Tom Jennings lived in Des Moines, Iowa, and had made a business trip to Davenport which would have taken him a week to close up. After two days, he received a wire from home that one of the children was ill and his wife said, "come on the next train." The next train was scheduled for 2 o'clock a. m., so Tom made ready to take it. On applying for a ticket, he was informed that that train carried no passengers. He waited up for the train and showed the telegram to the conductor, but was refused passage. After begging the conductor and again being refused, he said, "I am going on this train." When it started up, he silently stole to the step of the blind-baggage car and made the first station. He followed up that act at every stop and as the train would stop, he would creep off into the shadows, stay there until it started up and sneak back to his seat. So successful was he in that act that he arrived in Des Moines and found his wife waiting for him. Just then, the conductor came along and recognizing the man, he asked, "aren't you the fellow I met in Davenport, and how did you get here?" Tom answered, "I came in just one car ahead of you." Tom went home with Mrs. Jennings and found the baby out of danger.

It happened in Detroit, Mich., that Dr. Anthony Heesler spent $300.00 to have his car, as he was assured, completely burglar proof. He had it fixed with sirens which would sound in rehearsal. If a window was broken, a locked door forced open, or the ignition tampered with, the sirens would scream. So secure was everything, as he thought, that he left a pocketbook in the letter box containing $500.00. But during the night, thieves cunningly cut the delicate wires, unlocked the door, took out the money and when the good doctor came for his car in the morning, he found it locked as he had left it the night before, but he thought it strange that in unlocking it, the sirens failed to sound. In the letter box he found a note which read, "we needed the money, but we left you the car—better luck next time."

At Charlotte, N. C., a local oil company had an office safe which weighed 500 pounds. Thieves broke into the office and worked nearly all night to get it loaded on a truck and got away with it. The next day, police found the safe about 30 miles out in the woods, where they had blown it open. To their surprise the safe contained the handsome sum of 15 cents. On top of the safe was the change with a note which said, "take your 15 cents and go to hell with it."

She possessed a lovely disposition and one that made for her many friends—among her classmates and also with the people at large.

Funeral services were held at the local Baptist Church with Mr. Ashby Roselle conducting the same, after which the remains were shipped to Albuquerque, accompanied by her parents and several neighborhood families of White Oaks, among whom were the Fultmers and Van Schoycks. Hugh Bunch Victim of Misfortune

Last Friday at Ramon, Deputy Sheriff Hugh Bunch suffered the misfortune of having all of his household goods totally ruined. The residence is situated between two small lakes, and the valley surrounded by foothills. Shortly after the noon hour, there was a cloudburst which filled the valley, overflowed the lakes and swamped the residence. Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy were occupying the house when the flood came with such suddenness that they barely had time to escape, and with no time left to save their belongings.

All the household furniture was ruined, and when the water receded so that the house could be entered, they found tables, chairs and everything turned topsy-turvy. The $1200 piano was found in the center of the room, where it had been turned, bounced and rested bottom-side up.

While we sympathize with Hugh, the fact remains nevertheless, that queer things will happen in the desert. Nothing may be expected."

Thomas J. Straley

Carrizozo	Won	Lost

The latest slug of old man winter and flood waters having subsided in the Carrizozo area by last Saturday afternoon, Manager Sanchez thrust a blood-curdling challenge at the Alamogordo Black Sox, to come over Sunday and dare 'carve a notch in Carrizozo's winning streak. The challenge was accepted right off the bat and Skipper Ben and his menagerie of ball tossers retired to their hide-outs that night imploring Jupiter Pluvius for a bright, sunshiny Sabbath Day. Their pleadings were headed and old man Sol peeped over Carrizo mountain early Sunday morning, accompanied by a light gale; but by game time, it had dwindled to occasional refreshing summer breezes.

After waiting on the grounds until a few minutes before game time, players and fans alike, became uneasy and began to crane their necks over the grandstand in all directions of the universe. Suddenly, a dark, heavy cloud appeared in the horizon and the now distraught fans were ready to make for cover, thinking it was the forerunner of another water spout—but someone with a keen eye and nerve of steel soothed them down to a standstill by doing the Paul Revere act and informing them that it was the Alamo Black Sox (face, garb and all) and not the dreaded cloud of despair.

The first Liza up for the darkies' almost wrecked Carrizozo's playhouse by hitting for the circuit every time he went to bat; although three times the ball went into the fence and ground rules entitled him to two bases. Had they been straight drives, the Rodso committee would have a job on hand repairing the chutes back of centerfield and Carrizozo would have number one under the LOST column.

But anyway, we beat them by one score, 18 to 12, and that one was as good as a million. Lucas and Huffmyer divided pitching honors, while young Chavez and Chambers tolled behind the plate. The team as a whole shared batting honors, while the fielding game go to Garrison and Tony Perea, the latter being presented with a new glove by Manager Sanchez as a graduation gift.

"Mocho" Gutierrez was tried out on second base and this lad, although inexperienced in that important position, gave a good account of himself. Umpires: Halie Salasie, plate; Harry Miller, bases. Scorer: Meyer Barnett. Sandy Martin was here this week from Alamo and said that he had assumed the management of the Sox and sure were going to give us a setback when we came there. We'll either go there Sunday or go to Roswell. The boys are practicing hard and girding their loins for a game with the Tucumcari Utes at Tucumcari on June 20, and afterwards with the Popular Dry Goods team of El Paso.

Eighth Grade Exercises

Of the Carrizozo Schools were given at the Hi-School Auditorium Wednesday evening to one of the largest audiences attending a program of that nature for years past.

There were 19 graduates and everyone on the program performed his or her part in excellent manner. The program under the direction of the teacher, Phil Bright, while rather lengthy, consumed but shortly over one hour, so well drilled and amply qualified was the arrangement. We wish it were possible to give each one who took part in the program personal mention, but space forbids, therefore, from a collective standpoint, on the whole, the event was decidedly successful. Dr. C. E. Freeman, Secretary of the Municipal School Board, presented the diplomas.

The Glee Club, composed of pupils from the 7th and 8th grades, under the efficient direction of Miss Marie Cole, contributed to the success of the event. Miss Cole distinguished herself as a director, and the blending of the voices proved her excellent leadership.

The Eighth Grade was presented with a Silver Loving Cup for attaining the highest points of any like grade in the county on Activity Day. Mr. Bright was the recipient of some nice gifts from the class, to which he graciously responded with an expression of thanks.

A heavy of beautiful flowers adorned the stage above the footlights and the teacher and class join in thanking the donors for such expressions of interest.

The Club extended an invitation to the County Commissioners as its guests at the next regular meeting, Wednesday June 9. There were no visitors.

Mrs. E. T. Lucas arrived here last night from Kansas City for a visit with the home folks, the A. L. Burke family.

Mrs. Joseph B. Vega, who was confined to her home the past week with a bad cold of the flu, is now up and around.

Memorial Service at White Oaks

A short memorial service was held at the Cedars cemetery at White Oaks Sunday. A scholarly and very appropriate address was made by J. E. Hall of Carrizozo, and a Carrizozo quartet composed of Misses Lemon and Hall, Miss Jane and A. N. Spencer sang "In the Garden." Scripture readings, songs and readings by Miss Barbara Smith and Miss Joyce Welch made up the program. A flower was dropped on each grave by flower girls—Mrs. Lillian Lane.

Mrs. W. T. Lumpkins was here from Capitan Tuesday and spoke about selling her dairy ranch near that place which had been advertised in The Outlook. The sale was made to Gilbert Peters of Nogal.

Mrs. Bertha Fox and nephew Bill Church left the latter part of last week for their home in Illinois, Mo., after a pleasant visit with Mr. and Mrs. Louis Adams.

The latest siege of old man winter and flood waters having subsided in the Carrizozo area by last Saturday afternoon, Manager Sanchez thrust a blood-curdling challenge at the Alamogordo Black Sox, to come over Sunday and dare carry a notch in Carrizozo's winning streak. The challenge was accepted right off the bat and Skipper Ben and his managerie of ball tossers retired to their hide-outs that night imploring Jupiter Pluvius for a bright, sunshiny Sabbath Day. Their pleadings were heeded and old man Sol peeped over Carrizo mountain early Sunday morning, accompanied by a light gale; but by game time, it had dwindled to occasional refreshing summer breezes.

After waiting on the grounds until a few minutes before game time, players and fans alike, became uneasy and began to crane their necks over the grandstand in all directions of the universe. Suddenly, a dark, heavy cloud appeared in the horizon and the now distraught fans were ready to make for cover, thinking it was the forerunner of another water spout—but someone with a keen eye and nerve of steel soothed them down to a standstill by doing the Paul Revere act and informing them that it was the Alamo Black Sox (face, garb and all) and not the dreaded cloud of despair.

The first Lisa up for the darkies almost wrecked Carrizozo's playhouse by hitting for the circuit every time he went to bat; although three times the ball went into the fence and ground rules entitled him to two bases. Had they been straight drives, the Rodeo committee would have a job on hand repairing the chutes back of centerfield and Carrizozo would have number one under the LOST column.

But anyway, we beat them by one score, 13 to 12, and that one was as good as a million. Lucas and Huffmyer divided pitching honors, while young Chavez and Chambers tolled behind the plate. The team as a whole shared batting honors, while the fielding gems go to Garrison and Tony Perez, the latter being presented with a new glove by Manager Sanchez as a graduation gift.

"Macho" Gutierrez was tried out on second base and this lad, although inexperienced in that important position, gave a good account of himself. Umpire: Halle Relais; plate; Harry Miller, bases. Score: Mayer Barnett.

Sandy Martin was here this week from Alamo and said that he had assumed the management of the Sox and sure were going to give us a setback when we came there. We'll either go there Sunday or go to Roswell. The boys are practicing hard and giving their best for a game with the Tucumcari Dice at Tucumcari on June 20, and afterwards with the Popular Dry Goods team of El Paso.

Hugh Bradley Says

War Admiral, Jock Worked Out Perfect Getaway at Barrier

JUST a note to one of the old folks at home: Dear Red—Pop Kurtsinger's wildly thumping heart burst six bottles off his vest when his boy Charley came galloping down to the wire atop the winner. The beauty and chivalry of Kaintucky were so elated that they only jacked up prices 500 per cent for the frenzied who missed the first train out, but—

Well, Red, that's why an admiring friend who hasn't seen you for a long while is writing this letter. It was a swell Derby, that one so easily won by War Admiral, but there was something missing. That was you, Pop. All the while that little brown colt—really he's little only as compared to such big red giants as yourself—was shaking those four feet to make every post a winning one I kept whispering to myself. What I was saying was, "Gee, but I wish his old man could see him now."

Lots of other folks were saying the same thing, too, Red. You needn't think because you're stuck off in a green pasture a couple of counties away that besoot-to-goodness people have forgotten you. Ever since the race was run I've heard hundreds of them saying the same thing. "My, my," they've been saying, "he looked just like Man o' War, didn't he?" Actually they're a little wrong on that, though, Red, if they're speaking of mere outward appearance while the kid's standing in his stall. Maybe because of what I hear about the way you've been spending your last fifteen years you're sort of like the old woman in the shoe and get mixed up about the younger ones now and then—I'd better let you fight about him.

War Admiral, this kid of yours, has a nice easy stride, pretty close knit conformation and may be a trifle light in back. Carries his head like you but otherwise he takes after his mammy's family in looks. His mammy, you may have to be reminded, was a little mare named Brushup and her daddy was Sweep. Once out on the track, though, you can't miss him as a Man o' War. Walks up to the barrier just like you did, kind of proud and disdainful and wondering at the nerve of those other gee gees even thinking they could run along with him for money, marbles or the next peck of oats.

Just like you he's full of pep and vinegar at the barrier, too, but I wouldn't take too seriously those stories you may read about him being a bad actor there. Actually what happened there was that your kid and Pop Kurtsinger's boy, Charley, were giving the first evidence of that perfect teamwork which won them the race in the second best time in Derby history.

What Charley and your kid really were doing at the post when everybody thought they were cutting up was thinking and acting. They were wheeling in and out of their stall because they wanted to be on their toes when the break came. If they'd stood there nice and staidfooted maybe it would have looked nice in a book of manners but where would they have been when the wire went up? Probably still standing there, eh Red? Or maybe piked up over the fence in the infield.

So Charley and your kid were putting on the act. They figured that if they were a little tough looking up the starter'd make his move as soon as he got them in line for once. That's what happened and from then on it was just like as if you were doing it yourself, Red. Reckless, who's always a mite impatient at the start, maybe had a head lead for the first hundred yards. After that your kid was never in trouble.

Maybe Kurtsinger did go to bat on him once, turning into the straightaway, but it wasn't even necessary. Pompon, who looked like a much better horse than he did in the Wood Memorial, was challenging then, but even if this son of Pompon hadn't been carried wide it wouldn't have made much difference. Your kid only won by two lengths but he won well in hand and he could have made more.

Wasn't a good price, too, Red, even considering the field of twenty was one of the best ever to start in Kentucky. Maybe $2.00 winners seem like long shots to you with your record, but I to I's not possible.

NOT IN THE BOX SCORE:

STEVIE GULLINAN, possibly Princeton's best center in the past decade, has turned down a pretty offer to take Art Lane's place as coach of the Harvard Scrubs. No more aid for the Crimson on how to stop the Tiger attack—as last fall—for Lane graduates from Harvard Law and will take a job with a New York firm. Val Fitchell, Glide Dudley, Walter Shaner and Frank DeHoney, all of whom performed in baseball's big-time short seasons ago, are members of the Elizabeth branch of the Motion Picture Operators' union.

The Giants were not interested when Boston's Bees tried to peddle them First Baseman Buck Jordan, recently traded to the Reds. Manager Jimmy Wilson had a swell article called "Fixing the Phillies" in a recent issue of a sports magazine. Coach Fritz Crisler is reported as feeling the 1937 Princeton football team will be fuller of fight than any Tiger team since 1932. Leon Cadore, the Brooklyn pitcher who hurled 26 innings one day, now is associated with a Jamaica track bookie.

Names alike in sports: Jim Crowley, fight referee—Jim Crowley, Fordham football coach.

Lew Raymond, Washington welterweight—Lew Raymond, fight matchmaker.

Ben Johnson, prelin featherweight—Ben Johnson, Columbia sprinter.

Sandy MacDonald, Texas heavyweight—Sandy MacDonald, Duluth Herald sports.

Moon Mullins, Indiana featherweight—Moon Mullins, former Notre Dame football star now coach at Loyola university.

Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, high commissioner of baseball, once was a champion bicycle rider. When he was seventeen years old he had won so many cash prizes in races at Indiana county fairs that he decided to become a business man. Opened a skating rink and went broke.

Class in Kentucky Derby history—The smallest purse ever offered in this state was in 1875. The value to the winner then, the first year the race ever was run, was $2,850. In 1928 Mrs. John D. Herz received $55,375 when her Ralph Count came home in front. From 1875 to 1895 the race was at a mile and a half. In 1896 it was changed to the present mile and a quarter. Falsetto, defeated in the 1879 race by Lord Murphy, sired three winners of the Derby. They were Chant, in 1894; His Eminence, in 1901, and Sir Isaac, in 1906.

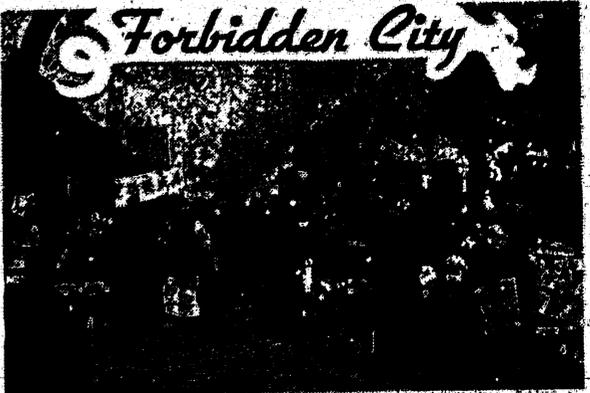

Grimm Is Happy Over Frey's Fine Showing

Charley-Grimm-gives-Cubs-dug-out visitors rave notices about Lonny Frey, the young shortstop obtained last fall when a new era dawned in the Brooklyn front office. The Chicago manager particularly likes Lonny's competitive spirit—which, no doubt, is news to the Dodgers' directors. Max Ulmer, who plays so well at left fullback for the Furriers Union Soccer club, is the brother of Ernest Ulmer, the famous film director—The poster advertising the International Amateur Boxing tournament at Milan, Italy, features the picture of a fighter whose tight are decorated with the flags of all the competing nations. The big blot on the poster at Stillman's gym is where the Nazi swastika used to be before Eric Seelig, barred from his native land, got through operating on it.

One of Casey Stengel's most prized possessions is a gold-headed cane. Got it from the University of Mississippi students as a reward for coaching their baseball teams for several weeks 20 springs or so ago—Calok Wergeler, the celebrated fight press agent, has numerous other claims to fame—but likes best to relate that he has bought 23 automobiles in 23 years—Stu Saks, who operates a driving range near New York, has a new waitress sure: Waits until his customers have driven 1,000 balls. Then goes out and picks up all the balls.

P. Jay Donohue usually is given credit for nicknaming the Giants. The name came into being in the summer of 1885, when Chicago and New York were fighting for the championship, and was meant as a tribute to starting playing dead rather than to the size of the players. The Pirates were so named in 1886 when—in an attempt to beat the inter-league rules of that day—the Athletics failed to protect properly their rights to Louis Bierbauer, star second baseman. This made Bierbauer a free agent, and he was quickly persuaded to sign with Pittsburgh. It was a perfectly regular procedure under the existing rules and served the Philadelphia club right. But at the time there was high excitement and such wide-spread acrimony that one Philadelphia writer referred to Pittsburgh's part in the transaction as "an act of piracy on the baseball seas."

The Pirates are such nice, quiet fellows that nobody wants to beat them—and nobody will unless National League managers stop this spell of sweetness and light and bear down on the Pittsburghers.

Peiping Merchants Bait Poles With Toys

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

WITHIN the Imperial City of Peiping, on the exact center of all, oriented to the cardinal points of the compass, is the Forbidden City, the Violet Town, which was the residence of the Dragon emperors. It is an inclosure a little longer than broad, and lies behind a wide moat and a double wall. The moat, in the summer time, is full of flowering lotus, and white cranes stalk thoughtfully among the rose-pink blooms.

Each corner of the wall has its tower, small, but very richly ornamented. There are four gates, one to each face of the wall, and their names are notable: East Gate Glorious; West Gate Glorious; Gate of Divine Military Progress, which is the Shen Wu Men, the North Gate, wherefrom in 1644 the last Ming emperor went sorrowfully to strangle himself on Coal Hill across the way, while the triumphant rebel soldiers were breaking into the Imperial City outside. Through it fled the Empress Dowager when the International Column battered down the southern gates in 1900. On the south is the Wu Men, the Meridian Gate, the great gate of ceremonies, not opened since the fall of the empire.

Only from Coal Hill immediately to the north, or from the White Dagoba in the Pei Hai to the northwest, can you bring the Forbidden City within the eye at once. From either height, you see the simple outline of its plan. Down the center line the great pavilions march one behind another, their roofs tiled with imperial yellow, since all this was of the throne.

They are audience halls, council halls devoted to this phase or that of ancestral veneration, and imperial living quarters. Smaller buildings lie along the wall to east and west; houses for the concubines and eunuchs, and space for stores. Each pavilion has its courtyard and its formal approach. The courtyards are threaded by little conventional moats with white marble balustrades; the terraces are balustraded, as are the ceremonial flights of steps.

In the north end are the pavilions and gardens that the Empress Dowager used. They are small and intimate, landscaped, shaded by cypress and cedar, and traversed by narrow walks among flower beds and fountains, for the old lady loved such things.

Decorations are colorful. Some of the buildings are used as museums, displaying much unusual treasure, although, at the time of the disturbances in 1922 and 1933, most of the exhibits were boxed and shipped south, to the great indignation of Peiping.

The Forbidden City displays the Chinese decorative scheme at its most extravagant and royal. It is done in reds and yellows and blues and greens, all most violent. A little money is spent on its upkeep, and perhaps the close-set walls save it from the grinding of the wind-blown dust that dulls the colors and the gliding of places in the open.

The proportions of the buildings are majestic without being vast, for the Chinese architect knew how to create his effects without relying on mere size. The clear sky and the brilliant sun enter into all conceptions; the secret of their excellence lies between the air and light and a just balance in line and mass.

Yet, as for size, there is a courtyard in the south section of the Forbidden City where, at a victory celebration in 1918, some 15,000 troops were arrayed, with a large number of civilian officials and spectators, and it is related that the courtyard seemed in no sense crowded.

What now is seen in these palaces and courts is a setting only, a stage from which the players have departed, with their bright robes, their banners, and their stately processions.

About the public buildings of Peiping, the shrines, the halls, the pavilions, and palaces, there are many books written. German and Russian and British savants have measured, dissected and surveyed. French scholars have breathed much life into the dry bones of architecture, dwelling with ardor, also, upon the pavilions of pleasure, and the marble-capped walls in which were fled, head downward, discarded favorites, male and female, of hot-toe-inmaculate sovereigns.

Many of the structures are jerry-built and flimsy. The Chinese lacquer with which the surfaces are faced is cheap stuff, prone to flake off before it attains age. The fine pavilions that arch the streets and define the approaches to important places are frail things which must be propped from every side while they are yet new. The stone, so intricately and beautifully carved, is soft and subject to quick erosion.

Many Lovely Things. Many of the most imposing edifices, such as the White Dagoba that dominates the Pei Hai, one of the "Three Seas," are of brick and rubble, surfaced with plaster which, unless renewed every season, sloughs away in patches. Distant views are impressive, and close inspection disappointing.

Yet there are many things that are beautiful with an ageless beauty: corners of the Forbidden City, as delicate and fine as jewel filigree; the elaborate and cunning ornamentation under the eaves of the pavilions; the porcelain screens and arches; the timeless splendor of the tiled roofs, that persists in spite of the weeds and shrubs which spring from accumulations of dust in the cracks between the tiles. The patterns and designs are frozen in convention, but trees and water, air and light, are integral parts of every arrangement.

After you have dutifully followed the guidebooks through a score of temples and palaces, your impressions will tend to telescope upon themselves. But there are two things that you will never forget: the Temple of Confucius and the Temple of Heaven.

The Temple of Confucius is in the North City (the northern section of the Tatar City), between the Lama Temple and the old Hall of Classics. You come to it through noisome alleys that swarm with scavenger dogs and naked children.

A passage leads under murmurous dragon cypresses, between ranks of tall memorial tablets commemorating the visits and the patronage of emperors and princes. The passage opens upon a low terrace from which you descend to the central court by marble steps that flank a spirit-stairway—Dragon eternally contending for the Pearl, between sculptured masses of sea and cloud.

From if you face the temple, looking along an avenue of ancient trees so thickly set that their interlaced branches cast a cool greenish gloom, very grateful in the summer time. Flanking it are low buildings that serve as storehouses and sleeping quarters for the priests.

The sun strikes through the trees and burns upon the old red walls of the pavilions, and the freshly painted patterns under the overhanging eaves glow richly in reflected light: turquoise blues and emerald greens, purples, and reds, and yellows. There are small golden roofed kiosks, and sacrificial burners of a bronze no longer cast. The noises of the city do not enter here.

A gentle, courteous old priest with hairless, ascetic face materializes from the shadows to attend you; he is unobtrusive and detached in robes of gray and black. There is no statue in the shrine: it is the Eight Places of an Index. Tablets, richly engraved, hang above the altar, publishing the virtues of the Sage, and the gray ash of joss sticks in the incense burner testifies to the devotion of many worshippers.

The thing is wholly of the spirit. You need know nothing of Confucius, nothing of China, to realize that here is peace made visible; here is tranquility; here are a balance and a symmetry removed from striving; the conception of minds that have, after mature thought, settled their problems.

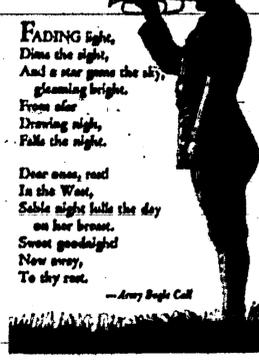

The Temple of Heaven

Very different is the Temple of Heaven, out to the south in the Chinese City. It stands most fiercely in the sun, its walls enclosing a park larger than the Forbidden City. You go up from the highway along a broad avenue, mounting by a ramp to the center of a terraced line of pavilions. To the north is the round Hall of the Happy Year, its brilliant blue tiles and triple-roofed silhouette one of the distinctive things on the Peiping skyline.

Turning your back upon it, you walk south, through open pavilions and successive archways, to a stark altar of white carved marble; approached between winged columns. The altar consists of three round terraces, set one upon another, the top one smallest. The steps that ascend to it are in groups of nine, the mystical number; and the flagstones of the pavement are laid in concentric patterns in multiples of nine. And the roof of that altar is the vault of heaven.

Here the Emperor came to offer the Great Sacrifice on the day of the winter solstice, to render his Imperial Ancestors an account of his stewardship, and to solicit their guidance for his people through the succeeding year.

Selective Service Law

Brought Out 24 Million

THE first selective service or draft law of the World war was passed May 18, 1917. It applied to all men of the ages of twenty-one to thirty, inclusive, and was later amended to provide for two supplementary drafts (June 5, 1918, and August 24, 1918) in addition to the original draft of June 5, 1917. By a still later enactment in August, 1918, notes the Indianapolis News, the draft ages were extended to include eighteen to forty-five years, and the first registration thereunder, held on September 12, 1918, produced about 13,000 registrants.

The first registration, June 5, 1917, brought out nearly 10,000,000 young men, the second, on June 5, 1918, brought 744,865, and the third August 24, 1918, 187,943—a total of nearly 24,000,000 Americans of military age.

The administration of the law was in the hands of the war department, under the supervision of the President, and with the assistance of local draft boards, with appeal boards for each congressional district.

The President issued his first instructions to the exemption boards July 2, 1917, and the first men drafted were called to service September 5, 1917. The order in which the registrants were to be called to determine their availability for military service was settled by a drawing of numbers at Washington, in the senate office building, on July 20. Quotas were apportioned to each of the states and territories and the District of Columbia.

SYNOPSIS

Jack Hammond, gold prospector, returns to Prince Rupert after a spree in Seattle and learns that a gold rush is starting as a result of some careless remarks he had dropped at a party concerning a gold discovery. He finds that his partner, McKenzie Joe Britton, has gone on north to protect their claims. Enraged, Hammond decides to tell the would-be prospectors how to reach the new gold fields. Around the World Annie, a frontier dance hall proprietor, has assembled a troupe of girls and is bent on starting a dance hall at the new camp. Jack raises about $500. The girl in Seattle whom he loves and to whom he confided the secret of his gold strike. Going to his lawyer's office, he passes a young girl on the stairs. Jack asks Bartlow the lawyer about the girl and learns that she is a volunteer. Jack tells her about his gold strike. A mutual acquaintance had brought them together. Kay was dumbly at first, but when she saw some of his gold nuggets they set along beautifully. He had met her mother and a friend of the family, Bruce Kennis, a geologist. Sergeant Terry of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police joins the gold-seekers on their trip north. Jack encounters the girl, Jeanne Towers, and she asks him to lead her a team of dogs and supplies. He suggests that she go back home, but she says she can't. He lets her borrow the team and supplies. The next day she trek to the new bonanza begins.

Hammond fell in beside her. For a moment, there was little sound save the quick breathing of dogs, the slide of toboggans and the cluff of snowshoes, punctuated by quick tapping noises as mushers hit their webs on the rising step with light clubs, to free them from chinook-sticky snow. The shouting and excited conversation long ago had passed. This was gruelling effort.

lead here and hold it! When you hit the shore line, go into camp!"

"Ay!" came the answer. Olson, with his elongated webs, strode out of line, rounded those in front of him, then began to plod again. Hammond once more moved swiftly toward the rear, only to return more quickly. At last he reached the side of the leader and strode beside him, starting back into the snow.

"Somebody's missing," he told Olson. "Will you find 'em. If I'm not back by morning, hold camp and start out a gang to look for me."

Then down the line he went again, finally to drop behind. No one noticed him; all eyes were straining straight ahead. Hammond moved swiftly on the back trail.

It was deep dusk before he picked up a clear trail. He shouted and went on. Again, after a period of search, he called, and for a third and fourth time. He thought he heard a faint answer.

He began to run, as swiftly as his sticky snowshoes would permit. In the distance, a faint, gray smudge appeared. He shouted anew and went forward. At last they faced each other. Jeanne Towers tried to cover her weariness with a smile, meanwhile wiping the welcome, cold moisture of a fur-gloved hand across her forehead.

"There Ain't Nothin' Crazier'n a Bunch o' Bushed Placer Miners."

"Am I lost?" she asked, with an attempt at cheerfulness.

"You were." Relief at finding her had brought a certain reflex. "Why did you drop out?"

"That trace broke again. I suppose I worked on it longer than I thought. Then, when I was through, I couldn't see anybody. And noises seemed to come from all directions."

Hammond scowled, but not at her. "I knew damned well that shepherd husky would never make a lead dog."

The girl laughed weakly. "I'm glad I'm not the only one to blame."

Reaction had passed for Hammond; he was only glad he had found her.

"A good lead dog would have been able to pick up the trail." Suddenly he said, "Too tired to go on?"

"Can we reach camp?"

"We'll have to make our own camp." He looked about him, in the lowering dusk. One chance was as good as another—memory told him that they had been working for some time to the left. Certainly, shore could not be so far away.

"We haven't much to kick about. Everything in the world to eat on that toboggan and there's a sleeping bag for you."

to her next self-appointed task, the digging under old drifts or to windward for dry bits of pitch wood, for unmoistened cones and a handful of brittle spruce needles, meanwhile sweeping near-by surroundings with appraising glances. In that she told Jack Hammond much of woodsmanship; he knew that she was searching for a birch tree and its inflammable bark, but there was none.

The spruce needles crackled into a feeble blaze as he fed them with a second match. Jeanne handed him a crushed bunch of fine dead twigs. Then he took the larger fuel from her, stick-by-stick, until the blaze leaped high. At last he straightened and looked down at her.

"You're pretty game, aren't you?" he asked.

It seemed to electrify her. An almost tomboyish expression came into her eyes. She laughed, her white, even teeth gleaming in the firelight.

"Honestly, am I?" she queried. There was a wish in her voice—for him to tell her again. But she added quickly, "I hope I can cook something that's fit to eat."

It was. With the dogs snarling over their fish and mush, the man and woman sat beside the campfire long after the meal was finished.

At last, Jack unrolled her sleeping bag and bedded it down with a canvas windbreak. They said good-night. Hammond went back to the fire.

He sat there a long time. Finally he rose, and moving toward her faintly outlined form, knelt there.

"Jeanne," he said quietly, "are you asleep?"

"No, Mr. Hammond."

"My name's Jack."

"Oh," came with an air of surprise.

"Listen," he cut in. "I've just thought of something funny. You're none of my business—"

"What I mean," he added hastily, "is that I'm not trying to butt in or ask questions. You understand that, don't you?"

"Yes—I've known that."

"Just the same," the man went on, "I've thought of something funny. Suppose, for instance, I lent you a little money—you know, to build a shack with. And then—" he added, stilling her exclamation—"suppose I did what I could to get things going for you. I've just been thinking that it really would be a whale of a joke on somebody, if you'd take this bunch of supplies you've been dragging through for me, and really start that grocery store."

Five minutes later, Jack Hammond turned away, with a hand at his throat.

"I didn't think she'd cry about it," he mumbled, once more back at the fire. He sat there a long time. Then at last he stretched, went over to the dogs, disturbed them with a moccasined foot, and rolled in with them. The sun shone the next morning. They were back at camp in an hour. The endless journey began anew.

Six days later, a struggling mass of humans slipped and slid across the hummocked ice of the Likken river. Hammond came along, passed Jeanne Towers, asked a cheery question, and went onward.

CHAPTER IV

His thick clothing smeared by frost and silt, Jack Hammond worked with pick and shovel at the bottom of a deep pit. He filled a moosehide bucket with boulders and stony soil and signaled to McKenzie Joe to raise and dump it. Joe obeyed, turning the rough handle of an equally crude windlass. He was a beaverlike man of huge shoulders and stocky frame; with a great effort he carried the bucket way and emptied it. Returning he called down:

"Hey, Jack. Ride the bucket up."

"Knocking off work early, aren't we?" Hammond queried, when he poked his head out of the crude shaft.

"Look," answered McKenzie Joe. With movement of his eyes he indicated the far-away camp.

It was a new trek from Fourcross. Men were shouting, and hurrying about, mushing their dogs to the first open space unoccupied by the tents of other gold seekers, and tearing at their toboggan loads as though they had only a matter of minutes in which to begin life in a new land. At this distance, they looked like so many black, two-legged ants, outlined against the white of the snow-covered Sapphire lake. McKenzie Joe took off his thick cap and rubbed heavy fingers through matted, gray hair.

"There ain't nothin' crazier'n a bunch of bushed placer miners," he said at last. "Let's clean out that pit and knock off work for the day."

"Sure," said Hammond. "Then go down to town and find out how to make a million."

He glanced toward the bed of the frozen Big Moose. Great fires burned there, dozens of them, where men, and the few women who had made the galling journey, worked at a dream of fortune. It was tough going now. The gravel must be thawed out. Water for panning must come by dog team from the community water hole, out through the four-foot thickness of lake ice.

AROUND the HOUSE

Items of Interest to the Housewife

Cooking Cauliflower—To prevent it breaking while cooking, wrap loosely in muslin.

Economic Ironing—When ironing—dispense with the ironing blanket and fold all the large things flat on the table, forming a "pad." On top of this I iron the small things, and when they are done, I find that the large things are quite nicely pressed.

Using Skim-Milk—Skim-milk is excellent for milk puddings, providing a dessertspoonful of finely-grated suet is added to replace the missing fat.

Better Bread—Home-made bread is lighter and keeps longer when mixed with skim-milk instead of water.

Making a Cushion—A useful flat cushion can be made from an old blanket. Fold it carefully to the size required, taking care that it is quite smooth and then secure the "layers" together with a few strong stitches. Slip it into a cover made from any pretty piece of material. These cushions are very useful when you want to make a chair higher, and are comfortable and firm to sit upon.

Maple Oatmeal Cookies—Two and a half cups fine oatmeal, one cup maple syrup, one quarter cup water, two and a half cups flour, one cup shortening, one teaspoon soda. Boil water and syrup together, add soda, then shortening. Cool slightly. Add to dry ingredients and allow the mixture to cool thoroughly before rolling out.

Ladders in the Hosiery—Place your silk stocking over a glass tumbler when repairing a ladder. The light shows up the cross-threads, which can then be picked up easily with a fine steel crochet hook.

Soft-Bolled Eggs—When soft-boiling eggs, put them in boiling water, boil for one minute and turn off flame, leaving eggs in the water for another four minutes. This prevents them from hardening and saves fuel.

Naming the Baby

RULES for euphony in naming the new baby:
If the surname has one syllable, avoid a one-syllable first name. Example: Montgomery Smith rather than John Smith. With a two-syllable last name, use either a one-syllable or three-syllable Christian name. John Hinton or Christopher Hinton rather than Frederick Hinton.

When the last name has three syllables, use either a one or two-syllable name. George Dougherty, but not Alexander Dougherty. Avoid overlapping consonants such as James Stephens.—Literary Digest.

KILL THOSE ANTS

Ants are hard to kill, but Peterman's Ant Food is made especially to get them and get them fast. Destroys red ants, black ants, others—kills young and eggs, too. Sprinkle along windows, doors, any place where ants come and go. Safe. Effective 24 hours a day. 25¢, 50¢ and 60¢ at your drugist's.

What SHE TOLD WORN-OUT HUSBAND

She could have reproached him for his fits of temper—his "all in" complaints. But why she saw in his frequent colds, his "faded out" "on edge" condition the very trouble she herself had whopped.

Very morning after talking with Mrs. (Nature's Remedy), she advised that she should feel like himself again—easily, peacefully, cheerfully, and the wife, dependable, all-vegetable, sensitive and corrective—works easily, cheerfully and naturally. It stimulates the digestive tract to complete, regular functioning. Non-habit-forming. Try a box tonight. 25¢ at drugists.

As to the Amendments

Petitions of all kinds are continually being circulated, first one thing and then for another. People have become so accustomed to being confronted by petitions that many sign them without questioning the importance of the contents. Ofttimes, they sign petitions to get rid of those circulating them, therefore, it has become an easy task to get such matter signed—but in the case of the Amendments it will not be as easy, if they are read.

As the condition now exists, we have no law for the absentee voter and one of the amendments is for the expressed purpose of providing a law that will insure the absentee voter with the right to cast his vote in a legitimate manner no matter where he might be at the time of the election.

Another is for the bond issue of $1,250,000 with which to erect and maintain needed educational and other state institutions of importance. That vast sum of money will provide the state's share of what will be required for those valuable projects.

It will mean spending of millions in the state for those new constructions and the employment of hundreds of workmen.

The opponents of the amendments say that the people should have over a year to study out the contents, when if the more intelligent will withhold their signatures from the petitions issued by the opposition to the amendments, they can plainly see that to allow the September election to proceed, it will be to the best interests of the people in general.

The people should have the right to decide on whether the amendments should pass or not pass—and all the people should have that right, not just 25 percent. The use of the referendum permits a minority of 25 percent to speak for all of us. That's hardly the purpose of the referendums.

The Constitutional way and the right way is to permit everybody to vote, and to vote at the time set—September 21.

To make certain of your right to vote on the amendments at the time set and thus make available the absentee ballot, funds for matching Federal funds, and to exercise your privilege of voting on the term of office amendments, do this:—
Read them carefully before you sign.

FAMOUS HEADLINE HUNTER FLOYD GIBBONS ADVENTURERS CLUB Everybody CLUB

"Spirit From the Stars" By FLOYD GIBBONS

"SPIRIT from the stars." That's the way Anna Nolan of Long Island City, N. Y., explains it. Anna thinks that the sign of Aquarius, under which she was born, gave her the courage to face the terrifying predicament she found herself in.

But adventure is in my line and I will go on record as saying that the one Anna Nolan had in August, 1914, in the town of Boyle, County Roscommon, Ireland, is a hair-raiser and no mistake.

August, 1914! That's a date that the world will long remember, for it was in the early days of that month—and in that year—that the World War got under way.

Neighbor Woman Fleeing From Her Cottage.

Anna's husband was already in the army. He was a warrant officer at the barracks not far away. Anna had rented a house in town—a house that sat well back from the street with a garden in front of it.

It was about eleven o'clock at night and Anna was sitting at her front window looking out on the garden. She had been there since early evening, just after she had tucked her children into bed.

The streets of Boyle were deserted by this time. There wasn't a soul in sight. But suddenly, the door of the cottage across the way flew open and a woman, clad only in a white nightgown, came running out.

Anna sat bolt upright in her chair. The woman was running as if for her life. She was barefooted and her long, black hair was hanging down her back.

Husband Wanted to Kill Her and Baby.

Anna knew the woman—knew that she had a new-born baby only two days old. Why was she running out of her house in the middle of the night like this?

"I pulled her inside," says Anna, "wrapped a cloak around her, and asked her what the trouble was. It seemed that her husband got leave to come home from the barracks on account of her illness, and had celebrated by getting very drunk.

There was no telephone in the house, and just about all the men in town were at the barracks. The poor woman was begging Anna to do something, and though Anna was just a slip of a girl weighing in the neighborhood of a hundred pounds, she was pretty indignant.

She opened the door and walked in. There stood the husband, in uniform, in the middle of the room. "He was staring into space and didn't take the slightest notice of us," Anna says.

Army Discipline Saved Them All.

For an instant the man stared at Anna, wild eyes ablaze, and then he said slowly, "I'll kill the two of you!" And right there, Anna began to wish she hadn't been so rash as to venture into this drink-crazed madman's house.

The man must have sensed that she was afraid of him. With a wicked leer, he took a step forward. But it was then that courage came to Anna's rescue.

Well, maybe the stars had something to do with it, but army discipline played its part too. The man closed his knife and turned toward the door.

Says she: "I had my husband see to it that he didn't have much time for visiting before going to France. And when he arrived at the front he was one of the first soldiers to be killed."

Pilgrims, Puritans Were Not Excessive in Dress

For reasons of conscience and economy, the Pilgrims and Puritans frowned on extravagance in dress.

According to a writer in the Indianapolis News, Massachusetts records show that each settler was provided with four pairs of shoes and stockings, two suits of doublet and hose, four shirts, one woolen suit (leather-lined) with extra breeches, two handkerchiefs, one cotton waistcoat, leather belt, black hat, three caps, a cloak and two pairs of gloves.

In 1634, laws passed by the Massachusetts general court forbade the use of silver and gold ornaments, lace, silk and ruffs. Young men who defied this law by wearing long hair and silk were arrested, and one Hannah Lyman, age sixteen, was haled into court for "wearing silk in a flaunting manner."

Before the arrival of the cavaliers in Virginia, the dress of southern colonists was not unlike that of the Puritan. As the colonists acquired wealth, they began to order wardrobes from London. In 1737 Col. John Lewis ordered for his coat "a nap ruffe and tucker, one pair white stays, eight pairs white kid gloves, two pairs colored kid gloves, two pairs worsted hose, three pairs thread hose, one pair silk shoes laced, one pair Morocco shoes, one hoop coat, one hat, four pairs Spanish shoes, two pairs calf shoes, one mask, one fan, one necktie, one girdle and buckle, one piece fashionable calico, four yards ribbon for knots, one and one-half yards cambric, one mantua and coat of white string."

Men among the earlier settlers wore their own hair, the cavaliers dressing theirs in elaborate styles, while the Puritans and Quakers wore their hair plain and long to the shoulders.

Ancients Knew Use of Plaster

Plaster for building purposes has been used for centuries. Its insulating and sanitary properties were developed by the ancients and its decorative possibilities furthered by the Greeks and Romans.

John of England recognized its fire-resistive qualities after the great London fire. Sanitary laws in many states require all habitable rooms to be lathed and plastered. It insulates against cold and drafts as well as heat. Other materials give much less in service for the comparative outlay.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson for May 30

THE REMAKING OF JACOB

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 28:10-22, 32:24-28.

GOLDEN TEXT—And he was not comforted in this world; but he was transformed by the renewing of his mind. Romans 12:2.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jacob's Great Discovery. JUNIOR TOPIC—What Changed Jacob. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Finding One's Better Self. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Face to Face With God.

Front Page News: "Well-Known Crook Converted!" After years of deception, thievery, and all kinds of wickedness, Jacob, "the supplanter," had a transforming experience of the grace and power of God and became Israel—a prince of God. That is indeed front-page news and the marvel of it all is that we may today proclaim the redemption of every one that believeth.

Memorial day is a most appropriate one for our lesson, for the first portion tells us of a memorial stone, and the last section tells of a great victory. We do well on this day to remember the days that are gone, to recall the heroic deeds of our valiant dead. It is right that we should honor them for victories rightly won and for a noble cause.

We consider today two experiences in the life of Jacob, both of which have their counterpart in the lives of many of God's children in our day.

I. A Vision and a Vow (Gen. 28:10-22).

Jacob met God. Have you met Him face to face? Have you had "such a revolutionary experience in some unexpected spot?" What a sacred place it has become in your life. Perhaps it was at mother's knee, or in a little crossroad's church, or on a busy city street. God was there—you dealt with him—he blessed your soul—life was changed. Such may be the experience of each one of us. The place where Jacob had this experience had been known only as Luz. Now it became Bethel—"the house of God."

Spiritual experiences are not simply for our pleasure; they carry a real responsibility. Jacob recognized this and set up a memorial and made a vow. The depth of his purpose is revealed by the fact that it touched his earthly possessions.

The pledge of one-tenth to God is in accord with the Old Testament principle of the tithe. Many earnest believers regard the tithe as equally obligatory in our day. Others contend that it is an Old Testament principle only. Well, there is no need to differ too sharply on that point, for it is not clear that as children of God all that we have belong to Him? Surely then we would not wish shamefacedly to admit that we give less than the Old Testament tithe. All that we have comes from His bountiful hand. He it is that gives "bread to eat and raiment to put on." Let us be cheerful (hilarious) givers of what he has entrusted to us, that his work on earth may be put forward.

II. A Struggle and a Victory (Gen. 32:24-30).

After varied experiences of both victory and defeat Jacob turns back to his own land. He hears of the approach of his brother Esau with 400 men. Before he meets him he spends a night alone. Whether it was in fear or in trust that he approached God on that night, we do not know. But we do read of the great struggle. It was more than a physical battle—real as that was—for here we have God wrestling with a weak and defeated, but proud man, seeking to bring him to the place where he will once for all "let go and let God" have his way with his life.

Into the night of struggle at Peniel have gone God's people in all the centuries, and to those who have submitted themselves to the mighty hand of God have come out as those that have "power with God and with men" (v. 28). Such an experience is the key to successful living and fruitful service for God. It is still true that "God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace unto the humble." (Jas. 4:6).

A Strong Arm

Give me the pure heart, O Lord, to feel Thy presence near me. Give me the clear mind that understands. Give me the stainless soul that shall return to Thee fearless when my time shall come. And give me the strong arm to defend, with all my heart, with all my mind, with all my soul, the glory of Thy kingdom.

Being Right

Do right and God's recompense to you will be the power to be made right.

Washington Digest National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart National Press Building Washington, D. C.

More Labor Troubles

Washington.—The nation is continuing to witness labor disturbances of an exceedingly serious character. Many persons thought when the big sit-down strikes in the automobile industry were settled without serious bloodshed that we were on the way out of labor trouble in this country. The feeling in this regard had some confirmation when the great United States Steel corporation reached an agreement by which John L. Lewis and his faction of organized labor was recognized as the sole bargaining agency on wages for the greatest single unit of steel.

Unhappily, those circumstances were not indicative of an end. They did not press peace between labor and employers. The conflict is continuing and, I believe, holds the elements of much more danger than we have yet experienced. Because of the conditions that are now apparent and those which happen to lie ahead, the recent speech by Edward McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, becomes both interesting and significant. Mr. McGrady, it will be remembered, made a speech at Atlantic City, New Jersey, in which he said boldly to the members of the garment workers union that if labor and capital both are to survive, there must be a sincere effort on the part of each group to understand the problems of the other. He reduced the differences between employer and employee to the simple formula, namely, that representatives of each side, if they expect to do justice by their own people, must sit down at a table and talk things over honestly.

Now, the Assistant Secretary's interest in labor cannot be questioned. He is a former official of organized labor. During his term as Assistant Secretary he has been exceedingly active and earnest in his attempts to solve labor problems and bring about industrial peace. His efforts at conciliation cover the range from the bitter maritime strike on the west coast to the more or less inconsequential sit-down strike of a hundred employees in a hotel here in Washington.

So, it seems thoroughly fair to assume that any advice given by Mr. McGrady must include absolute justice for the workers.

Mr. McGrady believes that the irresponsible practices which lead employers to treat labor representatives as agitators are due to ignorance. On the other hand, you cannot help reading between the lines of his recent speech an inference at least that he regards some labor representatives as quite as irresponsible as some employers. His view in this regard is indicated by the stress, the emphasis, which he laid upon the importance of discipline among union members together with his assertion that labor must recognize the sanctity of its contract with the employers just as much as the employers must recognize the validity of their contract with labor.

Mr. McGrady pointed out what losses result from shut-downs or strikes and declared that the efficiency in production, which the country has a right to expect from industry, cannot be achieved unless labor and capital work together.

Further, the Assistant Secretary observed that "responsible labor leadership" must place efficiency and elimination of waste and loss among its objectives if organized labor is to achieve a worthwhile goal.

See Ray of Hope

great masses of American citizens who are neither employers of labor nor members of labor unions. I have said in these columns before and I repeat that the tragedy of conflict between employer and employee, organized capital versus organized labor, lies in the fact that there are millions of people in the role of innocent bystanders. They are the individuals who suffer most. It is inevitable that they must suffer because in a nation whose commerce and industry is as complex as ours, every fine capital or labor abuses the powers entrusted into its hands, those who are not members of either group pay a penalty which is not possible of measurement.

This characteristic of life obtains not alone in the United States; it exists in every civilized country to the extent that that country is industrialized.

There is no better evidence of the truth of the statements I have just made than an incident which occurred a few days ago in the house of commons in London. Stanley Baldwin, prime minister of England, and one of the most powerful men among foreign statesmen today, called attention to "a dark cloud" which he saw on the economic horizon of time.

Mr. Baldwin was speaking to his colleagues in the house of commons regarding the nature of a victory because he is soon to retire from public office after three dec-

Pattern 1399

Grand, isn't it—that big, stunning initial adding that definitely personal touch to a chair-set of string! Select your initial from the alphabet that comes with the pattern, paste it in place on the chart, and crochet it right in with the design (it's as easy as that!). You can, of course, crochet the initials separately as insets on linens, too. Pattern 1399 contains charts and directions for making a chair back 12" by 15 inches, two arm rests 6 by 12 inches and a complete alphabet, the initials measuring 3 1/2 by 4 inches; material requirements; an illustration of all stitches used.

Stomach Gas So Bad Seems To Hurt Heart

The gas on my stomach was so bad I could not eat or sleep. Even my heart seemed to hurt. A friend suggested Adlerika. The first dose relieved me. Now I eat as I wish, sleep fine and never feel better.—Mrs. J. E. Miller.

Adlerika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels while ordinary laxatives act on the lower bowel only. Adlerika gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old, poisonous matter that you would not believe was in your system and that has been causing gas, pain, sour stomach, nervousness and headaches for months.

Dr. E. L. Shank, New York, reports: "I had been to intestinal cleaning. Adlerika greatly reduced bowels and colon health." Give your bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika and see how good you feel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and stubborn constipation. At all Leading Druggists.

Jaguar Throne at Chichen Itza Is Carefully Guarded

Spectacular Find in Ruined Mayan City

Washington. — Tourists who visit the ruined Mayan city of Chichen Itza in Yucatan are allowed to see—but not sit in—the polka-dotted red Jaguar throne recently discovered by archeologists.

The Carnegie institution of Washington, which conducted the excavations, calls this throne, and objects with it, "the most spectacular discovery of archeological specimens in original position ever made in the New World."

Mexican authorities, says the Carnegie institution, have wisely decided not to remove the throne from the place in the temple, exactly where Indian officials placed it centuries ago. A glass protects the throne, and lights have been installed so that the fresh colors and marbling face of the stone jaguar may be seen and appreciated.

Those, Not an Altar. The animal is painted red, with large apple-green spots of jade inlaid, and green jade eyes. Its flat back forms a throne seat, in the opinion of Dr. Sylvanus G. Morley of the Carnegie staff. Dr. Morley disagrees with the view that the jaguar was used as an altar.

The jaguar discovery was made in the famous temple called El Castillo, or the Castle, a ruined building perched on a lofty pyramid. Recent excavations have revealed that temple and pyramid were enlarged and built over by ambitious Indians.

Curtains of Light Used to Measure Projectile Speed

Ottawa, Can.—An artillery shell crashing through invisible curtains of light is the newest means of determining the speed of projectiles developed by scientists at the National Research Laboratories here. Particular merit of the system is its portability which enables it to be used in the field and bring added accuracy to computations of range in actual combat.

Light beams, mirrors, photoelectric cells and sensitive recording mechanism are the equipment which makes possible the new development of Dr. D. C. Rose, physicist in the division of physics and electrical engineering of the Canadian laboratories.

In effect the artillery shell passes down a narrow tunnel—every 50 feet intersects a beam of light falling on a photocell. Momentarily the shell blocks off the light beam and this decrease in light intensity cuts down the electrical output of the cell. By an amplifying system this electrical change produces a permanent record on photographic film.

Glass Fibers Are Being Developed for Many Uses

Neckties, Dresses, Drapes and Awnings

By WATSON DAVIS
GLASS is familiar as bottle or tumblers, window panes, and, more recently, as translucent building blocks. It is proverbially breakable and fragile.

At first thought glass would not be judged a serious competitor to the ordinary textiles. Yet one of the most promising new uses for glass is as a fiber.

Dresses, neckties and other novelties can be made of glass fiber. But the early large scale practical usage of glass textiles is foreseen in drapes for use in theaters, hotel tapestries, awnings that can not be hurt by carelessly flung cigarettes and other such applications where real non-inflammability is necessary.

Just now glass fibers are finding widest application as insulating material both against heat and on electric wires and as a filtering material. A mat of glass fibers such as used in house walls or refrigerators weighs a mere hundredth of the volume of solid glass, 1 1/2 instead of 150 pounds per cubic foot.

Can Be Tied in Knots. If drawn sufficiently fine glass becomes flexible and can even be tied in knots. And the strength needed to pull glass apart increases as the fiber diameter is reduced, so that while typical strength of glass rods is 20,000 pounds per square inch, commercially produced fibers have gone as high as 2,000,000. Fibers as fine as 0.00005 inch in diameter have been produced. Continuous filaments have been drawn without a break for 5,040 miles.

Color? The natural white suffices for most purposes now, but soon glass textiles, competing with cotton, wool and rayon, will emerge in all rainbow shades, with more permanency than we expect from other textiles.

For several centuries glass has been made into fiber for special purposes. The Germans made glass fiber commercially during the World War when blockades cut off supplies of asbestos.

Psychic Suicide Is Often Noted Among Primitive Peoples

Washington. — To bring on death by wishing to die is scientifically recognized as a possibility. Although the recent case of Mrs. Helen Wills Love, condemned murderess, might be a manifestation brought on by the shock of the trial and conviction, it is considered within the realm of possibility that she might commit suicide by this means.

Psychic suicide, the term given by psychiatry to such a voluntary death by wish, is said to be fairly common among primitive peoples. Reports vouched for by noted explorers and practicing physicians show that many such people, when they make up their minds to die, actually do fall ill and perish. The illness seldom lasts long; death soon follows. It is not preceded by a coma. Some ethnologists feel that fright may stop their hearts, or that they may use secret poison.

Two Cases in Civilization. Among civilized people having a much stronger attachment to life than do aborigines, deaths by will are very rare and may take months or years to accomplish. One case reported by Dr. A. A. Brill, New York psychiatrist, in an address on this subject before the American Association for the Advancement of Science, was of a woman who discovered that her husband was unfaithful to her. Although she told no one of her discovery, she lost interest in life and was sure she would die because no one loved or wanted her. For months she remained indifferent to efforts of her physician to help her. Then she died.

Undulant Fever Peril in Infected Horses

Indianapolis.—New sources of dangerous undulant fever has been discovered in horses, members of the Society of American Bacteriologists learned at their annual meeting here.

The cases of two children who developed serious undulant fever following contact with an infected horse, were presented by Drs. Charles M. Carpenter and Ruth A. Boak of the University of Rochester school of medicine and dentistry. These scientists and Dr. A. W. Deem of Ohio State University reported finding signs of undulant fever in horses.

Undulant fever, known also as Malta fever, infectious abortion of cattle, and, according to latest scientific terminology, brucellosis, is a serious, sometimes fatal malady characterized by the fact that the fever goes up and down in waves.

STAR DUST

Movie • Radio

WHENEVER a crowd of actors, producers, directors, and writers get together in Hollywood, the most exciting arguments take place over questions that can never really be settled. Just the other night in the Brown Derby restaurant a group got to discussing who is the most talked-of man in pictures just now and the arguments grew so vehement, an innocent bystander might suspect that a riot was being planned. Instead, it was just a general tossing of verbal bouquets.

Several people think Robert Montgomery is the man of the hour. He recently pepped up his somewhat-wilted career by jumping from roles of society playboys to that of the manic killer in "Night Must Fall." Other nominations for the man of the hour were David Selznick, because he produced "A Star Is Born," and Darryl Zanuck because he has made his pictures stand for a guarantee of hilarious entertainment.

Not since the days of the Tamadge sisters long ago, have film fans had the fun of watching sisters climb to fame as screen rivals. Now everyone is arguing about the respective talents of Olivia de Havilland and Joan Fontaine. They are sisters, you know. And although Olivia had a big start, appearing in four Warner Brothers pictures before Joan went to work at RKO, there are many who think that by this time next year, Joan will be well in the lead.

Olivia de Havilland

Mary Livingstone, who has played such a big part in the success of the Jack Benny radio programs, is thinking very seriously of taking part in a Paramount picture starring Buddy Rogers and Shirley Ross. It is a serious decision, because it entails having an operation on her nose and Mary does not like hospitals or other or knives or incision or even breathing through her mouth.

Innumerable fans have asked me if the impressive mansion and estate which Fredric March presents to Janet Gaynor in the course of the plot of "A Star Is Born" was especially built for the picture. Others think they recognize it as the house once occupied by Barbara Stanwyck, when she was married to Frank Fay. Neither theory is correct. The house belongs to a Los Angeles real estate dealer and was merely rented by the Selznick-International company for two days.

The enterprising young Grand National company certainly stole a march on the rest of the studios when they signed Stu Erwin to a starring contract. Since that time "Dance, Charlie, Dance" which he made for Warner Brothers has been previewed and Stu has landed right up in the thin ranks of top-notch comedians. He has finished his first picture for Grand National—it is called "Small Town Boy" and everyone says it is a knockout.

Ever since Myrna Loy finished "Patnell," she has been enjoying a lazy vacation at Ensenada, Mexico, where a gleaming, luxurious hotel shares scenic honors with the harbor which is said to be the most beautiful in the world—even more beautiful than the far-famed Bay of Naples. Her husband, Arthur Hornblow, got away from his duties at Paramount long enough to spend a week with her and was seized with the inspiration to write a picture set in the locale of Ensenada. Myrna hopes that she can stay on there while it is filmed but M-G-M have a crowded program ahead for her.

ODDS AND ENDS—A little boy working on the set of "Varsity Show" at Warner Brothers came down with measles, and the whole troupe headed by Dick Powell had to knock off work and watch for symptoms for two or three days. Errol Flynn brought two lion hounds back to Hollywood with him, the only ones of their breed in America, and now everyone is wondering what these sporting dogs will do for amusement, hunt at the Universal zoo? Jean Arthur just cannot fix her own hair, so when the studio hairdressers went out on strike, her director, Mitchell Leisen, arranged her locks for her, and very well too. Clark Gable and Carole Lombard went to a masquerade birthday party and took the honored guest a Sheldand pony as gift. © Western Newspaper Union.

T. C. Romero and Isabel Aldaz were here from Lincoln Sunday to witness the Carrizozo-Roswell ball game.

The fishing season started off with a 'bang' in the White Mountain area. It is estimated that there were 2000 to 2500 fishermen on the streams and Nogal Lake and the catch from 100 to 1500 fish with an average size of about 9 inches. Numerous fishermen caught their limits while others left without any. From all indications, fishing for the next week or ten days will be rather had due to the heavy use on the opening week-end. Bonito Creek in particular received heavy use. It was estimated that there were about 150 cars in this area on opening day. —G.J. Gray, Dist. Forest Ranger.

Miss Angelita Guller, daughter of Mrs. Isabelita Guller and Esperidion Farmer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Teodoro Farmer of this place, were united in marriage Monday, with Father Salvatore officiating.
