

School Notes

The Frontier Days are over and we wish to thank all who made our floats possible. We were pleasantly surprised when the announcement was made that the Elementary Grades won first place in Friday morning's parade.

On Friday, Sept. 23, the Carrizozo High School Football team will play a night game at Alamogordo. The boys showed improvement by defeating Captain 7 to 0 on Saturday, the 17. The boys are looking forward to giving Alamo a tough fight.

Six post-graduates have now enrolled in the Carrizozo High School. This shows that the young people are industrious and willing to work for more education.

We have received six new Underwood typewriters for the Commercial Department. A new master noiseless Underwood was placed in the Superintendent's office. Our Commercial Department has become one of the strongest departments of the Carrizozo High School; every post-graduate this year is taking work in the Commercial Department.

We wish to thank Mr. Shafter for his donation of splendid books to the high school library.

Plans are underway for the regular initiation of all freshmen. The seniors have planned many novel stunts for the freshmen. This will provide amusement for everyone and many worth while experiences for the freshmen. It has been reported that a definite onion odor is common to the freshmen class. The Kangaroo Court will be held in the next few days. The freshmen have thus far shown themselves to be good sports, and the student body feels that they will make a great contribution of many worth while things to the Carrizozo-High School.

The Alumni Association met last Thursday evening in the auditorium. They planned a semi-formal ball for Saturday, Oct. 15 at Community Hall. All educators of Lincoln County will receive an invitation. The public in general will be invited at $1.00 per couple and 25c for spectators. The various committees are making elaborate preparations for the biggest scholastic event of the year.

Harold Hoffman will be the football reporter for the New Mexico Sentinel. He received his official appointment Sept. 21.

New Beauty Parlor

Sallie Mae Reynolds, graduate in beauty culture, will soon open an up-to-date beauty parlor in the place formerly occupied by Mrs. Erva Claunch.

Mrs. Reynolds recently resigned from a position with the Roswell Beauty Shoppe, with which she had been connected for the past 18 months. A short time ago, she decided to locate in Carrizozo. She is well provided with the latest equipment and her line of work in her profession, will be set forth in her ad which will appear in this paper next week. She invites her old friends to come in and investigate the new parlor and also others whom she hopes will become new acquaintances and patrons.

The Lincoln County Singing Convention meets at Capitan the 2nd Sunday in October and the Saturday night before. Everyone invited. Bring baskets for Sunday dinner. — Chairman.

WOMAN'S CLUB

Met at the home of the President, Mrs. John E. Hall, Friday, Sept. 16, at 8 p. m., with 28 members and guests present. Mrs. Louis Adams led the club's singing with Mrs. Hendron at the piano.

Various reports of the standing committees were given:

Art—Mrs. Grace Jones. Literature—Mrs. Snyder. Public Welfare—Mrs. Blaney, and under this, a suggestion made by her to mark our landing field. Courtesy—Mrs. Kelley, and a request to let her know when any club member is sick. Membership—Mrs. Williams, and several new members. Building Com.—Mrs. Jones, and she said they were to start on adobe very soon for the new building. The financing of the bond was explained by Mrs. Blaney.

Mrs. Shaver reported a Mexican supper to be held the last of October. Mrs. Finley told of the Methodist Missionary Society making a cook book and requested the club to sell some on commission.

The program, "Geography of New Mexico," in charge of Mrs. Blaney. 1. Introduction, location, etc. Mrs. Blaney. 2. Example of ranch recreation, Mrs. Margie Clouse by proxy. Songs, Charles Bunch, Gerald and Ray Cooper, guitar accompaniment. 3. How the geography of New Mexico influenced the Indian mode of living, Mrs. Snyder. 4. Recreation spots of Lincoln Co., Mrs. E. Williams. 5. Resume of my trip to Alaska, "The Boat Trip," Mrs. John Hall.

The committee, Meses D. English, Hall, Titsworth, Degitz, Lemon, Van Schoyck and C. E. Smith, served lovely refreshments of chocolate, yellow and white cakes and punch.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Thornton were business visitors from their ranch near Oscura Thursday. The Thorntons were delegates to the Republican Convention, held on that day.

Mrs. Maggie Espy, son Lawrence and wife and daughter, Mrs. Myrtle LaValles, returned last Friday from a two weeks' visit with Mrs. Espy's other daughter, Mrs. C. C. Fordyce at Newburg, Mo. They had a pleasant visit, liked old Missouri very well, but prefer their New Mexico. Mrs. Fordyce will be remembered as the attractive Ella Rowland, who was reared here and received her education in the local schools.

Julian Serna of Capitan is receiving treatment at a local hospital this week and is much improved.

Mrs. May Phillips and sister, Mrs. W. R. Martin, are leaving soon for Dublin, Texas, where Mrs. Phillips will visit for about a month and will return about Nov. 1.

The Fall Opening Ball of the Carrizozo Country Club will be held on the night of Oct. 1.

Mrs. Juanita St. John Marquez was taken to El Paso, where she was operated on yesterday, and according to Judge St. John, who came from there this morning, she is doing nicely.

Harry Ryberg of his ranch near Corona was a business visitor in town Thursday, and made this office a friendly call while here.

New Deal Party

To-Name Ticket

R. P. Fryar, state chairman of the New Deal party, announced Thursday that a nominating convention of the party has been called to meet in Las Vegas Sept. 27 in the Normal University Auditorium.

Reports from Clovis said that there is a strong sentiment in New Deal party to draft C. E. Mauldin for the nomination for governor.

The belief among them is that John E. Miles, if nominated by the Democrats, cannot carry the eastern Democratic counties against Mauldin.

Fryar said there has been a large number of members of both old parties promising support for the New Deal party because they do not believe either will carry out its platform promises.

"Strong belief prevails in eastern counties that if Miles were elected the primary law would be repealed, as Miles, Chavez and Dempsey are opposed to any primary law if they can control the Democratic party," Fryar said.

Father And Son Get Death Penalty

The Mixon trial which drew large crowds, terminated Monday, after a week of time in which attorneys for state and defense battled for positions as the testimonies were given. Judge Frenger's instructions to the jury were of the clearest and most conclusive of any we have ever heard. The charge was so complete and the instructions on which the jury might return a verdict on murder in the first, second degree or acquittal were so plain and pointed, that it left no doubt as to what their duties were and left no grounds for the jury to return for further instructions. To his credit, let us say that it was a masterpiece of the highest type from an eminent jurist of a high degree.

District Attorney Threat and assistant Clayton made remarkable progress in the face of the fact that the evidence produced was all of a circumstantial nature. Attorney for the defense, Wm. Sutherland, handled his side of the case well in consideration of the fact that he was burdened with the task of meeting the strong evidence produced by the state. The jury retired after instructions and returned in forty-five minutes with a verdict of guilty in the first degree. Louis Mixon was dismissed by the court before the case went to the jury.

The case of Dan and Mrs. Jackson of Alamogordo to be heard here on a change of venue, was taken up Tuesday and contrary to thought, Jackson pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree. Mrs. Jackson was released.

Ben Mixon and son Randall were sentenced to die in the electric chair on Dec. 19, between the hours of 6 and 10 o'clock in the morning. They were convicted for the murder of Geo. Roberts and Ed Ferguson at Ancho on the night of July 22. Jackson killed Mrs. Leadinghaus of Alamogordo last February.

Jackson was sentenced to the penitentiary to not less than 50 nor more than 60 years.

Fair & Frontier Days

The Fair & Frontier Days drew a record-breaking crowd and the committee which met Tuesday night at Capitan, reports the affair highly successful. The business houses had a good trade, the merry-go-rounds gave the kids a thrill, the dances furnished amusement for those so inclined and everybody had a good time. Regardless of outside concessions, the Lyric Theatre enjoyed good attendances both nights.

On Wednesday, Oct. 5, the club will entertain the teachers of the Carrizozo schools and at a near future date, it will listen to an address on taxation from Rupert P. Republican Convention

The County Republican convention, the call for which was published in this paper, convened yesterday at Community Hall with a large attendance from over the county. The convention was called to order by chairman Wm. Gallacher and the temporary chairman for the meeting was Heck Johnson. Mrs. Melvin Richardson was chosen as secretary. After the various committees were appointed, a recess was taken until 1:30, when on re-assembling, the convention listened to the reports of said committees, all of which were adopted as read.

A letter was read from Mrs. Alice French, who is in Albuquerque, to the effect that as she held the compliment on part of the Lincoln County Republicans in endorsing her for State School Superintendent, she could not possibly agree to have her name mentioned as a candidate for that position.

Wm. Gallacher offered his resignation as county chairman and nominated Eddie Long of Capitan for the position. Mr. Long was unanimously chosen by a rising vote. Mrs. Melvin Richardson was chosen as Vice-Chairman and Don English as secretary of the County Central Committee. A recess was taken for two weeks, when the convention will again convene at Capitan to select a county ticket for the fall election.

The convention adjourned after selecting 30 delegates to the State Convention which is to convene at Albuquerque Monday, Sept. 26.

Comeback of Di Mag Makes Yanks Happy

By GEORGE A. BARCLAY

AS THE New York Yankees have thundered down the home stretch in the American league pennant race, piling up a lead that could not be challenged, the denizens of Gotham's "Little Italy" have been happy.

In the early days of the season when Joe was in the dog-house with the Yankee ownership and his bat was feeble, there was consternation in "Little Italy."

If "Little Italy" was happy over Di Maggio's revival, so was Joe Mc-

JOE DI MAGGIO

Carthy, for once again this astute manager's faith in a ball player was vindicated. McCarthy is noted for striking with a player when the averages are throwing him down.

Joe Is Game

That might have discouraged the average manager, but not Joe McCarthy. He went Malone back for his sixth start. Pat justified this confidence by winning that game and going on to become one of the most effective pitchers in the National League.

And so Joe Di Maggio in the latest reward of McCarthy's loyalty. Joe's troubles this year started with his holdout demand for $40,000, after a brilliant 1937 season.

Obviously out of condition because of missing the training trip, he missed the first ten days of the season and one of the disciplinary measures adopted by Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the club, for this recalcitrant holdout was to dock Joe at the rate of $12 for each game he missed, or a total of $1,200.

Joe Gets Going

The going wasn't easy for Joe in the early stages of the season. The hits didn't blast into the outfield as they had in his two previous years and a home run was something of a curiosity.

Finishing his third year in the big leagues, Joe Di Maggio can rest and love his soul. His batting average, and also his record for runs batted in and runs scored mark him as one of baseball's greats.

Those who know this young Italian say Di Maggio is a misunderstood player. He has a reputation for aloofness that borders on the snooty. This is shyness, say his friends.

Softball School

THE axiom that England's battles of tomorrow are being won today on the playing fields of Harrow and Eton might be paraphrased for baseball as follows: Major league games of tomorrow are being won on softball fields of today.

For the outstanding baseball finds of the past several years got their start playing softball.

Joe Di Maggio was a softball player before he jumped to baseball and started toward the hall of fame as a member of the New York Yankees. His sensational young teammate, Tom Henrich, broke into the game via the softball diamond.

Baseball men who watched the world's championship softball tournament in Chicago which drew teams from 44 states of the Union, agreed that a player who can attain a respectable batting average against competent moundsmen in the fast ball pitching events, should be able to hit a baseball without exceeding difficulty.

The softball pitcher stands only 40 feet away from the batter at home plate, whereas the baseball pitcher stands 60 feet away. The ball he uses is not much larger than a regulation baseball—12 inches in circumference compared to 9 1/4. It is nearly as hard. It comes to the batter with almost blinding speed when thrown by a star softball pitcher.

Far from scoffing at softball as a sissy game, thoughtful baseball men frankly agree that it may be effective in preparing a youngster for baseball later on. Says Joe Cronin, manager of the Boston Red Sox:

Here and There

GREATEST fullback in the Middle West this fall will be Howie Welsh, of the University of Wisconsin, according to Coach Harry Stuhldreher. The Longwood Cricket club of Chestnut Hills, Mass., has the first tennis racket it ever purchased. It was bought April 24, 1978, or 50 years ago.

Shake-Up Time

WHEN the winter baseball meetings are held several months hence, it is the prophecy of informed baseball men that there will be more trades between big league teams than the national game has experienced in a long time.

It is conceded that three teams—the New York Giants, and the Chicago Cubs in the National League and the Cleveland Indians in the American League—are most in need of overhauling if they are to be pleasant contenders again next year.

CONNIE MACK

Few managers would be prepared to take the drastic steps used by Connie Mack of the Philadelphia Athletics on two occasions years ago when he decided his team had passed their peak of baseball usefulness to him and could still bring a handsome profit.

But Managers Terry, Hartnett, and Vitt, respectively, will be unusually receptive to trades that will replace failing or degraded players with fresh performers.

BILLIONS of TOOTHPICKS

A Yankee Brought the Idea from South America; Now These Tiny Splinters Provide a Big Industry in the Busy State of Maine.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

BY WHATEVER avenue he enters the state of Maine, the newcomer promptly realizes that it can best be described as a land of trees.

Forests cover more than three-fourths of the area. The present 15 million acres of woodland represent a shrinkage of less than 20 per cent from the primeval condition. In recent years the few salients slowly won along the forest border by newly cleared farms are much more than offset by the steady push of pine, spruce, fir, and hemlock seedlings, everywhere winning back abandoned fields.

At the first session of its legislature, Maine adopted a seal with the north star as the crest, below which the shield carries the white pine and moose; the two monarchs of the Maine woods. The description of the seal, in the 1820 laws of Maine, says of the pine: "It is as well the staple of the commerce of Maine, as the pride of her forests."

After the spring breakup in Maine, logs are drifted down rivers to the saw mills. It's the job of these log rollers, with caulked shoes, to keep the lumber moving.

cone and tassel was declared by legislative resolve to be the floral emblem of Maine, having been selected by an informal popular referendum.

As early as 1656, the town authorities of South Berwick passed an order against waste of timber. In more recent times forest conservation was accepted as a business policy, and protective measures against fire were early adopted and generously supported by timberland owners, even before state laws were passed.

The first sawmill in America was built near York in 1623, and another at South Berwick in 1631; and 50 years later there were 24 mills in the province of Maine, including the first saw mill on the continent at a site aptly named Great Works.

In a way the royal navy's timber policy contributed to the Revolu-

Much of America's paper comes from trees felled in the Maine woods. Here the timber is being shredded preparatory to paper manufacture.

The "broad arrow," which in English forests was the sign of naval authority over chosen trees, did not hit the mark when introduced into New England. The commanding of mast pines was regarded by the colonists as an invasion of property rights.

A diameter of two feet being the lower limit for "broad arrow" trees, the Maine sawmills turned out boards just within the limit, so that roofs of old houses of that period show splendid pine boards 22 or 23 inches wide, but almost never one of 24 inches.

Scores of "broad-arrow" lawsuits were tried, but impartial juries were impossible to find for most cases. The prejudice against masts reached a climax at the outbreak of the Revolution, when the export of masts was violently stopped, the opposition at Falmouth leading later to the bombardment and burning of that town.

One "broad arrow" inspector in his report mentioned one pine of over 17 feet in circumference. In time, Bangor became the world's largest lumber-shipping port, and in 1830 Maine led all states in output of lumber.

The three decades of the Twentieth century have witnessed the heaviest cuts of the whole 300 years of lumbering in Maine. But there is good reason to believe that at present Maine spruce and fir are growing faster than they are being cut.

More spectacular than the 300-year life of the lumber industry has been the development of pulp and paper-making. This has become the state's largest industry, with Maine leading all other states in pulp production from 1914 to 1930.

The white birch, which adds so much beauty to the scenery of river bank and lake shore, is converted into spools, shoe-pegs, clothespins, and toothpicks. In the form of toothpicks, the annual output of which reaches scores of billions, Maine birch is exported largely to the Latin countries on both sides of the Atlantic.

For more than two and a half centuries shipbuilding flourished and became the chief industry in 50 coast and river towns. The clipper-ship era was when Maine came into her own with these beautiful ships built of Maine timber by Maine builders, and largely officered and manned by natives of Maine whose birthright was a knowledge of the ways of the sea.

Bath not only won fame for its wooden ships, but when iron and steel replaced oak and pine, Bath met the new demand by building the first steel sailing vessel, a four-masted ship.

Government Must Be Kept Liberal, Cry of President and Spokesmen

Roosevelt's Definition of Term Means He Has Cast Die For Realignment of Political Parties; Time May Prove Fallacy of Today's Liberal Doctrines.

By WILLIAM BRUCKART WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—There is a great to-do being made these days about "liberalism." We are told in the press, through the radio, in personal conversations that "liberalism," liberal thinking, is vitally necessary; it is urgent that our government be kept liberal, and that our daily lives be moulded along liberal lines.

President Roosevelt says so, and sought in a recent speech to define liberalism; his spokesmen repeat and emphasize what he has said; the vast army of ballyhoo artists on the government payroll is saying it after the manner of a stooge for a ventriloquist. A lot of Republicans, trying to ape the New Dealers, are saying it, too, and making just as much of a mess of the proposition as the less slick-tongued among the New Dealers.

Well, any way, at any cost, there must be liberalism. If we don't be liberal, we are warned, the devil will get us. The nation, its 130,000,000 inhabitants and all of their works will sink to the depth of perdition. It's a very sorry situation, indeed.

Recognizing the need, the urgent necessity for liberalism, Mr. Roosevelt undertook recently to define it. I quote his words from a recent speech in Maryland where he had gone to try to bring about the defeat of Sen. Millard Tydings in a race for the Democratic senatorial nomination:

"For example, Mr. A is a composite conservative. He admitted that in 1933, interest rates charged by private bankers to ordinary citizens who wanted to finance a farm were altogether too high; he admitted that there were sharp practices, excesses and abuses in issuing securities and buying and selling stocks and bonds; he admitted that the hours of work in his factory were too long; he admitted that old people, who became destitute through no fault of their own, were a problem; he admitted that national and international economics and speculation made farming and fishing extremely hazardous occupations; and he even admitted that the buying power of farmers and fishermen had not kept pace with the buying power of other kinds of workers."

"But conservative Mr. A not only declined to take any lead in solving these problems in co-operation with the government. He even found fault with and opposed, openly or secretly, almost every suggestion that was put forward by those who belonged to the liberal school of thought."

"Mr. B, I said, was a composite liberal. He not only admitted the needs and the problems like Mr. A, but he put his shoulder under the load; he gave active study and active support to working out methods, in co-operation with the government, for solving the problems and the filling of the needs. Mr. B did not claim that the remedies were perfect, but he knew that we had to start with something less than perfect in this imperfect world."

Mr. Roosevelt's pronouncement on what constitutes a liberal followed very closely a statement he had issued in a meeting with the newspaper correspondents at the White House, saying that he had no objection to election of "liberal Republicans." Said he: "If there is a good liberal running on the Republican ticket, I would not have the slightest objection to his election. The good of the country rises above party."

The importance of these two declarations? Mr. Roosevelt has cast the die for a new alignment of political parties. He has swept aside all previous bonds that held men and women within the Democratic party or the Republican party or the lesser political groups and has said, in effect, "Come with me into a new fusion of forces and action." Of course, no one who has studied Mr. Roosevelt's course since his political ears were first pinned back in defeat of his malodorous plan to add six justices of his own choosing to the United States Supreme court could have failed to recognize this eventually. He was planning to force realignment in politics in this country for some months; but now the thing is, out in the open, and the Democrats and Republicans, alike, know what confronts them if it is their desire to maintain the present political party setup.

What will happen is quite another question. Undoubtedly, the Democratic party will be the greater sufferer. It has to be so, because Mr. Roosevelt became titular head of the Democratic party by virtue of election to the presidency in 1932 and again in 1936 as the candidate of that party. So many of the former Democrats have become wedded to the New Deal either by conviction or as a result of having won office on New Deal coat tails that there is so turning back for them;

Thus, there is a split, with those who subscribe to the New Deal theory of liberalism on the one hand and the Democrats who adhere to the hundred-year-old principles of the Democratic party on the other. There will be some Republicans drawn into the new alignment, but they will be fewer than the wing formed from Democrats. The Republicans who will go over to any new alignment will be of the type of Harold Ickes, now secretary of the interior, Senator Norris of Nebraska (who once wore a Republican label) and others of the here-today-gone-tomorrow category.

And further, as to what will happen: my observation is that these so-called liberal movements don't last very long. They crack up on the very principles which are supposed to be their foundation stones. Always, there are too many "leaders." Every "liberal," who catalogues himself as such, shouts about it and produces plans for saving the world wherever anybody will listen, conceives himself to be a leader. Someway, the ideas and ideals of these liberal leaders always differ. Each invariably takes the position that his plans must be adopted unanimously or the world will go to pot.

Ideas Subject to Quick Change; Try Something Else

Then, too, their ideas are subject to such quick change that few of them are retained very long. They are cast aside for something else that has more glamor. A case in point is an incident of recent history. After New Dealer Senator Pope had been licked for the Idaho Democratic nomination for senator by the youthful Worth Clark, there was talk among the New Dealers about having Senator Pope seek reelection independently; it was proposed and discussed with Mr. Roosevelt whether Senator Pope should embrace the faith of the La Follette's Progressive ticket in Idaho. It was found, however, that the LaFollette had a candidate for the senate on their ticket. To the suggestion that he withdraw and let Senator Pope be their candidate, the LaFollette spokesman said; no, indeed Senator Pope isn't progressive enough, for us—and Senator Pope had campaigned as a 100 per cent New Dealer.

One can walk around the halls of congress any day when the session is on and find hundred-per-centers arguing how far "reform" must be carried; what "liberalism" means. And, in downtown Washington, where the really important headmen of liberalism are to be found, they are constantly fuming and fretting at each other. Instances are on record where two rabid liberals actually have sought to get each other discredited in the eyes of the President because of their differences over what liberalism means.

The only thing about which they seem to agree is that anyone who insists on sanity in governmental thinking—anyone who takes heed of lessons of experiences and traditions of the past—must, of necessity be a Tory, a bloodsucker, a trampler of the poor, an obstructionist, a "republican," or some other animal in human form who is overcome with personal greed. On that point, the liberals that we see in the government these days present a united front.

Time May Prove Fallacy Of Today's Liberal Ideas

That is the story of the self-appointed liberals. To them has been given the right—in their own minds, at least—to guide the destinies of the nation. I assume that if they regard me at all they classify me as coming from across the railroad tracks, question my mental balance. But I shall continue to study their methods, commend what is good, criticize that which is obviously unsound. More important, I shall continue to cling to the doctrine of the ages that human nature is going to be changed by some Power that is considerably above the level of human intelligence; I shall hold to a conviction that real progress comes by that method and not from the crackpots who look upon the human race as a fresh litter of guinea-pigs.

But, anyway, we have liberalism defined at last by a man who is qualified to define it, and we find that it differs from what liberalism formerly meant. It was only a few generations ago that liberalism meant restricting, not increasing, the powers of government. Neither Mr. Roosevelt's definition nor his record in office coincides with the former understanding of the word. It seems to me likely, therefore, that we will go on for quite some years with this quarrel, and that may be—and this is just a hunch—time will prove the fallacy of some of the so-called liberal doctrines of this day.

"Alan's bringing in a heavy load of meat, I'll bet," said McCord.

"He's coming! Look at the dogs!" cried Heather. Powder, Shot and Rogue had suddenly risen to face the timber, ears pricked, their black nostrils eagerly testing the air.

Heather's brown face dimpled in a smile of relief. She glanced down at her torn whippoorwills and heavy woolen stockings.

"Well, what in the devil's happened to you two?" demanded McCord, as the frisking puppies followed by the badly limping Rough, and Alan with his back load of deer meat, came out of the scrub.

"Alan waved his hand, walked to the beach and dropped his pack. His eyes were swollen almost shut and his head, neck and hands smeared with blood from insect stings.

"Alan! Alan!" Heather choked, running to the tired hunter who stood grinning at his startled friends.

"Good lord, you're a sight, man!" cried McCord. "And look at Rough! Did you two run into a bear?"

"Four bears," said Alan, with a grimace.

"Ah-hah! You got shot at close to, dere," he exclaimed pointing at the bullet hole and powder stains.

"Burn you!" McCord exclaimed. "God, that's awful!"

"Burn you!" gasped Heather, then with a sob, cried, "I knew something was wrong today! I knew it! I'll heat some water for your head and get soda for your poor face. And oh, see Rough's shoulder!"

While he and his hungry dog ate, and Heather and Noel bathed their wounds, Alan told the story.

The following morning, with Rough in the boat because of his stiff shoulder, the Peterboro continued down the desolate river valley.

Packing with infinite toil around impassable reaches of rapids and white falls leaping headlong over towering ledges to plunge into wide basins beneath; passing cliffs that lifted a sheer thousand feet of granite wall above the timbered floor of the valley, where golden eagles soared above inviolate nests and gyrfalcons flashed through the air like winged arrows, they pushed on toward the goal that beckoned their paddles.

Then, one day the rocky ramparts of the valley began to fall away. The country flattened out and they entered a long lake filled with islands.

"How far have we come, John?" asked Alan as the canoe nosed a wide ripple across the windless surface of the lake.

"According to my record," said McCord, "we've made good time, on 14 days, and been held up on portages, or rested, on six. We must have come over 300 miles. Aleck claimed he traveled 200 miles upstream. I believe we're not far from the River of Skulls. All day the valley's been changing and back there a ways, before we hit the lake, I saw a lot of cliff faces that were reddish, due to the oxide of iron in the rock. This is what the geologists call Cambrian strata. We've left the granite and entered a region of shale and limestone."

"That's where you find quartz veins and gold, eh?"

"Sometimes you do—if you're lucky. According to Drummond, the River of Skulls cuts through granite and limestone to make that gorge. See? It's the quartz veins in the granite that carry pyrites and galena, from which the river, once upon a time, washed the gold into those sands."

"There's the old miner for you, Alan!" laughed Heather. "Give him a squint at a rock and he's lost for all day."

"I believe we'll see the mouth of John's river in three or four days," went on McCord. "Then we'll give Heather and Noel a job sewing up moccasins and patching old clothes while we locate those sands."

"Yes, but I'm going to pan gold, too," she insisted, "and I'm going to hunt deer."

For hours they paddled down the long lake. Red throated loons dove at their approach to scold them from a distance with their wailing; gulls rose from their nesting rocks to flap lazily off the liquid mirror that pictured sky and forest; shel-drake skittered along the shores, flaying the surface with their short wings.

When the sun plunged behind the low western hills, rimming the tundra with fire; the lake still reached before them, mile after mile, into the north. They made camp on one of a group of islands edged with the young green-of-sand-bar willows and alders where, back from the pebbly shore, the thick spruce and tamarack would mask their fire from the sharp eyes of the Naskapi.

Soon the hardy puppies, who had been following the lake shore in sight of the canoe, came swimming out to the island. They were now two years old and full grown. When dogs got what the masters could not use of the meat. When it was dark and the smoke could not be seen, a fire was built and they started smoking the venison to preserve it for future use.

In the morning the Peterboro continued down the lake. It was deep in July and John McCord and Alan were growing anxious. Already less than two months of summer remained in which to accomplish their purpose. Every day was precious and must be put to good use if they were to succeed. And beyond this was the danger of meeting the Naskapi. Of McQueen they talked little. They knew they would have to reckon with the four men somewhere behind them, when they had their gold and started back over the ice for the cache at the head of the river.

The canoe traveled past boulder-strewn points and scrub covered islands down the long lake. They were about to turn inshore to boil the kettle for a midday meal, when the bowman, trailing his paddle in one hand, looked fixedly toward a point of boulders thrusting out into the lake ahead.

"What d'you see, Noel?" asked McCord.

Noel reached back his hand without removing his eyes from the far point. "De glass!" he demanded. Shipping his paddle the bowman focused the binoculars.

"I can't make out anything, can you, John?" said Alan.

"No."

Then he muttered "Ah-hah!" of the bowman centered the attention of the other three. "Man on dat point, dere!" he continued. "He got fire dere, also."

"A fire!"

"Dat feller ees kliskew, for sure," said the Montagnais, after an interval. "He raise hees shirt on a stick, now."

"You don't think he's trying to draw us in shore so they can reach us with their muzzle loaders? We'll take no chances!" said John McCord, making the water boil behind his heavy paddle.

"Let's paddle over to where an Indian's muzzle loader can't reach us, John, and have a look at this man," suggested Alan.

So, while Noel watched the point and swept the shores behind it, the canoe moved slowly across and stopped out of range of the shore. It was clearly evident, now, that the man on the point was greatly excited. Dropping the stick which he had been waving he began to shout

"I'm hungry for red meat after so much fish."

Alan nodded. "The last of the migration is passing to the east! I got two. On my way back with the meat, they cracked me on the head—ambushed me—were going to burn me, but Rough chewed his leash and found us in time."

"Burn you!" McCord exclaimed. "God, that's awful!"

"Burn you!" gasped Heather, then with a sob, cried, "I knew something was wrong today! I knew it! I'll heat some water for your head and get soda for your poor face. And oh, see Rough's shoulder!"

DAVID: TRIUMPHANT FAITH

LESSON TEXT—Psalms 23 and 27:1-4. GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord is my shepherd: I shall not want. Psalm 23:1.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Song of the Shepherd.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Song of a Shepherd Boy.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Songs of Faith and Courage.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—A Steadfast and Triumphant Faith.

What a fitting conclusion to our three-month study of Old Testament characters it is to sound the note of "triumphant faith." The life stories which have passed in review have been true to life, as they have shifted from strength to weakness, from fear to courage, from moral responsibility to moral weakness. But God is the one who changeth not—and we would not close our series properly without the encouraging reminder that the man who truly believes God may know strength out of weakness, courage in place of fear, may like David rise out of degrading sin and defeat into the joy and victory of faith.

Two elemental needs are common to all mankind—provision for the maintenance of life, both physical and spiritual, and protection from the enemies of soul and body. Our first Scripture portion declares the faith of David in God as his providing shepherd and the second as his security from fear.

I. Provision (Ps. 23). "The Lord is my shepherd." Putting God first in every detail of life means that there will be

1. No want (vv. 1-5). "My cup runneth over," and surely then there can be no lack of any good thing. God is able and willing. We, like David, should trust Him.

2. No weakness (v. 3). "He restoreth my soul." The world is puzzled by the rejuvenating power of the grace of God in the Christian's soul, but it becomes very real to us through the Word, through prayer, through the indwelling Holy Spirit Himself.

3. No wandering (v. 3). "He leadeth me." In an unknown or dangerous country the essential thing is to stay close to one's guide. In the wilderness of this sinful world, we must keep close to our divine Leader. He knows where the still waters and the green pastures are to be found, even in wildest and most barren land.

4. No worry (v. 6). "Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life." It was true of David, it is (or should be), pre-eminently true of the Christian. Someone has said, "If we trust we do not worry; if we worry we do not trust."

5. But—blessed assurance. Not only will the goodness of God follow us all our days, but we shall "dwell in the house of the Lord forever."

II. Protection (Ps. 27:1-6). "The Lord is my light and my salvation"—could there be any greater certainty that we shall be delivered from every danger and difficulty? To the one who walks in that light there can be

1. No fear (v. 1). "The Lord is the strength of my life, of whom shall I be afraid?" He is the perfect and final answer to all the fears of life.

2. No failure (vv. 2, 3). "Though an host should encamp against me . . . in this will I be confident," that they shall but stumble and fall. One of the fears that dogs the footsteps of a man is that after all his effort and labor some enemy will come in and destroy. The Christian must often meet wicked and troublesome enemies—but though they be a host, he may be serene in his soul, knowing that if he is right with God the devices of man or devil against him shall only fail.

3. No falling (vv. 4, 5). "He shall set me up upon a rock," and that rock is in "the secret of his tabernacle." The assurance of the believer in Christ is in Him, His work upon the cross and His certain word of promise.

David longed for the house of the Lord; he wanted to return to the temple from which his many wanderings so often separated him. How blessed is our lot as Christians for we have in our own bodies the temple of the Holy Spirit (I Cor. 3:16, 6:19); we have Christ in us as the hope of glory (Col. 1:22). We also long to be in God's house (that is if we really love Him), but if we are born again we have the temple of God wherever we may be.

4. No fainting (v. 6). "Now shall mine head be lifted up above mine enemies round about me." Just when, humanly speaking, we would faint because of the enemies all around us, or by reason of the heat and pressure of the fight, then God causes our heads to be lifted up and in the moment of apparent defeat there is victory.

5. But—a song. "I will sing praises unto the Lord." The atmosphere of praise is one which the enemy of our soul cannot stand. It is too rare, too pure, too holy for him. Next time he tries to defeat you—why not "Try Praise"? It works!

Ideal Hot Dish Mats Made of Cable Cord

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS THIS mat is made of white cotton cable cord such as you buy at the notion counter for corded seams and trimmings. The original mat from which this design was taken was made of—no one of this generation would ever guess—what? Corset strings. These were once a common commodity along with collar boning, hat pins and side combs. There was quite a fad for making luncheon sets of them braided or arranged in various designs and sewn with fine stitches on the wrong side.

The design shown here is compact and, copied in rather heavy cord, makes an ideal hot dish mat. Follow the sketches for directions. Make the circles in pairs, as shown, using No. 40 cotton thread to sew them. Braid three cords together and then sew the braided strip around and around to make the center of the mat. Sew a row of the circles to the edge of this center part, then add another braided row, being careful to "ease in" the inside edge just enough to keep the mat flat. Continue adding alternate rows of circles and braiding until the mat is the size desired.

To join the ends of the braided rows, pull one end through the braiding to the wrong side of the mat; then trim the ends and sew them flat. It is not too early to begin thinking of Christmas gifts—and you will be wanting to make something a bit unusual for that next bazaar when it comes rolling around. Sewing Book 2, Embroidery, Gifts and Novelties, is full of new ideas all clearly illustrated with step-by-step pictures. Send for it today and give life a new interest by starting some fascinating piece of hand work. Enclose 25 cents and address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

HELP KIDNEYS

To Get Rid of Acid and Poisonous Waste

Your kidneys help to keep you well by constantly filtering waste matter from the blood. If your kidneys get functionally deranged and fail to remove excess impurities, there may be poisoning of the whole system and body-wide distress. Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be a warning of some kidney or bladder disturbance. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feet swell, nervous, all played out. In such cases it is better to rely on a medicine that has won country-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Use Doan's Pills. A multitude of grateful people recommend Doan's. Apple Trees of the Future May Grow on Their Own Roots, Nursery Expert Says

Apple trees of the future may grow on their own roots. In the past the apple tree was an assembled article with the fruit-producing part grafted to a common root stock such as the French crab variety. This was necessary because seedlings do not produce true to variety, and because cuttings of stem tissues would not take root.

Now scientists of the United States Department of Agriculture have developed a method by which stem cuttings of apple varieties are induced to form root initials or points of origin on the stem that promptly develop into roots when the cuttings are taken from the trees and set in the soil, thus doing away with grafting.

The process is described by Dr. F. E. Gardner, in charge of nursery stock investigations for the bureau of plant industry, as "etiolation." The growing shoot is wrapped in black tape when it starts to put out leaves in the spring. A piece 2 1/2 to 3 inches long is sufficient to wrap four or five times spirally around the young shoot as near the growing tip as possible. Another method is to place a small black paper tube over the shoot. All growth is made in complete, or nearly complete, absence of light.

When the cuttings are made in the fall it is only necessary to remove the shoot, strip off the tape or paper tube, make the basal cut in the etiolated area, and set it out. Why etiolation should favor the production of roots on stem tissue is as much "in the dark" as the process itself, says Doctor Gardner.

Several practical advantages are seen for the process, mainly in that it is easier and cheaper to make a cutting than a graft. One man can wrap several thousand shoots in one day. Too, there is a possibility of avoiding variability common in root stocks of grafted apple trees.

In many cases, however, it is more desirable to grow apple trees on roots other than their own. Some varieties have root systems that lack cold hardiness and are susceptible to disease and insect attacks. The propagation of such varieties on their own roots would not be desirable.

Pure Eskimo Bava

Contrary to popular opinion, pure Eskimos are rare. In West Greenland, where more than 90 per cent of the island's population is concentrated, the natives have intermarried with Europeans since the days of the old Norsemen.

Defect in Speech

Speech defects occurring in children may be caused by disorders in the emotional life, says Calvin T. Ryan in a Hygeia Magazine article. Among the causes he lists: lack of understanding of parents, inconsistency of treatment, laxity in discipline, dependence, dominance on the part of the parent, a too closely planned schedule, influence of a too dynamic personality, anxiety, quarrelling, partiality, inactivity in the home, and unwise discipline.

Dolphin Brings Trouble

Boat in the Philippines that the killing of a dolphin will bring bad luck was borne out, according to the crew of the Bantamans, when Delia Jara, attorney general, recently shot an eight-foot specimen during an ocean trip. When Jara took the fish on board the crew warned him, but he laughed at their fears. Soon afterward there was a fire aboard ship. This followed by engine trouble, and finally the vessel was caught in a storm.

The Bill of Rights

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
A year ago the American people observed with nationwide celebrations the 150th anniversary of our Constitution, written during the summer of 1787.

A year from now they will probably observe with impressive ceremony the sesqui-centennial of our Bill of Rights, which was adopted September 25, 1789.

And at this time—the 148th anniversary of the Bill of Rights—many thousands of Americans pay their tribute to the guarantee of liberty which those first ten amendments wrote into our National Charter.

Such tribute is well earned. For, to the original Constitution the Bill of Rights added a determined expression of that spirit of personal dignity, independence and self-reliance which has been the outstanding characteristic of the true American throughout the century and a half of our history.

Here are some of the rights which those ten amendments assure:
—Freedom of religion, freedom of the press, freedom of speech and of peaceable assembly.

The right to trial by jury, the right to petition the government for redress of wrongs, the right to own private property, and all other rights not expressly surrendered to government.

Protection against imprisonment without legal process, against being tried on the same charge against excessive bail or cruel and unusual punishment, against unreasonable search or seizure by government, a witness, and against the quartering of soldiers on householders in time of peace.

Retention by the states, or the people, of all powers not expressly delegated to the national government by the Constitution.

These are rights that our fathers wrote into the Constitution. They are rights upon which successive generations of Americans have insisted. They are rights which must be guarded now as loyally as they were guarded in the past. They remain our strongest bulwark against the threats of "isms" and tyrannies, which today threaten so much of the world, whether from without or within.

They are the rights that made America. And to preserve them is our responsibility.

"The Fall Into the Bottomless Well"

HELLO EVERYBODY: Can you imagine falling into a well and never reaching bottom? That's what happened to William J. Sternberg of Long Island City, N. Y., who tells today's yarn.

In the spring of 1885, Bill Sternberg, then a lad of 19, was putting in panes of glass along the side of a building in Long Island City, N. Y., since burned down. A steep slope fell away almost vertically from the building, and below this slope was an old well, whose rotting timbers had been removed preparatory to making a new cover. Now watch and see what happened.

Bill Sails Off Into Space.

Along the far end of the building, the ground fell away so steeply that Bill had to go look for the ladder he had left against the one-story extension. To make sure the ladder was still where he had left it, he took a step backward to look over the edge of the roof. Suddenly his left foot went completely into space!

Bill says, "I knew in a flash where I was about to go. It was too late to scramble forward, so I braced my foot, and with all my might I threw my body back."

And right below lay—you guessed it—the open well!

Bill's quick thinking may have saved his life, but it didn't keep him from going through a bad experience. His shoulders struck the far edge of the well and his feet scraped the near edge so that he lay across the top opening like a stiff stick. Only he wasn't so stiff, worse luck. Bit by bit he started to slip down the sides of the well, the weight of his body held in space only by the fierce pressure of his braced feet and shoulders against the rough brick sides of the well.

And Then He Started to Slip!

Had that well been an inch wider in diameter, boys and girls, Bill wouldn't be telling this story. As it was, he had all he could do, pressing with all his strength, to keep his body out straight, to keep pressure on his toes and his shoulders and neck.

Picture for yourself what he was up against. If either his head or his feet started slipping faster than the other end, he might drop so much on one end that his body would no longer meet the wall on both sides. The minute his legs or his shoulders slipped enough to fall away from the wall—HE WOULD PLUNGE TO THE DEPTHS BELOW!

But worse was still to come. Working with Bill on the job was a man by the name of Franz. When the first terror at his predicament lifted, Bill thought of Franz and yelled for help. Picture his horror when he got no answer.

All along he had been hoping that before he lost control, rescue would arrive. Now his voice rang mockingly in the dark depths below. Franz did not answer.

Bill Sees a Dim Ray of Hope.

Lower, lower slipped Bill. The rough bricks scraped his shoulders raw. Blood ran from his tortured flesh, soaked his shirt. The pressure was agony, yet he dare not ease up. To let up meant dropping.

Bill wormed around till his eyes could examine the depths of the well below. And for a moment hope returned to him. Directly below, about seven and a half feet down, he saw the ribs of the form for the brickwork projecting on the inside, about two or three inches beyond the brickwork. The masons had left the form with the ribs and built around them.

"Now," Bill told himself, "if those ribs will hold my weight, I'm safe!" But could he reach them?

Seven and a half feet! Seven and a half feet of creeping, of tortured shoulders, of risky probing with one foot when an instant's let-up in that pressure meant—Bill Sternberg tried not to think what it meant while he groped with one foot for a hold, wormed his raw shoulders lower on the bricks that were like sandpaper on his raw shoulders.

New Danger Worse Than the Old.

Just as he reached the ribs a new danger presented itself. His shoulders started to go lower than his feet!

Bad enough to plunge feet first. But head first! And backward, at that!

It took all the flagging nerve of Bill Sternberg to grab those raw shoulders into that wall and work his feet down to—yes, the ribs. Bill made it. And what's more, the ribs held him. Feet and shoulders.

But how long was he to remain here like this? Frantically he lifted his voice in a hoarse shout. And now to his ears came a sound—the sound of Franz's hammer. Franz, hammering and whistling at his work, had perhaps not heard. Bill summoned all his strength, fairly belted: "Franz, FRANZ!"

This time Franz came, and with one unconcerned tug yanked up his companion. Bill landed hard on the safe ground. It felt good—better than his shoulders. But worst of all, he says, was trying to square himself with his mother for ripping his shirt, when he got home!

Cranberry Thrives Best in Acid Peat, Muck Soil

The cheery little cranberry, once called cranberry because its blossoms resemble a crane's head and neck, is not modest in its requirements.

It demands low-lying land saturated with water; prefers acid peat or muck soil. There must be reservoirs to constantly feed thirsty fields through miles of radiating canals—to flood marshes quickly against killing frosts and as a measure of insect control, states a writer in Prairie Farmer.

It must have winter protection. Just before heavy frost, reservoirs are opened and vines covered; they lie snug through winter beneath a blanket of ice. They must have a blanket of sand, too, one inch thick atop the ice, to settle gently but firmly around vines in spring when the ice goes out to absorb heat and help keep frost away; to discourage weed growth; to give old runners a chance to reroot and thus renew the bog.

Marshes are drained in the spring and from short mother vines new shoots creep. Buds swell and send out a short shoot upon which pink waxen blossoms bloom. When petals fall, tiny berries emerge to grow and plump. Slowly their color fades from green to creamy white; to coral pink, while the rare and vigorous flavor develops within. Gathered, dried and boxed, cooler weather turns the berries full flavored and a rich, ruby red.

USE PROVED SIRE ON POULTRY FARM

Three Definite Points Are Necessary to Qualify

By Dr. W. C. Thompson, Poultry Husbandman, Rutgers University, WNU Service.

Experience proves that the use of proved sires is just as sound and economical for the poultry industry as it is for the dairy and other live stock industries in which this practice has been followed for years.

The poultry sire should pass inspection on three definite points to qualify as proved. First, his family tree should be known for at least three generations and should contain as many individuals as possible whose egg production, growth, and general qualifications are worthy of perpetuation. Although a pedigree alone does not guarantee good results, it increases possibilities of obtaining them.

Secondly, the proved sire, as an individual, must possess the type of characteristics which it is desired that he pass on to his progeny.

In the third place, the proved sire must have demonstrated his capacities to produce fertile and hatchable eggs and strong, viable chicks.

During the past season many poultry men have been using male birds with good pedigrees. Those birds will have been found to go through the breeding season in a strong, healthy condition. Hatching records will have given considerable valuable information which may be accepted as at least the first steps in progeny testing. It is a mistake for poultry breeders to sell off such valuable sires simply because they may consider it difficult to keep them over the summer season on the poultry plant. Too often it is a practice to use only cockerels or first year breeders each spring.

From such birds, information on only the first two points is possible. To be a proved sire, a bird must have a record of production. Keep over promising male birds until next January. Their daughters will have shown what they can do in egg yields during the coming fall and winter. By the opening of the next breeder season, sufficient data for progeny testing will be at hand to enable the poultry man to select the exact birds to be saved.

Fly Nets, Repellents Are Urged for Horses

Every effort should be directed toward preventing horses from being bitten by insects, since it is believed that blood sucking insects are responsible for the transmission of sleeping sickness in horses, says A. W. Uren of the Missouri college of agriculture.

The incidence of this disease at army posts, in states where the disease was quite prevalent, was only one-tenth as much in the horse population on the farms adjacent to the post. This low incidence is thought to be due to the fact that the army horses were kept in screened stables. It is recommended, therefore, that horses be kept in stables as much as possible during an epidemic, particularly if the stables are screened.

It is also recommended that fly nets be used when horses are worked, and that the horses be sprayed often with fly repellents. An effective and rather inexpensive fly spray can be made by extracting 1 pound of pyrethrum flowers in 1 gallon of kerosene for 48 hours, then decant or siphon off the clear liquid. If two parts of the extract are then thoroughly mixed with one part of soft soap, the mixture is then ready for use.

What to Eat and Why

C. Houston Goudiss Describes Diet After Middle Age; Shows How Right Food Can Prolong the Vigorous Years

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

ONE of the best prescriptions ever offered for longevity was advanced by the wise man who said: "In the twenties, prepare for the thirties; in the thirties, prepare for the forties; and after that—prepare for a long and vigorous old age!"

That advice is well worth following, for it has been estimated that by taking into account all the newer knowledge of nutrition, it is possible not only to improve health, but to add a number of years to the normal life span.

The middle years should check his or her weight frequently, and promptly reduce the fuel foods if a significant gain is noted.

The protein requirement diminishes somewhat after the age of 60 for no new tissue is being built. It is, furthermore, advisable to take a large share of the protein in the form of milk and eggs. Vegetables should be used freely and if there is difficulty in mastication, they may be finely chopped. Fresh fruits may be eaten as long as they do not cause fermentation; otherwise cooked fruits should be used instead. Contrary to popular opinion, sweets can frequently be eaten in considerable amounts without causing indigestion. Fats, however, should be used sparingly.

A Man Is as Young as He Feels

It has been well said that "the age of man has small relation to his years," for it has been demonstrated, both clinically and in the scientist's laboratory, that old age is a physiological condition rather than an accumulation of years. In grandmother's day, a woman of 60 was considered old. Today that age is regarded as young, and much of the important work of the world is being done by men and women who can see 50 only by looking over their shoulder.

Importance of Correct Diet

On the other hand, thousands of Americans are unknowingly impairing their efficiency and shortening their lives through the misuse of food. They are eating the wrong kind of food—and what is equally disastrous—they are over-eating! They do not seem to realize that eating too much does not strengthen the body, but exhausts it with the labors of digestion. The surplus nourishment clogs the system and may be indirectly responsible for headache, dyspepsia, biliousness and mental dulness. Unless they change their habits of eating, they will inevitably become victims of their own indiscretions. For while it is folly to neglect the health at any age, to do so in middle life is to open the way to an early death or to an old age marred by sickness.

Keep Down the Weight

The first 25 years of man's life are devoted to growth. During this period of youth, the body usually has a large fund of reserve energy which can be called upon in times of stress. During the next 25 or 30 years, the weight should remain constant. If the diet is properly regulated, and sound habits of hygiene are followed, a man or woman will come into middle age full of vigor and with mental and physical capacities undiminished.

Unfortunately, however, the laws of hygiene and nutrition are often broken during the active middle years. As a result, bodily reserves are depleted and middle age finds many men and women near the danger line, no longer able to resist infections and the degenerative diseases.

That is why it is so desirable—if you hope to be vigorous at 60 and after—that you begin to plan for it many years earlier.

Live sensibly. Avoid overwork. Regularly take a moderate amount of exercise. Get enough sleep so that you avoid that chronic "tired feeling." Above all, eat enough, but not too much, of the foods that build and maintain health: milk; eggs; fruits and vegetables; protein foods in amounts just sufficient to meet your requirements, so that there is no excess to be eliminated; enough fuel foods to give you plenty of pep and power, but not in amounts that will cause the weight increase which many people erroneously believe inevitable during the middle years.

Curb the Appetite for Rich Foods

It is most important to avoid overeating. For muscular activity decreases with the passing years. The middle aged individual often rides where a younger person might walk or observes active sports from the sidelines where he formerly played them with zeal. Unfortunately, however, the appetite seldom diminishes in proportion to the lessened fuel needs. That is why every individual who has entered upon

Uncle Phil Says:

Without Puffing

Don't get too swift; you can walk farther in a day than you can run.

Efficiency that begins with mere skimping is no efficiency at all. After a sensitive man has been blown about for years by the winds of chance, he looks for a rut.

Guessing is great sport and so many of our "convictions" depend on it.

Sort of Magic in It

It is great fun making people who you know dislike you, like you.

Human nature is never changed; it is only better controlled, due to the reasoning of century after century, with an occasional throw-back.

five or six small meals are more easily digested than three large ones. Each person should discover what meal schedule best suits individual requirements and then abide by it. For it is indeed true that middle age—and the years beyond—are largely what you make them!

Questions Answered

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

Safety Measure.—To fill a steaming teakettle place a small funnel in the spout to prevent burning your hands in taking off the cover.

Preserving Scrub Brushes.—Never put scrubbing brushes away until they have been thoroughly washed, rinsed and shaken, so that most of the moisture has been removed.

For Scared Furniture.—If you will take a soft flannel cloth, dip it in iodine, then rub gently over scared mahogany furniture, when it dries the scratches will be almost unnoticeable. Then when iodine is dry, apply a liberal coating of a good furniture oil.

For Stiff Leather Straps.—Leather luggage straps that have become hard may be softened by soaking for several hours in hot, soapy water. Allow to dry in a cool place while still soapy, and finally rub with a cloth dipped in linseed oil.

A Twine Holder.—A funnel makes an excellent holder for a ball of twine. Choose one large enough to hold a good-sized ball. Put the end of the string through the neck of the funnel.

Local Mention

Don English of the Carrizozo Hardware Company was a business visitor at El Paso—the first few days of this week.

T. C. Romero, merchant of Lincoln, was here last Sunday morning on his way to Albuquerque, to serve as a juror in Federal Court, which convened at that city Monday morning.

Ernest Key was a Capitan visitor Tuesday, on matters concerning the Capitan - Carrizozo American Legion Frontier Days affair.

Mesdames Emma Pino Sanchez and Juanita St. John Marquez, who have been confined in a local hospital for the past week, are reported much improved.

This office has received word that Mrs. Alta Farmer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Carl of this place, is now residing with her family at 14687 Rayin street, Van Nuys, Calif.

Mr. and Mrs. Benigno Gallegos were Tularosa visitors for a few days last week.

Grocer Jeff Herron is in Texas, visiting Mrs. Herron and children. He will return the latter part of the week.

Benny Sandoval, head chef at the Girls' Camp in Baca Canyon, visited his family here last Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Ed Harris and Mrs. Nallie Rely were among the big crowd attending the Fair.

Louis Nalda and Juan Laxaga shipped their wool to eastern markets this week, for which they received a fair price.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Bogle of Del Monte, Calif., came in this Monday, and will visit old friends in this vicinity for a short time. It will be remembered that Roy was foreman of the water service at Coyote a few years ago and left here, being employed in a similar capacity in Lordsburg for several years. He now is retired, and is taking it easy. Both Roy and Mrs. Bogle look exceptionally well, especially Mr. Bogle, who has gained weight.

George Harkness has again taken over the Roswell - Carrizozo - White Oaks - San Antonio mail route, we understand.

Mrs. J. P. Turner's Sunday School class will give a Baked Sale Saturday afternoon at the Carrizozo Hardware Co. Mrs. Turner, the former Miss Jane Spencer, is the teacher of this wide-awake class which solicits your patronage at their baked sale.

A big delegation of Roswell boosters for the Tri-State Fair was here and made themselves doubly agreeable with their many friends, who were glad to see them again. They remained with us for one day for which we wish to thank our friendly neighbors. Roswell always does things in a 100% manner. They had signs on their hats, so that it was useless for people to ask the question: "Where are you from, strangers?"

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Ballard have lately returned from a visit with their two daughters in Chicago, after which they went to Springfield, Mo., to look over their farm which they have leased out. During the recent murder trial, Howard relieved W. J. Ferguson at the Coyote pumping station.

Mr. and Mrs. Jose Otero and family were here from their ranch near Capitan to attend the Lincoln County festivities last week-end.
