A Correction

An error appeared in our last issue regarding the recent town election. It should have read as follows: Richard for Mayor, 277; McQuillen, 108. Richard's majority, 169.

Mrs. J. H. Fumer of White Oaks was a visitor in town Saturday.

Ted Purcay accompanied Ralph Petty to the recent golf tournament at Tucson, Arizona.

Ralph Petty

Champion Golfer of Southwest

At Tucson, Arizona, last week, Ralph Petty of Carrizozo became the new golf champion of the southwest. Arriving unheralded at the start of the tournament and overlooked in the prognostications, he played steadily throughout, winning the title from Russel Valentine, University of Arizona student, 4 and 3 in the climactic Sunday. Valentine, former Arizona state champion, fell before Petty after defeating Jack Harden of El Paso in the semi-finals.

Ralph defeated Jim Canning, University student, Saturday. In the finals, Petty led two up at the end of 18 holes and finished the match on the 33rd hole in the afternoon. A gallery of approximately 500 cheered both golfers throughout. Score another honor for Carrizozo Ralph, we are proud of you!

Road Meeting at Tularosa

Delegates from the several Chambers of Commerce along Route 54 met at Tularosa on the 7th to talk over and instigate some program in an effort to obtain the surfacing of 54 from Santa Rosa to Tularosa. Alamo, Corona and Carrizozo, in conjunction with the Tularosa C. of C., formed the New Mexico Highway 54 Association and elected the following officers: Dr. R. E. Blauzy, Pres.; J. M. Carpenter, Sec.; Messrs. Yelton of Alamo, Clayton of Tularosa and Roberts of Corona, on the executive committee.

All those who will be benefited by the surfacing of 54 will do well to write the Governor and the State Highway Department in an endeavor to secure this much needed improvement. It was voted at the meeting to extend to the Governor and Highway Commission a vote of thanks for the work done of recent date on Highway 54.

It was resolved at the annual meeting of the Highway 54 Association held at Texhoma last Monday, to contact the United States Highway Department and show what benefits could be derived by having 54 built as a military highway connecting Fort Riley, Kansas, with the Mexican border.

Killers Wanted

Mountain lions are on the increase in this locality to such an extent that it has caused a movement to be put forth, in which the sum of $50.00 will be paid to anyone killing one of the pests and furnishing the proof of it by bringing in the hide. The plan, so we understand, is that when a lion is killed, the ranchmen make up the purse and pay the killer. Buck Dillard of Oscura was here yesterday and said that the ranchmen below here, over in the San Andres mountains and as far south as Tularosa, are starting the movement. This is a commendable undertaking, as the ranchers, in chipping in on every kill, would mean very little to each one and thereby save the killing of much livestock.

Jim Mauldin, who was employed by the City Garage for a long time as "body man," is now located in Ruidoso. Jim has a shop and service station there, the name of which is Palo Verde.

BUSINESS MEN'S CLUB

There was a good attendance at the meeting and 6 o'clock dinner at the S. P. Hotel Wednesday evening. Pres. McQuillen occupied the chair with Dr. Blaney as secretary. Report of the delegates to the Tularosa road meeting appears in a separate article on this page.

Geo. A. Titworth of Capitan was the speaker of the evening and gave a graphic account of the early days of old Coalora, a coal mining town which was situated about three miles from where Capitan now stands. He related how the town was started, how it grew and ended with what caused its abandonment. In giving that history, he related many incidents both serious and comical. The next speaker will be Mr. Albert Ziegler.

Memory's Lane

A. L. B.

It was in the spring of 1876, that the good ship "Polar Star" set sail from New York with a gallant crew and enough provisions to last for two years. Its mission under the government, was to investigate alleged Japanese salmon poaching in the northern seas.

The Captain of the ship, John Reynolds, was a happy, genial sort of an officer and in whom his crew had the most implicit confidence. On that voyage, more than ever before, he was exceedingly happy, due to the fact that he was to be married to Miss Julia Loggins on his vessel after it had entered the open sea. Among the crew was a minister, whom the captain had chosen so as to have the ceremony performed legally and in order.

Great preparations were made for the wedding. The ship was decorated to a finish and when the ceremony was pronounced and at the dance which followed, calcium lights of various colors, which was all they had in those days, flooded the entire scene and presented a wonderful spectacle. After cruising the North sea for two weeks, the new bride was taken violently ill and in spite of medical aid at hand, she grew worse and finally died. The body was buried at sea with imposing ceremonies.

Her death changed Captain Reynolds from a dashing commander, shouting his orders clearly over the ship, into a silent, sullen man, who turned the command over to his first mate and brooded until his hair turned gray. The crew gave him all the attention they could, but nothing could get him out of the miserable condition. At night he would roll and tumble in his bed, constantly repeating her name, "Julia! Julia!" He refused to eat the most tempting morsels and he was reduced to a mere skeleton. Efforts to make him talk proved fruitless.

During one of the Arctic nights, the ship became hemmed in by icebergs. In the morning, they found themselves confronted by a sea of smooth ice, miles in length, while tall icebergs hemmed them in from the rear. As night approached a strong searchlight was put in operation, which cast its gleams far out over the silent plains of ice. About midnight, the Captain rushed from his stateroom and shouted, "put out the gang plank, quick!" As always before, his orders were obeyed. He sprang to the plank and with arms uplifted, he screamed these words: "Julia, darling, I'm coming, I'm coming!" With that exclamation, and before the crew could restrain him, he dashed out over the desert of ice and was lost to view. Search was useless and the disheartened crew returned as soon as the icebergs moved out.

Mrs. Grace Kennedy, little son Buddy and Walter Herbert of Ramon were guests of Deputy Sheriff and Mrs. Hugh Bunch over the week-end.

Shaver—Williams

On Wednesday evening, April 6, at the Baptist parsonage, with Rev. Vandiver performing the ceremony, and the Misses Judy Vandiver and Thelma Shaver attendants, Miss Nellie Shaver and Erasmus Williams were united in marriage. The bride was reared in Carrizozo, graduated from our schools, entered State University and has taught school here for the past 10 years. Being of a modest, becoming disposition, her friends are sure she is the daughter of Dr. & Mrs. P. M. Shaver, who reside on Alamo road.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Williams of El Paso. He is the County Extension Agent, having been at this post for over one year, during which time, he has made lasting friendships. He is a graduate from the N. M. I. and State College, from which he has a B. S. degree. IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

By REV. HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, Dean of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, 6 Western Newspaper Union.

Lesson for April 17

THE VICTORIOUS SERVANT (Easter)

LESSON TEXT—Acts 2:22-36. GOLDEN TEXT—This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are witnesses.—Acts 2:32.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Peter's First Sermon. JUNIOR TOPIC—Peter's Greatest Sermon. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Winding with the Victorious Christ. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Risen Christ Our Hope of Victory.

"Up from the grave He arose" With a mighty triumph o'er His foes. He arose a Victor from the dark domain, And He lives forever with His saints to reign.

Easter is the great holiday—a real holy day of the Christian church. We rejoice in the incarnation, for only as the Son of God identified Himself with the human race could He bear our sins on Calvary's tree.

Life is so serious in its responsibilities and burdens, so often disappointing in its trials and sorrows, that we need to sound the note of victory. But it must be real victory and it must be assured at the crucial point where all the hopes of man find defeat—at death.

Turning aside from our studies in the Gospel of Mark for today we consider together the sermon of Peter on the day of Pentecost. He declares Jesus to be

I. Approved by Mighty Works (v. 22)

Theories may have validity only to the man who accepts the authority of the one who proclaims them, but facts are stubborn things, the reality of which no man can deny. There are those who speak about the Lord Jesus as though we asked them to accept Him on the basis of our claims for Him as the Son of God.

II. Delivered Up to Die (v. 23)

The cross was not an accident. Jesus did not die as a martyr to a noble but hopeless cause. He came into the world "to give his life a ransom for many" (Matt. 20:28).

III. Raised Up by God (vv. 24-32)

"It was not possible that he should be holden" (v. 24)—what a beautifully final and positive statement. It was an impossibility that Christ should remain in the grave, and it is the absolute assurance of Scripture that he who "was dead" with him shall also live with him (11 Tim. 3:11).

IV. Ascended and Exalted (v. 33)

"Look, ye saints! His glory is glorious. See the Man of Sorrows now. From the flight returned victorious. Every knee to him shall bow. Every heart shall own him. Crowns become the victor's brow." "He humbled himself. Wherefore God hath highly exalted him" (Phil. 2:8, 9). Read Philippians 2:8-11 as a fitting close to this glorious lesson.

Gaining Knowledge

"More knowledge of God's Word will be gained by a single effort to obey one of His commandments than by a year of reading with no effort to keep the Word of God."

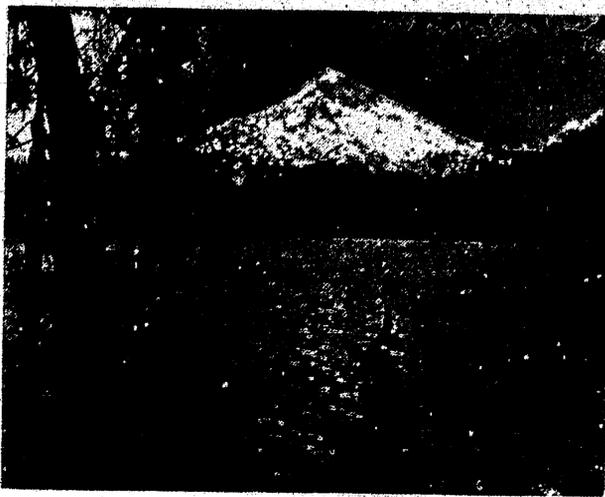

Atonement

No rush to the battle will atone for sin in the tent.—G. Campbell Morgan.

Borrowing Troubles

Do we not know that more than half our trouble is borrowed?

OREGON'S WINDING WATERS

Mt. Hood and a Fisherman's Paradise.

Magnificent Rivers, Tall Trees, Lively Round-Ups and Indian Tribes

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

OREGON, "Land of Winding Waters," was originally, solidly covered with timber from the Cascade mountains to the Pacific. Douglas firs, which constitute more than two-thirds of the timber cut, are the giants of this forest. They are in places found 250 feet high.

But eastern Oregon, robbed of its sky moisture by the Cascade range, was not neglected by Nature. Its soil is rich, the debris of old lava plains, blanketed with ashes from the belching Cascade craters that drifted eastward on prevailing winds in ancient times.

Irrigation projects have brought expanding and diversified crop areas and new-born cities into this plateau region, otherwise limited to livestock and the growth of hardy grains.

In eastern and western Oregon alike, the Columbia gives the pulse-beat to modern industry.

Hardly less important than a navigable Columbia to eastern Oregon are its snow-fed tributaries that flow from the south through extensive areas of little rain. The boleros and beautiful Deschutes, receiving the drainage of snow peaks on the eastern slopes of the Cascades; the poky, aged John Day, draining an immense area of low mountains, both empty into the great river above Celilo.

Some of the farms along the Columbia are encircled by tall poplars, planted as windbreaks and protection against drifting sand. At Umatilla the Columbia River highway merges with the Old Oregon trail and swings south from the Columbia along the Umatilla river to Pendleton.

Pendleton's Big Roundup. Pendleton is an adventure. From the moment of entering this wheat metropolis during Round-Up time, one feels part of the big show. A thousand cowboys, cowgirls, Indians, and stage drivers assemble here each year, from the Rio Grande to Calgary, to enact a drama in which the old sports and the passing life of the frontier West relive in pauseless thrill.

The Round-Up is not a commercial show, but a vast community enterprise, owned by the people of Pendleton, who contribute months of work without compensation. They have no pompous committees with labeled badges, the whole town dons sombreros and continues to act with refreshing naturalness.

Down on the Round-Up grounds, ex-cowboys, doing odd jobs around the gates, spin tales of days when they, too, rode in the arena. Indians gamble for dimes with a stick, in a game similar to "Button, button, who's got the button?" Farmers arrive with sacks of wheat as admittance money. An old chief, unsteady by one drink too many, searches for his tepee among the hundred that look alike.

You stop to watch an old squaw saddling a horse for her modern, silk-stocked daughter while she mutters, "Indian girl getting all same white girl. All she know is how to ride car."

Indians and Pageants.

Aloof, apparently indifferent, are proud Indians from the Umatilla, Bannock, Nez Perce, Cayuse, and Yakima tribes in gorgeous beaded habiliments. Their costumes are priceless heirlooms, preserved and handed down from generation to generation for the Round-Up, while the Indians themselves grow into conventional mold.

At night the wild, wide-open, embryo gambling town of Happy Canyon stages a pageant, depicting the days of the red man and the coming of the whites, in a classic drama. The Westward Ho parade on Saturday morning is the grand finale.

After this sombrero may be hung up for another year, but in Pendleton the spirit of the Old West has been fanned again into thrilling freshness.

Southeast of Pendleton the Old Oregon trail runs through the Umatilla Indian reservation. The tribes represented by the Umatillas are plains Indians, born with a heritage of the chase in which farming has no background.

Many, less their lands to white farmers, retaining only enough space for their houses. This frees them for restless summer wandering, during which they pick huckleberries, dig roots, pack apples, or fish along the Columbia.

The strange mystic legends of Indian Oregon are passing with the older Indians, for they have little significance to the educated, younger generation.

Lava Soil Is Fertile.

Just before the ascending highway loses itself in the Blue Mountain pines, on Emigrant hill, every traveler stops to view the vast checkerboard of wheat farms extending 200 miles to the Cascade mountains.

The yellow squares are wheat stubble, the black ones summer fallow. Since wheat is grown in eastern Oregon with less than 15 inches of rain, sufficient winter moisture must be stored in the soil by planting it to grain one year and fallowing it to idleness the next.

The deep, disintegrated lava soil, carpeted by immense showers of volcanic ashes, has shown amazing productivity under irrigation. Even in the apparently lifeless desert plants burst into perfect life at the touch of water.

The Malheur and Owyhee rivers, tributaries of the Snake river, which in turn flows into the Columbia, are furnishing the water for the Vale and Owyhee projects, which will put 150,000 acres of land under irrigation in their basins. Already water has converted parts of these sage lands into productive farming districts, in which Vale, Nyssa, and Ontario are vigorous communities.

The brave tracks of the Old Oregon trail, obliterated almost entirely on the sage plains, can still be seen crossing the Blue mountains among resinous pines. Descending into the Grande Ronde valley, you pass through La Grande and then steer through the alfalfa, hay and grain ranches of the Wallowa valley.

People of the Cow-Country.

These are cow-country folk, a little reticent toward strangers, but hospitable and friendly when once acquainted. They barter produce among themselves, stocking their cellars for the winter. A gas-station operator at Lostine remarked that it is a novelty not to be offered a sack of potatoes for gas and oil.

At Enterprise and Joseph, the granite walls of the Wallowa mountains rise abruptly from the valley floor. This change of altitude is essential for a livestock country, as it gives pasturage for stock throughout the year. In the winter the stock mark time on maintenance rations in sheltered canyons; during June the cattle graze up the lower slopes, while the sheep are driven higher into the alpine pastures as summer advances.

In the late afternoon the sun's slanting rays glint on the stone shaft marking the grave of Old Chief Joseph, buried with his tribal ancestors in the "Land of Winding Waters," overlooking Wallowa lake.

On his deathbed Old Chief Joseph had called his two sons to him and requested them to hold forever the beautiful Wallows for his people. But settlers came. To avoid conflict, the government decided to move the Nez Perce to a reservation in Idaho. Misunderstanding followed, resulting in conflict. After defeating two companies of the United States army, Young Chief Joseph began one of the most spectacular military retreats in history.

Handicapped by women, children, livestock, and all possessions, he led his people through the worst mountain wilderness of three states for more than 1,000 miles, fording torrential streams, giving battle, eluding, outwitting, outgeneraling the three armies in pursuit.

Within 50 miles of the Canadian boundary and freedom in Montana, Chief Joseph was prevailed upon by promises to surrender. But his people never returned to their "Land of Winding Waters," and Young Chief Joseph died an exile.

What to Eat and Why

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses WATER--the Elixir of Life

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS, 6 East 39th St., New York.

OF ALL the elements required to support life and maintain health and efficiency, water takes precedence. Without it, the protein, carbohydrates, fats, minerals and vitamins, which build and repair tissues, provide motive power for the body engine, and regulate the complex processes necessary to existence would be utterly useless.

Water is the magic stream through which all nutritive elements are carried into and through the body and there held in suspension. It is the ever-ready messenger which distributes heat, moisture and body-building material, where and as it is needed.

Man Is a Sponge

Our bodies are like water-logged sponges, for we carry water to the limit of our capacity. A human being is more than two-thirds water, and this proportion must be maintained. If health and strength are to be preserved.

There is enough water in a person weighing 150 pounds to fill a 15-gallon barrel. Muscles, liver and kidneys are about 80 per cent water, the brain 85 per cent. Even bone is made up of more than one-third water, so you can see that the old adage "dry as a bone" is not strictly accurate.

No cell can function unless it is constantly bathed in fluid. Furthermore, the cells depend upon water to transport their foods through the blood. This alone requires ten pounds of water in constant circulation.

We may term these functions an incoming service. But it is equally important as an outgoing stream. The cells need water to flush away their waste products. And if the surface of the lungs is not kept moist, there can be no intake of oxygen, no output of carbon dioxide.

Without water, no waste would be carried out of the body. Poisonous substances would remain to wreck the system within a short time. Water flushes the countless channels of physical existence—even while we sleep, for it constantly passes from the body through the lungs and skin, as well as through the bowels and kidneys.

Water Starvation

Where do we get all this water? When we are thirsty, we take a drink and there the interest of most people ends. Few individuals give proper consideration to supplying the body with all the water it needs. Yet, when the water content of the body diminishes, health and life are in danger. A loss of 10 per cent of body water is a serious matter and a loss of 20 per cent is usually fatal.

It is only in rare instances—such as when lost in a desert—that man actually dies of thirst, for even when no fluids are drunk, water is consumed with food. But all about us we see men and women suffering from the effects of water starvation. Some indications of this are: dryness of the skin and lips, mucous membranes and scalp. There is also danger of damaging the kidneys which require water to flush away the acid products of metabolism. And very often constipation can be traced to a deficiency of water, which is necessary to soften the contents of the intestinal canal.

None of these ill effects may be feared if you take enough water.

How Much Is Enough?

A healthy, normal individual requires about four quarts of water every 24 hours. That requirement varies somewhat with the season. In hot weather there is a greater elimination of water through perspiration and that loss must be replaced.

However, it is not necessary to drink four quarts of water a day. For part of our needs are supplied by food. The body draws upon three sources for its water: First, water taken as a drink or in other liquids; second, water supplied by foods, especially fruits and vegetables, for although solid foods appear dry, most of them are in fact from 75 to 95 per cent water; third, water formed in the tissues in the combustion of fuel foods. Fat gives the most water when burned. In fact, it produces more water than the weight of the original fat. Sugar gives the least.

Foods Rich in Water

A half-pound potato contains nearly a full glass of water. Some other foods that are more than 70 per cent water are asparagus, berries, string beans, cabbage, cauliflower, celery, cucumber, eggs, citrus fruits, cherries, grapes, melons, apples, raw and cooked greens, milk, onions, cooked green peas, boiled potatoes, sauerkraut, shell fish, meat stews, tomatoes and squash.

Foods containing less than 30 per cent water include butter, cakes, candies, ready-to-eat cereals, crackers, dried fruits, nuts, potato chips, sausage, bacon, syrups and Zwieback.

Avoid the Dry Habit

In addition to the water consumed with food, every normal individual should drink about six glasses of liquid daily—as water, milk, coffee, tea or other beverages.

Most people drink far too little water. Women often have the mistaken notion that water will make them fat. To demonstrate the fallacy of this idea, a world-famous physician once remarked that if that were true, poor people would long ago have adopted the practice.

It is possible to drink too much water and those who are suffering from disease should be guided by their physician in determining the amount required. But most normal people could increase both mental and physical efficiency by taking more of this magic fluid.

Drink Water with Meals

The question is often asked—"Is it wise to drink water with meals?" The answer is "Yes."

Have You a Question? Ask C. Houston Goudiss

C. Houston Goudiss has placed at the disposal of readers of this newspaper all the facilities of his famous Experimental Kitchen Laboratory in New York City. He will gladly answer questions concerning foods, diet, nutrition, and their relation to health. You are also invited to consult him in matters of personal hygiene. It's not necessary to write a letter unless you desire—for postcard inquiries will receive the same careful attention. Address C. Houston Goudiss at 6 East 39th Street, New York City.

There is evidence that the drinking of a reasonable amount of water with meals by normal individuals stimulates the secretion of gastric juice, thereby improving digestion. It has also been demonstrated that it aids in the absorption of food by the body and retards the growth of intestinal bacteria.

The homemaker should be just as conscientious in providing her family with sufficient water as with adequate amounts of the other food substances. For water must be included in the list of essential food constituents. It is in truth, the ELIXIR OF LIFE.

Questions Answered

Mrs. S. T. R.—Answering your question as to what is the most efficient time to begin reducing—the proper time is when the weight first begins to climb above normal. Most people wait until they are 20 or 30 pounds overweight and then reducing becomes more difficult.

Miss T. P. G.—Yes, there is a stimulant in cocoa that closely resembles caffeine in coffee. But a cup of cocoa contains less of the stimulant than is found in a cup of tea or coffee.

Mrs. A. R. M.—No, milk is not fattening. Women especially fear that milk will increase their weight, but this fear is not justified, since a pint of milk, or two large glasses, only supplies 340 calories.

C. Houston Goudiss—1932.

Why... an Oil Polish?

And here, home-makers, is why: The oil element in polish is absolutely essential to all fine wood! For the same reason that we oil machinery—water our plants—massage cream into the face—is oil polish used! The same principle applies—for wood definitely requires this attention to keep it "alive!" The best oil polish has a fine, non-greasy oil base—and it is just this—when rubbed or massaged into the furniture—that prevents the wood from checking, drying out, splitting or cracking. Furniture will not do any of these things, when cared for—and it is the combination of the "oil" and the "rubbing" that prevents it! For the quality oil-polish "feeds" the hungry finish—keeps the wood young! Other polishes may give a quick, easy-to-achieve luster—but a little time and energy (it should not be labor) on the part of the housewife, will pay dividends in the looks and long life of her furniture—and woodwork. All experts agree that an oil polish properly used (apply on damp cloth—as directed) is not only better—it is vital! And so, home-makers, take this important tip: Always use an oil polish—and the best one!

O-CEDAR CLEANS, POLISHES, PRESERVES. KEEPS FURNITURE LIKE NEW.

More women use O-Cedar Polish and Mops than any other kind—for furniture, woodwork, and floors.

ADVENTURERS' CLUB

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

"The Doctor and the Killer"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter

HELLO EVERYBODY: You know, boys and girls, a doctor's life is full of adventure. It's full of inconveniences too. They never know at what hour of the day or night the telephone might ring and send them rushing along on a sick call.

A doctor crashes the Adventurers' club today with the story of his most nerve wracking experience. Dr. John A. Mangieri of Brooklyn, N. Y., is his name.

Speaking about doctors, though, I want to tell you first a thing I saw in a theater one evening. The play was a melodrama. The packed house was silent at a particularly thrilling moment when suddenly a voice rang out from the audience.

"Is there a doctor in the house?"

Everybody looked around at the interruption. The actors stopped in the middle of their lines. A little man with a serious face was standing in the aisle. Then another man with a beard got up next to me. He called toward the man in the aisle.

"Yes," he said, "I'm a doctor."

The little man looked the doctor over while we all watched with bated breath. Then he waved his hand:

"Hello, Doc!" he said. And sat down!

That's all there was to it. But there ought to be a law. Don't you think so?

Called Out at Two in the Morning.

Our Doc, Mangieri's call wasn't any joke. Doc had gone to bed, dog-tired after a busy day at the hospital when that blooming phone of his tore him out of the dreamy arms of Morpheus. Doc rubbed his sleepy eyes and glanced at the clock. Two o'clock in the morning! Swell time for anybody to get sick, he thought, and answered the insistent ring. But it wasn't the phone. It was the doorbell. Worse luck! Probably an emergency accident.

Well, sir, Doc dragged his weary limbs out of bed, the way he had done many times since hanging out his shingle, and staggered down to the door. Doc was practicing medicine at that time in the Bath Junction section of Brooklyn. A stranger stood at the door. The stranger looked pretty tough and he seemed nervous.

The Man on the Bed Had Been Shot.

"A pal of mine is sick," he said, and begged the doctor to come at once and visit him. Doc says he admits he didn't like the looks of the man, but a doctor's duty comes first, so he climbed into his clothes and stepped out to make the call.

A taxi stood at the door and the stranger insisted that Doc ride with him. Doc noticed another shady looking gent sitting in the back seat of the cab, so he decided he'd take his own car and play safe.

"I'll follow you," Doc said and climbed into his coupe.

Evil-Looking House in a Bad Street.

The cab shot away and turned so many streets as Doc followed that the good doctor didn't know where he was. Finally the cab stopped in an evil looking street and Doc drew up at the curb.

The house they had come to was even more evil looking. It was a forbidding looking frame house without any lights showing. As the cab drove away Doc was escorted up the rickety steps by the two men.

The second man, Doc says, was even tougher looking than the first. They opened the sagging door with a latch key and went inside. A dim gas light burned low in the hall.

Without a word one of the men led the way up the stairs while the other dropped in behind Doc. Doc says he just knew something was wrong and wondered if they were going to attack him. They turned into a half dark bedroom. On the bed fully dressed was a third hard boiled looking gent.

Ordered to Treat a Wounded Man.

And then Doc understood. The man on the bed had been shot. His hands as he gripped his stomach were red with blood. Doc was in a bad spot. There is a law that forbids doctors to treat bullet wounds without immediately reporting them to the police. The law is very strict. A doctor in the Dillinger case is in jail now for treating the wounded gunman.

Doc hesitated, but as he glanced around at the glowering faces he realized he'd have to do something OR ELSE! One of the men nudged him roughly.

"Get busy, Doc," he growled.

Doc did some quick-thinking. The men he knew now were gangsters. If he didn't treat their pal they might give him the same dose of lead. If he did, the police would have to be notified and the gangsters would come back at him for that. He stalled and told them he had left his stethoscope in the car. They let him go and Doc went out.

In the street he got a break. A policeman was passing. Doc didn't want to leave a wounded man die without medical attention, so he decided to go back. But he told the policeman that if he wasn't out in 20 minutes to come after him. Then Doc as he entered left the latch off the door.

Police Came at the Right Moment.

His patient, Doc found, had been shot in the stomach. His friends dropped their pretense and told him bluntly to extract the bullet and be fast about it. Doc told the truth that the operation was difficult without an X-ray. He suggested a hospital. The patience of the gunmen was now exhausted. Doc expected any minute to have his head bashed in. One of the thugs raised a clenched fist.

"Can that hospital stuff," he growled, "or we'll send you there."

And just at that moment, like in a play, the policeman came with radio car reinforcements and took the gang off Doc's neck. And the next day Doc read in the papers that his patient and his pals were held in jail for wholesale murder!

That was years ago, before the G-men made it safe for doctors—and Doc hasn't failed to treat a patient since.

What Causes the Rainbow?

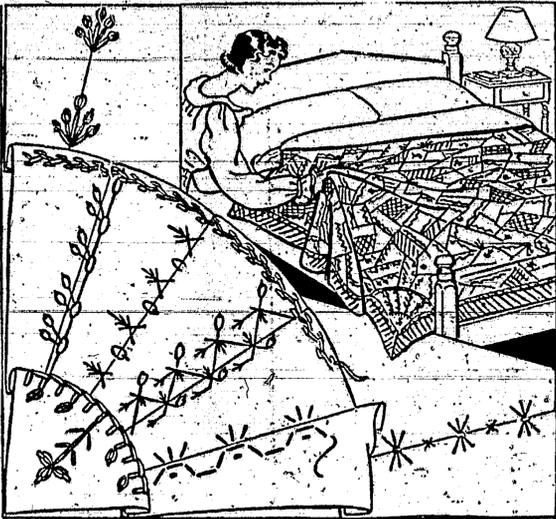

The rainbow is caused by light from the sun passing into a drop of water and out again after reflection from the far side. Since the drops are spherical, hence are quite alike no matter how turned, it follows that the angle between the lines from drop to sun and eye must always be the same, whether the drop be high up or near the ground. This requires that the rainbow, as viewed by an observer, must appear circular.

Named Bay of Paris

When Columbus discovered Trinidad in 1498 he called the Bay of Paris the Gulf of Pearls, because of the quantities of oysters attached to the trunks of the mangrove trees rooted in the waters there. It was his belief that when the oysters opened, drops of dew fell from the trees and eventually became pearls. He hoped to find enough to make a necklace for Queen Isabella, but enemies sent him home in chains without the pearls.

HOW to SEW

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

Silk Patchwork for the Guest Room

A LETTER comes from a reader enclosing rough sketches of stitches from a silk patchwork quilt. She writes, "I inherited this quilt from a great aunt and it is the final touch of luxury in my guest room. It never occurred to me that I could make one like it until I saw your article about patchwork stitches in the paper. I am following your advice about using an old wool blanket as a foundation—only I am using the best parts of several worn blankets. I plan to join the blanket sections with whipped seams and then arrange my final patches along the joinings."

Depend upon a modern homemaker to figure out efficiency methods! And here are the stitches she sends. The many-hued silk, satin, and velvet pieces are first pinned or basted to the foundation with lapped edges turned as shown here. If you would like to know how to make more of the fascinating stitches used to sew the pieces in place, you will find them in the new book offered below. Be among the first of your friends to make one of these gay quilts. It is the smart thing to use one anywhere that you would use an afghan. Collecting and arranging the luxurious bits of silk and inventing new embroidery stitch combinations is just about the most exciting of all the new revivals of Victorian home arts.

NOTE: Mrs. Spears' latest book on SEWING—Gifts and Embroidery—is now ready. Ninety embroidery stitches are illustrated; also table settings, crochet, embroidery designing, fabric repairing, novelty gifts and dress accessories. Forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions. Available to readers who will send name and address and enclose 25 cents (coin preferred). Just address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Do you want to SAVE MONEY?

The Standard Ford V-8, with 60-horsepower engine, gives you a lot of car for a little money. 300,000 new owners acclaimed the "thrifty 60" last year. Hundreds a day are buying it in 1938. Why? Because it is priced low—includes essential equipment without extra charge—and goes farther between filling stations than any Ford car.

Over built. Owners all over the country report averages of 22 to 27 miles on a single gallon of gasoline. But economy isn't all the story by any means. The Standard "60" is built with the same precision as the De Luxe "85," and has the same 112-inch wheelbase chassis. It is easy to look at and ride in as well as easy to buy and run. There's a Ford dealer near you.

Lively Scrap Looms Ahead In American

IT WILL be the New York Yankees all the way in the 1938 American league season...

But after accounting for the Yanks, the 1938 season promises to produce a spirited brawl for positions in the also-run class...

Watch Indians

Oscar VIII has a very good chance of finishing second this year with the Cleveland Indians...

There is plenty of power in the Detroit Tiger's batting order. Pitching will, of course, be the problem...

"Where now, master?"
"We walk to La Barranca," said Arnaldo and set off, picking his way along the dry bed of the arroyo until he struck the fresh trail Juanito had failed to take.
Two hours later they came upon Van Suttart's damaged car and examined it with interest; soon afterward they arrived at the rope bridge, crossed it successfully and headed for the hacienda's nearest gate.

Not until the two strangers were within a stone's throw of the outer wall did Joyce recognize the taller of them and utter a cry.

Accompanied by Dirk she dashed down to the great court and with his help opened the zaguan and then the outer gate. She held out both hands, her eyes shining with welcome.

"How on earth did you get here? You haven't walked all the way, have you?"

Arnaldo had raised his hat. He dropped it on the ground, took her hands, gave her a gleaming smile, nodded at Van Suttart, shrugged his shoulders and pointed backward with his chin. It was as though he had spoken, told them in so many words where, how and when his car had been ditched.

"So you changed your mind," said Dirk.
"Yes," said Arnaldo. "Something happened to make me change my mind."

"What do you mean?" asked Joyce. "What are you two talking about?"

"I asked Arnaldo to come with me," explained Dirk, "but he refused to take part in a sentimental gesture."

"Quite true," admitted Adan, "but that was before I knew Miss Sewell, scolding the role of victim, had shot up Dorado." He looked around curiously. "Where are your 18 gringos?"

"What gringos?" asked Joyce, bewildered.

Taking out his wallet Arnaldo extracted the clipping the minister of war had handed him and passed it to Joyce. "Read it. I'm here on a semi-official mission to investigate."

She glanced through the inspired account of the taking of La Barranca and the further she read the more did her eyes and cheeks blaze. She crushed the paper in her fist, started to throw it away, then changed her mind, smoothed it out and slipped it inside her pullover.

"It's an outrageous lie," she said, "based on a grain of truth."

"You seem to have come prepared to stay. I'm glad, because this fantastic fabrication will need some talking over."

She led the way into the inner patio and no sooner had she crossed its threshold than the air of a chateleine enveloped her. At ease and competent she gave directions to Luz, then turned to Arnaldo, "You're tired and you must be hungry. As soon as you've had a wash there'll be food ready in the small dining room. Perhaps Mr. Van Suttart will show you where it is."

"He won't need it," said Adan. "I've been here before."

She cast him a curious and startled glance, but the placidity of his expression reassured her. Nevertheless a certain uneasiness persisted, causing her to put off anything in the nature of a showdown.

During the afternoon she attended to her many duties and took another horseback lesson, still omitting to tell Dirk she had ridden as a child. Adan appeared refreshed by a nap, and encouraged her. The same superficiality marked the dinner hour, Don Jorge alone scolding to utter polite nothings.

"Wheels within wheels," said Don Jorge quite suddenly, "and a young girl sets them all to turning. Margarita Fonseca who would never have moved save for her hatred of the Manifest Destiny, Onella, out to get with a single stone Dorado, his ancient enemy, and the minister of war. The American ambassador trying desperately to save his face and perhaps his job." Adan Arnaldo.

"Yes?" prompted Arnaldo coolly. "What about me?"

Don Jorge, scowling, avoided a direct answer. "Gentlemen," he continued, "we are here either as guests or servants of the senorita Joyce Sewell, lawful mistress of La Barranca. This is a world—her world. We have plenty of room for defenders, none for neutrals, tourists or spies. I'll ask you first, Mr. Van Suttart, are you friend or foe?"

"Friend," said Dirk promptly.

"Now you, Adan," said Don Jorge, "and don't speak too hastily. You and I have met before, though you sat at Dorado's table while I ate with servants. Do you come as friend or foe?"

Arnaldo flicked the ash from his cigarette and sat staring at the brightened tip. "Here is my answer: how far I'll go for the senorita is her business and mine and nobody else's."

"Leonardo!" Don Jorge shouted, "a spy is among us!"

"You, a Mexican," cried Joyce,

"and you're not ashamed to say that!"

Luz thrust her head in at the door. "Do I send for Leopardo?"

"No!" commanded Joyce. She turned toward Don Jorge. "Maxie, if you and Mr. Van Suttart don't mind, I'd like to talk to Adan Arnaldo alone."

Promptly Don Jorge turned ceremonious. He rose, bowed, faced toward his own room, stumped straight to the door, stood back to force Dirk to pass, then entered and closed it with emphasis.

"Let's get out of here," said Adan. "I remember a big shabby room with a huge fireplace."

"That's where I meant to go when we finished talking," said Joyce.

The life of a hacienda is not that of a house but of a village, sometimes almost of a town. Articles and values are easily destroyed or lost, but certain ingrained fundamentals take years to die. The hereditary blacksmith, the itinerant piano-tuner, a teacher of sorts for the crowded school and a horse and cattle foreman to carry on the banner of scorn for the equally important chief of the muleteers are threads not lightly torn from a social fabric however raveled. The drawing-room gave evidence of this truth. The furniture had been maltreated, but the curtains had been recently patched by an expert nee-

she was kissing him. Yet, somehow, he was far away and she was with him, as though she dreamed. His voice, continuing, broke the spell. "But you and I together is another story. I have the power and you the land and no government—past, present or to come—will fool too much with Adan Arnaldo. It's practical, logical; it will be a cinch."

Cheeks burning, she rushed from the room and along the balcony of the patio. As she turned its angle she saw Dirk coming from Don Jorge's study and it was all she could do to keep from running to cast herself in his arms. Instead she stopped short and asked herself if she were crazy.

He came to a halt a few paces away. "Senor Maximiliano asked me to make the rounds," he explained and hesitated. "I don't suppose you'd care to be bothered."

"That's where I was going myself," said Joyce. "Do you want to come along?"

Together they turned down the passage giving access to the stair leading to the esplanade of the roof.

Under the blaze of moon and stars Joyce, followed by Dirk, visited the four bastions. "Awake, Leonardo?" she murmured. "Awake, Senorita."

"Is everything quiet?" "All's quiet, Senorita." The rounds finished she started toward the spiral stair by which they had ascended, walking slowly at first, then with a sudden acceleration in her pace.

She moved toward the parapet and they sat down, he beside her, their shoulders barely touching. They sat in silence, their senses drenched in beauty. Her heart swelled until she knew she must speak or choke.

"It's beautiful and terrible. I wonder if anywhere else in the world beauty and terror walk hand in hand."

"Me, I'm wondering who I am," said Dirk. "You're real. You're part of the night, part of this amazing place. You had a name that meant nothing—nothing at all. But now you've shaken it and become real. If I should never see you again, yet live for a thousand years, I couldn't forget you. I'm not being fresh, I'm not making love, but something belongs to me from now on—something you haven't given that I didn't try to take. You're real but what about me? I've turned into nothing. These words I'm speaking—are they a dream, or can you hear them too? Can you?"

"I've heard them all," said Joyce, "but I can't be sure you said them aloud or whether my own lips spoke them. Because as I seem real to you, so are you to me. I'm not afraid of you. I wasn't afraid of you before, but I disliked the person you were. You wore a Joseph's coat made up of the things I most despise. Now you've thrown it away—or perhaps you've only taken it off and presently will slip it on again."

"Perhaps," he admitted mournfully, "and you too."

She shivered. He took off his jacket and put it around her shoulders. Nothing was said; he had not asked her if she were cold nor did she protest he would need the coat himself.

"Name the things you despise," he said at last, staring straight ahead.

"Your false front," answered Joyce after an imperceptible pause, "your air of We-the-elect-are-holy-and-all-others-are-evil."

"Is that really the way it struck you?" asked Dirk, but did not wait for an answer. "Yes, I'm beginning to see it."

"But you mustn't think it's just you I meant. It's a lot bigger than any single one of you and it can't be covered by five minutes or five years. The air you wore was the air of the whole place—chancellery, garden and the embassy itself. Then cry out, 'Look at us! our skins are safe wherever we go; if you want to keep yours, stay home.' It's so silly not to see the other half of that doctrine."

"What other half?" asked Dirk, puzzled.

"Stay at home yourselves," said Joyce with intensity, "do away with the House of Drones and take your consuls with you, guardians of the dollar and nothing else! Then we'd know where we stand."

"Easy now," said Dirk soothingly. "You! Your House of Drones. What if one of the bullets that hit your car had killed you? From being a parasite, a silkworm living on the pulp of the taxpayer safe at home, you would suddenly have acquired importance—such importance that you would certainly have destroyed me and possibly plunged your country in the very war you're supposed to wave back with a lily hand!" She rose, letting his coat fall from her shoulders.

"You're great," said Dirk, electrified against his will and judgment. "Whether you're right or not, you're great."

"Pick up your coat and come with me," said Joyce. "I want to show you something."

He followed her down the spiral stair and back to the patio. She led him to her former playroom, pushed open the door and turned. "This was the day nursery where I was playing when they came in—a hundred of them riding their horses over the flower beds, trampling the rose bushes and shooting at anything that moved. No force against a weaker nation" was responsible for their coming; don't forget it." She pointed. "That's the door where my mother ran out, looking for me. She took three steps before they shot her. I didn't see what happened then—only the crowding men. The next thing I knew my father, carrying a funny little trunk under one arm, lifted me with the other and rushed up those steps to the balcony. They turned and saw him in time to laugh and jeer but hardly to shoot. Come; I'll show you where the bullets struck and how we escaped."

She preceded him to the balcony, then through passage after passage until, doubling back, they arrived at steep stone steps leading down into a cavernous pit behind the vast kitchen and thence to a narrow passageway. With a strong pull Dirk opened the door and they stepped out into such an unbragous paradise as only the old-time haciendas of the semi-tropics can boast.

"This is the lake," said Joyce. "Lake!" laughed Dirk. "Where's the water?"

"You can't see it for the hyacinths," explained Joyce. "If it weren't for them we couldn't be here."

"Why not?"

"It wouldn't be safe. This mass of hyacinths, too thick for a boat to pass of a man to swim, mean a lot more to my safety than all the American embassies in the world put together."

"Let up," said Dirk, "please let up. I'm licked."

She turned toward him with an impulsive movement; her fingers barely touched his shoulder.

He took her in his arms so naturally she had no thought to draw back, then realization swept over her that resentment would have been silly before so spontaneous and unthinking an action. This was different from Arnaldo—so different she was another person standing in another world and awake, wide awake.

"You! Your House of Drones."

A squire had been cut from the corner of a lovely Persian rug to make a saddle blanket for Mi General, but the elements of comfort remained. Witness a well-tended fire on the hearth and the piano in tune. Adan walked to it as if drawn by a lodestone. He struck a chord, then sat down and rippled the keys in melodious undertone to his words.

"We can be honorable with foreigners," he repeated, looking up at Joyce across the corner of the closed sounding board. "I am authorized to offer you $50,000 for La Barranca if you'll agree to leave the country at once." Think it over. Fifty thousand to get out, nothing but trouble if you try to stay.

"La Barranca isn't something you can sell," she stated. "My father bought it—that's true—but not from people with their roots still in the soil. They were gone, uprooted by their own folly, and he bought it from a bank. I was born here. The fibers of my being are tied to stone, vine and tree. I owe my service to two governments, but not allegiance. Allegiance from the heart strikes deep. It has to stand on a foundation of faith and love. Where will I find them if not here? How can I sell La Barranca without selling my people and myself?"

Adan stopped playing, his fingers hovering over an unstruck chord.

"Then what course do you intend to pursue," he murmured, his eyes on the keys, "and just where do you think it will lead you?"

"There's one word that covers it all," said Joyce. "Fight. That's what we do wherever we are—you in El Teheobago, I here or in Elsinboro. Every woman, every man, wherever we are, we fight to live through we fight and go down."

Adan's hands crashed out the chord as he rose and faced her. He stared at her out of a daze. "Courage always wears a glorious face," he said as if he were explaining some mystery to himself. "Fight and go down. You, alone—yes. But—" His hands went out groping, touched her arms and passed down to her wrists. A voice within him, long stilled, was striving for utterance, through fingers and eyes because lips are so prone to lie. She thrilled, not to him but to his ardor. Since she is a stranger to be man, warning friend and foe, she yielded, moved forward, not from any reasoning but by the simple law that sparks fly upward. Then he was holding her, kissing her, and she was kissing him. Yet, somehow, he was far away and she was with him, as though she dreamed. His voice, continuing, broke the spell. "But you and I together is another story. I have the power and you the land and no government—past, present or to come—will fool too much with Adan Arnaldo. It's practical, logical; it will be a cinch."

where he stood, and eyes about it, put it down on the chart, when he blinked. What had he found? He checked his work, and it was correct. According to the old chart, his station lay in water many feet deep, half a mile from the nearest dry land.

The United States Coast and Geodetic survey, chart makers for the United States, maintains eternal vigilance to keep abreast of all the changes that occur, especially on the more unstable and shifting portions of our coast. In many of these thousands of miles of shore line even a few years will see enormous changes. The point of Hockaway beach, opposite New York harbor, grows westward some 250 feet yearly, a matter of several miles in a lifetime. Long Beach, Coney Island and Sandy Hook are all extending themselves toward the channel.

The Harbor of Rio de Janeiro has been the scene of more diverse scenic descriptions than almost any port city in the world.

A surveyor, busy on the coast of South Carolina, stood by his instrument on the sandy beach, just out of reach of the breaking waves. He calculated the location of the station

In addition to having something individual and very much your own, you'll save, decidedly.

Comfortable House Dress.
It's wonderful how much more one feels like working in a brand new, fresh house dress that's becoming as well as comfortable. This design is distinctly slenderizing because it's so straight and simple. You can make it in a few hours. Cheerful percale print, seersucker or chambray are nice fabrics for this dress, which will certainly be your favorite if you want to look slimmer than you are.

Dress For Afternoon.
If you wear any size between 36 and 52 this dress is designed to make you look your best. Shirring on the shoulders creates the fullness that you need in the blouse. The long, unbroken line from shoulder to hem takes inches off the figure. Sleeves ending just below the elbow are flattering to plump arms, and the long, softly rippling jabot trims are lengthening in effect. Make this lovely dress of silk crepe, small-figured or polka dot prints, or georgette, Lafer, in voile, it will be your coolest summer frock.

The Patterns.

TIPS to Gardeners

More Combinations
CROP combination is useful with vegetables such as tomatoes, melons or corn, as well as with "small garden" crops like radishes, lettuce and carrots which require comparatively less space. The following combinations are suggested by Harold Coulter, vegetable expert of the Ferry Seed Institute:

Sow dwarf peas early in rows four to six feet apart; plant radish between rows of peas, and plant one row of cucumbers between every two rows of peas.

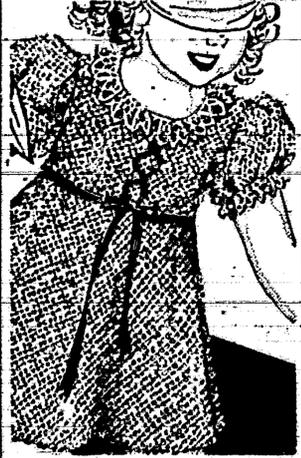

Set cauliflower early in rows two feet apart; one foot on each side of each cauliflower row plant spinach; cow radishes between spinach rows. When radishes are used set tomato plants in the space thus vacated. Peppers or egg plant may be substituted for tomatoes.

Sow early turnips in rows three to four feet apart; later plant a row of corn between the turnip rows.

Give ground ample supplies of fertilizer when combined cropping is practised extensively.

Here's an Easy Dress For You to Crochet

HIS HONOR, THE MAYOR OF RED HILL

A hotly-contested municipal election was held at Red Hill on April 5 whereby our good friend Mr. Doyle Rentfrow was elected Mayor. This is a highly coveted position, that of Mayor of the city of Red Hill. Doyle remarked that unless he had the WPA and Relievers all for him, he would have been defeated.

"A man's best friend is his dog," so goes the old and truthful saying.
