowned up there in the Milky Way . . .' he was sputterin'.

"But I was starlin' to tell you about that time a storm drove us toward the English channel. Between Calais and the cliffs of Dover Old Stormaloug took one squint ahead and yelled: 'Will she make it?'

"'May scrape a bit of paint off'n her sides but I think she will,' answered the man at the wheel.

"'Can't have that!' roared 'Old Stormaloug. 'All hands over and soap the sides . . . put an extra heavy coat on the starboard.'

"The next minute me and the rest of the crew was plasterin' the sides of the Courser with all the soap we had on board and she eased through without a bit of trouble. Of course, it was such a tight fit that the Dover cliffs scraped every bit of the soap off the starboard side. Ever since those cliffs have been pure white. . . that's our soap still clingin' to 'em. Sure it is! Next time you go through the channel take a look at the waves. They're still a bit foamy from that same soap!"

When You See a Wimpuss—

A WIMPUSS, according to Austin Butcher, editor of the Altoona (Kan.) Tribune, is a rare animal which grows about as big as a hoochie-bug, but it has a long tail like a collywop and wings like a bearcat. It lives in the top of high trees, whence it flies down to attack defenseless travelers. However, no harm is to be feared from a wimpuss if you know what to do when you see one coming.

It is folly to shoot at one, for a wimpuss catches bullets in its teeth and eats them. The only way to do when one comes at you is to take a piece of cheese, either Edam or Swiss, and tack it securely on a waterfall. The wimpuss makes a swoop at the cheese and gets mixed up with the waterfall and gets its feet wet.

It makes a wimpuss mad as all get-out when he gets his feet wet. So he hunts around for a nice piece of grass to dry them on. The minute the wimpuss lights on the grass, the hunter rushes at him and ties his tail in a double bow knot. When a wimpuss has his tail tied in a double bow knot he is gone, because when he tries he always ducks his head under his body to see who is following him. In doing this he gets his head caught in the double knot and chokes himself to death.

Hyde Park in London

In the reign of Henry VIII Hyde Park in London was a dense forest in which there were many wild boars. It is now London's most fashionable park. It is three miles in circumference and has an area of 351 acres. The best part toward the Marble arch, as a favorite spot for public orators and is frequently used for mass-meetings. Rotten Row, in the park, is a horse-back ride of a mile and a half. Its name was originally Roughten's Rue, or street, and it was used by Lord Roughten and his friends as a bridge park. Kensington gardens, covering 300 acres, adjoin the park. Park lanes, containing some of the finest mansions in London, runs alongside the park.

Floyd Gibbons ADVENTURERS' CLUB

Hello, Everybody!

"Bucking Bronchos on Broadway"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter.

SOFARELLI is the name, boys and girls, and Pat is the first name. There's a combination for you, Patrick Sofarelli. Whenever you get that combination of good old Irish and Italian names adventure is the middle one. Pat's middle name is Adventure.

Incidentally, have you ever noticed how the Irish get mixed up with all the races of the world? South America is full of Senor Murphys and Senor O'Learys, and they are all good old Spanish-American families that have lived three hundreds of years. When I was in Spain I was astonished to find a lot of freckle-faced, red-headed seniors, too, that had the map of Ireland on their faces.

The reason for the "turkey" blood in southern Spain is this: During the Napoleonic campaign in Spain, Wellington sent an army of Irish conscripts into that country. Those romantic Irish boys took one look at the size-eyed Spanish senoritas, and the senoritas took one longing look at the blue-eyed giants, and the result was the Irish deserted by thousands and settled down to raise red-heads in old Spain. And they certainly did a good job of it.

Getting back to Pat Sofarelli. Pat's Italian forebears had their share of adventure, too. Why, by golly, those old Romans didn't think a thing of traveling a few thousand miles for a week-end of high adventure and conquest. The difference between the two races was that the Romans always fought their own wars, and how!

This Adventure Starts With an Ice Wagon.

One bright summer's day when Pat and his boy friends were bored with the prosaic life of New York, an ice wagon drew up in front of them and offered possibilities for adventure.

"I dare you to ride the ice man's horse," one of them said to Pat. Well, Pat doesn't take dars, so he just climbed up on that wagon and crawled out on the shafts. The horse was a big brute, but he didn't seem to mind. He just stood there and waited. The ice man was out of sight, so Pat swung a leg over his trusty mount and plopped into the saddle—mean the bareback.

Well, sir, Pat says he had no sooner taken his uncertain seat than that meek ice wagon horse turned into a wild bucking bronco. Wham! He put his ears back and his back up and started to kick like a colt. Pat got a death grip on the harness and held on. Up in the air he went at every buck, to come down on the hard backbone of the horse with a jolt that shook every bone in his body.

City Street Is No Place to Run a Rodeo.

The other kids loved it. "Ride 'em cowboy," they yelled, but Pat didn't like it at all. Riding a bucking bronc may be all right out on the western prairies, where you land in nice soft turf when he throws you, but on an asphalt street it's plain murder.

And that horse, Pat says, knew his tricks. He swung his big head around and, baring a huge set of yellow tusks, tried to bit Pat's leg. Pat kicked his head away as well as his coil, and that hurt the horse's feelings, so he just grabbed the bit—instead of Pat's leg—and started to run away. Pat never thought a horse could pull an ice wagon so fast.

Down the street they went at a mile-a-minute clip, with the ice wagon swaying perilously behind and Pat hanging on for dear life. Automobiles just missed them as the frantic horse ran from one side of the street to another.

Children's Laughter Turns to Grave Fear.

The other kids weren't laughing now as they chased after the runaway. They were scared to death. They could see that Pat was going to be thrown sooner or later—he was just hanging on by the skin of his teeth. Around corners, they'd go without giving a signal. Up on two wheels would go the lumbering ice wagon and Pat's body would swing out as though it were going to fall right under the crushing wheels.

Pat says he tried to think of everything he had seen the cowboys do in the rodeo pictures, but nothing seemed to work. Once he decided to throw himself off and trust to luck, but his foot got tangled in the reins and he got a terrific jolting for his pains.

While he was trying to loosen that foot the horse suddenly decided to go across country. Without any consideration for the rights of pedestrians he jumped up on the curb and across the sidewalk into a vacant lot. The ice wagon bounded and plunged from side to side but kept upright. From the shaking he got, Pat says, the ice in that wagon must have been cracked ice by that time.

Pat Returns to Bosom of Mother Earth.

At last he got his foot free, but just as he did, Mr. Horse decided that he had had about enough of this horse play and he proceeded to give one of those extra hard bucks that end up with four hoofs hitting the ground at the same time. As a matter of fact, five things hit the ground at the same time—the fifth was Pat.

Pat sailed through the air like a human cannon-ball. He closed his eyes and waited for the shock. At last there was one consolation, he thought, he was landing on soft ground instead of on the hard pavement.

Wham! He turned over in the air and landed on that same sore portion of his anatomy that had been taking all the beating! And that wasn't all! The horse was what the cowboys call a "killer!" And a killer goes after you when you're down! Pat saw the ponderous hoofs raised above his head. He couldn't move he was so terrified. The horse had stopped—this saved him from being run over by the wagon—but that horse was actually trying to trample him.

Heels of Death Miss Pat by Inches.

Up came the front hoofs as the furious horse reared and down they came with a lurch of Pat's head. A mist! Up they went over Pat's head for another try and down they came again for another mist. Pat couldn't believe it until they pulled him away and he saw what had saved his life.

A wagon wheel had got caught on a stump and this held the horse just far enough away to keep him from reaching his victim!

Well, sir, it was all over then but the bawling out Pat got from the ice man—which isn't much after you've nearly been killed.

The Man Who Knows

Whether the Remedy You are taking for Headaches, Neuralgia or Rheumatism Pains is SAFE is Your Doctor. Ask Him

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuralgia or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it—in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART

Washington.—If ever there were a time other than when the nation was at war when money dominated the situation at Washington, it assuredly is now.

Money Dominates. One can go where he chooses about the government departments, to the White House or to Capitol Hill and the subject under discussion is or soon will be money.

A year or so ago, we heard a great deal about money. We heard of it in connection with an appropriation of $4,880,000,000—the greatest single peace-time voting of money in our history. And, likewise, we heard money discussed when the President used his power to devalue the dollar in its relation to gold.

Now, however, the subject of money is discussed in a slightly different vein. The question that is paramount is how can the government get the money it needs. In other words, we are now getting around to the question of taxation, and it is a question that neither the President nor his lieutenants in congress like to face. It is an election year and a tax increase in election year is not what the politicians would call smoothing the highway of a campaign.

Passage of the legislation providing immediate payment of the veterans' bonus—brought conditions to a head. The President vetoed the bonus bill and congress promptly overrode that veto. So the President promptly told congress that something had to be done about it; that the only funds the treasury could muster would be by borrowing and that since congress had yielded to the vocal minority represented by the greatest lobby ever to populate the Capitol, it thereby captured for itself a problem of raising the money.

Of course, the President must assume some responsibility even though he vetoed the bonus for the reason that some of the funds which must be raised will go to pay the crop control benefits or bonus resulting from invalidation of the processing taxes and the Agricultural Adjustment act. The President, as well as the political leaders in congress, want to continue that payment and they also want to pay farmers on commitments previously made because they regard them as moral obligation under the AAA contracts. Yet the country is likely to balk in terms of the bonus for the war veterans and pay little attention to the smaller amount scheduled to go to the farmers and, indeed, the veterans' bonus is almost six times that which the administration desires to pay to the farmers.

There was in this situation a development to which I believe attention should be called. "It's Up to Henry" through many years congress has been an easy spender. Through the same years it has avoided at every turn laying taxes to offset the money it voted out of the treasury. Under the Roosevelt administration the peak of easy spending has been reached and congress has gone along with a vociferous "aye" on every spending proposal sent to the Capitol from the White House. The congressional attitude to which I have referred came up in bulk at the time of the bonus vote. Every time a bonus opponent inquired where the government would get the money to pay the two and one-half billion to the veterans, the answer from the bonus supporters was, in effect, "It's up to Henry."

I can recall a familiar slogan, current when I was a boy, that was used always when some one desired to shift responsibility—to pass the buck. It was "let George do it." In the bonus controversy, Senator Bankhead, Democrat of Alabama, was the first member of congress whom I heard say "It's up to Henry." He meant that the job of raising the money belonged to Henry Morgenthau, secretary of the treasury, but Senator Bankhead spoke more than his own feelings when he made the statement. He put into words a thought which permeated the minds of a vast majority of unthinking representatives and senators.

same time damping the New Deal spending policies, so I fancy that such an argument will be rarely advanced.

It is entirely probable that there will be no tax bill this year unless the President's letter to Speaker Byrns pointing out the necessity for raising revenue causes an unheard of number of senators and representatives to do a flip-flop.

May Be No Tax Bill. No legislation is required to see that a representative or senator is in a tough spot when he goes back home asking the suffrage of his constituents and must tell them at the same time that he added to the tax burden which they must pay.

Well, if that be true, how is "Henry" going to get the money? It will have to be borrowed and it will have to be borrowed on government bonds which add up into an increasing government deficit. It means that instead of a deficit of around three billions in the next fiscal year, the treasury will be confronted with a deficit of more than five billions and the public debt, in the meantime, will have been correspondingly increased. It means, in addition, that the banks of the country will have to pile more government bonds on top of the government bonds they have thus far absorbed in financing a policy of spending our way out of the depression.

The tragedy of the situation in congress that brought about Senator Bankhead's remark of "It's up to Henry" is that it indicates that congress has been looking upon the treasury as a source of revenue. It is not and it never has been. Government is non-productive. It can get funds only by taxation, by taking them away from the people—or by borrowing and if it borrows it has to pay back. In either event, new taxation must come and if congress doesn't have the nerve to pass tax legislation in this session, it must lay taxes in the next session.

The newspapers throughout the country have been full of reports concerning the early start of the political campaign. The Al Smith speech, coming from the man who made it, brought about a sudden expansion in the political arena. It really opened up the fight and henceforth we are due to be surprised with this claim or that, this charge and that denial or counter-charge, as the various leaders marshal their forces.

Thus far, in addition to President Roosevelt's Jackson day speech to the $50-a-plate diners and Mr. Smith's Liberty League dinner outburst, we have had active campaigning by former President Hoover, by Governor Tamm of Georgia, by Senator Borah, the Idaho Republican; by Governor London, the Kansas Republican, and by Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader in the senate, who spoke in reply to Mr. Smith. Others are in the offing for the Republican and Democratic national committees are engaging radio time in a big way.

As speeches and statements increase in number, and as fanfare grows louder, I find myself getting a bit callous to them all. I have been wondering whether the American people have lost their sense of humor completely, because the situation really has a humorous side. Unless the people's sense of humor has been dreadfully seared, it seems to me they ought to be highly amused over ridiculous statements now being made on one side of the fence or on the other. Take, for instance, Mr. Roosevelt's handwritten bonus veto message. It presented something a bit unusual because in my time in Washington it had happened only once before that a President vetoed a bill with a handwritten message to congress. Of course, it was intended to be dramatic—and it was. But the point is this: A year ago when congress passed the bonus the President made a personal appearance in the halls of congress and read his own veto message. He made his vigorous fight and he rallied his supporters in line to sustain his veto. There has been so much talk around Washington since the handwritten message went to congress that the President really was not vigorously opposing passage of the bill over his veto that I am coming to believe that was true. In other words, he thought that immediate payment of the bonus was wrong but he had a wistful eye out for the forthcoming campaign and the votes the bonus might bring.

Her cheek moved, touching his, until their lips came together in the gentle beginning of a kiss; and then the soft, near shadow of her husky whisper said, "Poor, dear darling—they haven't even let you"—she paused for the shadow of her soft chuckle too—"let you shave."

The exultance of laughter that ran from Hal's swelling lungs was a month of sunny convalescence crowded in one liquid moment; and he let her precious body free then, long enough to take away the hat that kept her hair from shining over this improbable return of all hope.

"Kind heaven!" he whispered. "My own dearest, don't you care what I've done? Are you taking me back out of the rotten, empty death I made for myself? Barry, you—"

"You've done nothing to me," she said against his speaking, her head nodding in the quiet negative; "except be all the things I want you to be—except make me love you." And her soft lips came back more closely.

Under his full, aspiring enchantment, brisk thoughts began to hurry about the means of preserving this miracle among its dark circumstances, to build up the sedulous patientness that must guard ecstasy forever now, against anything. He said carefully, anxiously, "Barry, who knows where you are?"

Her head moved a little, and she said, "No one, my darling." "You can stay hidden then—a little while—till I can get my discharge or sneak out of this d—n place, and we can get a boat for Japan, Australia, anywhere far away."

She made a quick exclamation, almost as of pity; both her hands came to his cheeks in a more precious cherishing of him; and as her head moved back, he saw tears come to the sudden wonder of her eyes.

"You would," she said in marveling softness, "You'd do that for me." There was reverence—an awed humility in her slow kiss. Then she raised her head again to watch his eyes, and she said, "I didn't kill him."

"Sport. Besides my ambition to kill a man in the cool of the blood (which is satisfied and cured, let me tell you), I've wanted to play god to people I loved. It isn't going to be so very godlike unless I get away with it. It was tough standing you in the corner so long. But the thing was no soap unless it embodied the latest aerodynamic principles. There wasn't much time to read up on those during our slight buggy ride of the other night; and I had a h—l of a time getting your girl's unconditional promise to go straight to you—before the fireworks."

"The police get my confession today, as near a perfect example of the confessor's art as an old legal friend can make it. You're left out of everything entirely. They'll have to see Barry, I guess, but she knows her story (you'd be surprised how tough it is sometimes) to whip the truth into plausibility). The thing may not be watertight, so I'll be watching in the bushes till it's over; and if anything blows up, I'll take care of it. You stay out of it. For Barry's sake, your father's, mine, anybody's. Do me that one holy favor, Hal. Don't go chivalrous on us. It would wreck the works."

"Enclosed please find documents, which hide under some lonely cobblestone till everything's in the bag, then burn. Here are telegrams about who you are and aren't, and that incrimination the late Martin Crack got from Barry's father."

"Do this for me too, sport, will you? The first three days of the next month after it's all over, run a Personal in the Chicago Tribune, addressed 'Colonel,' saying you're married, what town you're living in, and whether your father's N. Y. bank is a good place to write you congratulations."

"Some day we'll hold a couple more, and I'll tell the kids about Wyoming. Hasta la vista; and good luck, you lucky guy; but always be sure there's one old railroad man who believes you rate it. K."

Hal looked up at Barry when he had finished. And quietly she explained: "He killed him, Hal, and then he went down to the street and stood there for an hour—to keep me from going in. It had taken me so long to—to find my courage."

Her head was up, the grace of its carriage unoppressed by anything that had happened or nearly happened, invulnerable to shame and fear and remorse because the bravery behind her eyes could not invite those things. The beauty of her face was so simply, so wonderfully arrived at: the white, straight nose; the faint indrawing of her smooth cheeks that seemed to make her untouched lips push a very little forward; the clear candor of her eyes that wanted to show him anything he should desire; the direct curve of eyebrows and the white forehead; the rich, parted flow of gold so simply ended in the thick upturnings at her neck. Whether it was more painfully beautiful to believe in the possession of her or to believe her a dream, Hal couldn't tell. He knew he would risk nothing of that beauty again—ever, in the smallest way. It might still be the boat for Australia. And in the meantime, in case the police—

"Barry," Hal said in the crispness of immediate necessity, "the first thing you've got to do—"
Her cool hand came against his mouth. "The first thing—" she said, her quiet voice near hushiness, her clear eyes untouched by his concern; "more important than any old unshaven thought of yours—" She bent over in quick, supple grace and whispered at his ear, "Hal, do you love me?"

WE DESIRE THE WILDERNESS, YET WE DESTROY IT

Wilderness lovers in America whose increase by scores of thousands yearly, are confronted with a paradoxical dilemma. We love the wilderness; it may fairly be said that many of us really have some appreciation of it; but our large-scale invasion of the wilderness threatens to destroy it.

The problem receives editorial consideration in the Journal of Forestry. Whether the wilderness-devouring lovers can be induced to be so altruistic as to deny themselves all access to certain choice areas, so that they may be preserved unspoiled for future generations, is decidedly problematical, in the opinion of the Journal editor. Nevertheless, he adds, the effort should be made.

The great trouble is that though we are coming to love the soul-refreshing wilderness we are unwilling (and many of us physically unable) to put up with wilderness living conditions. We demand paved highways for our high-speed cars, luxury camps with plumbing and comfortable beds—in short, all the comforts of home, or most of them, though we be deep in the primeval forest or high on a mountain top.

Even though the enthusiastic first establishers of a legally preserved wilderness area endeavor to keep it really wild, their efforts are very apt to be nullified by local interests who clamor for "development," because that will bring greater numbers of money-spending people, to the greater profit of local business men.

"People press for national parks in their neighborhood to benefit by the expenditures that throngs of sightseers will involve," says the Journal's editor.

"The few scattered settlers who worked their way gradually into the Adirondack region in the first half of the Nineteenth century were wilderness lovers, or they would not have gone there, and real woodsmen; but they gave glad welcome to the coming of the city visitors, enterprisingly enlarged the accommodations for them, and in some cases grew rich providing for their needs.

"In short, while the idea of wilderness preservation receives wide popular acclaim, its actuality accords neither with local desires nor with the thirst of the public for entrance to and facile enjoyment of the loudly sung charms of unspoiled nature."—Science Service.

Reno vs. Reno
If Peace Justice A. C. Hess has his way, Reno, Kan., will become as famous for marriages as Reno, Nev., is for divorces. Justice Hess announced he would marry any and all couples for three cents a ceremony. The only difficulty experienced thus far, he said, is finding two persons in this Leavenworth county hamlet to be the necessary witnesses.

Meeting of the Ruidoso Water Users Protective Association

The second annual meeting of the Ruidoso Water Users Protective Association was held Saturday, Feb. 1, at the Glencoe Community House near Bonnell Ranch. The president, S. W. Land, presided. About 20 of the 50 members were present. The minutes of the April "call" meeting were read and approved. The treasurer, W. F. Coe, read his report. The president gave a brief summary of the affairs of importance that have come before the organization for discussion or vote during the past year. Probate Judge Manuel Corona acted as interpreter for the Spanish speaking members. Election of officers for 1936 was the next matter brought to the attention of the members present. Mr. J. V. Tully moved that the terms of the constitution be waived and that the present officers continue for 1936. This motion was carried by a unanimous vote. The officers are: S. W. Land, Pres.; B. J. Bonnell, Vice-Pres.; W. F. Coe, Sec'y-Treasurer.

Considerable discussion followed the reading of the law, passed in 1935, regarding the filing of an annual report with the State Engineer. This annual report on the use of public waters of the State of New Mexico is due in the office of the State Engineer on or before the first day of February, and shall cover the preceding year. The report calls for, among other things, the source of the water supply, the total amount of water used, the legal authority for the use of water, the amount of money expended on irrigation system during the past year. Full and free discussion followed the announcement that the PWA, in their erosion control work, might be willing to construct a series of dams on Little Creek to stem the flow of flood waters which do considerable damage to ditches, dams and other property in the San Patricio region, every year. A committee was appointed by the chair to investigate this matter. The members of the committee are: W. F. Coe, Chairman, with Messrs. Corona, Gomez, Gonzalez and Tully. Mr.

Much discussion followed. The chair appointed a committee, with W. F. Coe as chairman, to investigate the matter. The meeting adjourned about 4:30 o'clock.

Anyone who will furnish his car to help transport them to this meeting will be contributing a wonderful service to our fine young people. Some of the folks will remain over for the evening service, and the pastor here, will preach to all the young people and their parents of this section.

As Jeff Herron of Herron's Grocery says—"Now 'U' (or 'I'll) Tell one. We beg to be stopped if you've heard this before—"

The scene was a banquet in Washington, D. C. It was an international affair, many speakers from different countries were present to do their stuff.

An English Admiral in gay uniform was seated beside a Chinese, also dressed in native style. The first course was soup. The Englishman jovially whispered to the Chinese—"Likee soup?" Then the Admiral was called on for a talk, and made a very poor one indeed. The heathen Chinese was the next speaker, and everyone awaited his speech—thinking they were going to be amused.

The Oriental spoke; his masterly command of English and his ease of delivery, combined with his silver tongue held the audience spellbound and entranced. When he had finished and took his seat at the table, he whispered to the Englishman—"Likee talk?"
Now 'U' tell one.

Some fellows were talking in Ziegler Bros. Store. They said: Groundhog's Shadow Brings Windy Spring to New Mexico—So a news headline states, As if the spring in Carrizozo weren't anything else but!

Yours truly is accused of being in favor of Amigo Al Smith. "Anything's liable to happen," in the words of a Subscriber.

Editor Merriman of the Santa Rosa News says that whenever we run out of anything to say we can always talk about the weather.

Heard in the Burnett Grocery: "I tried that stunt about putting coal in a large paper sack, to be used in the heater; it works fine, no spilt coal on the floor. Tend to filling the sack outside. I advanced the idea as my own, and Friend Wife gave me a big kiss. — Thanks a lot," quoting a Citizen. He goes on to say that any other household hint we have to offer along the same line will be highly appreciated.

Discussing Laundry (which we weren't) a man would sooner go to a nice, warm jail than wash all day at the tub. Fellows, do we hear this motion seconded? Pajing Joyce's Laundry.

The genial Big George Harkness, who owns the Roswell Stage Line, reports the roads along his route improving but rough.

Another Headline: Liberty League Decides to Enter a Third Party. It is predicted that Al Smith will be its standard bearer, Govs. Ritchie of Maryland and Ely of Massachusetts are also suggested in the race. — "And the music goes round and round!"

A Turk, taking the 'Koran' seriously, for there is a passage in the Mohammedan book that reads "Cast thy bread upon the waters," like the Bible. The Turk was a baker, so he thought he would try it, being a devout Mohammedan. He baked up a large number of loaves of bread and sent them adrift in the ocean. They floated until the bread came to an island, on which were some marooned, starving Turkish soldiers. The Moslem government rewarded him hugely. Note: Here's hoping the Bread was "Surebeat."

President Wood Scrap New Deal Laws—Headline in the New Mexican. Which goes to show that the big ones make errors. "Even as you and I."—Adice.
