The Physical Ed class gave an interesting program for Assembly. The Home Ec Dept. gave a mother-daughter tea a Tuesday, from 4 to 6. The Baton class and the Band practiced together last Wednesday. The class is eagerly waiting for its first appearance with the Band.

Burton-Elliott

Last Sunday evening at the Baptist Church parsonage, with Rev. Cochran performing the ceremony, Miss Lillie Belle Burton of Albuquerque and Eugene Vaden Elliott of Carrizozo were united in marriage. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Elliott; was born and reared here and is a graduate of our local high school, where he was one of the stars in the boys' basketball team. At present he is employed as a confectionary salesman. Friends wish this young couple the best of everything.

Highway Meeting
at Santa Fe

At the meeting held in Santa Fe Feb 7, all counties except one were represented. The consensus of opinion was that the Legislature authorize the sale of $8,000,000 in highway debentures. The governor told us that the primary aid roads would be taken care of first and that $250,000 had been allotted to the state by the government for secondary roads, to be matched by state.

The sale of the above road debentures would bring the total authorized by the state to $31,000,000. A total of $25,000,000 in debentures has been authorized in date of which approximately $17,600,000 now are outstanding. The debentures are issued against the state gasoline tax, now returning nearly $4,000,000 annually. All debentures are retired by the tax of 5c per gallon on all gasoline sold in the state. It is estimated that the tourists coming to the Coronado Cuarto Centennial next year and the extra mileage covered by the people of the state will add $1,000,000,000 to the annual income from the sale of gasoline.

The government has allotted $1,960,000 to the state for highways. We must match that sum dollar for dollar, or we will not receive the money. The oil surfacing of roads will save thousands of dollars every year by eliminating the cost of maintenance. Another saving will be in tires, which will last from 8 to 5 thousand miles longer, if continuously on oil surfaced or asphalt paved roads.

Dr. R. E. Blaney, Pres., Highway 54 Ass'n.

L. P. Hall of Ancho was here this Tuesday, and while in town, had some notary work done at this office.

SCHOOL ELECTION

The local school board election passed off quietly Tuesday with the following results:

- Mrs. Jane Turner.....298
- Henry Hoffman.....178
- Dewey Stokes.....138
- C. E. Freeman.....92
- Tennis Smoot.....55

The new board will be composed of Mesdames Clara Snow, Jane Spencer Turner, Messrs. Wm. Gallacher, Ben C. Sanchez and Henry Hoffman.

The Outlook office extends its congratulations to Jane and Henry and wishes the entire board success in a large measure.

BUSINESS MEN'S CLUB

There was a splendid attendance at the Club Wednesday evening at the S. P. Hotel dinner and business session. Talks were made on road matters, and the strong probability of losing the UCC Camp by July 1.

The Club went on record as opposing such a move, and a Committee composed of Wm. Gallacher and E. M. Brickley was appointed to investigate the matter with the assistance of T. A. Spencer, and instructed to do all in their power to keep the Camp here.

There was one visitor, Rev. Cochran of the local Baptist Church.

Smith-Baker

Yesterday afternoon in the city of Roswell, Miss Nellie Lee Smith and O'Dell Baker, both of Carrizozo, were united in marriage. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith of the Lincoln County News. She was reared in Carrizozo and graduated from our high school. She is an operator at the local telephone station.

The groom has been here for about four years, during which time, he has been at the local CCC Camp. A few days ago, he purchased the restaurant next door to the Outlook office. The young couple will make their home in Carrizozo and the best wishes of their many friends are extended.

Forest Ranger R. V. Galt, Mrs. Galt and daughter Eugene passed through here last night on their way to Santa Fe, where Mr. Galt will take a position in the office of the Forest Supervisor. This is a promotion for the Ranger and we offer congratulations.

Mayor J. E. Bell of Jicarilla was a business visitor in town Wednesday and had some notary work done at this office.

The front entrance of St. Rita Church has been draped with black mourning this week and services held every morning on the death of His Holiness Pope Pius XI, who departed this life at Rome, Italy, last Friday morning.

J. V. Hobbie is ill with the flu at his home this week, but his condition is improving.

Will Ed Harris is ill with the flu this week. Will Ed is at the S. P. Hotel.

R. W. (Pecos) Bowlin is the Deputy Sheriff.

Mr. and Mrs. Vance P. Smith and children of Oscura were visitors in town Saturday.

OUT-OF-THE-ORDINARY

A. L. Burke

For the past five years, in Greensburg, Ind., a tree has been growing out of the courthouse clock tower. It was first noticed when the caretaker observed that something was interfering with the hands of the big clock. He went up the steeple and found that a good-sized elm shoot had grown out of the dust and dirt below the clock and that accounted for the occasional stopping of the hands. He first decided to cut it out, but on an afterthought, he concluded to let it grow as a novelty. He trained the branches so that they would not interfere with the hands and it continued to grow with the attention of the caretaker, who provided it with moisture and fertilizer. Now comes the city, and has it equipped with electric lights, which furnishes much of an attraction to visitors as well as a novelty to the home folks. How long it will grow or to what extent, is left to be seen.

About six weeks ago in Hastings, New Zealand, Tom Moore and Jack Averler, while engaged in digging a cellar, came across an iron box. They dug it out, placed it in a safe position and waited until after working hours to open it. It was so heavy that it required the efforts of both men to raise it up. At the stroke of 5 o'clock, they dropped their shovels and made for the treasure box. When they opened it, this was what they found. The box was filled with pig iron, on top of which was an envelope. They opened it and found a note which read as follows: "Help yourself to pig iron. Better luck next time."

Election Boards Should Eat

We are at a loss to know who should have taken care of the election board on Tuesday, but we do know, that there were no provisions made for their meals when the time came to eat. We were much surprised to find that the board was without means of sustenance and had it not been for the neighbors, they would have gone without anything to eat during the entire day and until 8 o'clock, when the count was finished.

Certain neighbors brought in sandwiches while others provided coffee. Before the next election, there should be some means provided for the election board. The work is long and tiresome. After the vote is taken, comes the counting, which is more tiresome than any other part of the election period. In the future, boards should refuse to serve except under a promise of having meals sent to them. Remember, that members of election boards get hungry as well as other people.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Walker of the Lyric Theatre have purchased the Stewart home, between the Albert Ziegler and Dr. Blaney residences.

Bruckart's Washington Digest

Feeling of Unrest in Europe Reaches Our Side of Atlantic

Permeate Administration and, to Some Extent, Congress; Result Is Great and Increasing Mystery; President's Secrecy Approved; Facts About Plane Sales.

By WILLIAM BRUCKART WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—The feeling that has obsessed Europeans for weeks—that they are approaching toward some international crisis—seems to have spread to our side of the Atlantic. Right out of the air, so to speak, we are made to feel that great questions are about to take shape and that we, in this country, must be ready to decide them.

Most sources in Washington do not believe that the so-called settlement of the European crisis at Munich last September was, in fact, more than a stop-gap, as I reported to you at that time. The Munich failure has become more and more evident and the very atmosphere is charged again with exactly the same type of bated expectancy.

In a general way, of course, we all know that the worldwide difference between the democratic forms of government and the dictatorships is at the bottom of the whole thing. We know, as well, that Hitler and Mussolini have challenged the European democracies by the boldness of their dictatorship actions in taking practically what they want in the way of additions to their empires.

Beneath the surface, things have been going on in our own government. The President, the department of state and the military and naval services know what is taking place in Europe and they are advised as to what may be expected. Plans were being formed and developed so that steps could be taken here at the proper time.

Genuine Danger of War, But Not Immediately

Because of the necessity for avoiding wrong impressions which is a vital thing in international relations, President Roosevelt told the military affairs committee of the senate confidentially something of the inside story. I believe he did right in shielding those facts from general knowledge for no one knows how they could, or would, be distorted in German or Italian newspapers.

But this air of mystery has backfired in a curious way. It has aroused certain portions of the country into a veritable frenzy—particularly, some members of congress—and they have seized upon a relatively unimportant thing as their weapon in striking at Mr. Roosevelt's foreign policy.

It is made to appear that this is a terrible thing. The howlers are saying that Mr. Roosevelt has violated the spirit of the neutrality act and that he should never have given permission for the sale of the planes. There are other charges flying about, also, but they are unimportant here.

I have dug into the situation—as far as is possible, I believe, and I fall to get very much excited about the whole thing. There is, of course, the genuine danger of war, although I am not convinced that Europe is going to break out tomorrow. Sometime, probably, but not immediately. Such a clash of hopes and convictions and traditions and faith as obviously occurs between the philosophies of dictatorships and democracies is bound to lead to use of force but I think there is the probability that it is further away than this jittery feeling of the world now indicates.

France's Purchase of American-Made Airplanes

To get back to this airplane thing, I should like to set out some of the facts. France is buying American-made airplanes—several hundred of them. She is doing this because her own airplane production has stalled and France has sufficient gold to buy them elsewhere. The French military services must have them in case there is that outbreak of force that seems so imminent on the surface for the reason that Germany and Italy are superior to France in the air.

The contracts were let in this country after Mr. Roosevelt had talked over the whole question with his cabinet and with the war and navy departments and certain leaders of the airplane industry. They were authorized after Ambassador Bullitt, in his reports from Paris, had laid bare the whole situation.

I am told that Mr. Bullitt advised Mr. Roosevelt to treat the matter as a routine; that to talk much about it would excite people, unduly. Well, the Bullitt idea was working—until the unfortunate accident out near Los Angeles when a big bombing plane fell, injuring a member of the French mission that is in this country buying the planes. Then, out popped the secret and out came the critics of the Roosevelt foreign policy.

It is not within my power to say whether Mr. Roosevelt's foreign policy is right or wrong. I do not believe anyone can tell yet. Any foreign policy is something of a gamble. If it works, the author is a hero; if it fails, the author of the policy promptly is termed a sap.

But of this phase, I can write: why should the howlers now arise and denounce the President's foreign policy on the basis of sales of planes to France, when more than a year ago the British government began buying planes from our manufacturers? Why is it wrong to let the French buy and right to let the British buy? Or, to state the matter affirmatively, it seems to me that we cannot well differentiate between two nations with whom we have friendly relations.

Foreign Policy Opposition Making Itself Look Foolish

I do not regularly burn incense at the Roosevelt dais, but when I believe his opposition is making itself look foolish, I believe they ought to be called what they are. If they can show where the present foreign policies are ridiculous, now is their opportunity.

If this criticism of Mr. Roosevelt were directed at his actions with respect to Spain or Japan, perhaps there would be something worth considering. It will be recalled that the President persuaded plane manufacturers and many others as well to discontinue sales to the Japanese for use against China. It will be recalled also that indirect assistance was given the so-called loyalists in Spain, aid that surely must be looked upon—if done honestly—as help to the military forces although disguised as provisions for those who suffered back of the lines. All of this was done while we have a neutrality act through which congress believed it was taking away certain powers from the Chief Executive.

So, I repeat that there is cause, it appears, for criticism of some of the President's foreign policies, but it does not seem that critics have joined issue with the Chief Executive on any sound basis.

I always have felt that there is too much secrecy in general governmental administration. Unimportant squirts, holding unimportant jobs, are forever and ever taking themselves seriously to the point where they would not admit it was pouring down rain if it were raining cats and dogs. From that level of officialdom on up and down the line, one finds that sort of thing in our government. I saw a congressional committee chairman refuse, just the other day, to let newspaper men see a statement that he was inserting in the committee record, a record that is as public as the light of day. It was silly, but it was typical.

President Has Authority To Shape Foreign Policy

When it comes to foreign relations, however, the situation is entirely different. The constitution, wisely enough, provides that such matters must be dealt with by the President. It allows him the power of negotiation but it curbs that power by requiring him to ask congress for a declaration of war. In other words, the President is provided with authority to shape and conduct the foreign policy, the dealings with foreign nations, but he must have the approval of congress, which represents the people, when the concluding phases of those negotiations are reached and the nation is about to be bound.

That condition was arranged at the outset of our nation's history. It has worked well. The rights of the people are amply protected. Think for a moment what the situation would be if our foreign policies were in the hands of adulated demagogues in the house or the senate! I hazard a guess that some of them would talk as long as Hitler did the other day and create just as much grief.

So, I firmly believe there should be some secrecy about our foreign policy and that the President should have some liberties in working out arrangements with other governments. After all, any program that he has must eventually be published and debated by congress.

Stratton Comeback

WHEN Monty Stratton, White Sox pitching ace whose right leg was amputated in December following a hunting accident, first announced that he was going to try a comeback it was suspected that he was whistling in the dark.

Now, however, even the most dubious are keeping a skeptical eye on Monty. Experts have already gone to his Greenville, Texas, home to consult on the best type of artificial leg for the injured young athlete. His convalescence has approached the point where he is ready to begin his mechanical experiment, and he is more optimistic of future success than he was last spring when he pulled an arm muscle.

Stratton is fortunate in having interested experts of the artificial limb industry in his plight. Some manufacturers accept his condition as a challenge to their resourcefulness. While many players grant that he has an outside chance of pitching again, they are not of the opinion that he will be able to cover ground with any speed.

It is reported one expert has assured Stratton and Sox officials that Monty will not only be able to pitch, but that he can run with a fair degree of speed.

Stratton will not make the trip to the Pasadena training camp. Instead, he will work out in Texas until April 10, when he will come to Chicago. According to present plans he will be in uniform during the White Sox-Cubs benefit game for him in Comiskey park on April 17.

Naismith Complains

DR. JAMES NAISMITH, originator of basketball, recently told a group of coaches, officials and sports writers what could be done to make the game better.

His criticisms were aimed mainly at officials and the rules body as he pointed out that:

- 1. The rules today consistently penalize the offensive team.
2. Many officials are not interpreting or enforcing the rules properly.
3. Elimination of the center jump, in addition to penalizing the scoring team, actually slows the game and eliminates many clever plays which would add spice.

It is true that the offensive team is penalized by loss of the ball every time it makes a basket. But it is equally true that the defensive team receives many unjust penalties. For instance, the dribble primarily was evolved to enable a cornered player to break loose. Today it is used as a weapon with which the offensive player can crash into a defensive man, knowing that the latter will get the penalty.

Before the center jump was eliminated the average time required for an official to get the ball and toss it up at the center was four or five seconds. Now a player takes the ball under the basket, has five seconds to get it out, and the team has ten more seconds to advance beyond the center of the court.

Coaches in general seem to be satisfied with the present rules. Many changes have been suggested, but the feeling has been that the game will certainly not be improved by the hasty adoption of new regulations.

Sport Shorts

ROBERT GARDNER, rookie pitcher for the Washington Senators, is 6 feet 7 inches tall. Though golf is essentially a Scotch game, the word "caddy" is from the Chinese language. Too hard tracks, too much speed from starting gates, and too many short distance races cause the early breakdown of American horses, according to Herbert Bayard Swope, New York racing commissioner.

Fred Swan, who succeeded Pop Warner as head coach at Temple university, served as Warner's assistant for six years at that school. Neil Sandford, a Nova Scotia hockey player, scored 11 goals unassisted in a recent game. Light and Welterweight Champion Henry Armstrong will fight Bobby Pacho in Havana on March 4.

Wrestling's Superman

Stanislaus Zbyzsko, veteran Polish wrestler, is still going strong after 40 years of trouping. The round Pole with the shiny pate is now 63 years old. He claims he can still go 40 minutes with the best of them, and those who have seen him work out substantiate his claim. For the past year he has been more active as a manager than as a grappler.

During his extensive career he wrestled Frank Gotch twice, met Hackenschmidt several times, had nine spectacular clashes with Stranger Lewis, met Joe Stecher and all the former luminaries of an earlier era. The veteran of grunt and growl continues in his search of the almighty dollar. And he has done quite well in his quest. He is unlike most old-time wrestlers, who sunk their silver into land, in that he invests in securities of his native country. The wolf, incidentally, isn't howling in front of his door. But maybe he's afraid of Stanislaus.

Little Man Found More Trials Were to Come

A big man and a little man were having an argument on the bank of a canal. They got very hot about it. At last, the big man said, "I could pick you up and throw you across the cut."

The little man replied: "You couldn't. I bet you a dollar you couldn't."

The big man said, "Done," picked him up, whirled him round, and pitched him right into the middle.

The little man scrambled out, and said: "Where's my dollar?" The other replied: "Dollar be blowed. I'm going to do it if I stay here all day."

IT'S HERE! The NEW Firestone CHAMPION TIRE with the NEW Safety-Lock Cord Body and NEW Gear-Grip Tread. Stronger Cord Body More Non-Skid Mileage. Plus FAMOUS TRIPLE-SAFE CONSTRUCTION. FIRESTONE triumphs again! This time with the new Firestone Champion, the tire that sets the safety standards for 1939. This new tire provides a combination of safety features never before built into a tire. It is a completely new achievement in safety engineering. From the experience gained on the speedways of the world and in the Firestone laboratories, Firestone engineers have developed a revolutionary new type of cord body called Safety-Lock, which provides amazingly greater strength. This outstanding achievement makes possible the use of a thicker, tougher, deeper tread which assures much greater non-skid mileage. Because of this new Safety-Lock Cord body and Gear-Grip tread, the modern streamlined Firestone Champion Tire establishes completely new standards of blowout protection, non-skid safety, silent operation and long mileage. The Firestone Champion Tire embodies the famous Firestone Triple-Safe construction — you get the exclusive and patented Firestone construction features of Gum-Dipping, two extra layers of Safety-Lock cords under the tread and Gear-Grip tread design. Never in all the history of tire building has there been such a triple-safe combination to protect you against the dangers of blowouts, punctures and skidding. Call on your nearby Firestone Dealer or Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store and equip your car with a set of new Firestone Champion Tires—the only tires made which are safety proved on the speedway for your protection on the highway.

"Stretching His Luck"

HELLO, EVERYBODY!

Teddy was a wing walker. You know, one of those birds-in-a-flying-circus-who-does-things-on-the-wing-of-a-plane-you-wouldn't-try-in-your-own-parlor. They must need money mighty bad, you tell your neighbor. Teddy always was a runt. That's why he was a wing walker. You wanted as little weight as possible moving around out there on the fabric-covered wings of those Jennies the flying circuses were using right after the war. They weren't built for wing walking. But Teddy walked 'em, even in his sleep.

It was old stuff to him. It was so old he began to look around for something new to thrill the gaping crowds.

Something that gave them a bigger kick than hanging by your knees from the undercarriage of a speeding plane. He didn't know then it never pays to play the other fellow's game. But he learned.

Well, sir, it was in a town the flying circus was playing out in Iowa that Teddy came across the idea he was looking for. It came to him as he watched a human fly scale the walls of the tallest building. Reaching the topmost story, the fly somehow attached an ordinary inner tube to a window, sunk his teeth in the other end and hung there in the breeze. Teddy saw the stunt "got" the crowd. And it would knock 'em cold when he pulled it on a plane a thousand or so feet in the air.

Human Fly Coaches Teddy for New Job.

When the fly came down to earth, Teddy introduced himself, invited him to supper. Maybe they hoisted a couple. Anyway, the fly warmed up enough to tell Teddy how it worked.

Before he went to bed that night, the wing walker bought himself a couple of brand new inner tubes. The next day, out at the flying field, he rigged them as he had been instructed. High up on a wall he fastened an end of one. Then, climbing on a chair, he took the other end in his teeth and kicked the chair away.

The darn thing stretched so far his feet touched the floor. He moved the tube a couple of feet higher and everything was fine.

Day after day Teddy religiously practiced hanging from that tube to strengthen the muscles of his jaws and neck. It was a heavy strain to put on the front upper teeth that were bridge-work, but they held. And six weeks later Teddy was prepared to strait his stuff.

Before we go any further I had better tell you Teddy is Theodore Davidson of Galesburg, Ill. They still call him "Dare Devil" Davidson, this new member of the Floyd Gibbons Adventurers' club.

He was all of that on a sunny afternoon, in September, 1919, in Moline, Ill., where the flying circus was putting on its show, making those

The tube started stretching and stretching.

Jennies do things they were never built for. The weather was perfect. So was the gate. And the performers were feeling pretty good as they took to the skies.

Especially Teddy. He was going to pop their eyes out with a brand new, death-defying stunt, performed for the first time in any land. It never occurred to him then, this would also be the last time.

The inner tube was fastened securely to the axle of the undercarriage of the Jenny. And everything went off according to schedule until Teddy began lowering himself down that wriggling, slippery, sabby length of rubber.

Falls to Figure Effect of Air Resistance.

"Right then," Teddy says, "I could see I had stretched my luck too far."

Right there, too, he began learning a painful lesson in simple physics.

He had failed to figure what effect the air resistance of his body would have upon the tubing. Hanging below the plane, moving 75 miles an hour, the drag of the air on Teddy added some 30 or 40 pounds to the weight on that big rubber band.

"That tube started stretching and stretching," says Teddy, "and it was like a live thing as I slipped and fought it!"

The more it stretched, the harder it was for a wing walker with a bright idea to hang on. It had never acted that way in practice. Would it hold? Could it hold? What was he going to do about it? Teddy says he was too dumb to climb back. That was probably because he was too busy holding on.

Well, sir, that's one of the darnedest fixes I ever heard of. And it became worse. After rattling for 10 minutes with that flexible support his arms tired.

He slipped lower. Finally, he just had to let himself down to where he could sink his teeth into the gadget attached to the flapping end. His jaws clamped down on it. The rest of him was limp with weariness. His head forced back, he saw the tube stretch alarmingly as gusts of wind put more pressure on his body. There were six feet of it between him and the landing gear.

Rests Arms to Climb Back to Safety.

Teddy tried to relax as the plane circled 1,500 feet above the grandstand. His aching arms were folded, resting for that long climb to safety. He wasn't sure he could do it. But he was not permitted to dwell on the idea for long. There was a wrench, a crunch, a shoot of pain in Teddy's face.

The bridgework that was Teddy's front uppers had crushed! The ends of the mouthpiece, however, were tucked away back where they were gripped by molars on both sides. Still gripping it, Teddy began inching his way upward along that thin, twisted, tough tubing that had been put to such strange use. Well, boys and girls, there is no use prolonging the agony.

"I made it, too," Teddy says, "but by such a small margin I decided then and there to be satisfied with my old bag of tricks."

Teddy's story closes on a note of sadness. Those artificial teeth of his vanished into thin air during the minutes he struggled up that yielding rope of rubber. All the dough he made that dizzy day went to buy a new set.

Plant and Flower Names Traced Directly to Indians

The names of many of our plants and flowers come from the Indian, says the American Wildlife Institute. Hickory is from the Algonquin, meaning to break something open. The related tree, the pecan, bears a pure Algonquin name, meaning a large nut.

The Atamasco lily, found in the low pinelands of the Gulf states and Georgia derives its name from two Algonquin names—adi, meaning to ripen, and miskan, meaning it is red.

Poke is an Indian word said to mean blood, which is possibly an allusion to the reddish juice of the fruit or color of the stem. Another suggested derivation is from the word pokk, meaning break; possibly referring to the ease with which the brittle stem breaks.

The largest native flower of the water lily tribe is the Wampapin, or Wankapin, meaning in Chippewa, curved, in allusion to the crooked edible tubers of this plant.

What to Eat and Why

C. Houston Goudiss Gives Some Timely Hints on How to Keep Up Fuel Value of Winter Diet; Discusses New Methods for Quick Baking By C. HOUSTON-GOUDISS

MIDWINTER weather calls for energizing breakfasts to get the day off to a good start . . . energizing midday meals to help keep children and adults functioning efficiently . . . energizing, but easily digested, evening meals to satisfy bodily requirements without over-taxing the digestive system. In addition to the need for supplying meals that are adequate as to energy values and other nutritional requirements, the homemaker has two other important factors to consider; she must satisfy the appetites of various members of her family . . . and she must keep within her food budget.

Breadstuffs—The Staff of Life. One of her greatest aids is bread in various forms. Breadstuffs, or other foods made from grain, are undoubtedly the largest single item in the dietary of the majority of people throughout the world. They appear in some form at almost every meal. And they are also highly satisfactory as a between-meal lunch for rapidly growing school children.

Breadstuffs are notable for their energy values and for their ease of digestion. They contain some protein and minerals, and under some circumstances, they may also carry other significant food values.

Bread and rolls combine well with milk, cheese, butter and meat. They make good eating and give a comfortable feeling of satisfaction afterwards. Such simple combinations as bread and cheese, or rolls and milk, are highly effective in satisfying hunger. And they go a long way toward meeting nutritional requirements.

A Notable Food Team. Nutritionists have a high regard for the combination of bread and milk. Breadstuffs are generally regarded as a most economical source of energy and protein in the diet. Milk is our most nearly perfect food. And the proteins of milk supplement those found in the grains of which bread and rolls are made.

Children especially should consume some form of bread, toast, or well-baked rolls at every meal. These easily digested foods supply the fuel values that most active youngsters require in abundance. Rolls and bread with a well-baked crust have the additional advantage of encouraging thorough mastication.

During adolescence, the energy requirements are especially high. Boys sometimes eat more than their fathers, and it is desirable that the extra calories be provided in the form of such easily digested and wholesome foods as breadstuffs. This is also an advantage to the homemaker, from the point of view of economy, as breadstuffs rank as one of our most reasonably priced foods. Adolescent girls, on the other hand, frequently develop finicky appetites and strange food habits. They may wish to go to school without breakfast—a practice which must be discouraged as it may lead to undernutrition from which "nerves" may develop.

Adolescents Like Variety. One way to help growing girls to be energetic is to encourage them to eat some form of bread at every meal. This will help to keep up the fuel value of the diet at very little expense.

Mothers must, however, guard against loss of interest in breadstuffs by various members of their families, as a result of monotony. Luckily, there is no reason why this should occur in any home. For it is possible to provide breadstuffs in such a variety that the same kind need not be served twice in succession within the space of one or two weeks.

You can add variety to the diet by preparing bread from graham, whole wheat or rye flour. Rolls can be made from plain or sweet dough. Some of the more popular are Parker House rolls, sandwich rolls, finger rolls, cinnamon buns, butterscotch rolls and pecan rolls.

A New Leavening Agent. Some homemakers may feel that it is too costly to purchase such fancy breads outside the home. And they may feel that they cannot spare the time required for home baking. Such arguments might have been valid in the past. But not any more!

Recently a new kind of yeast has been developed which makes it possible to prepare a variety of hot breads at home—more quickly than ever before. Thus, home baking follows the trend of the times and becomes quick-baking.

One reason why modern homemakers have been reluctant to make bread and rolls at home, I believe, has been the difficulty of obtaining a leavening agent that was both quick-acting and possessed good keeping qualities.

Yeast is the most satisfactory leavening agent for bread and rolls. Heretofore, only two types had been available. Fresh, or compressed yeast, and dried yeast. Both of these products are composed of yeast plants combined with cereal.

Fresh yeast has a higher moisture content, however, and because of this, spoils rapidly. Hence, it must be purchased fresh, kept well refrigerated, and used within a few days. Dry yeast keeps several weeks at room temperature and has, therefore, been regarded as more practical. Its great disadvantage has been that it acts less quickly, owing to the fact that some of the yeast plants are destroyed during the drying.

But nowadays homemakers can buy a new kind of yeast. A new,

Bridge Across Atlantic

There is a bridge across the Atlantic. This sounds like an untrue statement, but it is perfectly true, and the bridge is the only one that spans the Atlantic ocean. It is the Clachin-bridge near Oban, which joins Seil Island to the mainland of Scotland. The strip of water between them is narrow, but it is part of the Atlantic. So the bridge spans the Atlantic.

'Preserve, Protect, Defend'
By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

'I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States.'

'That oath has been taken by every President of our country during its century and a half of glorious history.'

It is a resolve renewed in spirit by millions of Americans as they observe the anniversary of the Constitution this year.

Why?
The words of our greatest Presidents themselves will tell us. Let's recall how they described and regarded that famous citadel of our liberties which they had sworn to defend.

George Washington:
'That precious depository of American happiness, the Constitution of the United States'

Thomas Jefferson:
'No Constitution was ever before so well calculated as ours for extensive empire and self-government.'

James Madison:
'The Constitution is a bill of powers, the great medium being the rights of the people.'

Abraham Lincoln:
'To the support of the Constitution let every American pledge his life, his property and his sacred honor.'

Grever Cleveland:
'The oath I now take to preserve, protect and defend the Constitution not only impressively defines the great responsibilities I now assume, but suggests obedience to constitutional commands as the rule by which my official conduct must be guided.'

Woodrow Wilson:
'Liberty cannot live apart from constitutional principle.'

The Constitution of the United States is our Constitution. 'We, the people,' are not only its beneficiaries—we are also its guardians. On this anniversary let us, too, resolve to 'preserve, protect and defend' it.

Red Cross Seeks Cut In Accident Toll

1,725,406 First Aiders Trained Since 1910

Cognizant of tremendous losses in human lives and of permanent injuries resulting from accidents in homes, on farms and highways, and around industrial plants as well as in the basement workshop, officials of the American Red Cross have been directing a systematic fight against what they term "this economic waste."

As part of this nation-wide effort to reduce deaths and permanent injuries from accidents, a recent statement from Red Cross headquarters in Washington reports that during the past 12 months certificates have been granted to 295,025 persons completing courses in the administration of Red Cross first aid.

As part of this nation-wide effort to reduce deaths and permanent injuries from accidents, a recent statement from Red Cross headquarters in Washington reports that during the past 12 months certificates have been granted to 295,025 persons completing courses in the administration of Red Cross first aid.

Since 1910, the report reveals, 1,725,406 persons have received this training from qualified Red Cross instructors and at the present time 20,429 persons are qualified to give such instruction. Bringing help nearer scenes of possible accident, 2,454 emergency first aid stations have been established in strategic locations on principal highways throughout the nation, operators of the stations receiving the prescribed Red Cross instruction and maintaining full first aid equipment on the spot.

Conventionally placed, they also maintain up-to-date lists of available doctors and ambulance services pledged in advance to cooperate with Red Cross first aiders in preventing deaths and permanent injuries that so frequently result from automobile accidents.

Mobile first aid units also have been established in cooperation with state highway and police departments, operators of public utility vehicles and others frequenting highways, operators of such units also receiving the prescribed Red Cross courses in first aid.

To cut the number of persons losing their lives through drowning while swimming, the Red Cross has redoubled efforts to train as many persons as possible in life-saving methods.

During the past year 83,150 persons received certificates upon completion of courses. Since 1914, 834,649 persons have been trained in Red Cross life saving methods, including thousands of persons in CCC camps, beach patrolmen, camp instructors, and school boys and girls.

Carrying the fight onto farms and into homes, a campaign to eliminate accidents caused by careless habits and faulty equipment last year resulted in self-checks being made in 10,000,000 American homes through cooperation of children in school, women's clubs, arm organizations, and other groups. The 3,700 Red Cross chapters and their branches in every county are cooperating in this national effort to end needless pain and suffering resulting from such accidents.

These efforts to lessen such appalling tolls of human lives and usefulness are made possible through membership in the Red Cross. The annual Roll Call will be held between November 11 and Thanksgiving Day, when all Americans are asked to join or renew their affiliation to ensure continuation of accident prevention measures.

Join the Red Cross Chapter in your community during the Roll Call, November 11 to 24.

Recall English Immigrant Boy Who Became a Great American

Edward Dickinson Baker Held High Office in Three States of the Union, Became Known as "One of the Greatest Orators of Modern Times," Served Gallantly in Three Wars and Finally Gave His Life in Defense of the Country of His Adoption.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

FEBRUARY 24 is the anniversary of the birth of a great American who, paradoxically, was not an American at all—at least, not by birth. He was born in England, but he held high office in three states of the Union, wore the American uniform in three of our wars and finally gave his life in defense of the country of his adoption.

They called him "A Modern Knight Errant," for he was a very gallant and courageous soldier. They called him "The Gray Eagle" because of his long, gray hair, eyes of fire, noble forehead and finely chiseled features. He has been described as "one of the greatest public speakers of modern times" and they said of one of his speeches that it was "the most eloquent delivered by an American since Patrick Henry closed with his immortal 'Give me Liberty or give me death!'"

His name was Edward Dickinson Baker. Baker was the son of an English Quaker and his wife who lived on the Isle of Wight. Later the family moved to London and there a son was born on February 24, 1811. He was named Edward Dickinson Baker in honor of one of his uncles, a British naval officer who fought at the Battle of Trafalgar. Another of his uncles was Lord Somerville. When the boy was five years old the Baker family moved to Philadelphia, the "City of Brotherly Love" founded by the Quaker, William Penn. There the father died while Edward was still a boy and he supported himself and his younger brother by working as a weaver. When they grew to young manhood, the two brothers emigrated to Illinois where Edward Baker began the study of law in the little town of Springfield on the Sangamon. There the 20-year-old lawyer met Southern-born Mary Ann Lee, a 23-year-old widow with two children. They married in 1831. The next year Baker left his bride to march away to war—as a volunteer in the Illinois troops raised to resist the "invasion" by Chief Black Hawk and his Sac and Fox warriors. Although he had no opportunity to distinguish himself in that brief and inglorious "war," Baker did form a friendship which was to be an important factor in his later career. It was with a tall, gangling militia captain from New Salem named Abraham Lincoln.

"Abe" and "Ned."

Five years later these two friends—"Abe" and "Ned" they called each other—were both serving in the Illinois legislature at Vandalia as Whig representatives and from that time on their careers were closely linked. With Stephen Logan, they were leaders in a little group, known as the "Springfield Juniors," which dominated Whig party councils in Illinois.

After serving one term in the legislature, Lincoln retired to his law practice in Springfield, but Baker rose a step higher by being elected to the state senate in 1840. Four years later the two friends were rivals for the Whig nomination for representative in congress and Baker was the successful candidate. He defeated his Democratic opponent in the election, thereby becoming the only Whig congressman from Illinois. Two years later "Abe" Lincoln took his seat beside "Ned" Baker in the lower house of congress. When Lincoln's second son was born in 1840, he named him Edward Baker Lincoln in honor of his friend.

By this time the United States was on the verge of a war with Mexico. Baker immediately returned to Illinois, making the trip in the record time of six days, raised a regiment of volunteers and marched to the Rio Grande. When congress assembled Colonel Baker obtained a leave of absence, hastened to Washington and appeared on the floor of congress in full uniform (the only case on record up to that time) where he made a plea for money and men.

Baker Goes to War.

He entreated the partisans in congress to cease their "mutual criminations and recriminations." "What matters differences of opinion about the origin of the war?" he pleaded. "Send our soldiers aid, comfort, succor and support. Action! Action! ACTION!!!!" He secured action, resigned from congress two days later, overtook his regiment on the march from Vera Cruz and fought with distinction in every engagement on the route to Mexico City. When Gen. James Shields, leader of the Illinois troops, was wounded at the Battle of Cerro Gordo, Baker became commander of the brigade and led it during the remainder of the war.

Returning to Illinois at the close of the conflict, Baker moved to Galena. According to one story, he did this so he would not be a candidate for re-election to congress against his old friend, "Abe" Lincoln. If that is true, it was an unnecessary gesture, for Lincoln realized that his constituents were dissatisfied with his record in congress and declined to make the race again. Baker was re-elected in 1848, but, becoming interested in the project of a railroad across the Isthmus of Panama, he declined a renomination in 1850.

Baker moved to California in 1851 and soon became a leader of the bar in that state. One of his most famous cases was the defense of Charles Cora, an Italian gambler who had killed General Richardson, United States marshal. Baker's address to the jury, "brilliant, eloquent, impassioned," won an acquittal for his client, but it also led to Baker's social ostracism for a time by some of the "better citizens."

When the new Republican party was organized Baker became a member and candidate for the Republican nomination for United States senator. He won the nomination but lost the election, partly because of the prejudice against him as a result of the Cora case. Then word came from Oregon that a Republican leader was needed there and he moved to that new state.

Elected to Senate.

In the campaign of 1850 he was elected to the senate by a coalition of Republican and Douglas Democrats. But his greatest victory during this campaign was to carry Oregon and California for his old friend "Abe" Lincoln, candidate for President. In Oregon Lincoln won by only 300 votes, in California by only 614 and the fact that he won at all was a tribute to the eloquence of Baker.

When Lincoln was inaugurated, it was Baker who introduced him to the throng of people gathered in front of the capital—an honor which no one else sought at a time when sedition filled the air and there was even danger of assassination. Taking his seat in the senate, Baker became the most effective orator and leader in supporting Lincoln's administration in dealing with the problem of secession of the southern states.

When Fort Sumter was fired upon, he went to New York to deliver an address in Union square on April 20, 1861, and thrilled the immense crowd there with his appeal for the preservation of the Union.

He did not remain in the senate long, however. For the "Gray Eagle," old-war-horse that he was, wanted action, Lincoln offered him a commission as brigadier-general but he declined it and asked only to be made colonel of a regiment which he would raise. Although the men were recruited in New York and Philadelphia, it was called the First California, in honor of the state of his adoption. During the time he was raising this outfit, he again appeared on the floor of congress in his uniform, thus giving him the distinction of being "the only man ever to address both houses of congress in uniform."

"Father" Baker.

Finally his regiment was ready for service and he led it to Fort Monroe. His paternal appearance and kindness to his men, although he remained a good disciplinarian, won for him another nickname by his men—"Father" Baker. His career in the army was almost as short as had been his service in the senate. At the Battle of Ball's Bluff on October 21, 1861, he was in command of a brigade and, exposing himself to the hottest fire, fell mortally wounded while leading a charge.

They took his body back to his adopted state of California and buried it in the famous Lone Mountain cemetery. Years later it was moved to the Presidio burial ground near San Francisco's Golden Gate and his grave will be a shrine for thousands of Americans who attend the exposition there this year.

Among the many eloquent speeches made by Baker there are three which are outstanding. One, known as the "American theater speech," was delivered in San Francisco in 1860 and is credited with swinging California for Lincoln in the crucial election of that year. In it he said in part: "We live in a day of light. We live in an advancing generation. We live in the presence of the whole world. We are like a city set on a hill, that cannot be hid. The prayers and tears and hopes and sighs of all good men are with us, of us, for us."

"As for me, I dare not, I will not, be false to freedom. Here, many years long gone, I took my stand, and where in youth my feet were planted, there my manhood and my age shall march. I am not ashamed of freedom. I know her power. I glory in her strength. I rejoice in her majesty. I will walk beneath her banner."

"I have seen her again and again struck down on a hundred chosen fields of battle. I have seen her friends fly from her. I have seen her foes gather around her. I have seen them bind her to the stake. I have seen them give her ashes to the winds, regathering them that they might scatter them yet more widely. But when they turned to exult I have seen her again meet them face to face, clad in complete steel and brandishing in her strong right hand a flaming sword red with insufferable light."

"Talking Like a God."

Of the demonstration which followed, a historian writes: "Cheer after cheer rolled from side to side, from pit to dome. Even the reporters were swept away in the frenzy and left their desks and tables to fall in with the shouting multitude. A young fellow just come of age—afterward famous as Bret Harte—leaped upon the stage and frantically waved an American flag."

"Another reporter ran out into the street gesticulating wildly and cried: 'Come in! Come in! The old man is talking like a god!'"

Almost as famous as this California speech that "left its imprint upon the history of the West," was the speech which he delivered in Union square, New York, on April 20, 1861. It began:

"The majesty of the people is here today to sustain the majesty of the constitution, and I come, a wanderer from the far Pacific, to record my oath along with yours of the great Empire state."

Further along in the speech he uttered these often-quoted words: "Fellow citizens, what is this country? Is it the soil on which we tread? Is it the gathering of familiar faces? Is it our luxury, and pomp, and pride? Nay, more than these, is it power, and might and majesty alone?"

"No, our country is more, far more than all these. The country which demands our love, our courage, our devotion, our heart's blood, is more than all these. Our country is the history of our fathers—our country is the tradition of our mothers—our country is past renown—our country is present pride and power—our country is future hope and destiny—our country is greatness, glory, truth, constitutional liberty—above all, freedom forever! These are the watchwords under which we fight; and we will shout them out till the stars appear in the sky, in the stormiest hour of battle."

A Pledge to Fight.

The address closed thus: "And if from the far Pacific a voice feeble than the feeblest murmur upon its shore may be heard, to give you courage and hope in the contest, that voice is yours today. And if a man whose hair is gray, who is well-nigh worn out in the battle and toil of life, may pledge himself on such an occasion and in such an audience, let me say, as my last word, that when amid sheeted fire and flame I saw and led the hosts of New York as they charged in contest on a foreign soil for the honor of the flag, so again, if Providence shall will it, this feeble hand shall draw a sword never yet dishonored, not to fight for honor on a foreign soil, but for country, for home, for law, for government, for constitution, for right, for freedom, for humanity—and in the hope that the banner of my country may advance, and wheresoever that banner waves there glory may pursue and freedom be established."

The third of Baker's greatest speeches was delivered in the United States senate in reply to Senator Judah P. Benjamin of Louisiana (who, like Baker, was English-born and an American by adoption), who claimed that the southern states had the right to secede from the Union. To this claim Baker hurled defiance in these words:

"I deny that this union is a compact between sovereign states at all. There is but one sovereign and that is the people. The state government is its creation; the federal government is its creation; each supreme in its sphere; each sovereign in its purpose; but each limited in its authority, and each dependent upon delegated power."

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

BEVERAGE ALCOHOL AND ITS SOCIAL PERILS

LESSON TEXT—Amos 6:1-6; 1 Peter 4:11-12; 4:15-16.

GOLDEN TEXT—It is good neither to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor anything whereof thy brother stumbleth.—Romans 14:21.

"Hazards in the use of alcohol in a machine age"—this is the topic assigned for our lesson today. It is a good one and worthy of the careful thought of every intelligent citizen. With automobiles alone killing over a hundred persons a day, and the obvious connection between alcohol and death on the highway, we might say much about the folly of trying to cut down traffic accidents while we are licensing more and more "taverns" along the road to fill the drivers with the destructive stuff.

There is much that might be said about the social havoc that is being wrought by alcohol. It is bad enough that a man pays 25 cents for a drink, but even worse, that he gives 25 minutes of his life for each indulgence. But the liquor industry covers that up under a mask of festivity, making booze look like a desirable adjunct to congenial and successful living. It does not picture the bleary eye and the babbling tongue of the drinker, nor does it present the broken-hearted mother, the devastated home, the ragged children, and the empty cupboard. Liquor is one of America's major problems. Let us face it.

The Scripture portions assigned for our lesson rightly emphasize fundamentals, the first being a call to awake from a false sense of security, the second emphasizing that this is a spiritual battle, and the third pointing the way of victory as being in holy living.

I. Foolish Security When Surrounded by Danger (Amos 6:1-6).

Surprise attack is always effective. Satan would lull us all to sleep in the assurance that "God's in his heaven—all's well with the world." God is in heaven and it is certain that ultimately He will reign over all, but just now the world is in the hands of the Wicked One (1 John 5:19).

The people of Amos' day, to whom the message was addressed, had come to the point where prosperity had made them at ease when they should have been active, foolishly secure when they should have been sacrificially serving their fellow men who were in need. The picture is astonishingly up-to-date. Today in our own land the Gold Coast and the slums rub elbows, but few of those who have plenty are concerned about those who have not. In the eyes of most people the purpose of gaining possessions is to relieve one from the necessity of work and to enable one to evade life's responsibilities.

America needs to awaken to its dangers, and we repeat that not the least of these is the liquor question. We must either win a victory over it, or it will destroy our people.

II. Spiritual Warfare—While at Peace with God (1 Pet. 2:11, 12).

Fleshly lusts, which war against the soul" (v. 11) are the object of serious concern on the part of every sincere Christian. There is a battle on, and the enemy of our soul knows how to make the abuse of the normal impulses and appetites of man his strong ally. The rush of modern life, the increasing use of stimulants, both natural and artificial, the very luxury in which many live, these things tend to give the flesh and its desires undue prominence, and not infrequently cause even God's children to fall into sin. We are called to a holy warfare, but that does not mean that we live in a constant turmoil. We are, after all, pilgrims and strangers in this world. Our citizenship is in heaven (Phil. 3:20) though we live on earth. In the heart we have peace, and that enables us to fight a good fight against the world, the flesh, and the devil.

III. Being the Will of God in a Self-willed World (1 Pet. 4:1-5).

Essentially there are two opposing principles operative in the lives of men—we either are controlled by God's will, or by self-will. The flesh is really man's personality controlled by his own self-will. It results in the kind of life described in verses 2 and 3. When a man becomes a Christian he should move over into the will of God.

Such a man may be regarded as strange, but as a matter of fact, men will recognize his godliness (see 1 Pet. 2:12). Dr. William H. Houghton tells of "a soldier who ultimately was made a Christian believer through seeing his companions make fun of another soldier, who was a believer in Christ. The thing that impressed him was the fact that though they made fun of this man, they left their money in his possession for safekeeping!" Do we have that kind of a testimony?

When He Doesn't Worry

His Satanic majesty never worries about the man who has come to the conclusion that there is no devil.

Use for Empty Cans: Make a Footstool

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THE other day a letter came with an unusual request. "I have made so many useful things by just following the pictures in your Book 1—SEWING, for the Home Decorator; and Book 2—Gifts, Novelties and Embroidery; I wonder if you could tell me some way to use empty cans?"

Fortunately we have a very long memory. There came to life the picture of a fat little girl sitting on a small footstool in a very Victorian parlor while her Great Aunt rocked and visited. And there was something about that footstool—yes it had cans inside. The cans were filled with sand to make the footstool heavy. The cover was red carpet with handles of the carpet material at the ends. So we saved six cans. We substituted a piece of upholstery material for carpet, and here is a step-by-step sketch of the footstool we made. It is a great success.

Now is the time to give your house a fresh start. Crisp new curtains; a bright slipcover; new lampshades; or an ottoman will do the trick. Make these things yourself. Mrs. Spears' Book 1—SEWING, for the Home Decorator, shows you how with step-by-step, easy to follow sketches. Book 2—Gifts, Novelties and Embroidery will give you a new interest for long winter evenings. It contains complete directions for making many useful things. Books are 25 cents each. If you order both books, a crazy-quilt leaflet is included FREE; it illustrates 36 authentic embroidery stitches in detail. Address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

SYNOPSIS

Young Rex Hale calls on Casper Kneeland, friend of his father, in New York, and finds him proudly successful, but strangely preoccupied. He tells Hale of his wife's death while insane, invites him for the summer to Halcyon Camp, his home on Long Island, and promises him he will be "useful" as his secretary there. Hale is joined at lunch by Fred Almsworth, an unpopular college mate, also at Halcyon, who leaves him with a feeling of unpleasant mystery. He is met at the train by Mrs. Wilbur Nash, whom he questions about the menage, and experiences a disturbing premonition. The premonition is barely eased by the comfortable hospitality of Hosanna, Kneeland's elderly sister, and her friend, Ruth Forbes, middle-aged spinster, in his room. Hale finds a rolled paper, printed, "This is a danger," Hale meets the rest of the strange group—Dr. Craig, psychiatrist friend of Rex's; Almsworth, nervous young son of Casper, and beautiful but moody Joan Kneeland, niece of the house. Almsworth drops in at his room, questions him about his reactions, and tells him of Bert's hopeless love for his heiress cousin, and that Mrs. Forbes is down and out. The whole group seems to get on each other's nerves. Later, Hale sees Hosanna furtively meeting a shabby man in the woods. The maid tells of the recent poisoning of a cat and dog. Mrs. Nash suggests that Almsworth has some hold on them. Hale finds in his room a clever sketch of skull and crossbones. Kneeland arrives for the weekend, also curious about Hale's reactions and asks him to be his substitute host, a "life of the party," and meanwhile try to solve the mystery of the behavior of them all. Bert confides in Hale his growing annoyance at Craig's nightly visits and endless talks of cadavers, parts of which he preserves in his locked laboratory, and Hale advises the boy to discourage the friend of Bert's. Another sketch of a cobra is collected for Hale, with the caption, "Why not for this?" He writes to two famous psychiatrists, collects fingerprints from the notes and sketches, and drives into New York to get the first analysis, call on two doctors, and establish some contacts for information on Almsworth and Craig. George Stuyvesant, college friend, confirms Almsworth's reputation as a parasite.

Hale continued, "I'd like to ask you about another guest there—Mrs. Spencer Forbes. Do you know her?"
"But Spencer Forbes? Of course I know her. Who doesn't know her," replied Stuyvesant. "She's a pal of my mother's. She often comes to the house. I rather like her myself. She's good fun, if you get her in the right mood. Four or five cocktails usually do it. The things I've heard that woman say! What did you want to know about Ruth Spencer Forbes?" he ended more seriously.
"I suppose you know she's on the financial rocks. Almost everyone is, just now. But I think her position is worse than most."
"Yes, someone spoke of that. She's spending the summer with Miss Hosanna Kneeland."
Stuyvesant nodded.
"I've heard of her. Ruth picks 'em up wherever she finds 'em. She's like Almsworth in that respect, very democratic. I suppose Miss Kneeland has always bowed down before Ruth, and Ruth has taken it like Buddha on a shrine. She would. That reminds me of something else. Isn't there an heiress of sorts in the Kneeland family—a girl called June or Joan or something?"
"There is."
"And is she easy on the eyes?" Stuyvesant spoke enthusiastically. "I met her twice last winter. I wanted to meet her oftener but she dropped out of sight in the spring. Is it her house you're visiting?"
"It's her uncle's Camp, but she's there."
"You're in luck," Stuyvesant said simply. "Say, old man, couldn't you get me down there for a weekend?"
"I'll suggest it to her," Hale smiled.
The waiter was clearing the table for the salad. The two young men ate their luncheons and talked of other things. Then Stuyvesant jumped to his feet.
"I'm off," he announced, "but I've got to see more of you. I hope I've told you what you want. How about my putting you up at the Engineers' Club? Would that be useful?"
"Very much so. Thanks. It might be convenient to have some place I can use for town appointments. You're treating me mighty well, Stuyvesant. I won't forget it."
"What's your present address?"
Hale gave him the address and telephone number of the Kneeland town house, and the Camp address as well. The two young men faced each other rather self-consciously.
"Don't drop out of sight again," Stuyvesant said.
"You bet I won't." They shook hands enthusiastically.
Doctor Gordon Dewar had made the appointment with more than resignation. "I'll see you right after my office hours," he promised. "Not that there will be many in the office. Most of my patients are going off their heads these days without my help."
He chuckled and Hale liked the sound. Here, he hoped, was a man who would "open up." But Doctor Dewar's opening up was cautious. Indeed, almost at Hale's first words, he changed from a rosy-faced and somewhat exuberant man-about-town to a canny Scot with suspicious eyes.
"All I want, Doctor," Hale began briskly, "is to put a hypothetical case to you. Granting that a certain doctor is doing so and so, what would be the penalty in your profession if he were caught at it?"

"You'll have to be a lot more definite than that, my friend," Doctor Dewar said curtly.
"I expect to be. Here's the hypothetical situation. Assume that I'm writing a play around it, and need some information about the ethics of the medical profession in such a case."
"Ah," the doctor looked relieved but still cautious.
Hale talked for ten minutes. At the end Doctor Dewar nodded slowly.
"It's a good situation," he admitted. "Dramatic, and all that. It's the sort of thing that's more apt to happen in life than in the drama. Playwrights are afraid of turning the screw too far. Life is never afraid of doing that. It's doing it all the time." His caution returned. "You understand that I can't be quoted in any way or even mentioned in connection with a case of that sort."

"Given the conditions I've suggested, what would be the procedure for the innocent bystander who is watching them?"
"H-m-m-m." It was the doctor's turn to talk, and he did it. Hale listened, put questions, made a few notes. At the end of twenty minutes he got up and held out his hand.
"Thanks," he said gratefully. "You've given me just what I needed."
The doctor returned the grip. Hale went away optimistically. He was still walking in dark places, but light was breaking through and at least he had one destination in sight. It was fifteen minutes past four. He called up the second psychiatrist and had another break.
The second psychiatrist was a different type from the first. He was impressed by Hale's letter from Doctor Kingsbury, the psychiatrist, and obviously proud of his brief association with him. Hale suspected him of being a bit of a medical snob. Like Dewar he attached much importance to Kingsbury's assertion that Hale's discretion could be relied upon. After a little fencing the two men got down to brass tacks. Yes, Doctor Hitchcock knew Doctor Craig. Then all the unhelpful data Hale had expected—Craig's fine training, his medical connections and the like.
"All that being granted," Hale asked Doctor Hitchcock, "why isn't he more popular? Why hasn't he any friends?"
Hitchcock was ready to answer that.
"He's too young, for one thing," he pointed out. "For another, he's too self-centered. Doesn't care for friends. He hasn't time for them. He considers his own time very valuable—much more valuable than some of us think it is," he smiled. "He has dropped hints that he's on the track of something important. He's corresponding with some bigwig in Vienna, but he doesn't say who it is."
"What about his character as you see it?"
"Ambitious—rather abnormally so. Ruthless, I'd say, in going after what he wants. That's all I know about him. Part of that is theory."
Hale was satisfied. He had put a wholly different problem to Hitchcock from the one presented to Dewar. He had got what he wanted from both. He returned to the building that held Almsworth's office and again interviewed the elevator operator. No, Mr. Almsworth had not been in the building that day. The operator didn't expect him. He had been there last Thursday. He never came more than once a week these days and often he didn't show up for two or three weeks.
"When he does show up you won't feel obliged to mention that a red-headed chap has been asking questions about him, will you?"
The operator grinned, frowning the additional half dollar he had received, and said he wouldn't. Rex went back to the bureau he had visited that morning. He left for fingerprinting the slip of paper Almsworth had given him in the medical library. It had been luck to get that. He also had his own fingerprints made.

"I've numbered all those prints very carefully," he said. "Be mighty careful about the numbers in your reports. Mark any later specimens I send you by consecutive following figures. Express yourself in your written reports so a layman can understand you. I've got a lot to learn about this sort of thing."
Hale next made his way to Casper Kneeland's town house. It was a "brownstone front" on a street just off the Avenue, in the Sixties, and much like a dozen other brownstone houses in its neighborhood.

They had entered a front bedroom on the second floor. Miss Kneeland's portrait, painted by Wayman Adams, faced them from a commanding position above the mantel.
"Ah feckon," George suggested thoughtfully, "Mist' Kneeland, he meant bath-rooms."
"Maybe he did. Whose room is this?"
"It's jest for comp'ny, suh. That's why Miss Joan's picture's here. Miss Joan, she don't like that picture no-how."
"That settles that. Is this the room you're putting me into? If it is, hustle along one of Mr. Kneeland's discarded bathrobes. I'm a busy man, George, and the responsibilities of life are pressing upon me. Step lively."
George returned, dropped the bathrobe over the foot of the bed and factually retired.
When Rex had bathed, shaved and re-dressed he was a giant refreshed. He had not quite decided what to do with his evening. Now he suddenly resolved to dine at Maxim's and see a cheerful play. There were several good hold-overs from the spring season.
He carried out this program and enjoyed it. When he returned to the Kneeland house a little after eleven and started upstairs he saw a line of light under the door of a room George had described as "Mist' Kneeland's lady's." Simultaneously the door opened and Kneeland looked out.
"That you, my boy?" he called.
"Come in a minute. I hope George is making you comfortable," he added carelessly, as Hale took the chair he offered.
"Altogether too much so," Hale testified. "I'm getting to be a sybarite. I ought to be working with a few mule-teams on the side of some Andalusian mountain, to bring me back to normal."
Kneeland shook his head.
"Grab everything you can get while the grabbing is good," he advised. "That's my motto. There will be plenty of times when you can't get what you want."
"All right, sir," Hale agreed briskly. "What I want now is to ask you a few questions."
"What kind of questions? If there are many of them you'd better light up and have a drink before you begin to shoot."
"There will be many, after that lead," Hale said firmly. He helped himself to a cigar from the box Kneeland indicated.
"What I want," he said after the two men had lighted up, "is your authority to act for you at Halcyon Camp in any serious emergency that may come up when you're not there."
Kneeland looked startled.
"Are you expecting an emergency?"
"It's always possible."
"Well, give me a line on it."
"I can't do that, sir."
"Why not?"
"Because, to be frank, I'm afraid you might spill the beans. You might see something and go off at half-cock before the time was ripe. Since you have put me in charge of this investigation, I feel justified in asking you to give me a free hand."
Kneeland frowned and savagely bit off the end of his cigar.
"That's a large order—and I don't like mysteries."
"I know you don't, sir. That's why you asked me to look into this one."
"And there is one! You're sure of that?"
"I'm pretty sure of it. But I can't prove it unless the person back of it gives himself away."
(TO BE CONTINUED)

"Who doesn't know the poor old girl?" His ring at the bell was answered with deliberation by a middle-aged colored man neatly dressed and presentably bald.
"I'm stopping here tonight," Rex said. "Mr. Kneeland telephoned you about it, I suppose."
"Yes, suh."
"Here's my luggage," said Hale as he entered.
He took from his pocket, and held out, a comb, a box of safety razors, a tooth brush, and a small cake of soap, each article chastely wrapped in cellophane. He had just purchased the collection in a corner drug-store. "My plan," he added sedately, "is to escape in a sheet if the house catches fire tonight."
"If you will just come this way—" The man led him up the staircase.
"What's your name?" Rex asked as they went.
"George Davis, suh."
"Well, George Davis, there are those who like to wrap themselves in silk pajamas on a night like this, but I'm not one of them. There's no one but you in the house, Mr. Kneeland said."
"No, suh."
George warmed into hospitality as he led the guest along an upper hall.
"Mist' Kneeland say you all can have anything you want," he announced, throwing open a door.
"All right, thanks," Hale said gratefully. "I'll take that portrait of Miss Joan on this wall. It's a good one."

New Zealand Women Propose Government Agency to Handle the Servant Problem

The death of household servants is as annoying in New Zealand as it is in Britain, so the women organizations of the Dominion got together and have suggested a remedy to the government, according to the Christchurch correspondent of the Observer of London.
It is proposed to train a national corps of domestic workers, to be paid and hired out by the government. Employers would reimburse the government according to their means.
A special committee has been formed to look into the whole question. It is called the Household Service campaign committee, and is representative of all the leading women's organizations.
The opinion is widely held among New Zealand women that the status of domestic workers must be raised considerably if a good supply of efficient workers is to be maintained.
The committee proposes that the government should "recruit" a national domestic service corps of young women agreeable to entering the domestic service profession. Under the scheme recruits would be asked to undergo whatever training is considered desirable at a technical school, and when they "graduated" would be guaranteed continuity of employment as long as their services were satisfactory.

The government's domestic service department would insure that living and working conditions were up to standard.
Many Odd Street Names
Paris has the Street of the Fishing Cat, the Street of Bad Boys and the Street of the Little Pebbles. At Besancon, in the Jura mountains, a square bears the name of Bacchus. At Epinal, in the Vosges region, is the Allee of Vain Effort, while in Toulouse there is a thoroughfare known as Jealousy street. Another has the unusual appellation of Street of Watch Your Step; still others, the Street of the Four Billiards, the Street of the Three Banquets, and finally the Street of the Thirteen Winds. In another part of France, in Beauvais, famed for its cathedral, is the Street of the Salt Attic and the Street of Climb With Regret. In Strasbourg is a street with a smelly name, at least, for it is known as Garlic street; there is also a Square of the Milk-Fed Pig.

Metrazol treatment may replace insulin-shocks in treating mentally ill.
By Dr. James W. Barton

WHEN a leg or arm is so badly injured or poisoned that life is threatened, the patient's family does not hesitate to permit it to be removed by surgery. When the mind is so badly afflicted that the patient is unable to take his place in the community and the physician wishes to use the new treatment—large doses of insulin—that causes shock which is sometimes followed by a cure, the family are often afraid to permit their loved one to undergo this method of treatment. Despite brilliant results in many cases, there have likewise been many failures and also other cases where the improvement lasted but a short time.

Dr. Barton

The most satisfactory results have been obtained where the mental symptoms have existed for months instead of years. What may prove effective in the treatment of these mental or "behavior" cases is metrazol—a heart and lung stimulant, which is now being tested in various parts of the world. Dr. A. M. Wyllie in Glasgow Medical Journal reports his results in a series of 20 cases of dementia praecox. These patients live in a persistent dream state which totally unfits them for the work, cares and duties of life. Their scheme or system of life satisfies them, however.

Test Cases Show Improvement.
There were 8 women and 12 men in Dr. Wyllie's series of cases and physical improvement was observed in 17. Those that were very much underweight gained weight rapidly, gaining from 14 to 21 pounds in two months. Their appetites improved and their complexions became healthier. These 17 patients also showed mental improvement, that is, they showed more common sense, more ability to face the real facts of life. One patient who had been mute for 10 years was enabled to speak. The others became less absorbed in themselves and spoke more freely. Some of the patients who were previously idle were induced to occupy themselves. A patient with profound melancholia greatly improved; two with persistent stupor showed slight improvement.
I am recording the above results so that families and patients themselves may be willing to undergo this treatment if so advised by their physicians. It is certainly worth while. "Owing to the simplicity and safety of the metrazol treatment, it may replace treatment by insulin shock."

Nervousness, Tension Disrupt Normal Working

A large industrial organization in an endeavor to find out why so many of their leading employees failed to keep their work at a high level and finally dropped out of the organization, engaged a professor of economics to investigate. He found that while domestic unhappiness was a big factor, the great cause of failure to continue work on a high standard was ill health.
In other words, an individual with brains and ambition can go only as far with his work or career as his body will take him. And the unfortunate part of this lack of health is that so much of it is due to nervousness and tension which disrupt the normal working of the various organs.
Recently in the Journal of Nervous and Mental Diseases, Sir Farguar Buzzard, professor of medicine, University of Oxford, said that one-third of all the sickness in Great Britain was due to causes that were not really organic. If he should be placed at the head of a great business organization, the first thing he would do would be to take on a whole-time medical psychologist to study his employees and their conditions in health and deal with all cases of nervous disorder as they arose. The sick roll would rapidly become smaller.
Health of Worker Important.
Fortunately, medical schools are now so fully aware of the importance of the health of the worker to himself and to his employer that more time is given to this subject than ever before. So helpful have been the findings by laboratory examinations—blood count, X-ray, kidney, liver and gall bladder, and other tests—that there was danger that the body, not the mind, was receiving all the attention. As an upset mind can cause an upsetment of the various organs and the body processes to the extent that heart, blood vessel, stomach and other symptoms occur, it is only common sense that the upsetment of mind should be first treated, if these symptoms are to be made to disappear.

Walking on the Highway
IT'S an art, this walking along the highway, and not everybody who does it lives to tell about it afterward. At least a third of the pedestrians fatally injured in rural districts are struck while walking along the roadway, according to figures of the National Safety Council. And about two-thirds of these were walking with their backs to approaching traffic.
In many places, sidewalks are being built parallel to the highways to segregate motor and pedestrian traffic, but in places where they aren't yet built, the council has these four suggestions to offer:
1—Walk on the left side of the road.
2—At night, carry a light.
3—Wear light clothing or at least some article of clothing that's white, to make it easier for the motorist to see you.
4—Walk on the shoulder of the road instead of the pavement, where possible, to keep from forcing cars into the path of oncoming traffic.

Sentinels of Health
Don't Neglect Them!
Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is a constantly producing waste matter. The kidneys must remove from the blood, if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide ailments. One may suffer nagging backaches, persistent headaches, attacks of dizziness, getting up at night, swelling, painless under the eyes, frequent urination, all warn out.
Present, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.
The recognized and proper treatment is a domestic medicine that keeps the kidneys getting rid of excess poisonous body waste. Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are sold at all drug stores.

Writing obituaries is one of the tasks of a country editor that is peculiar to itself and different from anything else. No matter how friendly the deceased, no matter how well you knew him, or how many of his weaknesses you knew, you may send him to his rest an honest, upright citizen whose memory is cherished by hosts of friends.

With dripping tears we have called the man who beat his children a kind and loving parent. Only those who knew the truth realized that it was a fabrication.
