They are now working on Alamogordo avenue, laying walks at the Mayer flats, the Richard residence, and the Burks court is being finished at this writing. Now is the time to have them put in, folks. Better hurry, while 'Dut' is on the job.

OUT-OF-THE-ORDINARY

Among our letters this week, we found one from the writer's old friend, Wm. J. Wohlwend, and former associate in Burlington, Iowa, about 40 years ago, when Billy was foreman of the old Burlington Hawk-Eye, a daily newspaper of that day and time. He sent us the information concerning Alanson Johnson, 97, of Corwith, Iowa, one of, if not the oldest printer in the United States. Mr. Johnson began to set type by candle light at Beaver Dam, Wis., 85 years ago and has been actively engaged in the business since that time. He was working in the government printing office when Lincoln was shot. He says he is going to work until he is 100 years of age and then retire. Last summer, he went to the Gettysburg Civil War Reunion with one of his nephews, 71, and wore him out in milling around. When they returned, the nephew was tired out, but Johnson went to work. With a twinkle in his eye, he confesses that he was quite a sneak among the ladies of "ye olden days." He scoffs the use of glasses and is still a rapid type-setter.

Last week in Cleveland, Ohio, Sam Stanley woke up one morning to see a fellow leaving his room with all of his clothes under his arm. He hastily donned a bath robe and followed him. On seeing himself being pursued, the fellow began to run. Sam ran him so close that the thief dropped the bundle and it rolled into a creek. The water was very swift, but determined to get it, Sam jumped in and rescued the clothes just before they went into a man-hole which led to the river. He said he was not so particular about the clothes, but he had his pipe in one of the coat pockets.

A strange and yet accidental killing happened in the city of Denver on Tuesday of this week. Madge Evans, 22, of Holyoke, Colo., had just obtained a position as stenographer in the office of a certain business house. At her hotel, she retired early so as to be fresh for her new job the next morning. The room directly above hers was occupied by Ella Kilewar. After Madge had retired, Ella was visited by Forrest Foster, a patrolman, who was to escort her to a party, but before they started, he showed her a new revolver and in describing and demonstrating the safety devices, it went off. Thinking the ball had only gone through the floor, they went away. Wednesday morning Madge was found dead in her bed. The ball had gone through the floor and ceiling and lodged in the head of the sleeping stenographer. Forrest was prostrated with grief when notified of her death. The coroner's jury rendered a verdict of accidental death.

Cres Mares of Corona was a business visitor here yesterday.

A Study in Contrasts

By
RAYMOND PITCAIRN

Within the past few weeks several significant news dispatches have cast fresh light on conditions in dictator-ruled nations of Europe.

One reports an edict soon to go into effect in Germany which assigns every unmarried woman between the ages of eighteen and twenty-five to a year's compulsory labor on farms or in domestic service before she can obtain any other form of employment.

Another report computes the wages of men workers in that and other totalitarian nations, in terms of buying power, as from one-fourth to one-twelfth those paid American workers engaged in similar employment.

These are facts that the sabre-rattlers and shouters who head those nations fail to proclaim in their attacks on democratic forms of government.

These are facts that admirers of the totalitarian idea, who urge that we put some of its desperate experiments into effect over here, don't mention in their arguments for change.

But they are facts of tremendous significance to all Americans. They show what can happen when the people surrender their personal liberty and their authority in government to ambitious and self-proclaimed leaders.

The American people attained their self-government, their freedom of speech, thought and religion, and their high standard of living by their own energy, their own courage, their own self-reliance. They will maintain them through the exercise of these same rights and virtues.

And if anyone tries to convince us that the totalitarian way is better, we need only point to the contrast between conditions in nations grasped and ruled by dictators, and in the United States, developed and governed by the people. We need only quote the facts.

There is the evidence — and the answer.

The American Spirit Endures

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

During the past few months, newspapers report, there has been a great and revived interest in the national shrines of America:

Visitors have crowded them as seldom before, eager to learn more of their history and significance.

What does it all indicate?
The answer probably lies in the distinctive nature of America's patriotic monuments.

In the Old World, national shrines
are usually the honored graves of military glory. Probably the most famous of them commemorate the conquests
of strong captains, and the power of stern kings.

In America the greatest national shrines are, in contrast, birthplaces of liberty—whether Independence Hall, Bunker Hill or the Alamo. They glorify the freedom and the power of the common man—the ideal established by our founders, and preserved by generations of valiant citizens.

For a brief while, it would seem,
many Americans forgot the message of those shrines, as they listened to a loud chorus of despair lifted in what was represented as the swan-song of the American idea.

For a brief while they ignored those tributes to the courage and faith of our fathers, as they were asked to share the fears of social and economic and political astrologers, suddenly lifted to prominence or power.

But the American spirit endures. It endures not only in our shrines to courage and to freedom, but in our people as well. And against that strong shield all the quivering fears and desperate counsels of academic and political soothsayers beat in vain.

The American patriotic monument
is not a wall against which we weep for glories that have fled. It is, instead, a sturdy storehouse of national recollections, where our people renew their faith in the future of the nation.

With such inspiration, America is prepared to reject the prophets of despair who insist that the American ideals of courage and strength and self-reliance are things of the past.
It is prepared, instead, to repeat with
the poet:

"The Glory of the Present is to make
the Future free,
We love our land for what she is
and what she is to be."

How Inflation Hits Your Savings
By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

"The very man who has the deepest interest in sound currency is the man who earns his daily bread by his daily toil."

Daniel Webster said that nearly a century ago. His statement was true in his time, it was true years earlier, and it is true today.

France proved its verity as early as 1775, when currency inflation forced workers and wage-earners to pay the equivalent of 20 for a pound of bread and of 40 for a bushel of potatoes.

Germany proved it shortly after the World War when inflation wiped out utterly the average worker's savings, and sky-rocketed the price of everything save the bare necessities of life far beyond his reach.

Russia proved it when her revolutionary leaders used inflation to help drag every worker down to a state of regimented and dependent paucity.

In every instance currency inflation hurt the worker and helped the speculator. Always it enriches the thrifty and enails the gambler. How?

It achieves this effect not by reducing the number of dollars in the worker's pay-envelope or savings account or insurance policy, but by reducing the actual purchasing power of these dollars.

It means that out of the same income—or savings—he must pay far more for food and clothes and shelter and everything else he buys.

That's how for the well-to-do speculator who profits by buying in a low market and selling at inflated prices. But it's hard on the worker—or on his widow and children if he has entrusted their future to insurance or savings funds account, as most American wage-earners do.

Now can the average worker and citizen escape this menace?

Well, as history has proved, the menace of inflation descends on a nation in one of two ways. It may be accepted deliberately as a method of raising prices. But more often it comes as a result of straining government resources through extravagance and debt.

Prevent the politician from accumulating more and the piling up of public debt—and you remove the threat of the currency. Save the savings and the security of every worker and his family.
