Huddle Info Reveals $253 Is Necessary for Big Ten Player

IT COSTS $253 to get each Big Ten football player ready for a game. This includes such items as equipment, coaches' salaries and stadium upkeep, but fails to include the prep school draft price, intercollegiate waiver price and incidental rewards, emoluments and bonuses.

Bill Osmanek, Holy Cross' great sophomore fullback, wants everybody to know that his kid brother, Joe, is even better. Joe right now is achieving numerous touchdowns for Central high of Providence.

The Four Horsemen, most celebrated backfield of all time, got their chance because of a scandal occurring while the boys were still freshmen. A nearby town, anxious to win a local game, hired some Notre Dame regulars.

Can it be that the commercial aspect of football finally has dried up all the human juices of the customers? A few years ago a cheer for the visiting team always was the first act on the program.

The large and powerful Hank Woronek, who enabled the Boston colleges to beat Holy Cross yearlings, is as good as nine-tenths of the nation's varsity ends.

Minnesota's quarterback doesn't play favorites. Fourteen Gophers have shared in the scoring this season. Princeton players say that Danny Lewis of Williams in the best center they have opposed in two years of facing such other greats as Robertshaw of Navy, Ray of Dartmouth and Hauze of Penn.

Navy's football program, which peddles for four bits, should be the best money maker of all such aids to the athletic association.

Aside from the way Penn walloped his Michigan team, Franklin field also provided another severe strain on Harry Kipke's nerves.

While watching a game he wanders up and down the sidelines, nervous-picking and chewing blades of grass. But even a team as lucky as Yale would be hard pressed to discover a blade of grass on Franklin field.

Blip Stahley, Harvard assistant coach, sighs whenever he thinks of the high school team he saw perform in his Lebanon home town several seasons ago. The backfield was composed of Dick and Jack White, now of Princeton; Ditt, North Carolina fullback, and Pete Smith of Temple.

NOT IN THE BOX SCORE: THE New York State Assembly this winter will be asked to investigate the conduct of the commissions supposed to regulate boxing and racing.

Red Wolfe has been adding to his World Series winners' share by betting on his Alma Mamma, Dartmouth, to win football games. Brooklyn fans are asking why, if the Dodger directors were so anxious to have a fighter to manage the team, they didn't select Joe Louis.

It is time somebody noted that the nation's longest intercollegiate football winning streak extends back to 1931. Morgan college has won thirty-nine games since then.

Another very good reason for serving beforehand is that most women feel it necessary to get home before the children's supper hour and when there is a distance to be traveled, they are anxious to leave as soon as the game is over.

Sixto Escobar Was Handy at Baseball

Sixto Escobar, bantamweight expert, was as good as a baseball and volley ball player during his school days at Barceloneta, in Puerto Rico.

Col. Ruppert front steps the other day and now is buying a new set of front teeth.

One of Manhattan's plays is a double shift which frequently catches an opposing lineman offside. Then, before he can get back into position, the Jaspers will him in, snap the ball and get five yards for nothing.

If the New York State Athletic Commission would depart from its provincial attitude and invite young Joe McGuigan of Philadelphia to referee occasionally the New York State Athletic Commission would improve its staff of referees 100 per cent.

The foul most frequently overlooked by officials who like the hours and the pay is holding in the line. Charles Francis (Socker) Coe, the celebrated writer and broadcaster, has lost so much weight that he now looks like only one man.

WELCOME CLUB LUNCHEON IDEAS

Puzzled Hostesses Will Find This Worth While.

By EDITH M. BARBER SEVERAL requests have come recently for menus for very simple club luncheons, to be served before the afternoon bridge.

Another very good reason for serving beforehand is that most women feel it necessary to get home before the children's supper hour and when there is a distance to be traveled, they are anxious to leave as soon as the game is over.

As far as the hostess herself is concerned, it is usually easier for her to serve before bridge than after. She can then play her hand without worry as to whether the coffee is boiling over or the sandwiches drying out.

Another woman, who had been sent a Virginia ham from her Southern home, gave her guests ham and eggs and hot waffles with grapefruit as a starter.

The clever hostess does not feel that she must follow accepted formulas for refreshments for her parties, and her guests always agree with her.

Luncheon Menu. Chicken turnover. Celery. Pickles. Ice cream with meringues.

The meringues can be bought at the bakery. As they are often rather long for an afternoon service the small "kisses" can take their place.

Little Spice Cakes. 1/2 cup shortening. 2 cups brown sugar. 3 eggs. 1/2 cup sour cream. 3 cups flour. 1 1/2 teaspoons soda. 1 teaspoon cinnamon. 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg. 1 cup sour milk. 1 cup chopped raisins.

Gingerbread Waffles. 1 1/2 cup flour. 1/4 teaspoon ginger. 1/4 teaspoon salt. 3 teaspoons baking powder. 1/2 cup melted shortening. 4 tablespoons sugar. 1 egg. 1/2 cup molasses. 1 cup milk.

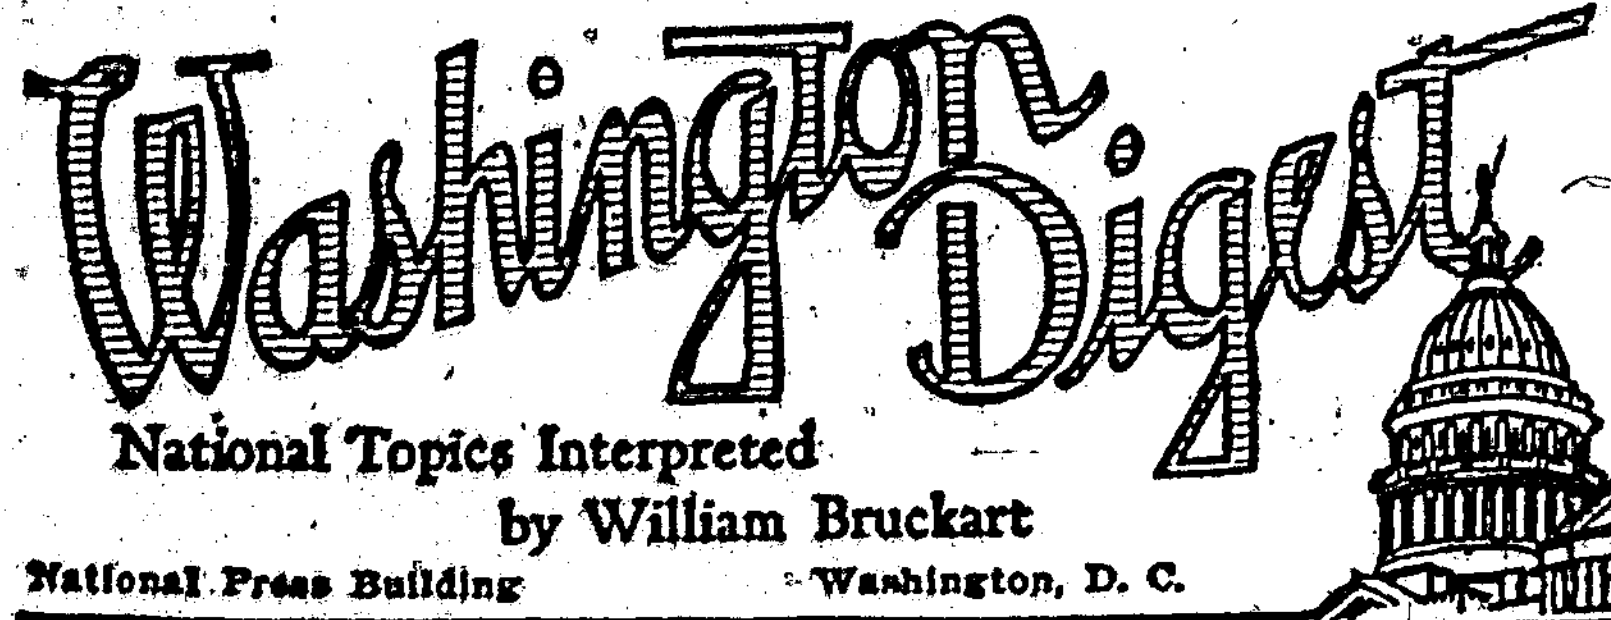

Consomme Bellevue. Combine equal amounts of clear chicken consomme with clam broth. Heat and season to taste. Serve in bouillon cups and top with whipped cream and sprinkle with paprika or minced parsley.

Crab Canapes. Season finely chopped crabmeat or lobster with salt, cayenne and lemon juice and add mayonnaise to moisten. Spread on rounds of bread. Sprinkle with grated cheese, brown in oven and garnish with parsley.

Quick Chocolate Cake. 2 eggs. 1/2 cup milk. 1 cup sugar. 1 teaspoon vanilla. 1 cup cake flour. 1 1/2 teaspoon baking powder. 2 squares chocolate. 1/2 cup butter or other shortening.

Colored Collings. A variation from the usual way of decorating is to have the walls done in a light neutral gray, then put the "room color" on the ceiling.

National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington, — Many observers around Washington lately have noticed something of a change in President Roosevelt's attitude since the election which so overwhelmingly returned him to office.

It is highly important that it be done. I think everyone agrees with that statement. Mr. Roosevelt is in a position to do it. He is one of the few Presidents of recent years who has been in a position to do it.

It goes without saying that there are scores of unnecessary agencies now in existence, most of them the children of the New Deal. There is overlapping; there is conflict of jurisdiction and there is a superabundance of ideas from every source that affect or influence operations of other agencies.

Such co-ordination and consolidation as the President attempts, therefore, can accomplish a very great deal in the way of budgetary reforms and relief for the taxpayers if the job is undertaken seriously.

What It May Mean. dies or any one of a number of other federal aids. I do not want to prejudice it, however, because certainly the President is to be commended in approaching the problem in a sensible way, namely, the creation of a committee to give the question a thoroughgoing analysis before legislation to alleviate the condition is proposed.

The next thing that would have happened would have been the drafting of a piece of legislation for submission to congress. It would have gone to Capitol Hill with the stamp of administration approval and all of the automatons of the house and senate who owed their positions to Roosevelt blessings, would have voted for it.

It is quite evident, therefore, that one thing the New Deal sadly needs is more co-ordination among its own people.

Changes Needed. I referred above to the necessity for co-ordination among governmental departments as to policies and that leads into the long-time need for actual reorganization of the physical structure known as the federal government.

have watched Edith grow up. I like them all, although none of them thrills me especially; as best they are a little innocuous. The blond Brays are an average happy young couple. Both the Gearys and the Brays went to the masquerade. Their first connection with the murder was when we called Doctor Geary after my maid, Sarah Darbs, found the body of the murdered man.

The New Place is a little brick all to the Old Place, quite modern and extremely convenient; to which I refer for the winter. I built it in the first year of my marriage. The New Place bears no part in this story for it is always closed during the summer; but many scenes of what was known as "the Seville case" played themselves out in the Old Place. Inside, it follows on a largish scale the plan of many colonial houses—broad hall running from front doorway past the fine broad staircase ending half-way down the width of the house. On one side of the hall is the library, on the other, a small living-room. Back of the hall and back of both these rooms, the whole was formerly the ample kitchen, the whole of my big living-room, stretching across the whole width of the house. Back of this and now we are in the old—are dining-room and kitchen. Upstairs is a colonial tangle of big rooms and small. Broad screened-in piazzas augment both ends of the house.

PRELUDE

My name is Mary Avery. I am forty-six years old and a widow. I have lived all my life in the little harbor town of Seville, Massachusetts, the scene of the famous Second Head murder. The old Avery house on Second Head has been my home for the twenty-five years that have elapsed since I married Mark Avery. He was on my place for the murder was committed. Because of that and for other reasons I have decided to write the whole story of that murder. I say the whole story because some of its details have never been buried deep in my memory and in that of one other person. I shall put this manuscript in my safe deposit box with instructions that it may not be opened until my death.

Murder in Seville!
It seemed almost as fabulous as a comic-dramatic uprising among the flowers in an old-fashioned garden. And indeed when the murder occurred we, the citizens of Seville, became almost as helpless as a garden in the face of such a revolution. Thither, our equipment for handling crime had been meager. We had a police station, a chief of police, a few policemen, mainly engaged in traffic duty; everything in short by crime. Patrick O'Brien, our chief of police, who bore the leading part in solving the mystery, is of course a citizen of Seville, known and loved by all of us. Indeed Patrick and I were graduated the same year from high school. Patrick was president of the class and I was treasurer. It was always a race between us two in the matter of marks. In the end Patrick won out and finished at the head of the class.

I have noticed that all mystery stories begin with a description of the crime; then of the locale. I, an amateur, am going to reverse that process. First of all, I am going to describe Second Head where the murder occurred. Second Head is one of four cliffs, rather unimaginatively named First, Second, Third and Fourth Head, which stretch east into Massachusetts bay. To the west of Second Head runs a road, ending north at First Head and south at the Indian pier which separates Second and Third Heads. Beyond this road, to the west stretches broad marsh, penetrated at high tide by a tiny estuary from the harbor; and beyond the marsh the rest of the big township.

Roughly speaking, the houses on Second Head which are most intimately connected with this story lie in a small oval—a kind of Common. Here a marble basin, filled with water, supports a colony of goldfish. Every family on Second Head pays a small fixed annual sum to keep this scrap of Common mowed and orderly. We adults call it The Egg. Successive generations of children have always called it Cat Park—although as far as I know, only a few cats ever sunned themselves there.

Next to me—a wide field bordered by high lilac hedges, intervening—live a childless couple, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Slow. I am very fond of the Stows. Peter is a painter and a good one. Mattie Slow is perhaps the plainest woman in God's world; she is also perhaps the nicest. Their house, an old one and a big one, its lower floor amplified by wide glassed-in piazzas adapted perfectly for the purpose of entertaining, is one of the most charming in Seville. Every summer for twenty-five years, the Stows have given a masquerade. It is the social event of the season.

It was one of the guests of this year's masquerade who was murdered. Next up the slant of Second Head toward the ocean—to the east—come two houses belonging to Doctor and Mrs. Geary. Doctor Geary is a surgeon with an office in Boston. The Gearys occupy the one nearest the ocean and their married daughter Edith and her husband, Alfred Bray, the one nearest the Stows. I have always known the Gearys and of course I

Next beyond the Howard house—wide hedged lawns separating them—is the Ames family. Equally with the Stows, I love the Ameses. Paul and Lora Ames went to school with me, and I am god-mother to their only child—Molly. Paul is one of our leading citizens, the president of our bank. Lora resides herself in every good work in the community. They are solid people; fine people. As for Molly—

The Ames house is a little like my own—old, what most people call "quaint," which, whatever else it may signify, certainly means inconvenient. It is at present the most popular house on the Head; for wherever Molly is, the young of her generation, congregate. The main connection of the Ames family with the murder is that Molly Ames was engaged to the murdered man. Though why she was engaged to him constituted the most recent of Seville's social mysteries—he was twenty-five years older than she. In addition, everybody in Seville believed that Walter Treadway was the man whom Molly really loved. Walter Treadway had been for two years secretary to the murdered man. Molly had been engaged to Walter for six months. A year before the murder, the engagement was suddenly broken off and Walter left town; six months after Walter's departure and six months before the murder, Molly became engaged again—and to a man who was destined to be murdered. All three of the Ameses attended the masquerade.

Coming around the curve of the circle and down the slope of the Head, we reach the pretty little house of the Fair-weather sisters. Flora, the younger, is dying from cancer and Margaret, the older, nurses her with a passionate devotion. Naturally, neither was present at the Stow masquerade.

Coming still farther down the hill, we close the circle with my house, which, separated from it by gardens, lawn, trees and road, overlooks the marsh; a big, old place, built in 1710 by my husband's first ancestor in the country—the original Mark Avery. It consists of what in the family we call the Old Place and the New Place.

My Estate Numbers a Generous Dozen Acres.

FRIDAY

As I have said, the Stow masquerade is an annual fete. The first summer after they were married, twenty-five years ago, Peter and Mattie sent out invitations for a masked party. It was so great a success that, thereafter, they gave one every year; ultimately it became the social event of the season. This success is in part due to the fact that Mattie and Peter take such pains to make it so. They leave no stone unturned to give the affair glow, gayety, gorgeousness—picturesque quality of every kind. The Stows themselves always say that the success of the party is due to the fact that we, the invited, take as much pains as they, the inviters, to make it so. We are, I am sure, as far as masquerades are concerned, a rather special group. We have always enjoyed dressing up. A dinner party will, at the request of the hostess, turn at the last moment into a costume affair. No one of us but has in the attic a trunk crammed with the costumes we have worn on such occasions. At house auctions, we bid feverishly on old clothes, hats, boots, shawls.

The apostle Paul was an example in many things, and not the least important of these is the manner in which he was constantly on the lookout for young men who by the call and blessing of God would take up the gospel ministry. He realized that there was much to be done and that if the Lord tarried he and his co-workers would pass on, and the work must needs be carried forward by younger men.

Not only did he seek out such young men but he "followed through" giving them encouragement, instruction, and opportunities for service. How shortighted is the church that falls God at this point, or which, for the sake of local and present usefulness, hinders young men and women from obtaining the needed training for Christian service. The fields are white unto harvest but the laborers are still few. Let us pray them out and help them on their way.

Our lesson centers around the counsels of Paul to his young friend, Timothy. Written near the end of his life, the letters are filled with all the sweet earnestness of his great soul. They present four important truths which merit the careful attention of every Christian, and even more particularly of the Christian worker.

I. The Gain of Godliness (I Tim. 6:6-8).
In a world which knows little but the urge to gain material riches we need to emphasize the fact that it is still true that a man is not profited if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul.

The great gain of godliness is that inner fellowship with God which brings true contentment of spirit.

II. The Snare of Riches (I Tim. 6:9-11).
The pages of human history are full of the names of those who have fallen into this trap of Satan. Sad to say, not a few of them have been Christian leaders.

Notice that it is not the money itself, or the amount of it that constitutes the danger. It is the desire or the "mind to be rich," and "the love of money" that "is a root of all evil." Hence Paul's admonition comes to each one of us to "flee these things and follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness." What a sermon in a dozen words!

III. The Flight of Faith (vv. 12-16).
Christianity is not only an inward grace which reflects in "godliness with contentment" and in fleeing the snare of riches, but it is a daily fighting of the good fight of faith. It is imperative that there be "a good confession" (v. 12), coupled with a keeping of God's "commandment without spot, without reproach, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ."

The servant of Christ, in view of the coming of the One who is "the King of Kings and Lord of Lords," is to live a consistent, clean, and irreproachable life.

IV. A Divine Deliverance (II Tim. 4:16-18).
"All forsook me," says Paul. How tragic! How weak and undependable is the arm of flesh! "But the Lord stood by me." How glorious! How mighty and gracious is our God!

The follower of Christ may find himself without a human friend or supporter. Those who stood by in younger and more successful days may have disappeared. But let us remember that our trust is in God who has never failed any one of his children. "He abideth faithful, he cannot deny himself." (II Tim. 2:13).

Worship and Prayers
It is for the sake of man, not of God, that worship and prayers are required; that man may be made better—that he may be confirmed in a proper sense of his dependent state, and acquire those pious and virtuous dispositions in which his highest improvement consists.

Learning Only Good
The wish falls often on my heart, that I may learn nothing here that I cannot continue in the other world; that I may do nothing here but deeds that will bear fruit in Heaven.—Jean Paul Richter.

Window of Hope
Eternity is the divine treasure house; and hope is the window, by means of which mortals are permitted to see, as through a glass darkly, the things which God is preparing.—Mountford.

No matter how much your back aches and your nerves scream, your husband, because he is only a man, can never understand why you are so hard to live with one week in every month. Too often the honeymoon euphoria is wrecked by the nagging tongue of a three-quarter wife. The wise woman never lets her husband know by outward signs that she is a victim of periodic pain. For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three weeks of life: 1. Burning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age." Don't be a three-quarter wife. Take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

Memory's Lane

Before returning from a recent pleasant visit at the home of his son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. R. T. Lucas at Kansas City, the writer made a trip to the home of his childhood, old St. Joseph, Missouri. The object of that visit was with hope that the Webster school, ready for service 65 years ago, was still standing.

Instead of finding the old school with its precious memories, he found a new and up-to-date edifice, equipped with all modern conveniences, such as a gymnasium, tennis and basketball courts, etc. He experienced a keen disappointment at the absence of the school of his childhood, but viewed with a sense of pleasure the new one with all its modern conveniences. Accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. Lucas, he found Miss Devoree, Principal of the new school, who introduced the visitors to the different teachers, in one of whom they found more than the ordinary amount of interest; her name is Miss Belle Ashbrook. We found that Miss Belle's parents were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ashbrook, both of whom were schoolmates of the writer in the olden days. We grew up together and the writer, much to Miss Ashbrook's surprise, also informed her that he well remembered the marriage of her parents and of Miss Belle's birth.

On an invitation from the Principal of the school to speak to the pupils, he made a short talk in which he reviewed the early school days with all their hardships and made a vivid comparison with the advantages of the new order of things. He told them among other things, that the main object of his talk was to remind them of how grateful they should be for the conveniences, advantages and advancement they may now enjoy of which the children of the early days were deprived. There was a sense of loneliness connected with his visit to the old town, from the fact that his playmates of the long ago were not to be found. Some had gone to other parts of the country; while others in many numbers, had departed with the pale boatman, on endless seas.

Again America Shows the Way By RAYMOND PITCAIRN National Chairman Seminals of the Republic

Throughout much of its history our American Republic has served as a model to various nations determined to supplant the evils of Rule by the Few, with the benefits of Government by the People.

Today it continues to offer, by example, a chart to the path that leads toward peace and progress.

Contrasting pictures from the latest screen of world affairs tell the story. While the Fascist and Communist states of Europe are expanding and re-furnishing their Machinery of War, the United States is following the opposite course.

Its highest officials are meeting with those of neighbor nations in a determined effort to oil the Machinery of Peace.

While Spain is attempting to invalidate the ballots of popular election with the bullets of rebellion, America follows its traditional way.

It is submerging political differences, while winners and losers alike seek effective methods of cooperation in the cause of reemployment and recovery.

There stand two striking contrasts, which the detractors of America and of the American way of doing things might do well to study.

There wait two convincing answers to those fervid propagandists who tell us to look to the Fascism or the Communism of Europe, instead of to the representative democracy of the United States, for guidance in our national life.

America looked within—and set about when it won and established a form of Government by the People that became a model for the oppressed of all lands.

America can still demonstrate that that form of government does more to assure national growth and international accord than any of the desperate experiments which now trouble Europe.

Death by Rusting May Be Eventual Fate of Earth

Minerals May Absorb All the Oxygen

DEATH by rusting, rather than by freezing when the sun goes out, or in the apocalyptic fires of a Judgment day, may possibly be the eventual fate of the earth. This suggestion is made by Prof. Henry Norris Russell...

Oxygen, as everybody now knows, is the real essence of the breath of life. If it were to be wholly removed from the atmosphere of this planet, we should all perish—mouse and man, toadstool and tree. Some rocks contain oxygen, locked up in chemical combination. Sometimes this combination can be cracked, as by volcanic action...

Carbon dioxide is still unbreathable, but it is eagerly seized upon by plants, which extract the carbon for food manufacture, and return half of the oxygen free. Thus the atmosphere is replenished.

May Absorb All Oxygen. But there are other rocks, very abundant, too, containing iron in the partly oxidized "ferrous" form. This ferrous oxide is thirsty for more oxygen, to complete its transformation into the "ferric" form. Ferric oxide is most familiar to us as common-iron rust, but it is also responsible for most of the common red rocks and soils.

Professor Russell suggests that eventually the ferrous minerals will absorb all the oxygen in the air, or yet to be released into the air, locking it all up in ferric minerals. The earth will then be without the oxygen-breathing life as we know it. This stage may perhaps already exist on Mars, the rust-red planet.

But it is not due to arrive here tomorrow or the next day. Perhaps in a billion years, says Professor Russell.

Many Have Watched Skies. Reports from many watchers of the skies, whether of remote nebulae and stars, or of the nearer planets and satellites, or of the doings of the earth's own intimate envelope of gases which we call the atmosphere, are found in the new Smithsonian report.

Possibilities of long-range weather forecasting are discussed by the Smithsonian-institution's secretary, Dr. Charles G. Abbot, and by a British "guest-writer," Sir Gilbert Walker. Doctor Abbot's approach to "earth's weather is through the sun's radiation, a subject he had studied for many years. Sir Gilbert sticks to earth, finding correlations between weather today in one part of the earth and the weather some months hence in another place.

120,000,000 Year Old Fish Found in Texas Rock

BERKELEY, CALIF.—A fossil deep-water perch, first of its kind to be found in North America, has been received by the museum of paleontology of the University of California.

The specimen was found near the town of McKinney, Texas, by W. W. Bretlett. It was in the center of a limestone rock dug from under the foundation of an old monument. Breaking of the rock revealed the specimen.

In appearance, the specimen is similar to that of the present-day perch, except that it was a marine fish living in deep waters. It was about six inches in length, and was a "swift swimmer."

Linked With Kansas Fossils.

The specimen, which belongs to the cretaceous geologic period of about 120,000,000 years ago, helps to complete the picture of marine life as it then existed off the coast of this continent, according to C. J. Hesse, research assistant in the museum here.

Fossil fish of the same geologic epoch have been found in abundance in western Kansas, Mr. Hesse said. But they are mostly near-shore fish. The present discovery is one of the few deep-water fish of the period to be found in North America.

Indians Use More Than Thousand Plant Foods

Washington.—Indians of North America tasted, and found good for food, over a thousand of the plants on the continent.

No less than 1,112 species of plants used in some way as food by Indians are listed in a new publication compiled by a chemist, Elias Yanovsky of the United States bureau of chemistry and soils. The list includes ferns, algae, and fungi and shows that Indian cooks contrived fruit jellies, beverages, soups, breads, and other dishes.

MONTAGUE . . . . .

Explains That "Smudge" Was an Agreeable Cat at Times

Into My Questing Finger Sank Two Sharp Teeth.

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

SCREAM is startling, anywhere. When it is repeated, if only once, it is at least five times as startling. When it is screamed on one's front porch, its startlingness can only be computed by the aid of higher mathematics.

But during and immediately after this particular scream I was much too startled to make use of calculus, or logarithms or any of the methods by which the scholar arrives at indisputable conclusions. I merely dropped my book, rushed to the front door, and opened it. I admit that I did not open it wide. The echoes of the scream were still replicating from house to house in the immediate vicinity. I don't believe in ghosts or ghouls, but I would find no particular pleasure in discovering that there are such creatures by discovering one of them on my front porch.

Peering warily through the aperture which exists between a door and a door jamb when the door is on a chain I surveyed as much as was possible of the surrounding dusk. Presently into the range of my vision there came a large and very white face, apparently entirely unsupported by any body. While I was striving to become accustomed to a bodyless head its mouth opened and said in a shaking voice: "The animal. It's up there. Look. Its eyes! Its eyes!"

The head from which the voice was projected was fixed on a pine tree, swaying gently in the evening wind. Following them I beheld two yellow luminous balls, which blinked occasionally like the beam of a flashlight. I thrust forward a fearless hand, seized the nape of a furry neck, transferred the body which belonged to it to the porch floor and said reassuringly: "It's just Smudge. Come in, Mrs. Klinefelter."

"But what is it?" said a still trembling voice. "Just a cat. A mere alley cat. Its eyes look that way when the street light shines on them. Look at it."

I stopped and lifted a black ball perhaps five inches in circumference. During its elevation the dear little creature inscribed its initials on the back of my hand. They were still there the next morning, a somewhat crude "S. C." which was by that time outlined in iodine.

Mrs. Klinefelter's visit was brief, and she demanded an escort to her car, although when she rose to go Smudge was sitting placidly on the mantelpiece, gracefully sparring with a fly which was buzzing around her. "I am not at all sure," said the lady, "that that absurd little animal is the one that glared at me outside the door. She looks like such a sweet, gentle, little thing."

The sweet, gentle, little thing coiled for a spring, which she forthwith executed. The parabola she described in the air would have brought her exactly between the shoulders of our guest had I not detected it with swift presence of mind and diverted her to the floor. She landed on her feet, hissed venomously at me and strode out of the room. Such was her winsome nature.

Smudge was the gift of my daughter-in-law, who likes cats and maintains three of them in her home. I should say maintained, for after Smudge's arrival, two of them departed through windows never to return again, and the third, which had the spirit to stay and fight it out committed suicide I think. Anyway it was ground to atoms by a trolley car, under which it had fled in an effort to get away from the little black fury. Desiring the little company of quiet, well-behaved cats, Smudge's former owner made her home safe for them by putting Smudge into a basket and conveying her up to our house.

This basket she deposited in the center of the room, and diplomatically suggested that I open it. I did so without caution, supposing that the receptacle contained something edible. Out came a black head, not much larger than a billiard ball, and into my questing finger sank two sharp teeth, all the incisors and other dishes.

that the creature possessed at that early age. Naturally I backed away. Smudge strode into the center of the room, looked around her, sneering at our furniture, and then leaped first to a book shelf and then to the mantelpiece. "Come here, Smudge," I said. "That's a nice kitty." I warily stretched forth my hand.

In response the newcomer arched her back, walked a few steps on her extended tiptoes, danced a sort of a war-dance and then flung herself like a catapult directly at me. I fielded her deftly, clamped my fingers around her jaws, and deposited her gently on the floor. For a few minutes she strolled about the room, holding her enlarged tail at right angles with her spine, and indicating by her expression that she had seen lots better places than the one in which she now found herself.

"While she was still on parade her former owner cried: "Oh pick her up. The dog! The dog!"

The dog entered, smiled in anticipation of a pleasant quarter of an hour, and advanced on his prey. The prey flattened herself on the floor, revolving slowly as the dog walked around and around her. Then she lifted herself into the air, alighted exactly on her pursuer's back, drove her claws home, and the pair of them, still firmly united, left the room. In the hall the improvised horse regained his senses and dived under a chair scragging Smudge from his shoulders. Then he walked with a feeble swagger into the kitchen, yelped to the cook that he desired to stroll around the yard for the time being, and never returned until late in the evening. When he did come back he merely thrust his head inside the door, looked around in all directions, and then to make assurance doubly sure scuttled down the cellar stairs and found refuge in his box.

In time he and Smudge buried the hatchet, but they both remembered where it was, and exhumed it on a number of occasions which were not gala occasions for the dog.

It was after Smudge had been with us for about three weeks when an arrogant rat, which had roused the dog to a fury by squeaking at him savagely, and then whisking back into his hole when pursued, decided to take a walk around the dining room one night. It was an unwise decision. Smudge who was sleeping on an unoccupied guest bed at the time heard him and stepped down to find out what could be afoot at such an hour of the night. The fatal mistake made by the rat on that occasion was one which has lost great generals many a brilliant victory. He underestimated his enemy.

Instead of returning prudently to his hole, which any rat moderately gifted with reason would have done, he decided to stand and fight. His cries for mercy, which were many and piteous, aroused us all from sleep, but they fell on deaf ears as far as Smudge was concerned. When we arrived to find out what had made all the riot, and turned on the light we saw four legs moving slowly to and fro, as their owner lay on his back, breathing his last, and a small cat, not nearly the size of her adversary running a paw over her ears as if to shut out the dying supplications of her enemy.

Such is Smudge. She is a pleasant and agreeable cat when she wants to be. But her idea of play is not consistent with the peace or safety of the members of the family. My hands are continually inscribed with her little curlycue autographs, and I am never sure when she will step around my shoulder and nip a nick out of my ear. Still, she does it all in a spirit of good clean fun, and her gallant fighting soul, and the music of her occasional purr has insured her a home with us as long as she shall desire it.

Eagerness for Power. "Eagerness for power," said Hi Ho, the sage of Chinatown, "is what has led my neighbor Hi Hat to make a public display of his weakness."

On to Success—

With It Comes Boldness in New Ideas; Our Sphere of Friends and Activities Expands

A POOR salesman may be a genius at gardening; an indifferent stenographer sometimes never suspects her own gift for cookery, for dress design, for ability to pick up foreign languages. By thinking candidly about yourself, by being as friendly to yourself as you would be to another, you can often draw up a picture of your tastes, abilities, desires and hopes which will astonish you. Take an inventory of yourself, paying special attention to the things you like but which you have little of in your daily life. Then start putting them into it.

From Interest to a Specialty. Often we have to begin slowly—reading, or finding courses of instruction within our means, or working out a program for ourselves in solitude; but every day something can be done toward the new way of living. It can grow from an interest into a hobby, from a hobby into a side line, from a side line into a specialty. Then comes the day when the unsatisfactory work can be given up (to someone who will find it as satisfying and as absorbing as we find our own now field) and success is at last really and noticeably on its way to us—or we are on our way to it.

Vitalizes Character. Then living begins to be fun. We meet people with the same tastes, not just the chance acquaintances who come our way in an unconventional profession. Having succeeded once, we begin to show a little daring; we try new ideas more boldly, and our world of friends and activities expands even more. Chances we couldn't even imagine until we got inside our real work turn up on every hand. Best of all, even a small success has a vitalizing effect on character.

That is the most interesting discovery that success brings in its train: those who are living successfully make the best friends. They are free from malice and spitefulness. They are not petty. They are full of good talk and humor.—Dorothea Brande in Cosmopolitan.

Obituary

The funeral service for Richard Bramblett, whose death occurred Saturday, Nov. 7, at his home at Alto, was conducted by Rev. Lewis of Capitan, Monday afternoon, Nov. 9, at the Angus cemetery. Mr. Bramblett had been in ill health for two years, but his sudden death came unexpectedly. At his bedside at the time of his death, were members of his immediate family, who had waited on him through his illness.

Mr. Bramblett was born Aug. 1, 1850, at Summerville, Georgia, moving from there at the age of 10. He enlisted in the Confederate Army at the age of 14 and took part in two battles under Gen. Johnston. He was married at the age of 21 at Springplace, La., to Mary Jane Venable. To this union were born 7 children, 4 of whom preceded their father in death. Besides his widow, he is survived by three children, Mmes. Arnold and Ora O'Leary of Alto and Colquitt Bramblett of San Angelo, Texas.
