We Called Him "Mutt"

It was just 30 years ago last fall that I met him on Main street in the city of Galesburg, Ill. He was a little baby Maltese cat that had strayed away from some good mother tabby who had perhaps searched for him in vain.

The weather was growing cold and we had just started the big furnace for the coming winter. The furnace room in the cellar was 12 feet high and on top of the big fire box we put covering of fire sand.

It was my custom to be in the furnace room at 5 o'clock every morning and as soon as I would open the furnace door, I could see Mutt coming from one of the strong bars which held the big furnace to the floor.

When spring arrived I gave Mutt his first glimpse of the outer world since his babyhood and how he enjoyed it! He would run, skip and jump to his heart's content.

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

"Fingers of Flame"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Arthur A. Guinan of Brooklyn, N. Y., is today's Distinguished Adventurer. Art says that although he is a veteran of the World War and saw plenty of service in France, he had to come back home to get in a mess of trouble.

And that, boys and girls, is the way a lot of these adventure yarns start out. They start with a peaceful family scene like the one Art describes in his own home on an evening early in November, 1923. It was a cold, rainy Friday night outside, but indoors, in the Guinan dining room, it was cheerful and bright.

It was a little early to be lighting the furnace. That's why the Guinans were all gathered in the dining room. They had a kerosene oil stove burning in there to—well—to sort of take the edge off the dampness.

Art's mother and dad and brother were there. His dad, who had recently been discharged from the hospital where he'd spent ten months with a badly broken leg, was sitting in an easy chair with his bum leg stretched out stiffly in front of him. He couldn't walk on that leg yet, and was practically an invalid.

Their Oil Stove Exploded.

Mother was peeling potatoes. Art's brother had stirred up a mess of plaster and was patching a crack in the ceiling. Art had gone out to the kitchen to grab a bite to eat. He was just finishing up when his dad said he didn't like the way the oil stove smelled. Mother said she'd noticed it too. It was warm enough in the room by that time, anyway. She looked up and saw Art, who had just finished eating and returned to the dining room, and asked him to put the stove out.

Art says he had a special way of putting out that stove. "We used to turn it down as low as it would go," he says, "and then pick it up by the handle and give it a jerk to put out the last flicker of flame. But nowadays, Art realizes that that's no way to put out an oil stove.

On this particular night, though, he didn't realize it. He turned the wick down to the bottom, picked the stove up and gave it a jerk. It didn't go out, so Art gave it another jerk—harder, this time, than the first. The next thing he knew, he was holding onto something that looked and sounded like Vesuvius on a rampage.

That stove gave out a roar that could be heard a block away. A burst of flame six feet long shot across the room. Art's mother was sitting right in the path of it. In a split second she was flaming like a HUMAN TORCH!

Saved Mother but Forgot About Dad.

Art dropped the stove and ran to her. Her clothes were blazing in a dozen places. With his bare hands, he started tearing at her dress. "I was pulling that flame apart," he says. "Lord only knows how, but I kept pulling handfuls of burning cloth from her body. My brother started coming down from the ladder he was standing on. In the meantime my mother and I had worked our way into the kitchen and my brother joined me there."

Art and his brother were both pulling at those flames now, and they were making headway. At length they had torn away the last bit of burning cloth—beaten out the last spark. Then, suddenly, they thought of their dad!

Art says that right there he got the worst fright of his life. They had forgotten about dad in the rush to take care of mother, but now they realized that he was the one who really needed their assistance most. Dad was helpless—practically an invalid. He couldn't move out of his chair, and back there in the dining room, the whole place was blazing.

Art turned to run into the dining room. The door leading to it was a raging furnace. A curtain of flame covered its whole length and breadth. Art hesitated just a fraction of a second. Then he plunged right through the door, flames and all.

Flames Couldn't Stop Art.

There was a smoke-filled space in the center of the room where the flames had not yet spread. His dad was over at the other side of it. Art plunged across that space in nothing flat and gathered his father in his arms.

"His right shoe," Art says, "was almost burned from his foot. I started to carry him toward the back door, but about half way across the room I stumbled. Dad fell on top of me and knocked the wind out of me. I thought I'd never get it back again. Before I did, the flames had crept up on us."

It was about that time that Art felt a terrible pain in his right leg. When he looked at it he saw that the legs of his trousers were afire. But there was no time to lose. They had to get out of that room right away. Art picked his dad up again and dragged him toward the door with one arm while he was beating out the flames in his pants legs with the other.

It was a hectic five minutes. At last he was through the door. He set his dad down in a chair in the yard back of the house and ran to turn in the fire alarm. "It wasn't until I reached for the alarm box," he says, "that I realized how badly I was burnt. My hands looked like a couple of beefsteaks, and my legs were worse. That peaceful little home of ours looked like a hospital for the next six months."

Everybody Claims It

Members of the three religions regard Adam's peak, near Colombo, Ceylon, with reverence. It is famous for a footprint seven feet long. According to Buddhists the print was made by Buddha. Hindus, on the other hand, maintain that it was left by Siva, and Christians sometimes identify this region with the Garden of Eden, therefore holding that the footprint is that of none other than Adam.

Lesson for June 12

FACING THE SUPREME TEST OF SERVICE

LESSON TEXT—Mark 14:32-36. GOLDEN TEXT—Not what I will, but what Thou wilt. Mark 14:36. PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus in the Garden. JUNIOR TOPIC—In Gethsemane. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Course in the Face of Danger. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Challenge of God's Will.

No man has ever faced such a crisis as Jesus met in the Garden of Gethsemane, for He was the Son of God incarnate in order to bear the sins of the world. No one can ever fully understand the agony of soul involved when God "made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him" (II Cor. 5:21). It is, therefore, true that we may never say that we have gone "through Gethsemane." But there is a very real sense in which our Lord's experience is shared by His disciples, in a lesser degree and as ordinary human beings.

Our lesson brings before us the closing scene of Thursday before the crucifixion. The day has been crowded with important events, among them the eating of the Passover, the revelation that there was a traitor among the twelve, the institution of the Lord's supper, the precious words of the upper room, the intercessory prayer in the garden.

I. Exceeding Sorrowful (vv. 32-36).

The text uses many words to convey the depth of His soul's agony, as though it were impossible to express it in the faulty medium of speech. So it is, for our Lord here experienced something far more serious than a dread of physical death. He was not a coward. He was not afraid to die. His soul was about to have put upon its spotless sinlessness the stain and dishonor of the world's sins. Little wonder that He was "sorrowful even unto death" (v. 34).

Since this was the road the Master trod, should not His servants tread it still?

II. Alone with God (vv. 37-41).

Jesus took with Him into the secluded place in the Garden the three who were closest to Him in the circle of disciples. He counted on their fellowship and sympathy in His hour of anguish. Merely to have them near Him, to know that they were there to watch and pray even though they could not share His holy burden, was to be a comfort to Him. We try to do as much for one another in hours of bereavement and disappointment, but how much greater was the opportunity of these three, and how ignominiously they failed. The spirit was willing (v. 39), but the flesh took the upper hand, and they slept! He was alone with His Father, when He prayed that if it were possible the hour might pass from Him, but in true and beautiful submission said, "not what I will, but what thou wilt."

The follower of Jesus will know this experience, too. While he will ever find it to be true that there is nothing more precious than the friends God gives him, he should prepare himself to expect the arm of flesh to fail him. There is no more bitter experience in human relationships than to count on those who should stand by, come what may, and to find that they have slept through our hour of soul-struggle.

III. Betrayed by a Kiss (vv. 42-46).

To betray the one who had done nothing but good, who had loved him and served him even in the washing of his feet, this would have been far more than one could have expected of even the sin-blackened heart of a Judas. But he fills the measure of his ignominy to overflowing by betraying his Lord with the sign of affection—a kiss.

We know full well that we may not stand on the same ground as our Lord even here, for, whereas He had done nothing to merit betrayal, we at our best are not able to stand forth without fault. Nevertheless, great is the hurt when we face the betrayals of life. It may be one whom we have befriended, who has been the object of our loving thought and care, and who in the hour when he thinks to gain himself some advantage or avenge some fancied wrong strikes us in the back, even as he smilingly professes to be a friend. Shall we be embittered in soul and give like for like? God forbid! Let us rather say as Jesus did to Judas, "Friend, wherefore art thou come?" (Matt. 26:50.)

THE diagram shows how the contrasting squares are arranged to give the rug its interesting design. Whatever color scheme you use, black will be most effective for joining the squares and for an edging of single crochet around the outside of the rug. If the materials you have are not the colors you want, don't forget there is always the dye pot. Producing your own colors may be the most exciting part of rug making.

be substituted if desired. Either a wood or large steel crochet hook is used. The rug shown here measures 36" by 21 inches. The 5-inch squares are made separately in single-crochet stitch and then joined with "crochet slip-stitch." If rags are used, tear or cut the strips not more than 1 1/2 inches wide, and work with the raw edges turned in as shown here at A. Measure each square carefully so they will all be exactly the same size. Full instructions for slip covers for side chairs like the one shown are in the book offered below.

Strange Facts

Tiny Sailfish Puzzles Beebe

DR. WILLIAM BEEBE returned recently from a tropical expedition. He had collected 20,000 different specimens of marine life. He brought back a fish not as long as his little finger. This was his most valuable specimen, a sailfish 1 1/2 inches long.

The familiar sailfish caught by anglers in California or Florida weighs from 30 to more than 100 pounds. Their length measures the height of a man or a giant. Some are even ten feet long. The "baby" sailfish measuring 1 1/2 inches may not be a "baby" at all. The tiny fish exactly like the ten-foot sailfish puzzles Doctor Beebe. In an interview on landing, the well known scientist says the tiny sailfish might be the first young sailfish ever captured, or may be a new miniature species. There is much doubt of the 1 1/2 inch-sailfish being the young of the ordinary sailfish because the little fish seems fully formed.

The sailfish derives its name from the huge dorsal fin that extends a foot or two above the body and resembles a sail. These fish feed on the surface of the water and they are caught by trolling in the daytime. The miniature sailfish secured by Doctor Beebe was caught at night under search lights, on a voyage that took Doctor Beebe and his companions 2,000 miles down the west coast from Cape Lucas to Panama. © Britannica Junior.

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

Improving Meat Flavor.—The flavor of boiled ham, salt beef or tongue which is to be served cold is much improved if meat is left in the water in which it was boiled until it is cold.

When Fat Catches Fire.—Never throw water on burning fat. Use flour instead. Water only spreads the blaze.

Firm Pie Crust.—To prevent the lower crust of a fruit pie becoming soggy, brush it over with the white of an egg before putting in the fruit filling.

To Stiffen Meringue.—A generous pinch of soda added to the egg whites before they are beaten will make meringue stand up better.

Pressing Pleated Skirt.—Wire paper clips may be used very successfully to hold pleats in position when pressing a skirt.

Sparing the Tablecloth.—Use white waxed paper under the child's tray on table. The paper saves the tablecloth and is barely noticeable.

Protecting Hat Band.—A strip of cellophane, folded and placed under the inside hat band, will prevent perspiration and oil from staining the outside ribbon or band.

The firm replied as follows: "Dear Sir: Your order received. Sending the razor as requested and hope it will prove satisfactory."

Hybrid Corn Method Might Produce Better Farm Animals

East Lansing, Mich.—Breeding methods that have greatly improved the per-acre yield of corn will presently be applied to farm animals with equally beneficial results, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace prophesied here in the Spragg Memorial lecture, delivered at Michigan State college.

Secretary Wallace himself pioneered the large-scale application of Mendelian genetical principles to corn breeding, in a day when corn judging was based solely on the production of big, handsome individual ears, regardless of yield per acre. Though he was only a young man, he persisted in the face of skepticism on the part of his seniors—in producing inbred strains of corn genetically pure for the particular high-yielding qualities he desired, and then crossing them with other pure lines.

This obtained the double advantage of combining the specifically desired qualities and at the same time endowing the offspring with the biological quality, still not well understood, known as hybrid vigor.

Applied to Animals. Breeding of farm animals, such as dairy cattle, egg-laying chickens and meat animals lags far behind corn breeding, Secretary Wallace declared. Selecting breeding stock on the basis of show-ring "points" is on a level with the old-fashioned methods of corn judging by individual ears.

Performance tests based on egg-laying and butterfat production records are somewhat better, but are still far short of certainty in selection and transmission of desirable qualities to offspring.

What is really needed, the speaker hammered home, is the selection of particular desirable qualities, the fixing of these in pure lines of sires and dams, and the uniting of these pure lines into high-production offspring by crossing. It will be the hybrid corn technique applied to animals.

Carrying of this pure-line method of breeding into application in human eugenics did not appeal to Secretary Wallace as practicable. Negative eugenics, the attempted elimination of undesirable traits by sterilization programs, he considers of dubious workability. Similar techniques worked when applied in early corn breeding, he pointed out.

Antarctic Continent Was Discovered by American

Philadelphia.—The Antarctic continent, once considered worthless but now the subject of international competition of claims and counter-claims, was first sighted by an American boy hardly out of his teens, in command of a tiny boat that would hardly be considered safe on a landlocked lake. This occurred on November 18, 1820, and the discoverer was Capt. Nathaniel B. Palmer, in the 47-foot sloop Hero of 45 tons register.

At the meeting of the American Philosophical society here Prof. William H. Hobbs of the University of Michigan told of discovering an old map in the collection of Yale university that definitely proves the claim of American priority in discovery in the Antarctic ocean, as against the contention that a British commander was the discoverer of Antarctica. Entries in the Hero's logbook, now in the Library of Congress, confirm the data given by the map.

It was not until 1832, 12 years after Palmer's discovery, that the coast was sighted by the British expedition which gave it the name by which it is still called on present-day maps, Graham Land.

Camels Formerly Roamed Plains of North America

Washington.—Camels and camel-like animals that once roamed the West when it was really wild and woolly were described to the National Academy of Sciences by Prof. William Berryman Scott of Princeton university.

Camels actually originated in North America. Some of them migrated to Asia, others to South America where their descendants still survive as the llamas and alpacas. But in old days the camel population of North America was far richer and more varied than the present depleted assortment in the southern continent.

The last one was a creature now called Camelops, whose bones are found in the La Brea tar pits near Los Angeles. This animal may have survived until a human population had become well established on this continent.

Feats of "Telepathy" Explained by Highly Trained Perception

London.—Science has probed the apparent telepathic powers of a well-known vaudeville performer, Marion, and found that there is nothing occult or super-natural about them. Neither are they due to extra-sensory perception.

Instead, they are due to supernormal development of the ordinary power of perception. A preliminary report of the investigation by S. G. Soal has been made public by the University of London Council for Psychological Investigation.

Marion, whose real name is Josef Kraus, had two especially significant accomplishments. One was the finding of a hidden object. "There was absolutely no trickery to this, Mr. Soal reports, and it was done without any physical contact with anyone in the room.

It was due, Mr. Soal found, to Marion's unusually sharp observation of the footsteps of a person walking behind him who knew where the object was. If all the audience was seated, Marion's ability to find the hidden object depended on his keen perception of involuntary head movements and changes of facial expression.

How He Recognized Cards. The other unusual accomplishment of this performer was his ability to recognize any card he held in his hand. His skill at this was unknown to Marion himself until Mr. Soal tried it. Marion thought it was due to clairvoyance but after Mr. Soal's experiments it could be accounted for on the ground that Marion's acuteness of touch and his general alertness to sense stimuli are exceptional.

These findings do more than merely dispose of some claims to the power of clairvoyance and telepathy, comments the editor of the English medical journal, the Lancet. They show how highly perception may be developed.

The supernormally keen perceptive powers of Marion are of the order of those possessed by the great physicians of earlier days, the medical editor suggests. These men who practiced before the development of X-rays and laboratory tests had to rely almost entirely on their senses and their keen powers of perception in order to diagnose a case and foretell its probable outcome.

Gorillas and Hyenas Are Sufferers From Arthritis. Philadelphia.—Grandpa Gorilla has his bad days with "rheumatism," no less than his human nth-degree cousin. Hyenas have it, too—presumably they don't laugh then. It seems to be the same kind of rheumatism—arthritis—most common and most painful in human beings.

Occurrence of arthritis in wild animals was described by Prof. Herbert Fox of the University of Pennsylvania to the American Philosophical society.

Professor Fox, as pathologist to the Philadelphia Zoological society, has had ample opportunity to diagnose the disease in many living animals. He has also examined skeletons in several museums. Total number of animals examined was 1,740, of which 77 proved to be definitely arthritic.

Occurrence of the malady among animals appears to be as little governed by rules as it is among suffering humans. It is not correlated with climate, location, food, focal infections, or kind of animal.

It was most easily detected as an affliction of the spine, but was also found in other parts of the skeleton. Animal families afflicted with arthritis include cat, cow, deer, bear, hyena, baboons and the anthropoid apes. It was not found among certain carnivora, notably the dog group; rodents and bats seem likewise to be immune.

Bends in Rails Caused by High Speed of Trains. Chicago.—Higher railroad train speeds, particularly of freight trains, are causing extensive damage to railroad tracks. A. A. Miller, maintenance of way engineer for the Missouri Pacific railroad told the Western Railway club here.

Irregular kinks and bends in the track, with consequent rough riding for passengers or sufficient damage as to necessitate renewal of track, have occurred to an increased extent during recent years as a result of the greater strain imposed on the track by more rapidly-moving locomotives and cars, he declared on the basis of reports from railroads throughout the country. Principal blame for the damage, he indicated, rests on the locomotives.

Copper Pays the Freight. Copper Cliff, Ont.—"Copper pays the freight and all the gold is gravy" is more than a miner's catch phrase here, where recovery of gold, silver, platinum, palladium, tellurium and selenium during the necessary refining of copper not only has increased the value of the finished product, copper, but brings added income from the sale of the by-product rare metals.

Reducing and Goiter

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

ONE of the tragic results of reducing weight too rapidly either by reducing the amount of food eaten or by taking one or more of the "obesity" cures is to find that when the desired weight has been reached the loss of weight continues. With this continuous loss of weight other alarming symptoms appear—loss of appetite, nervousness, trembling of the limbs, sleeplessness and rapid heart beat, until finally the severe form of goiter—exophthalmic goiter or Grave's disease—develops.

Some years ago research in the Lahey clinic, Boston, reported a number of cases in which Grave's disease resulted from the use of thyroid extract to reduce weight.

Dr. J. H. Means, president of the American College of Physicians, Boston, and his associates, Drs. S. Heitz and J. Lerman, in the Annals of Internal Medicine, record 35 cases of goiter following loss of weight. In 14 of these cases the loss of weight before the goiter symptoms occurred was due to the reducing cures.

Symptoms and Diet. Dr. Means and his associates warn physicians and patients against too vigorous reducing cures for overweight. And in cases where operation for goiter is found necessary that the patient be built up as much as possible before operation.

The general symptoms of this loss of weight are general weakness, loss of muscle tissue, thinning of the blood, weakening of the heart muscle and loss of morale or ambition. To correct the condition the following diet suggestions should be followed: (a) Plenty of starch foods—bread, potatoes, sugar; (b) plenty of foods rich in vitamins and minerals—milk, cream, butter, cheese, leafy vegetables, tomatoes, oranges; (c) plenty of fat foods—butter, cream, egg yolk.

Meat and white of eggs—animal proteins—are not considered advisable, as they "speed up" the body processes and may prevent gain in weight.

Need for Exercise. Years ago when it was found that rest, fresh air, and rich nutritious food would halt the progress of tuberculosis, it was not unusual to see these patients return to their homes, plump, with a good color, and apparently perfectly well. In a few months or even weeks it was noticed that this weight was gradually being lost, that the appetite was poor, and the cough was returning. Another stay in the sanatorium then became necessary.

The loss of weight and strength in many of these cases was due to the fact that the individual did not follow the method of living taught him in the sanatorium; he became careless about his rest periods, food, and the outdoors. In the majority of cases the loss of weight and strength and the return of the symptoms of tuberculosis were due to the fact that the patient had rested almost entirely at the sanatorium and had taken no exercise whatever. Thus when he returned home and attempted to do some physical work, there was no strength in muscles, heart, and lungs, and the relapse followed.

"Serbia," Not "Servia." "Serbia" is the accepted English form of the name of the Balkan kingdom which became part of Yugoslavia after the World War. Before the outbreak of the war "Servia" was the favored spelling of this name in America. In fact, on February 2, 1897, the United States geographic board adopted that spelling and it was followed by the Department of State. But "Servia" was objectionable to the inhabitants of that country because of its analogy with Latin "servus," meaning slave, and because the Slavic spelling of the name in Latin characters is "Srba" or "Srbija." Accordingly, on March 3, 1915, the geographic board reversed its earlier decision in favor of "Serbia."

A Totalitarian State. A totalitarian state is one with a highly centralized form of government under the control of a political group which permits no recognition nor representation to other political parties. In dictionaries a totalitarian state is defined as a state, conceived of as having one political party co-extensive with the population, in which the individual is entirely subordinated to the state. It is a highly centralized state under the control of one political party. Other political parties are suppressed or "co-ordinated" into one party. The conflict of classes is obscured by emphasis on organic unity of state.

C. Houston Goudiss Warns Against Food Fads and Fallacies

Nationally Known Food Authority Explains How They May Endanger Health
By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th St., New York City

AS SCIENCE and civilization have progressed, painstaking investigators have sought to replace ignorance with knowledge, to substitute truth for superstition. But in spite of their efforts, our eating habits are still influenced by a multitude of food fads and fancies, which should have no place in this enlightened age.

Some of these are harmless; others may endanger health. And the homemaker must learn to distinguish between fact and fancy.

Fish Is Not a Brain Food. One of the most persistent fallacies is the notion that certain kinds of food are especially beneficial for certain parts of the body. Many people believe that fish is a brain food and celery a nerve tonic. Lettuce is thought to be a soporific. None of these things is true.

The idea regarding fish probably arose because fish contains phosphorus and the brain also contains phosphorus. How simple it would be if one could increase brain power merely by eating fish. Unfortunately, there is nothing to it! The brain, like other parts of the body, requires a balanced diet. No case has ever been reported of a man soothing the irritated nerves of his wife by feeding her celery. And as for lettuce, it is a fine source of minerals, vitamins and gentle roughage, but it does not contain any narcotic drug that induces sleep.

Other Fallacies Disproved. Science has exploded many common notions about vegetables which may change your ideas of what is best to buy and eat. Many homemakers prefer lettuce that is light green in color and they believe that string beans which snap are superior in quality. But it has been demonstrated that deep green lettuce is much richer in vitamins and that a snap in string beans merely indicates that the beans have been kept in a cold, moist place.

False Notions About Fruit. A score of superstitions cling to the eating of fruits. There is a false notion that acid-tasting fruits cause or aggravate rheumatism, because they produce "acidity." The truth is that most fruits, regardless of their acid taste, leave an alkaline ash following digestion. One often hears that fruit should not be taken at the same time as milk because the fruit acids will curdle the milk to curd. But the fact is that milk is always curdled in the stomach by the hydrochloric acid.

Not Necessary to Sip Milk. Another false idea is the widespread notion that milk must be sipped slowly or it will be difficult to digest. This has been refuted by a widely known investigator who made many tests. One day he fed a man a pint of milk in 10 seconds. The next day the same man was fed the same amount of milk in 10 minutes. On both occasions the contents of the stomach were examined a half hour later.

It was discovered that the milk which was drunk in 10 seconds had formed smaller curds than the milk which was sipped in 10 minutes. And in both cases, the curds were of practically the same consistency.

Fad Diets Lack Balance. Far more harmful than the fallacies regarding individual foods are the fad diets constantly put forth by those who seek to exploit the homemaker's desire for dietetic knowledge.

Foods Not Incompatible. A fad diet which has gained a large number of adherents in recent years is based on the notion that certain foods—namely starches and proteins—are incompatible and should not be consumed at the same meal because they cannot be digested at the same time. It is interesting to note that this fad has been condemned by the medical profession and that a physician of the highest standing has proved clinically that starches and proteins do not interfere with one another in the stomach.

The fallacy of this theory is further appreciated when one realizes that there are few pure proteins or pure carbohydrates, most foods containing varying proportions of protein, carbohydrate and fat. Such foods as dried peas and beans and whole grain cereals contain a substantial percentage of both starch and protein.

Dangers of Fasting. Fasting is urged by some fadists as a means of "detoxifying" the body. Advocates of this practice claim that it is nature's method of housecleaning. As a matter of fact, fasting for any length of time may be dangerous to health, because it may result in the accumulation of incomplete oxidation products of fat, and the development of acidosis.

Homemakers must put aside superstitions, half-truths and food fallacies if they are to nourish their families properly. Put your faith only in established food facts. Remember that upon your knowledge and breadth of vision depend, to a great degree, not only the health but the happiness of your family.

It is widely held that water should not be taken with meals, the argument being that it dilutes the gastric juice and thus interferes with digestion. This sounds logical and many people have been fooled. But the truth of the matter is that water stimulates the flow of the digestive juices and careful research has established that normally, water taken with meals in reasonable quantities aids digestion.

Put your faith only in established food facts. Remember that upon your knowledge and breadth of vision depend, to a great degree, not only the health but the happiness of your family.

Readers of this newspaper are invited to write to C. Houston Goudiss, 6 East 39th Street, New York City, for his scientific Reducing Bulletin, which shows how to reduce by the safe and sane method of counting calories.

The bulletin is complete with a chart showing the caloric value of all the commonly used foods and contains sample menus that you can use as a guide to comfortable and beautiful weight reduction.

Questions Answered. Mrs. A. F. R., Jr.—Light corn syrup yields nothing but energy values, but dark corn syrup is a good source of iron. Pure molasses is rich in calcium and iron. Miss M. F.—Nut protein is similar to the protein of meat and fish and nuts may be used in place of these foods when desired. They should not replace milk and eggs, however, as with few exceptions, they are low in minerals and cannot compare with eggs or milk as a source of vitamins.

Influencing Action. The forces that impel action reside in temperament. The ideals and convictions that guide it are hidden in the mind and heart.

Funeral of James Leslie

Was held last Saturday, with Rev. Vandiver conducting the same and the remains taken to the Cedarvale cemetery at White Oaks and there interred. James was born Oct 20, 1914. He attended school at White Oaks and graduated from the Carrizozo HI School in the class of '38. He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robt Leslie, three brothers, Ben, Zane and Bobby, two sisters, Flora and Dorothy, to all of whom the sympathy of our people is tendered.

Jim was a good boy. Studious in his school work, attentive at business after leaving school and above all, was his ardent love for his mother and with that redeeming trait alone, gives the son of today the highest mark of young manhood. Mr. and Mrs. Leslie and children wish to thank the people of White Oaks and Carrizozo for their kindness and floral tributes.

Softball Led Henrich to Big Leagues

By GEORGE A. BARCLAY

YOUNG Tom Henrich used to knock softballs over the playground fence and be quite a hero to the neighborhood kids.

Now young Tom Henrich knocks hard baseballs over the fence in American league parks and the wise boys predict that future diamond historians will rank him in the same outfield flight as Tris Speaker, Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth and his teammate, Joe Di Maggio.

It was back in Massillon, Ohio, that Tom began playing softball. It wasn't long before he found this game rather tame and turned to sandlot baseball.

Soon the Cleveland Indians heard about him and one of their scouts wired the home office that he was one of the finds of the bushes.

Yanks Step In

That all happened in the spring of 1937. As soon as other big league clubs got wind of the fact that Tom was footloose, a deluge of scouts descended on Tom's home.

The commissioner declared young Henrich a free agent.

Still, for the sake of the pro game's future, those on the inside assert that it would be good business for both Vines and Perry to enter the professional tournaments.

TOM HENRICH

The emissaries of Col. Jake Ruppert's New York Yankees talked most convincingly. Tom was signed with them and given a bonus of $20,000.

At the time Joe McCarthy happened to be overloaded with outfielders, so he sent Tom across the river to Newark where the Yankees maintain their main talent farm.

Then the Yanks began to encounter some tough going. The outfield powerhouse was crippled by injuries. Roy Johnson, whom McCarthy had secured from Boston, couldn't get going.

Tommy fulfilled the story-book tradition by making good in a big way. He proved by hard hitting that he had a right to be included in the Yanks' Murderers' Row.

New at twenty-one, Tommy Henrich seems to be on the way to a great major league career.

If the Yanks win the American league pennant this year, Tom Henrich will be one of the reasons. So will a former International leaguer by the name of Joe Gordon who is a second baseman by trade and who succeeded the durable Tony Lazzeri, now a member of the Chicago Cubs.

And coming up through the school that developed Gordon and that Henrich attended for a while last year is another young fellow who, the scouts say, will be ready for the big show next year. His name is Charley Keller and he's an outfielder.

Tennis Dilemma

PROFESSIONAL tennis appears to be at the crossroads. Its future will depend largely on which direction it turns.

Followers of the game point out that the top-notch pro talent does not compete in the national professional tournaments as does the top pro talent in golf.

Fred Perry Ellsworth Vines

of Fred Perry and Ellsworth Vines probably the greatest players in the world today. Both failed to enter the national professional championship and did not compete in any of the various other tournaments held in the South last winter and this spring.

The appearance of either of these stars in the championship events would insure their success and heighten public interest in the tournaments. It is explained that Vines and Perry can make more money playing exhibition matches than they can in tournaments.

It has also been suggested that closer cooperation be established between the pro players and the professional association itself.

Here and There—

THE handicap of being a deaf-mute doesn't bother John Gray, seventeen-year-old nephew of the late John McGraw, who lives in Mystic, Conn.

The Cubs last season whipped every team in the year's series except the Pirates, who took them, 13 games to 9.

Kansas, Once Battleground of Settlers, Rich in Farming, Oil and Industry

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

CROP control measures of vital interest in Kansas, where the corn crop is ripening and the problem of limiting wheat acreage is due for discussion in the fall of this year.

Until Mennonites settled in Kansas in 1873, little wheat was grown. From Russia, however, these immigrants brought a new variety—a red winter grain so hard that millers at first had trouble grinding it.

Since that time, the best kinds of wheat grown here have come through selection or hybridization, from Turkey, or from other imports of Crimean wheat similar to Turkey's.

To Kansas from Asia came white blossom sweet clover; from Manchuria the soybean.

In fact, most plants of economic value in Kansas are from other lands. This is true of orchards, vegetable, and flower gardens.

Owned by Spain, then France. From Spain to Kansas was a long way—in 1841. Yet that year Colorado got here, seeking his fabled Seven Cities of Cibola.

More Spaniards came later, but they left only faint footprints in the sands of Kansas time.

After La Salle floated down the Mississippi and claimed its basin for Louis XIV, French trappers ranged all these Midwest streams. From a trading post, built near present-day Oak Mills village, in one year (1757) they shipped 10,000 pelts to Paris, via New Orleans.

Rightfully, we didn't get title to all of what is now Kansas till after the annexation of Texas, which, as a republic, had owned the southwest corner of it, the same corner that had been first Spanish and then Mexican.

By this time a few whites were settling in east Kansas. From Missouri into New Mexico flowed that steady, two-way stream of traders, soldiers, teams, wagons, goods, furs, and treasure which was to make the Santa Fe trail one of the most romantic and spectacular caravan roads in all history.

Gold seekers, rushing to California after 1849, swarmed across Kansas by scores of thousands, along with outlaws, swindlers, and road agents, breaking still more new trails, including the Oregon and its branches, the Salt Lake, Mormon, and California.

News that aroused the nation broke in Kansas in 1854, over the Kansas-Nebraska bill. This law set up the territories named, and said that when they were ready to join the Union each might say for itself, by popular vote, whether or not its citizens should hold slaves.

Battleground of North and South. Immediately Kansas became a battleground. From the North came colonists, sent by the New England Emigrant Aid company to vote for "free soil."

Southern states raised funds and sent armed bands of settlers to vote the pro-slavery ticket. Missourians—dubbed "Border Ruffians"—flocked over to help the slave-owning element.

Murders, raids and house burnings continued for years. At Lawrence, type metal from the Herald of Freedom, thrown into the river by a previous mob, was fished out and molded into cannon balls.

One event in border war Kansas will never forget: that is Quantrell's guerrilla raid on Lawrence, when that Missouri hothead sacked and burnt the town and slew some 150 citizens.

Even after Kansas was admitted as a free state, in 1861, and after the Civil war ended, it was plagued for years by Indian raids, county-seat fights, and bad men who rode up the great cow trails from Texas.

Scenes in the Oil Fields. Day and night, oil field bedlam, as at Russell field near Hays, fills the air with clatter and shouts. Big strikes quickly cover empty plains with new, unpainted pine shacks, tents, new stores, lumber yards, machine shops, auto camps, big piles of new pipe, "walking beams" of working pumps, black pools, frightful-looking dense smoke clouds from burning waste, long lines of tall steel derricks that march like big skeletons to far horizons.

Wichita is a Busy City. Wichita has one of the West's finest airports, with airplane shops that build planes for our army and navy, and some for export.

Supplanting its pioneer fires of buffalo chips, a gigantic factory here makes oil stoves and lamps that are sold to world's end. Tall flour mills pierce the skies, and crowded stockyards, noisy with bawls, grunts, squeals, and bleats, handle trainloads of meat-bearing animals.

From all over the South buyers flock to Wichita's busy mule market. "Missouri mockingbirds," they nickname these agile, shapely, but sterile hybrids, whose quick heels pack a lot of dynamite.

Metropolis of this state is Kansas City, Kan. On the Missouri side: shops that sell boots, big sombreros, and horse gear; on the Kansas side: a big, busy town of mills, packing plants, soap factories—and the fine homes of many who ride over to daily affairs in the big Missouri town across the river.

In sheer size, colossal Santa Fe shops and offices easily dominate Topeka, almost obscuring even the statehouse. Brisk industries abound, ranging from meat products and flour to the printing and metal trades.

Curious among industries is one which packs horse meat for export to France. Hub of the state's highway system, served by four railways and by ample water and power plants, Topeka is a good example of a well-balanced, mature American provincial city.

Round, fecund earth knows no better corn land than east Kansas. Most corn is not sold for cash; it is turned into money through the alimentary canal of livestock, particularly pigs.

Want to Go Home

Washington.—Congress is packing its duds. It doesn't know exactly what date it will go home, but go home it will, in just a few weeks more.

I suppose that when they go, there will be a certain amount of criticism about the do-nothing congress. Particularly will they hear barks that they have left the nation's most important problem unsolved.

Let us look back a bit. It must be agreed, I believe, that recovery is the foremost problem. Recovery plans must be divided. Attention must be given, first, to relief of the destitute, the unemployed.

As the session wore on, unemployment increased until the other day the social security board made public figures showing that about 10,000,000 persons were receiving government assistance of one kind or another—almost 6,300,000 families.

Then, there came from the President the request for the use of further money, some six billion dollars of it. It was the so-called lending-appeal program that has just been enacted and the congress, anxious to avoid conflict with presidential will, rubbed its collective hands and said, in effect, "There! That takes care of the unemployed."

So we will have new post offices, new bridges, new roads, new this and new that—some time. Those things can not be put over on a day's notice. It takes time to get them started where they will employ workers.

After that money is spent, then what? My conviction is that we will be just where we started. That is to say, we will be just where we were three years ago.

Since the pump priming and the other spending ideas failed to accomplish anything in the other trials, there seems to be no reason to expect the new outlay of cash to do more than create a new high record for the national debt.

But I said at the outset that there were others to blame. This fact has been brought to the fore by the condition lately much publicized in Chicago and Cleveland.

Let me repeat that: The states have failed to assume their proper share of responsibility! They have consistently done so, and the reason they have been chiseling and pulling at the federal teat is because they have been taught by the Washington government through six or eight years that they could do it and get away with it.

It has come to such a pass these days that few state politicians dare to suggest at home that they raise the relief funds locally. It would be political suicide, they feel.

If one is really going to trace this thing down to its start, I believe it has to go back to Herbert Hoover's administration. It will be recalled that Mr. Hoover proposed and obtained congressional action on a plan by which the Reconstruction Finance corporation was created.

There is a phase of this control from Washington upon which I want to record a few especial observations. I refer to the great waste that occurs when the federal government attempts to handle such a delicate and direct proposition as relief.

Such things as this are bound to happen, however, when the states, counties and cities lean so heavily on Washington. Citizens lose control when they let their politicians dodge responsibility by calling on Washington for everything.

I suppose, however, that it is not in the interest of the politicians to bring about recovery in a normal way, whether they are local or state or national politicians. If they can accomplish election the way it is now being done, they may as well continue.

Let me repeat that: The states have failed to assume their proper share of responsibility! They have consistently done so, and the reason

It is going to require many years of effort to restore states to their own boundaries. Long Road Ahead They have got themselves into debt with the federal government; they have found how easy it is to do that and they will do more, unless the people themselves realize what it means.

During 20 minutes they listened spellbound while she talked. At first Margarida Fonseca seemed a volcano on the verge of eruption; while occasionally she protested with a snort of startling volume, to no statement did she deign to voice actual denial. But gradually—very gradually—the scowl began to clear from her brow, her clenched fists relaxed, a gleam of admiration dawned in her eyes and at last the smile Joyce had seen only once before transfigured her expression.

"Ah!" cried the ex-minister of war, and it sounded like a groan of understanding mixed with rage. "It is clear what happened—too clear! Licenciada Fonseca baited the hook, Onelia gladly swallowed it. By abandoning you to your fate in La Barranca without killing Dorado they created an unparalleled international situation which made me totter. One more push would send me over with a crash, and Onelia herself supplied the impulse by facilitating the theft of the howitzers and casting the blame on me. Ah, senorita, you did well by yourself to bring me here today. All hail!"

Without bothering to take his leave, he rushed from the room. A shadow swept across Margarida's face, but promptly cleared. "Well, chica," she rumbled, "what wouldn't I give to have you for a partner?"

"No more than I'd give to have you for a friend," said Joyce from her heart. "Oh, Margarida, please be my friend."

"No," said Margarida, tossing her iron-gray mane of hair. "Impossible. I detest you gringos—all of you and all you stand for. Your insufferable pride in dynamics as the true and only end of man. Your price labels on everything pertaining to the soul. You jeer at our thieves' market; what about your juries, weighing gold against bushels of injured hearts? I could go on for an hour, but enough is enough. At the end we'd have to arrive at the truth. I love you, chica, my little one, and I've always wished I might have a tiger just your size for a pet. You're adorable."

Dirk's telephoning from the embassy now bore fruit. Pablo entered and whispered to him, withdrew and a minute later came back accompanied by a respectable though threadbare individual. The newcomer seemed nervous, at odds with his surroundings and the company in which he found himself. He had the look of a man whose world has been yanked from under him, leaving him floating in air out of reach of help from heaven or hell. He regarded the ambassador, Joyce and even Margarida Fonseca's arresting presence with lackluster eyes, then turned to Dirk.

"I'm the Reverend Ellerton Jones," he announced in the ghost of a voice. "I understand you sent for me, Mr. Van Suttart, but I'm not at all sure—not at all sure—"

"Sit down, sir," said Dirk, "and let's talk the thing over. This is more or less a family gathering. The ambassador isn't an ambassador this afternoon; he's acting as my father. As for Licenciada Margarida Fonseca, one of the highlights of the Mexican bar, she's a very dear friend of the girl whom I wish to marry, Miss Joyce Sewell. Surely you'll help us out."

"That's the trouble," said the lost soul doubtfully. "I don't have to tell you, do I? My charge is gone. I have no rights, civil or otherwise—scarcely the right to live. I'm here on sufferance. That's what I meant. I'm not at all sure—"

"Are you in good standing with your church at home?" broke in the ambassador.

"Yes, oh, yes. I'm awaiting my recall; no—that's not quite true, I await the means with which to return."

"As long as you're a regularly ordained minister," said the ambassador, "that's all that the home states of these two young people require."

"Please, sir," said Dirk earnestly, "please, Mr. Jones, do let's be cheerful on this loveliest of all afternoons. You can make Joyce and myself very happy in about five minutes, if you will, and we'll try to do the same by you. Say I send you back home in style—drawing room, airplane, or if you like to drive I'll give you a car. What about it, sir? I don't want to rush you but there are two more clergymen waiting on your decision out in the patio."

Abruptly the lackluster eyes came to life; never dreaming how readily some men can lie Mr. Jones tugged a small worn book from his hip pocket and murmured, "Let us proceed with the ceremony."

A strange wedding if there ever was one. It started on a note of haste and levity, but so moving and powerful are the words hallowed by time and usage to Anglo-Saxon ears that a spirit of reverence swept into the room as wings unseen yet surely felt. What though the voice of the preacher was the voice of habit, precise in intonation, humdrum in intent; it could not lessen the surge of emotion which took possession of the hearts of his hearers, choked their throats and turned dry eyes luminous. To the sight of the men and the woman present and in the sight of God no longer were Joyce and Dirk arrayed in whipcord and saddle-stained moleskin, nor yet in silk or broadcloth. They were clothed in light, their faces bathed in a glory from within which presaged a devotion beyond any that lips alone can pledge.

The ambassador put his arm around Joyce, kissed her and stood looking down into her eyes. "My dear, I've never given away a sweeter bride to a more lovable boy." He turned his head to look at Dirk. "What now?" he asked. "When do you intend to return to your job?"

"That's up to Joyce, sir," said Dirk. "I've married her. I mean the whole of me has married her. I've just heard some words I've never heard before in my life—though I and you and everybody else know them by heart. I take them as they stand."

"He means it!" murmured the ambassador and returned his attention to Joyce. "What about it, ray dear? I understand you have no use for embassies and all their works. What do you want Dirk to do—shake his job and become a drone?"

"A drone?" gasped Joyce, and caught her lip lest she laugh. She left his side, walked toward a window, and turned. "You're a great ambassador," she stated gravely. "I've known you only an hour and already you stir in me something I'll have to call love—one of the sweeter kinds of love—because there's no other word that comes near it. I can imagine that sort of power doing good no matter where a man walks. If Dirk, like you, is headed toward awaking the love of his fellow man—not of his nationals, his fellow man—what difference does it make where we live, what path he and I take together?"

"That's up to Joyce, sir," said Dirk.

The ambassador stared at her, then turned very slowly to look at Dirk. "That's your release, Dirk, and I don't mind saying you've cut out a full-sized job for yourself whether you stay under me or go. Want more time to think it over?"

"Yes, sir."

"How long?"

Dirk looked at Joyce and she answered for him. "Long enough to settle with Dorado."

There was a disturbance in the hallway; General Sebastiano, fuming with impatience, opened the door for himself and hastened toward the ambassador. "Excellent," he cried, "I have accomplished much since I left here. I have been closeted with the president himself and return with a budget of news. For your relief let me say at once that our troubles are over."

"Which trouble?" asked the ambassador feelingly.

"All, all," said the general. "Our countries can be at peace as never before and we may yet look upon the incident of La Barranca as a godsend."

"That would be good news with a vengeance," murmured the ambassador. "So it's the president himself who found the solution?"

"A perfect one and so simple it cuts the Gordian knot at a single stroke. What was the situation? A young girl, with the eyes of the world upon her, battling to hold her own property—international dynamite as you yourself admitted. Had my government followed your suggestion of sending a battalion to fetch her out we would have become ridiculous; but reverse the objective and you have a stroke of genius."

"I don't follow you," said the ambassador testily.

"Send a battalion to keep her in," continued the general with slow emphasis. "In short, the president suggests that the government support the Mexican-born senorita Joyce Sewell in the lawful possession of her property, subject only to such restrictions as the national law provides, by every means in the power of the republic. As a first step he has directed me to dispatch at once a sufficient force for the capture of General Dorado—bandit, bootlegger of illicit gold, and purloiner of a battery of howitzers."

"Directed you?" asked the ambassador with emphasis on the pronoun. "Why not General Onelia?"

"Ah, Onelia. The president ordered his instant arrest, simultaneously with my reappointment as minister of war. Incidentally, the traitor is no more."

"You mean Onelia's dead?" cried the ambassador.

"Through his own fault," asserted General Sebastiano sorrowfully, "and only in the last half-hour." Then he added in explanation, "Our regrettable national habit of ley de fuga—shot while attempting to escape from his guards."

Margarida advanced with hand extended. "Mr. Minister," she rumbled, "let me be the first to congratulate you on the resumption of the portfolio you know so well how to administer to your own honor and the honor of our country." She marched onward and turned in the door. "I trust both your excellencies will keep me in mind as a good lawyer though an honest woman."

Dirk went out with the clergyman; the ambassador withdrew, arm in arm with the minister of war, each aglow with plans for a rapprochement that would bring glory to both. Joyce, the small cause of weighty matters, was left alone. Standing at a high window she watched their excellencies depart but turned at the sound of a footstep. She and Dirk hung poised for a breathless moment with the room between them. Slowly they moved forward. The days they had spent together seemed to lengthen into years, reaching back into a common childhood and knitting the innermost fibers of their being. Their hands touched, clung, and as they looked deep in each other's eyes the same tear was born in them, the same silent cry: "This is I; if I lose you I'm lost, torn, maimed." Then his arms opened and she crushed herself against him.

"Oh, Dirk! Darling! Dirk!"

"Don't worry," he whispered thickly. "I feel it too, Joyce. We won't lose each other, we can't. I love you—all of me loves all of you. Nothing ever can happen to one of us again."

She raised her face, blinding with its incandescence. Their kiss opened the floodgates of the heart and swept their veins with fire. Life with its inevitable pitfalls stretched far and wide before them, but one thing they knew: this was the topmost pinnacle of surrender. Never could they give again what now they gave, never step back out of that world of love to which all other loves are but an echo.

(THE END)

Historians Given Unpublished Letters

Written by Explorer Meriwether Lewis

Hitherto unknown—or unconfirmed—sidelights on the life of Meriwether Lewis, co-explorer with William Clark of the Northwest, have been revealed with the bequest to the Missouri Historical society of unpublished letters written by the great explorer and scout, according to a St. Louis United Press correspondent in the Detroit Free Press.

Scholars have been working on the letters and documents, which were given to the society by the late Dr. Meriwether Lewis Anderson, a descendant of Lewis. Anderson died at Richmond, Va.

Included in the group are numerous letters written by the explorer to his mother. One, written in 1795, when he was twenty, was in a semi-apologetic tone for his seeming inability to stay home. He had enlisted with some Virginia troops at the time, and wrote:

"So violently opposed is my governing passion for rambling to the wishes of all my friends, that I am led intentionally to err and then have vanity enough to hope for forgiveness."

"I do not know how to account for this Quixotic disposition of mine in any other manner or its being inflicted by any other cause than that of having inherited it in right of the Meriwether family."

He asked his mother to forgive him on that basis; then promised to let her know of his whereabouts "by every opportunity."

One of the prizes of the new additions to the society's already large collection of Lewis-Clark material is a letter written by Lewis to his mother in July, 1803, less than a year before he departed on the expedition which was to make his name prominent in the history of American exploration.

Regarding his prospects with optimism, he wrote:

"The nature of this expedition is by no means dangerous."

He assured her that the route was to be "altogether through tribes of Indians who are perfectly friendly to the United States. For its fatigues I feel myself perfectly prepared, nor do I doubt by health and strength of constitution to bear it. I go with the utmost preconviction in my mind of returning safe."

His preconviction proved reliable, but he and his small band of companions did not make the journey without hardship. The expedition did not turn out to be "by no means dangerous" nor were the Indians always "perfectly friendly."

Lewis and Clark started from a point near St. Louis early in 1804. They were gone nearly two and one-half years. With the object of learning something of the possibilities of the half-unknown Louisiana Purchase which Thomas Jefferson had made, the two men followed the Missouri river to its sources and beyond, up to the Pacific ocean. They returned to St. Louis in the early autumn of 1806.

Lewis Burke

— And R U Listenin'?

Speaker— "My friend, I think that Franklin D. Roosevelt is the greatest man this country has ever seen."

Rancher— "I'm against him."
Speaker— "Don't you know that behind every man there is a supreme power which controls and influences him?"

Rancher— "I'm against her, too."

WE OBSERVE

Ziegler Bros. Store has had its front repainted and the signs done over, with one additional notice in front of the store, i. e., "Groceries."

The Burnett Grocery and Market is decorated up with a new coat of paint, and also a sign "Burnett Grocery and Market."

The Outlook office also has a new coat of paint and new signs. — Yes, the work was done by George, the painter on all three of these buildings.

That the Harvey Service Station has a new sign, "Texaco," towering over the building. It is illuminated at night.

A magazine subscription man was met at the door by the colored maid. "I'd like to see the lady of the house," he said. "Lawdy, I specs you would— she's takh' a bath!"

"I see by the paper that the President has been allotted 5 Billion dollars to spend as he sees fit," observes O. F. M. "In the vernacular of baseball, 'There goes your old ball game.'"

Senator Perry Sears says he'll "Ride the Winner" concerning the recent Bond election for repairing the old Lincoln County Court House at Carrizozo.

Senator Sears offers his congratulations to the winners? We hear that there is another angle to this affair— Does the distinguished Senator mean what he says?

— If you think that the paper isn't read, just say something about a certain individual.

Gunther Kroggel placed a bet on Max Schmeling the first time he fought Joe Louis. Louis was the favored pugilist, and in fact Kroggel was the only man in town who bet on the German; he won't forsake his nationality; "Deutschland Uber Alles?"

—"I certainly wish Schmeling would win the fray this time," observes Mr. Henry Lutz. "It won't be exactly healthy for him to go back to the country of Hell Hitler, if he loses this world's championship bout with the Brown Bomber."

— Do we make ourselves clear, or shall we continue?

John Miller, Ed Harris, Wayne Van Schoyck and Charles Littell are always in attendance at the Carrizozo American Legion Baseball game. "The Four Horsemen" as they are termed, would sooner watch a ball game than eat.

So, Adios. — And lots of good luck, everybody! Thanks for listenin' to you — and we do mean YOU.
