SCHOOL NEWS

Students and teachers are looking forward to the holidays. School will be closed from Dec. 22, at 4 p. m. to Jan. 3, at 9 a. m. The Juniors sponsored a show at the Lyric on Wednesday and Thursday nights, entitled "Mr. Doodle Kick Off." For the large sum of money accruing to the class treasurer we thank Mr. Walker and people who attended. The basketball fans were thrilled by the fast game between Socorro-Carrizozo last Friday. We were defeated 21 to 18. This was the first game and the boys hope to improve. The Senior Class will give a dance at Community Hall, Dec. 23. Everybody welcome!

Hot Check Artist Arrested

On Monday of this week, the officers arrested Bill Holden, alias E. L. Holder, Sam Stepp and Sam Statt, hot check dispenser and confidence man, at the Roper ranch 85 miles from here. He is wanted for car theft at Littleton, Colo., and passing hot checks at Clovis, Denver, El Paso and Brady, Texas. He had made his headquarters at the Roper ranch near Tecolote since last August, during which time he has been posing as a cattle buyer. The arrest was made by the sheriff's officers and much credit is due Sheriff Greisen's office for apprehending a crook, who had victimized many stockmen. The local reporter for the Associated Press was in the sheriff's office when he was questioned. When confronted with the fact that he was wanted in several states, he broke down and said, "I might as well admit to everything. I am now 63 years old and I don't want my liberty again. I am a sick man, affected with disease of the heart which will soon take me and I know it. Here is another proof that crime does not pay. He would buy cattle, give out a hot check and have the cattle sold before the checks would be dishonored. He is now an old man and ready to die, as he said. This should serve as a frightful example to young men who think is smart to engage in rackets, victimize people and think they can get away with it.

Shooting at Tinnie

Last Saturday morning at Tinnie, Tranquillino Montoya was found in his home, dying from a bullet wound in the head and a gun lying beside him. The man was rushed to a hospital here, where he died that night. Tiofilo Salazar was arrested and lodged in the county jail by Sheriff Greisen and Deputy Bunch, but as yet, no charges have been filed against him.

Nick Vega and little daughter Viola were Tularosa and Alamogordo visitors Wednesday.

G. S. Brown

Wednesday morning at a local hospital, G. S. Brown, 60, old resident of this county, passed on after a brief illness of but a few days. The funeral services were held at the home of his sister, Mrs. J. V. Hobbie, conducted by Rev. Crawford of Capitan and the remains interred in the cemetery at Angus in the family burial plot.

(Sephus) Brown, as he was known, was born in Stone County, Mo., Oct. 26 1878, and came to this section of the state with the family in 1884. Sephus was a railroad blacksmith and was in the employ of the old E. P. & S. W. and afterwards by the S. P. Co. He was a valuable man in that service and worked at the forge at the local shops here for many years. He also was employed at Elephant Butte during the time the big dam was being built.

He is survived by three brothers and five sisters. Sephus was a man in whom one could place implicit trust. He was honest, conscientious and one whose list of friends increased as people became better acquainted with him. When in town, he always made this office one of his stopping places. Coming here in the early days, he grew up among the old pioneers who helped blaze the way for what the new generation now enjoys. To the surviving members of the family, the sympathy of our community is tendered.

Jack O'Malley of Capitan was a visitor here this morning.

Entertained BUSINESS MEN'S CLUB

The school faculty entertained the members of the Business Men's Club Wednesday at a 6 o'clock dinner, prepared by the Home Ecs department.

Mrs. Fernette Honaker, teacher and her assistants deserve more than ordinary praise for their efficient service rendered on the above occasion. The dining room was tastefully decorated in holiday colors. Red candles were arranged at each table and place cards were neatly tucked in decorated pine cones at each plate, bearing the names of those who were to occupy seats at the banquet for both hosts and guests. The electric lights were turned off, leaving only the soft glow of candle light, and casting its gleams on the tidy and artistic decorations, made a scene of decided beauty, which only the touch of feminine hands could arrange. Supt. Carpenter made the welcoming address and J. E. Hall responded at the request of Pres. McQuillen.

The trombone and saxophone duet, "Schubert's Serenade" by Messrs. Susman and Bright, with Miss Smith at the piano, was excellent, the instruments blending together with remarkable evenness of volume. The quartet singing, more especially "Silent Night" was given in excellent manner, with Mrs. Snyder, Messrs. Susman, Bright and Martinez, and Miss Smith at the piano. Mr. Susman gave a saxophone solo with Miss Zane Harkey at piano. Miss Bobbie Church gave a humorous reading, "China Blue Eyes." Her perfect expression in which she portrayed her different characters would be difficult to excel even among the rank of noted professional elocutionists. At the close, Mr. Peterson of the S. P. Hotel expressed his appreciation of the manner in which the Home Ecs department had prepared and served the dinner and also complimented the splendid entertainment.

John K. Such

Last Saturday morning at about 11:30, John K. Such, local jeweler, passed away at his home on Alamogordo avenue, after being ill for several months. Mr. and Mrs. Such came to Carrizozo twenty-three years ago, locating in the old postoffice building on the corner of Fourth street and El Paso avenue, which has long been razed. Mr. Such was a kind and religious man, a good husband and neighbor and many are the friends who will miss him.

Funeral services were held at the Santa Rita Church Tuesday afternoon with Father Salvatore conducting the same and interment made in the local cemetery. His widow has the sympathy of the community.

W. J. Ayers of his ranch near Polly was a visitor here Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Ed Harris of their ranch, in the Gallinas mountain country were Carrizozo visitors this Monday, and called on relatives and friends.

Society Organized

The Lincoln County Museum of Art, History and Archeology Society was organized at Lincoln Dec. 8, 1938. About 50 people from all parts of the County attended; the meeting was held in the Lincoln School Auditorium.

Dr. Reginald Fisher, assistant director of the State Museum, directed the meeting. He first took the group through the Old Lincoln County Courthouse, showing and talking about the plans of the WPA in remodeling this, to make it a Museum Building as a part of the State Museum Extension Service. Then we were assembled in the Auditorium, and the organization was accomplished.

The Society will be affiliated with the State Museum and will be the custodian of the Museum Building. The equipment and Museum material will be furnished by the State, except what we wish to add ourselves. A caretaker will be hired to watch over the building; said caretaker will have living quarters in the building.

The Constitution By Law enabling Act of the Society will be allocated with the State Museum.

A board of 9 trustees was elected. They each serve three years, three of them being elected each year and are the governing body of the society. All interested in having this Museum are urged to join the society. Active membership is $1 a year.

The trustees are, Messrs. Coe, Pfingsten, Titworth, McQuillen, Dow, Kusianovich, Atkinson, Mmes. McCarty, Penfield. The ex-officio members will be the ones to hold these offices. Asst. director of State Museum, Santa Fe, Co. School Supt., Senators, Chairman of Co. Commissioners and Supt. of Capitan HJ School. After the meeting adjourned the trustees elected the following officers: Pres., G. T. McQuillen; Vice-Pres., A. T. Pfingsten; Sec'y, Mrs. Geo. McCarty and Treas., Mr. Kusianovich.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to convey our thanks to the kind friends who with words of sympathy and acts of kindness, contributed to our consolation during the illness and after the death of our beloved brother. —Brothers and sisters of G. S. Brown.

Mesdames Chloe Fisher of the Fisher Lumber Co. of Capitan and sister, Mrs. Grace Cromey, were business visitors here yesterday and while here, made a friendly call at this office.

Women Assume Important Role In Twentieth Century Jap Life

Nippon's Westernization Brings Emancipation and New Duties

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C. - WNU Service.

Everywhere in Japan you are confronted with women working at all manner of jobs.

Only in two places do you miss her—in jobs requiring skilled manipulation of machinery, and in government and professional positions. Everywhere else, bowed often under the weight of a child on her back, she cheerfully bears her full share of the work of the nation; frequently the heavier end of the load is hers.

One reason for her undertaking so many outside occupations is that homemaking appears a minor problem of Japanese women. Houses are fragile wooden structures, unpainted, with sliding paper windows and partitions. The tiny one or two rooms with matting-covered floors are bare of furniture and decoration except for chests of drawers and the single scroll hung in a recess.

Low, individual, traylike tables and a few saucers and bowls for dishes are brought in from the entrylike kitchen at meal time. Beds are simply quilts pulled from the cupboards and laid on the floor at night.

Japanese Conserve Time.

A minimum of time and labor is required to get the family started every morning. Bed quilts are rolled up and put away in a closet. Chopsticks and bowls are rinsed out in either hot or cold water and left to dry. Even the daily cooking takes little time. Fish and rice are the staples. Fish is often eaten raw, and rice may be cooked at any time and set aside in a wooden tub to be served cold. Vegetables are few. Peas are cooked in the pod, and the big white carrots and cabbages are pickled. In slack seasons they are cut up and salted down in large wooden buckets and kept ready for instant consumption.

The country woman, after giving the family a quick breakfast of rice, pickles, and hot tea, ties the baby on her back and makes for the fields. With kimono tucked up, she engages in any kind of farm labor. Sometimes she works alone, more often side by side with husband or son.

Rural Life Busy.

As you wander through the country in the Kyoto-Nara region during the rice-harvesting season, you come upon one family after another working on the small farms of two or three acres. In one group the small children play on a matting spread out on the ground. A young man threshes at a handmade device, his mother sits the rice on a large round sieve, his wife carries up bundles of rice from the drying racks, and his sister drags away the stalks.

In shop houses lining city streets, woman does her full share of work. With the ever-present baby on her back, she switches from housework to shop duties. She arranges the shop, keeps it tidy, and waits on customers. Every village and city has a multitude of markets with open-air stalls.

Woman's work begins when she is young. Everywhere one sees little girls, their backs bent under the weight of the family baby. School releases no girl from labor. At the end of a day of hard study, girls push back the seats and sweep and tidy the schoolroom. Others sweep up the playground. Six years of primary school are compulsory throughout Japan. In low wooden rambling buildings the children are crowded 50 or 60 in a room. It is arduous to learn the intricate characters and to trace them with brush pen and thin paper.

Girls Start Work Early.

Despite all the wearying work, only half of the 3,000 characters necessary to read the newspaper are mastered at the end of the six years. When the six years of primary school are finished, the girls must find work. Many girls enter that institution rather than to Japan, the department store. In some, the girl wears a kimono, but in many she dresses in western style. She works in every department—women's and children's clothes, shoes, caps and hats, candy, stationery, notions, or what not.

As one enters theater or motion picture house, again one sees young women and girls at work. They sell the tickets and usher patrons to their seats. The ushers wear western dress—blue, brown, or green, according to the house they serve—and white collar and cuffs. Their hair is waved, and they look very chic.

An example of Japan's new feminine emancipation is found in the Takarazuka girls' opera, soon to visit the United States. Above: the girls have a dormitory of their own with tastefully furnished rooms.

Traditional Japanese drama is included in the repertory. An actress is shown here making up for her role with the aid of an assistant.

In hotels and inns, whether native or modern, in restaurants and tea-houses, in railway diners, the young woman serves as waitress. In old-style inns, and in many restaurants, the girl moves demurely about, clad in a kimono; in other places, she is ultramodern in dress, with the latest style of white-lawn apron and cap.

Everyone uses the common bath, but meals are served privately. A maid brings in your meal on a tray, sets it on a low table in front of you as you sit on the floor, and kneels opposite you to replenish your rice bowl and pour the tea.

Women Manage Restaurants.
In the native inns most of the work is done by women and girls. A row of kneeling maids greets the guest at the entrance and bows low to the floor. Then one comes forward, gives the guest slippers (shoes must be left at the outside entrance), and leads him to his room. This maid conducts the guest to the bathroom, brings meals, makes up the bed on the floor and carries it away in the morning, sweeps up the room and takes care of clothes.

When a guest leaves, it is she who accompanies him to the door and puts out his shoes. As he looks back from the street, she is standing at the outer gate smilingly bowing him farewell. Then there's the bus or tram girl who works on the bus routes that extend everywhere in Japan, and in a lesser extent in Taiwan (Formosa) and Chooa (Korea).

CANNING HENS IS FOUND GOOD PLAN

Nutritionist Urges Saving Meat and Tells How.

By Helen J. Stinney, Nutritionist, Colorado State College, Extension Division, WNU Service.

Many rural women are canning hens that are culled from their farm flocks to make room for their laying pullets. Canning at least five or six birds at one time is more efficient than working with a smaller number. The meat is preheated before canning. Almost a third of the weight is lost before canning, thus conserving space. Here are directions for canning:

Bone the large pieces of chicken such as the breast, legs and thighs. Keep meat in as large pieces as possible. Make a broth by adding a quart of water to bones, neck, ribs, wing tips of five or six chickens and simmer one hour. Remove the bones and drop the meaty pieces of two chickens at a time in the broth and simmer about 10 minutes until the chicken loses the raw appearance and develops more or less of a pink color. (Do not include livers or gizzards.) Keep the chicken covered with broth and stir frequently while simmering. Remove to a pan to avoid overcooking and start more chicken in the broth.

Fill jars with large pieces of hot chicken within one-half inch of top of jar. Pack carefully to avoid breaking the pieces. Include one or two bones. Cover with broth. Add one teaspoon salt. Seal properly and process at 15 pounds pressure for 60 minutes. Remove and test seal. Cool as quickly as possible by standing jars apart in a good circulation of air, but no draughts.

Before serving, boil the canned chicken for 20 minutes. The broth may be used repeatedly for shrinking more chicken throughout the day. Keep the broth boiling hot the entire period. Can broth at the end of the canning day. Never carry it over night or allow it to stand anytime at a lukewarm temperature. The broth may be seasoned with onions, parsley, celery or bay leaf. Washed rice may be added to the boiling broth and cooked a few minutes before it is put into the jars.

The small pieces of chicken from the bony pieces may be canned similarly, taking care not to pack it too tightly. This may be used for creamed chicken, chicken salad, chicken pie and sandwiches.

Ground Soy Beans Are Good for Dairy Ration

Ground soy beans are palatable and satisfactory feed used as a protein supplement for the dairy concentrate ration, states a writer in the Rural New-Yorker. They should not constitute more than 25 per cent of the dairy grain ration. For hogs they should not form over 10 per cent of the ration, and be fed only to pigs weighing at least 75 pounds or they may produce a soft-pork carcass.

The analysis would vary with the kind and quality of feeds used. With good quality legume hay experiments have shown that a 16 to 20 per cent protein concentrate ration is most economical and best to use. For hogs corn or barley supplemented with 10 per cent fishmeal or tankage is best when fattening; brood sows and boars need a feed with more bulk and not too fattening; they also need to have exercise. Equal parts of corn, oats and wheat bran is a good mixture, with access to good quality legume hay in the winter. For the breeding hogs as well as fattening sows, good quality alfalfa hay is best, but leafy part of the soy bean hay could be used.

Around the Farm

Sanitation is the controlling factor in maintaining the health of the poultry flock.

Nearly 180 billion eggs a day are produced on 5,500,000 poultry farms in the country.

More than 15,000 of Georgia's 250,000 farms now raise turkeys, most of them in small flocks.

Standards have been established by the department of agriculture for 55 fresh fruits and vegetables.

Many large South Louisiana sugar plantations have private railroads to haul cane to the mills for processing.

This year's world wheat crop will break all records, according to the International Institute of Agriculture in Rome.

Oregon turkeys eat 15,000,000 pounds of corn a year.

Both alfalfa and corn silage are good sources of vitamin A needed by young cattle in winter.

The female guinea fowl has a much stronger voice than the male but he is much more loquacious.

As feed for farm animals, corn is rated pound for pound the most valuable, then wheat, barley, and rye, and then oats.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Counsels Wise Eating During the Holiday Season

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

THE advent of the holiday season marks the beginning of one of the most difficult periods of the entire year for the homemaker.

To begin with, she is busied with the hundred and one details of Christmas shopping, the planning of holiday entertainments . . . and the preparation of extra food for parties.

Secondly, the health and comfort of every member of the family depend to a considerable degree upon how they eat and what foods she serves during the weeks between now and January first.

that the common cold and other similar ailments greatly increase in number directly after the first of the year. That is also the period when we find more people suffering from fatigue than at any other season. Both conditions are frequently traceable to faulty habits of eating and faulty hygiene during the holiday season.

The person who is forewarned is usually forearmed. Therefore, every homemaker who has the interests of her family at heart should plan now, to arrange activities so that strain and fatigue will be reduced to a minimum. And more specifically, she should see to it that she formulates a sound eating program. Far too many people, at this season of the year, suffer the ill effects of lowered resistance brought about by unwise eating and by overeating.

Overeating of a poorly chosen diet is inadvisable at any time because it tends to overburden the digestive system. But it is particularly undesirable during the winter season when almost everyone tends to stay too long indoors, frequently in overheated rooms, and to take too little outdoor exercise.

Regularity in eating a carefully balanced diet, containing sufficient bulky foods to help promote regular health habits, is of the utmost importance if resistance is to be maintained at a high peak during the holiday season.

Keeping Body Machinery Efficient. One should always remember that the body is a machine working as regularly and as accurately as a clock. Any good mechanic knows that a fine mechanism requires the same type of care day in and day out. Homemakers, too, should remember that the body does not function differently just because we celebrate a holiday with age-old customs. Thus, to keep every member of the family well and rested, try not to upset the ordinary routine of your household.

Late breakfasts, heavy dinners, and suppers taken at odd hours do not constitute the best possible menu-planning. The unfortunate over-emphasis on rich foods on special occasions may easily result in digestive disturbance, unless great care is taken to avoid dietetic indiscretions, and to maintain always the ideal of a balanced ration.

Child's Diet Especially Important. During the dark days of December, the children's diet requires extra thought and care. Too close confinement indoors and the lack of sunshine may easily have an adverse effect upon the temper and vitality of young children. Then, too, the excitement of anticipating Christmas is bound to add to their general fatigue.

Children seldom complain of fatigue, which makes it all the more necessary for mothers to be on guard against, or to look for, the first intimation that it may exist. A child who is tired is very apt to be irritable. More than likely his appetite will be poor, and when he does eat, he may not be able to care properly for the food he takes. You may find, if you allow him to become overfed or feed him unaccustomed foods, that it will be a struggle to get him to bed, and even then he may not sleep soundly. And it is generally recognized that disturbed sleep, plus unwise eating, may have most unfortunate consequences.

The Ideal Holiday Diet. Holiday or no holiday, both children and adults should have at least two fruits daily, one of which should be a citrus fruit or tomatoes, to help provide adequate vitamin C; there should be two vegetables besides potatoes, one of which should be of the green, leafy variety; an egg daily, or at least three or four weekly; a quart of milk for every child, and a pint for each adult.

If your meals are built on this foundation, there will be less room for the rich heavy foods which should only be taken in moderation, and after you have helped to to be pure and wholesome, or to purchase them from a reliable source. If these goodies are then given to children at the end of a well-balanced meal, and not indiscriminately between meals, there should not be the upset digestions that make Christmas a bugbear to some mothers instead of the joyous occasion it should be.

By following out these suggestions, you can help your family to enjoy the holidays without regret. You will feel fit and your good health will be the basis of good cheer.

Questions Answered

Mrs. S. M. B.—Your letter was the first of a large number I received on the subject and I am therefore answering you, though my reply is also directed to all the others who have inquired concerning a recent announcement that cereals might be harmful to the teeth.

I have seen reports on this subject by two investigators and I know that other investigators are now endeavoring to check their work. As soon as there is further progress to report, I shall be glad to comment.

In the meantime, I would not hesitate to follow the advice of leading nutritionists and give your children cereals, at least half of which may well be served in the whole grain form.

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

Diver's Doom

HELLO EVERYBODY:

You know, there's been a lot said about the heroism of the lads who go down to the sea in ships, and well—we all know that those lads deserve all the credit we can give them. But it's the lad who goes down under the sea into ships who catches my fancy. Sooner or later there comes a time in any sailor's life when he runs up against a tough combination of circumstances. That, we'll agree to. As a matter of fact, it's a lucky sailor whose life hasn't been in danger at least three or four times in his career on the sea. But a diver's life is in danger almost every time he screws on his helmet and goes under the water. Facing danger is his trade. And today one of those deep-diving professional danger-facers is going to tell us the story of the biggest thrill of his career. So stand by the pumps, boys and girls. He's ready to go.

Frank Grissinger is his name, and he lives in Brooklyn, N. Y. And the worst jam Frank was ever in in his life, he says, was when he went down into the sea off the lighthouse at New Bedford, Mass., to raise the foundered tug-boat, Albert J. Stone.

Down in 14 Fathoms of Water.

Jack Gardner, another veteran diver, was Frank's partner on that job. On October 16, 1918, they got the call, and were off on the wrecking tug Resolute, to raise the Albert Stone, which had gone down in 14 fathoms of water.

The Resolute was only doing the preliminary work. The huge derrick ship, Monarch, was to pick up the tug and raise it bodily out of the water, but first the divers had to get slings under her hull and make connections, so that the boiler could be filled with air, making the tug rise more easily.

The Resolute located the tug. Slings were hauled under its hull and they were all ready to tackle the boiler. That was Frank's job, and he went down until his heavy iron shoes hit the hull of the tug. Gropping his way along the deck, Frank found the door of the fire room and went down the ladder. It was dark as a tomb down there, and the only sound was the air circulating through his exhaust valve. With arms outspread, Frank started for the boiler until he met an obstruction.

Feeling of it, Frank realized it was an iron floor grating that had become dislodged and lay blocking the passageway. It was too heavy to lift, but it lay at an angle leaving an opening at one side. Frank measured the space with his arms and decided he could crawl through it.

Frank started through, but his life-line held him back. He pulled it to get more slack—and pulled the grating down on top of him!

Says Frank: "I was wedged in tight. Using my hands and knees as a brace, I tried to rise up under it. But it would only give about a foot. In desperation I used up nearly all my strength—fought that grating until I was almost exhausted. Then panic seized me. What if I couldn't dislodge myself? What if the steam air-compressor broke down? What if a storm arose and cut us adrift, breaking the air line through which I was breathing? And what was even more probable a menace was that the tender, getting no response to his signals, might try to pull me up by main force, breaking both life and air lines and leaving me there to drown.

"Beads of perspiration rolled off my forehead into my eyes and there was no way to wipe them away. I was nearly blind, but I realized that I must remain calm. Maybe help would reach me. How? I didn't know. I couldn't signal the tender—there were too many angles in the line that led to the surface."

He Began Shifting His Position.

About that time Frank began thinking of things—thinking of all sorts of things, but particularly of all those things that were nearest to his heart. He wanted to live—and he wasn't going to give up without a fight. He began shifting his position to see how far he could move. Turning to the right, he could kick one side of the tug with his iron shoes. Moving to the left he found that only his breastplate and helmet were jammed.

"Then," he says, "I thought of trying to roll, and that move nearly cost me my life. I began turning my body slowly—inches by inches—and then—Horror! The helmet was not turning with me. I was unscrewing it as I moved. Had I continued, it would have come off and I would have drowned where I lay."

Frank rolled back again with every ounce of strength in his body, screwing the threads up tightly and saving his life—for the moment. Then, all at once, he lost consciousness. The ordeal of mental torture, combined with the pressure of the water, had been too much for him.

Frank's mate, Jack Gardner, finished the story for him. The next thing Frank knew, he was coming to in a bunk on the Resolute, with Jack sitting beside him. And here's the tale Jack told.

No Response to Tender Signal.

Thirty minutes after Frank had gone down, the men on the Resolute began to get worried about him. The tender signaled to him on the line, but got no response. Jack Gardner tried to draw Frank up, but the line held tight. They couldn't even get a foot of slack on it.

Then they knew something was wrong. Jack Gardner began putting on his diving togs. He screwed on his helmet and went down to the deck of the tug. Following Frank's line and air hose he made his way down into the tug's fire room and, feeling his way around, he found the grating with Frank's line disappearing behind it.

Jack had found a fireman's slice bar, and, using that as a lever, he pried Frank loose. After that it was only a matter of minutes to boost him up the ladder and give the signal to the tender to haul away.

When it was all over, Jack said: "That was a close call, but better luck next time."

And Frank answered: "There isn't going to be any next time. I'm going to look for a better way to make a living than diving!" But the last I heard of Frank he was diving for a boat that had sunk in New York harbor. I guess diving must be in his blood.

The First Manufactured Color
The first color to be actually compounded from inorganic substances is the so-called "Egyptian blue," which was prepared and sold as early as 3000 B. C. This paint was popular in the days of Rameses and King Tutankhamen and is also found on the walls of ruined buildings of Pompeii. The Egyptians probably exported it not only to Rome, but also to Greece, Babylon and the rest of the important countries antedating the Christian era.

Ingredients in Iron-Making
Three of the main ingredients in the iron-making process are iron ore, limestone, and coke. The fourth is frequently forgotten. It is air. Yet to make a ton of iron it is necessary to use about 3,700 pounds of ore, 700 pounds of stone, 1,800 pounds of coke, and 7,000 pounds of air. The products of the reaction are roughly 2,000 pounds of iron, 900 pounds of slag, 250 pounds of dust, and 9,850 pounds of blast furnace gas.

HEALTH

Science divides insomnia into three types; suggests ways to induce sleep.

—By Dr. James W. Barton

THERE is always something wrong when an individual cannot sleep. The cause is either physical or mental. There are the three types of insomnia or sleeplessness: (a) delayed sleep where there is difficulty getting off to sleep, (b) "light" sleep where the patient falls off to sleep when he lies down at night but wakes during the night, usually 2 to 3 o'clock; and (c) "curtailed" or shortened period of sleep, that is awakening during the early morning hours and being unable to go to sleep again.

In the treatment of insomnia, Dr. Henry Cohen, Liverpool, in the Practitioner, London, says:

"All physical or mental discomforts, disturbances in the home or neighborhood, all infections with their poisons must be remedied. A comfortable bed, equable temperature, regulation of habits, relaxation of body and mind, with a frank discussion of anxieties may be sufficient. If this is not sufficient it may be necessary to use other methods.

"Drugs are valuable if used intelligently. Dangers arise, however, because of forming the drug habit or because the drugs may depress the vital functions or actually poison some organs.

Massage Often Helpful.
"Physio-therapy—massage, electricity, baths—is often useful. With mild insomnia, especially with anxiety, soothing massage to the head and neck will often induce sleep. Lukewarm baths of 20 minutes followed by a warm drink induces a relaxation which promotes sleep."

Often the awakening at 2 to 3 a. m. is due to eating too much food or too much starch and fat food at the evening meal, as the liver is at the peak or height of its work eight hours after a meal. By eating a small meal in the evening or eating less fat and starch at the evening meal, this awakening at 2 to 3 a. m. may be avoided.

"Psychotherapy—treating the patient through his mind—plays a big part in all measures to overcome insomnia. Sympathetic reassurance and understanding, frank discussion of all troubles or anxieties, all help. Simple measures must be prescribed by the physician with confident assurance of good results."

The lesson for those afflicted with insomnia is to get rid of physical discomforts and infections, eat less at the evening meal and gradually acquire the ability to face or handle their anxieties.

Diet Important in Treating Acne

As acne (pimples) in most cases first appears during the teen age, most physicians are inclined to do little for the patient as they feel that the pimples will pass away once the boy or girl has emerged into manhood or womanhood. And, as a matter of fact, most cases do clear up to a considerable extent by the age of 20.

However, there are many who suffer so much distress and embarrassment because of acne that physicians are trying to correct the condition by use of gland extracts (pituitary, insulin, testicular, ovarian and others), vosterol, diet and X-ray. That the acne patient should be treated in a general way, not just for the local condition of the face, is suggested by Dr. L. Orecklin, in Medical World.

"The general condition of the acne patient should be studied and anemia, undernourishment and points of infection should receive proper care. The diet should be moderate, the foods to be avoided being chocolate, cocoa, cheese, nuts, iodized salt and other foods which may cause irritation or indigestion. Constipation should be relieved by diet; not laxatives.

Frequent Washing Helps.
"If the skin is oily, the face may be washed with soap and water several times a day. At night a careful soap and hot water cleansing is performed followed by soaking or faking with hot water for a few minutes. Then a white lotion is applied—a very weak zinc solution."

Doctor Orecklin agrees with most skin specialists that X-ray treatment will help every case, being of special value in the hard, thick or leathery type of acne.

The thought behind the above treatment is the stimulation of the skin and its underlying blood vessels, the avoidance of foods known to react unfavorably on the skin, and the taking of exercise which keeps the intestine active, burns up excess wastes, strengthens the circulation of the blood, and calls for more oxygen to purify the blood.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

round thread art linen so that the threads may be counted easily in making the cross-stitches. This foundation material should be marked off in 1-inch squares as shown in the diagram at the upper right. The numbers indicate the color used for cross-stitching each square. The velvet used for backing adds the richness that all small gifts should have. Sawdust or hair from an old mattress are most satisfactory for stuffing.

If you would like to make some of these cushions for gifts or for your next bazaar, clip these directions and keep them as they are not in either of the books offered below.

NOTE: Mrs. Spears' Book 2—Gifts, Novelties and Embroidery, has helped thousands of women to use odds and ends of materials and their spare time to make things to sell and to use. Book 1—Sewing, for the Home Decorator, is full of inspiration for every homemaker. These books make delightful Christmas gifts. Mrs. Spears will autograph them on request. Crazypatch quilt leaflet is included free with every order for both books. Address: Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill. Books are 25 cents each.

THE Town Improvement association was giving a sale to raise funds in a village where we were visiting. Our hostess had been to the sale early in the day and triumphantly displayed tiny cross-stitched pincushions purchased for Christmas gifts. They were so colorful and quaint that we went in search of some. We found them, but on every one was pinned a ticket—"SOLD!" The lady had scored a hit who made those little three-inch pincushions as her contribution to the fancywork booth. They were kept for display even after they were sold. The top of the cushion should be made on tapestry canvas or or ribbon, is extremely flattering. No. 1649 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 16 requires, for the slip 2 3/4 yards of 39-inch material; for the panties, 1 1/2 yards; for the brassiere, 1/2 yard.

No. 1650 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 14 requires 4 1/2 yards of 39-inch material; 1 1/2

THE undie set goes so quickly and easily, in fact, that you can finish it for a gift in time for Christmas—and you'll certainly want to make it for yourself. The house frock is a diagram design that you can finish in a few hours.

The Undie Set.

Slip, panties and brassiere are all included in this one simple design that even the inexperienced can make with no difficulty. Make it up in fine quality materials—satin, crepe de Chine or flat crepe—and you'll save money not only in the first place, but in the long run, because the undies will wear and wash so long and so well. The slip has a beautifully fitted line over which your doll-waisted clothes will look their best. The brassiere provides support and uplift that you need for a definite bustline, and the panties are unusually smooth-hipped, because they fasten with a zipper.

The House Dress.

This full-skirted frock is such a pretty thing that you'll be wise to make it up in flannel or challis for shopping as well as in calico, gingham and percale for around the house. The bodice has darts just above the waist to create becoming fullness over the bust, the sleeves are puffed high at the shoulders, and the neckline, outlined with a double row of braid

BANKING LOOKS AHEAD

The Outlook For Youth

There is a tendency on the part of today's young people to view the future with alarm. Yet the outlook is bright. Great new industries loom on the horizon. From the test tubes of science, and the laboratories of industry, a steady stream of discoveries, inventions and improvements points the way to a new era of industrial advancement. Youth has every reason to look ahead with confidence. The progressive young mind will readily see the value of a banking connection with a progressive institution such as ours.

Speaking of Sports

Flashing Speed Makes Hockey Sports Thriller

By ROBERT McSHANE

IN A world gone wildly enthusiastic over sports in all its forms, hockey stands alone as the speediest, most exciting game of them all.

Take the word of thousands of fans who pack arenas in large and small cities throughout the north. The cold, driving, fierce speed of hockey makes it unlike any other game.

This speed and smash are the reasons for hockey's popularity. Whether a dozen schoolboys are playing on a frozen Minnesota pond or a topnotch professional team is playing under the lights of a huge arena, the game is fast and furious.

It's a simple game to watch and understand. There are six men, including the goalie, on each team, and a black disk of hard rubber, all out in front of the spectator. Players on one team try to poke the puck into the net of the other team to score winning goals.

Theoretically forwards are the fastest skaters, best stick handlers and the best shot makers. Defense players are usually bigger men, brawny enough to withstand terrific mauling. Goalies are a race unto themselves. They learn to move with mechanical precision, using their built up equipment to the best advantage.

Penalties Severe

Rules are concerned chiefly with offside play. Lines are drawn across the rink, and players must not cross ahead of teammates who carry the puck on the attack. Forward passing is not allowed once a player crosses the last line between him and the opponent's goal.

Ice hockey is little more than an infant, albeit a tough one. Though field hockey, the parent of the ice game, goes back through the centuries, the latter game is only about 50 years old. A Canadian, seeing field hockey in England, returned home in the seventies with the idea of putting the game on ice.

Introduced as Pro Sport

Before the turn of the century attempts were made to introduce hockey as a professional sport. But the attempts were not successful until the advent of artificial indoor rinks in 1905 and 1906.

Following the war hockey didn't regain its place in the sun until the opening of the new Madison Square Garden in New York in 1925.

Big league professionals are a strange group. They're more interested in winning games than they are in pay checks. Few are the big timers who don't bear many battle scars as evidence of fiercely contested encounters.

Turf Rejuvenation

THE American trotting turf, now that it has decided to merge all five parent associations into one central governing body, predicts a modern version of harness racing that will easily surpass that of the "good old days" of 50 years ago.

Lopping off many hidebound restrictions self-imposed in earlier years, the harness sport has decided to experiment fully this winter with handicapping horses by weight in a saddle, in somewhat similar fashion to running horses.

The driver will still be in the sulky, as usual, but extra weight will be used in a saddle. This step will do much to help keep great American horses in this country by providing more races for them.

Best Pinch Hitter

MOST successful pinch hitter in the American league last season was Taft Wright, freshman outfielder of the Washington Senators, whose 35 times at bat netted him 11 hits for an average of .314.

From a standpoint of averages, however, Lou Finney of the Athletics led the field of pinch hitters. Finney made 5 hits in 13 tries for a .358 average.

With the heat on Wright pounded out a triple, four doubles and six singles to account for six runs. Washington was indebted to him alone for two games, and he drove in the tying runs in two others that the Senators won in extra innings. Only two other players in the league, Roy Cullenbine of Detroit and Pitcher Red Ruffing of the Yanks, won as many as two games in a pinch batsman's role.

Only 11 pinch home runs were hit in the league in 1938, as against 14 in 1937. The composite batting average fell from .248 to .215.

Sports Attendance

THE fact that women are paying more and more attention to sports each year is by no means a new or startling discovery. But that the fair sex accounts for almost 50 per cent of the attendance at five major sports is, to say the least, surprising.

According to a recent statistical survey, woman patronage at tennis has gone from 12 per cent in 1919 to 51 per cent in 1935. Their patronage at football games rose from 4 per cent in 1925 to 47 per cent in 1936; at golf from 7 per cent in 1922 to 57 per cent in 1936; baseball, from 2 per cent in 1920 to 33 per cent in 1936, and racing from 6 per cent in 1914 to 45 per cent in 1935.

Sport Shorts

WILLIAM SMITH, Penn State cross country runner, never has been beaten since he took up the sport as a Philadelphia schoolboy. . . . Lou Little, Columbia's football coach, always has an ace in the hole—he is an expert landscape gardener. . . . The University of Michigan's mark of 3:31.4 for the 400-yard swim relay was accepted by the International federation as the world's record. . . . That same school will be home to the 1939 western junior golf tournament.

Pocket Billiards

By CHARLES C. PETERSON President, National Billiard Association of America and World's Trick Shot Champion.

This diagram shows a shot commonly played. Frequently in shots as shown above, the novice will miss the shot because of his overanxiety to break the balls. When playing any shot, always concentrate on the ball you are to pocket—and you will have better success. This applies to any game on the billiard or pocket table. Again, in the above shot hold your cue as level as possible by resting it on the rail of the table.

Early Mailing Helps Postman Avoid Problem of Yule Rush

Public Always Waits Until Last Minute Despite Tearful Pleas

If Christmas mailers didn't wait until the last minute with their cards and packages, post office officials predict the annual Yule rush would be minimized immensely. But despite tearful pleas each December, the bulk of holiday mail falls into post offices, less than seven days before Christmas. What the public really fears, say officials, is that their gifts will be delivered too soon before Christmas. As a result all too many gifts don't arrive until after Christmas! "Mail today" is the plea of the heavily burdened postmen below.

Nature's Yuletide Gift

From verdant forests throughout northern America, trees to grace the nation's Christmas morning are shipped each year. This picture was taken in Maine, where 1,500,000 trees are being felled for the holidays, to be loaded for shipment to all parts of the United States.

Colorado Town Revives Ritual Of Log Burning

PALMER LAKE, COLO.—Residents of this high-perched town on the great Divide celebrate their modern Christmas in an old-fashioned way, by burning the traditional yule log.

Each year the log is secretly cut, notched and tied with hempen cord, hidden among the trees and rocks awaiting the sinder to whom goes the honor of dragging it into town.

Last year for the first time Palmer Lake burned its yule log in the town hall, where local firemen built a huge stone fireplace wide enough to accommodate a four-foot log. Previously the celebration was held in a private home where fewer guests could be accommodated.

The hunt for the yule log starts at 1 p. m., when all participants are summoned by a bugle to meet in front of the hall.

The yule log has a colorful history. In Scandinavia, where Thor, the god of thunder, was worshipped, great log fires were built along the rocky shores both at mid-summer and mid-winter in order to propitiate him for his rumbling wrath.

When the early fathers substituted the feast of the Nativity for that of Mithra, the Persian sun god who was worshipped on December 25 in early Rome, a different note crept in. Yuletide became a time for feuds to cease.

In England, before the Reformation, bringing in the yule log was an important part of the Christmas festivities. The community usually gathered in the hall of the lord of the manor, where the log was kindled with due ceremony and all partook in the wassail cup, a sweet cider flavored with fruits and spices.

Christmas Wreath 'King' Started as Shoemaker

WINSLOW MILLS, MAINE.—Thrown out of work when a shoe factory closed last year, Mervin Flanders came back to his hometown and set himself up as the leader of Maine's Christmas decoration business. Flanders' success story started with a ball of string, some barrel hoops, some spruce boughs and a little ambition. Now he's perfected a gadget that speeds up the wreath-making process by ten times. Shoemaking, he says, can't compare to the wreath business.

CHRISTMAS FIRE HAZARDS

Lighted Christmas candles in the window look nice but they may ignite the curtains. Fire experts warn that extreme care must be observed in using candles and other Yuletide illumination.

Official Title Does Strange Things to Mentalities of Men

Government by Men Instead of by Law Seems to Be the Rule; Undue Power Is Givn Into Hands of Bureaucrats; Congress Should Take Heed.

By WILLIAM BRUCKART WNU-Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—It is a strange thing what an official title will cause many men and women to do. It is equally strange what many of them will attempt to do under the guise of the official sanction which they usurp at every opportunity. I do not intend to include all public officials but I dare say that everyone who reads these lines can look about him and discover in his midst or recall others who, as soon as they began wearing a title, developed a "big head," got "puffed-up" and otherwise assumed a high-and-mighty attitude. The characteristics may show in a thousand-and-one different ways, and we all are more or less familiar with them.

Few persons probably would need to be concerned if the circumstance involved only this outward appearance. I am sure I wouldn't care whether some official believed himself to be a son of the sun-god and, therefore, counted himself great. But when the mental attitude of that official begins manifesting itself as it so often does by usurpation of improper and illegal extra-when he regards himself as judge and jury, as well as prosecutor, then it seems to me that a halt ought to be called.

All of the above observations are made just as a prelude to discussion of a recent action by the department of justice. More accurately, it should be said the action was by Professor Thurmond Arnold who has great pride in his ability as a trust buster. He also frequently has let it be known—with due modesty, of course—that he possesses knowledge in many fields. His career as a university professor obviously fitted him with great understanding of problems and practices of business men. Mr. Arnold has not yet undertaken to solve the difficulties of agriculture, but I reckon that is only a question of time.

Indictment Used as Club

Over Auto Corporations

But, again, I am not so much concerned with Mr. Arnold's own estimate of Mr. Arnold, but with the results flowing from that official's acts.

The act that brings on this discussion was involved in what is known as a consent decree. The department of justice obtained a grand jury indictment of some of the larger automobile manufacturing corporations and their officials under anti-trust statutes. The charges involved the use, by the companies, of what were described as monopolistic practices in the financing of new cars sold to installment buyers. Each of the larger companies, as I understand it, owns a subsidiary corporation to which a retail dealer can sell the notes he takes when the buyer of a car wants to pay for the vehicle over a period of a year or longer.

I do not know the intricate nature of the scheme, and there may have been many grounds for the indictment. Indeed, I think a grand jury would not have returned an indictment unless its members saw something that was not proper. But when the department of justice had the indictment, it used it as a club. Its officials, under Mr. Arnold's guidance, are reported to have said to the motor magnates, in effect: Now, if you admit certain of these charges and agree to stop the practices, and if you will agree to comply with certain other conditions which we lay down, we will not prosecute, criminally. So, the motor companies apparently elected to agree and avoid further prosecution. Thus, there came about a decree by the consent of the accused.

In the first place, I can not believe there is any legal right in our laws for the consent decree. It has been used a long time, but it seems to me that it contains very dangerous elements. It ought to be stopped and there ought to be no indictments brought unless there is an intention to carry the battle clear through. There ought to be either a conviction or an acquittal.

Arnold Assumes Dictation

Over Auto Advertising

In the case of the motor manufacturers, however, Mr. Arnold's determination to make things over has come to the surface to an even greater extent than heretofore, even with Mr. Arnold. For Mr. Arnold has decided that the motor companies have been spending too much money for advertising their products. In spending so much money for advertising, Mr. Arnold opines that they are thereby creating a monopoly. In other words, as a trust buster, Mr. Arnold figures that he can become boss of the normal practice of business advertising. It can be construed no other way.

I have looked into the question from a number of angles and have consulted with numerous individuals who know their law better than I know mine. Nowhere have I found any power vested in the department of justice for control of advertising. I should regret it very much if congress ever had passed a law giving authority for any agency of government to do more than prosecute advertisers who use dishonest statements. That is to say, if the advertising statements are crooked, punishment ought to follow. If the advertising is honest, what business has government horning into it?

The reason I feel so keenly about this sort of thing is that it is a trend in government, on the national government on down the line, to do things indirectly—to do many things without genuine authority of law. We as a nation always have supported the theory of rule by the majority. We have legislative bodies—the congress, the state assemblies, the city councils and so on—to enact the will of the majority into law. But in the motor case and in dozens of others which could be mentioned, the public official with the "boss" complex takes things into his own hands and usually gets away with his perfidy.

Undue Power Is Given Into Hands of Bureaucrats

Congress, itself, is to blame many times for putting undue power into the hands of bureaucrats. There is seldom any law passed by congress that does not include a provision which authorizes an executive agency, administering the statute, to promulgate regulations for carrying out the law's intent. Those regulations, needless to say, have the force and effect of law, and thus congress has delegated power about which the individual representatives and senators know nothing.

On the other hand, except for the trait that I have been discussing—one so boldly evident in Mr. Arnold—those regulations could be drawn in nearly every instance to give individuals all of the freedom needed to transact business, instead of piling one restriction upon another. I doubt very much that any one person in the whole United States knows all of the restrictions—the do's and the don'ts—that comprise the law of the nation today. No one knows them because it would require an entire lifetime of an individual to obtain them and read them. And before he had read very many, there would be a new crop; there would be changes in those he had read, and there would be new laws with new regulations.

We have heard much in late years about government by men rather than government by law. Well, we have it in this country in a big way. It is not as bad, of course, as in the case of Hitler or Mussolini or Stalin. When those brothers want to change a law, they change it by decree. They may go through the formality of a "ratification" by a set of stooges some time, but the stooges were selected as yes-men long in advance.

Everyone has read of the Jewish atrocities in Germany, but the monstrosity, itself, overshadowed the fact that during all of the purge, there was one decree-law after another being issued from Hitler's headquarters. Each time somebody found a loophole or the officials discovered a previous decree did not accomplish all that was desired, out would pop a new decree.

Congress Might Well Take Notice of These Conditions

Having seen what can happen when men, instead of laws, constitute the authority for government, it seems to me that congress might well take notice. It has given birth to children in the form of countless regulations that are running around the land like so many thousand-legged monsters. Why, I wonder, does not congress take a look at what has sprung from its own family of laws. To grow facetious for a moment: congress probably would find trouble with its own "in-laws," as well as private persons whose mothers-in-law have been characterized in story.

I have wondered many times whether more than a very small number of farmers ever understood the AAA contracts, and the regulations that those contracts referred to. Examination of the terms gave me little inkling of how thoroughly the signers were bound, although, as AAA officials often explained, the provisions were plainly printed. That fact, however, never has altered a really bad situation. None of us can be expert in all things. We, therefore, are more or less at the mercy of the individuals who are clothed with the power of office and who relegate to themselves additional power because they know those against whom it is used frequently have no understanding of the whole situation. Thus, I reiterate, it appears to be time for congress to review its own work and make government understandable.

SYNOPSIS

Young Rex Hale calls on Casper Kneeland, friend of his father, in New York, and finds him proudly successful but strangely preoccupied. He tells Hale of his wife's death while insane, invites him for the summer to Halcyon Camp, his home on Long Island, and promises him he will be "useful" as his secretary there. Hale is joined at lunch by Fred Ainsworth, an unpopular college mate, also at Halcyon, who leaves him with a premonition of unpleasant mystery. He is met at the train by Mrs. Wilbur Nash, whom he questions about the ménage, and experiences a disturbing premonition.

"Is Miss Kneeland at home? My name is Hale," he said.

The maid responded promptly to the smile.

"Yes, sir. Miss Kneeland is expecting you. If you will leave your luggage here in the hall Joe will take it up to your room. Miss Kneeland is in the living-room."

Hale dropped the luggage with a sigh of relief, hung his hat on a rack, and followed his guide. In the past ten minutes he had been depositing some of those purchases of yesterday. Probably he wouldn't need any of them here, except knickerbockers and a bathing suit. But the atmosphere of the house was unexpectedly luxurious. The living-room into which he was ushered was full of charm and beauty. There were admirable pieces of furniture in it, good pictures, and fine old rugs. There was a small log fire in a huge grate. Two women sat before the little blaze. Hale took them both in, while one of them rose and came to meet him.

She was a plump person, probably in her fifties, with pompadour white hair, pink cheeks, and pale blue eyes. She had a pleasant welcoming smile and an unexpectedly firm grasp as she shook hands with him.

"You had to walk," she said regretfully. "I'm so sorry, I can't understand why Casper—"

"Only as far as the clearing," Hale explained as he smiled down at her. "One of your neighbors, Mrs. Wilbur Nash, gave me a lift."

"Trust Helen Nash for that," Miss Hosanna said appreciatively. "Come and meet Mrs. Spencer Forbes. You must be surprised to find it so cool here."

Mrs. Spencer Forbes had been sitting with her gaze on the fire. She looked up and nodded as they came toward her.

"How do you do, Mr. Hale?" she asked languidly. Languor seemed to be her note. It contrasted as sharply with Miss Hosanna's brisk New-Englandism as her tall very thin figure did with Miss Hosanna's plumpness. "It's too late for tea," she went on, as Hale bowed before her. "But we might give this young man a few cocktails and a sandwich. I'll have some cocktails, too, Hosanna. Side-cars, I think, if Mr. Hale likes them. But do remind Banks not to put in too much lemon juice."

Miss Hosanna summoned her butler and ordered the cocktails and sandwiches. Now she sat with her pale eyes on her friend's face. Her expression was expectant, almost rapt. Later, Hale learned that to Miss Hosanna Mrs. Spencer Forbes' conversation was as the music of the morning stars singing together.

"It's ten years since I was in Spain," Mrs. Spencer Forbes said dreamily on learning that Rex had just returned from there. "I'm not optimistic enough to think it has changed."

"Every train still starts about dawn," Hale admitted.

"And stops at Bobadilla at high noon and lets its passengers stew for two hours on the broiling station platform. I know. I've done it."

Banks brought in the cocktails. He was, Hale learned, a man of fifty who had been with the Kneelands for 15 years. He was soft-voiced, soft-footed, deferential, and sorely tried by Miss Hosanna, with whose high housekeeping standards he was not always in sympathy. Mrs. Spencer Forbes straightened with the first real interest she had shown.

"Not too much acid this time, Banks?" she asked alertly.

"I hope not, Madam." Banks' glance slid past her face and fastened on Hale. Hale took a cocktail and a sandwich from the tray the man offered him. Miss Hosanna had waved it from her with the simple but eloquent word "Poison!" Mrs. Spencer Forbes, who had already drunk one cocktail, apparently in one gulp, took another from the tray Banks had thoughtfully left on a low table beside her. Her outlook on life brightened.

Cocktails over, both ladies started toward the door. Hale went with them.

"I'm going upstairs, so I'll show you to your room," Miss Hosanna said with her comfortable matter-of-factness. "You have half an hour to dress for dinner."

They went along the central hall and up a wide staircase at the left of the front entrance.

"Who is he?" Mrs. Spencer Forbes asked Hosanna in a place-

ing whisper. She added before her slower friend could answer, "Anyway, he's a personable youth, and he seems to be alive. That will be a pleasant change at Halcyon Camp. Has anyone warned you, Mr. Hale, that you are visiting Long Island's most remote and least interesting mausoleum?"

"I don't think you ought to say such things," Miss Hosanna protested affectionately. She gave Hale a glance that directed his attention to the charm of her friend.

"We're all dead except Joan," Mrs. Spencer Forbes said calmly, "but most of us don't know it. Joan is beginning to look livid and I give her about three months more. A revoir, Mr. Hale. This is my chaste bow."

She nodded and vanished through an open door in the upper hall at

On the blue and orange silk cover of his bed, near the foot, a wad of paper lay. It was crushed and soiled and it looked sadly out of place. Strange that he had not seen it before, or that Miss Hosanna, evidently a typical New England housekeeper, had not observed it during her presence in the room. He went to the bed, picked up and unfolded the grimy sheet with some reluctance, and read its pencilled message. This was printed. Its characters straggled unevenly down the page, as if they were the first effort of a child. It read:

THIS PLASE IS DANJERUS. GET OUT QUIK.

Hale frowned, then grinned. He tore the paper into small pieces and dropped them into the waste-paper basket beside the desk. His next

"Old acquaintances is what I really said, Miss Hosanna," Ainsworth purred as he lounged forward to shake hands. "We were at Ithaca together, but Hale never liked me."

"Another bond between Mr. Hale and myself," Mrs. Spencer Forbes said sweetly. "I've felt strangely drawn to him from the first. You needn't tell us any of Mr. Ainsworth's bad habits at college, Mr. Hale. We can easily imagine them."

"Sorry to disappoint you, but he hadn't any," Hale testified cheerfully. "He was an exemplary young man in every way, and always knew his lessons."

Hale was increasingly uncomfortable. What an extraordinary lot these people were, with their deliberate rudeness.

"If you're hinting that I was a grind I'll admit it," Ainsworth said sharply. "I was there to work, and I worked. I was no popular idol, like Hale here." He smiled unpleasantly. In his evening clothes he looked more than ever like a sleek black cat. "You must have missed all that adulation, when you left Ithaca and got into real life," he added unpleasantly.

Hale wanted to kick him. The fellow was intolerable. He turned away from him and smiled at Joan Kneeland, with a sudden lift of the heart. She was a charming thing, a pleasure to the eye. Her small bobbed head was beautifully shaped. She had the blackest hair he had ever seen. It fitted her head like a black satin cap. Her eyes were deeply and vividly blue. It was not until he saw her smile, however, that he gave himself wholly to her spell. Her smile was enchanting. It was also fleeting. It disappeared almost as quickly as it had come. Hale felt as if he had watched the door of a house swing open, had caught a glimpse of light and warmth inside, and had seen the door close again.

Joan had said a few words to Craig when they sat down. She was now listening to what seemed an overlong story of some medical experience of his in Paris.

"You psychiatrists have your work on your mind all the time," Ainsworth remarked. "Is it true that most doctors and workers associated with the insane, eventually go off their heads themselves? I've heard that theory a dozen times."

"Your application of it is too general," Craig said coldly. "Most doctors and other workers don't do anything of the kind. A few do. They're usually the neurotically inclined, and those very susceptible to suggestion. I remember—"

"Oh, come now, Craig, don't get started on your cases again!" Young Kneeland spoke so irritably that Craig's eyebrows rose. "Sorry," Ainsworth jerked out, "but that stuff is depressing to most of us."

"I love it."

Ainsworth's tone was purring again. He was plainly enjoying his dinner, which was excellent. He appeared to be at peace with the world.

Joan raised her blue eyes and looked at the speaker. It was a long look and a strange one. Ainsworth met it and smiled again.

the left of the staircase. Miss Hosanna led the guest to a door on the opposite side of the hall.

"Don't pay any attention to what Ruth says," she advised Hale as she opened it. "Everything that comes into her head pops out through her mouth. She has always been like that, even when we were girls at school. She loves to shock people. It's harder now than it used to be," she added comfortably. "Almost everybody seems to be trying to shock everybody else. The competition stimulates Ruth and the things she and young Mr. Ainsworth say to each other."

She left the sentence unfinished, evidently a habit of hers. Hale hardly heard her. He was gazing with pleasure and a dawning sense of proprietorship around the big comfortable room they had entered. It had three windows. Two looked over the sep. The third, at the rear, faced west. There was a long divan between them. There was a fireplace for cool days; and a brass wood-box full of logs stood near it. There were easy-chairs; there was a flat-top writing table with many drawers.

"Casper says you're going to be with us all summer, so try to feel at home," she invited. "That door leads to a closet as large as a small room. The door near the side window leads to your bathroom. I will say for Cass that he put in enough bathrooms when he built his house. He wasn't as foresighted about closets. It takes a woman to think of them, but I wasn't consulted. I think Banks has unpacked for you," she went on. "He usually unpacks and puts the cases away."

She crossed to a highboy and pulled open a drawer.

"Yes, here are all your ties and socks and handkerchiefs," she went on. "How bright and cheerful they are!"

"That's the colorful influence of Spain," Hale laughed. He felt self-conscious. He hoped Miss Hosanna would not go through the other drawers. She didn't, but she opened the closet door. It revealed suits on hangers and shoes on pegs. It also revealed his new dressing-gown, which caught the last of the sun's rays as they entered the west window.

"You do like beautiful colors," she said, regarding it approvingly. "So do I. I hope you won't find it dull here," she added in a different tone, "try to like your room."

"It's the ideal guest room," Hale said warmly.

"I'm glad you think so. Now I'll leave you to get dressed. You'll hear the going at half past seven."

He followed her to the door, observing again her erect shoulders, her proudly held white head, and her surprisingly light, quick step. He opened the door for her and slowly closed it after her. Then for a long moment he stood very still, hands in his trousers' pockets and eyes on the room's thick blue and orange rug, trying to analyze his impressions. Suddenly he stopped and stared.

impulse was to hasten into the bathroom and wash his hands after handling that note. He followed it. This note, of course, was someone's idea of a practical joke. Or, on second thoughts, it may have been some servant's revolt against the additional work made by an extra guest. It may have been hurried through the open window, or through the transom above his door, or brought into his room and dropped on his bed. In any case it was plainly not worth another instant of thought. Nevertheless, his mind touched it as he dressed.

"QUIK." "DANJERUS." Those words upheld the spelling standards of Joe the porter, whom Hale had not yet had an opportunity to tip. He must repair that oversight. He must placate Joe. With that resolution the little matter dropped from his mind. He whistled a Spanish tango as he went on with his toilet.

CHAPTER II

They were all in the living-room, except Casper Kneeland, when Hale went downstairs in response to the summons of the gong. He entered a trifle self-consciously, abashed by the gaze of so many strangers. Instinctively he made for Miss Hosanna and Mrs. Spencer Forbes. They now seemed to him almost like old friends. He skirted Joan on the way and took her in with a quick side glance. Miss Hosanna had risen and was doing the honors.

"My niece," he heard her say. "Doctor Craig, my nephew, Herbert. Mr. Ainsworth says you and he are old friends."

Discovery of Radium Revealed That Atom Was Shattered With Explosive Violence

The discovery of radium and the phenomenon of radio-activity turned the course of history for Twentieth century physics, writes John A. Maloney, in the Scientific American. With its discovery came the knowledge that the atoms of certain heavy elements were not permanently stable but broke up with explosive violence. The inner structure of the atom, which had defied the mind of man since the days of the atomists in ancient Greece, the discovery of isotopic elements—elements identical in their physical and chemical makeup but differing in their atomic weights—these, and many other secrets of matter were solved by the discovery of radium.

Men were excited about the possibilities of this new substance. The energy that it gave off was staggering to the imagination. It was natural that the question should arise as to how this energy could be harnessed and put to work. Planetary and the others thrilled with the possibilities. Were not such eminent physicists as Sir Ernest Rutherford writing essays on harnessing the energy of radium and its future as a source of power?

All of these men realized that what was needed was a catalyzer that would speed up the rate of disintegration of radium so that, instead of dissipating half of its energy in 1,690 years, its power could be drawn off to turn a dynamo or push a piston in an instant. It may appear now that they were anticipating and were far ahead of their times.

The Duke of Sussex

George IV of England had no sons. The sixth son of George III was August Frederick, duke of Sussex, who was born in 1773. The prince was married in Rome in 1793 to Lady Augusta (died 1830), daughter of John Murray, fourth earl of Dunmore. The ceremony was celebrated in London and two children were born, but under the Royal Marriage Act of 1772 the Court of Arches declared the union illegal. The children took the name of d'Este. The second wife of the duke of Sussex was Cecilia, widow of Sir George Buggin. She was created duchess of Inverness, in 1840. The duke of Sussex died at Kensington palace on April 21, 1842.

Lesson for December 18

CHRIST'S NEW COMMANDMENT

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 5:43-48; 22:34-40; John 13:34, 35; 15:12-14. GOLDEN TEXT—A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another—John 13:34.

The heart of all moral law is found in the Ten Commandments, but the very heart of the commandments is the "new commandment" of Christ, that we love God with our whole being and love our neighbors as ourselves. For if we have that perfect devotion to God we shall keep His commandments (John 15:9, 10), and shall show our love to our neighbors by positive acts of interest and devotion, as well as by refraining from falsehood, violence and impurity.

The message of our lesson today is one which will strike home to the hearts of honest and earnest men and women. When we stand in the revealing light of God's Holy Word we cry out for forgiveness for the manner in which we have failed truly to represent our Lord in the world, and in prayer for grace to live as we should. Let no unbeliever who reads these words use them as a basis for criticism of his Christian neighbor; but let him consider his own need of the regenerating and enabling grace of God.

Our outline for today we borrow with thanks from Points for Emphasis, by Dr. Hight C. Moore. It so aptly presents the truth that it merits our study.

I. Standard of the New Commandment (Matt. 5:43-48).

"Love your enemies" (v. 44), that is the standard which Christ has established for His followers. While the love one has for the brethren is without doubt a more intimate relationship than the love one may have for an enemy, we must not seek to minimize the real love we should have even for those who curse and revile us. It is to move us so deeply that we not only treat them kindly, but also pray for them.

Humility regarding such a thing is impossible, but in Christ it is not only possible, it has actually been demonstrated in life. It is so easy for Christians to speak with dorian that borders on hatred about "the devil's gang," to lose all love for the crowd that hangs around the tavern and the gambling house. Let us hate their sin, but may God help us to show that we really love them.

II. Scope of the New Commandment (Matt. 22:34-40).

It is as high as God, as deep as the lowest sinner, and as wide as the circle of all mankind.

A man must be right with God if he is truly and fully to love his fellow men. To be right with Him does not mean a half-hearted one-day-a-week interest in religious matters, and that only up to the point where they do not interfere with our own interests and desires. To love God means to give Him the devotion of our entire being.

Loving one's neighbors does not just mean the man next door. Even that is none too easy at times; and some of us realize that we have failed even there. But the man in Sweden, China, Germany, anywhere on this earth, is our neighbor, and needs our love. There are no "foreigners" in God's thinking about love; no poor or rich, no ignorant, no members of "another social order"—they are all our neighbors.

III. Spirit of the New Commandment (John 13:34, 35).

"As I have loved you"—that is the spirit that is to move us to love our neighbor. God is love, and it was always His will that men should love one another. But the new element in this commandment of Christ is that He, the final and perfect revelation of God's love, had come to give His life in loving service and sacrificial atonement. Paul caught the spirit of this commandment when he said, "The love of Christ constraineth us" (II Cor. 5:14). There is the real motive, the true spirit of Christian life and service.

IV. Sacrifice in the New Commandment (John 15:12-14). Love draws no limiting line beyond which it will not go. Love says: "I count not my life dear if in giving it I may bring deliverance to my friends."

Some folk talk piously of their love for God, but are not willing to go even across the street to speak to a soul about Him. If we love Him we would willingly go to the ends-of-the-earth-for-Him, or contentedly serve Him in what seems to be a forgotten corner. We shall not question His guidance nor blush to own His name, even though the testimony may mean our death. This we shall do for Christ's sake, and for the sake of a suffering humanity.

The writer thinks of John and Betty Stam whom he was privileged to teach in the classrooms of the Moody Bible Institute, and who not long afterward poured out their gallant young lives in martyrdom for Christ in China. "Greater love hath no man than this that a man lay down his life for his friends."

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them! Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living-life day-in-day-out constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, tired feet, dizziness, loss of appetite, getting up at night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all over aches.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbances. The recognized and proper treatment is a direct medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Look on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

COMMENTS

—And R U Listenin'?

Let's you and your correspondent go into a huddle to see what we can present the following noted people and relatives:

CHRISTMAS WISHES:

John Doe wants the warring political factions of the Democratic party in Lincoln County to bury the hatchet, and kiss 'n' make up.

A new fireside for President Roosevelt. A Republican victory in 1940 for Doyle Rentfrow. A pair of new socks for Dad. A bunch of Oblivion for John L. Lewis. A nice bucket of white-wash for Harry Hopkins. We all would like Highway 64 finished. Richard Roe would like to see the Incoming Republican Court House officials to have a successful administration. To Foreman Dutton and his W P A crew — Mr. and Mrs. Citizen would like to see cement sidewalks all over town. And a WPA Sewer Project would be the berries, too. Junior wants a bicycle and a football for Grandma. — St. Senor!

M. B. headed this in: A motorist stranded in a small Pennsylvania town on a Sunday night, attended Church. The pastor offered a prayer of thanks for our country's great men. "Oh Lord," he implored, "we thank Thee for the great leaders of this land; for Washington, for Jefferson, for Cleveland, for Roosevelt — I mean Theodore."

C. E. D. had a dream the other night. He dreamt that Heaven was composed of a lot of Republicans, and he was their National Chairman.

To the local Business Men's Club — How about that Malpais National Monument that was proposed quite some time back? Let's have some action!

So, Heats la Vista (until we meet again) hope to see all of you reading this column next week — and thanks for listening!
