"Handwriting on the Wall"

Chief Justice Ulrich of Russia, who has sentenced hundreds of men to death, even to friends of his and also of Minister Stalin, has finally weakened and showed that at least to some extent, he has something resembling a conscience. Even Maria Ullvanova, sister to Lenin, the Patron Saint of the Bolsheviki, who begged for hours on her knees before Stalin to spare the life of Marshal Tukhachevsky, died mysteriously a few hours after her plea. Ulrich was regarded by Stalin as a man without fear and his power being next to that of the dictator, he became so intoxicated with it, that he was as cold-blooded as a saw-fish. He would sentence scores of men to the firing squad; then arise, drink, dance and make merry until the next batch were in line for the death sentence. But he has weakened under the strain. He cannot eat, sleep and all he does is to drink until he falls in a drunken fit. He sits at a table laden with choice liquors and with a loaded gun before him, passes his time in silence.

He is carefully guarded, but the sentinels are at a loss to know if he contemplates suicide or has the gun in readiness to protect himself against those who seek to kill him. He lives in extreme silence, not even wishing to see a member of his family. Watchers see him shudder from the ghosts of those whom he has sent to their deaths, most of whom were innocent, but for whom the dictator had a personal dislike. This is the system of government which the liberty-loving American people are asked to adopt in this country, but it will never come to pass until every drop of patriotic blood is spilled in defense of "God, Home and Native Land." Thus does punishment come to those who deny God and put to death not only those of their own race, but also the Jews, the chosen people of God.

We have an element in this country now striving to put into practice, the very things of which that benighted country is guilty. These people who never had a square meal before coming here, are now seeking to destroy our Constitution and the Supreme Court. We are not alarmists without a cause, but unless a curb is put on this dangerous movement, the country will soon be rocking on its foundation. As the able Senator Wheeler said to the President: "You must stop this court fight lest you be found to be fighting against God." If the court plan, as advocated by the President goes over, it will make him a dictator for a lifetime term, after which he will turn over the dictatorship to his beloved son, in whom he is so well pleased that on the day of his marriage into the DuPont family, he made him a present of a $10,000 a year job. "Take that in your pipe and smoke it," if you know what we mean!

Baseball

The Socorro Merchants called up Manager Sanchez by phone last Saturday afternoon at a late hour and informed him that their baseball team could not come over Sunday as scheduled, and on Tuesday of this week, he received a wire from Tucumcari to the effect that the Utes would not be here until a future date. Fandom and Diamond Dust are getting desperate and something must be done about it. If nothing else, we suggest a game between the Fats & Leans.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Sandoval were week-end visitors from the Kudner O—O Ranch.

M. G. Peckham returned Friday night from Kansas City, where he visited relatives for a short time.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Drake were business visitors from Ancho Monday.

We were pleased yesterday morning to receive a visit from one of our old friends and former residents, Charles Cree, who is now assistant to the Director of Public Health for this state. Charley was in California when Dr. Earp resigned as State Director and Dr. Godfrey was appointed to fill the vacancy. On accepting the appointment, he selected Charley, who had been his assistant in that state, to take up the work with him in New Mexico. Aside from being a qualified apothecary, Charley has made a profound study of the work in connection with the public health service. He is well known over the state and we congratulate Dr. Godfrey on retaining such a capable assistant as Mr. Cree.

BUSINESS MEN'S CLUB

There was a good representation at the weekly meeting Wednesday evening at the 6 o'clock dinner at the S. P. Hotel and after the business session, the Town-CCC orchestra entertained the club with a varied amount of musical selections which was greatly appreciated. The orchestra was invited to attend that session and responded in a pleasing manner. The club, in order to better appreciate the entertainment, gave the boys a rising vote of thanks. The members of the orchestra are as follows: Sat Chavez, violin and saxophone; Frank Vigil, piano; Herbert Dickinson, Educational Director of the Camp, banjo; Reuben Chavez, guitar. At the close of the meeting, little Deloris Peterson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peterson of the S. P. Hotel, passed the cigars to each member and guest, the same being donated by Mr. Peterson. In gracious response to the courtesies of the manager and more especially, to Miss Deloris, the club gave another rising vote of thanks. Much to the credit of manager Peterson, let us say that aside from all former managers since the retirement of the Sweet family, he has endeared himself to the club for his many acts of courtesy and this also goes for Mrs. Peterson and her lovely little daughter, Deloris.

Tuesday morning, a big school truck came in loaded with 22 persons, 31 of whom were boys of ages ranging from 17 to 19. The remaining two were their teacher and bus driver. The boys are from the Monroe, Utah, high school. They are students in the agricultural department and were on a tour over certain farming sections of Texas, Mexico, New Mexico and Colorado. They made a study of farm conditions to get new ideas if possible on things of importance in connection with that industry. They were a fine bunch of boys and will make good farmers, under their teacher, Mr. A. B. Smith.

The Western Auto Supply Co., a division of the Carrizozo Hardware Company, is making a cut price on Penn Supreme Oil and Western Auto Long Run oil this week. See their ad elsewhere in this issue of The Outlook. — And you'd better hurry and take advantage of this sale, because it won't last long.

That being the first meeting of the new officers, John W. Harkey resigned as Degree Master, and at his request, J. F. Tom was unanimously chosen to that important office.

The selection was a good one from the fact that Mr. Tom is thoroughly versed in degree work, and it goes without saying that the conferring of degrees will undergo a great change for the better. Mr. Tom selected Herman E. Kelt as his assistant. Next Tuesday night, the third degree will be conferred.

Hello Everybody!

"Streak of Death"
By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter

YOU know, boys and girls, about half of our battle to live is fought against ourselves and other people, and the other half is fought against Old Dame Nature. For every Bill Jones who got himself caught in a whirling piece of man-made machinery or had to fight for his life against some vicious or crazed fellow human, there is a Pete Smith, who finds himself in a jam with an earthquake, or a wild animal, or some other of Mother Nature's tools of destruction.

I wouldn't attempt to say which type of adventure is worse. I've got a hunch that one is just about as bad as the other. But there's something about Dame Nature's right hooks to the jaw that makes them more terrifying than the others. I guess that's because we don't understand Nature so well as we understand ourselves and the machines we create.

And here's the story of a boat with Nature, sent to me by Mrs. John J. Sproul, of Keyport, N. J. It's one of those things that might happen to anybody and everybody. And when it came along, it threw the whole Sproul family into a sudden, senseless panic.

Adventure came on the Sproul family in the dead of the night. They were all sleeping—Mother and Dad and the children. The Sprouls had four children then, but only three of them were at home. The other was away for the night. The evening had been cloudy and threatening. The sky had been black overhead when they had gone to bed. And now, suddenly, they were awakened out of a sound sleep by a series of loud, crashing reports.

This Was No Ordinary Storm, No, Sir!

The din was so terrific that the Sprouls jumped out of bed. It was a thunderstorm—but what a storm. The first sweeping patter of the rain quickly rose to a loud, drumming roar. The wind howled, and the thunder, punctuated by bright flashes of lightning, sounded like a battery of siege guns being fired right beside the house.

Few people pay much attention to a night thunderstorm. Some folks sleep right through them. Others get up and shut the windows to keep the floor from getting raised on. But this storm was so terrific that the Sprouls were alarmed. Every crashing bolt of lightning seemed to be striking right around the house. John Sproul was hardly out of bed—he was standing in the middle of the bedroom floor—when one of the little boys came running into the room.

John and the boy started for the stairs. As he did, he shouted back to Mrs. Sproul. "Get the other children," he cried, "and come downstairs as quick as you can. I'll light the lamp in the kitchen so you can see."

Mrs. Sproul Is Petrified With Fear.

John went down the stairs. Mrs. Sproul could hear him in the kitchen. She had started out of the room, headed down the hall toward the room in which her two other children were, when suddenly she heard a deafening clasp of thunder, louder than all the rest.

"I could feel the house shake and vibrate, and immediately I thought it must have been struck," she says. "There was a small light that came from the ceiling, and I stepped and stood still for a moment. The children were still in their beds and I had to get them. But right then I couldn't seem to move."

"I don't know how long I stood there, but it must have been for a long time, for presently it occurred to me that, since that last crash, I had not heard a sound from either my husband in the kitchen, or from my son who had followed him downstairs. And then, all of a sudden, I heard a voice coming from below."

Fear Lurked in the Blackness of Night.

Mrs. Sproul says that voice sounded as if it came from the dead. It was her little son downstairs with his father and he was calling very feebly, "Mamma—mamma—come here. Papa's dead!"

Ten seconds before, she had been still with fright and unable to move a muscle. But that sound shook her into activity. She ran through the hall and began groping her way down the stairs. The lower floor was in total darkness. She began calling hysterically to her boy—asking him where he was. At last he answered. "I'm here," he said. "By the high chair."

Feeling her way through the dark house, she moved toward the high chair. Thunder was still roaring outside and an occasional flash of lightning brightened up the room. At last she found her boy—lying on the floor. She picked him up, carried him into the dining room and asked him if he knew where his father was. "He's in the kitchen by the stove," the boy said. "I saw him fall down. I guess daddy has been killed."

She groped her way toward the kitchen. Her bare feet lit on something wet—then on shattered bits of broken glass. But she didn't even feel it in the stress of the moment. She didn't know until later that her husband had fallen with the lamp in his hand and that glass and oil were strewn all over the kitchen floor.

Storm Provides a Weird Tattoo.

She found her husband—lying still and still on the floor. She began screaming hysterically at the top of her voice. But at the same time she was tagging at John Sproul's still form, dragging it toward the dining room.

In a few minutes neighbors began clamoring at the door. They crowded in and a lamp was lighted. John Sproul wasn't dead, but he was badly burned by the lightning, and his clothes were charred and smoking. When they pulled his clothing from his body they found that the lightning had played a curious trick. Photographed on his back was a silvery spot the exact shape of a tree.

A doctor came, worked over him, and brought him back to consciousness. He said he couldn't understand how he had lived through the shock, and he was fascinated by that tree imprinted on John's back. He said he'd never forget it—but what Mrs. Sproul will never forget is that terrible night of storm and destruction.

Sunday Island

Sunday Island is one of the Isles of the Karadeniz. They were the landfall of the Maoris who came sailing over the Pacific to colonize New Zealand, and they have been known to the West ever since a British ship, the Lady Fenimore, found them in 1790. They were a part of the 1791 of D'Entrecasteaux, who named them after his captain, Jean Karadeniz.

First Really Democratic King

William IV was the first really democratic king to occupy the British throne. He was also the first British sovereign who knew New York at first hand. As a midshipman, he was in that city towards the end of the American War of Independence, and had a narrow escape from being kidnaped by agents of Washington.

JOHN LARDNER

Brings Us Up to Date

Crazed by liquor, the two fight a duel in ALEX SWEENEY'S saloon, and JACK is killed.

By JOHN LARDNER

THE short cut to success as a newspaper serial writer is a mastery of what we experts call the Synopsis. Of course, it does not have to be called the Synopsis. Some call it "The Story So Far," and some call it "What Has Happened Up Till Now," and some call it "Summary of Preceding Chapters."

The idea is to get as many words into your Synopsis as possible, and as few words as possible into the story itself.

If you students of the writing game will gather round my knee (the left knee, the one with all the shrapnel in it), and be quiet as little mice for about ten minutes, I will give you a sample.

We will say that our sample serial is entitled "True Love Curdles for Yoebel," and that it involves one (1) beautiful girl named Yoebel, for whom true love curdles. We pick up Yoebel and her troubles at the conclusion of Chapter 10.

Just So You'll Know.

THE STORY SO FAR: Lovely YSOBEL VAN PUYTEN, daughter of a ne'er-do-well plumber and a Syrian snake charmer, has fallen madly in love with JACK HACKENSCHMIDT, gay, adventurous taxidermist, whose boss, SAM PLUNK, is trying to avoid GERALDINE GRAMERCY, his third cousin by an annulled marriage, which had been performed years ago by lovable old PROFESSOR KINGSLEY, lovable old justice of the peace, who is in love with YSOBEL, but concealing it from

TONY STOAT, noted detective, who admires GERALDINE. Crazed by liquor, the two fight a duel in ALEX SWEENEY'S saloon, and JACK is killed. The blame for the murder falls upon WILL SCREWBALL, a good-natured stranger, who does not enter the story at all, and the next night, at the taxidermist's annual clambake and chestnut roast, SAM PLUNK demands a showdown with

HARRY MCGARY, popular steppjack, in love with YSOBEL, but concealing it from TONY STOAT, noted detective, who admires GERALDINE. Crazed by liquor, he jumps off the train and stumbles upon the gully pair roasting chestnuts in the moonlight. The sight is more than the lovable old justice of the peace can bear, and he pulls his gun just as TONY STOAT is disembarking from a tramp steamer in far-off SINGAPORE, who is in love with YSOBEL. Now go on with the story.

Chapter 11—Stoat thrust his hands in his pockets and laughed coolly. "So," he remarked lightly, while his right hand tightened unobtrusively over the muzzle of his revolver, "so, I come halfway 'round the world, and I find this."

Harlow Sprocket looked him squarely in the eye and sneered frankly, though competently. "Yes," he responded casually, "you do."

What Happens Tomorrow.

"Well," snapped the detective nonchalantly, as their eyes met, "it won't happen again."

TOMORROW—Will Helen reach her mother's side before it is too late? See tomorrow's installment of "True Love Curdles for Yoebel," or "One of Us is Lying."

If you students of the writing game have been following me up to this point, you know more about writing serials already than most people learn in a lifetime or less. Our next synopsis, preceding Chapter 12, brings matters to a head.

THE STORY SO FAR: Glorious YSOBEL VAN PUYTEN, in love with life and not afraid to show it, is the cause of a duel between JACK HACKENSCHMIDT, unemployed taxidermist, and a couple of congressmen named CARMICHAEL. Crazed by liquor, but carrying it well, JACK enters ALEX SWEENEY'S saloon and admires GERALDINE GRAMERCY, but conceals it from

ALDINE GRAMERCY, but conceals it from TONY STOAT, undefeated detective, who is in SINGAPORE doing his duty as he sees it. Entrusted with IMPORTANT INTERNATIONAL DOCUMENTS, who are in love with YSOBEL, STOAT picks a fight with a former cousin-of-GERALDINE'S, happy-go-lucky HARLOW SPROCKET, and kills him. The blame for the murder falls upon WILL SCREWBALL, clean-living passerby, who is finding it harder and harder to keep out of the story, inasmuch as

SAM PLUNK, her father, is prepared to sell the patent for a million dollars. GERALDINE, believing JACK to be in love with YSOBEL, decides to throw herself out of the window, but the wind is against her and she lands in the private office of PETER DE PEYSTER, wealthy mussel-digger. It is love at first sight. Now go on with the story.

Now for Another Chapter. Chapter 12—Geraldine looked up at the stranger with a smile in her blue eyes, and grinned shyly. "I beg your pardon," she remarked appealingly, "but is this love at first sight?"

"No," responded the young man. His wit charmed her as much as his obvious friendliness, and she smiled back at him with her eyes. Neither noticed the shadow that suddenly fell athwart the transom, blocking out the sunlight as well as the detective's quarterback.

TOMORROW—Who or what is the Shadow? Anyone we know? For a thrilling answer to this cosmetic problem, see tomorrow's installment of "True Love Curdles for Yoebel," or "Around the World on the Half Shell."

But now you embryo Longfellow have got the gist of the thing, and the question is, what are you going to do with it? Next chapter:

THE STORY SO FAR: Winsome, glamorous YSOBEL VAN PUYTEN, thwarted in her love affair with JACK HACKENSCHMIDT by JACK'S death in a duel, turns for solace to his murderer, WILL SCREWBALL, popular passerby, who is wanted by the police for casting a mysterious shadow athwart the transom of PETER DE PEYSTER, in love with GERALDINE GRAMERCY. Crazed by liquor, he tries to conceal his secret from

TONY STOAT, unbeaten and untied detective, now engaged upon a diplomatic mission in SINGAPORE, where duty as much as inclination compels him to kill clean-living HARLOW SPROCKET, YSOBEL'S cousin by a former marriage. Eager to avenge his family honor, SAM PLUNK, eccentric millionaire, arranges a rendezvous at ALEX SWEENEY'S saloon, and DE PEYSTER falls into the trap. Meanwhile, STOAT overtakes

HARRY MCGARY, snapper steppjack, and questions him about the robbery. Unwilling to answer at this time, for business reasons, MCGARY shoots himself, and the detective hurries back to SWEENEY'S, crazed by liquor and remorse. His reunion with YSOBEL is marred by errors in the outfield, and the two lovers are just about to arrive at a misunderstanding when Will Screwball reveals that he is one million dollars in debt to PLUNK by a former marriage.

This opens the way to happiness for all, and YSOBEL goes into a clinch with her real love, the former JACK HACKENSCHMIDT. Now go on with the story.

Chapter 13—At last, at long last, he spoke the words she had been waiting to hear. "We will get married, dearest," he remarked magnificently, "and live happily ever afterward."

"Five'll get you twenty on that," muttered grizzled old Sam Plunk, but Yoebel did not hear him, for she was in the arms of the man she loved.

The End

STAR DUST

Movie • Radio

By VIRGINIA VALE

THE loyal motion picture fans of the country do not want any substitute for the late Jean Harlow. Letters, telegrams and phone calls of protest poured into the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio when it was announced soon after her death that her unfinished picture "Saratoga" would be re-filmed with a newcomer named Rita Johnson in her role.

In no uncertain terms the public demanded that Jean's last picture either be released in its unfinished state or kept from view. Decision on the matter is being postponed, but when the public takes such a whole-hearted stand on any question, you can be sure that the studio will not run the risk of offending them. "Saratoga" will probably never be seen.

Loretta Young's household is just about the happiest, busiest establishment in all Hollywood just now. She has adopted two little girls, Jane aged three, and Judy not quite two, and is busily conferring with architects about adding a wing to her house. Just to add to the air of Old Home Week, her sister, Sally Blane, and Sally's husband Norman Foster have come with their youngster to stay at Loretta's house while they re-build theirs.

All the time that Irene Hervey was under contract to M-G-M, the executives just couldn't see her when a good role in a big picture came up for casting. She married Allan Jones, her contract expired, and it looked as if she meant to retire from the screen. She was just waiting for the right part, though. Along came the enterprising Grand National company with a role for her in "The Girl Said No" audiences raved about her at the preview, and what company rushed to get her services then, do you suppose? None other than her old studio.

Lily Pons is very busy these days with her radio program and an extensive concert tour, to say nothing of her frenzied trips up to her home in Connecticut to see how the garden is doing, but she keeps in touch with the R-K-O studio every day to get reports on the plans for her next picture.

It is all of a year now since Jack Dempsey and his restaurant were shown in a motion picture, typifying the very center of New York sporting and night life, as M-G-M is going to remedy that omission right away. He and his headquarters will appear in "Big City" which stars Spencer Tracy and Luise Rainer. Jack won't go to Hollywood, though; his scenes will be made in a stable near New York.

The best picture of the week, and a frothy light extravaganza for a warm evening it is too, is "Woman Chases Man." Miriam Hopkins is the star and dear old Charles Winniger plays a giddy role delightfully. The picture is farce that yokes on slapstick most of the time, and Joel McCrea plays the thankless role of the one fairly sensible human in the piece. It isn't, frankly, nearly so good a picture as Claudette Colbert's grand comedy "I Met Him in Paris"—but until that superb bit of entertainment comes your way, "Woman Chases Man" will keep you amused.

ODDS AND ENDS—Grace Moore postponed starting her next picture for two weeks so that her leading man, Melvyn Douglas, could go to the Coliseum Football, where his wife is going to sing. Another's sister, Bonnie Lake, has told a song that she composed to Buddy Egan. . . . That loud studio laugh you hear intermittently through Walter Winchell's Sunday night broadcast in W. C. Fields, his favorite visitor. Walter draws an audience that is an all-time cost. . . . Hazel Glenn who sings nursery songs on the Dr. DeLoe broadcast has a fun letter that she wouldn't exchange for a diamond bracelet. The good doctor wrote her that she quite had listened to one of her broadcasts and expressed delight over the lily she sang. . . . The makeup artist who built Stokely's nose. After all his many years as an eyebrow artist, he was ordered to grow his hair because otherwise it doesn't look dignified. . . . Donna Durbin tried to console him by telling him it made him look like a juvenile. . . . Fred Corke Lombard is not available. Miniature Airplanes Now Fly Freely in New Test Tunnel

Scientists Test Catapult for Launching Transports

By WATSON DAVIS
Director, Science Service.
Langley Field, Va.—Miniature airplanes take off and maneuver for the sake of science in the world's first "free-flight" wind tunnel just demonstrated for the first time by the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics at its laboratories here.

Instead of the small counterpart of a full-sized airplane being held conventionally in an experimental blast of air, the artificial breeze is increased until the model takes off by itself and flies freely. Then alterations and rudder are controlled by magnetic fields acting on small electromagnets in the model's wings. The scientist in charge maneuvers the test model plane just as a pilot handles a real one.

"We expect that this new method of studying airplane stability and control will give us much information directly that we have hitherto obtained theoretically or by empirical estimation," said Dr. George W. Lewis, N. A. C. A. director of research.

"Bumps" or gusts of wind are measured and studied by two new devices devised by N. A. C. A. experts.

Instrument Fits Pocket.
One of these is a bump recorder small enough to fit into the pocket. About 160 of these instruments are placed in airplanes and seaplanes of different types during actual flight.

One of them has been carried by the China Clipper on round trips between San Francisco and Manila. From the curve traced by the instrument, engineers are able to reconstruct every roughness of the voyage and tell what stresses the craft withstood.

Gusts are made to order in a new tunnel and model airplanes are catapulted into them. As fast as an arrow is shot from a bow, the tiny plane is accelerated to 50 miles per hour in a few feet of travel. Hit by the gust, its action is recorded by a motion picture camera.

Reduces Take-Off Distance.
Just by reducing the size of rivets in an airplane wing by one thirty-second of an inch, it is possible to reduce the power necessary by 100 horsepower. This is one result of the experiments on the friction drag on the wings of large modern airplanes. In operating high-performance modern aircraft, the importance of smooth surface in a wing is so great that the N. A. C. A. experts suggest it may be found economical to have service crews wipe off accumulated dirt and dust on wing surfaces at every stop.

Large air transports leaving our airports in the future may be catapulted in order to assist their take-off and reduce the long run now necessary, if a suggestion of the N. A. C. A. is adopted. A catapult with half the acceleration of gravity would reduce the take-off distance from 1,000 feet to 1,150 feet.

No Housing Shortage in Days of Cave Men

New Haven, Conn.—There was no housing shortage in the United States in prehistoric times when men were cave men, and went cave hunting instead of house hunting. Many a fine cave was vacant century after century.

In Europe practically all caves and shelters have yielded evidence of occupancy by ancient man, says Dr. George Grant MacCurdy of Yale university, director of the American School of Prehistoric Research. Caves in the United States, including some of the biggest and most beautiful caverns in the world, are, from the viewpoint of importance in study of the cave man, not comparable with Old world caves.

Dr. MacCurdy believes there is evidence indicating that man may have come to America some 40,000 years ago, but that it would have been far easier for man to have reached this country ten or fifteen thousand years ago.

The oldest known prehistoric inhabitants of this country, called Folsom and Yuma men after their characteristic weapons of stone, were older than the Basket Makers of the southwest, who in turn were older than the Pueblo Indians in that part of the country.

Start Early, Girls, to Find Real Mate, Expert Admonishes

Widen Circle of Friends, Improve Your Personality

New York.—Go out of your way to make friends, improve your personality, get out of a rut, and give real time and thought to finding a husband. These admonitions were given along with much other practical advice on how to win a mate, directed particularly to college girls and other intelligent women by Dr. Paul Popenoe, general director of the Institute of Family Relations, Los Angeles, Calif.

Two difficulties hamper the girl who would like to marry, but cannot find a suitable partner, Dr. Popenoe says. The first has to do with her marriageability; the second with lack of opportunities for meeting eligible young men.

Here are the elements that go to make up marriageability, as outlined by Dr. Popenoe from his broad experience in the study of married couples at the Institute of Family Relations:

1. The girl must be sexually normal. If she is mannish or engrossed with persons of her own sex, she may be cured provided this is a psychological condition. The happiest marriages are between womanly women and manly men.

Martin's Be Suspicious.
2. She must be emotionally grown-up. The infantile girl is likely to have a fear of sex that, unconsciously perhaps, prevents her from desiring or attaining a happy marriage.

3. She must not be suspicious or stand-offish by disposition.

4. She must not make the mistake of relying on her diploma to charm desirable potential husbands. When 250 happy, educated married couples were asked what they found most admirable in their respective mates, most of the women stressed intellectual companionship. But the husbands were pleased with something quite different—it was the wife's ability to do her job and be equal to her responsibilities.

A girl to be attractive as a wife must appeal to the man's emotion, she must be able to enhance his ego, and she must have domestic competence. If she lacks these assets, she can not offset the deficiency by putting forward a quality that he does not particularly want—capacity to satisfy him intellectually.

Be Seductive, Alluring.
For the woman who possesses these points of marriageability, the importance of the correct technique for winning a mate was stressed by Dr. Popenoe who has many practical hints to offer in this connection.

Don't be misled by thinking that you must take the initiative in courtship or proposal, he warns educated women. The role of the female as seductive and alluring rather than aggressive goes back in evolution not only far beyond the human, but far beyond the mammalian stage.

"The woman who is not clever enough to maneuver a man into a position where he will propose, is probably not clever enough to hold a man after she gets one," he said.

Streamlined Mines Suggested to Lower Ventilation Losses

Cincinnati.—Streamlined mines, using the discoveries of air flow which have produced the modern, sleek airplane, were suggested here at the annual coal mining convention by Prof. H. Landsberg of the Pennsylvania State college.

Ventilation losses when mine air has to turn an acute angled corner are equivalent to 485 feet of straight, concrete-lined tunnel, he disclosed. A right angle bend in a shaft creates losses equal to 250 feet of the standard reference concrete-lined tunnel. A rounded bend, by contrast, produces losses equal only to about 25 feet of straight, lined tunnel.

While admitting that few mines can achieve the ideal of a smooth concrete lining, Professor Landsberg showed that it was possible to place the timbering so that much loss could be prevented.

Even mine cars achieve some streamlining, Professor Landsberg indicated, although they move relatively slowly in relation to the ground. Actually of course their velocity relative to the ventilating air stream when heading into it is the important point.

Studies showed, disclosed the professor, that when a mine car blocks 20 per cent of a tunnel area a train of 20 such cars causes losses equal to 525 feet of surface in the standard smooth reference tunnel.

"It is true," said Dr. Landsberg in summary, "that one rounded corner in a mine will not reduce the operating costs of a ventilating system appreciably, but the sum total of bends, splits and overcasts along an air course of several miles will show the savings effected by a streamlined ventilation system."

NEED CARE FOR PERFECT JELLY

Acid Content of Juice Is of Prime Importance.

By EDITH M. BARBER

IT WOULD be interesting, at least to me, to know what clever old-time housekeeper, perhaps in the still-room of a manor house, discovered that fruit juice and sugar when cooked together would jelly. We know that the time does not date back centuries, because sugar, the necessary factor, in the granulated form, has not been generally available until a comparatively recent time. Many must have been the experiments before more or less accurate recipes were developed.

The perfect jelly should be clear, firm enough to mold but not stiff. The results depend upon using the proper proportions of fruit juice and sugar. They also depend upon the amount of acid present in the juice. Not all fruits supply the proper amounts of pectin and acid. For this reason our grandmothers through the trial and error method limited the number of fruits for jelly. Strawberries and peaches for instance were reserved for canning and preserving. The standard proportions—1 cup of sugar to 1 cup of juice—were not always successful for other jellies. They usually work for currant, green apples and green grapes. If fruit was overripe, however, this amount of sugar was too much and the result was a soft, syrupy mixture. This was sometimes prevented by combining the fruit juice with green apple or with green grape juice. This custom eventually resulted in the preparation for market of a concentrate of apple juice which we know as fruit pectin.

By the use of this fruit pectin in the proper proportions we are now able to make jelly of practically any flavor in a very short time.

The short time of cooking preserves the fresh flavor of the fruit, and for this reason, pectin is sometimes used with fruit juices, such as currant, which will jelly without it.

Plum Jelly.
4 cups (2 lbs.) plum juice
7½ cups (3¾ lbs.) sugar
½ bottle fruit pectin

Wash about four pounds of fully ripe plums. To prepare juice, crush fruit well without peeling or pitting, add one cup of water, bring to a boil, cover, and cook over a low flame ten minutes. Put fruit in double cheesecloth or one thickness Canton flannel and squeeze out juice. Measure juice into kettle, add sugar and stir well. Put over hot flame, bring to a boil, stirring occasionally. As soon as the mixture boils, stir in fruit pectin, bring to a hard rolling boil and continue boiling and stirring for just half a minute. Take from fire, skim quickly and pour at once into scalded jelly glasses. Cover with an eighth of an inch layer of paraffin. Yield—ten to eleven six-ounce glasses.

Sour clingstone plums make best jelly. If sweet plums or freestone prunes are used, substitute one-half cup strained lemon juice for an equal amount of prepared juice in this recipe.

Blackberry Jelly.
4 cups (2 lbs.) blackberry juice
2 tablespoons lemon juice
8 cups (3½ lbs.) sugar
1 bottle fruit pectin

Wash about three quarts of fully ripe berries. To prepare juice crush well or grind the berries. Put berries in double cheesecloth or one thickness of Canton flannel and squeeze out the juice. Squeeze and strain juice from 1 medium size lemon. Measure juice into kettle, add lemon and sugar; stir well. Put over hot flame, bring to a boil, stirring occasionally. As soon as the mixture boils, stir in the fruit pectin, bring to a hard rolling boil and continue boiling and stirring for just skm quickly, and pour at once into scalded jelly glasses. Cover with an eighth of an inch layer of paraffin. Yield—eleven to twelve six-ounce glasses.

Strawberry jelly may be made by the above method.

Test for Pectin.
Put one tablespoonful of hot juice into glass or cup. Add one tablespoonful of alcohol and stir once. Let stand two minutes. If a thick jelly which can be taken up on a spoon without breaking, one cup of sugar to one cup of juice may be used. If jelly forms, but breaks as it is taken up with the spoon three-fourths cup of sugar to each cup of juice should be used. If there is no jelly formation, the juice must be combined with sour apple juice or currant juice and retested.

Old Fashioned Jelly.
To obtain best results in jelly making, it is advisable to work with a small quantity of juice. Two quarts of juice is a sufficiently large quantity to handle at one time.

Measure juice, add sugar and stir until sugar is dissolved. Boil rapidly until jelly test is obtained. When two drops will hang side by side from a spoon which has been dipped into the boiling mixture, the jelly is ready to be skimmed and to be poured in clean, hot glasses. Four hot paraffin immediately over the jelly to the depth of one-eighth inch. When cold cover with tin lid.

Judge Often Handed Down Humor "From the Bench"

Late Lord Darling Lived Drab Scenes With Pleasantries.

Many are the stories told about Lord Darling—better known as Mr. Justice Darling, "England's wittiest judge"—who died recently. He was a poet, with several published volumes to his credit. But it was his humor "from the bench" that made his name almost a household word.

On one occasion, a salesman claimed exemption from jury duty on the ground that he was completely deaf in the left ear.

"You can go," said Judge Darling, gravely; "I cannot have anyone in the jury box who cannot hear both sides."

A lawyer who had the misfortune never to have acquired the ability to use the letter "h" (relates Silvain Mayer in his "legal" reminiscences), was engaged before Justice Darling in a case which had relation to a horse. For some time the lawyer kept referring to the animal as "an orse." After a while, Darling looked down and said:

"Was the animal a large horse or a little one?"
"Oh, a little one."
"Then," said the judge, "may we, for the remainder of the case, call it a pony?"

In another case before Justice Darling—in which a Cockney caterer was suing to recover the cost of a picnic luncheon he had provided for a large number of people—the plaintiff waxed highly indignant, under cross-examination, when it was suggested that his sandwiches were mostly "bread and bread," with the ham conspicuous only by its absence.

"I h'am amazed; I h'am surprised; I h'am—," he sputtered.
"That will do!" interrupted Darling. "I suggest that had you been more generous with your hams on another occasion and a little less liberal with them here, you might not have found yourself in this situation!"—Kansas City Star.

Identifying Houses

Before houses were numbered, London's business streets were lined on both sides by a succession of gay signboards exhibiting an almost infinite variety of blue boars, black swans, red lions, flying pigs and the like. Even with these signs it was often hard to find one's destination, for the signs were often so badly painted that it would have puzzled a naturalist to make out the animal meant.

Think It Over

BY THE street of Bye-and-Bye one arrives at the house of Never.—German proverb.

People who have half an hour to spare usually spend it with somebody who hasn't.

Mongols! Madam, Barked Sir Howorth

Sir Henry Howorth was taken aback one day when introduced to a gushing lady who declared that she was so charmed to meet him because she wished to talk to him about her little dog.

"But I know nothing about dogs," she protested.

"Oh, how can you say so," she said, "when you have written books about them?"

"Never, madam, never!"
"But surely," she persisted, "you have written a history of the mongrels!"
"Mongols, madam, mongols!" he barked. "Not mongrels."—London Answers.

HERE'S WHY FIRESTONE ALWAYS GIVES YOU SO MUCH

More for your Money

Higher Quality Raw Materials!
More Efficient Manufacturing!
Lower Distribution Cost!

These All Combine to Give You Extra Values at No Extra Cost

FROM the day of its introduction, the Firestone Standard Tire has more than lived up to its name by setting a new high standard of tire values. Hundreds of thousands of car owners have already bought it because they saw in it more value for their money.

"How does Firestone do it? How can they build so many extra value features into Firestone Standard Tires and yet sell them at such low prices?" The answer is simple—Firestone controls better-quality rubber and cotton supplies at their source, keeps manufacturing costs low by efficient factory methods and sells in such huge volume that distribution costs are held to a minimum. That is why Firestone has been able to give you such extra value features as Gum-Dipping and two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread.

Make no mistake about this! The Firestone Standard Tire gives you the blowout protection of Firestone's patented Gum-Dipping process. Its scientifically designed tread gives greater non-skid protection and longer wear. And those two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread guard against punctures.

Before you buy ANY tire at ANY price, see today's top tire value—the Firestone Standard Tire. Don't risk your life with thin, worn tires on your Fourth of July trip. Join the Firestone SAVE A LIFE Campaign today. Let your Firestone Dealer or Firestone Auto Supply & Service Store equip your car with a set of new Firestone Standard Tires.

THE GATEWAY TO GREATER TIRE VALUES

TODAY, from the jungles of Liberia, there has arisen a great rubber plantation on which the world's finest rubber is being produced.

From the Firestone-owned and Firestone-developed rubber plantations in Liberia there comes an ever-increasing supply of rubber, bringing greater savings to car owners in the form of extra values at no extra cost.

National Birthdays

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

The United States has been described as "the only great country with a known birthday."

Many Americans undoubtedly recalled that famous statement as they participated in recent Independence Day celebrations throughout the nation.

And many probably wondered whether America, as a nation, was indulging in its anniversary in that bit of self-study and self-research which a birthday usually inspires.

Certainly July Fourth offered a splendid opportunity for America to compare its national spirit today with the hopes and the aspirations of its founders.

Does the spirit of liberty, we could ask ourselves, glow as brightly in our own hearts as it did in the breasts of the men who in 1776 pledged their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor to its perpetuation?

Does a sense of personal responsibility for government still animate our citizens as it did those who made sacrifice after sacrifice, first to win, and then to build, a nation?

Does the fierce pride in democracy—in government by the people—still dominate our citizens' thought as it did the generation which faced death and privation rather than suffer despotic rule?

These were the aims of our nation in its earliest youth. Are they still the dominant ideas of that nation on its more mature birthdays? Are we still fighting to preserve those high ideals?

If the answer is "No," then we can continue to count our birthdays with pride. If it is "Yes," then we are in the tragic situation of the man who victoriously recalls the dreams of his youth, only to realize how he has fallen short of all their splendid aspirations.

Poor Man's Gold

Hammond whistled. "That means a lot of work." "You bet it means work and men. And a concentrated campaign. Any other method will keep you here for the next fifty years. You've got to spend money to make money in mining."

"That's what I've been trying to tell McKenzie Joe. But he—"

There he halted. Kay was coming down the trail. Bruce Kenning called good morning and went up the stream. Hours later, with Kay and Hammond watching intently, the workmen began a clean-up of the sluice box on the Joyce claim. It only revealed the usual flour gold, indications of something more to come, but as yet, nothing worth saving.

"Neither this flume nor the sluice is long enough," one of the workers complained. "Me 'n' Jim waste an awful lot of time just standin' around, for fear of shovelin' in too much gravel."

"Then build 'em up now, while you're dried out for the clean-up," Hammond said. "I'm going past the sawmill. I'll tell 'em to send some lumber."

"And nails," called Kay. "I'll get them."

Hammond left the stream, with its lines of eager workers. At the sawmill he gave the lumber order, then turned for Jeanne's to get the nails. She met him, some fifty yards away, returning from the delivery of a batch of darning.

"Haven't sold all those nails?" he asked.

"I think there are some left. There's been a run on them this morning. Everybody in camp wants nails—or glass."

They reached the store and she lifted the peg from the hamp—few persons in Sapphire lake even bothered to close their doors. Then pushing the door open, she walked within the store, suddenly to gasp and to hurry around the end of the rough counter.

The crudely built money drawer stood open. The girl wavered, staring at it, her hands half-raised, her jaw sagging. Then she said, in a queerly dulled voice:

"Somebody's been in the store!"

"Had you left your money here?" Hammond asked sharply.

"Yes—all of it. I—thought—nobody ever bothers to lock up—"

Hammond stared about him. It seemed inconceivable that crime should have entered this far-away place; Sergeant Terry's main work was growing a garden. Beside him, Jeanne Towers continued to stare blankly; it was as if they sought an explanation of the impossible, the supernatural.

"But who would want to steal my money?" she asked dazedly. "They took everything; the bills, and my nuggets and a bottle of gold dust—"

Hammond did not answer. The door had begun to swing shut; the faint breeze therefrom was sufficient to lift a bit of paper, hitherto unnoticed, and whisk it to the floor. Jack moved for it, but the girl, with swift intuition, sped before him. She grasped it, turning it in her hand. Then, with a spasmodic movement, she crumpled it in a tightly clenched fist.

"It's—nothing," she said. Her face was bloodless.

A strange madness overpowered Hammond. He did not know why he insisted; he only realized that his face was hot and his veins pounding.

"Give me that paper," he said thinly. There was something terrible about his eyes. Slowly the girl passed it over to him. His hands shook as he unfolded it, revealing its curt message:

"I.O.U.
Lew."

"I thought so," said Hammond, and turned for the door. Jeanne moved desperately, catching him by the arm.

"Jack! Wait! Wait!"

"Why wait?" he asked. "I'm going after Sergeant Terry."

But she blocked him, frantic, both hands against his chest.

"Oh, don't!" she gasped. "Please don't—please don't!"

Jack Hammond could not believe her.

"You're not going to let Lew Snade get away with a robbery?"

"I don't see anything else to do," Jeanne answered hopelessly.

"But—" vaguely Jack realized that he was discussing a situation of which he really knew nothing. "You can't do that. He stole your money!"

The girl sank against the counter. "I simply can't go to the police. I guess that's why he left that I.O.U.—so I'd know who did it and not make a report."

"Why not?"

She rubbed her hands. "He still uses his own name."

"What of it?"

She smiled faintly. "I've changed mine," came at last. "If I had to prosecute him and they took him out to Fourcross—don't you understand?" Plainly Hammond did not and evidenced it. The girl added, in a colorless voice, "If it should ever get back home that Lew Snade had been arrested for stealing money from a girl—somebody would figure out the right name of that girl."

Again there was silence. At last Hammond began to pace the marrow confine between the door and the counter. Then Jeanne said: "I'd hoped you'd never have to know about him."

"I don't—if you put it that way." But she had straightened now, her chin lifted with determination. "I'll feel better if you do know." He caught her by the arms, clutching them tight.

"Look here!" he asked. "Do you think anything could change my feelings about you—my friendship? Do you? If that's the case, don't tell me. I don't want to know."

"You, of all persons, have the right to know."

She freed herself and walked past him to the door, closing it. Then she turned, and her back against it, as though the support would give her needed strength. Suddenly she drew back. A voice had come from outside:

"Hey, Jeanne! What's the idea? Shuttin' that door?"

Involuntarily she opened it. A miner entered from Kay's claim.

"Oh," he exclaimed, "I didn't know you were here, Mr. Hammond."

"Yes, I'm here." It was banal—but there was nothing else to say.

"Miss Kay thought you'd forgotten them nails."

"No—but while you're here, take them." Hammond clawed a double handful of spikes from the keg and passed them on to the miner.

"Tell Miss Kay I'll be down after awhile," he commanded.

"Sure," the miner answered and started away.

"Jeanne, why can't I go to Terry about this man? He'd handle it con-identally. Certainly, we've got to do something."

The girl leaned wearily against the counter.

"Not necessarily."

"Why not? What right had he to come here and take money?"

"It gets to be a habit after awhile. There was no sarcasm in the statement, only resignation.

"I can't see it. Look here, you've made a start for yourself up here in the North. This fellow can't come out of your past and wreck it, no matter what the trouble—"

"The trouble is," she supplied dully, "that I'm tied to him."

"Married?"

"Worse than that."

"That's none of my business, Jeanne."

She rested her hands on the counter.

"It is, Jack. The subject's been opened. You might as well have it all. Lew and I were kids together in The Pas. You know where that is?"

"Yes—in Northern Manitoba. Quite a town now, with all those mines opening up."

"My father ran a trading store there. It was as though she were in a witness chair. "Neither Father nor Mother liked Lew. I worked in the trading store, especially when Father was up North. Well, this time he had to go into the Arctic circle to trade with the Eskimos. Before he left, he told me that I was to go to the annual fur auction in Winnipeg for him; I know furs. So I went and took $3,000 with me."

"In currency?" Hammond had begun to see ahead.

"Yes. Father likes cash. Lew followed me down there. I was terribly in love with him." She must have caught the look in Hammond's eyes. "Oh, he's changed so much—all in a year. I guess getting hold of that money did something to him."

"Evidently. So, after he met you in Winnipeg—?"

"So—well—" she spread her hands.

"I know." Hammond was trying to make it easier for her. "You were away where nobody would know—and you loved him—and life seemed something terribly precious that wouldn't last—"

"Thanks," the girl answered.

"And, too, I suppose he pulled the old gag—what was the use of worrying your parents by getting married, to say nothing of his poor old mother who'd never survive the shock—"

"In this case, it was his crippled sister," Jeanne supplied without bitterness. "Oh," she supplemented suddenly. "I'm not trying to say I was led around. Did you ever spend the best part of your life in a place like The Pas? Not the town that it is now—but the one like it used to be?"

"How did Lew Snade get his hands on that money?" Hammond asked bluntly. He felt queerly feverish. The girl went on:

"There wasn't anything at the Winnipeg auction worth buying. Lew argued that we ought to go on to Edmonton—there would be an auction there in about ten days. I wrote home what had happened, about the auction I mean. Then we went to Edmonton. Lew's money was gone. I began to cut into the cash I'd brought along; then one afternoon Lew pretended to count the money to be sure it was all there. I wasn't looking. He shouted that a hundred-dollar bill had flown out an open window."

"Of course you never found it."

She smiled faintly.

"I found the place later where he had lost it gambling. Of course, I didn't know that then. I began to worry about making up our expenses and that hundred-dollar bill Lew said he had a friend in Vancouver who wanted to sell out his stock of furs. I let him argue me into believing that he knew enough about the fur business to go and buy out this stock and make enough on it to cover all our losses."

She was silent. Hammond waited a moment.

"Well," he asked at last. "That's all," came tonelessly.

"He stole the money and deserted you?" asked the man. His hands were trembling.

"I worked at anything I could get in Edmonton until I earned enough for second-class fare to Vancouver. The man in the fur store said he'd never even heard of Lew Snade. I couldn't find a job in Vancouver; finally I got one for a single trip on the Prince Rupert boat, working in the dining room."

"You kept on looking for Snade?"

"I'd been to every dance hall in Vancouver and every gambling joint. Someone remembered him and said he'd gone North. So I kept on asking questions after I got on the boat. One of the girls said she knew him—that he'd gotten her to sneak out after hours and meet him on deck. When I got to Prince Rupert, I asked about a lawyer and someone suggested Mr. Barstow. I was afraid to go to the police."

"Yes. Because of your people—"

"I told Mr. Barstow I'd pay him a percentage on any money he could get back for me. But he said no."

"Barstow's that kind."

"I lived where I could; for awhile I worked in Al Monson's store. I was there for nearly two months, but Mr. Barstow couldn't get any trace of Lew. Then one day, he called me and said Lew was in town—he'd been in Alaska and just come back. I don't know how he found out."

"Barstow knows every ship captain and cabin boy in Prince Rupert."

"I guess that was it. He said Lew had promised to come to his office the next morning and pay back every cent. So I went there. But—"

"He didn't show up," Hammond interjected coldly.

"No, Mr. Barstow had to tell me that he'd skipped out. That's when I first saw you—coming down the stairs from Mr. Barstow's office."

"I guess I know the rest. You haven't talked to him up here?"

The girl glanced at the I. O. U. where Hammond had tossed it.

"That's all," she said slowly. "I don't even know how he got here."

"Do. He came up with the last bunch from Fourcross—got in the same night as Bruce Kenning. I know something more. He's going to give you back that money."

The girl flashed before him.

"Don't go to Sergeant Terry! Please! You know how news is—the kind that comes out of a new mining camp. It goes all over. If Terry ever took him down to Fourcross—"

Jack Hammond raised his hand to her shoulder and gently pushed her away.

"I'm not going to Terry!" he announced.

Almost before he realized it, he was out of the store and stalking the crooked streets of the little town, head-forward, a queer, ugly swing to his shoulders, as he searched the territory of tents and shacks. Then he turned down to the lake where Timmy Moon, grimy with oil, was working on his airplane.

"Seen Lew Snade?" he asked. Without waiting for an answer, "Where does he usually hang out? Anywhere around this camp? Does he work for Around the World Airline—?"

"Give a guy time," groused Timmy. "I just saw him walking up Loon creek, with Bruce Kenning."

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson for July 11

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 3:1-12. GOLDEN TEXT—Come now therefore, and I will send thee.—Exodus 3:10. PRIMARY TOPIC—How God Answered His People's Prayer. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Get Ready to Work for God. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How God Provides Leaders Today.

God calls men, commissions and uses them to carry out his plans and purposes in the earth. What a great truth that is and how it glorifies the destiny of man to know that it is divinely appointed. As Joseph Parker beautifully points out, the experience of Moses in Midian was a direct dealing with God, whereas we who may not be able to "see the fountain" must "be content to drink at the stream," but should always remember that the stream flows from that same fountain.

"Every man should put to himself the questions—What is my destiny? What does God mean me to be and to do in the world? . . . It is a most pitiful thing that a man should read of Moses being divinely called . . . to a special work" and fall to realize "that God has a special work for every man to do." Let us have a care that we do not "so pervert and misinterpret circumstances as to press them into a justification of self-will," rather than recognize them as "destiny which is beckoning us to duty."

For our instruction and guidance we consider then the story of the call of this outstanding leader of Israel. It presents him as a true servant of God—one who was I. Personally Equipped.

While it is a blessed truth that God will use any man who surrenders himself to his control and guidance no matter how limited that man's ability and training may be, it is also true that, other things being equal, the man with the best equipment will be the most useful servant.

God gave Moses a unique preparation. He was first of all a Hebrew, born among the people that he was to lead. He knew the luxury and all the cultural advantages of the Egyptian court (Acts 7:22), with the safeguard of training by his own mother as his nurse. He observed at first hand the oppression of his people and made a self-willed and impulsive effort to deal with the problem. The result was that he had a "postgraduate" course of instruction and discipline in the wilderness where he spent forty years in the school of experience.

The leaders of God in our day need training. Some best receive it in schools, in Christian colleges, seminaries, and Bible schools true to the faith. Others prepare in the home, the church, and in the "university of hard knocks"—as someone has called the school of experience. Perhaps the best preparation is a balanced combination of the two, school and experience. But the important thing is to be prepared for God's call.

II. Spiritually Qualified.

Moses was a man who knew God. Had he been a worldly man he would have been but curious of the phenomenon of the burning bush. But note how alert and reverent he was and how immediately responsive to the instructions and the call of God.

All the training and preparation in the world is worse than useless in God's service apart from that spiritual qualification that comes from true regeneration and dedication to him. There is no more pathetic sight than a spiritually powerless church worker "going through the motions" of service for Christ. If we are in that condition we may be sure that we deceive no one but ourselves. Let us seek God in confession and in glad acceptance of his provision for both our redemption and our sanctification.

III. Divinely Called.

Moses was called (v. 4), commissioned (vv. 6-10), and clad with divine authority (vv. 11-12) for his great task.

God calls his servants to different responsibilities and in different ways, but the important thing is that we should know that we are in his will and that we are answering his call.

No man or woman has any right to choose full-time Christian service simply as a desirable vocation, for it is a divine calling. Quite unscriptural was the attitude of the man who said that in a quiet woodland nook he had faced life's realities and had decided "to bet his life" on the preaching of the gospel.

On Giving of Alms

In giving of thy alms, inquire not so much into the person, as his necessity. God looks not so much upon the merits of him that requires, as into the manner of him that relieves; if the man deserve not, thou hast given it to humanity.

Sense of Humor

A sense of humor enables us not so much to laugh at the people who provoke us, as to laugh at ourselves for being so easily provoked. —Robert Power.

COMMENTS

Lewis Burke

Greetings and Salutations to you, Amigos Mios. Cheerio and all that stuff. As the Englishman says, "Are You There?"

—And R U Listenin'? If so, let us proceed with our usual weekly visit.

BILL McLEAN, HERO
The unsung hero — Bill McLean, the engineer on the Southern Pacific passenger train No. 12, who threw his engine into reverse, thereby avoiding the wash-out to the railroad tracks that happened right at the very moment in front of his eyes.

In the twenty years your correspondent has resided here, this cloudburst or wash-out of the S. P. at Coyote and Largo is the worst I have ever seen. The railroad tracks and ties were twisted into different shapes, and ties were scattered a long distance away from the original place. At Largo, the scene of the most damage, the huge concrete signal light was uprooted and carried quite a distance away from its original position.

Word has been recently received from the writer's old friends, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Williams and daughter Dorothy of Huntington, West Virginia. The letter says that they were flooded out in the recent rampage of the Ohio river and its tributaries — forcing them to almost completely rebuild their residence.

SO SAY WE

"If Doc Brinkley," asks Earl Ely in the Silver City Press, "is such a friend of the human race, as he claims, why doesn't he go off the air and stay off? Also he might take his Rose Dawn and a few other fakers with him."

FROM ARIZONA to New Mexico

Out of the drouth of thy desert,
Out of the rays of thy sun,
Out of the hardship and toll,
Out of the labor done,
I made my softened body
A stronger and harder one.
Out of thy cactus blossoms,
Out of thy starlit desert
Where the voice of Nature speaks,
I made of my hardened soul
A soul more humble and meek.
—Santos Rubira.

We note that a Republican senator claims that Liquor or Mula Blanca (White Mule) is being made in the Virgin Islands with government money. Note —The above statement, if it can be proven, will advertise the Roosevelt administration.

P. S. —It seems as if a Republican senator should be the first to notice it!

"This season has been the best one for 15 years," quoting Mr. F. J. Bager. Note — Sometimes it gets TOO good, as evidenced by the two Cloudbursts on the S. P. at Coyote and Largo last Saturday. —So, Adios.
