If you can spare a little time, take a walk with me down memory's lane and see what was an find. It was in the late fall of 1878 that Buffalo Bill went on his first tour of the country with a small show. This was after he had left the government service, where he had served as a scout for many years.

In a certain part of the play, the Dutchman and Sadie were taken prisoners by the Indians who were to keep her and burn Hans at the stake. Hans pleaded with them and said: "Oh, mister Injun, don't cook and eat me, I'm old and tough; take Sadie, she's young and juicy!"

The next time he came to Burlington with his Wild West show and making such a demonstration with glass ball breaking, local sports thinking he specialized in that manner of shooting, urged him to take a snipe hunt with them in the Illinois bottoms.

The editor was pleasantly surprised one day last week by receiving a letter from one of his old schoolmates of the early days. His name is Charles Henschel and now resides near Houston, Texas.

Perhaps we were very near to each other many times when we thought we were far apart. Who knows?

New Manager for Southern Pacific Hotel

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Dodge, who had been managing the Southern Pacific Hotel for the past year, left Tuesday for Sacramento, Calif., where they were transferred to manage another of the company's hotels. The new manager, Joseph Pieri, took over the management on the above date and Mrs. Pieri will join him later on, both of whom are from California. While we regret to lose the Dodges, we wish the Pieri the best measure of success and extend to them the friendly hand of welcome.

Pacheco-Martinez

Monday morning at the Santa Rita Church, with Father Salvatore performing the ceremony, Miss Emma Pacheco and Alfredo Martinez were united in marriage. Immediately after the ceremony, the newly-weds, their attendants, Miss Emma Pino and Ernest Lopez and members of the immediate family repaired to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Porfirio Chavez, where they enjoyed a big wedding dinner.

The bride is the daughter of the late Roman Pacheco, one time commissioner of Lincoln County. She is a very charming young lady and has attended the Carrizozo High School during the past two terms. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Juan Martinez; was born and reared here and received his schooling in the local schools. The many friends of the young couple wish them the best of everything in married life.

Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Marquez returned Sunday from Alamo-gordo, where they attended the funeral of Mr. Marquez' grandmother, Mrs. Rosalio Balduedo, Sr., pioneer lady of Otero County.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART

Washington.—If the first legislative act of the new congress is to measure its efficiency and its value as the policy-making branch of our government, there is no other conclusion than that our legislative body has sunk to a new low in its history. Of course, congress should not be judged by the mess it made in rushing through a resolution barring further shipment of airplanes and engines to Spain but on every side I hear criticism of the lack of common sense used in that instance.

To recall some of the details, when congress convened there was a wild and surging wave demanding that the United States remain neutral and avoid entanglement in the Spanish crisis. Everywhere and on a million tongues was heard the cry that the United States should take no chances; it should take all of the stitches in time that are necessary to make certain that we will not get involved in a circumstance on European soil that threatens to become another 1914.

It has been and is quite evident that the people of the United States are committed to a policy of peace, a policy of neutrality. European developments have proceeded so slowly that even the merest tyro has foreseen the ultimate clash between communism and fascism about which I wrote in these columns some weeks ago. In other words, the European situation has developed after a manner that would enable preventative plans to be laid on this side of the Atlantic ocean.

But congress, in attempting to insure our neutrality, did probably the most unneutral thing it could have done. In so doing, I believe the consensus is that both house and senate demonstrated again the inability characterizing congresses of the last few years to appraise a complete picture. It yielded to what I believe to be the public demand giving thought to the future.

Let us analyze briefly what happened. The congress convened, as I have said, with an almost unanimous demand from the country for a definite and workable neutrality policy. It convened with two or three individual business units seeking to deliver shipments of airplanes and engines to the so-called loyalist troops in Spain. The exporters of these war material sensed quick action by congress that would destroy their contracts. Naturally, they put on all speed to get the planes and engines out of this country ahead of an embargo. Congress, like so many boys in a college football match, fell into the spirit of competition, a race.

Well, the answer is that Robert Cuse succeeded in getting his planes and engines on a board ship and away from New York and beat in the race by twelve hours, a fact which congressional leaders knew when they enacted the resolution of embargo.

So, it appears to be almost inexcusable that men of brains should have rushed a piece of legislation on through its channels containing an entire absence of neutrality in its very language.

The resolution that was to prevent Mr. Cuse and several others from shipping airplanes and engines to Spain not only laid down the embargo which was its purpose but it laid down that embargo specifically against Spain.

Now, to those not versed in international law, it may not be immediately evident how dangerous such a precedent is. International law requires (and it is accepted everywhere among all nations) that there shall be no discrimination among nations unless those nations are declared to be belligerents. Spain has not been so declared. The war in Spain is a civil war insofar as it relates to any other nation officially. Of course, it is a well known fact that troops from communist Russia and nearly-communist France are helping the so-called loyalist government in Spain. It is equally well known that fascist troops from Nazi Germany and fascist Italy are supporting the rebel liberal General Franco in Spain. These facts would seem to make the war in Spain something more than a civil war, which, indeed, it is, but as far as the United States is officially concerned, the war in Spain remains civil strife. And yet our congress in the worst display of low grade intelligence witnessed in a long time, specifically places Spain in the category of a nation at war with another nation and says in a statute that certain commodities may not be shipped to that nation.

To state this problem another way, it would have been exceedingly simple to have made the legislation apply to all nations and thereby to avoid embarrassment.

There was time after the race with Mr. Cuse was lost to have made the correction of a mistake which should never have been made in the first place. But congressional leaders were swept overboard by the big wave and as far as I am concerned have demonstrated again their lack of ability to keep their feet on the ground.

I do not know what it presages in the way of future legislation. It may be that after the excitement has died down, congress will again debate legislation and work out proper laws but the start certainly has been inauspicious.

Attention ought to be called just here to the differences that have arisen and promise to cause difficulties between the executive branch of the government and some of the legislators. Mr. Roosevelt, as President, seems to feel that he should have plenty of power to deal with problems like the Spanish situation and export of arms without consulting congress. A good many New Deal leaders in congress feel the same way. But there are many who disagree with that idea. There is pronounced sentiment at the Capitol in favor of legislation that would definitely prohibit the exporting of arms and munitions of war but including definitions and guide lines for those in the executive branch of the government to enforce.

It is too early yet to tell what form the permanent legislation will take because of the circumstances just outlined. With the top heavy New Deal majority in congress, it would seem the better guess to predict that Mr. Roosevelt will have his way but on the other hand, until such an issue becomes clear cut one cannot tell very far in advance how the two schools of thought will solve their problem and whether the United States will be committed further to the one man control that would necessarily result from granting additional discretionary power to the President in a matter of this kind.

There seems to be no doubt anywhere that sooner or later one of the nations whose troops is participating in the Spanish civil strife will commit an overt act, an act of war. Some hot-headed individual in command of a ship or an airplane or troops guarding a border will take a pot shot that will wipe out a life or two and wipe out peace at the same time just as occurred when the comparatively insignificant Austrian Archduke was shot in 1914. There can be no question that the United States must follow an international policy under these circumstances that is most cautious.

Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell, the famous dreaming brain trust No. 1 of the Roosevelt administration, has returned to private life — to an executive position with a molasses firm. Before he left his post as Undersecretary of Agriculture, however, the famous professor signed an order that is designed to curb lobbying by former employees of the Department in whose administration he had a hand.

The aim of this order was an obviously worthy one because it was designed to prevent former officials or employees of the Department of Agriculture from using new connections with commercial groups from obtaining information or using influence not of the best sort from a public standpoint. With that order, there can be no quarrel.

I find among astute observers in Washington, however, no serious supposition that the order would operate to deprive Dr. Tugwell himself or any other former official of high standing from access to members of the Department's staff. It just does not work out that way. It never has and it never will, despite the wholesome character of the good professor's plans.

The truth is that while such an order may make lesser officials more cautious and thus put a few obstacles in the way of petty lobbying, it is thoroughly ineffectual in preventing the use of influence or the obtaining of information from that Department or any other in the government.

The difficulty with this situation is that government offices are being used as a stepping stone to more lucrative jobs. The government does not offer ambitious and able men a security of tenure. Men who demonstrate ability in governmental positions sooner or later are offered jobs with great big salary checks attached and they would be less than human if they did not consider such proposition when they know that in the course of human events a great turnover will take place in their own department and they are swept aside by reversal of public political action.

Some of the differences that have arisen and promise to cause difficulties between the executive branch of the government and some of the legislators. Mr. Roosevelt, as President, seems to feel that he should have plenty of power to deal with problems like the Spanish situation and export of arms without consulting congress. A good many New Deal leaders in congress feel the same way. But there are many who disagree with that idea. There is pronounced sentiment at the Capitol in favor of legislation that would definitely prohibit the exporting of arms and munitions of war but including definitions and guide lines for those in the executive branch of the government to enforce.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for January 24
TWO MIRACLES OF MERCY

LESSON TEXT—John 5:29; 6:1-15.
GOLDEN TEXT—The same works that I do, bear witness of me, that the Father hath sent me. John 5:36.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Feeding Hungry People.
JUNIOR TOPIC—A Boy Who Gave Away His Lunch.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why Did Christ Work Miracles?
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Significance of Christ's Miracles.

The world is looking for supermen, those who can work "miracles," and thus afford an easy solution for the problems of the home and of the nation. Men are ready to marvel at and follow in almost abject submission those who promise riches without labor, food without toil, short cuts to comfort and satisfaction. Often they are content if they only have something over which they may exclaim "Wonderful!" whether it be useful or not.

The miracles of God, through his servants and the Lord Jesus Christ, are not mere marvels or wonders. They are not for the advancement of the cause of any man or for personal glory. They are the mighty signs of an omnipotent God wrought for the good of men, for their spiritual enlightenment and as a testimony to the one true God.

The two miracles of our lesson present Jesus Christ as a Lord of mercy and grace—ready to meet the needs of men. Deep and real was his compassion as his heart yearned over needy humanity.

It is suggested that in the study and teaching of this lesson we vary our plan somewhat and present seven seed thoughts found in the two portions assigned. It is also urged that the context in both chapters be read with care.

I. We Are Impotent Folk (John 5:2).

The words well describe not only those who lay helpless about the pool of Bethesda but they fit us as well. Oh, yes, we are strong, capable, fearless, but only until we meet some great elemental problem. Then we see that we are indeed "a great multitude of impotent folk." The gently falling snow stopped the undefeated Napoleon. The silent fog can paralyze a nation. Death, sickness—who can stay their hand?

II. Despair Spells Defeat (v. 7). Long familiarity with his weakness had bred in the man with the infirmity a sense of despair. Such an attitude invites defeat. It is unbecoming to a Christian. Let us not forget in the darkest hour to "keep looking up."

III. God Answers the Weakest Faith (v. 8).

Jesus evidently saw in the man's despairing reply a spark of faith. He who believes honors the name of God. We may need to cry, "I believe, help thou mine unbelief," but if we believe God will gloriously meet even our faltering faith.

IV. God's Command Empowers (vv. 8, 9).

Jesus told the man to "Rise—and walk"—the very thing he could not do for his thirty-eight years of life. But when the Son of God speaks to us he gives the power to respond to his command.

V. Works Follow Faith (v. 9).

The man arose, took up his bed, and walked. Man's faith in God and God's response to faith lead to man's action on God's command. Too many are they in the church today who have never stood up and walked for God.

VI. Look to God, Not at Your Resources (John 5:9).

Humanlike, the disciples counted their money and found it was not enough to supply food for a multitude. And then there was a boy, but he had only five barley crackers and two little fish. It almost sounds like a church-board deciding to close the cross-roads church and let the Devil have the boys and girls, because it costs too much to keep-up-the-work. God help us to trust and go on for him. "Little is much when God is in it."

VII. Followers for Bread Not Wasted (v. 15).

Those who follow Christ because of business advantage and social prestige know nothing of what it means to be a Christian. He is not a bread-making king; he is the bread of life.

Essence of Prayer
Prayer in its essence is not so much the expression of our desires for things at all as of our desire for God Himself.

Discourtesy
Discourtesy occasions not merely offending, but sin; and Christian courtesy is a "means of grace" to all who have the happiness to receive it.—R. W. Dale.

The Day's Work
Let us make haste to live. For every day is a new life to a wise man.—Seneca.

Grieving for Wasted Time
He who knows most, grieves most for wasted time.—Dante.

Young Ladies of Central Asia.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

BEYOND Bukhara and Samarkand, Central Asia, lies Tashkent; and from Tashkent eastward stretches an ancient silk caravan road to Cathay. It winds across steppes, mountains, and the Chino-Russian boundary until it runs past the glamorous Central Asian metropolis of Kuldja (or Ningyuan) in Sinkiang, whose bazaar is a riot of color and whose community is an amazing mixture of tongues.

Here, in the winter, old-style Russians in gay troikas race to and from all-night parties; solemn processions of Mongol lamas parade through the streets on horseback; and long-robed Chinese and Turkish merchants about and gesticulate in the crowded market places.

In summer lumbering oxcarriage replace racing troikas and, from the streets which have become dust ponds, clouds of fine sand swirl aloft to hover over the city like a pall. Then life in Kuldja becomes unbearable and the populace, by horse, wagon, and on foot, packs off for the mountains.

And so it was that, after spending seven winter and spring months in the snows and dust of Kuldja, a traveler found himself in mid-June two days by horse south of the city, half lost in the mountains and searching for the famous Tekes valley.

His trail was winding up the bottom of a deep ravine. The steep slopes were bare of trees, but covered with an unbelievably rank growth of grass and weeds. This vegetation formed walls of the narrow trail, cutting off his view of everything save a thin band of sky above and a short patch of trail before and behind.

Suddenly a horseman emerged from the overgrowth onto the trail in front. He was a Kalmuck; a nomad from one of the Central Asian tribes of Mongolia; his dark skin, high cheekbones, and brimless, domed felt hat made that certain. Apparently he had been watching the traveler from some vantage point and was accosting him for a purpose.

Kalmuck Points the Trail.

They rode together up the trail for a short distance without speaking. Among nomads silence is a prelude to greeting. It is a fine point in their social etiquette.

"Where are you going?" As he turned back in his saddle to speak, his expression was decidedly unfriendly.

"To the Tekes valley," was the reply.

"What is your business in the Tekes?"

"I visit Sayjan Beg, the chieftain of the Kirghiz."

The man drew rein and swung his horse around, his face a complete transformation. Where before had been sullen distrust, there was now smiling friendliness.

"This trail does not lead to the Tekes," he explained. "If you follow it you will be lost in the mountains and have to spend the night in the open." Then he gave elaborate directions for retracing steps and picking up the right trail.

"And carry greetings from the Kalmucks to the chief of the highland Kirghiz," he called as they parted.

Following his directions, at the first fork beyond an old sheep corral, the stranger dismounted to examine the muddy trail. It was even as he had described; there were many tiny tracks made by a flock of goats which had recently passed up the slope to the right. From there the trail led over a series of hogbacks until suddenly it came out on the crest of the last ridge.

Below lay the goal the traveler had been aiming at for three years—the Tekes, the valley of valleys, the nomad paradise of Central Asia.

Above the opposite valley wall, the foothills of the Celestial mountains leveled off to a great plain, which stretched away to meet the snow line. On that undulating plateau were those far-famed highlands which the traveler had come to see.

Paradise for the Nomads.

Even in distant Istanbul one hears tales of how the nomads migrate to these Tekes highlands, bringing with them their flocks and herds to spend the summer months in a veritable earthly paradise for Mohammedans, drinking the fatteners mare's milk, feasting on mutton, sporting, loving, and marrying.

Far across the valley in one of the recesses could be seen a scattering of brown huts amid a black splotch of trees. It fitted the description given by Kuldja friends; it must be the winter quarters of the nomads, the home of Sayjan Beg, chieftain of the Kirghiz. The horseman seized the rein and picked his way down the perilous zigzag trail.

"So you are a real American!" exclaimed Sayjan Beg, the Kirghiz chieftain.

He was seated cross-legged on a seadir (deep Turkish couch) reading the introduction the visitor had handed him.

The visitor had to explain to him his coming to the Tekes. His Tatar cousins had been fellow students at Robert college, in Istanbul. While at the school they had captured his fancy with tales of their home city, Kuldja, and the Tekes valley. When the boys returned home, they had given him a warm invitation to visit them.

Sayjan Beg was strangely cast for a nomad chieftain, small, thin-boned, and delicate; yet, as one came to know him, his littleness was forgotten and one was conscious only of his wiry strength and vitality. He had unbounded nervous energy and a regal manner, coupled with a quick, decisive way of uttering commands. One suspected Russian blood somewhere in his strain, for his skin was much lighter than that of the Kirghiz about him.

Chief's Head Always Covered.

Perched on his head was the embroidered velvet Moslem cap, for he considers it a breach of etiquette to be seen with uncovered head, either indoors or out. Buttoned tight about his neck was a clean, white Russian shirt, while the rest of his costume was made up of a corduroy coat, Russian riding breeches, and knee boots of excellent black leather obviously imported from Soviet Russia.

Tribal headquarters were soon crowded with Kirghiz. News passed swiftly around the village that a stranger who had lived in Istanbul was visiting the chief; so the more important tribesmen had come to pay their respects to both the chieftain and his guest. Sayjan Beg and the visitor were sitting on sedirs opposite each other, while the on-lookers sat Turkish fashion on the floor or stood about, leaning against the walls.

On this first evening and subsequently; sitting cross-legged around camp fires, the guest found the nomads had rather old-fashioned ideas about geography. To them the world is flat and no amount of explaining can alter their conceptions. The earth is surrounded by "the great sea," while the sun circles about the earth.

They have heard of Russia, China, Iran (Persia), Turkey, Kashmir, Hindustan, Tibet, Afghanistan, and the mysterious far-away England. But America means nothing to most of them; in fact, the guest was invariably taken for a Russian unless he explicitly told them that he was a Foreigner—an Asian word of ancient origin derived from the word "Frank" and used to denote all western Europeans.

Dwellers in the Valley.

During a lull in his cross-examination by the circle of nomads, he questioned the chief about the different peoples living in the valley. "There are two main races here in the Tekes, nomadic Turks and Mongols," he said. "We Turks are represented by the Kirghiz and Kazaks, two great tribes whose customs, language, and religion (Mohammedan Sunni) are almost identical; in fact, in the time of Genghis Khan we undoubtedly were one tribe.

"However, we now have distinctions; our dialects are slightly different; the Kirghiz women wear a unique headdress, and through the years we Kirghiz have been more successful in amassing wealth. We come from Issyk-kul (Warm Lake), across the border in Russian Kirghistan, while the Kazaks have migrated from the dry steppes of Kazakhstan, in southern Siberia.

"The Kalmucks, or Mongols, in the other end of the valley have lived for centuries, with only a few interruptions," he continued, "a law unto themselves, with their Tibetan religion, Mongolian language, and unapproachable customs. They have always despised their own civil and, to a large extent, criminal justice."

OF INTEREST TO THE HOUSEWIFE

Wipe and core apples. Put in baking dish and fill centers with sugar. Add small quantity boiling water. Cover and bake three hours in slow oven, basting frequently and adding more water if necessary.

Chilled, diced oranges mixed with pineapple and sprinkled with coconut makes a delicious dessert.

Wash chiffons in a soap solution. No rubbing will be required, just rinsing up and down. Don't have the water too hot.

The best way to ventilate a room is to open a window at the top and bottom or one window at the top and another at the other side of the room at the bottom.

After putting water and soap in to washing machine let it run for a minute or two to dissolve soap before putting in clothes, if you wish the best results.

A simple way to freshen white washing silk which has become yellow through constant washing is to add milk to the rinsing water and allow it to soak for a few minutes before squeezing out.

A felt blackboard eraser is best in cleaning the top of the kitchen stove. If grease gets on the stove it should be rubbed over the top of the stove while it is still hot. The eraser is much more satisfactory than a cloth and it keeps the hands from getting soiled.

Never put soda and water into an enameled saucepan that has been burned. Although it will remove the burned particles of food it will make the pan more likely to burn again the next time it is used. Use salt instead of soda. Fill the pan with cold water, leave until the next day and then slowly bring to a boil.

Artificial Moon

SYNOPSIS

Mary Avery, a widow who lives in the little town of Satul, Mass., with two sons, Sarah, Duke and Ezzie Williams, writes a manuscript describing the famous Second Red murder, which occurred on her estate. Next to Mary live Mr. and Mrs. Peter Snow who every year give a summer masquerade party. One of the guests at this function is murdered. Nearby live Dr. and Mrs. Geary and their married daughter Edith and her husband Alfred. Doctor Milton Marden, a beautiful step-grandfather, Cary Trenton, a beautiful young girl who was born in France, Nestor Paul and Lora Eames and their daughter Molly. Molly was engaged to the murdered man, Ace Blaikie. She had been engaged to Walter Treadway, who had been the murdered man's secretary, but the engagement was suddenly broken and he had left town. Other neighbors are the Fairweather sisters, Flora, a hopeless invalid and Margaret. All but the latter two attended the masquerade. Mary's eight-year-old niece Sylvia had been visiting her for the summer. The wooded part of Mary's estate is called the Spinney. In it is a tiny log cabin. Near a stone wall is a tiny circular pond called the Merry Mere. This is the day of the masquerade and excitement is high. Mary decides to take Sylvia, who is an unusually observant child. Cary Trenton and Molly Eames drop in during the afternoon. Soon Blaikie, Doctor Marden and Mrs. Geary arrive. Molly is impatient to leave and they all excuse themselves. At the party Sylvia identifies each of the masked guests as they arrive. Ace comes garbed as Julius Caesar. Molly Eames appears as a Snow Queen, accompanied by a man in armor whom Sylvia identifies as Walter Treadway. They dance together continuously. Cary Trenton and Marden arrive dressed in Revolutionary costumes, the doctor wearing a powdered wig. When the guests unmask, Ace, Walter and Molly have disappeared. When Mary Avery leaves the party a little after two, neither Molly and Walter nor Ace Blaikie had returned. Sarah Blake decides to Mary that someone apparently had spent the night in the Little House and returns screaming. She has found Ace Blaikie stabbed to death in the Spinney. Mary summons Patrick O'Brien, chief of police, who has been a subordinate of Mrs. Geary's. Her manuscript recalls early impressions of Ace—how he had been wealthy, the most popular boy in town, how he had gone to Paris to study medicine, became an aviator in the World War, returning to practice in Satul, how he was really generous and the principal in scores of love affairs. Bruce Hixson had come back from the war with Ace. He was a lawyer, a man of private means and had "got" religion, become a virtual recluse.

SUNDAY—Continued

Sarah's sobs died down. Suddenly she became her composed, quiet self. "I don't like to tell things about people," she explained quietly. "I never give away the secrets that my friends tell me and I always keep the white people's secrets. I haven't ever mentioned what I'm going to tell you but to one other person."

"Mrs. Avery, I suppose," Patrick said.

"Good guess, Patrick!" I put in. "I told Mrs. Avery Saturday morning," Sarah said. Perfectly composed she told Patrick the story of her discoveries in the cabin.

Again Sarah burst into tears.

"Now, now, don't think about it any more. You go back to your work, Sarah, and don't give this another thought. You haven't got anybody into trouble. I knew who it was all the time."

"I would have told you, Patrick, what Sarah has just told you," I said after Sarah had disappeared. "You see I didn't think of it yesterday. The murder paralyzed my mind temporarily."

"Oh, I know you'd have told me," Patrick dismissed my explanation in an off-hand manner.

"Do you know yet how Ace came to go into my Spinney, Patrick?" I asked.

"Oh yes, I got that last night. He went there to meet Tony Torziano."

"The bootlegger!" I said.

"Yes. It seems that—Of course you know that for years Ace has been spending money like a drunkard's sailor. He's really been up against it lately. He hasn't paid Tony for months. He owed him three hundred dollars. Tony went over to the Blaikie house yesterday and I guess he staged a pretty good scene. Sam was cleaning silver in the butler's pantry and he could hear Tony storming way off there. He got frightened and came into the dining-room to listen. He said that Tony grew pretty violent in his threats. He heard Ace tell Tony to meet him about half-past ten in your Spinney, that he'd have the money for him then."

"And so you suspect—"

"Not a chance! Just think it over! I've known Tony all my life. He's all right. We went to school together. I've played tag, tops, marbles, baseball and football with him. Tony's as good as 'they come.'"

"Did you arrest him?"

"No, but I told him to stick around because I might have to arrest him. And he's sticking around."

"Who spent the night in my Little House?" I asked next.

"Walter Treadway," Pat answered. "I'm as sure as I can be that he did. Anyway he didn't go home that night. Somebody saw him and Molly motoring early yesterday morning."

"Sarah guessed that," I said after a while. "Our maids always know everything before we do."

Outside, a motor crunched on the driveway. In an instant Sarah appeared. "It's Miss Molly, Mrs. Avery," she announced, "and Mr. Treadway."

Before I could speak, "Tell them to come in!" Patrick said.

I had not seen Walter Treadway for over a year and yet I did not look at him for an instant. It was not the fact that Molly came through the door first that held my attention on her. It was something in Molly herself. It seems to me I had never seen her look so beautiful.

Molly swept into the room.

"Good morning, Aunt Mary," she called buoyantly. "Good morning, Mr. O'Brien." Surprisingly she came over and kissed me. I had a feeling that she had intended in that sweep of the room to kiss Patrick too, but thought better of it.

Buoyancy in Molly! And Ace dead!

Patrick's answering "Good morning, Molly," came together with mine—like a chorus. Then, still like a chorus, we added, "Good morning, Walter!"

Walter Treadway's look had changed too.

I have known Walter Treadway all his life. Like the Stows and Eameses, the older Treadways are contemporaries and intimates. I always say that Walter is handsome. Perhaps he is not really handsome; certainly he is interesting. He is very tall, very slim—blade-like. He has regular features and he has beautiful teeth. A quality in Walter's face always delights me; something gay, something—not so much mischievous as Puckish. As a young boy, he was extremely shy. That shyness disappeared, of course, with maturity; but even as a young man he was quiet and reticent. He had a charming sense of humor—quiet and reticent too and—well, I'll go back to that word—Puckish! Yes, Walter is handsome.

He Said That Tony Grew Pretty Violent in His Threats.

As Molly looked different, Walter looked different. But his air showed a sternness—almost an austerity.

"Sit down children!" I ordered. "What can I offer you at this hour of the morning?"

"Coffee!" Molly answered promptly. "Your just famous coffee, Aunt Mary. Loads of it!"

I rang the bell. Sarah appeared. "Tell Bessie to make a big potful of coffee. And serve it in here!"

"I'm glad you've come, Molly," Patrick began at once. "And you too, Walter. When I got to your place last night, Molly, your mother said that you'd gone home with one of the girls. She'd forgotten which one, so she couldn't get in touch with you. And your people, Walter, didn't even know that you'd been in Satul. I told them that you'd spent one night at least in Mrs. Avery's Little House. That O. K.?"

"Yes," Walter replied without any hesitation. "I spent two nights there." After a pause he volunteered, "Thursday and Friday night. My apologies, Aunt Mary. I'm sure you understand."

"I do!" I answered.

Patrick made no comment on this by-play.

"But why," Walter went on in an inquiring voice, "did you want to see me?" "And why," Molly echoed in an indifferent one, "did you want to see me?"

"To get you—" Patrick was beginning.

A blade of intuition cut through me. "Oh you haven't heard!" I wailed.

"Haven't heard what?" they both questioned.

"Oh Molly," I took it up, "Molly darling, we've got something frightful to tell you!"

Molly's face turned to marble. "My mother!" she whispered.

"Not your mother!" I said swiftly. "Ace!"

"Ace?" Molly questioned. "He's dead?" She answered herself instantly. "Ace is dead!" Molly said this in a kind of solemn question, a kind of solemn statement. She stared at me.

I could not speak. I bowed my head.

"Ace . . . dead . . ." Molly repeated. "Ace . . . dead! Why how could Ace die? Ace was so full of life. Tell me what it is, Aunt Mary! He didn't kill himself! Tell me everything! Tell me!"

She had arisen from her chair as she pleaded, came speeding like a blown flower, across the piazza to me. As swiftly, Walter followed her. He put his arm about her.

"He was murdered!" I could say it in no fuller phrase, or in fewer words.

"Murdered!" Molly screamed it. Walter pulled in a long hissing breath. His wide eyes, still on my face, he drew Molly close. She dropped her head to his shoulder; deadened her hysterics there.

Patrick swung in. "The body was found in Mrs. Avery's Spinney yesterday afternoon. He had been stabbed to death with the sword he wore at the masquerade. Doctor Geary says he died about midnight."

"My God!" Walter said in a stupefied tone.

"As long as you're here, Walter," Patrick went on steadily, "I want to ask you a few questions. Perhaps Molly'd like to lie down for a while."

Walter led her to a couch. He seated himself beside her. Molly's handkerchief went up to her face. She began to shake but in silence; no sobs came. Walter's arm went about her.

"I must warn you both first," Patrick said, "that anything you say now can be used later in evidence against you."

Walter looked with a fierce worry down into Molly's face. Molly looked with a tigerish wariness up into his.

"Ask us anything you want!" they said in unison.

"You went to the masquerade, Walter," Patrick began, "in a knight's costume—armor—coat-of-mail—or whatever you call it?"

"Yes."

"What time did you get to the party?"

"Oh a little after ten, I should say."

"Did you dress in the Little House, Walter?"

"Yes."

"What time did you go to the Little House Friday night?"

"It was Saturday morning by the time I got there," Walter answered. "That is to say almost Saturday morning. It was just before sunrise."

Patrick made no comment on this.

"Was Molly at the party when you got here?"

"Yes."

"Did you dance with her often?"

"About a half dozen times."

"What time did you leave?"

"A little after eleven perhaps."

"Before the unmasking?"

"Yes."

"Did you go alone?"

"No."

"Who was with you?"

"Molly."

Patrick turned to Molly. "That you two left the party some time after eleven?"

"Yes."

"What time did you get to the Stow house, Molly?"

"A little after ten."

"You left with Walter?"

"Yes."

"What did you do when you left the house?"

"We got into my runabout and drove about."

"Where did you drive?"

"Satul, Marshland, Marshland Beach, Hanesbury, Hanesbury Beach and what have you."

Patrick turned his attention to Walter. "How long, Walter, would you say you were driving?"

"Well, we left the party—for the sake of easy arithmetic—let us say eleven. I was back in the Little House about five. That would make it six hours."

"Were you with him all that time, Molly?"

"Yes."

"Did you see Ace Blaikie at the party, Walter?"

"Yes."

"Did you speak with him?"

"No."

"Did you dance with Ace, Molly?"

"Yes—twice."

"Did you speak to him?"

"Not as Ace Blaikie. We talked as the characters we represented. He called me Ice Empress."

Patrick continued, "After you stopped riding around, Walter, where did you take Molly?"

"To the Marden house!"

"What road did you take?"

"Round to the beach and over the Head."

"In what room did you sleep in the Marden house, Molly?"

"I slept in the room with Caro Trenton—a big chamber at the front with two beds."

"Did you wake her when you came in?"

"No. She was awake. She had just got in herself."

"Didn't she ask you where you'd been?"

"She didn't ask me, but I told her that I had been riding all night with Walter."

"Now—" Patrick's air became brisk—"we left you, Walter, at the Marden house. Tell me what you did there?"

"I walked straight down to the Little House. I cut across Cat Park and got onto the path just back of Mrs. Avery's house and continued on to the Little House."

"Took off your armor, first; I suppose," Patrick suggested.

"Yes. I had already taken off the cape and helmet and hood when I got into the runabout and put on a sweater. But I took the rest of it off then and went to sleep on the couch."

DR. JAMES W. BARTON
Talks About

Getting Rid of Fat

IT IS hard for some of our overweight friends to understand why fat can cause any harm to the body. To them it is simply a layer of fat lying under the skin which gives the body a nice roundness instead of having bony parts stand out too prominently.

Dr. Barton

What they forget is that all the fat is not deposited under the skin or even around the organs—kidneys, heart and others—but some fat is actually deposited right within the cells of an organ—not between the cells—and so interferes with the action of the organ.

Now it is not hard to understand that if fat tissue—which does no work—gets into the cell substance it is bound to interfere with the work of the cell.

So if overweights want to keep young in appearance and feeling they would be wise to cut down gradually on their food intake, because every overweight can get rid of some weight (fat and water) if he or she has the will power to cut down on certain kinds of food—fats, starches, and liquids.

It isn't easy to cut down on fat building foods because they are the foods usually liked most. Also it is discouraging to cut down on foods for a week or two and not see much reduction (if any) in weight.

This falling to greatly reduce weight after "starving" themselves one or two weeks has confused and discouraged many overweights who have faithfully followed the reducing diet prescribed by their physician. However, "careful studies have established that water may be retained to an extent that will keep the body weight constant or at the same level when the individual has cut down his food intake by as much as one-third to one-half for as long as sixteen days."

The Water Balance

Weight, day by day, will give no sign that reduction is being accomplished. This is because what is called the water balance must be established. At the end of the sixteen day period the individual may suddenly lose sufficient water to reduce his weight by the amount expected as judged by the amount of food eaten. This instead of losing 10 to 15 pounds each week—the normal rate of loss—there is no loss for sixteen days and then 5 to 7 pounds is lost within a few hours.

Others will cut down on all kinds of foods, fail to eat enough meat or eggs to sustain their strength, and will feel so weak in a few days that they give up the reducing diet in despair.

There are others who would like to try "short cuts" to reduce weight—dinitrophenol, thyroid extract, pituitary extract—which if not taken under proper supervision, often bring misery and ill health. The proper method is to be examined by the family physician and if pronounced "fit" to undergo the diet outlined, then follow it faithfully, reporting at regular intervals to the physician.

The thought then is that when the overweight has difficulty working alone, finds it hard to "attack" to the reduced diet, feels very weak at times, going to a spa or similar institution and seeing others courageously fighting their battle may give him or her the needed courage to fight their battle also. Because it is a battle.

Foods That Cause Distress

One of the points one suffering from indigestion must remember is that because a food disagrees with him it doesn't mean that it is not a good food. There is nothing wrong with the food but there is something wrong with the individual in that his digestive apparatus is unable to handle that particular food very well and yet may handle well another food that is actually harder or takes longer to digest.

Dr. Albert H. Rowe, San Francisco, in Southern Medical Journal reports an analysis of 2,000 students at University of California, and also his results in private patients during a period of fifteen years.

Of 270 patients showing stomach and intestine disturbances due to certain foods, 30 per cent were male and 70 per cent female. Of this 270 cases, 232, more than 85 per cent, had food dislikes or disagreements, 80 per cent had stomach disturbances, 60 per cent had pain or soreness and 43 per cent had constipation.

To find out what foods are causing the disturbances may take months or even years and much patience on the part of the physician and the patient. By gradually leaving out these disturbing foods, and getting the patient free from symptoms, the foods known to be the cause are gradually eaten again in very small amounts so that the patient develops a tolerance (ability to eat them without disturbance) for them.

Offers New Opportunities

THE modern woman who sews is really an enviable person. She has at her finger-tips an endless array of fashions from which to choose for her own and her daughters' wardrobes. Today's trio affords her new opportunities in several size ranges; in fact, there's something here for the mature figure, size 42, right on down to the tiny tot who just manages to fill an "age 4."

Pattern 1987—This diminutive frock is for Miss Four-to-Twelve. Its easy lines, flaring skirt, and pretty sleeves are perhaps second only to its thru-the-machine-aptness, so far as the woman who sews is concerned. But this is all too obvious to mention. Better cut this pattern twice for all round practical reasons—its intriguing-in-fauna-winner in gingham and linen. It comes in sizes 4, 6, 8, 10, and 12 years. Size 6 requires 1 1/2 yards of 39 inch material plus 3/4 yard contrasting material for pocket.

Pattern 1211—It is a smart frock like this that will turn the most immune young lady into an ardent seamstress almost overnight. And rightly so, for it's plain to see how becoming are its princess lines, how flattering the wide shoulders and slim waist, yes, and how spicy the swing skirt. A pretty and colorful motif can be had in the use of velvet for the buttons and belt. Monotone broadcloth, black or royal blue, with the collar and cuffs of white linen, is a startlingly chic material for this model. It is available in sizes 12 to 20 (30 to 40 bust). Size 14 requires 2 3/4 yards of 54 inch fabric plus 3/4 yard of 39 inch contrasting.

Pattern 1210—Which would you have, Madam, an artistic smock or a glamorous house coat? This pattern allows you to make this interesting choice and it has what you'll need to make either of the models illustrated here. The house coat has become woman-kind's most desired "at home" attire; so rather than be among the minority, why not turn your talents to this princess model—you'll have it complete in a mere few hours and think of the countless days it will stand you in good stead as a really good looking wardrobe asset. It is designed in sizes 14 to 20 (32 to 42 bust). Size 16 (in full length) requires 5 1/2 yards of 39 inch material plus 3/4 yards of bias piping and 1/4 yard contrasting material for pocket.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1020, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

HOW OFTEN CAN YOU
KISS AND MAKE UP?

NEW husbands can understand why a wife should turn from a pleasant companion into a shrew for one whole week in every month.

You can say "I'm sorry" and kiss and make up easier before marriage than after. Marriage, if you want to hold your husband, you won't be a three-quarter wife.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and go "Smiling Through."

Lincoln Forest Notes

Capitan, N. M. — So far this winter we have had about 40 inches of snow and considerable rain on the lower parts of the White Mountains and probably more on the upper parts.

This should be welcome news to the residents of this section at this time of the year.

Of course the spring and summer rains are all important in producing grass and cutting down the fire hazard, however, it is decidedly important that we have plenty of moisture in the deeper layers of the soil. This deep soil moisture comes from winter snows. The main advantages of a heavy winter snow then are the increased flow of the streams originating in the White Mountains which means a purer, healthier water supply for most of the people in this section.

It also means that there will be better fishing and additional beauty to attract summer visitors.

Last but not least it should mean that the chances for a heavy fire season will be cut down considerable which after all is well worth a little disagreeable weather for two or three months of the winter.

FLOID GIBBONS FAMOUS HEADLINE HUNTER ADVENTURERS CLUB

Everybody "Fog, Rain—and Death"

WHAT I have to tell you," says Edward Wagness of New York city, "is a story of FEAR. It belongs to the United States navy, and for 12 hours, strong men were trying to laugh off their quaking knees and the wild-eyed apprehension that something was going to happen to them. That something WAS going to happen, was what everybody believed and nobody admitted. The trouble was that no one had any idea of WHEN it was going to happen. But on with the story!"

And with that introduction, Ed Wagness goes into one of the most astounding tales of what men's imaginations can do to them, that I have ever heard in all my life. To get the whole yarn, right from the beginning, we've got to follow the career of a battleship—the S. S. Charleston. Ed says she was built at Newport News, Va., in 1905 and commissioned for duty in the Atlantic fleet. In 1906 she was ordered to the West coast as flagship of the Pacific fleet, and in December of that year she made the trip around the Horn. But before leaving for the West she put into New York harbor for provisions and liberty for the crew.

That was a big laugh for the crew. Imagine a foggy, rainy day in Magdalena bay, they chuckled. Why there hadn't been a drop of rain there since time began. They put the old woman down for another crackpot, and forgot about it. That is, they did until May, 1908. The Charleston took up her duties in the Pacific. She was in Magdalena bay in October, 1907, then returned to San Diego, Calif. She was back in Magdalena bay in the spring again, for target practice. "April blossomed into May," says Ed, "and we were still there. The sky was still a perfect blue, and there wasn't a cloud in the sky. The prophecy had been forgotten—well, almost forgotten. But some of the more superstitious on board did remember, and on the night of May 7 we all turned into our hammocks wondering.

"The eighth of May dawned, COLD, FOGGY and RAINING—unheard of since no one knew when. But we told ourselves it was only a coincidence. How could anything happen to us besides, the tramp steamer hadn't shown up yet. On the surface all was serene. Men laughed and joked as they went about their work. But many an anxious eye was cast toward the mouth of the harbor. AND THEN IT HAPPENED!"

About three o'clock that afternoon the men on the Charleston could make out, through the fog, the general outlines of a tramp steamer entering the harbor. Ed says that, along about that time, many a ruddy complexion took on the general hue of a bag of flour. It began to look as if the little old woman knew what she was talking about. No merchant ships ever entered that harbor. It was too dangerous, what with battleships firing big guns all over the place. But there she was, moving straight toward the Charleston, and the Charleston's frantic signaling could get no response from her, whatever.

Waiting for Something to Happen. Says Ed: "She steamed past us and anchored about 500 yards off our starboard side. She refused to give us her name or call letter, and all we could get from her was that she had lost a propeller blade and had dropped into ship another. No tramp as miserable as she was ever carries a spare blade, and we know it, but nevertheless, over the side went a diver.

"Through the fog we could distinguish nothing but outlines as we tried to watch his movements, but we imagined more and more as the day wore on and a dark night began to settle down. We were served a hearty supper, but our appetites weren't any too keen. Rumors ran riot, imaginations started to do their stuff, and that empty feeling began to find its way into the pits of our stomachs. The smiles were gone from the faces of strong men. Inaction was killing as by torture. If they were going to strike, for God's sake let them do it now. Do something—do anything! But do it!"

Awake All Night—for Nothing. The bugler sounded lights out and hammocks—but there were dog-gone few men who rolled into their hammocks that night. "They sat around in little groups and wondered," says Ed, "and anyone walking around the deck could see little piles of life belts placed here and there by some god or bunch of gods who weren't taking any chances. Even the commissioned officers kept pretty close to their preservers. Men talked and speculated. What was the idea anyway? Who'd want to destroy the Charleston? And so the night wore on. The night wore on—and NOTHING HAPPENED! "Just before daylight," says Ed, "we heard the tramp holding anchor. Soon she was steaming past us on her way out to sea. And then, after heaving sighs of relief, the entire crew fell to and cursed that rusty old tub as only strong, healthy sailors can curse."

Paper-Making The center around which paper making spins is the paper-making machine, says a writer in the Scientific American. It is a gigantic combination of intricate mechanisms which takes in raw stock at one end and spins forth paper at the other. A full-sized machine approaches 300 feet in length, weighs nearly a million pounds and costs in the neighborhood of a half million dollars. Because it is a grouping of machinery, one might say that there is a hazard every foot of the length. There are some fifty individual motors, about twenty-five pumps, thousands of feet of pipe and many miles of wire. Every unit must coordinate perfectly to deliver a product that is satisfactory.

The Clock Was Ticking That dress maketh the man was holed long ago. Tittian, the famed Italian painter of the sixteenth century, walked home in his working clothes one day, but returning immediately to the street again, in his court costume of purple velvet, every person he met bowed and did him homage. Disgraced, Tittian, back in his studio, threw the clock on the floor, exclaiming, "Then, then, art, Tittian; so much for drapery!"

MONTAGUE Makes "The Parting Guests" the Subject of This Lively Essay

"I Kinda Liked Him and I Could See From the Nice Way He Had of Smilin' That He Hadn't No Fault to Find With Me."

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE YOU'D been surprised, Mrs. Applegarth, you would so. A person sees all sorts of things runnin' a roomin' house, an' I had my share of sights I guess, but never nothing like this. An' I can't say as I'd like to go through it again, though it did get me shut of them racketeer fellers without there bein' any shootin'. Only I can't say that it wasn't worse than shootin' while it was goin' on. "This feller came in late one night an' said he wanted the best in the house an' had the money to pay for it, so I give him the big room with the double doors an' he paid a week in advance. He had the expressman carry in a couple of big boxes, not trunks exactly but boxes with iron bands all around them, 'an' heavy from the way the expressman puffed and huffed when he was carryin' 'em upstairs. He said I needn't have Ophelia come into the room, as he didn't know when he'd be sleepin' or wakin', so I just give him the key, thinkin' I'd seen the last of him, for most of the lodgers go an' come without sayin' nothin' to me except to give me a stall about the room rent now an' then. "I seen him now an' then on the stairs while he was comin' or goin' an' he always give me a polite good mornin' an' I give it back to him. I kinda like 'em when they're sociable; it's sort of fun to know what their business is and how they're gettin' on in it, but I ain't pushin' an' I don't put no ear into what's none of my business. Still I kinda liked him, an' I could see from the nice way he had of smilin' that he hadn't no faults to find with me.

"It was the third day after he come that the other feller come. He was dressed awful smart for a feller that rooms, an' he was terribly flip with his conversation an' I could smell liquor on him. But the two upstairs rooms was vacant, an' he took 'em both, an' paid a week's rent down just like the other had done. So I didn't ask no questions.

"Well, it wasn't morn' the next day before fellers begin comin' up to see him—sleek dressed chaps that talked kinda like actors in plays, the kind that is in rough shows. Every night I could hear 'em through the cellin', an' every once in a while they'd get into a row an' call each other names, an' say my boarder was holdin' out on them, an' the next thing he knew he'd be makin' big ones out of little one's or takin' a ride. An' he'd talk back an' say that if it wasn't for him they'd all be up the river an' they might land there yet if they didn't lay off of him an' let him run the racket so they'd all be wearin' sparklers.

"Him an' the first feller met on the stairs once or twice, an' the second feller give the first feller a close look, an' when he come down he asked me who he was, an' how long he'd been there. "He ain't a dick in his hat," he says. "I never ask gentlemen what their names or their business is as long as they pay their rent." I says, "an' I don't expect anybody else to."

"That's the dope, Granma," he says, an' before I could put him in his place he was walkin' down the front steps. In a minute or two here comes the first feller, smilin' an' polite as usual. "You got a nice place here, Mrs. Judkins," he says, but them boys in them rooms upstairs don't sound good to me. I got the idea they're a bunch of racketeers from what comes down through the cracks in the cellin'.

"Them cracks in the cellin' don't hurt you none," I says. "You can't get one of them tasseled callings with what you're payin'!" "I didn't mean to be flip," he says, "only if I was you I'd keep an eye on them boys. It looks to me as if they'd be followed in here some day by a lot of cops, an' it wouldn't be so good if you was to get your place into the crime news. However, it ain't none of my business, an' he walked off. I was pretty mad, but at that he'd set me thinkin' in. I didn't like them fellers so much myself, but they was good pay, an' anyway how was I to get 'em out? "I wondered on that a lot more the next night, for some strangers come in to see 'em, an' after a lot of shoutin' an' swearin' a gun went off, an' by an' by I heard 'em carryin' somethin' down the stairs, somethin' heavy from the way they tromped. Two of 'em come back two hours afterward, and there was a lot of low talkin' which I could hear plain for I'd gone up the stairs an' was just outside their door. I was worse scared from what I heard, for it was pretty plain that somebody had been hurt a good deal, an' the other fellers wasn't so sure the cops wouldn't be after 'em. You can imagine what I was thinkin'. My place might be raided, an' maybe I'd be accused of running one of them hide-outs for yeggs, an' then where would my business be to say nothin' of my reputation. "I went to bed an' thought and thought, but it didn't get me nowhere, so by an' by when I heard my first roomer feller comin' in I slipped into my dress an' went down to the landin'.

"Listen, Mister," I says, "I got somethin' to say to you." "Wrong man," he says. "I got still a week paid up on the rent." "It ain't that," I says, "but them fellers up-stairs. They're racketeers or somethin' like that, an' I want to git 'em out of here or the police will be around, an' then I can never rent a room again."

STAR DUST Movie-Radio

By VIRGINIA VALE THERE was a rather funny reaction to an interview that Edward G. Robinson gave a reporter for an Italian newspaper some time ago. He praised the work of Frank Capra, the director, who is Italian by birth, saying that Capra refused to direct gangster films. He remarked that he thought it was because Capra did not want to make pictures which showed his own people in a bad light. When the storm burst it hit, not Capra, but Robinson. Seems the Italians thought gangsters were something like senators—an American institution of which Americans were proud!

The long discussion over which actress would play the mother role in "Stella Dallas" has been settled at last. It goes to Barbara Stanwyck, who seems a bit young for it, but of course there's always make-up. And anyway, the part is to be rewritten to fit her.

At the moment the "Gone With the Wind" pursuit of a heroine is still ragging, but no doubt that will be settled in the same way—some attractive, dependable actress whose screen work is known to the public everywhere will get it.

Phil Baker, who has long been one of radio's favorite comedians, has learned a lot from what has happened to other men like him when they consented to make a picture. And he is profiting by what he has learned. He knows that, when the picture is released, the comedian's part may have been cut and cut until there is practically nothing left of it.

Both Samuel Goldwyn and Paramount want him to do his 'speckly' pictures, but he had held off, even to the extent of refusing $12,000 to do his stuff.

The very funny Ritz Brothers, who can be relied upon to send movie audiences into gales of laughter, encountered something that was not so very funny, to them, when they had to learn to skate for "One in a Million," the Sonja Henie picture that's all about skating, with Miss Henie doing five big numbers. The brothers simply could not learn to skate. They couldn't even stand up on skates. Finally the difficulty was solved by having special skates made for them.

Speaking of romantic stories, even the movies can't beat the one of Wallace Ford's long search for his mother and his finding her just before Christmas. It's about 35 years since she had to put him in an English orphanage, and Ford found her living in an automobile trailer, and the wife of a blind match seller. Now he is going to do all the things for her that he has planned during the long years when he was trying to find her.

Probably nobody will ever be able to explain why certain radio programs succeed, any more than motion picture producers can tell why some pictures smash box-office records and others that seem just as good flop terribly.

There is a delightful radio program that has been going well for considerably more than a year. It's called "Dot and Will." And so far no sponsor has bought it. Yet the company has actual proof that thousands of people listen to it.

Apparently a lot of old stories are to be re-made during 1937. "Ben Hur" is up for discussion, maybe with both Clark Gable and Robert Taylor in it. There was a time when, if three featured players were in a picture, it was advertised as having an all-star cast. Now the producing companies put several of their biggest stars into one picture and just take it as a matter of course, as do the audiences.

Clark Gable take it as a matter of course, as do the audiences.

Olds and Ends... Hollywood is still regretting the death of Irene Fenwick. Lionel Barrymore's wife; Moore was an exceptionally happy marriage, and Miss Fenwick was very popular... Now that Rene Davis is back at work they are working her so hard that she barely has a chance to breathe, so make up for the time lost when she was battling with the company... "After This Man" is just as funny as "The Thin Man" was, so don't miss it... And you'll surely want to see "Blinded Enemy" with Mimi Gibson and Brian Aherne... And "The Girl From Paris"... They look like did a bit of a wonder... "Garden of Allah" may appear in remakes of some of Greta Garbo's old pictures.

CONSTIPATION Unrelenting Enemy of Health

DOANS REGULETS

"HOW are your bowels?" The doctor asks this important question because a primary need of good health is for the bowels to regularly pass off the waste of metabolism. Every doctor knows you cannot be well, feel well or look well if you allow constipation to hinder daily evacuation and thus prevent body cleanliness. You should know! Why let a bad condition continue? Try Doan's Regulets. They are mild and effective; act as a digestive and hepatic stimulant, increase the flow of bile and relieve temporary constipation of the intestines. Be regular with Regulets. CHEESE DISHES ALWAYS POPULAR

Expert Supplies Some of Her Favorite Recipes.

By EDITH M. BARBER

THERE are so many delicious cheese dishes that it is difficult for me to select my favorite recipes. Perhaps first on my list should be toasted cheese, which is so easy to make and which is such a good luncheon dish. Possibly I like it best, because it is an old family recipe. Next comes old-fashioned rarebit, made as it should be with beer, and then comes that other rarebit sometimes called blushing bunny. Cheese soufflé must also be included, and there certainly must be a cheese sauce. A reader of this column has asked that I reprint the recipe for the old favorite, cheese cake, so that should complete the list.

Toasted Cheese.

- ½ pound American cheese.
- 1 teaspoon salt.
- ½ teaspoon mustard.
- Paprika.
- 1 egg.
- ½ to 1 cup milk.

Cut the cheese into small pieces. Place in a greased pan, sprinkle with mixed seasonings. Beat the egg in slightly and add one-half cup milk; add enough more milk to cover. Put pan in another pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven about thirty minutes, until cheese is brown.

Old-Fashioned Rarebit.

- 1 pound American cheese.
- 1 tablespoon butter.
- 2 teaspoons salt.
- 2 teaspoons dry mustard.
- 1 teaspoon paprika.
- ½ bottle beer.

Shred cheese with a fork. Melt butter, stir in seasoning, add cheese and stir over low fire until melted. Stir in beer gradually and cook, stirring over fire until the mixture is smooth. Pour at once over hot toast. A dash of cayenne pepper may be added if desired.

Cheese Soufflé.

- 1 cup milk.
- 3 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca.
- 1 teaspoon salt.
- Few grains cayenne.
- Few grains mustard.
- 1 cup grated cheese.
- 3 eggs.

Scald milk in double boiler, add tapioca and cook fifteen minutes, stirring frequently. Add seasonings and cheese and stir until melted. Remove from heat and cool. Stir in egg yolks beaten until light. Add salt to egg whites, beat until stiff and fold lightly into the cheese mixture. Turn into greased baking dish, set in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit) for thirty-five to forty minutes.

Cheese Sauce.

- 2 tablespoons flour.
- 1 tablespoon butter.
- ½ teaspoon salt.
- Pepper.
- 1 cup milk.
- 1 cup soft cheese, pressed through a strainer, or ¾ cup grated hard cheese.

Melt butter, stir in flour and seasonings. Stir in milk slowly and stir until thick and smooth. Add cheese and stir until melted.

Tomato-Rarebit.

- 1 pound soft cheese.
- Paprika, pepper.
- ½ teaspoon salt.
- ½ teaspoon mustard.
- 1½ to 2 cups tomato soup.

Cut the cheese in small pieces, add mixed seasoning and cook over a low fire until melted. Add enough tomato soup to thin the mixture so that it may be poured on slices of toast.

Cheese Cake.

- 1 package zwieback.
- 2 tablespoons butter.
- 2 tablespoons sugar.
- 1 cup sugar.
- 2 tablespoons flour.
- ½ teaspoon salt.
- 5½ cakes cream cheese.
- 1 teaspoon vanilla.
- 4 eggs.
- 1 cup cream.

Roll zwieback into crumbs, add butter and two tablespoons sugar and cream together, blend thoroughly and put into nine-inch spring form mold and press down evenly on the bottom.

Mix the cup of sugar with flour, and salt and cream well with cheese and mix again. Add vanilla and beaten egg yolks and cream and whip again. Fold in beaten egg whites and bake in a moderate oven, 325 degrees Fahrenheit, for about an hour or until center is set. © Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

Seagling Game Room

The play spirit should be encouraged in both adults and children. What better way is there of doing it than converting an attic or basement to this gay purpose. The materials necessary are wallboard for partitions, some paint and some imagination. If you have a yen for ocean travel, paint the walls blue and paint the wainscoting to suggest the white rails and life-preservers of a deck. Use deck chairs for furniture.

The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

THE homemaker can, by simple devices, save her furniture and furnishings from getting marred and at the same time protect paint and wall paper in her rooms. Also in similar ways she can guard against breakage, and entanglements of door fastenings that are annoying rather than disastrous. For example door stops can be made to do more than prevent doors from hitting the wall; and lengths of chain can be put to unusual uses of protection against accidents.

Door stops can keep furniture from rubbing against a wall back of it. The stops may be screwed into the base board, or into the furniture itself, in some instances. The stops should be positioned where the rubber tips will strike the base board or panelling of the wall, and not where they will come in contact with plastered walls or wall paper.

Protection
When there is a chest with a lid that must be raised often, and which would scrape the wall back of it each time it was opened or shut, the wall can easily be safeguarded. Screw two door stops into the base-board behind the chest to keep it just far enough away from the wall to allow space for the lid to open and shut freely, without touching wall or woodwork. The edge of the chest lid also is not marred when this is done, so the door stops do double duty in protective ways.

Before leaving the subject of door stops, let me suggest their use as legs for low footstools. These can be made at home. Cover a small strong wooden box with a piece of carpet, or make a needle-point cover of cross stitch. Pad the top of the box slightly before fastening on the cover. Screw four door stops to under side of box, and a smart and neat foot stool results. The wood of the stops can be stained any tone of wood to match furniture in the room.

When a china closet door swings open it sometimes catches in another door fastening. This annoying occurrence can be avoided by securing a length of small-link chain with screw eyes to door and frame of closet. Occasionally such a door, swinging wide, would strike a ceiling light globe unless held in check by such a device. The chain should always be long enough to permit doors to open as wide as possible without danger of damage. © Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

The Chain Keeps the Glass Door From Hitting and Breaking the Light Globe.

Mild Weather Is Best for Pruning

Latter Part of the Dormant Season Is Advised for Peach Trees.

By Prof. A. J. Farley, Extension Horticulturist, New Jersey College of Agriculture.—WNU Service.

Although far-sighted fruit growers will take advantage of mild weather to prune their trees, it is sometimes advisable to wait until the latter part of the dormant season to prune peaches.

Pruning under favorable weather conditions is not only more comfortable than during extremely cold periods, but it is also more economical as a worker can do more pruning in a day. Furthermore, an early start in pruning operations is some insurance that the entire orchard will be pruned and the brush removed before it is time to start spraying or cultivating.

It is suggested that apples be pruned first and peaches toward the end of the dormant season, since there is more danger of winter killing of peach buds than apple buds. Many fruit growers prefer to wait until some of the most severe winter weather is over before pruning their bearing peach trees.

This practice makes it possible to consider the amount of bud killing when cutting back or thinning out branches on which there are fruit buds. For example, fruit bud injury may be quite severe throughout the lower portion of the trees and light enough in the tops to insure at least a partial crop if the trees are not cut back too hard. Bud injury may also be more severe on some varieties than on others, thereby making some modification of the pruning practice desirable.

In general, however, the commercial fruit grower finds it necessary to start pruning early in the dormant season and to continue during the entire winter in order to complete the work in time to be ready for the early spring spraying operations.

Stolen Horse Saying Is Applied to Oats Yields

The parable of the farmer who waited until his horse was stolen before locking the barn applies today in the loss of soil through erosion.

At the Guthrie, Okla., experiment station of the Soil Conservation service two equal-sized fields, one eroded and the other virgin grass land, were sown to oats. The virgin land yielded more than 40 bushels to the acre while the soil-washed field produced 11 bushels. Losing oats, a prime horse feed, is in a way equivalent to losing horses. The difference of 29 bushels is enough for the usual work horse ration for more than 100 days.

The eroded land had been in cultivation about 30 years, and continued cropping accounts for some of the difference in yield. But erosion was largely to blame for the wasting of the fertility of the field. If oats were selling at 40 cents a bushel, the difference in returns from the two one-acre fields would amount to $11.00. Furthermore, the cost of terracing badly eroded land on the Guthrie project was more than three times as great as on newly broken land. These facts, according to the Soil Conservation service, show it pays to start saving soil on newly cleared land rather than wait until washing waters have carried away most of the good soil which had developed through the years.

Grain Ration for Jerseys

A good winter grain ration for Jersey cows depends upon the amount of milk produced and the quality of the hay fed. Under ordinary conditions, states an expert at the North Carolina State college, each cow should receive six-tenths of one pound of grain for each pound of milk produced in excess of ten pounds. This means that a cow giving 20 pounds of milk would receive six pounds of grain a day. This feeding is based on the supposition that the cow is getting about three pounds of silage for each 100 pounds of weight and all the legume hay she will eat. Where the hay is of poor quality, more grain will be required.

Co-ops Make Color Film

A color film featuring oranges and lemons, avocados, other fruits and dairy products, and automatic refrigeration has been released by the California Fruit Growers Exchange in co-operation with five manufacturers whose products are non-competitive. The film is educational, says the Country Home Magazine, but is intended to boost the sale of all of the products. When a farm co-op becomes strong enough, it can afford to co-operate with big private corporations instead of fighting them.

Skunks Useful

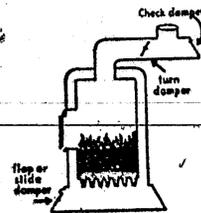

A farmer says: "The skunk is a shy animal and does no harm. I live on a farm and never have I been annoyed by skunks. Farmers claim they're destructive, but from my experience with them they're not. Occasionally they may destroy some personal property. I have had them under my barns and hen houses and I'm seldom bothered with rats. The skunks kill snakes, eat snake eggs, dig up cutworms, moles, mice and rats."

Home Heating Hints

By John Barclay Heating Expert

IT'S easy to regulate a furnace fire to meet the requirements of daily temperature changes. All you need to do is to understand the functioning of the check and ashpit dampers.

Check Damper—a flap-like damper, which should be located in the chimney pipe between the turn damper and the chimney. When it's open, it slows up the burning speed of the fire; closed, it quickens the speed.

Ashpit Damper—located below the grates and controls the amount of air supplied to the fire.

To produce the best results, these dampers should work together—when one is open the other should be closed, and vice versa. In mild weather, when a slow, lasting fire is needed, the check damper should be wide open and the ashpit damper closed. When more heat is needed, the check damper should be partly closed, the ashpit damper partly open. For extremely cold weather, the check damper should be closed tight, the ashpit damper wide open.

The proper use of these two dampers insures the proper degree of heat at all times on a minimum amount of fuel.

DON'T RUB YOUR EYES

Rubbing your eyes grinds invisible particles of dust and dirt into the delicate tissues, making the irritation just that much worse. A much better way, as thousands have discovered, is to use a little Murine in each eye—right and morning. Murine may be depended on to relieve eye irritation because it is a reliable eye preparation containing active ingredients known to be in caring for the eyes. In use for 40 years. Ask for Murine at your drug store.

Sore Throat Pains DUE TO COLDS Eased Instantly

1. Crush and stir 3 Bayer Aspirin tablets in ½ glass of water.

2. GARGLE thoroughly—throw your head way back, allowing the mixture to trickle down your throat.

3. Repeat gargle and do not rinse mouth, allow gargle to remain on membranes of the throat for prolonged effect.

Just Gargle This Way with Bayer Aspirin

Here is the most amazing way to ease the pains of rawness of sore throat resulting from a cold we know you have ever tried.

Crush and dissolve three genuine BAYER ASPIRIN tablets in one-third glass of water. Then gargle with this mixture twice, holding your head well back.

This medicinal gargle will act almost like a local anesthetic on the sore, irritated membrane of your throat. Pain eases almost instantly; rawness is relieved.

Countless thousands now use this way to ease sore throat. Your doctor, we are sure, will approve it. And you will say it is marvelous. Get the real BAYER ASPIRIN at your druggist's by asking for it by its full name—not by the name "aspirin" alone.
