GARRIZOZO, LINCOLN COUNTY, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1936

PRICE $2.00 THE YEAR

P.T.A. Notes

Last Friday night the local P.T.A. met at the High School Auditorium. The following program was presented by Mrs. Selma Degitz—

Songs — Primary Class, under the direction of Mrs. S. H. Nickels. Health Play — Pupils of the 4th grade; prepared by Miss Ruth Ryden

Vocal solo, Miss Leslye Cooper
Symbolic Reading — Mrs. R. E. Blaney.

This meeting was one of unusual interest, in that Mr. A. L. Goldstien, a traveling man out of Denver, donated funds to pay for the deficit on the drinking fountain. The offer of Mr. Goldstien was accepted, and a vote of thanks tendered by the P.T.A.

Board of Education Gets Demolition Fund

Postmaster Herman Kelt has been notified by Senator Chavez that he has been advised to the effect that a warrant has been issued on the National Treasury for $4834.00, which was awarded to the County Board of Education for salvaging the local roundhouse to be used for erection of rural school buildings over the county. All parties interested, have been notified by the postmaster.

Col. and Mrs. J. V. Taylor of their ranch near Ocuira were visitors in town this Friday morning.

LOST—One old hermit, hairy and horrible. What else? Two beautiful young girls and $50,000. All to be found in "Hermit's House" on the night of Feb. 28.

W. H. Broadbuss, Optometrist, will be in Carrizozo, Thursday, February 20, at the office of Dr. Shaver. Glasses fitted.

General Blacksmith—Side of old Livery Barn, Carrizozo.

Jake Caldwell was a business visitor here from Hot Springs the first part of the week.

Robert Hinchey and daughter, Mrs. Helen Meeks, were here Tuesday from Lincoln, remaining over and leaving for home in the afternoon, after transacting some business matters.

Manager R. A. Walker of the Lyric Theatre made a trip to El Paso last Saturday and had all of his equipment remodeled. The sound is now as perfect as in any theatre in this part of the state.

R. M. Storey of Ancho was a business visitor in town this Thursday.

Five autos with twenty-five young people and adults attended the young people's meeting at Alamogordo Sunday. A great crowd attended the Sunday evening preaching service with fine attention and good results.

I will preach Sunday morning at Capitan and Sunday evening at Carrizozo.

J. A. Bell.

Bert Pfingsten came up from Hondo Monday and after attending to some business matters, returned home in the afternoon.

Commander Porter and W. C. Hendren were business visitors from Fort Stanton Tuesday and while in town, they made the Outlook office a friendly call.

Call for a Meeting of Lincoln County Republican Central Committee

The Lincoln County Republican Central Committee is hereby called to meet at Capitan, Lincoln County, New Mexico, in the High School Gymnasium, on Saturday, February 15th, 1936, at 1:00 o'clock P. M.

The purpose of said meeting is to select the time and place of Precinct Primaries, and the time and place for holding a County Convention; also to determine the apportionment of delegates from each Precinct to the said County Convention.

Said County Convention to select Eighteen (18) delegates to the State Convention at Albuquerque, New Mexico, to be held on March 2nd, 1936, at which said State Convention will be selected six (6) delegates and six (6) alternates, and a National Committeeman for the Republican National Convention to be held in Cleveland, Ohio, in June, 1936.

W. W. Gallacher,
Chairman, Lincoln
County Republican
Central Committee.
Attest: Don B. English,
Secretary.

The regular meeting of El Club Recreativo was held at the home of Mrs. Marshall St. John, last Friday evening, with Miss Margaret Martinez as hostess.

The home was arranged with a beautiful Valentine spirit. Refreshments consisted of pie, coffee and sandwiches. The next meeting will be held March 6, at the President's home.

W. J. Ferguson of Coyote was a visitor in town Saturday.

Leslie Molins, Rural Rehabilitation Director for Lincoln County, is ill with the flu this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Nick Vega and the children spent the week-end with relatives in Tularosa.

Mrs. W. O. Garrison is ill at the home of her son, C. O. Garrison.

Andres Luercas was here from El Paso for a few days last week, visiting his daughter, Mrs. Ben C. Sanchez, son Andres, Jr., and their families.

The many friends of Mrs. S. W. Land of Glencoe will be glad to know that she is expected to return home on Feb. 14. Mrs. Land has been in the hospital in El Paso since Christmas.

Mrs. Tom Karr was an El Paso visitor on Wednesday of this week.

Bingham News Items

Considering so much sickness in the community we have had good attendance in church and Sunday school for the past month.

W. R. Dean of Lovington has been visiting his sons Harold and Gerald Dean, proprietors of the Bingham Store, during the past week.

The young people of the community will be entertained with a valentine dance at Henry Wilson's home February 8.

Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Hayes of the Bingham community are the proud parents of a baby girl, Helen Moderna, born Feb. 2.

Jno. Cooper and family were Sunday afternoon visitors in the J. P. Patrick home.

Mr. and Mrs. Simp. Pearson and family spent Sunday in the E. I. Griffin home.

Miss Belle Jones is spending two weeks with Mrs. C. O. Hayes.

Mrs. Ben Pace spent Sunday afternoon with Mrs. Jno. Golf.

Mrs. A. B. Harison and daughter Martha were Monday night supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Hayes.

Radio Station KOB Presents "Billy the Kid"

A group of Albuquerque actors and actresses, under the direction of Mrs. Flo Miller, are presenting a series of programs depicting the life of "Billy the Kid" each Wednesday evening from 7 to 7:30. The KOB players have been on that station for the past three years. Included in the cast are two young men with whom we are all well acquainted. Alvan Davidson formerly of Corona and B. T. Dingwall formerly of Carrizozo. The story on which the play is founded was told by the late Frank Cox, we are given to understand. Listen in each Wednesday evening at the time mentioned above and hear the familiar voices of our boys and hear a play in which we, as Lincoln County residents, are always interested. The cast, as a whole, is exceptionally good. Go to it, boys; we'll be listening.

Mrs. Gladys Gardenhire was here Wednesday from Tularosa, visiting her many Carrizozo friends.

Miss Agnes Lahr returned the first of the week from El Paso.

Mrs. Fred Gatty had one of her wrists broken one day last week. Mr. Gatty was ill in bed and she was leading her milch cow to pasture, when she tripped on a wire and fell to the ground.

Personals

Madames J. E. Lee and R. M. Multhead of the Carrizozo Eating House entertained with nine tables of bridge Saturday afternoon. Valentines were used. Prizes were awarded to Mmes. C. P. Huppertz, B. L. Stimmel and C. M. Luckey. Refreshments consisted of individual strawberry hearts in vanilla ice cream, coffee, caramel and strawberry cake.

Miss Jane Spencer and brother A. N., were among those who attended the "Ballet-Russe" at El Paso last week.

Mrs. J. M. Shelton received word Monday of the death of her father, Mr. White, who passed away at his home in Stevensville, Texas, early Monday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Shelton left on the evening train to attend the funeral which occurred Wednesday. They will return the latter part of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Lumpkins were here last Saturday and attended the meeting of the Republican County Central Committee.

NOTICE—To whom it may concern: The Dramatic Club of Carrizozo High School, on the evening of Feb. 28, is presenting "Hermit's House," a mystery play with abundant comedy.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Hall and daughter-in-law, Mrs. Edith Hall, came down from the ranch near Ancho Wednesday, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. going on to Capitan and Mrs. Edith Hall remaining over here for a short visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Dudrey of the Western Union.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ryberg, son Harry Carl, daughters Alice and Annie were here from their ranch near Corona Tuesday. After transacting some business, they left for home late in the afternoon. They gave a good report of stock and range conditions in their locality.

Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Davis of Republic, Mo., came through here the latter part of last week, on a return trip from California. They stopped over for a few days with their daughter, Miss Tracie Davis and left for home Monday.

FOUND—One unusually good mystery play. Bears these marks: A ghostly setting, a fine plot and a good cast. Anyone interested in a good time may have such by applying at the high school auditorium on the evening of Feb. 28, to see "Hermit's House."

Mrs. C. N. Lemmon, who had been absent since the first part of December, visiting relatives and friends in Colorado and Ohio, returned Tuesday. — Tucuman News.

The Woman's Club of Carrizozo will meet at the home of Mrs. C. W. Young Friday, Feb. 21, at 3 p. m.

The Republican County Central Committee held a meeting last Friday afternoon at the Carrizozo Eating House, at which the date for holding primaries over the county was set, the particulars of which will be found in the call on page 1 of this issue of the Outlook.

Out-of-the-Ordinary

STRANGER

Charley Joiner of Charleston, S. C., had often wished for a chance to get even with his mother-in-law and the chance came in this manner. A plot was schemed out to beat an accident insurance company, a taxi driver and a fake doctor being in on the game. The father and mother of Mrs. Joiner and her mother, who was of course John's mother-in-law, were to be the victims and collect the insurance. The old couple made an effort to cross the street and the taxi hit them. The fake doctor being near at hand, upbraided the taxi driver and took the old folks to his office, where he beat them up and bandaged the wounds. Then the mother-in-law became alarmed, lest she be left out of the picture and said: "What about me; I'm not battered up?" "Yes, you are," said John as he gave her an undercut and several good socks in the face, after which she kissed John and thanked him. They won the suit.

Glenn Bolden, 14, left his home in Motley, Minn., on Labor Day and went to California to see the beach girls perform in the surf. He soon had his fill of the sights not being able to obtain work of any kind. Finally he got a job working for his board and lodging, so he longed for home. He started toward the east by gaining entrance to an eastbound refrigerator car, which was securely locked after he entered. It took the car 11 days to reach Baltimore, Md., and lodged in the yards. The trainmaster heard feeble moans coming from the car and opened it. Glenn had been in that cold storage plant for 11 days without food or water. He was taken to a hospital, thawed out and is coming out of what would have been his death, had he remained in the car two hours longer, physicians said.

In order to satisfy the Carnegie Institute of New York of the efficacy of psychological research, three members of the Carnegie Church of Spirit Unity went into a 100-hour trance last Friday. When they emerged from the trance, they claimed they had been wandering all over the universe. They claimed to have held conversations with different notables who have long ago passed from the earth, among whom was George Washington. So far so good—but listen! Politics will creep into anything and in that case there was no exception. They said they asked George what he thought of the New Deal and George said it was OK. He also said the Constitution should be amended just like the brain-trust wants it. George also said he thought big Jim Farley was a peach and a go-gutter. When ghosts get into politics it's coming some. The national administration must be hard up for political fodder.

Ant Oddities

Fight to the Finish Between Red and Black Ants.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

LIKE humans, there are all kinds of ants—busy ants and ants that live on the accomplishments of others.

One often feels sorry for some of the industrious species of Formica, solid citizens, but really the "forgotten ants," because they seem to be preyed upon by every sort of warrior ant and their nests are nearly always shared with various guests and parasites.

Two kinds of ants, very different from each other, sometimes live together amicably, each occupying a separate part of the same nest and contributing to the general welfare.

The little shamoo ant (Leptothorax emersoni), discovered by Dr. William Morton Wheeler of Harvard in the peat bogs of Connecticut, lives in the nests of Myrmica canadensis, a much larger species. When the Leptothorax worker needs food, it approaches the Myrmica worker and proceeds to shamoo and lick it. The Myrmica obviously enjoys this, for it regurgitates food to the Leptothorax.

One day in Brazil a scientist was investigating an ant nest consisting of a mass of earth six inches in diameter in a fork of a tree. He tapped this nest gently with his forceps and the surface was immediately covered with small, reddish-brown ants of the genus Dolichoderus. When he gouged into the nest to find the various forms, a swarm of Odontomachus rushed out and one of them stung him. Odontomachus was a dozen times as big as the Dolichoderus and provided with strong biting jaws and a red-hot sting.

Undoubtedly the little Dolichoderus had built the nest and the Odontomachus had taken up their abode there also. Evidently a small insect alighting on such a nest would attract only the smaller inhabitants, but a soverly jolt would bring out the shock troops in defense. Both of these ants were new to science and never have been found again.

Finding a Rare Ant.

Often ant hunters get a big thrill from a successful search for a rare ant as a big game hunter from the capture of giraffes or elephants. There is about as much physical exertion involved, too, turning over thousands of stones and logs, digging into the earth, chopping hard wood, and peeling bark from innumerable dead trees.

Luck infrequently plays an important part. In 1901 Father Schmitt, a Jesuit missionary, sent to the great myrmecologist, Forol, of Switzerland, a single specimen of a new and extraordinary ant from Haiti. Forol described it and named the genus after his good friend, Carol Emery of Bologna, and the species after the Jesuit (Emeryella schmitti). This lone specimen was long the only representative of its kind in collections.

In Haiti at the end of a month's work a student found one solitary worker along a roadside. He had no ant-tooth comb with him, but for two months he tried every other method he knew of to discover the nest of more of the workers. Finally he reported to his teacher in zoology that, as far as he could make out, the species was now extinct and he had captured the last survivor on the island.

Then one evening he went for a stroll just before dinner and noticed on the path a millipede, or thousand-legger, moving in an unnatural way. Bending over, he saw that the millipede was dead and was being carried by an ant. The ant was Emeryella.

It took all of his strength of character to keep from seizing both ant and prey at once, but he smothered his pipe as calmly as he could and watched the ant till it leisurely entered a small hole at one side of a flat stone.

When the stone was turned over, there was an entire colony of some fifty workers. Later, in the same locality, he found a similar colony, and specimens of these have now been contributed to all the important ant collections in museums all over the world.

No Female of the Species.

There were no females in either nest; so it is not improbable that this species lacks a special female, and that one of the workers functions as an egg-layer. At night there came to light in the student's quarters a reddish ant, which from its general character was assumed to be the male of the species.

He had talked about Emeryella schmitti so much that it became well known to the scant white population of the island under the name of "Mary Ella Schmitt," and when he finally reported its discovery there was a great celebration among his fellow Americans, railroad men vacationing at Port-au-Prince.

Another missionary priest, Pere Salle, had sent to the Museum in Paris from Haiti a curious nest of vegetable fiber, not unlike a wasp's nest.

A scientist, while rummaging about among the specimens, found it and tapped it on a piece of white paper. Several dead and dried ants dropped out. They belonged to the genus Macromischa, the most exquisitely formed of the ants and with beautiful metallic coloration—purples, greens, and reds. The genus is interesting, too, because it alone of the ants of the West Indies has developed into numerous species. About thirty are known from Cuba alone.

At the Mina Caribia, in the Sierra de Trinidad of Cuba, an ant hunter attempted to turn over a large rock to see what was living underneath. The rock split in the middle, and there, in the very center, was a half teaspoon of brilliant green metallic ants glistening in the sunshine. They proved to be an unknown species of this genus.

Fire Ant in a Stinger.

The fire ant (Solenopsis geminata) is such a good traveler that one variety or another is found throughout the warmer parts of the earth. It gets its name from the painful, burning sting it can inflict. A colony contains vast numbers of workers. They have recently been reported as doing great damage to young quail in the southeastern states. The birds, incapable of defending themselves, are stung to death.

Fire ants nest in almost any kind of locality and are extremely prolific. Even floods cannot daunt the fire ant, for it has been reported in Brazil that when the water rises and washes out a colony, the ants form a ball, queen and brood in the middle, and this living ball floats away to a tree or to higher ground.

The taller ant (Oecophylla smaragdina) and a few other ants (Polyrhachis) are unique among all the earth's creatures, so far as is known, in that they use their young as tools in nest construction.

Now adult insects spin silk, but the larvae of many have this ability to enclose themselves in silken cocoons, from which they will later emerge as fully formed adults. Oecophylla utilizes this accomplishment of its young in making its nests. Scientists have often torn one of the leaves that form its box-shaped nest and then watched the proceedings.

At first there is a wild scuffle on the part of the ants, all in fighting mood. They cannot sting, but they bite annoyingly. After they have given up trying to find and destroy the intruder, worker ants seize larvae in their mandibles and bring them to the damaged portions. Other workers seize the edges of the leaves and pull them together, while those with the larvae pass them back and forth, substituting the grub to stude silk, which sticks and holds the pieces of the leaves together.

After their silk has been used for the common good, the luckless larvae have to sleep naked! The taller ant lives throughout the Old World tropics and is one of the few ants that are greenish in color, though some of its varieties are red, and one, in West Africa, is brown almost to black.

In the American tropics legionary ants are encountered on every walk in the woods, yet the discovery of one of these queens is an entomological event. The female is wingless, an egg-laying creature, blind like the workers, her abdomen greatly enlarged.

The one duty of the queen is to lay eggs, and this she does almost continually, the colony increasing in number and in strength. She may have a long life, for there is one record of a queen confined in a glass observation nest who had survived for 17 years.

To Lincoln

By ROSE BARLOW WEINMAN
in Dorset News

YOU were the Mind that planned
To stem the tide
Of menace to the land;
You were the Voice to prey,
"O men! to arms!
It is the only way."
You were the Hand whose pen
Struck off the chains
From the dark limbs of men;
You were the Life that gave
Union to all,
But to yourself, the grave.
You were the Love to see
Freedom and Joy
For this humanity.

One Mind, one Voice, one true
Vast Life and Love
Lincoln, found home in you.

LINCOLN MEMORIAL in WASHINGTON

THE memorial to Abraham Lincoln in the National Capital is composed of four features—a statue of the man, a memorial of his Gettysburg address, a memorial of his second inaugural address and a symbol of the Union of the United States—the four things which the martyred President held were his paramount objects. From the memorial to the west reaches a bridge, linking the nation's tribute to its Civil War President with the home of Gen. Robert E. Lee, military leader of the Confederacy. General Lee's home, Arlington, now is Arlington National cemetery, where rest the dead of the Revolutionary war, the Mexican war, the bodies of men who fought with the armies of the blue and gray, the Spanish-American war and the World war.

The bridge, spanning the Potomac river, natural and historic barrier between the North and South, links, more than in symbol, the two sections of the United States.

Henry Bacon, who died in 1924, was the architect who designed the Lincoln memorial and who said it should contain the four features. Daniel Chester French, famed American sculptor, produced the statue. This represents Lincoln as the great war President, the man who brought the nation through its titanic struggle. The two decorations, representing Emancipation and Reunion, are by Jules Guerin.

IN THIS TEMPLE
AS IN THE HEARTS OF THE PEOPLE FOR WHOM HE SAVED THE UNION
THE MEMORY OF ABRAHAM
LINCOLN
IS ENshrINED FOREVER

The Gettysburg address and the second inaugural speech occupy the north and south walls with the decorations. Simplicity is the keynote of the memorial.

To the east front of the Lincoln memorial is the 2,000 feet long reflecting basin in which are to be seen reflections of both the Washington monument and the memorial. The basin is bordered by trees and walks and, with the memorial, is one of the world's most impressive sights. Arlington Memorial bridge follows in simple dignity the steps of the memorial; linking the monument of one great leader to the lost home of the leader of a lost cause. At the foot of the slope of Arlington, the roadway from the bridge ends and, ultimately, there will be roads and walks radiating from the classic road ending to the Arlington Memorial house, to the Tomb of the Unknown and to other points in the cemetery.

STAR DUST

Movie • Radio

By VIRGINIA VALE

HERE is an even more authoritative report on the standing of the movie stars at the box office than was submitted to you in this column last week. It comes from the independent exhibitors, through the courtesy of the Motion Picture Herald, a weekly publication devoted to the news of the industry. Here it is.

(1) Shirley Temple. (2) Will Rogers. (3) Clark Gable. (4) Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers. (5) Joan Crawford. (6) Claudette Colbert. (7) Dick Powell. (8) Wallace Beery. (9) Joe E. Brown. (10) James Cagney. Even more interesting (to me, at least,) is the standing of some of the other players. Shirley Temple is rated at 87 1/2 per cent; against that rating Jean Harlow gets 104, Norma Shearer, Shirley Temple 123, Katherine Hepburn 111. William Powell is rated at 203, and Myrna Loy at 78. Startling, isn't it? But how about Greta Garbo at 41 per cent? And Carole Lombard at 2?

Of course, these ratings were based on the number of times an actor or actress was mentioned in any one position in the questionnaires filled out by the exhibitors. And some of the players did not make many pictures in 1935. Even so, I find myself going around in a daze, muttering "Ronald Colman, 15 per cent; Miriam Hopkins, 8 per cent. And Patsy Kelly got only 1 per cent, and she's being starred now!"

Have the mighty fallen!

Well, American men can rest on their laurels now; Wendy Barrie has come out with the statement for her press agents have come out with it for her, to the effect that she's always liked American men better than she liked the British, "because they're more romantic." But she came to this country, according to all reports, with the avowed intention of marrying one of our young millionaires who is frequently mentioned in the public prints, only to discover that he wasn't matrimonially interested. Well, perhaps that's romance!

Jane Withers certainly owes Shirley Temple a debt of gratitude. Due to Shirley's zooming into stardom, everybody wants pictures starring a child, and Jane came along just in time. She has a new, long-term contract with Twentieth Century-Fox, and her next picture will be "The Matron's Report."

Once again Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., has Hollywood all agog. At the moment it looks as if the romance between him and Lady Ashley is a thing of the past, which, of course, revives rumors that he and Mary Pickford will re-marry, and brings up assertions from some of those who work with Mary, to the effect that she will marry Buddy Rogers. Fairbanks has sent word to have a studio dusted off, and says he is all set to begin work on "Marco Polo." It will be a costume picture, of course, and not so long ago producers wouldn't touch a costume picture with a ten-foot pole. Now you fall over them wherever you go.

Richard Dix is busy saying "No" these days. He said it emphatically when he was asked to let his twins make a nice sum of money by appearing in a picture, and he said it again when he was invited to go to Australia to make one.

No sooner is one dispute between James Cagney and his employers settled than another one bobs up; it looks very much as if the two-fisted James wanted to end that affiliation. They've squabbled over salary, over his fight to have the final say on his pictures, and the most recent argument (to date) is over how many more pictures he's to make on his contract, which has two years to run. He says six, the company says eight. He does some of his best work in the latest release, "Celling Zero," a real thriller. It probably will coin money, which puts him in a good spot to make trouble.

Jim Cagney.
He says six, the company says eight. He does some of his best work in the latest release, "Celling Zero," a real thriller. It probably will coin money, which puts him in a good spot to make trouble.

ODDS AND ENDS. . . . Errol Flynn seems to be set as a star; his picture is breaking a lot of attendance records. . . . Gladys Swarthout and Fred Astaire, ignoring that little matter of high heels, are building in Hollywood. . . . The motion picture colony in Hollywood had its heart set on Governor Alford, of Texas, as soon as it was known that he was going to be the party guest at the White House. . . . They say we'll see more all-star pictures than ever this year.

Slenderizing Surplice

Tops an At-Home Frock

PATTERN 9609

What if you do wear a forty-six? No need to sacrifice femininity on that account, for a frock with gracious, slimming lines can make you look as young as you feel. Why not choose an easy pattern with surplice bodice for your next "at home" style—like the one sketched today? Simplicity is the keynote of those sweeping lines that outline the collarless, surplice yoke. The slenderizing effect carries right on down into the skirt—a clever piece of designing, we'd say!

Pattern 9609 may be ordered only in sizes 16, 18, 20, 24, 28, 32, 36, 40, 44 and 48. Size 36 requires 3 1/2 yards 36 inch fabric. Complete, disregarding sew chart included. SEND FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE. Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 232 W. Eighteenth St., New York, N. Y.

Watch Your Posture; Has Vast Influence in Health
"How you feel, how much you get out of life and how long you live depends to a surprising degree on the proper functioning of your vital organs, and their health is largely controlled by your posture—at any rate. Improper posture will crowd or displace organs and interfere with functional efficiency. Many mysterious ailments are traceable to this, says Rex Beach in Cosmopolitan. He passes on these tips regarding posture from Dr. Stanley Green, who has worked them out according to the principles of "body mechanics":

Don't sit on the feet. It twists the pelvis, and may eventually produce a postural spinal curve. Sit with the weight on base of pelvis, leaning forward from the hips, knees not crossed, head up.
At the office, don't slump with weight on base of spine or middle of back or with feet elevated. It crowds the heart and lungs, compresses the vertebrae, and may cause eye strain, headache, neuritis, lame back and other ills. Sit well back in chair; weight on the buttocks, head up. If necessary to bend forward, bend at hips—not at neck or waist. Standing with weight on one leg causes a pelvic twist, spinal curvature, and flattening of the arch. Stand with weight on both legs, head erect, feet parallel, or slightly turned out.

Fowl Note.
More than a mile away from her home at Penn. Yan, N. Y., Miss Eleanor Garbus discovered three of her chickens roosting on the rear bumper of her automobile. She completed her errand and drove back, and a chicken left the strange roost.

5 PM is a test of how you FEEL
"How do I feel.... Rotten! why do you ask?"
"Because, you are not yourself!"
It is all so simple, too! That tired, run-down, exhausted feeling calls for a rest. It is due to lack of a sufficient quantity of those precious red-blood-cells. Just build up those oxygen-carrying cells and the whole body takes on new life. . . . Food is really turned into energy and strength. . . . You can't help but feel and look better. S.S.S. Tonic restores depleted red-blood-cells. . . . It also improves the appetite and digestion. It has been the health builder for over 100 years. . . . Don't wait until you are completely exhausted to start your S.S.S. Tonic. . . . It is the best and most reliable health builder. . . . It's worth a try. . . .

All Around the House

Iodine stains may be removed from white cotton or linen if stains are soaked in a solution of ammonia and water, a teaspoon of ammonia to a pint of water.

Always use canned pineapple in gelatin puddings. If fresh pineapple is used the mixture will not congeal.

If fruit cake becomes very hard it can be wrapped in a cloth saturated with orange or spiced peach juice and stored in an air-tight box.

A few bright colored flower pots, with a narcissus bulb—planted in each, set on the window sill in the living room will, when the bulbs blossom, give color and decoration to the room.

Don't heat fudge as soon as it is taken from the fire. You will find it will be much creamier if first put into a cold bowl, and then beaten.

Twine will tie bundles much tighter and will not slip when knots are made if it is dampened before using.

Place a hot water bottle in the clothes basket when hanging out and taking in clothes in cold weather. It will keep the hands warm.

Never set out flowers in a draft. If you do you will find they will soon wilt.

When maple sirup becomes cloudy set it over the fire until it boils, then take it off the fire and let cool.

THE DOCTORS ARE RIGHT

Women should take only Liquid Laxatives

Many believe any laxative they might take only makes constipation worse. And that isn't true. Do what doctors do to relieve this condition. Doctors use liquid

A cleansing dose today; a smaller quantity tomorrow; less each time, until bowels need no help at all.
Laxatives, and keep reducing the dose until the bowels need no help at all.
Reduced dosage is the secret of aiding Nature in restoring regularity. You must use a little less laxative each time, and that's why your laxative should be a liquid form. A liquid does not get regulated to the drop.
The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara—both natural laxatives that form no habit even with children. Syrup Pepsin is the nicest tasting, nicest acting laxative you ever tried.

Mercifully Love your fellowman; but judge him.

ADVENTURERS' CLUB

Hello, Everybody!

"Brakeman's Jump for Life"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter.

GATHER around, fellow adventurers, and meet the new member of the club. He is Norman E. Spencer, and don't bother wheeling out that big, comfortable easy chair for Norman, because he isn't used to that sort of thing. If you want to make him feel right at home, just let him hang by his knees from the chandelier. For Norman is a railroad brakeman and, from the looks of his story, railroad brakemen must spend most of their time dangling by one hand or one leg, or one eyelash, over several assorted kinds of certain death.

Anyway, it is that sort of experience Norman is going to tell us about today, and I would advise you all to take a good, deep breath before he starts, because you're going to be holding it a long time before he is finished.

Norman became a railroad brakeman just about the time the United States entered the World War. Those were the days when all the able-bodied men were running for the recruiting stations, and sixteen-year-old kids, like Norman was then, were being dragged out of high school to fill their jobs. He worked two or three years on that brakeman job and did it darned well. But it wasn't until February, 1918, that he ran into the adventure on which he is now going to give us the lowdown.

It was late at night and the train Norman was braking had just started down a nine-mile hill at Harper's Ferry, W. Va. Norman had just gone back over the top of the train to set up air retainers on the 10 cars nearest the engine and he was on his way back when his lantern went out, leaving him to travel the tops of the cars in darkness.

One Little Slip Might Cost Legs or Life

Picking his way back carefully over the swaying car tops he managed to get back to the first car. But when he came to jump from the front car to the engine tender he hesitated. The gap was wider there than it was between the cars and the unsteady light that came from the firebox of the engine cast moving shadows that made it hard to judge the distance.

Norman took his time about gauging that last jump, but luck that night was running against him. For, at the same instant that his feet left the end of the car, the engineer opened the throttle up wide. The train leaped forward, ruining Norman's carefully timed leap, and down he went between the engine and the car, headed for certain death beneath the wheels.

He fell feet first. "Like a drowning man," he says, "I was grabbing at anything I could get hold of. I guess it wasn't my time yet, for somehow I managed to get one hand on a small chain that runs down the back of the tank to the coupler. And there I hung, with my feet and legs dragging on the ties, my body sort of stretched out by the speed of the train and the pull of the ties as my legs rubbed against them.

Norman Struggles Inches From Doom.

"My feet were only inches away from the wheels of the front car and I knew that any sudden lurch of the train would throw my feet right under them. I tried to pull myself up on the chain, but every time I gained a few inches away from the wheels of the front car the friction of the ties would pull me right back again."

It could have been only a few seconds that Norman was struggling with that chain, but it seemed like hours to him before it was over. Time and again he would pull himself up almost to the point where he could get hold of something more solid and rigid than that chain only to become exhausted and fall back again. Finally he got hold of an iron bar that crossed the back of the engine tender, but still his troubles weren't over. He had literally to climb himself on this bar and at the same time edge himself over to the right in order to get to a ladder that ran down the back of the tender.

It was a feat that called for the trained muscles of an acrobat, but Norman had to do it—or die. And to make matters worse, the train at that point roared into the tunnel just east of Harper's Ferry and he was all but stifled with the smoke and heat and steam that poured back on him from the engine. He had to hang on in that difficult position until, at last, the train shot out of the tunnel before he dared try to edge his way any farther along the bar.

Norman Climbs His Tallest Ladder—for Life.

Once the train was out in the open again he started his slow, difficult journey. Inch by inch he worked his way across the bar, while his muscles ached and threatened to give out on him. At length, though, he made it—got to the ladder on the side of the tender and began to climb up. Never before, and never since, has that ladder seemed so long as it did to Norman's tired and aching muscles that night. When, finally, he got to the top of the tender he lay down flat on his back.

"I just lay there," he says, "and looked at the stars. And I know they were never more lovely. When I got back into the cab the engineer remarked that it had taken me a long time, and I didn't say a word. It wasn't until we had got to the yards and the rest of the crew and I cleaned up and were about to have something to eat that the reaction set in. I trembled so then that the other fellows thought I had a chill and gave me a big hooker of whiskey. 'Just for safety's sake,' they said. But I thought to myself that I should have had that hooker an hour ago, the other side of Harper's Ferry."

Lonely People of World

Found on Small Islands

The loneliest Britons are to be found among the smaller islands of the Hebrides, observes a writer in Pearson's London Weekly. Many of them believe in fairies and in ghosts; the ghosts are always green. Several of the isles have less than a dozen inhabitants, some less than half a dozen. No roads, no motor cars, no cinemas, no dances, no hospitals.

The world's loneliest petrol pump is Bidon Cine, in the middle of the Sahara desert, in Algerian territory. One Arab looks after it, selling water besides petrol. The first Arab put in charge went out of his mind.

Sailors say the loneliest lighthouse is out in the Red sea, off Suakin. It is known as the Widow's Tears, because it was built by the generosity of a British captain whose ship was wrecked on the Djebel Tar rock. For a long time no keeper would agree to dwell there, and its tending was entrusted to convicts, who were let off part of their sentence as a reward.

Britain's loneliest band is that of the bagpipe players of the Isle of Arranmore, off Donegal.

Night watchmen are the loneliest workers in cities. Month after month, and year after year, they go their solitary rounds through stores and warehouses, until the pale light of dawn calls them home to bed.

The Scotch-Irish

Scotch-Irish are chiefly of Scotch descent, though they came to this country from Ireland. In 1611 King James I began colonizing Ulster, a barren and neglected part of Ireland, with people from Scotland and the northern part of England. They began migrating to America about the year 1730, and at the outbreak of the Revolutionary war about one-sixth of the population of the colonies was Scotch-Irish.

Golden Phantoms

FASCINATING TALES OF LOST MINES

By Edith L. Watson

INDIAN GUARDIANS

THE Utes know—or they used to know—where there is a valley full of gold nuggets. The gold is so thick that it may be gathered by bushels. And since no white man has ever found it for keeps, it must still lie somewhere out in the old Ute country, which is so desolate that no one save the most desperate would venture into its fastnesses.

Mike Gray heard of the valley of gold from a Frenchman in California in 1872. He organized a small party and outfitted for gold-seeking, but somehow he never managed to reach his goal. He said that a white woman, held captive by the Utes, knew its location, but the Indians feared that she would tell, and at last killed her to silence her tongue.

There was a Mexican woman once who saw another Indian gold mine, and she told about it in detail, but no one could find it. So the Utes might as well have let their captive live, since describing definite locations among the mountains is no easy task.

The Mexican woman was a friend of an old Pima chief. He fell ill, and she cured him with her homely remedies, so that his gratitude was great.

Now, the Pimas had long been known to have a gold mine, called the Talopa. When they were in need, they would sell pieces of very rich high-grade ore, but they would never divulge its source. The old Pima chief gave his Mexican friend some of this ore, and from time to time he would present her with more, but all her entreaties would not budge his determination to keep the secret. He said that he would be struck dead if he told—and certainly that was a powerful reason for not telling.

At last, determined to find out the location of the Talopa, the Mexican woman packed up her belongings and went to live in the Pima village. Here she made herself useful and agreeable. She made gifts of some of her trinkets to the most prominent women. She was always ready to aid the sick. She became, practically, a member of the tribe. And all the time she tried to learn the secret of the hidden mine.

At last this method of persuasion wore down the old chief's resistance. He began to talk a little about the mine. It had been worked when he was a boy. It was very rich indeed. No, no, he would not take her there, for he feared the retribution of his red gods.

But at last he weakened. He would allow two women of his people to lead the Mexican woman to the mine, and she should see it with her own eyes. He could no longer escape the vast obligation which he and his people owed her, and this would be his repayment.

Joyously, the Mexican woman set out with her escort to the mine. For three nights they climbed mountains and crossed valleys, and at last, on the fourth night, the end of the journey was near. However, it was after midnight when the women stopped in a deep canyon, and by the pale light of the moon pointed out a large dump and an arrastra, which showed signs of great age, nearby. The visitor went over to the dump and picked up a few pieces of ore.

Suddenly, as if frightened by something invisible and terrible, her guides insisted on their hurrying away. They traveled all the rest of the night, and late the next afternoon they reached the Pima village. It had taken only one day to return from a four days' journey, which proved that she had been led by a roundabout route to the mine.

THE DENTAL GOLD FIND

Further questions on her part met with failure. The old chief had done all he could and more than he should—he made that plain. Beyond that he would not go.

It was impossible to retrace that journey made in the darkness. She had seen the mine and she had the ore to prove it. But that was all. And though she told her story over and over again, no one ever was able to find the Pima mine.

EARLY this year an ex-service man named Charles Williams became lost in Superstition mountain, site of the "Lost Dutchman" mine and mecca of treasure-hunters. When he finally made his way out of the mazes in which so many men have been forever lost, he brought with him a dozen pieces of gold, and claimed that he had found a cache containing some twenty pounds of the metal.

Assays showed one of the "nuggets" to be what is known as "dental gold"—an alloy of gold, copper, and a trace of platinum.

As this is written, Williams has not been able to find the cache, but believes that he will discover it again. If all the gold proves to be alloy, it will add another mystery to the many already accumulated about Superstition.

Use of Double Negative
In Anglo-Saxon, Greek, French and some other languages, the double negative is only as a negative intensifier. In modern English it destroys the force of the real negative; in other words, two negatives make an affirmative.

PIECE OF TRUE CROSS STOLEN

Priceless religious relics valued at more than $700,000 have been stolen from Pamplona cathedral, Spain. It is believed the thieves escaped over the frontier. A portion of the True Cross is among the loot. The culprits succeeded by making themselves familiar with the cathedral routine and obtaining keys to open the treasure chests. Chalices, crosses and gems were taken by the thieves.

Here's Very Fast Way to "Alkalize" Acid-Indigestion Away

Amazingly Fast Relief Now from "Acid Indigestion" Over-Indulgence, Nausea, and Upsets

If you want really quick relief from an upset or painful stomach condition—arising from acidity following over-eating, smoking, mixtures of foods or stimulants—just try this:

Take—2 teaspoonfuls of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia in a full glass of water. OR—2 Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets, the exact equivalent of the liquid form.

This acts almost immediately to alkalize the excess acid in the stomach. Neutralizes the acids that cause headaches, nausea, and indigestion pains. You feel results at once.

Try it. AND—if you are a frequent sufferer from "acid stomach," use Phillips' Milk of Magnesia 30 minutes after meals. You'll forget you have a stomach!

When you buy, see that any box or bottle you accept is clearly marked "Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia."

Scrapping the New Deal Laws

Before the Supreme Court has a chance to declare certain new deal laws unconstitutional, the President has asked Congress to annul them. That alone, is evidence of the fact that the brain trust knew they were unconstitutional when they were enacted. But their strength was so great as to buffalo themselves into thinking they would scare that tribunal into their ways of thinking and acting.

The President and all of his advisors were fully aware of what was to come; hence, the annulment of those objectionable laws that could not stand the light which the Supreme Court would throw on them. The entire self-convicted regime stands as warning to others who would tamper with the rights of the American people. Had it not been for the Supreme Court, the brain trusters would have gone to lengths that would make Soviet policies fade into insignificance. Hated with the fever of too much power, the freedom of the people has not only been tampered with, but violation of the rights of those whom they deemed helpless has been the rule.

We are given to understand that the Democrats are to change their emblem to that of the Liberty Bell. But that would hardly be appropriate, as it must be remembered that the Liberty Bell rang out the glad tidings of both the Declaration of Independence and the framing of the Constitution of the United States.

Carrizozo to Have Sanitary Toilets

The U. S. Public Health Service is sponsoring a WPA project in Carrizozo which should prove of inestimable value in reducing sickness and deaths among our babies and children. The main problem is to stamp out breeding places of flies; this can be accomplished to a great extent by replacing open toilets with the sanitary pit type toilet which has been approved by the U. S. Public Health Service. This approved toilet consists of a reinforced concrete slab with riser, seat, seat cover and vent pipe so placed over the pit as to be absolutely fly-proof.

Actual construction in Carrizozo will begin next week. All labor is furnished by the government absolutely free—the only cost to the property owner is for material. The slab, seat, seat cover and vent pipe costs five dollars. In many cases the old building can be rebuilt, but it is much better to have a new building. The material for same being furnished by the property owner. Everyone desiring the approved toilet is urged to turn in his name with the WPA check.

Home Rule—An American Tradition

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

Dominant among American concepts in government stands the principle of Home Rule.

It is perhaps the oldest of our traditions. It is a healthy outgrowth of that insistence on self-government which found expression in the Revolutionary War. Regarded by the founders and developers of America as essential to their liberty, it has persisted through a century and a half of national history.

That explains why a growing number of citizens watch with grave misgiving many of the innovations in government being urged on the American people today. Among these they see:

Efforts to force on citizens, with all the authority of enacted law, the dictates of appointed Bureau chiefs.

Efforts to curb the powers of the Supreme Court whenever it upholds the rights reserved by our Constitution to the people and the states.

Efforts to centre in Washington power and authority which, since the beginning of our nation, have belonged to the states and smaller communities.

These attempts are already under way. Others will undoubtedly follow. But, in whatever alluring forms they may be presented, all mean fundamentally the same thing—limiting the people's power in government, by taking from their local communities the right to run their own affairs.

In other words, the weakening of Home Rule.

The real significance of such proposals lies, therefore, not in what they promise, but in what they threaten to take away from the people in the way of rights and privileges and power. As a wise President once said:

"No method of procedure has ever been devised by which liberty could be divorced from local self-government."

CONFERENCE ON BANKING
NEW YORK. — An eastern states conference on banking service will be held by the American Bankers Association in Philadelphia January 22 and 24 as a part of the organization's nationwide program on banking development, it has been announced.

Robert V. Fleming, president of the association, will preside over the meetings. It is stated that this conference will be the first of several to be held in various parts of the country presenting a program the details of which are now in the course of preparation.

The general topic of the conference will embrace the managerial, legislative and operative problems confronted by all classes of banks. An outstanding phase of the meetings will be the development of plans for promoting a general better public understanding in regard to bank functions and policies.

"But at least I may take you to the station—see you on the train." He touched her arm to turn her toward the car, and she got in.

"Sister," said Hal, after he had started "staputin" into the traffic, "I have been a very great fool, and I have been near to being even a greater one. Now I see things clearly. Sister, I know who her husband is; I know he is evil. It doesn't matter how much I hate him nor how much I am ready to do to get her away from him. What matters is that whatever I do, I should be stronger and happier—for her, sister, and for myself—if you could tell me, as her friend and, I so much hope, mine too, that you also feel I must get her from him. It cannot be wicked to take evil from her life, no matter how it is done, can it? Even if she will not love me now, for the fool I've been and the wrong I've done, I know about that evil and, loving her, I cannot leave her with it, can I?"

Her eyes were on his—all of a frightened seriousness, a deeply fearful solicitude for what he had told her.

"Long ago," she said, "when I was a girl as young as she—"
The sound of her own voice, saying that, seemed gently to enforce her silence. Looking at him—her eyes large, inarticulate in hopefulness, touched too with some longing sorrow—she barely nodded, once, and then bravely said, "You should do something."

Hal burst into the room without knocking, hot for Kerrigan's word that Barry was at her hotel, that he could go straight to her now and humble himself irrevocably, before he went on to whatever else must be done in final swiftsness. Kerrigan looked at him as if he didn't believe what he saw.

"She went by train," Hal told him quickly. "You called Barry. She's all right, I can—"

"I can't get her," Kerrigan said, "but she's been here. That envelope—the left it. I've been trying to think I ought to open it."

Hal snatched the envelope and tore it open, and fresh fear ran, at his heart as his eyes began to follow the decisive lines.

"I shouldn't write, my darling, but I've got to. Being with you, loving you as I shall forever, has shown me by way out and given me strength to take it. When you get back from Santa Barbara, it will be done and there'll be no good in trying to stop me. You mustn't try. I shall be all right. I'm so tired of trying to decide what's good, what's best. I can't have you, but I can have myself—free of badness, to remember you and beauty. I can't let you go away thinking I don't love you."

"He will find out soon that you are Frederick Ireland's son. But there will be nothing left to show any connection between you and him. So when you see tomorrow's papers, you must keep quiet."

"I love you. I didn't know it would be so much. Darling, forgive me for what I've done to you, Barry."

And in postscript: "I don't mean suicide. You'll know that if I couldn't break my bargain for you, I couldn't at all. I'm going to end it."

Starting for the door, Hal yelled at Kerrigan: "She's going to kill him. Almighty G—d, Kerrigan! She's killing him now!"

In his terror, Hal still had time to be thankful for Kerrigan's agility in pursuit; Kerrigan was behind him, struggling into his coat as they hurried down the hall.

Hal's mind was frantic with: Snug, criminal ass, to think I could do this to her, that she'd wait for my rotten apology. Oh G—d, if you're there and you're good, stop her, stop her, stop her.

"Battle of Blenheim" drive like a white man, Kerrigan was saying, as second speed began to scream under them. "Get pinched or plied up and you're useless to her—useless."

"Kerrigan, if she's not there, you find Crack and stick to him like a thousand leeches," Hal said gently. "I'll find her if—G—d!"

A man, unheeding, darted from among the parked cars at the right. Hal jumped on Rasputin's loyal brakes and felt them drag gallantly at the speed, in a desperate squeal of rubber. Then there was a crumpling slam of impact behind, and Rasputin lunged forward sprawling, drunkenly careened by savage force at the rear. As the rigid sedan tipped past the point of recovery, tearing and splintering at the body of a parked car alongside, Hal flung himself upon Kerrigan and fought to make him duck. Then Rasputin's solid side smashed upon solid pavement with an abrupt explosion of showering glass. And that was all, except for a small, single tinkling, like a distant key-ringing, that diminished in whirled darkness.

CHAPTER X

Hal was heavily sick—lying in a bed—and heavily sad. His mouth was dry as cloth, and his lips stuck.

There was an impression of having dreamed lots of things, crowded close around him and very fitting because of their constant demand for effort. But he couldn't remember anything of what they were and it didn't matter.

There were changes in him—changes of which he was aware abstractly. He had made mistakes he would never make again. There was ignorance washed away, and contempt and apathy; an oppression, an ominousness he had once known was lifted. The mistakes he had made were on the very lip of consciousness, but they stayed there, peacefully. They would come later: no hurry any more.

There was Barry to think of. It was very odd he hadn't remembered that he could think of her till now. Her image appeared quietly in his mind, walking toward him with that straight-legged, inquiring, unself-conscious grace, Doc at his cheerful foot beside her. Soon he would see her lovely face, her eyes lighted, smiling. It was good to see her walk because last time he'd thought of her—last time, she'd been sitting on the edge of a bed, knees clasped hard in her arms, her head bowed, her eyes—strange, sullen, dark with—

Suddenly, before he knew what it was, Hal yelled her name and struggled against the tight-tucked sheet across his chest; and a dreadful avalanche tumbled memory and terror upon his beguilement. He had an arm free before the nurse could get to him. He was breaking the nurse's hold when a young man, in white up to the neck, appeared on the other side and forced him back to the pillow.

"Listen," said Hal, commanding the attention of the man's blue eyes: "I'm not delirious; I'm not crazy. I know where I am: in a hospital in Los Angeles because of a motor accident. But you've got to let me up—right away. I'll come back afterward, but you've got to let me up. It's a matter of murder—murder—and I've got to stop it."

"You'll kill me if you keep me here. I swear to you I know what I'm saying. Look in my eyes. I'm sane—sane as hell. You've got to believe it."

"Mr. Ireland!" the young man said sharply. "Listen to me." Then, slowly and significantly, "You've been here for over twenty-four hours."

Hal knew it was significant even as he wondered why it was said so significantly. Then most terribly he saw; his shoulders fell away from resistance and all his breath went out in a broken cry of anguish and despair. On a swift shadow of hope he said: "But Kerrigan—where's Kerrigan? The man who was with me in the car. Please, you've got to find out. You will find out—quickly, quickly, and let me know. And another thing." What was the other thing? Good G—d, he had to hold on (ill he thought of it—something terrible. Yes! "Another thing," he said, exhaustion consuming the breath he needed to talk with: "a newspaper—one of the morning after my accident. I've got to see it. I'll go crazy—raving—unless I know."

"Yes, all right," said the interne. After a word to the nurse at the door, he was gone and Hal rolled his head miserably, but in a minute, a white jacket came between him and the wall, and a newspaper rustled. They held it over him while he searched the news of the front page headlines about Japan, divorce revelations, the picture of a woman in black in court; and beside that a single-column head reading, "Man Blain in M. M.'s Blvd. Hotel Room—Seek Woman Companion of Martin Crack, Promoter—Clutched Golf Ball Clew!"—Wheels of light spinning against blackness closed over the page, and their soft bussing faded behind thick, deaf cushions at his ears.

Spears, a vice president of the Old Man's correspondent bank in Los Angeles, gave Hal attention and incurious understanding. He came on a solicited order from New York, when Hal was finished with the delicious phantoms of roused hope.

"You must make sure the agency has no connection with the police," Hal told him. "If it's necessary you can drop a hint that rewards on us will be bigger than any the police offer. The best of the detective is to go after the Traded girl, the sister after Kerrigan, through it's just possible the girl and Kerrigan are together. I want Santa Barbara looked up first, and here's a note to the nun. The man's not to get tough with her under any circumstances: she'll tell him anything she knows when she sees that note. Kerrigan's man ought to check the hospitals first. I'm not sure this place did them thoroughly. Have you got it all straight?"

"Yes, Mr. Ireland," said Spears, with conviction.

Hal held out his hand and forced the sadness and fatigue out of his own smile. "Thanks a lot, Spears."

"Very glad of the chance to help," said Spears, as though he was. "And what about your father? Shall I tell him anything—except that you're coming along well and will drop him a line any day now?"

"Oh, yes," said Hal, and tried to think plainly about that too. "Tell him the guy who telegraphed him about me was a nut, that he had nothing on me, that the whole thing's put to bed. Tell him I'm writing him everything and there's absolutely nothing to worry about. Remind him that I never said that before."

Then Spears was gone, and the nurse came in to see that Hal was comfortable. He told her he was. Am too, he said to himself, except for shock, slight concussion, compound fracture of arm, cut head, contusions of hip, d-d smell of ether, and—Dear God, what were they to the bitter, steady, excruciating, and just punishment of his soul? What more hurts wouldn't he take to his body to keep the incredible events of his anguish unreal.

The events of his anguish had occurred; they seemed sometimes unreal because his fancy couldn't compass a scene of vicious melodrama between the figure of beauty he knew and loved and the figure of evil he knew and hated. In the black, burning chaos of his delirium he had seen Barry standing in a room like the one in Saint George; a black automatic pistol, level in her hand, jogged to his own sharp splitting; and Crack stood before her with his bemused smile, nodding sly approval as each invisible bullet punched into him but never even made him drop his indolent golf ball. That was unreal, fantastic even in delirium. And yet now, with the delirium behind—marking off his new loneliness from his old folly—Hal knew, something like that had happened.

If his old, dread folly had created nothing but unending loneliness for himself, the pain of penalty would be a clean thing. His father had told him he needed to learn about life. He had learned something: he had learned that if you were a vain fool, life in one gesture could give you its lesson and snatch away your most happy chance to apply it, could mutilate you for good in teaching you to avoid mutilation. Did his father know that? Did Sister Anastasia know that? Had Kerrigan known that? Had Kerrigan—Chill fingers slipped newly about Hal's heart and he reached for his bell, holding down the button hard and long as he tried to hold down this refreshed agony of fear. When the nurse came, he told her: "Telephone Mr. Spears at the Bank of California Trust and tell him—tell him I say he may find out something—something we want to know at the morgue."

O G—d, if Kerrigan were dead!

The only hope that the next slow hours brought was that the morgue had yielded nothing. In the early evening, Spears came again to show him the "Personal" advertisement he had running, and to tell him that Sister Anastasia had no news.

Then there was another long, haunted night maturing its crop of torment to roll Hal's head on the hot pillow, and snatch him from fitful sleep. And finally another morning came, with a new solidity of hopeless conclusion. The one slim sliver of recurrent hope, sharp and so very fragile, was still that Kerrigan might be with Barry. And yet if Kerrigan was well and free, he would have come here to Hal, or written, or something.

Later Hal was dozing when he heard the nurse saying something that sounded like, "It's your sister to see you." And the name Anastasia leaped into his mind like a cool jet of water. He turned his head so quickly that pain ran deep in his arm. "Show her in right away."

"She's waiting downstairs," said the nurse. "She'll be up in a moment."

She knew something about Barry. Hal fought that hope for his fear of disappointment. Probably it was only that her brother could be left for a while and she—bless her dear, cool goodness—had come to comfort him.

The door opened softly, and there was an instant's whispering behind the screen before it closed again. Then tense for the first look of Anastasia's white-framed face, Hal felt his blood's business stop, time stop, the day stop over the world outside. Even as he whispered her name in the hush of the room, he knew it couldn't be Barry. Yet the clear, blue-clear vision moved toward him, the clear eyes authentic in their solemn questioning of his look of awe. She came nearer, looked down at his mouth and into his eyes again, a hopeful tenderness waking in her solemnity. Then he caught her wrist. She bent swiftly down to him. His other wretched, useless arm wouldn't stir, but the good one was strong enough to bring her against him, his hand moving on right, real cloth over the firmness of her back. If it were a dream, the pain he felt going through his tight-strapped arms must wake him. And it didn't. She stayed there, her arms around and over, her breathing against him slow and grateful, as if in fourteen sleep after long weariness.

NATIONAL TOPICS INTERPRETED
By William Bruchart

NATIONAL PRESS BLDG., WASHINGTON, D.C.

Liberty League Steps Out

Washington—The American Liberty League has laid aside its swaddling clothes and has put on long pants in the field of politics. Although comparatively new as a group and promoted consistently as non-partisan, the league can now be said to have plunged headlong into the political warfare. If its first big rally can stand as a criterion, its influence is due to be felt in an important way in the forthcoming national elections.

This rally that really marked the league's campaign debut was a picturesque thing. It was picturesque first because of the time and the place and the very nature of the thing and the manner of approach to the voters of the country but it was more picturesque and more important as well because the headline speaker was Alfred E. Smith, one time Democratic candidate for the Presidency, and by all odds the most colorful and pungent speaker of the present day. It was a dinner of more than 2,000 persons—from every state in the Union—and it was held in exactly the same rooms of the Mayflower hotel here where two weeks earlier President Roosevelt had addressed about the same number of persons at the Jackson day $50-a-plate dinner. As a further note of interest, attention might be called to the fact that the meeting was presided over by Borden Burr, a lifelong Alabama Democrat, and the other speakers were Dr. Neal Carothers, a Southern Democrat, long head of the economics department of Lehigh university in Pennsylvania, and former Federal Judge Charles I. Dawson of Louisville, Ky., a Republican.

I referred above to Mr. Smith as being a colorful speaker, and from all of the comments I have heard, it seems to be the consensus that never has he justified the description better than in his league speech. He was introduced by Mr. Burr as "Al Smith of America," and proceeded to assure his audience that included millions listening by radio that he placed "patriotism above party, that he was a candidate for no office under the sun, that he had no ax to grind and that such critical shots as he might take were without personal animosity for anyone. But he did not pull his punches when he pilloried the New Deal and he showed no mercy when he drew the deadly parallel between the Democratic platform of 1932 and the policies which Mr. Roosevelt had carried through. I believe it may be said that he reached the peak of his speech when he laid on the speaker's stand copies of the Democratic platform of 1932 and the Socialist platform of the same year and in his best East side twang he challenged anyone to deny that Mr. Roosevelt had been elected on a Democratic ticket and had carried out the Socialist promises.

The President's "breathing spell" utterance, his message to congress on the state of the Union, his staff of advisers, his monetary policies formed other meaty subjects which the former governor of New York picked to pierce in his own inimitable way. He begged congress to assert itself again and quoted from the Bible in his plea it should return to the father's house and be again one of the three branches of the federal government. He said it took courage for a lifelong Democrat to say the things he was saying, but there is no gainsaying he displayed what it took.

Through the speech was Mr. Smith's chosen theme that a great danger lies ahead, a danger that the New Deal will destroy everything which he held had made America the outstanding nation that it is. He accused the President of having arrayed class against class and asserted that what the nation faces is the most gigantic tax burden ever known. To this he added that it will not be the rich who will pay, nor the poor, but "that vast army of individuals with incomes from a hundred dollars a month to five thousand dollars a year."

Finally, in conclusion, Mr. Smith said:

"Let me give this solemn warning: There can be only one capital, Washington or Moscow."

"There can be only one atmosphere of government, the clear, pure fresh air of free America, or the foul breath of communistic Russia. There can be only one flag, the Star and Stripes, or the flag of the golden union of the Soviets. There can be only one national anthem, 'The Star-Spangled Banner' or 'The Internationale,' there can be only one victor: If our Constitution wins, we win. But if the Constitution stops, stop there—the Constitution cannot lose."

But what of the significance of the league dinner and the Smith speech?

Prior to the dinner the league's executive council met in secret. Whether it committed the league to a definite stand was not formally announced, yet surely there are grounds upon which to base a statement that it means to support candidates and platforms on the conservative side.

With equal emphasis, it can be said that Mr. Smith has walked out on that section of the Democratic party that attacks by Mr. Roosevelt. He said it was a choice either to "put on the mantle of hypocrisy or we can take a walk." He explained it probably would be the latter course. And frankly it seems with the personal following that he has, a walkout by Mr. Smith cannot be described as otherwise than serious to the party from which that group is defected. It has all of the earmarks of an interesting political situation.

Immediately after Mr. Smith had spoken, quite a few Democrats in congress fired back at him and in defense of the New Deal. Men like Representative Doughton of North Carolina, a Democratic wheelhorse as chairman of the powerful ways and means committee; Speaker Byrnes, and a flock of others. They insisted generally that the Smith barrage was more helpful to the Democrats than campaign speeches they themselves could make. Administration leaders in the executive departments are beginning to fire also, but they are smart enough to let the enthusiasm aroused by the speech die down before they attempt to upset arguments advanced by Mr. Smith.

I have no doubt, from the signs even now cropping up, that an effort will be made in congress to discredit the league. It looks like Senator Black, Alabama Democrat and chairman of the senate lobby committee, probably will dig into the league's files to show how it was financed to a large extent by such wealthy men as the Duponts, among others. Such an investigation likewise will carry an undercurrent of a movement to do away with political infidelity of such men as John J. Raskob, former Democratic national chairman, a league director, and Jovett Shouse, former executive chairman of the Democratic national committee and the league president. If that fight gets started it will be a mudslinging beauty.

So, summarized, the picture resulting from the league's dinner is that of a major feud, as well as a major political movement, because there is a really bitter fight between personalities in sight as well as the possibilities of a third party movement.

In the situation as it now stands, however, the Republican party holds the key. Smith and his following and the league membership generally can be counted in definite opposition to the New Deal and most all of its works only on condition that a candidate and a platform, viewed by them as sound, are put forward by the Republicans. If the Republicans turn too far to the radical side in their efforts to match the Democratic position (which necessarily must be in support of everything the President has done), then, there is likely to be a third party, which would make predictions of the outcome worthless.

Digging Up Secrets

Congress frequently goes off on a tangent in which it will set about exposing this or that or the other among the practices of private business. In the last several years it has been particularly active in exposing to public view secrets of corporations and individual representatives and senators have blown off much steam concerning salaries paid business executives and they have directed criticism at private business as well for some of its other expenditures.

A few years ago Senator Norris of Nebraska, among others, spoke at great length in criticism of our government's diplomatic service because of the salaries paid and the expenditures allowed for operation of our foreign diplomatic offices. The Norris attack apparently did considerable damage to the diplomatic service because it made many capable men fearful of entering that field where highly trained men are necessary.

But all of the time during which criticisms have been leveled at private business on account of salaries paid business executives and because of other expenses, the senate itself has been going ahead from year to year using taxpayers' money to suit its own purposes. For instance, Col. Edwin A. Halsey, secretary of the senate, lately has made public his annual report covering senate operations and it shows that the taxpayers' money to the extent of $8,298,822 had been spent for maintenance of that one branch of congress. There are 96 senators, each of whom has an office staff; there are some 30-odd committees in operation, each with a staff, and there is the regular senate organization with a large personnel. Consequently, salaries alone take up a considerable chunk of the total outlay, but Colonel Halsey's report disclosed that general "contingent expenses" of the senate had eaten up $701,000. Included in this total of "contingent expenses" was an item of $288,000 for the cost of senate inventories in the last year. Almost half of this amount was used by the national investigation committee headed by Senator Hays, Republican of North Dakota, who lately has made the subject of criticism on the senate floor because of his committee's attitude.

Washington Post-Opinion Column

WOMEN ARE NOT SO "EASY" AS MEN IN FLATTERY GAME

"What do you think of the claim that women like admiration and flattery as much as men and are no less fools than men in the hands of one of the other sex who uses that method of getting into their good graces? 'Don't you think that's ridiculous?' I've never yet met a man who wouldn't believe anything charming and delightful about himself that any woman might tell him. But I've seen many a man try to bamboozle a woman and fail because he laid it on too thick." This was asked of a woman writer of note, who replied as follows:

I think our reader has hit upon an important truth in the relationship of the sexes.

I do not doubt for one moment that women like admiration as much as men—that is admiration from the other sex. Indeed I believe this is in a way a more important factor with women than with men. By that I mean that while men may "eat up" admiration from the other sex, that is not the motivating factor of their interest in them; while with some women delight in masculine admiration is largely the root of their enjoyment of the society of the other sex.

But—women are not so "easy" as men. A homely woman does not easily accept a man's insistence that she is beautiful, but many a bald, fat man has been convinced he is an Adonis. Women can be flattered, but it has to be done more subtly. Therefore the man who is wise will discriminate in his flattery. He will look for the "good points" which in some form or other are possessed by every woman, and concentrate on them, rather than attempt to endow her with charms which she realizes are not hers.

It is not that women like flattery less, but they have more difficulty than men in putting entirely to sleep their intelligence and common sense!

"Morning sickness"—is caused by an acid condition. To avoid it, acid must be offset by alkalis—such as magnesia.

Why Physicians Recommend Milkmaid's Wafers

These mint-flavored, candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia in solid form—the most pleasant way to take it. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly, then swallowed, they correct acidity in the stomach and throughout the digestive system and insure quick, complete elimination of the waste matters that cause gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts.

Milkmaid's Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 40, at 25c and 50c respectively, and in convenient form for your traveling, containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately one adult dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores sell and recommend them.

GAS, GAS ALL THE TIME, CAN'T EAT OR SLEEP

"The gas on my stomach was so bad I could not eat or sleep. Even my heart hurt. A friend suggested Adierka. The first dose I took brought me relief. Now I eat as I wish, sleep like a baby and feel better." - Mrs. J. J. Miller.

Adierka acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels while ordinary laxatives act on the lower bowel only. Adierka gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old, poisonous matter that you would not believe was in your system and that has been causing gas pains, sour stomach, nervousness and headaches for months.

Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York, reports:
"In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adierka greatly reduces bacteria and colon bacilli."

Give your stomach and bowels a REAL cleansing with Adierka and see how good you feel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and chronic constipation. Sold by all druggists and drug departments.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Be Sure They Properly Cleanse the Blood

YOUR kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work - do not act as nature intended - fail to remove impurities that poison the system and retard the body.

Then you may suffer nagging backache, dizziness, scanty or too frequent urination, getting up at night, puffiness under the eyes, feel nervous, miserable - all upset.

Don't delay? Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are especially for poorly functioning kidneys. They are recommended by general practitioners the country over. Get them from any druggist.

The Household
By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

IT IS interesting to watch a gardener, who knows his job, when he runs a lawn mower. He cuts the grass twice while he walks over the grounds but once. The person who runs a lawn mower without really knowing how has to traverse the whole circuit many times more to make the grounds look as well as does the competent man with less walking. How this can be so easily answered. Each swathe cut has half of it cut again on the return trip. Unless this is done it is likely that a fine line of uncut grass will stand up, defining the paths of the lawn mower.

Everyone who has cut grass with the lawn mower has had this happen a few times at least. Unless part of the grass is cut twice, the mower overlapping the swathe previously cut when it cuts a new one, the lawn is far from smooth and velvety. There are the telltale strands of grass remaining.

Ironing.

It is much the same thing that happens when ironing clothes. The iron should not only press the material not gone over before, but with each stroke of the iron some of the material previously ironed must be gone over again. This insures double pressure of the hot flatiron over the entire surface. If the iron is moved slowly with a firm and even pressure the material is ironed just as fast, if not faster, than if the strokes were vigorous and rapid and the whole surface on the board were gone over many times. It is wise to follow the methods of the competent and experienced ironer, and save your arm from the strain put upon it when working it too vigorously. Better ironing, like better grass cutting, is attainable with less labor if the work is done in the most efficient way.

In connection with good ironing, another easy method may be welcomed by homemakers. This is to iron clothes immediately after they are taken off the line, and while they are of just the wanted dampness. For some reason of natural laws, the materials smooth out best while the fresh air permeates them. One cause for this is because the wrinkles made by wringing articles are not so set. The other appears to be a matter of OZONE. It is not always possible to follow washing immediately with ironing, but when it is, the work is decreased. An interim between times is gained by leaving the garments out until after sunset and until the night dampness settles down, and then taking them indoors and ironing them before the moisture dries.

Watch the Details.

It often is the little things that seem to be the most work. The last straw has but little weight, but it is the proverbial one to break the camel's back. Small details are frequently the last straws in work although it would appear that the major task was the burden. Without saying this is not the fact, the minor details have a nagging insistence which are disproportionate to their importance.

For example if a club is having a speaker, it may be difficult to get just the one wanted, but when this has been attended to satisfactorily, there are such little details as seeing that the person is taken to and from the hall or house, that the electric light is just right to fall on the speaker's notes, without having any ray from it come in the eyes of even one person in the audience. Then the proper background must be arranged.

To put a speaker before a window, or between two windows, if the affair is in the afternoon when artificial light can be dispensed with, may be fine for him or her, but it is trying for an audience to face the light. Also the features of the speaker are dulled by the brilliance of the daylight. It is better even in the daytime, to have a light on a desk in a dark spot for the speaker, and to have the light from the windows fall on the backs, not shine in the faces of those looking and listening. This is an important detail.

To Stain Plaster

A stained finish may be given to rough but not to smooth-finished plaster. The stain used must be one which will not strike in and dry too rapidly. Any of the prepared stains of the oil type are satisfactory. The stained surface of plaster is always wiped over in places to give a mottled or clouded effect. The wiping is done with a wad of cloth or a sponge in such a way as to give artistic unevenness.

Venetian Blind Effects

Decorators are painting landscapes on Venetian blinds - floral motifs, or scenes of mandarin and pagodas. Usually they are done in monotone, that is, different tones of one color. The background may match the walls and the decoration be in soft tones of a contrasting hue. Light green or gray on a cream background or dull reds and pinks on warm buff are favorite effects.

HOT CAKES ARE STILL POPULAR

Expert Gives Some Recipes for Breakfast Dish.

By EDITH M. BARBER

IN A generation when breakfast ranked in importance with the other meals of the day, griddle cakes, pancakes, or hot cakes, as they were variously termed, appeared as a matter of course on the tables in many parts of the country.

Hot cakes still retain their place among favorite foods. They may perhaps be even more appreciated than when they were taken for granted daily. Now their appearance at Sunday morning breakfast or as a dessert, for lunch or dinner, is hailed as an event.

The popularity of the ready mixed pancake flour which calls for the addition of liquid alone is evidence of this. I usually like to add an extra amount of shortening to any of these mixtures. I do the same to the usual recipe for griddle cakes because if you put plenty of fat into the batter you do not need to grease the griddle and you avoid smoke in the kitchen or the dining room where you may be baking your cakes at the table with the help of an electric grill.

An extra and generous teaspoonful of baking powder stirred in just before beginning to bake will make a tender, delicate cake of a texture that is liked very much by some people.

Grated nuts give a delicious flavor to either griddle cakes or waffles. But the waffles depend upon a lavish amount of fat for the crispness which is always sought, but seldom found. Any good shortening may be used in either cakes or waffles. I usually add a little butter for flavor.

- Straps - are usually served with hot cakes or waffles although honey and cinnamon and sugar are also liked. Straps of excellent flavor can be bought ready made or can be made up quickly from brown or white sugar.
- Griddle Cakes.
- 3 cups flour
 - 1 teaspoon salt
 - 1 1/2 teaspoon soda
 - 1/2 cup sugar
 - 2 1/2 cups sour milk
 - 1 egg
 - 1/2 cup melted shortening
- Mix and sift the dry ingredients. Add the sour milk and egg well beaten. Add the melted shortening. Cook on both sides on a hot griddle. If sweet milk is used substitute four teaspoons of baking powder for the soda.

- Bread Griddle Cakes.
- 2 cups fine stale bread crumbs
 - 1/2 cup shortening
 - 2 cups milk
 - 2 eggs
 - 2 tablespoons sugar
 - 1/2 cup flour
 - 1 teaspoon baking powder
 - 4 teaspoons baking powder
- Add melted shortening and milk to the crumbs and soak until the crumbs are soft. Add the eggs, well beaten, to the dry ingredients mixed and sifted. Cook on both sides on a hot griddle.
- Corn Griddle Cakes.
- 1/2 cup cornmeal
 - 1/2 cup boiling water
 - 1/4 cups milk
 - 1 egg
 - 2 cups flour
 - 1/2 cup sugar
 - 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
 - 4 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
 - 4 tablespoons melted shortening
- Add the meal to the boiling water and boil five minutes. Add the milk mixed with the beaten egg, to the remaining dry ingredients mixed and sifted and the melted shortening. Bake on both sides on a hot griddle.

- Apple pancakes seem to belong at the main dinner course with pork. Have you ever tried them this way?
- Apple Pancakes.
- 4 tablespoons shortening
 - 1 tablespoon sugar
 - 2 eggs
 - 1 1/2 cups flour
 - 1 teaspoon baking powder
 - 1 teaspoon cinnamon
 - 1 cup apples
 - Milk
- Cream the shortening and sugar, add the beaten eggs, the flour sifted with the baking powder and cinnamon, and the finely chopped apples. Gradually add milk to make a medium batter. Bake on a griddle and serve in overlapping row around a platter of pork chops or serve separately with roast pork.
- Potato pancakes are good with any kind of meat, just so there is gravy. French pancakes are always served as a dessert and when made properly are a perfect end to a meal.

- French Pancakes.
- 3 eggs
 - 1 teaspoon sugar
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - 1 cup milk
 - 1/2 cup flour
 - 2 tablespoons shortening
- Separate the yolks and whites of the eggs. To the beaten yolks add the sugar, salt and one-half cup of milk. Stir in the sifted flour, rest of milk, the melted shortening, then fold in the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs. Bake on a hot griddle, making the cakes slightly larger than usual. Spread each cake with tart fruit jelly and roll while hot. Dredge with sugar.
- Sugar Syrup.
- 1 1/2 cups brown sugar
 - 1/2 cup boiling water
 - 1 tablespoon butter
 - 1 teaspoon vanilla
- Stir sugar and water over a low fire until dissolved. Cover for one minute, remove cover and boil two or three minutes until it begins to boil with large bubbles. Add butter and vanilla and serve hot or cold.

Lesson for February 9

JESUS INSISTS ON RIGHTEOUSNESS

LESSON TEXT - Luke 6:27-35.
GOLDEN TEXT - Why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say? - Luke 6:46.

PRIMARY TOPIC - Jesus Tells Us What to Do.

JUNIOR TOPIC - Jesus' Code for Helpers.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC - Overcoming Our Faults.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC - The Test of Our Religion.

In verses 20-26 Jesus sets forth the inner spiritual condition of those who are members of his kingdom. In the lesson text for today he sets forth the principles governing the life of his followers.

I. Love Your Enemies (v. 27).

Love here is not mere natural affection. Love is not sentiment but is the sincere desire for the welfare of another, and the willingness to do all in one's power to accomplish that which is good for the individual. To love friends is easy, but to love enemies is only possible to those who have been born again.

II. Do Good to Them Which Hate You (v. 27).

Love is positive in its nature. The disciple of Christ will not merely refrain from doing injury to one who hates him, but will be concerned with and engaged in doing good to him.

III. Bless Them - That Curse You (v. 28).

To bless means to speak well of, to invoke a blessing upon.

IV. Pray for Them Which Despitefully Use You (v. 28).

It is obligatory upon the Christian to pray for those who heap abuses upon him. The best commentary on this is Christ's own example. "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do" (Luke 23:34). When Christ was reviled, he reviled not again; "When he suffered, he threatened not; but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously" (1 Pet. 2:23).

V. Patiently Endure Wrong and Injury (v. 29).

The Christian is not to bristle in defense of his rights, but rather to suffer insult, injury, and even loss. This expresses the law which governs the individual's action and should not be pressed so far that exiles go unchecked. Rightly constituted government has been ordained of God for the protection of the innocent and punishment of evildoers (Rom. 13:1-8).

VI. Give to Every Man That Asketh of Thee (v. 30).

This text does not authorize promiscuous giving, neither does it mean that any request made by the idle, greedy, and selfish should be granted. There is a giving which injures the one to whom the gift is made. It would not be proper to give a man money to buy whisky. The principle enjoined is to give the thing needed to the one asking. The supreme need of every able-bodied person is to be given a way to earn his living.

VII. Do to Others as You Wish Others to Do to You (vv. 31-33).

This is called the Golden Rule. It is the sum total of Christian duty as it pertains to human inter-relationships. If this rule were lived up to, the problem of capital and labor would be solved, war would cease, international relations would be peacefully adjusted, and all profiteering in business would end.

VIII. Be Merciful (v. 36).

This means to be filled with pity and compassion; to enter into sympathy with every need of others. Our supreme example is the Heavenly Father.

IX. Cenourious Judgments Condemned (v. 37).

This means that the evil or false in others should not be sought out. We should not sit in critical judgment upon the action of others. This does not, however, prohibit the estimation of others by their deeds.

X. Compensations of Right Living (v. 38).

The believer who gives freely of money, loves sincerely, makes the Golden Rule the standard of his life, shows mercy and kindness to others, and refrains from impugning the motives of others, will be fully rewarded.

XI. Danger of Following False Teachers (v. 39).

The teacher who does not know God and the way to heaven will lead others into ruin. Only such as know God should be followed.

XII. Those Who Reprove Others Should Live Blameless Lives (vv. 41, 42).

Evil doing should be removed from our lives before bringing others to account.

XIII. The Sin of Profession Without Fruitbearing (vv. 43-45).

The one who is in fellowship with God will practice the principles which reveal God's nature.

A Rose

Every rose is an autograph from the hand of the Almighty God. On this world about us he has inscribed his thought in those marvelous hieroglyphs which sense and science have been these many thousand years seeking to understand. The universe itself is a great autograph of the Almighty. - Theodore Parker.

A Good Book

A good book is the best of friends, the same today and forever. - Tupper.

PEACE BIRTHRIGHT OF CHILD; BANISH FEAR FROM MIND

Fear, one of man's greatest enemies and the root of much evil overwhelming the adult, acquires all too hardy a growth in childhood. Yet readers of the current issue of the Parents' Magazine are reminded by Psychologist Rhoda Baemeler that if fear had no survival value, it would not have persisted to the degree it has; that a little fear is an excellent thing to keep humans out of danger. It is caution and foresight, the habit of going slowly and thinking when in doubt that father and mother should spare no effort to develop in their offspring.

Fears come and go. Mrs. Baemeler admits it is easier to know what to do for a timid child than to understand where the fears come from in the first place, but says it is important to find out. Her analysis identifies several varieties of fears.

Baby cries at the sight of a floating duck in his tub. Why? Because once he lost his balance in the bath while watching ducky. Three-year-old Bobby runs from a salamander. "Shame on Bobby," cried mother, forgetting the fuss she makes when anything crawling comes towards her. Here's a fear that comes from contagion. Small Susie's afraid to go to bed in the dark. The chances are this is a direct suggestion fear - induced, perhaps, by mother who cautions Susie against doing so and so lest "the hoogy man" catch her. Mrs. Baemeler remarks: "It is both cruel and stupid to warp a child's character by making fear the emotion that controls him; it is a repressive and inefficient control at best."

In order to help the child get rid of "unreasonable" fears, the psychologist suggests replacing the old association with a new and pleasant one and urges calm reassurance when a child is frightened. "Never rush nor swoop," says she. "Take it easy!"

We learn from the lady who knows that among the more immediate and less abstract reasons for a child's anxiety attitudes and nervous tension the most harmful is "the thrill mongering" children's radio program in which voices are keyed up and sound effects used to give the impression of intense, usually terrifying emotion. Says Mrs. Baemeler, mixing no words:

"This fear impression the youngsters get only too well. The entirely unsuitable emotional strain disorganizes their nerves. They have had dreams, restless sleep, or persistently timid rather than panic stricken at any one specific situation. Parents who care for their children's wholesome emotional development will not permit exploitation of their sensibilities. Children should be kept as free as possible of all forms of over-stimulation from whatever source. Peace is their birthright."

We'll No Gie Ower Just Yet a Bittie, Is Spirit of Scot

I am about knocked out of time now; a miserable, snuffling, shivering, fever-stricken, night-mare-ridden, knee-jottering, hoagst-hoast-hoasting shadow and remains of man. But we'll no gie ower just yet a bittie. We've seen waur; and dod, men, it's my belief that we'll see better.

Going Out of Ourselves to Refresh Our Thoughts

Doctor Richardson tells us there is nothing so wholesome for an active mind as to secure rest by variety of work. A man can do five or six times more than he expects if he varies his work. I have found that to be so in my own life. By varying his work a man obtains fresh spirits, and renewed powers for the duties of daily life.

There is so much that is discouraging and depressing in the world, that we must sometimes go forth, as it were, out of ourselves for fresh thoughts and fresh air. The greatest workers, when they go out for a holiday, are not idle; they find rest by change of occupation. Life is too short to admit of idleness in anybody. - Erskine Clarke.

Find Out

From Your Doctor if the "Pain" Remedy You Take Is Safe.

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it - in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains - and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store - simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.
