County Candidates

We repeat what we said in last week's issue that the County Republican ticket is the strongest the party has ever put before the voters for years past.

The candidate for Sheriff, S. E. 'Ben' Griesen, needs no introduction to our people. He served two terms as County Clerk with a perfect record -- and if elected, will force the County as Sheriff in the same capable manner.

For County Treasurer, we have Morgan Lovelace, successful clerical man and expert accountant. Mr. Lovelace has served the town of Carrizozo for two terms as Clerk, and is now serving as his third. Morgan has kept books for several of our business houses and was a Clerk of the local postoffice during the administration of the late Mrs. Elizabeth Gumm.

For County Assessor, we have Andy Padilla. Everybody knows Andy -- and are well acquainted with his business qualities. He graduated from the Alamogordo High School, served eight years as Assistant Postmaster at Turkey, and graduated from St. Michael's College at Santa Fe in 1910.

For County School Superintendent, Mrs. Margaret Marchant is the nominee. Her qualifications are par excellence. She is a graduate of the San Diego State Teachers' College, and has had advanced courses in the University of Colorado and the University of California.

For County Clerk, Clayton Rust, an excellent young man with a remarkable amount of experience in the Clerical Line. After a High School education, Clayton served in the U.S. Navy where he was an accountant and bookkeeper and perfected himself in that line.

For County Commissioners, we have three men, all fully competent to make up a good Board in those important positions. Mr. Maes is from the lower valley, being a stockman and knows the needs of our people in that important industry.

Mr. Penix, besides being a signal service man for the E. P. Company, is also a stockman in the Corona District. Max is well known among our people and solicits your support. He has resided in the Corona district most of his life.

Mr. R. E. Lemon is an excellent accountant and bookkeeper. He served the old E. P. & S. W. Railroad Co. for many years as Clerk and station agent. If elected, he will make an excellent County Commissioner, and the selection of the above-named three gentlemen will give the County a Board for which it may be proud.

For Probate Judge, Ernest Key is the candidate. By previous knowledge Ernest, who has served his second term as County Clerk. He will make us a first-class Senator for Lincoln and Otero counties.

---Extra Special---

Wednesday-Thursday-Friday Richard Dix and Margaret Callahan in "SPECIAL INVESTIGATOR." "Molly Moo Cow" and "Fight is Right."

Marshall Beck came in from Denver this Tuesday, for a short visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Beck and local friends. On his trip, he made a visit to Ft. Worth and Dallas, where he attended the Centennial. Marshall was a visitor in Houston, El Paso and State College also. He is an electrical salesman for the Westinghouse Co. and is being transferred from Dallas to Wichita, Kansas.

Lorraine Guebara has a large number of men working the Guebara clay pits.

Mrs. Anna Strahl spent about ten days in the lower valley visiting old friends and while there, she was the guest of Mrs. Fred Pfingsten. She returned Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Lemon returned from White City, Kansas, where they went about a week ago on account of the illness of Mr. Lemon's father, whose condition was much better at the time of their departure.

For Probate Judge, we have Elerdo Chavez, who has served in this office for three terms. His experience has led him to be a man doubly well fitted for the office. You could do no better than to vote for Elerdo Chavez -- and he solicits your support.

For Representative for the 16th District, we have a lady of excellent qualifications. Mrs. Geraldine DuBois Perkins. Mrs. Perkins is the owner of the Corona Drug Store, and a business lady in every sense of the word. She has excellent educational advantages which will make her an ideal representative for Lincoln County. She solicits your support.

For County Surveyor, A. H. Harvey has been named, and in view of his amount of experience in that line and having served the County with much satisfaction in that office for many years, and the opposition failed to nominate a candidate. He served the old E. P. & S. W. Railroad Co. for many years as Clerk and station agent. If elected, he will make an excellent County Commissioner, and the selection of the above-named three gentlemen will give the County a Board for which it may be proud.

For Senator, 16th District, Ernest Key is the candidate. By previous knowledge Ernest, who has served his second term as County Clerk. He will make us a first-class Senator for Lincoln and Otero counties.

Open Air Meeting Southern Pacific Hotel Sunday, Oct. 25, '26, 1 P. M.

Prominent leaders of the National Organization of the Salvation Army and Berna Austemsa will be with the party.

This is a good-will tour and not a financial appeal.

The people of Carrizozo and vicinity are cordially invited to meet these people and give them a welcome reception.

Should the weather be bad, the meeting will be held in the Community Hall. 016-26

Entertain Teachers

The members of the Carrizozo Business Men's Club had a night of pleasure at the last meeting Wednesday evening, when the club carried out its annual custom of entertaining the teachers of the Carrizozo schools, at a 6 o'clock dinner at the S. P. Hotel.

It served an unusual thrill to the club from the fact that for at least once a year, they have the opportunity of looking their best before the ladies, far away from the view of their wives who had to be content with remaining at home while their husbands were engaged in the matter of informing the ladies of just how much they knew.

After the dinner, P. E. John E. Hall presented Roy Shaker, member of the school board, who being provided with a list of questions, propounded the same to the different teachers.

None of the questions were related to the educational profession as some might think, for the object was to create amusement instead of seriousness. Many humorous answers were returned which furnished much merriment to the assemblage.

Teachers present were: Supt. Eric Ming; Misses Edith Sammons, Clara Snyder, S. H. Nickola; Misses Haldane Stover, Ernestine Sorey, Della M. Ward, Cecelia Davis, Marie Cole, Marie Lyle, Evelyn Sprinkle, Dorothy Arnold, Edna Lee Jarad; Messrs. Phil Bright, R. A. A. Chase and Babe Stevens. Sister Mary Aurelia Champayne was unable to attend.

Witt Sears

Last Sunday morning at Capitan, Witt Sears, 77, who had been a resident of that place for 16 years, passed away. Mr. Sears was a good citizen, possessed a friendly disposition and character in all matters of a community nature. He was born in Alabama. He leaves to mourn his loss, a wife and seven children, namely: Perry, Burt, John and Payne Sears; Misses Bennett Baxter, Malrose, N. M.; Belle Clark, Stevenville, Texas; E. F. Covay, Carlsbad; besides three brothers and one sister. The funeral was held at Carlsbad Monday and the remains interred in the local cemetery at that place. The survivors have the sympathy of our community.

M. H. CROSSMAN Republican Candidate for Representative, 80th District Comprising Otero, Lincoln and Socorro Counties. Your Support Solicited

Mrs. Gantner Kroegel was an El Paso visitor for a few days this week.

LONDON SPECIAL Here Yesterday

The Banflower Special arrived here on schedule time yesterday 12:25 and remained while the train was serviced, a period of ten minutes. Cyrus McCormick, National Committeeman, boarded the train at this point. Contrary to the expectations of the large crowd at the station, Governor Landon was unable to appear from the fact, as was announced from the platform, that he was ill with a severe cold.

His physician made the announcement that the Governor was taken ill at Tucson Wednesday and was unable to speak at El Paso and Alamogordo. It is to be regretted that the word of his illness failed to reach here before his arrival.

The Democrats have seen fit to make some political capital out of the Governor's misfortune, but that is due to the policy of the party to make political fodder out of human misery. Much to the credit of Governor Landon, he has spoken at different places over the state; at Raton, Clovis, Albuquerque -- and that is more than the President has done for us during the entire campaign; he has never entered the borders of the state.

Governor Landon was not scheduled to speak here, but only announced to make a brief stop. He made no public appearance between Tucson and Oklahoma City, under his physician's advice.

The Music-Drama Study Club met Oct. 8 at the home of Mrs. R. E. Sals and Miss Grace Jones with a good attendance. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Albert Ziegler on Nov. 12, with Mrs. Selma Degitz and Miss Thelma Shaver as hostesses in charge of the program.

Our old friend Floy Skinner, Supt. of the Bonito water system, awakened at his home in Nogal Monday morning to find his garage and barn in flames. Had it not been for the timely arrival of his many good neighbors the residence would have suffered in the same manner, but with hard work, the home was saved and also the family car, but the garage and barn with all contents, were destroyed. The loss was about $1,000.

Thursday evening of last week, Mrs. C. E. Freeman, assisted by Mrs. Clyde Loekey, entertained at a farewell party given in honor of Mrs. Oona Stevens, who left Sunday for El Paso to spend the winter. During the party hours, the ladies made initial gift to Mrs. Freeman, the "honor guest," and sang old familiar songs. There were 25 in attendance.

Personals

Mrs. Enrique Maes and son Hilario were here Sunday night on their way to El Paso to visit Mrs. Maes' daughter, who is ill in a hospital at that place.

S. H. Nickala is up and around after being confined to his bed for about one week. His daughter Marjorie is also under the weather.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Gallacher and Mr. and Mrs. Doyle Eastrow were Albuquerque visitors the first of the week to hear Gov. Landon.

W. J. Sandfer of Tinnie was a business visitor in town Wednesday of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Frame of Ancho were in town Monday.

Harold Dean of Bingham was in town Tuesday, attending to business with the New Mexico Mechanical Equipment Co.

Prof. Karl Cunningham, superintendent of schools at Capitan, was a business visitor in town the latter part of last week, and while here, was a pleasant caller at this office.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kockendorfer of Glendora, Calif., were the guests of Dr. and Mrs. R. J. Blaney for a portion of last week after visiting the Carlsbad Canyon and the Bottomless Lakes.

On the return trip, they will view the Petrified Forest, Painted Desert, and other points of interest before returning home. The Kockendorfers were residents of Chicago with the Blaneys and the families were neighbors in the Windy City.

Mrs. Maggie Pfingsten of the Nogal-Mesa was a business visitor in town this Tuesday.

Rev. J. A. Bell is attending this week the New Mexico Annual Conference held at Clovis. He will receive his appointment to return to Carrizozo or to some other place in New Mexico. According to statistics, this Church has the best report for a Carrizozo charge that has been made in years. --Rev. J. A. Bell.

Prof. F. E. Meeks, vocal instructor of the Fort Stanton country, was in town last Saturday, and while here, made this office an appreciated call.

Mrs. Sabino Vidaurri, daughter Cecilia and Mrs. Joaquin Ortiz were El Paso visitors this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Comrey and R. L. Hale of Capitan were business visitors here last Saturday.

John E. Brady was here Wednesday from Hondo and while in town, informed us that prospects for election of the entire Republican candidates on both state and county tickets were very bright in his locality.

Mrs. Dolly Marohn, daughter Ruth, son Daniel and wife, all of Des Moines, Iowa, spent two days here as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Walker of the Lyric Theatre, leaving last Friday for an extended pleasure trip to California and the Pacific Coast. Mrs. Marohn is Mr. Walker's youngest sister; Daniel and Ruth are nephew and niece to the Lyric manager.

Big Republican Rally

was held here last Saturday night at the Community Hall. The County Candidates all made short address; M. H. Crossman, Candidate for Representative of the 80th District, comprising the Counties of Lincoln, Otero and Socorro, also made an excellent address -- as did Ernest Key, candidate for Representative for the 16th district, Prager Miller, twin brother of the Republican candidate for Governor, was the principal speaker of the evening, made a splendid address on state issues. It was one of the largest political gatherings held here for years.

Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Casler and Fred Greer of Tucumanari took a two-day pheasant hunt near Dexter, Bryan's old home. They bagged their limit and returned home Tuesday.

Manager G. T. McQuillen of the local telephone office returned Tuesday from a two-week vacation in which he spent the major portion at his old home. He also attended the Centennial at Dallas and the Ft. Worth Exposition.

Julian Mireles returned this week from Blanton, Texas, where he visited his parents, sisters and brothers.

Hugh Bradley Says

Bitsy Grant Alone Supplies Thrills to Modern Tennis

PERHAPS it is because little guys must stick together or get stuck by an unappreciative world. Anyhow the word picture that was to be painted here is all jumbled up. Every time I try to dab the paper with some pretty phrase concerning the name-tipped racquets of such tennis geni as Helen Jacobs and Fred Perry the result somehow comes out differently. Somehow I always come up with the sharp outlines of a fighting gentleman from Georgia—Bitsy Grant.

It is a most distressing situation. After witnessing the national championship at Forest Hills, a while back, I got loaded with all sorts of other information. I know that the tall, blonde Alice Marble has enough strokes to win a title, but that she has not yet achieved the proper match temperament. I can gab with the best of the experts about Donald Budge's equipment.

I can tip off one of those anti-perspiration companies that they have a good prospect in Perry. I can argue why the worst tournament in years brought out the best crowds. I can suggest that was because the celebrated gentleman conducting the affair introduced some new performers for a change. I know that Mrs. Molla Mallory is almost as active as a spectator as she was as a player and that she tried sitting on nine different chairs in the course of 75 minutes during one afternoon. But still there's the gent from Georgia.

I can wise up the gents who don't go to tennis matches, too, that they are missing something. That—although tennis no longer seems to turn out such excitable sisters as Mlle. Lenglen—the girls are far prettier than they were a few seasons ago.

It's Polite to Applaud Other Fellow's Error

I know that tennis still is the only sport where the polite thing to do is to applaud some unfortunate fellow's error. I suspect that if I were a linesman and one of the boys or girls tossed a point just to show what he or she thought of my bad judgment, I'd hand him or her a couple of the best where it would do the most good.

I know that Helen Jacobs wears a gold chain on her left wrist while playing and that Miss Marble is adorned with a wrist watch. If I were Miss Pedersen I would wear shorts that did not bag around my knees. If I were one of those khaki-clad stalwarts who seem to do nothing all day long—save take-downs, and then put them up again, I'd come out swinging a racquet some day just to see what would happen to the frozen faces of the elect.

I know that Frankie Parker needs a long rest so that he can get in such physical shape that he no longer needs to wait over these soft serves. I know that the ball boys get paid 75 cents a match and that some of them make as high as $25 during the tournament. I suspect that some specialists, who see the way Perry keeps his mouth open while playing, immediately begin squirming because they want to operate on that long back for adenoids.

I—but, as has been mentioned before, such items leave me cold. Until wanting strength and Big Bill Tilden finally took the play away from him, and he retired, I used to go to tennis affairs to watch a frail little guy named Bill Johnston. Tennis did not seem then—as too often since—a dead-panned comedy of manners. Instead puffs were ever stirred faster while that blazing inner urge, with which few humans are blessed made Little Bill's scrawny muscles perform the impossible.

Now—for all that I would not give one Budge double-bender for all the tennis of the season—I again am willing to lay to get into the park. Tennis is a game where the strong and racy men ever will meet with most success and Bitsy Grant probably would have to stand on tiptoes to look Rabbit Maravich in the eyes.

Yet—but come to think of it, maybe that really is why I like to watch the lily go.

NOT IN THE BOX SCORE: NOT a soul seems to have noted that Princeton Football Professor Fritz Crisler is wearing specs for the first time this autumn.

Could there be any McCoy to the gossip that Pie Traynor will be elevated to an office berth and Rogers Hornsby will become manager of the Pirates? That World Series gold will be appreciated by Joe Glenn of the Yankee catching department. A little Joe is due almost any day now.

Jack Ogden, the former Swarthmore collegian who has business-managed the Orioles so capably that Baltimore again is a good baseball town, would bear watching by big time basketball promoters. The University of Baltimore five, which he coaches during the winter, is composed mainly of New York boys and might make a very good Garden or Hippodrome attraction.

Ball players say the real reason why that "young" Cincinnati team did so well this year is that most of the hitting, fielding and pitching was supplied by Kiki Cuyler, Ernie Lombardi, Tommy Thayer, Babe Herman, Paul Derringer and one or two others who just missed voting for Liscels.

Why Shakespeare Isn't Heaving Pro Passes

Bill Shakespeare is not heaving pro passes this year because he has too swell a job as assistant to the secretary of a railroad.

That celebrated weekly magazine which last year fell for the bookie blarney that the pari mutuels are unbeatable should look up a citizen named Horace Paul. Whispers have it that he would run a mile before investing a nickel in a track book. But that he reaps a fortune each season playing against the machines.

Although his football teams do not always elate Syracuse old grads, Coach Vic Hanson is tops with the town kids. That is because he operates a children's summer camp on the lake outside the city. Lou Ambers believes that one reason why he performed so capably while winning the light-weight title recently is that he finally learned to relax before a bout. He used to be so restless that he would wander about town or go from movie to movie on the afternoon when he had an important bout coming up. This time he went to bed and really slept.

Luck has played a miserable trick on a Fordham youngster. The boy is the best passer on the Ram football squad but his eyes have failed so badly that he cannot pick out his targets and has even worse luck on pass defense.

Frank Cressetti and Arndt Jorgens of the Yankees do their best to see that Mr. Rockefeller gets along all right. Each fall evening they can be found eating in style, and out of doors, in his Radio-City-sunken gardens. Cardinal First Baseman Rip Collins is one of the most diligent of autograph signers. He never refuses. Although he has been one of the most successful photographers of race horses for 25 years, C. C. Cook seldom bets on the postles.

A thought that should be preserved was uttered long ago by Rudolph Spreckels, the multi-millionaire turfman and sugar king. Talking to a young bettor who had more hopes than money, he inquired "How can you expect to bring up a family on horse races?" It is somewhat out of line with the quoted statement of Mr. Herbert Bayard Swope in a town where 2 to 5 favorites so often meet with misfortunes. The racing commission chairman is quoted as saying that the races never ruined anybody.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted By WILLIAM BRUCKART

Washington.—Several years ago I expressed in these columns the conviction that one thing America needed was a congress which would cease attempting to amend the law of supply and demand.

The observation was made in the midst of the most depressed economic conditions that modern times had known and it brought down upon my head a vast amount of criticism. Readers wrote me at length about the stupidity that I had displayed by making such a statement. Reference to that circumstance is made here at this time, because it is apropos again. It is apropos because we are in a political campaign out of which will come either the re-election of Franklin D. Roosevelt or the election of Governor Landon of Kansas. The results of this political campaign are going to hinge to a considerable extent on the attitude of the farmers of this country and if there is one segment of the American economic structure to whom the law of supply and demand means more than to another, it is to the farmers.

Now, Democratic spokesmen are going about the country talking about soil conservation, about relief for the farmers, about anything and everything that will give the farmers money. Republican spokesmen are shouting and waving their arms with other propositions to aid the farmer. Some of them probably are workable, and if they are workable they must be considered constructive.

But the point I am trying to make is that in the case of either candidate, there is still too much of the idea of the superficial, of surface help, for agriculture. In other words, the programs still take into account some circumvention of the law of supply and demand. That statement is not wholly true of Governor Landon's farm program, but unless the New Dealers come forward with more than they have thus far advanced, I think it can be said their program offers nothing more than a continued raid on the Treasury of the United States with no plans at all for correcting underlying conditions.

There was one phase of Governor Landon's program, as advanced in speeches at Des Moines, Iowa and Minneapolis, Minn. that appealed to me. Brushing aside verbiage and detail, Governor Landon basically has in mind, apparently, a desire to get the government out of the farmer's hair. He seems convinced that there are many things which the farmers would like to do for themselves if the machinery upon which they can operate is made available. He proposes, for example, to seek legislation that will enable the farmers to finance themselves through borrowing from commercial agencies, banks and trust companies, instead of from the government. With that I agree to the fullest. It means simply that farmers again can be masters of their own souls as well as the crops which they grow for it, puts them in a position to sell when they want to sell, without the necessity for asking permission from a bureaucrat in Washington. It means further that no bureaucrat in Washington can issue an order to that farmer that he must dispose of his stored crop.

It seems to me as well that anyone who analyzes the present regimentation of the farmers from Washington must recognize that which has always been true: Every time the government, which means politicians, attempts to mess into private business, that private business goes from bad to worse and it does not matter how bad it was when bureaucrats took hold. It will be worse thereafter.

I have been wondering, however, how far Mr. Landon will go in encouragement of the family type farm. You will remember that he spoke at length of family type farms in his Des Moines address. Personally, I feel that he hit upon a very important point. I think it is important because it strikes at the root of the farm problem.

In discussing help for the man who owns or wants to own a small farm, Governor Landon surely is proposing a program that will serve the nation well because no nation whose farms are widely owned by those who operate them can be headed toward fascism or communism. I do not know how the Governor as President will be able to put the federal government behind such a program, but it is to be assumed that he had definite ideas on the subject or he would not have boldly stated his position. My hope is that it can be done not with government money, but with money loaned from private institutions where there has been too much government competition with business of the private character. By VIRGINIA VALE

CAROLE LOMBARD is a happy girl these days. When Alice Marble defeated Helen Jacobs at Forest Hills, N. Y., and became our national tennis champion, everybody wanted the racket with which she won. She was deluged with telegrams asking for it.

But Carole's telegram arrived first, and Carole is an old friend—so she got the racket. And as all Hollywood is tennis-mad, (as well as polo-mad and football-mad) that was something to cheer about.

Incidentally Alice Marble, who is very pretty, was asked if she'd like to go into pictures. She said she wouldn't.

Well, Joan Blondell and Dick Powell finally got married. Had the ceremony performed on the ship on which they were sailing through the Panama canal and on to New York for a very gay honeymoon.

Joan and Dick are among the most popular stars of Hollywood.

That first broadcast of Major Eweas for his new sponsors was very much a society affair, with men in formal evening attire and women in low-cut gowns crowding in to hear and see it, and policemen holding back the uninvited.

"Hollywood Boulevard" is a picture that all you old-timers certainly ought to see. John Halliday, Betty Compton, Esther Ralston, Mae Marsh, Charles Ray, Francis X. Bushman—they're all in it, and so are others who made movie history in the silent days.

The picture is interesting, too, because of the very good plot, involving pretty Marsha Hunt, who looks very much like the Gish girls in their early days.

If you have listened to the "Myrt and Marge" programs on the air you've heard a chap named Vinona Haworth, who's about to burst into fame and glory on the motion picture screen.

Some booking agents heard him on the air and got him a screen test. Then, as frequently happens, nothing happened for months. Finally Cliff Reid, who is producing "The Plough and the Stars" for RKO saw the test. He was casting "Without Orders", an aviation story, and took a terrific chance by casting Haworth as the second male lead.

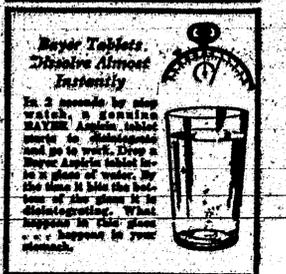

Bob Armstrong was playing the first lead; the girl was Sally Eilers. And—Mr. Haworth stole the picture!

Mary Carlisle has come along fast since she was just one more of the pretty, blonde girls of whom Hollywood was so full two years ago. She had pretty figures, they were nice—but it was hard, sometimes, to tell them apart.

But see Mary in "Lady, Be Careful" with Lew Ayres, Buster Crabbe, and some other awfully good young actors, and you'll realize that she has developed into a fine young leading woman. It's a riotously funny picture, made from the successful play, "Sally Beware."

Leslie Howard has made no secret of the fact that he didn't want to go on making pictures in Hollywood. About to do "Hamlet" on the stage in New York, at last, he has also let it be announced that he is one of the organizers of a new motion picture company, called Associated Artists. Dudley Murphy, who has had some experience as a director in Hollywood, and Hugh Walpole, the novelist, are associated with him in the company, which has been formed in London.

Now Ease Neuritis Pains Fast

For Amazingly Quick Relief Get Genuine Bayer Aspirin. If you suffer from pains of neuritis what you want is quick relief. Genuine Bayer Aspirin tablets give quick relief, for one reason, because they dissolve or disintegrate almost instantly they touch moisture. (Note illustration above.)

When you take a real Bayer Aspirin tablet it starts to dissolve almost as quickly as you swallow it. And this is ready to start working almost instantly—headaches, neuralgia and neuritis pains start easing almost at once.

That's why millions never ask for aspirin by the name aspirin alone when they buy, but always say "BAYER ASPIRIN" and see that they get it.

Try it. You'll say it's marvelous.

Why Laxatives Fail In Stubborn Constipation

Twelve to 24 hours is too long to wait when relief of constipation is needed. In most cases laxatives are ineffective because they do not reach the source of the trouble.

It is not until you have taken a thorough cleansing that you can get relief. The laxative does not reach the source of the trouble. It is not until you have taken a thorough cleansing that you can get relief. The laxative does not reach the source of the trouble.

"You were right in the beginning," Pat said. "There was only one thing to do. Father saw Kelly alive after Peg's husband left him, and we should have said so."

"I can't stand seeing Peggy," Pat continued. "Was that what you had in mind when you sent her here? Any way, it's too terrible. She comes down to breakfast looking—well, you know. You know about trouble like that—all night long—alone—and I didn't. I do now, and we've got to come clean."

"I don't think it matters," Barry replied. "I still think we can free Jack without that."

"How soon?"

"By next Wednesday."

Pat nodded.

"All right," she said. "We'll wait until Wednesday."

Barry had never seen her more charming. As they walked down the beach, to reject the others, he asked, "Are you ever going to confess how you found out about me?"

Pat laughed.

"That was too easy. The night of Maria's visit, you told me you'd taken the same Barry Gilbert. And it had a curiously familiar sound. After a moment, I remembered that I'd once seen an actor called Barry Gilbert in a war picture."

"And then?"

"Then you shut your hand in the door. The expression of mingled surprise and pain in your face—that was what had kept the picture and the actor in my mind. You were the man who'd come out of the drinking place, laughing and talking, and been shot. I was sure of that—just as sure as I was that you'd crushed your fingers deliberately to keep us from knowing that, unlike the Jack Riddler you were supposed to be, you couldn't play a victim any more than you could play Hamlet."

"I'm glad you found out," Barry said. "I'm glad I haven't been deceiving you, at all events."

They had reached the railroad building.

"Pat!" Jack called. "Pat! We're back!"

"Jack! You mustn't call Miss Hambridge Pat!"

"Everybody else does."

"I like it," Patricia came in the room. "We're Pat and Peg to each other now; why shouldn't I be Pat to Jack?"

It was almost a miracle, Barry decided. Was this the same girl of whom, only a couple of months ago, her father had said, "Pat, for short, though it takes courage to say her name?"

The change wasn't all his doing, or Peg's. Something else had contributed to softening Pat, and making her sweeter and lovelier. It was Isabel, Barry felt, and bitter—that she should be the loveliest when he was leaving her. What of his plan to come back for her—some day, when I've made good? A girl like that might marry an ex-convict; she certainly couldn't marry an ex-convict.

Barry drove back to town Sunday evening without having put anybody's house in order. He had dined with the Hambridges, and gone over there in the morning "to see Jacky start for his side."

"Well, our trial's set for two weeks from today," said Winslow when Barry called at his office Monday morning.

"I'm still hoping there won't be any trial."

"Meaning that you think you've got Mrs. Kelly?"

That was the question Barry had dreaded. Winslow's frank amazement at his "sleuthing" nettled him, and made him feel foolish. Especially now that he was compelled to admit, "No, I'm afraid you were right about Mrs. Kelly. She slept at her sister's that night."

"Well, then," Peter asked, "who's the latest candidate?"

"Do you remember reading me your cross examination of the Filipinos?"

"A new note for it—yes."

"You found a lot of holes in the boy's story?"

"Yes."

But Peter was still amazed.

"Well, I've got a few more," Barry said, "and a motive."

He sat down, and Peter opposite him. Barry repeated what Evans had told him of the dinner with Nolan.

"Well," Peter remarked, at the end, "that settles the case against Beger?"

"You think so?"

"Obviously, if Nolan sticks to his story. We say Nolan's testimony establishes that the decanter was downstairs all the time Rogers was upstairs. But we've got to make the jury believe it."

"On the district attorney?"

Winslow shook his head.

"The district attorney wouldn't move for dismissal of an indictment on that evidence."

"But—"

"You're perfectly sure that the Filipinos killed Kelly," Winslow went on. "I'm not. And the district attorney wouldn't. The Filipinos was angry. And the decanter was downstairs. That's all there really is to that story."

"And Kelly was alive an hour after Rogers left?"

"That's what we've got to prove to the jury. My own guess is that the decanter had been carried into the dining room when the murderer entered the kitchen."

"After Nolan went home?"

"Yes, and after the Filipinos went to bed."

"And that man—"

"You're sure it was a man?"

"Very sure. And that man was someone who had better reason than we've found yet for hating or dreadng Mike Kelly."

Barry rose.

Peter had picked a glove off his desk, and was turning it right side out.

"Have you ever thought of Luis Morano?" Barry asked.

Winslow let the glove fall.

"Why?"

"He seems to have had some reason for hating Kelly."

"You mean that row in the Coconut Bar?" Peter said. "Oddly enough, that's why I haven't thought of Morano. He was telephoning me from the Coconut Bar—about the row—at the time of the murder."

"Luis always came to me when he was in trouble. And he called me, at home, just after one that morning, to say that one of his girls was in jail, and would I take the case. I could hear that jaxx of his."

Barry stooped for the glove.

"Well, that's that," he remarked. "Kelly was threatening Morano, you know, and—"

But Peter was smiling again.

"You can make a case against almost anyone," he said. "But a case that'll stand up—that's another thing."

Barry grinned sheepishly.

Winslow pressed a button.

"Stop worrying," he advised Barry. "We're going to free Rogers. If we

"How about 'taking an alibi'?"

"You reminded me it could be done," Barry went on.

Barry turned suddenly.

"Free strike you see queer," he asked, "that nobody ever connected Kelly's murder with the Jefferson Street fight?"

Barry couldn't trust himself to reply.

"They were pulled off about the same time. As I remember it, Judge Hambridge's decision was handed down the day after the killing."

Barry remained silent.

"Kelly stood to make a million or two on that deal," Harwood continued. "Those Jefferson Street houses were pretty decent once. Then they went stummy. Through agents, Kelly bought 'em in, one by one, for little or nothing, and turned 'em over to a phoney corporation to sell to the city at a huge profit. Some of the original owners may have been a little bit sore, don't you think?"

The conversation was drifting into safer channels, and, relieved, Barry let it flow on.

"As a matter of fact," Harwood resumed, "someone was—very sore. He called me up, the day of the murder, and offered to squeal. He wouldn't give me his name, but he said he'd be here, at tea-thirty that night, to deliver the goods on Kelly."

"And then?"

"Then he didn't show up."

"Somebody got to him."

"Probably. And then somebody killed Kelly."

Barry asked, "Is that the clue you had in mind when you said, 'Well, Winslow I may have a tip for him some day'?"

Harwood nodded.

"Yes, but, as I remarked later, that guy who phoned might have been anybody. I didn't have a darn thing to go on except that he had a soft voice and a funny impediment in his speech."

"And then—"

"Then you told me about Morano, and I went to the Coconut Bar. The guy that phoned me was Morano, all right. But what does that mean? Not a thing, maybe. If Morano did hop in his car at one o'clock that night—"

He paused.

"I've got a dozen men on this trail. Now, I'm going to send somebody to Morristown, New York. They knew you. Your job is to lay low. Morano hasn't the faintest idea who I am. I told him I came from Grand Rapids. But—"

The city editor was pacing the floor.

"My God, how this picture begins fitting together," he cried. "Morano threatens to spill the beans. Someone tells Kelly, Kelly goes to the Coconut Bar. With two strong-arm men. Why? To silence a squealer. That was around eight o'clock, and, at tea-thirty, the squealer didn't squeal. Why? Because Kelly had something on him."

Barry was on his feet, too, now.

"Something is writing," he said.

"Sure! The paper he accused Peggy Rogers of trying to steal."

"Yes," Barry went on, "and get this: somebody did try. Violet Kane, probably. Peggy Rogers says Violet had just left the table when the row started. And that Luis was talking to Vi, outside the dressing rooms, just before that."

"—What did he say? He said, 'I'll send this dame to jail, and you be the hot spot.' And you can't send a man to the electric chair for picking pockets."

"No."

"But you might, if you knew of something else he'd done, and had the proof of it. There was a paper, and it had disappeared when the body was found. Who got it? Morano. And not in the Coconut Bar, because it was still in Kelly's pocket at midnight."

Harwood laid down his pipe.

"How do you know that?"

"Somebody told me."

"Jack Rogers?"

"No."

Harwood's eyes narrowed.

"Was it Judge Hambridge?"

Barry didn't answer.

"If Winslow's shielding anyone it's Judge Hambridge," Harwood said. "Judge Hambridge, or someone close to him, I've been thinking that ever since you put the idea in my head. The judge has always been a straight shooter. Why did he write that decision? Was that paper a threat to him, too?"

Barry said, "I don't know."

"I don't either. But I'm going to find out before Saturday."

"Can I help?"

Evans looked at him.

"No," he replied, curtly. "For the present, I want you to keep out of this."

"I'm Glad You Found Out," Barry said.

Barry had to get the guilty man to do it, we'll get him, but let's give the court a chance first."

"I guess we'll have to," Barry conceded.

Peter's secretary opened the door.

"What's Nolan's first name?" Peter asked Barry. "And where's his garage? Got it, Miss Clark? Now, get Nolan in here this afternoon."

He looked up at Barry.

"Don't mind my joking," he said. "Something tells me you did a grand job when you turned up Mr. Nolan."

"Peter's wonderfully kind," Barry told Harwood that evening, "but he makes me feel as small as an author's name in a motion picture advertisement."

"I don't think Winslow means to make anyone feel small," Evins answered. "He's too big for that. It's the small men who've got to make other people smaller, in self-defense. The trouble with Winslow is that he's generally right, and that's trying, no matter how kind anyone may be about it."

"Winslow's a great lawyer," he went on, "and a swell guy. He's had his own troubles, too. Never meet his wife?"

"Once."

"He's nearly wrecked his career for her, you know. She ran away from home with some youngster in a military school. The kid turned crook, and the cops killed him. Then she married Winslow. The tabloids played the story all over the place, and Mrs. Winslow crashed, and had to be taken to St. Mary's. She went to pieces again two or three years ago, and Winslow closed the office, and went to live in the South of France. The money gave out, I guess. Anyway, they didn't stay long. Of course, that telephone message doesn't prove anything."

"You mean Morano's message to Winslow?"

"Yes. Luis might have sent that at one o'clock, and still've been in time for the murder."

"Is there any chance that Luis didn't send it?"

"Why do you ask that?"

"It occurs to me that Peter might be shielding someone."

"Whom? Morano?" Harwood shook his head. "Winslow isn't that kind of a lawyer. As a matter of fact, I know Morano phoned him."

"Who told you?"

"Violet Kane."

"Then you've been to the Coconut Bar?"

"Yes, I went Saturday, and met all your cronies. Miss Fane says Luis followed Peggy Rogers around to the police station, and then came back to the Bar, and called up his lawyer, and drove to Morristown."

"At one o'clock?"

"Yes."

Just Actions

IT IS not possible to found a lasting power upon injustice, perjury, and treachery. These may, perhaps, succeed for once, and borrow for awhile from hope, a gay and flourishing appearance. But time betrays their weakness, and they fall into ruin of themselves. For, as in structures of every kind, the lower parts should have the greatest firmness—so the grounds and principles of actions should be just and true.

—Demosthenes.

Early Training

Dr. Holmes was asked when the training of a child should begin. "A hundred years before it is born," he replied. This is a strong way of putting the truth that the training of children should begin with the training of their grandparents. — S. E. Wishard, D. D.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

"I for one, am dedicated to the proposition that henceforth no American citizen shall ever again be put in a position where he has to sell his vote for bread" — Gov. Landon of Kansas.

To Amend Federal Warehouse Act

"As part of the plan for removing the depressing effect of surpluses, I shall propose an amendment to the federal warehousing act so that reserves of feed, such as corn, can be carried on the farm. . . . Under this amendment the farmer who stores his grain on the farm in such a way as to make it insurable will be entitled to a federal warehouse receipt. He then will be eligible to borrow from any banking agency. He will enjoy the same credit facilities as are available to owners of grain stored in terminal markets." — Alf M. Landon at Des Moines, September 22, 1936.

Agreements Do America Harm

"Eight of these reciprocal agreements have been in force long enough for us to see the results. In these cases, the imports of farm products have increased 84 per cent over a corresponding period prior to the agreements. Exports of farm products increased only 28 per cent. In other words, under these eight agreements, our imports increased more than three times as fast as our exports." — Alf M. Landon at Minneapolis, September 24, 1936.

To Preserve Peace

"I emphasize our duty in preserving peace. Those of us who were in the service appreciate in a way others cannot the utter futility of war. I need not tell you of its waste, its meaningless cruelty. You know. The Legion has worked for years for legislation to take the profit out of war, and in the event of war, to put everything the nation possesses in manpower, industry and resources on an equal footing." — Alf M. Landon at Wichita, September 7, 1936.

Lords of Own Farms

"Most of us cooperated with the Triple A in its early days, since we had been promised it was only an emergency measure. . . . But as the program progressed, we discovered that the administration was trying to stretch the Triple A into a means for the permanent control of American agriculture from Washington. I cannot agree with such a policy. I cannot agree with the President. I believe the American farmer should be 'A Lord on his own farm.'" — Alf M. Landon at Des Moines, September 23, 1936.

Landon Will Fulfill Roosevelt Promises

"I shall fulfill all outstanding obligations made by the present administration with the American farmer. By this I mean that those who have carried out their end of the bargain will receive the checks due them. I am equally emphatic in my views on meeting the suffering caused by the present drought. We will use the full power of government to relieve the present distress. . . . There will be no waste and no politics." — Alf M. Landon at Des Moines, September 23, 1936.

Program Doesn't Make Sense

"Consider the contradictions in this policy. The administration was trying to hold down the nation's supply of meat by restricting the production of hogs. Last fall it was warning livestock men that there would be increased supplies of cattle on the market this spring. And yet it proceeded to make concessions on Canadian cattle that would bring more of them into this country. Such a program just doesn't make sense." — Alf M. Landon at Minneapolis, September 24, 1936.

Can't Feel Misery, Says Landon

"To the American housewife, says Governor Alf Landon, it is as plain as A, B, C, that hidden taxes have increased out of all proportion during the New Deal administration. She knows that whereas in 1936, 30 cents out of every dollar collected by the federal government came from direct taxes, and 41 cents came from hidden taxes; that in 1937 a total of 81 cents came from hidden taxes and the remainder from direct taxes."

APPRECIATION

Is A Virtue of the American People

That is one reason why President Franklin D. Roosevelt is going to be given an overwhelming majority in New Mexico—greater than he received four years ago.

It's only human nature to help those who help us, and there isn't a man, woman or child in New Mexico who hasn't profited directly or indirectly from President Roosevelt's program.

Since Roosevelt took office on March 8, 1933, the Federal Government has given and loaned to the people of New Mexico a total of $127,098,971. On a per capita basis this represents $300 for every man, woman and child in the state. The tabulation below shows how this money was spent:

LOANS CLOSED

Reconstruction Finance Corporation	$ 7,277,664
Farm Credit Administration	17,833,114
Commodity Credit Corporation	729,012
Resettlement Administration	1,780,514
Home Owners' Loan Corporation	5,134,546
Public Works Administration	2,446,640

LOANS INSURED

Federal Housing Administration	2,259,327
--------------------------------	-----------

GRANTS, ALLOTMENTS AND PAYMENTS

Agriculture Adjustment Administration	4,127,975
Resettlement Administration	112,896
Civil Works Administration	2,346,879
Federal Emergency Relief Administration	19,888,228
Emergency Conservation Work	18,881,006
Bureau of Public Roads	17,821,341
Social Security	198,850
Public Works Administration	12,370,430
Emergency Relief Appropriation Act	14,936,049
Total	$127,098,971

Federal loans and grants to New Mexico have gone to save homes, to provide jobs for the unemployed, to feed the hungry, and to care for the dependent aged, the crippled and the blind, to make permanent, necessary improvements.

Republicans have cried "Waste, Extravagance!" They say this money was foolishly spent.

Let the people whose homes have been saved, let those who stood in soup lines under the Republican Administration, let those who were without work, and those who were facing starvation in 1933 when President Roosevelt took office, be the judge of that!

The prospect of repaying these expenditures need cause no taxpayer in New Mexico any alarm. We have received $127,000,000 from the Federal Government during the last three and a half years, and we have repaid in taxes about $4,000,000.

Any taxes levied to pay the cost of the New Deal will be federal taxes. Federal taxes will fall chiefly on the rich industrial East. That means the industrial East will pay most of the New Deal cost in New Mexico. That is only fair and just since it is the industrial East which profits most from the raw materials—cotton, wool, livestock and minerals—produced in New Mexico.

The Republican Congressional candidates hate the New Deal. They are pledged to fight the New Deal, to overthrow it if possible.

They boast that they will not be "rubber stamps," meaning that they will not support President Roosevelt in his great effort to maintain prosperity in America.

That is something we should remember. If there was ever a time when a President of the United States needs a Congress which will work with him, it is now.

If there was ever a time when New Mexico needs a governor who will cooperate with the President it is now.

Senators Carl A. Hatch, Dennis Chavez, Congressman John J. Dempsey and Governor Clyde Tingley deserve reelection on their own records. But in this election the issue is even greater. They should be elected so that President Roosevelt will not be constantly opposed in his program of continuing benefits to New Mexico.

You can depend on these men to work in harmony with President Roosevelt and to see that the needs of the State are adequately met.

The Amazing Case of Abe Zinn and the Tingley-Zinn-Miles Machine!

POLITICAL organizations frequently make mistakes. Not infrequently their leaders make fools of themselves. However, it is unusual for a political organization's leadership, with full knowledge of the facts before it, to make fools of themselves and at the same time deliberately insult the intelligence of the voters to whom they are shortly going to appeal for support.

However this is exactly what was done by the Tingley-Zinn-Miles machine in their recent New Deal convention, when, having been soundly licked by Jack Dempsey, they forced the nomination of Abe Zinn to succeed himself on the state supreme court.

Within the year Zinn had been tried before the state bar commission for unprofessional conduct; had been found guilty of "sommungling the funds of a client with his own," and had been severely reprimanded by his fellow justices of the supreme court in the following language:

"It is our judgment from the foregoing (report of the bar commission) that the respondent, A. L. Zinn, should be and he is hereby severely reprimanded, and that he should pay the costs of this proceeding, which are hereby taxed against him in the sum of $423.49; and it is so ordered."

The above quoted reprimand of the court was delivered March 31, 1935 (See page 778, 42 Pacific Reporter 2nd series) as the result of a report to the court by the state bar commission following an exhaustive trial, in which the commission said:

"1. That respondent received the money in question as a trust fund,"

"2. That respondent violated his duties as a member of the bar when he commingled said funds with his own."

The "commingling" referred to, as the testimony in the case showed, was that Zinn used this trust fund money along with his own in playing the stock market through E. F. Hutton & Co., Los Angeles.

And yet this man, convicted by his fellow members of the bar and reprimanded by the court of which he was and is a member, has been forced on the New Deal party and its supporters by the Tingley machine.

Why did this amazing nomination occur?

Because Zinn, himself, ordered it. Such brains as the Tingley machine can boast, is furnished by Zinn. As an active participant in their machine affairs he knows everything Tingley and Miles have done to party workers, state employees and the public business. With the "goods" on them Tingley and Miles HAD to do as they were told.

But do the rank and file of New Dealer voters and Jeffersonian Democrats have to stand for such a man; especially when they are offered a candidate in the person of Judge John Watson who has behind him ten years of honorable, efficient service on the state supreme court; and a lifetime of unswerving service as a lawyer?

Brief History of the Zinn Case

Early in 1934 an Albuquerque newspaper discovered that Zinn, while serving as special assistant state tax attorney for McKinley County, had received two remittances of $500.00 each from one H. L. Williams, with instructions to apply same on taxes owed by Williams in McKinley County. The newspaper charged in words of one syllable that Zinn had not turned over this money to the state and had failed to properly account for it. The newspaper produced evidence in support of its charge so convincingly that in July, 1934, the state bar commission brought the matter before its grievance committee, which committee, after a hearing, concluded that the charges merited a hearing and certified that fact to the state supreme court. The court, in turn, directed the bar commission to hold a hearing and report its findings to the court. E. R. Wright was appointed by the court to represent the public interest. J. O. Beth and Hiram Dow represented Zinn.

In March, 1935 the case came on for hearing before the bar commission, seven of the nine members sitting; two having disqualified themselves. The trial was thorough. It resulted in the conclusion and reprimand quoted above.

Full details of this case are to be found in volumes 34 and 42 of the Pacific Reporter, 2nd series, which are in all well equipped law libraries in the state. They are a permanent, official record of professional misconduct by Zinn. Yet his supporters, Tingley and Miles, said, in effect to the New Deal convention and the New Deal rank and file of New Mexico: "No matter what he has done you have to take him, New Deal millions may pull him through along with us on the Roosevelt coalition. Anyway, take him, because you cannot help yourselves."

An Important Task

(From the Albuquerque Tribune, Sept. 25, '36)
(Supporters of Roosevelt and Tingley)

Friends of the Roosevelt and Tingley administration should not overlook the fact that its principles and its success are in no wise dependent upon the re-election of Justice A. L. Zinn to the state supreme court.

Mr. Zinn, censured by his colleagues, criticized generally for participating actively in partisan politics while a member of the Supreme Court, believes he can count on a Roosevelt landslide to seat him once more in the state's highest judicial post. Non-political Democrats and independent voters should see to it that it does not happen.

Fortunately the Republican candidate is former Chief Justice John Watson, an able jurist with a distinguished record of service.

One of the most important tasks of this campaign is to repudiate once and for all the insistent theory that New Mexico Supreme Court justices can with impunity pass gibberish back and forth from the cloisters to the caucus room.

A Spotless--or a Besmirched Supreme Court Justice?

How do the self-respecting members of the bar of New Mexico feel about this Zinn candidacy? How do the people, regardless of party, feel about this Zinn candidacy, in the light of the official record? Are we to maintain the respect for our supreme court which is its due, or let it be besmirched with a justice having such a record on the law books of the state?

JOHN O. WATSON, the Republican candidate for the supreme court, served ten honorable years on that court. He left a record unblemished by the slightest taint of political activity. His is a record of hard, useful work that won him the profound respect of lawyers and litigants alike.

Contrast the men and their records! Right now Zinn is out campaigning. At Santa Rosa Saturday night, October 3rd, he saw a young woman making a stenographic report of his speech. Zinn said, possibly before he saw the stenographer: "I thought it my duty to speak about judges, to speak about delinquency, about decency . . ." (Just fancy Abe Zinn speaking about delinquency!) And then, seeing the reporter, who happened to be District Judge Armijo's court reporter and who had been sent there to report the New Deal frothings of Dennis Chavez and Jack Dempsey, by the Republican state committee and at its expense, Zinn proceeded to "roast" the young lady. He called her a "spy".

Miss Soller waited until Zinn had completed his filthy attack and then, like the courageous woman she is, she arose in her place, told Zinn what she thought of him, why she was there in her capacity as a public stenographer, won the respect of all who heard her and forced Zinn to make a public apology to her from the platform.

The incident is related merely as illustrating the Zinn character. Are you New Deal Democrats, you independent Democrats, you Jeffersonian Democrats going to permit Tingley and Miles to force Zinn down your throats, when you have available for your supreme court such a lawyer, such an able judge, such a cultured gentleman as John Watson?

REMEMBER! A vote for Zinn is more than a vote for a lawyer with a besmirched record. It is a vote for continuance in control of the New Deal party of the Tingley-Miles-Zinn machine . . . because Zinn is a dominant factor in that machine and in the making of its political and governmental decisions.

Isn't it time for you New Deal and Democratic voters to wake up and clean house?

Keeping Up With Science

Scientist-Sleuths View Indian City Visited by De Soto

Ancient Louisiana Site Was Capital of Tribes

New Orleans.—A great Indian capital in Louisiana, visited by Hernando de Soto in 1542 in his weary quest for gold, has been explored to its depths by scientific excavators.

The modern archaeologists, seeking prehistory rather than gold, have better success to report than the Spaniards had.

Digging has revealed the career of one of the largest Indian "cities" east of the Mississippi. The great mound which has been explored was once built to a height of 80 feet, making it perhaps the highest Indian mound in the South.

A number of technical reasons for believing that this site is most probably the important Indian capital of Anilco, are found by Winslow M. Walker who explored the mound for the Smithsonian institution.

Was Thriving Community.

Accounts from Spanish conquest times describe this city as having about 400 good houses, with a beautiful square in the middle. The corn fields bore abundantly, and there were good stores of beans, maize, walnuts, and dried perillomen in this and surrounding towns. The Indian chief drew up before the town with a battalion of 1,500 picked men, but when De Soto's army advanced, the barbarian horde fled without shooting an arrow.

This Indian capital is now shown to have been an old, old settlement even then. The first settlers who started the great mound carried masses of clay in skin sacks and dumped and packed down the clay to build a platform. The detective science of archaeology infers from their broken pottery that these unknown Indian pioneers were very much like the famous Mound Building Indians of the Ohio valley.

Story of Mound Building.

Their mound building was interrupted when the platform was only a few feet high, and the raised place remained a camping site, littered by ashes, charcoal, bones and broken dishes while two little pecan trees grew up to mark the passing of time.

Then, Mr. Walker found, building was resumed by these people or others. With logs and cane layers and sand, a group of mounds were raised, and the whole was finally combined into one great terraced platform with ramps.

Whether this platform mound, perhaps 45 feet high in De Soto's time, was the high place on which the temple or the chief's house stood, is not certain. Lesser heights were raised for other structures about the town. The temple is described by the Spaniards as containing bones of the chiefs of Anilco in coffin baskets, and around the building were piles on which the heads of captured enemies were stuck.

Invisible "Keep Out" Sign Makes Roots Stay Apart

Washington.—"No trespassing" signs are written in some kind of unexplored chemical language by growing roots, to keep other roots from invading territory which they have taken for their own.

Indications of this are graphically shown in a device invented by Prof. M. A. Rains of Howard university.

Professor Rains' new method makes the root system of plants visible throughout their entire growth. Against a slightly sloping sheet of glass he lays a sheet of dark paper or other absorbent material, kept moist by a series of wicks dipped into a supply of water. The roots sprouting from seeds placed at the top edge of the sheet grow down the moist paper, and can be studied in detail.

Ancient Roman Empire Is Being Surveyed

London.—Countries of the world that once formed part of the ancient empire of Rome are now making a survey of that one-time empire.

The French have completed their survey of the frontier in Syria, says a report in the British scientific journal Nature. A great part of the survey is necessarily being carried out by airplane, as many sites are in the desert and can only be spotted from the air.

Universe Growing Larger, Belief of French Astronomer

Reckons Milky Way's Age in Billions of Years

NEW scientific evidence has been produced that the universe is expanding, thus allaying the fears of those who worry because the sun and the stars are destroying themselves by turning their masses into the radiation they emit.

This evidence is presented in an article in the Astrophysical Journal published in Chicago.

M. Henri Mineur, astronomer at the Observatory of Paris, reports calculations showing that the stars of the Milky Way, despite their age of tens of thousands of millions of years, have only radiated away about one hundredth of their mass.

Thus if one takes M. Mineur's estimate that Milky Way stars are from ten to twenty billion years old, the apparent age of the universe, before all the mass is radiated away, would be about a trillion years. Compared to the life of a man who lives to be seventy-five years old, the star galaxy which contains the earth and the Milky Way is only a baby, about nine months old, and cutting its first teeth.

Upsets Other Theories.

Significant to astronomers is M. Mineur's calculations showing that the stars in the Milky Way must have been formed in the beginning with almost the same mass which they have today. Present-held theories of star evolution, therefore, must go by the board if the French astronomer's calculations and the observations on which they are based are correct.

Says the French astronomer:

"The upper limit we have found for the age of the stars is so small that, in so brief a time, the great majority of the stars cannot have lost more than a hundredth part of their mass. We must therefore believe that the stars were formed with nearly the same masses as they have now, and that the difference in temperature and spectral type actually observed are due to the fact that the stellar masses were already different at the time of their formation.

Evolution Not Likely.

"An evolution of the stars such as has been generally accepted is, then, impossible. Our result is, however, in perfect agreement with the theory of the expansion of the universe.

"G. Lemaitre has suggested a hypothesis for the formation of the extragalactic nebulae based upon his theory of the expansion of the universe, according to which the age of the Milky Way would not exceed ten thousand million years."

"Eat Eggs," Doctors Advise Sufferers With Arthritis

Richmond.—"Eat eggs" is the message of five doctors of the Medical College of Virginia to people who suffer from arthritis.

Drs. J. C. Forbes, R. C. Neale, O. L. Hilt, D. B. Armistead and E. L. Rucker have found that diets which contain a great deal of sulphur and little carbohydrate are beneficial to sufferers from the painful disease.

Arthritis, these doctors find, is accompanied by the presence of indole in the blood. This is a chemical produced by the decomposition of body products. It has long been known to be deleterious.

To remove this indole the body needs sulphur. The Virginia doctors therefore feed their arthritis patients on diets which have such sulphur, such as is found in meat and eggs. To aid in preventing indole production in the body only very little carbohydrate is fed.

Such foods as potatoes and rice are entirely eliminated from the diet. The results of this diet, the doctors find, are promising. In one case the patient was kept on an ordinary diet for a month. There was a good deal of indole in his blood, and he suffered considerably.

After a month on the special diet there were only traces of indole in his blood, and he felt stronger, suffered less. At the end of another month there was no indole in the blood, and the patient was considerably improved.

Lapland Revealed as Warm in Stone Age

Stockholm.—More than 30 settlements of human beings dating from the Stone Age, or about the year 3000 B. C., have been unearthed in Swedish Lapland by Kurt Tinnberg, Stockholm, archaeologist.

In a few months he has uncovered some 2,000 Stone Age weapons and tools, and he has also discovered many other things.

Paganism in England

Member of Royal Horse Guards in Full Regalia.

Member of Royal Horse Guards in Full Regalia.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

THE English like paganism. No one is long in London before that becomes evident. And when spring comes to the British capital, paganism is not far behind.

A month before, the south coast has retained the winter's health seekers and a generous sprinkling of visitors from "The Colonies." To watch the opening of the mail in a drawing room of Farnham or Torquay is like leafing the pages of an imperial atlas or a stamp album.

The season's northward passage from Kent and Sussex changes the country's outlook. Then the visiting expatriates move north, and the Cornish Riviera emerges from its plate-glass windbreaks. The daffodils have begun to show themselves in London's parks.

How many hundreds of springs have worked their magic around Ludgate Hill? Yet the story is never old.

In St. James's Park the pelicans plume themselves for another round of admirers. Teaty old Colonials, amid youngsters with the same straight backs, ride splendid horses along that mid-city strip of tanbrack known as Rotten Row. Before St. Paul's and under the haughty noses of the Landseer lions in Trafalgar square children minister to the voracity of the London pigeons.

In Whitehall, where the Horse Guards sit their coal-black mounts, warm red winter capes are removed to display white buckskin breeches. In front of the Old Admiralty, whence Nelson hurried off toward the Strait of Gibraltar and the battle commemorated by the name of Trafalgar Square, a flower seller thrusts out a sixpenny bunch of daffodils.

As if the bright lights around Leicester square had helped coax them forth, early blossoms circle the base of a statue to England's immortal poet and playwright. Leaning on a pile of his works, his legs crossed more carelessly than a sculptor allows in the case of a general or a statesman, Shakespeare broods in the center of a theaterland whose craft he glorified.

Nerve Center of Empire

Another spot glided by daffodils is the garden outside the Houses of Parliament, a site where monarchs ruled from Edward the Confessor to Henry VIII. Since the days of Bluff King Hal, the House of Commons has turned this Thames-side meeting place into the democratic heart of a farflung Empire.

The World War Tommy sang to Piccadilly and Leicester square, but the nerve center of the British Commonwealth is this fortress of constitutional government beside Britain's historic river.

Three centuries ago, under the Palace of Westminster, a tall fellow with auburn hair sat amid barrels of gunpowder. In a few hours King, Lords, and Commons were to meet in the hall overhead. A watch provided by Thomas Percy ticked all England closer to chaos.

The Gunpowder plot was discovered. Intervening centuries have healed the grim memory of his execution, and Guy Fawkes Day has become a children's festival, with fireworks shooting from grotesque effigies to amuse the crowd. But even yet, before the King leaves Buckingham palace to open Parliament, red-coated beestaters search the cellars beneath this mighty pile.

On Hampstead Heath convoys of kites, their strings coiled on reels strong enough for tunny fishing, shake their tails across the heavens, while Puckish wags hang still doo young to read Puck. On a hundred lakes and streams the swans stretch their long necks in begging. Down the hidden lanes of Devon, Kent, and Sussex cyclists and motorists push their explorations.

The wide expanse of Dartmoor, the coasts of Cornwall, the gemstone base of English lakes, the pilgrim places of art and architecture, of religion and literature, all have their devotees.

Yet even these shining places, so fondly dreamed of around tea tables in provincial homes, are not immune from the ravages of time. In a few months the hills will be covered with a carpet of snow, and the swans will be tucked away in their winter quarters.

FOOD SEASONING REAL ARTISTRY

Of First Importance in Preparation of Dishes.

By EDITH M. BARBER

THE cook, like the artist, is born, not made" is one of those axioms which sound true. Perhaps the great cook, like the great artist, is the product of natural genius, but just as one learns by experience to blend his colorings the other learns to put together foods which blend and make a harmonious meal.

Given the same materials, two persons using them in the preparation of a meal, can produce totally different results. How much good food have we seen ruined by poor cooking or combining. New peas, for instance, cooked until they are soft and mushy, their delicate flavor lost, perhaps combined with a strong flavor which entirely obliterates their own; tender steak toughened and its flavor lost by frying or over-broiling; vegetable soup and sauces almost devoid of seasoning—these faults are so obvious that they scarcely need to be mentioned. There are so many little touches by which the best flavor of food can be brought out and the use of these stamps the cook as an expert, even if no genius.

In past generations, when life was perhaps less complicated in its outside demands upon the housewife, cooking was considered an art and practiced as such. The last generation which has offered us so much in the way of simplifying the cookery problem through the partially-cooked or wholly prepared foods has lessened, perhaps, the appreciation of the art of cookery.

At the same time, science has brought us a new attitude toward food itself. With our growing knowledge of nutrition, we have come to realize that our choice must be made with reference to the nutritive values rather than to taste alone. In our enthusiasm for a science which is contributing so much directly to the better health of the family, there is, however, a tendency to ignore the artistic side of the food question.

There is no reason why science and art cannot go hand in hand and give to the family the benefit of the vitality which the proper choice of food promotes and at the same time give the enjoyment which comes from the proper blending of flavorings and seasonings, and from the clever combinations of foods which by contrast enhance the values of each of the other.

The group of recipes which I am giving are made up from everyday foods which the housekeeper always has on hand or which she puts on her market list regularly. They are combined or seasoned and cooked in such a way that the best of their flavor is brought out. Each recipe is an example of how we can make the most of a food purchase and in this way make the family meals interesting.

Squash With Cheese.

Peel and cut a Hubbard squash and boil or steam until tender. Mash. To three cups of the mashed squash add one-third cup of cream and one and one-half tablespoons melted butter and salt and pepper to taste. Pour into a buttered baking dish. Sprinkle the top generously with grated cheese and buttered crumbs. Bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) until well browned.

Broiled Fish With Mushroom Sauce.

cup sliced mushrooms
5 fish fillets
1 tablespoon butter
1/2 cup sliced mushrooms
2 tablespoons flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 cupful sour cream
1/4 cupful water
1/4 cup walnut meats

Dip fillets in seasoned flour and saute in butter or bacon fat until brown on both sides. Melt butter and saute the mushrooms in it about three minutes. Sprinkle with flour and season and stir until well blended. Add sour cream and water and stir over the fire until smooth and thick. Pour around the fillets on a hot platter.

Stuffed Sweet Potatoes.

6 large sweet potatoes
1/2 cup milk
3 tablespoons butter
3 egg whites
1-1/2 cup walnut meats
Salt
Pepper
Paprika to taste
Bake potatoes and when done, split in halves lengthwise, scoop out the contents. Add milk, butter and seasoning and beat well. Add beaten whites and nuts. Re-fill shells. Brown in a hot oven (400 degrees F.)

Cheese Toast Fingers.

Spread bread on the loaf with creamed butter. Slice one-eighth inch thick, trim crusts and cut into finger lengths. Sprinkle with grated Parmesan cheese and paprika and bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) until crisp and light brown.

Stuffed Peas.

1 cup peas
1/2 cup milk
1/2 cup butter
1/2 cup flour
1/2 cup salt
1/2 cup water
1/2 cup walnut meats

FAMOUS HEADLINE HUNTER FLOYD GIBBONS ADVENTURER CLUB Everybody

"Thunder on the Track"

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HERE'S one for you," says Edward Green of New York city. And then he unwinds the story of an experience that befell him while he was captain, first-mate, chief steward and crew of a one-man trolley car—a yarn that makes him a Distinguished Adventurer.

Now a one-man car is a gadget that was invented so there'd be something that would keep a man busier than that well known one-armed paper-hanger with the knives.

You run them with both hands and both feet like an old-fashioned parlor organ. Ed Green thought he knew what it meant to be busy, after just a few hours operating one of these cars, but he admits now he didn't have any idea of the true meaning of the word until he tried to take care of TWO OF THE CONTRADICTIONS AT THE SAME TIME.

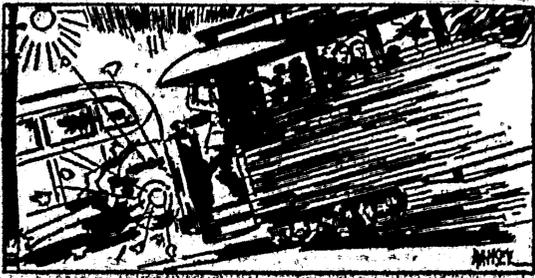

Ed was working on the night shift of the New York & Harlem Railroad company's old Fourth and Madison avenue line. It was Christmas Eve of the year 1924. He got to the car barn on time that night, but the man he was to relieve brought the car in late, so Ed had to hurry to make up time.

Runaway Trolley Car Threatens Death to Passengers.

He left the barn going at a pretty fast clip, got as far as Madison and Ninety-seventh street and stopped to pick up a passenger. The passenger got on and Ed shut the door with the foot lever while he made change with one hand, rang up the fare with the other and started the car going with—well—I guess it must have been his nose. Then, as the car began moving, and Ed got a spare second, he looked up—and saw something that didn't look altogether right to him.

The car was on a fairly steep grade. Farther on up that grade, at the Ninety-sixth street corner was another one-man trolley, and it was rolling back toward Ed's car at a fast clip! It was mid-winter and a foggy night. The rails were slippery, and it didn't take Ed long to figure out what had happened to that car ahead. It was out of control. Was to crash into his own car in about thirty seconds!

Ed says he forgot everything else for a minute and began figuring out which was the best way to jump and save his life. Then he came to his right senses and thought, "What about the passengers?" He might save his own life, but a whole bunch of other people would be killed if he did. No—he had to be a regular guy and stick to his post. He reached up, threw off his overhead switch, and turned to the crowd behind him. "Back to the rear of the car," he shouted. "Run for your lives. There's a runaway car heading straight for us!"

Panic-Stricken Riders Stampede at Crash.

In a second, pandemonium was on the loose. Screaming—shoving, the passengers stampeded for the rear of the car. At that moment the crash came. The car ahead struck with such force that it wrecked the whole front compartment of the one Ed was operating. A sheet of flames shot up between the two vehicles. In the fleeting glimpse Ed got of the crash, he saw that the other car had no motorman aboard. He had jumped for his life shortly after he had lost control.

The first car cranked—and stopped. The impact had given it a pause and given its set brakes a chance to catch hold. But at the same time Ed's car started moving; Ed had thrown off the fuses when he saw the other car coming, and now, his own vehicle without any power to control it, was running away on its own.

Ed says that, through some miracle, he managed to keep his head. Something had to stop that car. He turned to the rear again and began fighting his way through the screaming, milling herd of panic-stricken passengers.

Berserk Street-Car Butts Automobiles Out of Its Path.

The passengers, frantic now, were breaking windows and jumping out. Those who didn't were fighting their way back down the aisle. Ed pushed through the mob to the rear platform. It was the front platform now, for the car was speeding backward down the hill. By the time he got there, the trolley was traveling at breakneck speed. He grabbed for the emergency brake—jammed it on with all his might.

He might as well have saved the effort. The car still careened ahead along the slippery tracks. Behind him, fire flared up again while the crowd screamed and broke more windows. Ahead of him was a street crowded with traffic.

A taxicab shot out ahead of him. The trolley hit it with a crash and tossed it over to the gutter. Another car got in the way and was butted away with a crumpled fender and a broken wheel. Ed says he must have hit half a dozen automobiles during that wild ride, but he was too excited to keep count of them.

Ed's Heroism Is Commended by the Big Boss.

But now the car was nearing the bottom of the hill. It was slowing down. Still blazing at the rear, it ground to a stop, and Ed began getting his passengers out.

Some of them walked out by themselves—and others had to be carried. Ed doesn't remember how many were hurt. He says there must have been plenty; for inside of ten minutes there were at least a dozen ambulances on the scene. When all the injured were being taken care of, the fire put out, and the excitement all over, Ed was sitting on the step of the smoldering trolley, a disheveled figure, wondering whether this business was going to cost him his job.

But Ed didn't have to worry about that. Later on that night, the big boss did come down to the car barn; but not to fire Ed. Instead he came to thank him personally and commend his courage for sticking to his car and thinking of his passengers at a time when the rest of them were thinking only of saving their own skins.

Instant Obedience to Dogs

The burning of a white dog was an annual religious festival of the Indian tribes of Ohio. After a pure white dog was found, his legs were tied together so that he could be hung over a pole that stretched between two forked posts stuck in the ground. Underneath the dog was built a fire, and while the redskins yelled and danced around the primitive altar, the animal would be lowered to and then raised from the flames. It was slowly tortured until

Value of Guinea Pig

The guinea pig or cavy is commonly kept as a pet, possessing the advantages of being clean, harmless and without offensive odor. From a commercial point of view, his value is for laboratory and experimental purposes. The original ancestors of the domestic guinea pig are thought to have lived in the highlands of Peru, where they were domesticated by the Incas. They were allowed to run freely about the homes of their owners and were probably bred for their food value.

IMPROVED UNIFORM-INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By REV. HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, Pastor of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. © Western Newspaper Union.

Lesson for October 18 THE SPOKEN AND THE WRITTEN WORD

LESSON TEXT—Acts 17: 1-11; 1 Thess. 2: 1-12. GOLDEN TEXT—The Word of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword. Heb. 4: 12. PRIMARY TOPIC—When People Read the Bible. JUNIOR TOPIC—The Power of Jesus' Name. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How May I Win Others to Christ? YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Evangelism and the Bible.

The persecution at Philippi served not to discourage Paul and Silas, but rather to send them forward into new territory with the gospel message. Passing through two cities they came to Thessalonica, then as now a city of considerable importance. After a successful though stormy ministry there they journeyed forty miles to Berea, where the Word was gladly received. The portion of our lesson from the Book of Acts relates how the Word was preached and received in these two cities, and the excerpt from the letter which Paul later wrote to the Thessalonian church shows what manner of life the preacher sought to live among them.

1. Preaching the Word (Acts 17: 1, 5-8).

Paul's experience at Thessalonica presents an excellent illustration of 1. How the Word should be preached (vv. 1, 5-8).

This section is incomplete without verses 2-4, which are omitted from the printed portion but should be included in the study of the lesson. Notice four things concerning his preaching.

a. The place (v. 1). Paul went to the synagogue, not by chance or because it was a great religious holiday, but because it was his "custom." The synagogue was the center of Jewish worship, and there Paul met those who were ready to receive the Word of God.

Some Christians are content to remain comfortably in church and forget to go out into the highways and hedges, but there are others who have become so accustomed to going elsewhere that they neglect the opportunity for spiritual ministry in the church.

b. The method (vv. 2-3). "Reasoning from the Scriptures;" No better method has ever been devised. It is God's method. Let us get back to exposition of the Scriptures—"opening" them to men and women, "alleging," or setting out in order the truth.

c. The subject (v. 3). He preached three fundamental doctrines—the atonement, the resurrection, and the deity of Christ. Scripture preaching will be doctrinal.

d. The result (vv. 4-8). Faithful preaching of God's Word brings one of two results in the hearts of men—they are either "persuaded" and converted, or they become angry and persecute. Those who rightly received the truth were glad to join with Paul; the others raised a hue and cry because Paul and Silas were turning "the world upside down." As a matter of fact the world was already wrong-side up, and Paul sought to set it right.

It is still upside down in our day. Coming to Berea, we find Paul's experience there an illustration of 2. How the Word should be received (vv. 9-11).

Good hearers are as important as good preachers. How should the Word be received?

a. With readiness of mind (v. 11). This is a mark of nobility. The world regards the sophisticated doubter as the learned man, but he is not. Noble is the mind and heart that receives God's truth.

b. Carefully and thoughtfully (v. 11). There would be less error and folly in the pulpit if there were more intelligent Bible study in the pew. Do not assume that what some learned professor, or distinguished radio preacher says is true. Check his message by the Word.

In the final portion of our lesson Paul tells the Thessalonians that when he was with them he was concerned not only about preaching the Word, but also about

II. Living the Life (1 Thess. 2: 7-12).

Paul did not contradict his preaching by his living. He was a 1. Sacrificial service (vv. 7-9).

The man who preaches for his own glory—or gain—is not a true preacher of the gospel.

2. Consistent example (vv. 10-12).

The minister of Christ must behave "holily, righteously, and unblamably" if his people are to "walk worthy of God."

Value of Accuracy

I do not know that there is anything, except it be humility, which is so valuable as an incident of education as accuracy. And accuracy can be taught. Direct lies told to the world are as dust in the balance when weighed against the falsehoods of inaccuracy. These are the fatal things, and they are all-pervading. I scarcely care what is taught to the young if it will but implant in them the habit of accuracy.—Arthur Helps.

Past Cruelty in Spain

Savage cruelty to one another is nothing new to Spain. In the 1800s in one of the many Spanish civil wars of the last century, after a battle in the streets of Madrid when many of the captured rebels were killed as examples, Queen Isabel, not satisfied, sent word to her general to kill still more of the captured. Her general's reply is worthy of repetition: "Does the lady not understand?" he said, "that if we shoot all the soldiers we catch, the blood will rise up to her own chamber and drown her?"

Landon Pledges Farm Security

Wants Economy of Plenty, Not Scarcity; Promises Drouth Aid.

DES MOINES, Iowa.—"I believe the American farmer should be a lord on his own farm," Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas told a capacity crowd at the State Fair grounds here, in a speech that was a complete assertion of his belief in the economics of plenty, as opposed to the Roosevelt administration's economics of scarcity.

Gov. Landon's solution of what he termed a "national problem" and not simply a "farm problem" was founded directly upon the Republican party's platform. He pledged himself to support of the family type farm and to cash benefit payments limited to the production level of such a farm, to give agriculture an equal footing with industries protected by the tariff. He promised to take care of farmers hit by drouth.

He committed himself to the fulfillment of all contracts made with farmers by the present administration. He promised to call upon the statesmen of both parties to work with agricultural leaders in the preparation of new legislation, if he is elected. And going beyond the bounds of the platform, he advocated the fullest possible development of crop insurance.

Pledges Benefit Payments.
"All the farmer asks," said Gov. Landon, "is that his income be on a parity with the rest of the nation, that he may enjoy the same standard of life, that his home be made secure, and that he be able to build up a reserve for the future."

"I know that these aims cannot be realized overnight. Miracles are no more common in Washington than they are in Des Moines. To get a real solution we must have a well-rounded program."

"If I am elected," Gov. Landon continued, "I shall fulfill all outstanding obligations made by the present administration with the American farmer. By this I mean that those who have carried out their end of the bargain will receive the checks due them."

"Those of our farmers hard hit by the drouth will be generously provided for until they can raise a crop. This means the continuation of relief checks!"

Would Offset Foreign Competition.
Farmers producing a normally exportable surplus of such staple products as hogs, wheat, cotton and tobacco are handicapped by tariff protections which are effective only when there is a shortage, Gov. Landon said.

"The Republican party," declared Gov. Landon, "proposes to offset these disadvantages by the payment of cash benefits. These cash benefits will be limited to the production level of the family type farm."

"As part of the plan for removing the depression effect of surpluses I shall propose an amendment to the federal warehousing act so that reserves of feed, such as corn, can be carried on the farm."

"Under this amendment the farmer who stores his grain on the farm, in such a way as to make it insurable, will be entitled to a federal warehouse receipt. He will then be eligible to borrow from any banking agency. He will enjoy the same credit facilities as are available to the owners of grain stored in terminal markets. The grain would be stored on the farm, ready for use or sale at any time the farmer cares to take up the loan."

Suggests Crop Insurance.
Gov. Landon then took up the matter of crop insurance, upon which Kansas Republican farm leaders have been working for some time. "We realize that there are difficulties," he said. "But insurance companies are writing policies today covering risks that they did not consider feasible a few years ago."

Here Gov. Landon declared that he could not agree with a policy like that of the AAA, which attempts permanent control of American agriculture from Washington. "I cannot agree with the President," he said. "I believe the American farmer should be a lord on his own farm."

He charged that the administration, after four years, was still without a workable plan for agriculture. "It's right back where it started from!" he said. "Soil conservation—real conservation—is a subject close to my heart."

Gov. Landon reminded his listeners that two years ago he had suggested to the Roosevelt administration a comprehensive program of joint federal and state action, but that it had not been adopted.

Gov. Landon said the country's $4 billion dollar debt under President Roosevelt "can be paid only by taxation if it is to remain an honest government. Taxes add to the cost of everything and the farmer is no situated that he cannot escape them possibly. Further, the taxes reduce the ability of the farmer to buy the products of the farm. The Republican party proposes to put an end to the present debt and to provide for the future."

Two Solutions.
While the Roosevelt administration was spending two billion for each dollar of surplus produced, and creating a habit of more than $10 billion, Gov. Alf M. Landon proposed two solutions. The first was to reduce government expenditures in general and seeing to it that the government did not spend more than it received. A. A. ...
