Sad Accident at CCC Camp

Last Saturday afternoon about 5 o'clock, Mrs. Jet Rustin, sons Jet, Jr., Truman and daughter, Mrs. Pete O'Rear, went to the CCC Camp to bring Mr. O'Rear to town.

They pulled him out and the camp doctor and others worked over him in order to resuscitate him, but in vain.

The funeral was heavily attended. The community extends its deepest sympathy to the bereaved parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jet Rustin and other relatives.

I wish to thank each and everyone of you who responded to the Roll Call of the American Red Cross.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Morris of the Ancho country were visitors in town this Wednesday.

SCHOOL NEWS

Christmas trees, decorations and presents for little folks seem to be occupying the attention of the Home Economics Club.

Dec. 3, the Athletic Association is giving a dance to raise funds for basketball equipment.

One of our teachers, Miss Fernette Gilbert, became the bride of Mr. R. E. Honaker on Thanksgiving Day. The high school girls gave a shower in her honor Tuesday afternoon.

The football team played their last game of the season Thanksgiving Day against Captain.

Jackie Dixon returned to his studies Thursday after a 2-day siege of tonsillotomy.

Among the pleasant events of the Teachers' Association at Ruidoso today was the fine numbers given by the Carrizozo HI School Band and Glee Club.

The basketball season opens Dec. 9, with the Grizzlies playing the Socorro HI. The team will appreciate your support.

Supt. Carpenter issued the following statement as to the cause for students being absent during the first 12 weeks of school:

Personal illness 38. Illness in home 84. Work at home 42. Attending funeral of relatives 16. Unexcused absences 11. Total 141. Illness and work being the largest factors for absences.

Mrs. Nelle W. Day Elected in Recount

The above-named lady was declared duly elected County School Superintendent in the recount held at the courthouse last Saturday and presided over by Judge Numa C. Frenger. As it was, Mrs. Ola Jones, who was leading by one vote, lost that in the White Oaks box and Mrs. Day won one in Carrizozo, so the matter was reversed and Mrs. Day was declared elected by one vote.

Miss Thelma White and mother Mrs. J. Tom White returned Sunday evening from a pleasant vacation trip of about two weeks at different points in Texas.

Maurice Miera of the Division of Grazing is here passing inspection on the various allotments in District No. 4, before the ten-year permits are issued.

Mrs. Alvin Carl returned the first of this week from the Hot Springs-Eagle country, where she visited her parents for about two weeks.

This office has received notice to change the paper of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Frame from Ruidoso to Corona.

BUSINESS MEN'S CLUB

The attendance Wednesday night exceeded the ordinary Road matters in particular, occupied the period after dinner.

The club received the report of a delegation composed of Pres. McQuillen, Vice-Pres. Carpenter, Sec'y Blaney, Messrs. Kelley, Titworth, Long and Burke, which delegation attended the annual booster road meeting at Roswell Tuesday night.

The delegation reported much encouragement on road matters, more especially that of Highway 54.

The Roswell Chamber of Commerce received the delegation with a glad hand and pledged themselves ready to assist in all of our laudable road undertakings.

Gov. Tingley spoke at the meeting and gave assurance that the contract for the 10 miles of graveled road between Hondo and Lincoln would be let by Dec. 14.

He also gave us the assurance that contracts for highway 54 between Carrizozo and Tularosa would be let as soon as the engineers had the surveys made and easements signed, which work is almost completed.

Mr. and Mrs. Ansel Swearingen were the guests of Mrs. Swearingen's parents at Dexter during the Thanksgiving holidays. Ansel is bookkeeper for the Carrizozo Auto Company.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Honaker are residing in the Philips Apartments. Mrs. Honaker was Miss Fernette Gilbert, one of the teachers in the local hi school.

To Prof. Martinez of the Carrizozo High School, F. J. Sager of Santa Fe, and Lon Atkinson of Corona:—Many thanks for your recent favors.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Purcey, the Misses Julia and Beatrice Romero are business visitors in El Paso today.

Ashby Roselle of Jicarilla was a business visitor in town this Thursday.

The Lincoln County Teachers' meeting today, Friday, at Ruidoso is heavily attended by teachers from all points over the County. Particulars of the meeting will appear in our next week's issue.

Dr. M. G. Paden was a business visitor from his home in White Oaks one day this week.

Mayor J. E. Bell of Jicarilla was here Wednesday, sporting a 150-pound mountain lion which he killed in the Jicarillas with a .22 calibre rifle. Good riddance, Your Honor—do it again!

It's All Over

The election is over; the newly elected officials have received their certificates and we can now engage in a "breathing spell." We are not bragging about it, but just as a matter of information, the election resulted in nine Republican county officials being elected and two Democrats.

They are ladies and gentlemen of the highest qualifications, and we predict that Lincoln County will profit to the extreme by their efforts for economy, faithfulness and accuracy.

But they cannot perform their duties without the help and assistance of the people who placed them in office.

So, let us all realize that we owe to them not only our best wishes, but our help as well. — Let's go!

To the Roswell Chamber of Commerce

The Carrizozo-Business-Men's Club wishes to return its thanks to your efficient organization for courtesies and favors extended to its delegation at the Annual Booster Meeting Tuesday night.

Roswell is certainly a Big Brother to Carrizozo, indeed. G. T. McQuillen, Pres., Dr. R. E. Blaney, Sec'y.

OddFellows Elect

At the regular meeting Tuesday night, the following officers were elected for the ensuing six months: Noble Grand, Bradley Smith; Vice Grand, James M. Carpenter; Sec'y, Wm. J. Langston; Treasurer, Larry Dow. The officers who will be appointed by the incoming N. G. and V. G., will be announced before installation which will take place on the first meeting in January.

O. E. S. Elect Officers

At the meeting of Chapter No. 29, held last night, the following officers were elected for 1939: W. M., Mrs. Jess Snyder; W.P., Mr. T. E. Kelley; A. M., Mrs. Ben S. Burns; A. P., Jim D. Anderson; Sec'y, Mrs. R. E. Lemon; Treas., Mrs. F. A. English; Conductress, Mrs. S. B. Bostian; Associate Conductress, Mrs. T. E. Kelley.

Mrs. C. O. Davis and her gallant chaperon Gene Dixon, four years old, arrived home last night from Los Angeles, where they visited relatives for about ten days. They had a pleasant time, and Big Gene, her husky pilot, showed his grandmother the bright lights of the big city.

Gus Grossmiller was here from Coyote this morning and while in town, was a pleasant caller at this office.

A. S. McCamant was a business visitor from his ranch near Corona this week. While here, he was a guest of his daughter, Mrs. Belle Mae Reynolds.

Local Mention

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Stevens of Los Angeles, cousins of Mrs. Orsa Stearns, who have been visiting their cousin for the past week at her ranch home near Nogal, left yesterday for home.

Mr. and Mrs. Justo Padilla, Mr. and Mrs. Severo Padilla and families were here from the Manzano country last week-end, visiting relatives. These gentlemen are nephews of Saturnino and Joe Chavez.

The Carrizozo Country Club, under the management of L. A. Whitaker, is arranging for a series of turkey and pigeon shoots at the club grounds, the dates of which will be seen by hand bills from time to time. Get out your gun and prepare to win a nice, fat turkey. The first shoot will take place on Sunday, Dec. 11. There will be a dance on Saturday, Dec. 10.

Supt. J. M. Carpenter and daughter Elinor spent Thanksgiving and the week-end with relatives and also transacting some business matters at Springfield, Colorado.

Uncle George Coe and son Bill were here from Glendale last Saturday, interested in the election recount.

Jack Meyers of Claunch and Duke Steele of Mountainair were here Monday on business and while in town, dropped into Thelma's Beauty Parlor, they having been old friends of Thelma's; Jack in particular, as they were schoolmates in Oklahoma at one time.

Mrs. L. A. Boone and T. M. Bishop of Capitan were here last Sunday and attended the Lyric Theatre in the afternoon.

Mrs. E. L. Kidwell, sister Bertha Lott and Velma Lee Keeney were here from Ancho Saturday and made this office a pleasant call.

Mr. and Mrs. Burke Stiles have returned from Albuquerque, where they were guests of Mr. Stiles' sister over Thanksgiving.

Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Stokes and children returned the first of this week from Midland, Tex., where they were the Thanksgiving guests of Dewey's parents and friends.

Mrs. Ola C. Jones was an El Paso visitor this Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Moore and small daughter of their ranch in the Rabenton country were visitors in town this Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Greer of the Greer Angola goat ranch in the San Andras mountains were visitors in town Monday of this week.

E. V. Morris, proprietor of the Cafe at Hondo, was a business visitor in town this Monday, and while here, was a friendly caller at this office.

Miss Wilma Snow, who is attending the State College, left to resume her studies, after being the guest of her parents Mr. and Mrs. Albert Snow of the Camp Malpais.

Miss Cora Crews of her ranch near Oscura was here this Tuesday.

All Negro Bout
WHEN Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis enters the ring January 27 to meet confident John Henry Lewis, it will be the first time the Bomber has met another Negro since April 25, 1933, when he knocked out Roscoe Toles of Flint, Mich., in six rounds.

Champion Joe Louis.

promoters have always been wary of all Negro bouts, and have always had a curious prejudice against them. Chief among the reasons is that a large percentage of fight fans stayed away out of sheer indifference to the outcome.

There are other reasons why it is unusual to see two Negro fighters throwing leather at each other in the nation's big arenas.

Far too many mediocre white boys have advanced a long way through reputations built up by fixed fights. Negro fighters, facing inferior white fighters, have been forced to go into the tank in order to earn the most meager living.

However, the abandon with which two Negroes fought led those promoters to believe that they had lost their hold on the managerial strings stretching to the fighter.

Louis has cleaned up the white field, and Lewis is now his outstanding opponent. It's a break for John Henry, because his style is best calculated to better Louis, much in the same manner as did Bob Foster's. Lewis, too, can use the money. The light-heavyweight championship was not an incentive as it might have been.

And John Henry is aggressively confident. That is a tremendous asset in his favor.

Football Danger

FOOTBALL protective equipment, charged with being responsible for one-quarter of all injuries caused by bodily contact, will go on trial the latter part of December with the National Football Coaches association serving as both judge and jury.

While many coaches believe that the use of hard and unyielding equipment constitutes the greatest danger in football, it is not likely that changes in that equipment will be drastic. It is argued, and rightly so, that the very cause of many gridiron accidents is also a protective factor which keeps many a player from serious injury.

A committee named by the National Football Coaches' association has studied the equipment used by 25 major colleges throughout the United States, and in the near future will report the findings of their survey. W. A. Alexander of Georgia Tech, committee chairman, will undoubtedly call for several changes.

Particular fault is found with the type of shoe cleat which screws on to a metal post, extending from the shoe sole. When this cleat is broken, off and the post exposed, it can easily become the cause of deep cuts or painful abrasions.

When less dangerous protective equipment is found, equipment that will afford safety to the same degree as does present equipment, then both coaches and players will welcome it.

Elmer Layden of Notre Dame has devised what is probably the best football helmet from a viewpoint of safety. The Layden head guard has a soft leather top, cushioned, with foam rubber on a sturdy fiber case. It will be used in many colleges during the coming year.

Fuel for the Debate

STATISTICS regarding shutout games in the two major leagues last season merely furnish additional ammunition to baseball fans who argue the relative strength of the two circuits.

There were 139 shutout games in the two leagues, 83 in the National and 57 in the American. That still doesn't prove anything to league enthusiasts. National league supporters have the shutout records to back up claims that their league excels in first rate pitching.

Meanwhile the argument continues, with both sides using the same statistics to prove their case.

Sport Shorts

COLORED fighters hold five of the eight world's boxing titles. Long Island university's basketball team has scored more than a point a minute each game during the last five seasons. Golfers at the Rosanne club in Melbourne, Australia, are requested not only to replace divots but also to sow seed. Reggie McNamara, veteran cyclist who retired two years ago, competed in 126 six-day bicycle races, winning 20. Ice hockey has been making rapid progress in Scotland, with three new major rinks recently opened. World championships in lawn bowling will be decided in San Francisco during the 1933 exposition.

Pocket Billiards

By CHARLES C. PETERSON
President, National Billiard Association of America and World's Trick Shot Champion.

Lesson No. 7. This diagram is the first actual shot and break.

To make this shot requires absolute accuracy in striking the object ball right. In order to keep your cue ball from hurdling or jumping the table, keep continually alert on holding your cue level. Since striking a cue ball below the center will keep it on the table, I would advise that you strike your cue ball slightly below center. The most glaring fault of novice players, when the object ball is near a cushion, is to elevate the butt of the cue. This in the majority of cases causes the cue ball to leave the table.

Gulf Current Draws Strange Ocean Species

Coming Winter Focuses Attention on Queer Air Current

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

Voyaging southward from New York toward tropic waters on a midwinter day, you gaze out over a leaden sea of dull-green color, lashed by the stiff, chilling wind. But the next morning you awaken to a balmy air and go on deck to behold the ocean miraculously changed to ultramarine blue, the dark swelling waves crowned with snowy foam which churns up in the wake of the vessel in turquoise turmoil before reaching the surface.

Petrels follow the ship, skipping from wave to wave. Toward afternoon a school of porpoises glides in and out of the sea in never-ending chase, while flying fishes, glinting in blue and silver, dart anxiously from the water and sail long distances, flicking the wave crests with their tails to gain momentum.

You are in the Gulf stream, that marvelous river in the ocean, which gives the North Atlantic its unique character and profoundly affects its temperature even as far as the North sea, bestowing upon the British Isles and Scandinavia the inestimable boon of a chastened climate. We can imagine the surprise of Ponce de Leon when, sailing along the coast of Florida in 1513, he found his ship borne irresistibly northward in its current.

The Gulf stream exerts an influence on the spread and distribution of the marine life of the Atlantic which cannot be over-estimated.

Haven of Marine Life

The main current warms the whole North Atlantic, and spurs setting in toward the coast have a striking effect on the distribution of floating life off the Middle Atlantic states and southern New England. Here, however, the warm stream is separated from the shore by colder waters forming what is known as the "cold wall." South of the Grand banks of Newfoundland it meets the icy Labrador current which flows down from the north, bringing a northern fauna and making its influence felt along the shore, particularly north of Cape Cod.

The Gulf stream, on the other hand, extends the range of many

Here is the beautiful but dangerous whip ray, a denizen of tropical Atlantic waters.

Looking deeper, you finally perceive, extending far into the depths, a whole series of cordlike filaments, spirally adorned with close-set beads similar to those on the shorter strings, but larger. These slender cables are continually extending and contracting independently of each other, thickened knots passing each other up and down on neighboring strands like elevators.

Constant Movement

A sudden breeze ruffles the water surface. The floats change shape, twisting in such a way as to "trim sail." The long, submerged cables, being attached to only one side of the bladder, act as a drag anchor, enabling the craft to head up into the wind and thus counteract a too rapid leeway.

On board the boat you have a tall glass jar. Reaching over the side, as the vessel drifts with the current, you pick up a fine example of physalia, being careful to lift it by the float and thus avoid contact with any of the bead-adorned streamers. This caution is essential, for every bead is a battery of powerful stinging cells loaded with minute barbed threads, thousands of which, at the slightest touch, will penetrate the skin and inject an irritating poison.

Once while wading near Ponce, on the south shore of Puerto Rico, a scientist attempted to lift one of these creatures into a pail of water. The trade winds were blowing strongly, and, as the streamers came clear of the surface, the wind caught them and blew them around the bare arm with which he held the pail. Immediately a pain as of living fire shot through it.

He quickly dropped the physalia into the pail and began to unwind the clinging streamers with his free hand. When he had finished, each finger pained like a toothache. The arm was fiery red and swollen to the elbow, and his armpit ached where the poison had spread to the lymphatic glands.

He did not sleep that night, and the pain passed away slowly dur-

Ichthyologists hail with delight the capture of this inch and a quarter sailfish, smallest ever recorded. Caught in a net at Miami city yacht basin, it proves that sailfish spawn in the tropical waters around Miami, according to fish authorities. The spawning place of the deep sea fighters has long been a matter of guesswork.

West Indian and other tropical species far to the northward during the summer, some of them being borne to the British Isles, so that the pelagic life of the mid-Atlantic is more tropical in character than that of the same latitude on the North American coast.

Sail out across the Gulf stream in a southeasterly direction, keeping your eyes open for evidences of its floating life. Suddenly you see a graceful, translucent object, like an oddly elongated bladder, floating on the surface. It is brilliantly colored blue and crimson, the hues more intense at its tapering ends and shading into a play of delicate transparent tints along its sides.

As you come nearer you see still others, and soon you realize that you are steering into the midst of a fleet of these fairy craft. Each one erects a crest resembling a succession of iridescent, foamlke bubbles along its summit, bordered with an edging of deep crimson.

These are the Portuguese man-of-war (physalia pelagica), an organism related to the hydroids and jellyfish, but consisting of a whole colony of connected individuals floating as a unit.

At first glance only one member of the colony is visible. But, as you look downward through the transparent water, you see masses of smaller tube-shaped projections depending from its lower side—just beneath the surface.

ing the next day. Fortunately he was not seriously affected, but some people, more susceptible, have been known to collapse.

Live in Colonies

The cluster of individuals immediately under the float is of several kinds, each having a special function. The blue, tube-shaped members are feeding polyps, with mouth openings at their lower extremity. They do the feeding and digesting for the entire community. The green, tapering fingers are feelers and tasters, very sensitive. The finely divided pink clusters, reproductive in function, develop the sex cells. Male and female cells are found only in separate colonies.

The streamers, of course, are fighting polyps, the longer ones, as above stated, having a stabilizing function as well. Fishes or other organisms that chance to swim against the streamers are immediately stung to death and drawn up by the contracting filaments to come in contact with the mouths of the feeding polyps, which suck out the victim's body fluid, digest the food, and pass the excess on to the mouthless members of the colony.

A species of small fish, the Portuguese man-of-war fish, appears to be immune to the sting, and seeks shelter among the tentacles from its enemies. In return, it perhaps acts as a lure for larger fish preyed upon by its host, and does not nibble at the feast!

HEALTH

Dyspepsia, commonest of ailments, most often due to functional disorders.

By Dr. James W. Barton

DYSPEPSIA or pain in the stomach is considered the commonest of any single ailment. A study of 10,000 patients aged 15 and older showed 4,223 cases (about 42 per cent) complaining of dyspepsia.

Drs. A. B. Rivers and A. E. Mendes-Ferreira, Mayo Clinic, who made the study, divided the causes into four types: Organic, reflex, systemic and functional.

Organic dyspepsias are those due to changes in the tissues of the stomach and first part of small intestine adjoining the stomach.

Among reflexes, causes of dyspepsia are diseases of the appendix, gall bladder, bile ducts, and kidney stones which disturb the chemistry or mechanics or working arrangements of the stomach and duodenum.

Among dyspepsias due to something wrong with the body or system are disorders of the glands or organs and poisons in the blood.

Functional dyspepsias include disturbances due to nervousness, emotional disturbances and nervous exhaustion.

Of the 12 most common causes of indigestion functional dyspepsia (no real or organic disease) stood first, numbering 25 per cent, ulcer of stomach or small intestine stood second with 9 per cent, and liver and gall bladder and bile ducts stood third with about 8 1/2 per cent. Other common causes were heart and blood vessel ailments 5 1/2 per cent, migraine (one sided headache) 4 1/2 per cent, and constipation about 4 per cent. Cancer would have been more common if the ages had started at 40 instead of 15.

Worry Takes Toll

Why should the functional (no organic trouble) cause the greatest percentage of cases of dyspepsia? "The stresses of life in this day and age exact quite a toll in those who choose to take part vigorously in the race of life. The resulting nervous and physical exhaustion, worry, depression, and various mental conflicts produce changes in the normal, smooth, regular behavior of the motor (movements) and chemical mechanics of digestion, and these disturbances of the movements and chemistry of the stomach and small intestine cause dyspepsia. It is not surprising that most of these cases of functional indigestion occurred between the ages of 25 to 39."

After the age of 40, cases of cancer become more numerous. The lesson then is that while most cases of stomach trouble are due to nervous and emotional disturbance, disturbances of other organs can also cause many cases. After the age of 40, the possibility of cancer must never be forgotten.

Fever Often Helpful In Fighting Ills

A few years ago certain types of insanity accompanied by paralysis were cured by injecting the malaria organisms and causing an attack of malaria. When the malaria attack was cured by quinine; some of the patients were found to be free of their mental symptoms and were able to return home. Later it was discovered that the great heat- fever-of the attack of malaria that brought about the cure. Physicians had remembered that heat is of great help to the body when attacked by any ailment.

Physicians remember that it is not many years ago since reducing the temperature in a patient was done almost regularly. Patient was given a laxative, his food reduced in amount, and a drug given to reduce the fever. Today in many cases only a light laxative is given, food is not reduced, and no drug is given for the fever as the fever is recognized as nature's method of fighting off the ailment. It is only when the fever gets within dangerous limits that any attempt is made to reduce it.

In speaking of fever in Urology and Cutaneous Review, Dr. F. H. Redewell says:

"Fever is a process which aids in the removal or destruction of injurious substances which get into the body. It results in an increase in leucocytes (the white corpuscles or disease fighters in the body), an increase in the rate at which all the body processes work, and a great increase in clasmotocytes (large blood cells) that increase resistance to infection, in the blood, in the lymph (the other portion of the circulation) and all tissues of the body."

Today, instead of reducing temperature, it is not unusual for physicians to use methods—electricity and others—to increase the temperature of the body thus actually increasing its fighting or disease resisting forces.

Much Smoke, Little Fire

The community dinner was over at last and the patient guests who had listened to the long address of the principal speaker breathed a deep sigh of relief.

"The speaker was all right," the toastmaster's wife whispered, "but it seems to me that he didn't put enough fire into his speech." "I feel the opposite way," answered the toastmaster. "In my opinion he didn't put enough of his speech into the fire."—B'nai B'rith Magazine.

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

The Monster in the Box

HELLO EVERYBODY:

It seems to me, boys and girls, that all the interesting characters in the world are flocking to this corner of ours to tell us the big experiences of their lives. Take, for instance, Moe Aarons of New York City. Moe has been a circus man for most of his life, and for a good part of that time he has held down one of the most intriguing jobs in the circus business.

And did Moe lead the band, or swing the flying trapeze, or whiten up his face and do a clown act in the big arena? Not on your life. Moe didn't even travel with the show. For 25 years he has toured the Far East looking for animals with which to stock the menagerie. In that time, Moe has seen plenty, and had plenty of things happen to him. But none of his experiences can ever touch the one he had in October, 1931, with a 20-foot monster from the dark jungles of Burma.

Python Twenty-Six Feet Long.

"I was taking a cargo of unhandled snakes," says Moe, "from Singapore to France on the passenger steamer Az Reveau. The snakes were pythons of extraordinary size, some of them as long as 25 feet, as big around as a stovepipe, and capable of crushing horses to death in their coils. They were kept in wooden boxes four feet square, and I made regular rounds to see that they were all secure, for the steamer carried 800 people, crew included, and I realized my responsibility in safeguarding them from my reptiles."

But one day, to his consternation, Moe found one of his biggest pythons gone. To save his life he couldn't understand how that snake got out of his box—but at the moment that was the least of his worries. The thing to do was to find the reptile and get him back in the case again. Moe hurried to the captain, told him not to worry and asked for a few sailors to help recapture the snake.

The captain assigned three sailors to help Moe. Moe searched the vessel for three hours before he found the python, on a shelf in a secluded corner of the deck. "There he lay," says Moe, "with his tongue going in and out of his mouth like lightning. There was something uncanny about his appearance. I was chilled at the sight. But the one thought in my mind was to get him back in his box as soon as possible. I got a stout stick about eight feet long, attached a rope-loop contrivance at one end, and instructed the sailors to pull the rope tight as soon as I got the loop over the reptile's head."

He managed to get the loop over the snake's head.

Moe advanced on the snake, stick extended. He was being careful not to get too close, lest the python strike and get him in its crushing coils. He got the loop over the reptile's head and yelled, "Pull!" While the sailors held the rope tight, Moe dragged the python down from the shelf, fell on him and grabbed his head. Then he turned to shout further orders to the sailors.

Sailors Left Him Holding the Python!

To his dismay, they had let go of the rope and fed! Moe knew fright then as he had never known it before in his life. "I had the snake by the neck," he says, "but he had both my hands busy keeping his mouth closed. Meanwhile, the snake had begun to wrap me in his folds. I thought, Lord, I will be crushed to death if I don't get some help. But no one lifted a finger except my wife, Minnie, who was standing by near the box we had brought down to put the reptile in. She seized the tail of the snake and unwound one of the folds. She tried to push it into the box, but it came out as fast as she could get it in."

Again and again Minnie thrust that tail back in the box, but each time it lashed out again to coil itself around Moe. Meanwhile, Moe was on the verge of exhaustion. The coils that were already around him were all but crushing the life out of him. "My strength was ebbing fast," he says. "I was wringing wet with perspiration. Blood was flowing from my nose and ears. The folds of the snake had encircled every part of my body from head to foot. Lord, how could people stand around and see me crushed to death?"

"But no one made a move to help me. By now the place was crowded with onlookers, but they stood as if hypnotized—rooted to the deck."

Snake Prepared for Final Squeeze.

Moe's wife alone stuck to him to the bitter end. And Moe claims that it was she who saved him. It seemed as if the snake were preparing for one last, final squeeze. He had his tail around Moe, and Minnie was working with all her might to pry it loose again. Moe was ready to give up, but hope died hard—By that time he had worked himself close to the wooden box in his struggles, and with every ounce of strength he had left in his body, he threw the python's head and one or two of its coils into it.

At the same moment, Minnie succeeded in unwrapping the snake's tail. She threw that into the box, too. With his free hand, Moe slammed down the lid of the box and sat on it. That did the trick. Part of the snake was still outside the box, but when he felt the lid slam down on him he straightened out and began drawing the rest of him inside to keep company with his head.

"When it was over," says Moe, "I was all in—more completely exhausted than I thought a man could be and still remain conscious. I felt as though I didn't have strength to keep on living another minute. I couldn't open my fists and there was a vivid red line encircling every part of my body—marks of where the snake had entwined me. I had to lie in hot water for weeks before I was entirely recovered. And though, today, I am none the worse for my harrowing experience, the recollection of it never fails to send a shiver down my spine."

PRECOCITY NOTED IN PULLET FLOCK

May Identify Early Starters When Picking Breeders.

By Dr. W. C. Thompson, Poultry Husbandman, New Jersey Agricultural Station, WNU Service.

The best and highest egg producers in a flock of poultry almost invariably are those which started the laying year early and got under way during their first three months at a fairly high rate of production.

There is evidence to show that such precocity in pullets is largely inherited. Because of this, it is well for practical poultrymen who anticipate producing their own chicks to mark the pullets going into production in such a way that precocious starters may be identified later when breeders are chosen.

With flocks that are so hatched and reared as to go into egg yield early, it is necessary to know what rate and what amount of production is necessary in order that individuals may be termed precocious layers. If the pullets are not managed under artificial lights, precocious production might be described as being at least 10 eggs per bird for the first month, 12 per bird for the second, and 14 per bird for the third.

If the pullets are managed under artificial lights and are given a 13-hour lighted day and the proper management to go with it, these minimum production figures might be expected to rise by one egg for the first month, two eggs for the second month, and two or three eggs for the third month.

These standards furnish poultrymen with a guide by which to judge any of their pullets. Records better than these minimum standards are, of course, to be accepted as indicating still greater values. Records under these standards, however, must be taken as indicating a lack of inherited capacity for precocious laying, or early starting. One must be sure, of course, that failure to get under way early and with a rapid production rate is not due to mistakes of management, feeding, weather or any other environmental factors which have some bearing on egg yield.

While selecting breeders by their degree of precocity is valuable, it must be borne in mind that, after all, the progeny test is the very best method of measuring a breeder's value.

Proper Care May Check

Losses From Swine Flu

How farmers care for their pigs when flu sweeps through the herd determines to some extent the losses, and Dr. H. C. H. Kernkamp, member of the University Farm, St. Paul, veterinary medicine staff, offers tips which will help to get pigs through this period.

During the course of the disease, which is usually four or five days, the pigs should be kept in clean, dry quarters, with plenty of room to prevent piling and crowding. There should also be ample ventilation, but no drafts, stresses Dr. Kernkamp. Pigs should have access to fresh water and wholesome, easily digested feed. Pigs will usually refuse feed, but those that do eat will be helped.

Swine flu is a contagious disease, and while not confined to pigs of any age or size, it occurs more often among pigs from 5 to 12 months old. It usually spreads through a herd very rapidly, and is characterized by marked depression and weakness, labored breathing, high temperature, rapid loss of weight, refusal to eat, and some coughing. Unless secondary lung complications develop, pigs will usually recover in a week, though it is extremely important to give them the right kind of care.

In the Feed Lot

A liberal supply of whole grains should be fed turkeys until the marketing date.

Calves will waste feed eating from small boxes. Give them large ones to eat from.

Turkeys gain most economically if a constant supply of clean, fresh water is before them at all times.

The washing of eggs removes the slight natural protective covering and increases the tendency of eggs to absorb flavors.

More than half a million farmers in this country buy gasoline, oil and other petroleum products through farmers' co-operative associations.

Houses for ducks must be damp-proof, draught-proof and rat-proof.

To wash henhouses, a suitable solution is one pound of lye mixed into 15 gallons of hot water.

Winter barley is attracting the attention of New York farmers, and its culture is on the increase.

No poultryman should be without poultry house lights. Once light is started, it must be continued regularly.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears & D

Money making ideas for Christmas.

AN INTERESTING letter this morning says, "Our church bazaar is over and in winding up the last details and balancing my accounts I feel that I would be neglecting something if I did not express my appreciation for your Sewing Book No. 2, Gifts, Novelties and Embroidery. We found many ideas in it that were real money makers. Our annual Christmas sale is now in course of preparation. Could you publish some new ideas for toys in the paper soon?"

Unusually attractive toys may be made quickly and at little cost from cheap cotton stockings. This demure yellowish tan kitten with bright red or blue ribbon is made from a stocking-leg. The secret of giving toys of this type character is in making the stuffing firm and tight. Cotton or small pieces of clean, soft rags may be used. Push the stuffing firmly in place with a blunt stick.

Complete directions for cutting and making the body are given here. For the tail, cut a piece 6 inches long and 2 inches wide. Stitch the lengthwise edges together, tapering toward the end, then turn right side out, stuff and sew firmly in place. It is easy to draw the face. Notice in the sketch how the eyelids curve, the shape of the mouth and how the whiskers slant.

Either wool yarn or mercerized cotton embroidery thread may be used—black or brown for the eyes and whiskers and red for the mouth. Be sure to save the scraps

Are we grateful for the favors of the past, or for the favors we expect later on?

People without a sense of humor set very funny at times. Native wit in a backwoodsman thought makes its mark in lines upon the face. Absence of thought shows itself in broad blank spaces.

"POOR TRUST IS DEAD—BAD PAY KILLED HIM"

This sign with picture of "Doggie," gone where all "Doggies" go, hanging on the wall of a small store in a little North Carolina town which was plenty years ago, was my first squint at the hint to pay cash. Some need a hint while others need a kick to make good their I. O. U's. The owner of that North Carolina store the kids called "OLD MAN CASE." What the grown-ups called him, I dunno.

It was said that he was a mind reader because he was always able to arrange to be at the spot where you had to look at that sign, and him, too, when you wanted credit. His cold stare and that sign caused stuttering of "the promise to pay tomorrow." It was told that some could not even utter the stutter when facing him and his sign.

In later years, after his retirement, speaking of his experience, he said, "There was a time when I was a Santa Claus and some folks seemed to think every day was December twenty-fifth, and no week had a pay day and no month, a first. It was then I decided to change my store habits and if possible the habits of some of my townspeople."

After thinking things over awhile, I made up my mind to advertise. I reasoned it out that a general alarm in the WEEKLY, the only paper in town, to tell about my store, the goods and the new policy of paying, would hit everybody and it would help me save shams—some might feel sheepish while reading my advertisements and have a heart.

I got interested in advertising. I found other people, some of them my customers, read advertisements, so I helped it along the best I knew how. I put gingersnap words in my advertisements and some humor, and that's how the idea came for the POOR TRUST IS DEAD sign.

I also found that good name goods had repeat sales and that started me concentrating on staples with the result that fussiness over what kind, no longer confused or irked. Dilly-dally selling efforts, wasting time and costing money passed out.

Customers bought baking powder, soda, flour, soap and other articles bearing identification marks. Kids called them pictures. Products put up in neat, convenient, honest weight and measured cartons, boxes, bottles and cans. What an improvement in business and the dispositions of the customers. I even improved with conditions so greatly changed for the better.

Bruckart's Washington Digest

Danger of 'Jewish Problem' for United States in German 'Purge'

Resentment of American People Aroused by Hitler's Harshness; Opening of Gates to Refugees Might Introduce Disturbing Influence.

By WILLIAM BRUCKART

WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON. — Press service wires and cables and radio from abroad have been clogged for several weeks with hundreds of thousands of words about the plight of the Jews in Germany; about the abuses visited upon the Jewish race by the European madman, Hitler, and his camp followers; about the humanitarian pleas of our own President, Mr. Roosevelt, for appeasement of the conditions. There has been what I believe to be one of the greatest waves of emotion, waves of resentful national sentiment, that this country ever has known. I recall none like it, none as overwhelming, none as deep-seated as that through which we have been passing, and in my opinion our nation should have resented such outrages.

While no one with a heart can fail to grieve to a greater or less extent about the indescribable harshness, the unforgivable meanness of Hitler, it occurs to me that we should begin to temper these waves of emotion somewhat. There are other factors to be considered, factors and consequences of the thing that is now called "the Jewish problem," that require calm reasoning. In other words, let us say that America is and must remain for Americans, and charity, while it is sweet, cannot be exploited, or carried to extremes simply because we feel a sadness for a group upon whom an injustice has been done. Like millions of other Americans, I am hopeful that some way will be found to aid the Jews who are being driven out of Germany, but I am unwilling that we, as a nation, shall create additional and unwarranted difficulties for ourselves by extending a helping hand. Therefore, the United States must not be the goat.

It is one thing to render aid. It is quite another thing to inject into our own bloodstream of national life additional elements without knowing what those elements are. After all, the damage is something that we did not cause; the injured are a people who have no knowledge of our way of doing things and may never co-operate with us, and we must prevent being dragged into the other fellow's fist fight.

'Purge' of German Jews an Exposition of Mad Power

I suppose there are very few persons in the United States who do not believe that Hitler's "purge" of German Jews constitutes a blot upon modern civilization. I know that leading Germans in the United States wish there were ways and means to stop the action. There can be no defense of the outright seizure of $400,000,000 of money from the Jews of Germany under the guise of a "fine" although there is a lesson of warning in it. Likewise, none can convince me that Hitler has kept his underlings free of graft and corruption in this or other dictatorial actions. Those in power in Germany are garnering the gold for themselves—or else we are witnessing the activities of angels whose purposes we, as human beings, are unable yet to understand. I do not believe they are angels. The "purge" of German Jews, therefore, must be accepted as the exposition of mad power.

Some weeks ago, I had occasion in these columns to talk about the so-called "peace of Munich." I said then that Hitler was not through; that there would be further exhibitions as he and his henchmen maneuvered this way and that in order to maintain the iron grip of a dictator. The drive on the Jews is a part of that general scheme, a movement to maintain a support for the dictatorship, for, it is known, should Hitler's grasp be broken at any place or at any time, there would be a bloody revolt in Germany again.

Those causes, however, do not help us in the solution of the Jewish problem. The unwanted race is simply the victim—and a knowledge of how its members have had the sufferings brought upon them adds little or nothing to the search for a method to protect their lives. Where are they to go? That is the real question. Hitler doesn't care where they go or what happens to them. Some one else has to lead the way. Our nation has joined in that leadership, and rightly so. But we have policies and principles and traditions which must be respected. If, in our eagerness to help the German Jews, we should transgress those established principles, then we, as well as the Jews, will have to pay a penalty.

'Jewish Problem' for United States Might Be Result

The whole situation is one which may contain a "Jewish problem" for the United States. It is one out of which a political issue may grow. It is to be remembered that religion became an issue in a presidential election not so many years ago. That shows that such things can sprout even in the United States. If it happened in the case of the Catholic religion, it can happen in the case of a racial question, especially with regard to the Jewish race. We ought not kid ourselves. There are many persons swearing allegiance to the United States who do not like Jews. Those persons may be otherwise good citizens, but they distrust a Jew because he is a Jew, making no distinction between individuals. It is stating nothing new to say that there has been almost a steady undercurrent of criticism of Mr. Roosevelt from certain quarters because Jews have been given prominent places in the New Deal. I think it is not stretching the imagination at all, therefore, to point to the Jewish problem as one that may become involved in politics at some future time, although I hope it never does.

Mr. Roosevelt has proposed removal of some of the immigration restrictions as a means of bringing into this country more German Jews than our immigration laws now permit. In so doing, he verged on politics himself. Any one familiar with the debates on immigration policies in the early 1920's must recall the severity of that battle. The issue was whether we, as a nation, were going to be haven for all comers and just hope that they would do things the American way, or whether we should restrict the number coming here to live to a number which could be absorbed into our national life. Labor unions and most employers favored the restrictions, and when we think of the number of unemployed in the last five or six years—people fed and clothed by the federal government—it appears that we allowed too many to come in. It seems we could have excluded all of them to advantage.

Only Congress Can Let Down Immigration Bar

Behind the scenes of the immigration restriction also was a determination on the part of Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania, then a senate power, to prevent introduction into the United States of all kinds of "isms." The senator foresaw the spread of radicalism by means of entry of the European backwash and rubbish. There was not much discussion of this phase because our government did not want to offend any foreign nation. It was a basic reason, however, and it is too bad that it was not given more public consideration.

Fortunately, there can be no change in the number of foreigners admitted from any nation without action by congress. The United States can take only so many—something like 30,000 a year—of those purged Jews, unless congress amends the law. And when I say it is fortunate that there must be action by congress before there can be a change in policy, I mean no inferences.

I believe Mr. Roosevelt is eminently correct when he says that there must be a "homeland" established for the Jews. The British tried to make Palestine that sort of a base, it will be remembered, but they failed because Arabs don't like Jews. This experience then would seem to point to the necessity for the Jews being colonized quite alone. If the United States can extend help in doing that job, there ought to be no criticism of the course, even if it involves financial assistance. It would be a charity worthwhile, and a charity that would not involve us later on. I repeat that I believe there is real danger in letting down the floodgates for immigration whereas the other method would seem to be a humanitarian action again demonstrating our national sympathy for a downtrodden people.

Refugees Likely to Create a Disturbing Influence

In consideration of whether we ought to let a deluge of refugees enter, I cannot help thinking of a possible spread of trouble. For example, if our definite national position of protest against Hitler's policies should bring retaliation, every Jewish refugee allowed in this country would be clamoring for the United States to take revenge on Germany and Hitler. Their influence would be great because they could tell what happened to them and give an idea of what is happening. You and I and millions of others would believe next hand information. There is no doubt about it. The germ of trouble could be incubated ten times more rapidly; instead of staying out of European troubles, we would be pushed in deeper and deeper.

As far as relations between Germany and the United States are concerned at the moment, all that can be said is that the United States has let the world know of its disapproval. When Ambassador Wilson was recalled, it was just the same as saying to the world of nations that Uncle Sam hasn't any respect for Hitler.

"God is truth. The word truth describes the very nature of God. Lying, therefore, reveals a character opposite from God. Satan is a liar. He was a liar from the beginning and is spiritually the father of all liars. A lie does not necessarily have to be an untruth. A statement of a truth may be a lie if its purpose is to deceive. A half truth may be the worst kind of a lie. Satan's lies are usually mixed with truth." Consider "modernism, which has enough truth in it to make it accepted by thousands of people, but sufficient error to deprive it of any power to save souls" (L. D. Higley).

I. Forbidden to Lie (Exod. 20:16). This commandment specifically forbids perjury, which is one of the worst forms of lying, because it may result in the forfeiture of the very life of a fellow being. It is obvious, however, that it includes all forms of lying, whether in business, in social contacts, in the home, or in the church. We might do well to consider what the Bible has to say about whisperers, talebearers, backbiters, and others (see Lev. 19:16; II Cor. 12:20). A man's reputation may be as easily ruined by a whispered lie over the back fence or the luncheon table as by formal perjury in the courtroom. "Thou shalt not bear false witness" at any time, anywhere, or in any way.

II. Fountain of Lies (Matt. 15:19, 20).

Our constant concern for the body that it may be healthy, clean, and well groomed is commendable up to the point where it becomes an attempt to "glorify" the flesh. But after all, the body is not the most important thing. The heart is what makes a man (read Matt. 15:7-11). But what comes out of man's unregenerate heart? What a horrible catalogue we read in verse 19! It is not what a man eats or what he wears that makes him, but what is in his heart. How foolish then to hope to redeem humanity by improving housing, having better schools and bigger playgrounds. All these are desirable, but the one thing needful is that man's heart be washed in the blood of the Lord Jesus Christ, that he be born again.

III. Father of Lies (John 8:42-47). Liars had better consider their "family tree" and see how they like their spiritual father. He is lustful, murderous, and there is no truth in him (v. 44). If you belong to that family you do not like to change families and be born into God's family.

As we have already suggested, the prize life of Satan is modern religious liberalism. We quote again from Mr. Higley: "The first lie was told by Satan and it brought about the fall of the human race. The last lie . . . by Satan is being told even now . . . in the form of modernism, that makes the Church impotent even to save its own people." Let us have no part in putting forward this falsehood.

Note that in verses 45-47 Jesus challenges His enemies to convict Him of sin or of falsehood. No one has ever been able to meet that challenge. Even those who deny His Godhood and Saviourhood speak swelling words of commendation of His pure life and exalted moral teaching. If then He told the truth about other things, surely He speaks the truth about Himself. The claims He made for Himself as the Son of God and the Saviour of the world are plain and unmistakable. If we deny them we either make Jesus a liar, or we lie ourselves, and it is obvious that the latter is the case.

IV. Forsaking of Lies (Eph. 4:25). "Wherefore" refers us back to the preceding verses where we are told how, as Christians, we have put off the life of the "old man" (v. 22) and put on the "new man"; therefore we are to live in true holiness. But evidently the Ephesian Christians still tell into their old heathen habits of lying. Would that the tendency had died out with the early Church, but as a matter of fact, it seems to have become aggravated as the years have come and gone.

Being in Christ—members of His body and thus united to one another in Him—should make us scrupulously truthful toward all men. Let us—which means you and me—scrutinize every relationship of life and be sure that we have not by word, act, or inference told lies. Think carefully of your family life, your church life, your community life. Deal with such practical things as grocery bills, taxes, tendencies to gossip. We preachers need to consider our sermons. Are they true to God's Word? Are they honestly prepared? Do we "stretch" our illustrations to make them effective? Surely all of us who bear the name of Christ must put away every form of falsehood.

C. Houston Goudiss Describes Some of the Functions of Vitamin B.—Reports Recent Discoveries of Its Relation to the Gastro-Intestinal Tract

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

PERHAPS no more dramatic chapter has ever been written in the history of nutritional science than the discovery of the chemical structure of the vitamin now known as B, and its artificial synthesis.

Inasmuch as a deficiency of this vitamin may have extremely far-reaching effects upon human health and happiness, it is important that every homemaker should learn something of its functions, its characteristics and its sources.

The Anti-Neuritic Substance Vitamin B, is known to prevent and to cure a nerve disease called beriberi.

The disease was known in ancient times in the Orient. It occurred in other countries during the Nineteenth century. And even in the Twentieth century, some of the British troops stationed in Mesopotamia and the Dardanelles during the World-war came down with the disease.

Even before this vitamin was identified, a European investigator was seeking to determine why a small portion of milk added to a diet containing protein, fats, carbohydrates and minerals successfully nourished individuals who did not enjoy good health when the milk was omitted.

Chemical Identification Many investigators sought for years to fathom the secret of this mysterious substance. After long research by many distinguished investigators, two Americans reached a milestone in the history of nutritional science when they discovered the chemical structure of vitamin B, and learned how to synthesize it.

A Regulator of Body Processes In the course of their work with vitamin B, nutritional scientists have discovered many other important functions of this vitamin. It has been determined that this substance is essential to growth, and that it is also necessary to promote normal appetite. Laboratory experiments with animals revealed that when fed upon a diet lacking vitamin B, the animals lost their desire for food and refused to eat until the vitamin was restored to their diet.

There is also some evidence that vitamin B, is necessary for the maintenance of normal muscular tone of the large intestine.

Aids Gastro-Intestinal Tract Chemical studies on 75 patients led one investigator to conclude that a continual slight-shortage of vitamin B, leads to definite changes in the motor and secretory mechanism of the gastro-intestinal tract. There is also evidence that the vitamin B, requirement increases with the rate of growth and with increased energy expenditure.

Sources of Vitamin B, Investigation has established that foods yielding a good amount of vitamin B, include bran, milk, eggs, bananas, orange juice, carrots, spinach and cabbage.

One of America's outstanding nutritional scientists has stated that foods can be made to provide the necessary daily requirement of vitamin B, if half of the needed calories are taken in the form of fruits, vegetables, milk and eggs, and if at least half of the breads and cereals consumed are taken in the whole grain form. This suggests the advisability of adding some bran to muffins, waffles, and other quick breads when they are intended for the dietary of normal individuals. The same procedure can likewise be followed in serving hot or cold cereals.

Another distinguished authority holds that adequate amounts of vitamin B, can be furnished at a low cost if the homemaker will utilize larger quantities of the whole grain cereals and legumes. If the calories supplied by these foods are not desired—as when one is endeavoring to avoid gaining weight—vitamin B, may be obtained from suitable quantities of bran and the germ of the grain.

Foods That Help Promote Regularity In addition to providing vitamin B, which helps to serve as a sort of intestinal tonic, bran and many fruits and vegetables help to add cellulose or bulk to the diet. Their fibrous framework is a great aid in promoting regular health habits.

Some foods are richer than others in cellulose or bulk. Good sources of this substance being notably bran, whole grain cereals, most raw fruits; dried fruits, such as prunes, figs and raisins; raw vegetables; such cooked vegetables as onions and leafy greens; and legumes, that is, dried beans and peas.

These foods, therefore, have a definite place in the diet of normal individuals. The homemaker should see to it that they are included regularly in her daily menus.

If that task is performed faithfully, it should help to develop a healthier and more vigorous race.

Questions Answered

Mrs. S. T. L.—Yes, you are correct. All kinds of flesh food furnish protein, and usually they also contain fat. The amount of fat, however, varies with the cut and with the kind of animal from which it was obtained. Many flesh foods have more fat than full cream.

Mrs. T. A.—If a year-old infant receives a quart of milk daily, he should obtain sufficient protein, calcium, phosphorus and vitamin A to meet his requirements. He will likewise receive substantial amounts of vitamins B and G, but he needs a supplementary source of vitamin C.

RELIEVING COLD DISCOMFORT THIS WAY

Just Follow Simple Directions Below and Use Fast-Acting Bayer Aspirin

1. To ease pain and discomfort and reduce fever take 2 Bayer Tablets—drink a glass of water. Repeat in 2 hours.

2. If throat is raw from cold, crush and dissolve 3 Bayer Tablets in 1/2 glass of water.

It's the Way Thousands Know to Ease Discomfort of Colds and Sore Throat Accompanying Colds

The simple way pictured above often brings amazingly fast relief from discomfort and sore throat accompanying colds.

Try it. Then—see your doctor. He probably will tell you to continue with the Bayer Aspirin because it acts so fast to relieve discomforts of a cold. And to reduce fever.

This simple way, backed by scientific authority, has largely supplanted the use of strong medicines in easing cold symptoms. Perhaps the easiest, most effective way yet discovered. But make sure you get BAYER Aspirin.

A Sure Index of Value

... is knowledge of a manufacturer's name and what it stands for. It is the most certain method, except that of actual use, for judging the value of any manufactured goods. Here is the only guarantee against careless workmanship or use of shoddy materials.

All Very Easy to Make

ING. This is much too pretty a dress to make only once. You'll use the pattern time and again. Make it for home wear of gingham, linen or percale. Make it of challis, wool crepe or velvet—(without the pockets) for a useful runabout dress.

The Doll's Outfit. Just look at all the pretty things you can make from this one pattern, for the Christmas joy of some doll-loving little girl!

A play suit that becomes a dirdl frock when you add the shirred skirt! A cape and a kerchief! A housecoat just like the grown-up ones for real ladies, and a dream of a party dress! In just a short time, with a few scraps left over from your own clothes, you can make this gift. And these tiny garments are almost as much fun for grown-ups to make as they are for children to play with!

The Patterns. No. 1642 is designed for sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 34 requires 4 1/2 yards of 35-inch material; 1 1/2 yards of trimming. No. 1645 is designed for 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22 and 24-inch dolls; 14-inch doll requires, for the party dress, and housecoat 3/4 yard each of 35-inch material; for the play suit, skirt and kerchief, 1/2 yard; for the cape, 3/8 yard.

Fall and Winter Fashion Book. The new 32-page Fall and Winter Pattern Book—which shows photographs of the dresses being worn is now out. (One pattern and the Fall and Winter Pattern Book—25 cents.) You can order the book separately for 15 cents. Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1020, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. CHAPTER I

Hale settled deeper into the office chair and kept his brown eyes on Casper Kneeland's face. Kneeland had been "Uncle Cass" the last time they met. That was 18 years ago, out in the Northwest, when Hale himself had been a boy of ten. Kneeland was not "Uncle Cass" now. He was an impressive, successful, middle-aged New York business man. He had made a fortune by inventing a simple article widely known as Kneeland's Safety Catch. He was busy, preoccupied, and rather short of memory concerning ten-year-olds. He had welcomed Hale into the office suite of his factory with a handshake and a business-like smile. Now he was "making talk," and Hale resented it.

Kneeland might have forgotten a ten-year-old godchild, the caller told himself. He should not have forgotten that godchild's father. Hale Senior had been Kneeland's first partner and the closest friend of his youth. It had been a fine friendship. It had impressed the little boy. Yet here, 18 years later, was a Casper Kneeland equally vague in memory of the Hales, father and son, and talking too smugly, the young man thought, about his interests.

Listening to him, as the man sat at his handsome flat-top desk and poured out his trickle of small talk, Hale realized that "Uncle Cass" had not yet wearied of the flavor of his success. He rolled it on his tongue. He betrayed a tendency to enumerate his various possessions.

"We're at our Camp now, but of course I keep my town house open all summer," Kneeland was saying, apropos of the unseasonable June heat. "Joan, my niece, is always running into New York for a day or two, even in the hottest weather. And Hosanna (my sister, who joined my family after we came East), would live in New York 12 months a year if I'd let her. She doesn't care much for seashore life. It suits me down to the ground. I'd like nothing better than to put up at Halcyon Camp the first of June and stay there till the first of November. Can't quite manage that, of course, but I come as near it as I can."

"I can usually get away from here Friday night and stay at the Camp till Monday," he went on, as Hale merely nodded. "And I always put in all of August there. Greatest place in the world to sleep. Pines and spruces around and behind you, the whole Atlantic in front of you, good boating, fishing, swimming. We've got a modest place, but plenty of room. Say—by Jove!" He stopped short under the impact of an idea that had just hit him, and stared at his caller.

"Why don't you get out of this oven and make the Camp a visit?" he rushed on after a second's hesitation. "The newspapers say this will be the hottest June we've ever had. It will do you no end of good to loaf awhile. Didn't you say you had just had a stiff bout of pneumonia in Spain?"

"That pneumonia is ancient history now," young Rex assured Kneeland. "I was all right again a week before I sailed for home."

"Landed this morning, didn't you?"

"Yes, sir, and I'm hustling out to Chicago. But I once promised Dad I'd never go through New York without looking you up."

"Glad you did, my boy," Kneeland spoke absently, his mind full of the sudden idea that had come to him. "What are you going to do in Chicago?" he added in the same tone.

"Get a job, I hope."

"June is no time to make a start," Kneeland pointed out, "in Chicago or anywhere else. By the way, what's your line?"

He didn't even remember that, Rex reflected, though Hale Senior had written him about it some years before with paternal pride.

"Civil engineering."

Kneeland nodded. "No use trying to find a job now," he underlined. "It can't be done. Everything's dead—till fall, anyway. I'll tell you the thing to do. You're a big athletic chap, but you need building up. You're too thin for your six feet, and your color isn't right. Come down to Halcyon Camp and spend the summer there. It will buck you up. I call it Halcyon Camp," he added complacently, "because I want it to be a serene and happy place. I want everyone to be comfortable there."

Hale was surprised and showed it. "Oh, thanks awfully," he said, "but I couldn't do that!"

"Why not?" The question was sharply imperative. Evidently Kneeland was not a man who liked opposition.

"It's awfully kind of you, sir. It takes my breath away. But—I can't unload myself on your household. The women of your family might not like it."

the house. Julia, my wife, died 10 years ago. Your mother's dead, too, isn't she?" he broke off to ask.

"Yes, sir. She died very suddenly just after I entered college. I couldn't even get home in time to see her."

"Any brothers and sisters?"

"No, sir."

"I remember Rex writing that your mother was gone. It was the same year my wife died."

That, young Hale reflected, was why he remembered it. Kneeland's memory would not long hold anything not directly connected with his own interests.

"You ought to remember my wife," he brought out.

"Yes, sir, I remember her well. She was mighty good to me," Rex the youngster's face. The smile was more likable than the first glimpse of it had been. It banished the expression of anxiety that sat so oddly on the manufacturer's round face. He was suddenly a good-looking man in the early fifties, plump, slightly bald, pleasant-featured, human and engaging. Five minutes before he had seemed a harassed and nerve-worn man in the sixties. Rex did not know that a similar change had wrought its miracle in his own face. He waited eagerly for his host's reply.

"In lots of ways. For one thing, I've no secretary at the Camp. My son Herbert, twenty-two now, was supposed to do that job. But he's no good this summer—always 10 miles away when I want him. He make myself useful if I can. But I won't go tonight, thanks. I'll stay over tomorrow and get a few things I'll need for camp life. Naturally, I didn't bring much in the line of clothes back from Spain."

"Then that's settled. Go any time you like. I'll telephone Hosanna that you're coming. Wait, I'll give you a check for expenses."

"Nothing doing, thank you. I'll pay my own way till I see how much bluff you're giving me about this job. I suspect that you're putting over today's good deed."

"Nothing like it. There will be work for you, all right."

The haggard look abruptly returned to Kneeland's face. For an instant he seemed old again, and very tired. There was something pathetic in the eyes he fixed on Hale. Then he suddenly recalled that the good-looking young giant before him had been a darned nice kid.

"I can't thank you enough, Mr. Kneeland," Hale got up.

"Uncle Cass, my boy. That's what it used to be a thousand years ago."

He had remembered his godson at last.

"Thank you, sir. By the way, where is the Camp?"

"Down on Long Island," Kneeland laughed and wrote the address for him.

Hale put in the next day shopping. The experience decreased his supply of ready cash but increasingly raised his spirits. He was not an economical young man, and even before the prospect of a camp visit he had realized that he must start his new life with a suitable American wardrobe. There were not many temptations to be sartorially dashing in Spain. There were plenty today, and he yielded to them with an abandon that endeared him to clerks. Moreover it was a pleasure to salesman to fit him. They let him grasp their impression that he would do credit to the suits and shirts and ties and shoes and knickerbockers he was buying. His figure was excellent and his copper-colored hair and brown eyes would set off the heather mixtures he selected for outdoor wear. He would look well in his white flannels, too. He was fussy about shirts and ties, and the clerks who served him in those departments respected his knowledge. This young man knew what went with his coloring. Hale explained his satisfaction in his new purchases with an engaging grin.

"Besides," Kneeland interrupted, "you can make yourself useful"

grinned. "She was always filling me up with cookies and a kind of raisin bread I've never forgotten."

Kneeland's round, smooth face shadowed.

"She was a fine woman," he testified. "Her last year was very tragic. I don't know whether I wrote your father about it but—she had lost her mind."

Rex shook his head.

"We didn't know that," he said sympathetically. "At least I didn't. Father may have, but he never spoke of it. He was awfully cut up by Mother's death about that time."

Kneeland sighed and dismissed both dead women from his mind with an abruptness Hale knew now was characteristic. He returned to the congenial topic of his camp.

"Hosanna and Joan both realize that the Camp is mine, not theirs," he continued, as if there had been no interruption. "I invite any friends I want to visit it. So do they. We have three house-guests there now. Joan usually has some girl friends there, but she's out of sorts this summer and doesn't seem to want them. I've plenty of servants to look after everybody." The unctuous note crept back into his voice.

"There's a cook—and a good one, if I do say it. There's a maid, a butler, valet, and a handy man. We're supposed to be living a primitive life. We're off the main line and away from the social set. But we have all the comforts—good plumbing, plenty of bathrooms, big fireplaces for cool days. You can take the 4:30 train and be there in time for dinner tonight. I can't go till Friday, or I'd drive you down."

"Thanks again. But I really don't think—"

"Besides," Kneeland interrupted, "you can make yourself useful."

"Oh, that's different. How?"

Kneeland smiled at the change in doesn't seem to be interested. Flocks by himself and that sort of thing. He isn't even much use to Joan. He's off on his own affairs, whatever they are. Another young man around the place will be a godsend to the girl." His smile widened.

"I'll pay you a salary, of course. Just thought of it," he added candidly.

Hale shook his head.

"We won't talk about salary till I find out whether there's really anything for me to do. I'll go, and

Buda and Pest Are United by Fifth Danube Bridge; Built by Hungarians

The fifth bridge to span the Danube between Buda and Pest is open to the public, writes the Budapest correspondent of the London Sunday Observer. The bridge, which stands near the Horthy Miklos road, is a plain solid structure designed by Hungarian architects and built from Hungarian materials by Hungarian workmen. It indicates the swift development of the capital in the last 10 years, for it opens new prospects over a district which not long ago was marshy land.

The fifth bridge commemorates both the World war and the post-war period and brings the history of the city up to date. A hundred years ago the only means of crossing the Danube was a bridge made of 42 boats, which was taken apart and stored in winter. When the ice formed the citizens walked across the river from one town to the other.

The first bridge to be built was the chain bridge, below the royal palace, after Count Szechenyi had struggled for seven years to carry through the plan. The chain bridge cost 6,500,000 forins, and the toll was two farthings. It was opened in December, 1849.

Twenty-seven years later the Margaret bridge was built by a French engineer named Gouin; not by Eiffel, who was then director in the firm which employed him. The bridge was opened by the suicide of several persons who threw themselves down from its parapets, and immortalized by Arany in his ballad on the scene.

The Francis Joseph bridge was built in 1896 for the Hungarian millenary and was opened by the emperor hammering a silver nail into the construction. During the revolution this nail was lost, but was later found, and may now be seen under glass.

Weather Affects Bird Flight

Weather conditions affect the altitude of bird flight. On nights of rain and fog, birds fly close to the earth. Wind currents also are a great deterrent to bird migration, as head winds increase the labor of flight and, if at all strong, cut down the speed of flight. Moderate cross, quartering or light winds from other directions seem to offer the best air-movement conditions, according to experts in bird lore.

Stranger In Town

By Sarah Jane Clark

JIM saw Joan first as she stopped in at Du Vall's grocery. "Mother wants a T-bone steak, the kind she always gets, and a pound of bacon." Her voice was that delightfully husky kind.

Jim, having finished his purchase, got out his money slowly, counted up the amount of his purchases and looked over his change carefully before he pocketed it.

She looked like a grand girl. He wished he knew her. But he was a stranger in the big city, and he'd have to wait. Couldn't rush things with a girl like that. And perhaps she had a boy friend already. Unconsciously he slowed down at the corner of his apartment building.

Stupid, to have to eat all alone, the night before Christmas.

Jim turned to look back at the store he had just left, and found that the girl had overtaken him.

"Hello, there, you going my way?" he asked. "I'm a stranger here, and it's mighty lonesome at Christmas."

But the girl, with a cool, "Excuse me, please," hurried on. Jim's cheeks burned. He hadn't meant to be fresh, really.

He turned the corner and entered the doorway of his apartment. Then he saw the girl the third time. She was just opening the door and going up the stairs. She lived in the same building with him!

He ate his solitary supper in his one-room kitchenette apartment. Then, what was there to do? His first Christmas away from home. His job here was so new that he hadn't dared to ask for time off to go home. Well, he supposed he could go to a show.

But when Jim got out onto Delaware Place he almost changed his mind. A snow had begun to fall, a heavy leisurely snow with big flakes that made a thick carpet on the streets and sidewalks, already icy from the drizzle of the afternoon. He hesitated a minute about starting out on such a night, then thinking of the lonely room he had just quitted, he shrugged his shoulders and started up the street.

With his head down he trudged through the snow, plowing his way with difficulty against the strong wind. Too late he saw a dark figure directly in front of him. There was a bump, and a crash as an armful of packages landed on the sidewalk. Startled, Jim looked into the face of the girl he was thinking about. His face red with embarrassment, Jim picked up her bundles. His apology was quite incoherent.

Strange to say, the girl laughed amusefully. "Why go around barging into people this way? It's just my luck; Christmas eve, to have my bundles all scattered, and, a little ruefully, 'some of them broken.'"

"Say, that's a shame. You must let me replace anything that's broken," Jim insisted. "Really I'm awfully sorry about this. I was facing the snow and had my head down. I'll never forgive myself if you don't let me do this last minute shopping with you. I am Jim Sheridan, from Dubuque, working for the Times."

"Well, I'm Joan Siegfred. I've been feeling sorry for the way I squeaked you a while ago. So I'm glad of a chance to say so." Her eyes were bright and sparkling.

Walking down the busy streets with a pretty girl, replacing Christmas decorations that had been smashed in the fall, and being allowed to help put them on the trees later, was a lot better than going to a picture show alone. And when Joan's cheerful, friendly mother asked the homesick lad to have dinner with them next day, Jim felt that he was no longer a friendless stranger in a big city, and that Christmas was a time of peace and good will, after all.

Christmas on the Highway

CHICAGO.—With traffic increased by the Christmas rush, more American lives were lost in automobile accidents during the month of December, 1935, than in the Revolutionary war. But last December, in a campaign led by the National Safety Council, the toll was reduced by 400 lives. But still 3,800 people were killed that month. Pedestrians and motorists alike were responsible for this "holy day" of the grim reaper. People are often less cautious during the holiday season.

Penalized for That Which Was Unavoidable

W. B. Maxwell tells a story about the venerable Lord Halsbury, whose caddie had forced the famous lord chancellor to count a second stroke after his ball had been pulled out from under a bush. "A harsh decision," soliloquized the jurist, "and I cannot but strongly urge that if the ball was playable in fact. Then how can one equitably be penalized as if committing a misdemeanor, when only doing that which is unavoidable and inevitable? Wait, Mother—Ask Your Doctor First

Never give your children unknown "Bargain" remedies to take unless you ask your doctor.

A mother may save a few pennies giving her children unknown preparations. But a child's life is precious beyond pennies. So ask your doctor before you give any remedy you don't know all about.

And when giving the common children's remedy, milk of magnesia, always ask for "Phillips' Milk of Magnesia."

Because for three generations Phillips' has been favored by many physicians as a standard, reliable and proved preparation—marvelously gentle for youngsters.

Many children like Phillips' in the newer form—tiny peppermint-flavored tablets that chew like candy. Each tablet contains the equivalent of one teaspoonful of the liquid Phillips' 25¢ for a big box.

A bottle of Phillips' liquid Milk of Magnesia costs but 25¢. So—anyone can afford the genuine. Careful mothers ask for it by its full name "Phillips' Milk of Magnesia."

WAIT UNTIL HITLER HEARS OF THIS

We note in the "Swastika" is banned in this state. One of the largest coal companies in Raton who had been using that insignia were compelled to dispense with the use of the good-luck omen, and change the name of the corporation.

A Citizen declared, "Just give him (Hitler) time, and somebody within his own Nazi ranks will get him."

St. Senor; we think so too.

Pitcher Walter Johnson was elected as County Commissioner of Montgomery county on the Republican ticket. Johnson's campaign expenses amounted to 50 cents; believe it or not.

Walter Johnson is remembered by your commentator which he first started pitching for the Galesburg, Ill., baseball team.

Grover Cleveland Alexander and Walter Johnson were pitchers on the old Galesburg team the same year. — Story for Bob Ripley.
