Napoleon And Hitler

To those who fear that Hitler will soon dominate the entire world and also to show that Divine Providence never decreed that there should or could be a "one man show" in this world, we offer as an example, the comparison between the once famed Napoleon and the present Hitler.

Napoleon was the world's greatest example of will-to-power and perhaps without an equal in world history. It has been said of him, that he leaped the Mediterranean, dashed across the desert, threw himself against the gate of the Orient and shattered its rusted hinges after having endured unopened for 500 years. He smote slothful Europe and its medieval systems crumbled to dust. He infused armies, lawyers, artists, bulldozers, with the force of the revolution. At the wave of his hand, codes were formulated, arches built, roads made and canals were dug according to his will.

At the age of 26, he was the sole ruler of Italy. At 28, he was the despot of Egypt. At 30, he was the dictator of France and the master of Europe at 32.

With all his power—such as riches, success, glory and fame, he was called "the great unloved" of that time. He was master of the entire world at one time, save that of England, which he termed the "wart on the nose of Europe," and which was destined to become his downfall. With all his power, yet it was said of him by one of his best friends, "Napoleon, grand, gloomy, peculiar, sits on his throne a shattered hermit, wrapped in the solitude of his own ambition."

When the world war ended it left the German people without a leader. Hitler was quick to see the condition and grasping the situation and being an idol of the lower class of people, he caused an election to be held at which he was chosen as a leader as a temporary move to restore some sort of government to the people who were scattered like sheep gone astray. Seizing the reins, he took advantage of the weakness of the situation, he made laws which best suited him, formulated plans for his self-gratification and had those who dared to oppose him put to death.

Arising from the paper-hanging occupation to the dictatorship of a nation; he soon had the people of Germany entirely under his thumb. History's pages of that nation since Hitler gained power are stained with human blood. By excessive taxation and confiscation of what money and property the people had, more especially the Jews, he used it, not to feed the people but to increase the army strength to the extent that his first move of aggression was to take over Austria unmolested. This gave him courage to make the same grab on Czechoslovakia. Then his recent Polish aggression, which up to now is his latest move.

As Napoleon's downfall was at Waterloo, so Hitler's "one man show" will end and that will happen sooner than the hand of Providence and Napoleon's doom at Waterloo. In his last speech, Hitler said, quote: "A stupid world will soon see and feel the domination of German arms." Hitler has aped Napoleon pretty much as John L. Lewis has aped Hitler, as far as he can go, for it must be remembered, that although undermined by unseen foes like Hitlerism, this land of ours will continue to be America. # A Picture by an Obscure Newspaper Artist Inspired Thomas Buchanan Read to Write An American Classic—'Sheridan's Ride'

SHERIDAN'S RIDE TO THE FRONT—From a drawing by Sel Eytling Jr., which appeared first in Harper's Weekly in 1864 and was reprinted in 1867 with a statement by Thomas Buchanan Read saying that it inspired him to write his famous poem "Sheridan's Ride."

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

SEVENTY-FIVE years ago this month occurred an event which is familiar to every American—"Sheridan's Ride." For it was on the morning of October 19, 1864, that Gen. Phil Sheridan, famous cavalry leader in the Union army, was aroused from sleep in a house in Winchester, Va., by a staff officer who reported heavy artillery firing from the direction of Cedar Creek, where his army was stationed.

Thereupon "Fighting Phil" mounted his coal-black charger, Rienzi, and "rode toward the sound of the guns" to find that his army was being routed by a surprise attack by Gen. Jubal A. Early of the Confederate cavalry. How he checked the flight of his disorganized troops, gathered up the stragglers, formed a new line of battle and transformed what seemed to be a disastrous defeat into a Union victory is too familiar a story to need retelling here.

It was one of the most dramatic incidents of the War Between the States but it was not improbable that the memory of Sheridan's exploit might have become dimmed through the passing of the years had it not been for a poet. For, just as Henry Wadsworth Longfellow helped immortalize Paul Revere by writing a poem about his famous ride at the opening of the Revolution, so did Thomas Buchanan Read perform a similar service for Phil Sheridan.

But there is another man who should be mentioned along with Read in connection with this famous poem. You probably have never heard of him, for he was a "special artist" for an illustrated, weekly newspaper and, although he helped make a pictorial record of the greatest civil war the world had ever known, his name is all but forgotten now. But if you will leaf through the files of Harper's Weekly until you come to the September 14, 1867, issue, you will find reproduced there the picture shown above and with it this statement:

"We reproduce on this page the interesting engraving of 'Sheridan's Ride to the Front,' published three years ago; and in connection with it we give the spirited verses of T. Buchanan Read, now well-known and admired throughout the country. It will be seen by the following note from the distinguished author that the poem was inspired by the picture of Mr. Eytling:

New York, Aug. 20, 1867.
Dear Sir: In reply to your question, I give me pleasure to acknowledge that the spirited picture which you published as 'Sheridan's Ride' inspired me with the seal impulse to write the poem.
Very respectfully,
T. BUCHANAN READ.

From this it is evident that Sel Eytling, Jr., who was one of Harper's Weekly's "special artists" during the Civil war period deserves some of the credit for the poem. And it is quite likely that he portrayed that historic scene more accurately than did Read, who was an artist as well as a poet. You will notice in Read's painting of "Sheridan's Ride," which is reproduced with this article, that he shows "Little Phil" impeccably dressed in his general's uniform, with his black hat set firmly on his head as he waves his sword in his right hand while his charger, Rienzi, seems to be suspended in mid-air, with all four feet off the ground.

SHERIDAN'S RIDE—From the painting by Thomas Buchanan Read, author of the famous poem by that name.

According to the testimony of men who saw Sheridan as he dashed toward Cedar Creek on October 19, 1864, the reality was quite different from Read's pictured version of it. Instead of being a veritable fashion-plate of icer, Sheridan and his mount were dust-covered and grimy. Most of the time during his ride he was carrying his cap in his hand because he always had difficulty in keeping a hat on his "round, bullet-like head"! In another respect Eytling's picture is undoubtedly more accurate historically than Read's. It shows Sheridan with a full beard, instead of a moustache, and photographs taken during the Civil war confirm Eytling's accuracy in this detail, as well as the detail of his wearing a cap instead of a hat for his headgear.

If Read was inaccurate as a painter, he was equally careless

SHERIDAN'S RIDE

Up from the South at break of day,
Bringing to Winchester fresh dismay,
The affrighted air with a shudder bore,
Like a herald in haste, to the chieftain's door,
The terrible grumble, and rumble, and roar,
Telling the battle was on once more,
And Sheridan twenty miles away.
And wider still those billows of war
Thundered along the horizon's bar;
And louder yet into Winchester rolled
The roar of that red sea uncontrolled,
Making the blood of the listener cold.
As he thought of the stake in that fiery fray,
And Sheridan twenty miles away.
But there is a road from Winchester town,
A good broad highway leading down;
And there, through the flush of the morning light,
A steed as black as the steeds of night,
Was seen to pass, as with eagle flight,
As if he knew the terrible need;
He stretched away with his utmost speed;
Hills rose and fell; but his heart was gay,
With Sheridan fifteen miles away.
Still sprung from those swift hoofs, thundering South,
The dust, like smoke from a cannon's mouth;
Or the trail of a comet, sweeping faster and faster,
Foreboding to traitors the doom of disaster.
The heart of the steed, and the heart of the master
Were beating like prisoners assaulting their walls,
Impatient to be where the battle-field calls;
Every nerve of the charger was strained to full play,
With Sheridan only ten miles away.

T. Buchanan Read

Under his spurning feet the road
Like an arrowy Alpine river flowed,
And the landscape sped away behind
Like an ocean flying before the wind,
And the steed, like a bark fed with furnace ire,
Swept on, with his wild eyes full of fire.
But lo! he is nearing his heart's desire;
He is snuffing the smoke of the roaring fray,
With Sheridan only five miles away.

The first that the General saw were the groups
Of stragglers, and then the retreating troops,
What was done? what to do? a glance told him both,
Then striking his spurs, with a terrible oath,
He dashed down the line, 'mid a storm of huzzas,
And the wave of retreat checked its course there, because
The sight of the master compelled it to pause.
With foam and with dust the black charger was gray;
By the flash of his eye, and the red nostril's play,
He seemed to the whole great army to say,
"I have brought you Sheridan all the way
From Winchester, down to save the day!"

Hurrah! hurrah for Sheridan!
Hurrah! hurrah for horse and man!
And when their statues are placed on high,
Under the dome of the Union sky,
The American soldiers' Temple of Fame;

There with the glorious General's name,
Be it said, in letters both bold and bright,
"Here is the steed that saved the day,
By carrying Sheridan into the fray,
From Winchester, twenty miles away!"
—Thomas Buchanan Read.

THE TEMPTATION OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 4:1-11.
GOLDEN TEXT—For we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin.—Hebrews 4:15.

Temptation is the common lot of all mankind (I Cor. 10:13). The strongest and most noble of men are subject to it; angels were tempted, and our scripture reveals that even Jesus was tempted. We recognize that Jesus was tempted as the Messiah (vv. 3, 6) and as one without sin (Heb. 4:15), but it is also true that He was tempted in all points as we are, apart from sin, and that we may learn from His temptation how we may meet and be the victors over temptation.

I. What Is Temptation?
"Temptation is seduction to evil, solicitation to wrong. It stands distinguished from trial thus: trial tests, seeks to discover the man's moral qualities or character; but temptation persuades to evil, deludes, that it may ruin. God tries; Satan tempts" (A. M. Fairbairn).
Temptation is not sin, but yielding to temptation is sin. Luther said, "We cannot keep the birds from flying over our heads, but we can keep them from building nests in our hair." Temptation comes from within, that is, from our own lusts (James 1:13, 14). Satan also tempts us (Eph. 6:11). God may permit temptation as a means of proving our faith (James 1:2, 3).

II. How Temptation Works.
It is significant that the temptations of Jesus were along the threefold line of the temptations of Adam and Eve (Gen. 3:6) and the general threefold temptation of all men, namely, the lust of the flesh, the pride of life, and the lust of the eyes (I John 2:16). These three temptations really exhaust Satan's bag of tricks, but he can dress up these three fundamental temptations with almost endless variety.

He works
1. By appealing to the flesh (vv. 2, 3). He observes the normal appetites and desires of a man's body, excites them to a high degree, and then suggests an improper method of satisfying them. Hunger is normal and a sign of good health. Jesus had fasted forty days and Satan took advantage of that fact to suggest the use of His divine power to satisfy His hunger. This would involve a denial of His entire mission on earth, namely, the redemption of man by a divine person who had become a real man.

2. By appealing to pride (vv. 5, 6). Satan misapplied Scripture to tempt Jesus to presumption on the assumption that He was exercising faith. God had promised to keep Him "in all his ways" (Ps. 91:11). To cast himself down from the temple was not one of the ways in which Christ was called to walk. Satan comes to us with the same kind of temptation. If He cannot get us to forsake faith, he tempts us to become fanatical and to proudly substitute presumption for faith.

3. By appealing to the eyes (vv. 8, 9). By showing Christ the kingdoms of the world and offering them to Him by the short-cut of a brief act of worship rather than by the way of the cross, Satan tempted Him again. Here the devil showed his true desire that man should worship Him rather than God.

III. How to Meet Temptation (vv. 4, 7, 10).
1. By the right use of Scripture. If Jesus needed that weapon, how can we do without it? How can we use Scripture if we do not study it and hide it in our hearts?

2. By dependence on God. Every Scripture used by Jesus honored God. We cannot fight Satan in our own strength. To attempt to do so is to fall utterly. The real victory for the Christian is to bring Satan back to the cross where Christ won a decisive victory over him.

3. By denouncing Satan. Jesus sent him on his way. We may do the same in Jesus' name. It is always a serious error to try to argue with Satan or to engage in any discussion with him. Let us meet him with Scripture and with a "Get thee hence."
IV. The Result.
Satan left and angels came to minister to Christ. The overcoming of temptation results in peace, victory, and blessing. This is ever so in the life of the believer. Temptation overcome makes us stronger to meet the next temptation; and also enables us to help our weaker brethren.

Framing Our Lives.
Religion does not consist in the performance of certain ceremonial acts at specified times, outside which acts and times it has no place; but consists in framing our whole life, and all our acts, upon a distinct view of our position as created beings, charged by the fact of our creation, with duties both to our fellow creatures and to our Creator.
—Edward Denison.

Flowered Hat Came To Do Double Duty

A young matron found herself somewhat huddled by the number and variety of her engagements. One-day-in-particular she found troublesome, for she had to go first to a funeral service and then to a garden party. She solved the dress problem by wearing smart but sober clothes and taking in a hat box a flowered hat which, during the service, she placed in the vestry.
Her sense of quiet pleasure at this successful solution of the problem was somewhat marred, however, when the coffin was brought into church. For reposing in the center of the wreaths on the coffin was her flowered hat.

DO YOU LACK PEP?

Merfolk, Neb. — Mrs. Dora Greening, 206 N. 2nd St., says "My son, Clarence, was weak. He didn't have to see Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery long before his appetite was better. He is a present in every way. Buy it in liquid or tablet form at your drug store today. See how much more vigorous and 'peppy' you feel after using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery."

As Fortune Gives
Fortune takes least from him to whom she has given least.—Publius Syrus.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not get on their feet until they are in trouble. Impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.
Symptoms may be passing headache, persistent headache, swelling of the face, getting up at night, swelling, painless, under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of sleep and strength.
Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Doan's Pills, Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Speaking of Sports

Brown Bomber Well on Way to Second Million

By ROBERT McSHANE

HEAVYWEIGHT Champion Joe Louis, the lad who has been forced through lack of opponents to fight has-beens and second-raters since winning the crown from Jimmy Braddock in 1937, is well on his way to the financial heights attained by Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney.

The Brown Bomber, a Golden Gloves champion, turned professional in 1934. Since that time he has earned a grand total of $1,048,722 by knocking out 37 opponents, gaining decisions over 9, and being knocked out by one.

Jack Dempsey still has a comfortable lead in all-time ring earnings, however. The Manassa Mauler earned the amazing total of $2,712,079 in nine fights, thus completely dimming Louis' record.

Dempsey's Record

Dempsey's fight-by-fight ring earnings are worth listing. Present-day conditions are not conducive to $1,000,000 gates, but as a means of comparison here are the totals as compiled by Frank G. Menke, an outstanding sports authority: (Figures represent Dempsey's cut of the receipts for nine battles.)

Year	Opponent	Total
1919	Jess Willard	$ 27,000
1920	Billy Mike	55,000
1920	Bill Brennan	100,000
1921	Geo. Carpentier	300,000
1922	Tosa Gibbons	255,000
1923	Luis Firpo	470,000
1924	Gene Tunney	718,000
1927	Jack Sharkey	359,711
1927	Gene Tunney	425,000

Total $2,712,079

It must be remembered that Dempsey's era was the halcyon days of boxing. On September 22, 1927, the Tunney-Dempsey bout in Chicago drew an attendance of 104,943 people who paid $2,658,660 at the box office. Louis' biggest share of any gate amounted to $349,223, when he knocked out Schmeling.

JACK DEMPSEY

Tunney Retires

Gene Tunney earned $1,715,000 in the ring. His fortune was made in the short space of three years, dating from his first victory over Dempsey in 1927 until he retired in 1935.

Tunney won the championship from Dempsey in Philadelphia, September 23, 1926, on a 10-round decision. He gave Dempsey a return match in 1927 and retained his crown by again winning a 10-round decision. On July 21, 1928, Tunney scored a technical knockout over Tom Heenev, an Australian fighter, and announced his retirement.

It is extremely unlikely that Louis will ever reach Dempsey's all-time total. Dempsey's huge income was increased by his personality. One of boxing's most colorful characters, he commanded big prices for exhibition tours and from all extracurricular activities. Louis can't do that. He hasn't the showmanship and perhaps the inclination.

On April 1, 1935, after he had annexed the heavyweight crown, Louis earned $10,059 by knocking out Harry Thomas in the fifth round.

There's more than one reason for such a small championship purse. To begin with, money isn't as plentiful as it was back in the twenties. Perhaps the major reason is that Louis hasn't had a good match for far too long.

Bucky Harris had a one-day military career. He joined the army on November 10, 1918. The World war ended the next day. England's tenth ranking woman tennis player is Gem Hoising, a Chinese girl who has spent most of her 18 years in Great Britain. Lee Ramage, twice knocked out by Louis, will coach boxers at San Diego State college this fall. He'll also attend classes. Bob Feller has averaged almost seven strikeouts per game this season. Charles Brogan, promising left halfback candidate at the University of Detroit, is a native of Ireland. He came to the U. S. 10 years ago.

Hank Greenberg of the Detroit Tigers is the highest salaried player in baseball today. Joe DiMaggio will be the highest "salaried" in 1940. Paddy Driscoll of Marquette is probably the best golfer among college football coaches. He plays in the low 70's. Minnesota claims it will be the first school whose football games are flashed on a television screen. Still standing is the stallion trotting record of 1:58 for the mile, established by Lee Axworthy 25 years ago. Elmer Layden of Notre Dame rates Ducky Pond of Yale one of the finest all-around men he has met in football. Oklahoma football teams, under the guidance of Tom Stidham, have won 15 games, lost three and tied two since he took charge two years ago. Spain's seven surviving golf professionals have appealed to the pros of other nations for clubs, bags and balls. Equipment is unavailable in Spain. Fifty sets of curling stones, consigned to Canadian curlers, went down with the ill-fated Athena. Max Baer, who probably shouldn't, is wearily climbing the comeback trail. Tarzan Taylor, Marquette's line coach, has a standing order with a florist to deliver cut flowers to his desk twice a week.

George Halas predicts that Joe Maniaci, Chicago Bear fullback, will prove as great a field goal kicker as Jack Manders.

IF THE public likes Lon Chaney Jr. in "Of Mice and Men" he's going to be one of the happiest young men in Hollywood. For he's severely handicapped in trying to carve a career for himself. As the son of a famous father he is expected to be better than average; what would be success for somebody else is just a passing grade for him.

He tried out for the lead in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," and didn't realize how lucky he was not to get it until he saw a revival of the film recently. "It made me realize more sharply than ever how good my father was," he remarked. "And what a tough time anybody will have trying to live up to the part. Anything I might have done would have been a pale carbon copy." Yet he had the courage to try to get that role, which many people consider one of the greatest screen performances his father ever gave. Lon Jr. is hoping that, as "Lennie" in "Of Mice and Men," he can take a long stride forward on the path that leads to success as great as his father's.

Gridiron Topnotchers

This continues a series of articles featuring outstanding football players from schools throughout the nation. Watch their records during the coming season.

When football coaches dream their mental peregrinations center around players like Lon Brock, Purdue university senior halfback, who runs, kicks, passes, runs back punts, is a fine blocker and in fact does everything but shovel snow off the playing field.

Lou came to Purdue from Stamford, Kan., and at the very outset of his sophomore year made it clear that his football career was extremely bright by breaking into the starting Boiler-maker lineup as running mate to the famous Cecil Isbell.

Brock's sensational runs, runbacks and punts last season had Purdue fans talking to themselves. Opposing coaches grant that his great play was one of the chief factors in Purdue's past great season.

He is noted principally for his running and kicking, along with his blocking, but is also a dangerous passer.

The offensive setup of several games last year was completely changed when Brock pulled Purdue out of deep holes with a great punt return and then a return punt to coffin corner on the succeeding series.

As for running, Brock averaged more than six yards each attempt against such lines as Minnesota, Fordham, Ohio State, Iowa, Wisconsin, Detroit and Butler. Against Ohio State he gained 98 yards in 12 attempts.

Twenty-one years old, Brock stands exactly six feet tall and weighs about 190 pounds. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Early Football Players

Used Genuine 'Pigskins'

DENVER.—Webster's dictionary gives one meaning of the word "pigskin" as a football (usually made of cowhide). Slang dictionaries even include such words as "pigskinner" and "pigskinology" for a football player and the art and science of the game. The first chapter of Stag and Stout's book "Touchdown" is entitled "Pigskin," and the authors mention using the bladders of slaughtered hogs, inflated by blowing through a quill, for football during the years just following the Civil war, says the Rocky Mountain Herald. They go on to declare: "They were the only footballs we knew, and such usually had been the football as far back as it can be traced

Strange Facts

Adam's Day Slow in Anger Spotted Aristocrats

The world's 250,000,000 Moslems observe Friday as their Sabbath because, according to Mohammed, this was the day Adam was created, the day he entered and was also expelled from Paradise, the day of his repentance, the day of his death and the day he will be resurrected.

Chameleons are "slow-motion" fighters. When two enemies start a battle, many minutes, even hours, pass between each thrust and parry. Sometimes the only way that one can tell a fight is in progress is by the color of their skins, which have turned black with rage.

Increasing age diminishes attendance at the movies to an astonishing degree. Surveys indicate that the number who no longer attend increases from 50 per cent at the age of forty to 75 per cent at sixty to 98 per cent at eighty.

Although about nine thousand members of Britain's aristocracy and sporting world are admitted to the Royal Enclosure at Ascot, England, at each meeting, thousands are excluded because they are in bankruptcy, involved in a divorce, owe too much money to a bookmaker or have not been presented at a royal court.—Collier's.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

Every one who has ever lived in the country knows the possibilities of unbleached muslin. The source of supply there is flour and food sacks but even purchased by the yard it is an inexpensive, sturdy material for aprons and many other things.

If you have friends who share your enthusiasm for interesting aprons, plan and cut them in a group; then trimmings may be exchanged and every piece-bag will produce something.

The diagram shown here gives you cutting dimensions for a skirt part of a plain little apron and shows how to shape the waistline. Belts for the bibless type are rather wide now—two or two and a half inches finished. Ties are generally 4-inches wide and as long as you like. Now, do be daring when you come to pockets or adding a bib. Try an idea of your own. These gay unbleached muslin aprons are just suggestions to get you started.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The new Sewing Booklet which Mrs. Spears has prepared for our readers, contains thirty-two new and original ideas for homemakers. To get one of these useful booklets, simply address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaine St., Chicago, Ill., with name and address, and 10 cents in coin; booklet will be postpaid by return mail.

Splicing Your Cookies.—Add one teaspoon of cinnamon and one-half a teaspoon of cloves to your favorite cookie recipe. The two spices will convert an ordinary cookie dough into something delightfully different.

Metallic Scarfs.—Silver and gold embroidered scarfs will not tarnish when packed away if wrapped in black paper.

Tight Curtain Springs.—To tighten springs in curtain rollers, hold the rollers firmly and with pliers tighten the end springs.

Cleaning Felt Hat.—To clean a light felt hat brush well to remove all dust, then cover with french chalk. Let stand for several hours before brushing off.

Rest Your Ferns.—After maiden hair fern has grown all during the year it begins to turn brown. This is a sign it needs rest as ferns, like all other plants, want and take their season for rest. Repot it and set in a shady place, water sparingly until a good growth of fronds appear, then give more water.

Shiny Windows.—A lump of starch dissolved in the water with which windows are to be washed will make the glass shine.

Prudent A friend of Browne—recently engaged—was chiding him on his extravagance.

"You know, old chap," he said, "you're a spendthrift, or lazy, or something. Every time you have anything to say to your girl, you phone her. Why not write? It must be costing you a lot, telephoning all that distance so often."

"Well, it does in a way," Browne admitted, "but she can't tie telephone calls with blue ribbon and store 'em in a drawer!"

Boring Rain Joan—On a wet night don't you get tired of hearing the everlasting pitter patter? "Yes; it never rains but it bores."

Repeal Bill Would Extend Credit To Belligerents Buying in U. S.

Danger of Getting Into Same Mess Over War Debts That Followed World War; Added Authority Given President in Bill Carries Potential Danger.

By WILLIAM BRUCKART

WNU-Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—As the full dress debate of the so-called neutrality bill continues in the senate, numerous phases and angles and incidents have cropped up and demanded attention.

The bill that was reported by the senate committee on foreign relations, I believe, must be accepted as a sincere effort. Sixteen of the twenty-three members of the committee believed it, or believed it should have a chance to be discussed fully and freely.

Publication of the text of the bill, however, shows some provisions that have gone far to load the guns of those who want to keep an arms embargo in force.

Many Object to Giving President Extreme Power.

Another section of the bill that was not well advertised in advance is a section giving President Roosevelt additional authority during threats of war.

Debate has made it appear, thus far at least, that the original "cash and carry" sections constitute a strong bulwark against our entanglement.

Pan-American Conference Does a Worth-While Job

While all of these things have been going on in Washington, the sessions of the conference at Panama City ought not be overlooked.

So-Called Neutrality Bill Shows Mistakes Can Be Made

It probably is an impossibility to "legislate" a nation into being neutral. It is like legislating people into being good.

bargo repeal mistakenly assume that substitution of the cash and carry provisions will let us rest in peace.

That lack of consideration of details of this phase is a great mistake can be proved by the shudders of business interests when sharp eyes and analytical minds discovered what the section, as written by the committee, would do to commerce in this part of the world.

The trouble is that no one man or group of men can visualize all of the possible contingencies and consequences of a piece of far-reaching and rigid legislation.

Monroe Doctrine Must Be Given Consideration

Now, it might be said that these phases of the problem are matters that concern only "business interests" and big business interests, at that.

It should be said to President Roosevelt's credit that, thus far, he has not openly put the pressure on his congressional leaders for passage of the bill without changes.

"Ten Terrible Seconds"

HELLO, EVERYBODY:

This is a yarn about a couple of ropes. The yarn—well—it's told by Herman R. Wallin of Brooklyn, N. Y.

One of those ropes chisels into this story solely on the strength of the fact that it—well—that it just wasn't. If we mentioned it here, it's only to post it as A. W. O. L. at a time when it was needed for guard duty.

And now that I've told you the plot of today's little drama, let's bring in Herman Wallin—and on with the show.

Today, Herman is a radio operator on the S. S. Birkenhead, but this adventure happened in July, 1926, when Herman was occupying the radio shack of the S. S. Cornelia plying between New York and the West Indies.

Herman's Radio Shack Located on After Part of Boat Deck.

It was a dark night, and Herman was on the lower deck, making his way up to the boat deck where his room was located.

He went through an open space between the two boat davits—and walked overboard.

When dawn came up on this deck, and then in the daytime only, no ropes had been stretched across the openings between the davits.

That missing rope was quite a problem. You know they don't have any open lights on the top deck of a ship because they interfere with the vision of the officer on watch up on the bridge.

And then came the ten terrible seconds—the worst moments in Herman's life. It felt as if time had been slowed down like one of those slow-motion movies—seemed as though that dive from the top deck was taking a year.

Below him now were only the smooth steel plates of the ship's side, straight down to the water line. Herman thought of the propeller, thrashing the water at the ship's stern and remembered hearing that anyone falling overboard close to the side inevitably gets sucked into the vortex of the churning water and chopped to mince meat.

His feet were dragging in the water when he stopped. Herman clutched at that rope until he thought his arm would come off.

Butter Is Tax Payment Medium For Natives of Isolated Tibet

World's Loftiest State Has Queer Religious Ceremonies.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

"Dead Lama Causes Yak Butter Crisis" is the burden of news from faraway Tibet. And what, it may be asked, has a lama—dead or alive—got to do with the price of butter?

As much as Christmas has to do with the price of fir trees, or Easter with the egg market. For Tibet, the isolated land of "Shangri-La," is a theocracy ruled by the high priest of Lamaism, and Lamaism uses yak butter where other governments use gold braid, precious metals, and fireworks.

On the high cold plateaus of the world's loftiest state, the Tibetans follow the Lamaistic faith of Buddhism which discourages slaughter of either man or beast.

Servants Use Goat Butter. The Tibetan social scale could be measured by a butter barometer. Butter from the milk of sheep and goats is rejected by all except servants, and some of it can be slipped into the butter bags contributed to the government as taxes.

The wealthy and the officials in Tibet can dine sumptuously after the Chinese fashion, on varied foods imported over mountain passes two miles above sea level. Valley dwellers in fertile mountain-sheltered pockets have home-grown vegetables and even fruits. But the poorer Tibetans, especially on the unbroken grasslands of the north, subsist on butter kneaded into firmness, carried about in woolly bags of sheepskin for several years.

TIBET'S GIFT to America is a few specimens of the giant panda. A cub panda arriving in this country for placement in a New York zoo is shown in the picture above. These animals are very rare and live in the most inaccessible regions of Tibet. Zoo goers have made them a favorite for the animals' antics resemble that of a huge, live "teddy bear."

But Tibet is the country where you eat your butter and burn it too. Butter lamps are as essential to the ritual of the Tibetan churches as candles are to other religions.

Made Without Churns. Wives of the yak herders make butter without churns, rolling day-old milk in leather bags until the yellow lump forms.

Crowning its year-round service for countless everyday uses, butter becomes the center of attraction at the Tibetan winter religious festival which combines many features of Christmas, New Year's, and the Fourth of July.

Siam Changes Nation's Name To 'Thailand'

Western Political Ideas Filter Into Modern Government.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

A modern, streamlined government in Siam has changed the name of the country to Thailand. The Siamese have long called their country Muang Thai, "the land of the Thai race," but the name "Siam" or "Siam" is on record for the country for more than a thousand years.

Siam adopted a constitutional government June 24, 1932. With the advent of the new regime, international treaties were revoked and new treaties gave Siam full jurisdictional and fiscal autonomy.

The change from an absolute monarchy has been attributed in part to the infiltration of Western ideas following the custom of sending princes of the blood royal and sons of prominent families to the United States and other countries for their education.

Hopes for Neutrality. The latter has expressed the hope that Siam's international position may be neutral, and an enlarged defense program is in progress.

Substantial appropriations have also enabled the government to increase public utilities service, in addition to private plants, and new factories have been set up, some by the government. These produce paper, cotton cloth, petroleum, sugar, hemp, silks, vegetable oils and drugs.

"It doesn't do any good to call him names, Uncle Fred."
"I think you must look upon it as a great escape, Edith."
"Escape from what?"
"Unhappiness."
"Do you think I can ever escape from the thought of this?"—The strong sweep of her arm seemed to indicate her bridal finery.

He sat in unhappy silence, and suddenly she laughed. "I might have known when he kept sending me orchids. When a man loves a woman he knows the things she likes."

It was then that Towne made his mistake. "You ought to thank your lucky stars—"

She blazed out at him, "Uncle Fred, if you say anything more like that—it's utterly idiotic. But you won't face facts. Your generation never does. I'm not in the least thankful. I'm simply furious."

There was a hysterical note in her voice, but he was unconscious of the tension. She was not taking it in the least as he wished she might. She should have wept on his shoulder. Melted to tears he might have soothed her. But there were no tears in those blue eyes.

She trod on her flowers as she left the car. Looking straight-ahead of her she ascended the steps. Within everything was in readiness for the wedding festivities. The stairway was terraced with hydrangeas, pink and white and blue. In the drawing-room were rose garlands with floating ribbons. And there was a vista of the dining-room—with the caterer's men already at their posts.

Except for these men, a maid or two—and a detective to keep his eye on things, the house was empty. Everybody had gone to the wedding, and presently everybody would come back. The house would be stripped, the flowers would fade, the caterers would carry away the wasted food.

Edith stopped at the foot of the stairs. "How did they announce it at the church?"

"That it had been postponed. It was the only thing to do at the moment. Of course there will be newspaper men. We'll have to make up a story—"

"We'll do nothing of the kind. Tell them the truth, Uncle Fred. That I'm not wanted. That I was kept waiting at the church. Like the heroine in a movie."

She stood on the steps above him, looking down. She was as white as her dress.

"I don't want to see anybody. I don't mind losing Del. He doesn't count. He isn't worth it. But can you imagine that any man—any man, Uncle Fred, could have kept me—waiting?"

The thing that Frederick Towne got out of his niece's flight was this. "She wouldn't let anybody sympathize with her. Simply locked the door of her room, and in the morning she was gone. It has added immeasurably to the gossip."

His listeners had, however, weighed him in the balance of understanding and sympathy, and had found him wanting. The youth in their midst sided with Edith. But none of this showed in their manner. They were polite and hospitable to the last. Frederick, ushered out into the storm by Baldy, still saw Jane like a bird, warm in her nest.

By morning the violence of the storm had spent itself. But it was still bitterly cold. The snow was blue beneath the leaden sky. The chickens, denied their accustomed promenade, ate and drank and went to sleep again in the strange dusk. Merry maid and the kitchen hand poked their noses into the frigid atmosphere withdrawn to the snug haven of a basket beneath the kitchen stove. Sophy sent word that her rheumatism was worse, and that she could not come over. Jane, surveying the accumulated piles of dishes, felt a sense of unusual depression. While Frederick Towne had talked last night she had caught a glimpse of his world—the great house—six servants—gay girls in the glamour of good clothes, young men who matched the girls, money to meet every emergency—a world in which nobody had to wash dishes—or make soup out of Sunday's roast.

She was cheered a bit, however, by the announcement that her brother had decided to stay home from the office.

"I'll have a try at that magazine cover."

Her spirits rose. "Wouldn't it be utterly perfect if you got the prize?"

"Not much chance. The thing I need is a good model—"

"An' I won't do?" with some wistfulness.

"Editors like 'em modern, don't they?"

But his thoughts had winged themselves to that other woman whom his fancy painted in a thousand poses.

"If Edith Towne were here—I'd put her on a marble bench beside a sapphire sea."

"I'll bet you couldn't get an editor in the world to look at it. Sapphire seas and classic ladies are a million years behind the times—"

"They are never behind the times—"

Jane shrugged, and changed the subject. "Darling—if you'll put your mind to mundane things for a moment. Tomorrow is Thanksgiving Day, the Follettes are to dine with us, and we haven't any turkey."

"Why haven't we?"

"You were to get it when you went to town, and now you're not going—"

"I am not—not for all the turkeys in the world. We can have roast chickens. That's simple enough, Janey."

"It may seem simple to you. But who's going to cut off their heads?"

"Sophy" said Baldy. Having killed Germans in France he refused further slaughter.

"Sophy has the rheumatism—"

"Oh, well, we can feast our souls—"

"Jane teased back in her chair and looked at him. "Your perfectly poetic solution may satisfy you, but it won't feed the Follettes."

With some irritation, therefore, he promised, if all else failed, to himself decapitate the fowls. "But your mind, Jane, never soars above food—"

Jane, with her chin in her hands, considered this. "A woman," she said, "who keeps house for a post—must anchor herself to something—"

"Perhaps I'm like a captive balloon—if you cut the cable, I'll shoot straight up to the skies—"

She liked that thought of herself, and smiled over it, after Baldy had left her. She wondered if the captive balloon would ever soar.

So she went about her simple tasks, putting the bone out to boil for soup, preparing the vegetables for it—wondering what she would have for dessert—with all his scorn of domestic details, Baldy was apt to be fastidious about his sweets—and coming finally to her sweeping and dusting in the front part of the house.

The telephone rang and she answered it. Evans was at the other end of the wire.

"Mother wants to speak to you."

Mrs. Follette asked if she might change her plans for Thanksgiving.

"Will you and your brother dine with us, instead of our coming to you? Our New York cousins find that they have the day free, unexpectedly. They had been asked to a house party in Virginia, but their hostess has had to postpone it on account of illness."

"Is it going to be very grand? I haven't a thing to wear."

"Don't be foolish, Jane. You always look like a lady."

"Thank you, Mrs. Follette." Jane hoped that she didn't look as some ladies look. But there were, of course, others. It was well for her at the moment, that Mrs. Follette could not see her eyes.

"And I thought," went on the unconscious matron, "that if you were not too busy, you might go with Evans to the grove and get some greens. I'd like the house to look attractive. Is the snow too deep?"

"Not a bit. When will he come?"

"You'd better arrange with him. Here he is."

Evans' voice was the only unchanged thing about him. The sound of it at long distance always brought the old days back to Jane.

"After lunch!" he asked.

"Give me time to dress."

But it was not Evans. Briggs, Frederick Towne's chauffeur, stood there with a box in his arms. "Mr. Towne's compliments," he said, "and shall I set it in the hall?"

"Oh, yes, thank you." Her surprise brought the quick color to her cheeks. She watched him go back down the terrace, and enter the car, then she opened the box.

Beneath clouds of white tissue paper she came upon a long, low basket, heaped with grapes and tangerines, peaches and pomegranates. Tucked in between the fruits were shelled nuts in fluted paper cases, gleaming sweets in small glass jars, candied pineapples and cherries, bunches of fat raisins, stuffed dates and prunes.

Jane talked to the empty air. "How dear of him—"

The white tissue paper fell in drifts about her as she lifted the basket from the box.

There was a little note tied to the handle.

"Dear Miss Barnes:
"I can't tell you how much I enjoyed your hospitality last night—" and you were good to listen to me with so much sympathy. I am hoping that you'll let me come again and talk about Edith. May I? And here's a bit of color for your Thanksgiving feast.

"Gratefully always,
"Frederick Towne."

Jane stood staring down at the friendly words. It didn't seem within reason that Frederick Towne meant that he wanted to come to see her. And she really hadn't listened with sympathy. But—oh, of course, he could come. And it was heavenly to have a thing like this happen on a day like this.

As she straightened up with the basket in her hands, she saw herself again in the long mirror—a slender figure in green—bobbed black hair—golden and purple fruits. She gasped and gazed again. There was Baldy's picture ready to his hand—November! Against a background of gray—that glowing figure—Baldy could idealize her—make the wind blow her skirts a bit—give her a fluttering ribbon or two, a glorified loveliness.

He was moody. "Don't interrupt me, Jane."

She rumpled up his hair, which he hated. "Mr. Towne sent us some fruit, Baldy, and this." She held out the note to him.

He read it. "He doesn't say a word about me."

"No, he doesn't," her eyes were dancing. "Baldy, it's your little sister, Jane."

"You didn't do a thing but sit there and knit—"

"Perhaps he liked to see me—"

Baldy passed this over in puzzled silence.

"Where's the fruit?"

CHAPTER IV

Mrs. Follette had been born in Maryland with a tradition of aristocratic blood. It was this tradition which had upheld her through years of poverty after the Civil war.

A close scanning of the family tree might have disclosed ancestors who had worked with their hands. But these, Mrs. Follette's family had chosen to ignore in favor of one grandfather who had held Colonial office, and who had since been magnified into a personage.

Mr. Follette, during his lifetime, had walked a mile each morning to take the train at Sherwood Park, and had walked back a mile each night, until at last he had tired of two peripatetic miles a day, and of eight hours at his desk, and of eternally putting on his dinner coat when there was no one to see, and like old Baldwin Barnes, he had laid him down with a will.

At his death all income stopped, and Mrs. Follette had found herself on a somewhat lonely peak of exclusiveness. She could not afford to go with her richer neighbors, and she refused to consider Sherwood seriously. Now and then, however, she accepted invitations from old friends, and in return offered such simple hospitality as she could afford without self-consciousness.

Archeologists Trace Man by Annual Tree Rings

The story of a thousand years of pre-history in the high watershed of the San Juan river has been dated by archeologists of the Carnegie institution of Washington by means of patient examination of annual tree rings preserved in the wood of ancient and long demolished dwellings.

writes Thomas R. Henry in the Washington Star.

This region was the cradle of the great Pueblo culture, one of the greatest achieved in the New world, remnants of which persist in the Southwest today. By means of the tree-ring calendar the archeologists have been able to establish the following tentative dates, according to a report presented to trustees of the institution:

First occupancy—Just prior to 300 A. D.

First pottery making—About 475 A. D.

Invasion and conquest by an alien people—About 800 A. D.

In the house.

He rose. "I'll go in with you—"

He felt out of sorts, discouraged. The morning had been spent in sketching vague outlines—a sweep of fair hair under a blue hat—detached feet in shoes with shining buckles—a bag that hung in the air without hands. At intervals he had stood up and looked out at the blank snow and the dull sky. The room was warm enough, but he shivered. He suffered vicariously for Edith Towne. He had hoped that she might telephone. He had stayed home really for that.

"I have spent three hours doing nothing," he said, as he shut the door behind him; "not much encouragement in that."

"I have a model for you."

"Where?"

"I'll show you."

He followed her in, full of curiosity.

She showed him the fruit, then picked up the basket. "Look in the mirror, not at me," she commanded.

Reflected there in the clear glass, so still that she seemed fixed in paint, Baldy really gave for the first time an artist's eye to the possibilities of his little sister. In the midst of all that crashing color—

"Gosh," he cried, "you're good-looking!"

His air of utter astonishment was too much for Jane. She set the basket on the steps, and laughed until she cried.

"I don't see anything funny," he told her.

"Well, you wouldn't, darling."

She wiped her eyes with her little handkerchief, and sat up. "I am just dropping a tear for the ugly duckling."

"Have I made you feel like that?"

"Sometimes."

Their lighted-up eyes met, and suddenly he leaned down and touched her cheek—a swift caress.

"You're a little bit of a right-janey, which was great praise from Baldy."

Diet for Gall Bladder Patients

Physicians going over the records of their patients find that from 5 to 10 per cent have gall bladder trouble, and yet it is known that in examination after death about two in every three show that there has been trouble with the gall bladder. Of course, these patients did not die because of their gall bladder trouble but the fact that the bile was not flowing freely from the gall bladder may have been partly to blame for their final illness.

The gall bladder may give trouble in one of two ways. First, there may be a spasm (preventing flow of bile from gall bladder to intestine) which distends the gall bladder. Second, the gall bladder may be too weak or lazy to push bile out, and so again the gall bladder is distended.

It is believed that before severe symptoms of gall bladder trouble appear, the patient has been suffering with such symptoms as belching, gas pressure, occasional nausea, for as long as 10 years.

Diet Suggested.

A diet for the gall bladder patient who is overweight is suggested by Drs. J. M. Blackford, R. I. King and K. R. Sherwood in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Breakfast: Strained orange juice, ripe bananas, or baked apple; one poached egg on alternate days; small cup of coffee, one lump sugar, small amount of cream.

Midmorning lunch: One-half slice toast, small amount of butter.

Luncheon: Consomme; lean meat broiled; white potatoes; puree of peas; gelatin containing fruit; weak tea.

Dinner: Same as lunch.

Bedtime lunch: Glass of milk.

Midnight lunch: Crackers or rolls.

The suggestion for underweights is to add bland cereals and some fruit to the above diet. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Appendix Pain Warns Victim Of Condition

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

MORE than 24 serious conditions may cause pain on the right side of the abdomen. For example, such pain occasionally occurs in diseases of the brain, pneumonia and pleurisy at lower surface of right lung. An inflamed and distended gall bladder, kidney colic, inflammation of the intestines or acute obstruction of the intestine may produce symptoms similar to appendicitis.

Other conditions which may be taken for appendicitis are typhoid, tuberculosis abscess of the loin, the groin or right hip, perforation or breaking through of a stomach ulcer, lead colic, acute inflammation of the pancreatic gland, hysteria and just the fear of appendicitis.

I am quoting Dr. Louis M. Leibow, New York, in Hygeia.

Despite the large number of conditions which can cause pain on the right lower side of the abdomen and thus be mistaken for appendicitis, it is only good sense to consider the condition as appendicitis until an examination by a physician shows it to be one of these other conditions.

Is there any warning, any symptoms that occur before the pain in the right side appears that may help the patient and the physician also in knowing that an attack of appendicitis may be on the way?

Warning Symptoms.

Symptoms which should serve as a warning include nausea, indigestion, vomiting, loss of appetite, flatulence (gas pressure), a sense of heaviness and soreness and tenderness over the lower right side. In a great many cases the dull heavy pain is right in the pit of the stomach, remains there sometimes for hours and then gradually shifts down to the lower right side of the abdomen.

In many ailments—gall bladder colic, ulcer of stomach or intestine, kidney colic—there is both the medical and surgical treatment, but Dr. Leibow points out once more that "there is no medical treatment for appendicitis. The use of any physic, no matter how mild, may tend to rupture the acutely inflamed appendix and lead to dangerous complications."

Sometimes when a physc has been taken there is relief from pain for a while because the appendix has been ruptured and the patient believes he has cleared up the cause of the pain, whereas he has only started dangerous complications—peritonitis. Peritonitis requires immediate surgery and this may be too late to save his life.

H. S. Hunter in the El Paso Times — "I was traveling from Lordsburg to Silver City. Perhaps 20 miles out of Lordsburg, when I was getting up into the forested section, a deer leaped out of the brush and dashed across the road ahead of me.

A second deer sprang out and crashed into the side of my car. It struck the side of my car, mind you; there was no damage whatever to the front of the car. As soon as possible I braked to a halt and ran back to see if the deer was dead. It was not. It was up and traveling fast."
