SCHOOL NEWS The Birch magical performance was presented to a capacity house Monday evening. Many amusing tricks delighted the big audience.

The basketball team meets Socorro tonight here and Saturday night a double-header will be played with Alamogordo. New sidewalks are being laid around the south side of the school grounds and we surely appreciate this improvement.

One of the high points of Americanization week will be the original program of the science and music departments. The dramatization has been written by local talent. There is no admission charge. Music will be furnished by the orchestra and glee club.

The Art Dept. of the Junior-Hi is making beautiful and attractive patriotic designs for the program of the Father-Son and Mother-Daughter banquets Feb. 20.

Legion Entertains Distinguished Guests On Wednesday night at the headquarters of the American Legion and Auxiliary, the local post entertained Wayne Drysdale, State Commander and Mrs. Drysdale, who were on a tour of the state visiting the different posts and auxiliaries. The commander made one of the most wonderful addresses on Americanism the local members had ever heard. He gave a vivid and drastic review of the plots and plans laid out by un-American organizations and praised the government officers who are penetrating such acts among our people.

Many members of the Legion were present from surrounding towns. After the commander's address, a banquet was served and a musical program was given under the direction of Prof. Lou Fink, Carrizozo's Federal Music Project teacher. The commander praised the work of the post, which is second to none in the state.

After the sermon, the remains were turned over to the officers of Carrizozo Lodge No. 41, A. F. & A. M. and buried in the Angus cemetery with solemn Masonic Rites. The funeral was largely attended and on account of Mrs. Purcell being a teacher, many teachers and pupils from Lincoln, Tionje, Jicarilla and Angus were present. The floral offerings were many and beautiful, expressing the high esteem in which the deceased was held by all who knew him.

Mr. Purcell was possessed of the many good qualities which go to make up the excellent American gentleman. Uprightness, clearness of thought on matters of leading importance. Mild in nature, neighborly among his fellowmen, a loyal, loving husband and father and extremely patriotic. He will be sadly missed in the Masonic order as well as among the many friends in general, with whom he was associated. The Invisible Helper

Reliable reports from Finland to the effect that all raids made by Russia on the little Republic, so far, have been repulsed with heavy losses to the aggressors. In the beginning of hostilities, it seemed to be a universal opinion that Finland would be crushed by Russia in the same manner and in a lesser period of time than that which befell Poland. That opinion gained momentum by such immense numbers of men on one side to such a small quantity on the other. With all that taken into consideration, the world, aside from the baby Republic awaited daily for the news that Finland had been blown off the map, but the word failed to come.

But in its place, came the good news that the spunky little toothed fighters were holding their own. Aside from Germany, where the "one-man circus" of Hitlerism exists, the civilized world was in perfect sympathy with Finland, but the assistance could not be great enough to help it. On came the Russian Lion with its outnumbering armies, machine guns, airplanes, bombs, etc., but when they would make one of their maddening rushes, the little snowmen of the north sent them back and crushing them by the thousands.

With the scales so overbalanced in Russia's favor, which would seemingly bring hurried disaster to Finland, winter weather such as had not been experienced for many years swept in front of Stalin's moving armies. Finland was prepared for that, where Russia was not. So intense was the Arctic winter that thousands of Russians froze to death while on the march. Where they faltered, the Finns took advantage of the situation and pressing the millions of marching Reds back to their own ground with shattering losses.

It has been said that "one is a majority" and that is true where the right is in the contest. Finland was and still is, a believer in peace instead of war.

Its government is Democratic in nature much after the fashion of our own. So strong is its desire to remain an independent Republic, that it will shed its last drop of blood in defense of what it knows to be right. Since the war began, the victories achieved by Finland have been nothing short of miraculous, but there seems to be an unseen power directing the path of the little Republic and helping it to preserve that government under which it lives and loves.

In a letter received yesterday from our old friend and former neighbor, Robert P. Hickey of Riverside, Calif., he tells us of a visit they had from Bob Rowlin of March Field. Bob was in the service of his Uncle Sam and was pleased with the service. It was through the Outlook that Mr. and Mrs. Hickey and Bob contacted each other. Mr. Hickey read in this paper of Bob being at March Field, got in contact with him, hence the visit Bob paid to the Hickey home. They are very proud of Bob and add, that Carrizozo should also which we are. They send kindest regards to their friends.

Kathleen Norris Says:

Here Is Something for Youth To Think About

(With Special Illustrations - WNU Service.)

"I think it's lovely," the girl said impulsively, as though she had said it before.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

THIS is an appeal to boys and girls to be good. That has an old-fashioned ring, hasn't it? And it sounds as though it were addressed to coppers of four and five...

The girl was about 14, extremely pretty, curvily dressed, and with the right hair-do. The mother had watched eyes that hung adorably upon her daughter's beauty...

"All you ever do is fuss and fuss about me," the girl said. "All you ever do is fuss and fuss about me..."

"All we always do the best we could for you, dear," she said cheerfully. "You know that, and I know that..."

And in the same way he and Mrs. Wood would remember it if just once in those long days after the girl or boy had seen their problem...

The years when we have our parents are not always long years. And when they end, and one says distinctly, "Dad, I don't like it!"...

And in a challenge every American boy and girl who reads this to stop and think this morning. Ask yourself, "Do I know what my father's work is, what my mother's work is, and how they do it?"...

A Challenge to Youth. And in a challenge every American boy and girl who reads this to stop and think this morning. Ask yourself, "Do I know what my father's work is..."

Unconscious Tyrants

Youngsters in their teens, says Kathleen Norris, often unconsciously give their parents their most anxious moments. They know so little of family finances then and have so many desires...

She said the last words with a sneer and a squint. But she was fussing about someone who called her "Mama" for mother, of course...

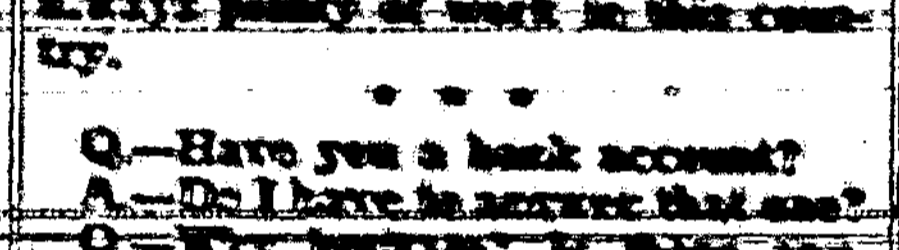

General Motors turned out its twenty-five millionth car last week. But it is still working on a "jack" big enough to jack up one car while we're at it...

Great Billings says the Soviet army is so hot it even smells on its toes. And similar: Quicker than the United States can change military generals.

THE MAN IS HERE AGAIN!

Always plenty of work in this country. Q-How many people live here? A-Six. Q-How many are working? A-They're all working. Q-Doing what? A-Answering questions of census takers.

Q-Is anybody in the house engaged in farming? A-No, my dear, that raising corn, but you can't do it in a shoe box.

LOS ANGELES—Who were the little giants of sport, the smaller fellows who have distinguished brains and bulk with brains and speed? In football the first of the "midgets" was Frank Hickey of Yale...

Went and mammoth on each side—Moose at 268, Kelly Kay at 265, and others at 260 or perhaps 250. He is a middle in football's backyard. Yet Dave O'Brien has never had time taken out in three hard years at T. C. U. and this last year, his first as a pro with the Eagles...

Baseball's Share

Baseball has also known its share of three magnificent midgets. What about Johnny Evers, the "Human Spider"? Evers was a short 115-pounder in his early Cub days, but Johnny was a 240-pounder in the side of John McGraw and his Giants...

In Boxing

There was Jimmy White, "The Great Atom," a 135-pound heavyweight who for years whipped men who were 15 to 25 pounds heavier. I saw White near the named of his career when he, Bob Higgins, Jack Wheeler and I played golf together before his final battle with Francis Villa, the powerful 190-pounder who pulled him after the bell had rung...

Conn Is Sure Of Ability to Defeat Louis

By ROBERT McSHANE (Clubbished by Western Newspaper Union.)

BILLY CONN, a slender, good-looking Irish kid, only three or four years away from his peak and bean days, has done more to capture the fight-going public's fancy than any other boxer since Joe Louis' early days. When Conn, present light-heavyweight champion of the world, defeated Mello Mettina for the 175-pound title, he weighed 170 pounds, five under the title limit...

CONTENDER BILLY CONN

was ridiculed by those who knew him best. Even Patrick Corbett, his father, thought it was blasphemous for him to point at the great ring god. The world was pop-eyed when Sullivan fell before Corbett's blinding speed. That was natural—no one knew that for three years, day and night, Corbett had been a slave to the thought of smothering the champ...

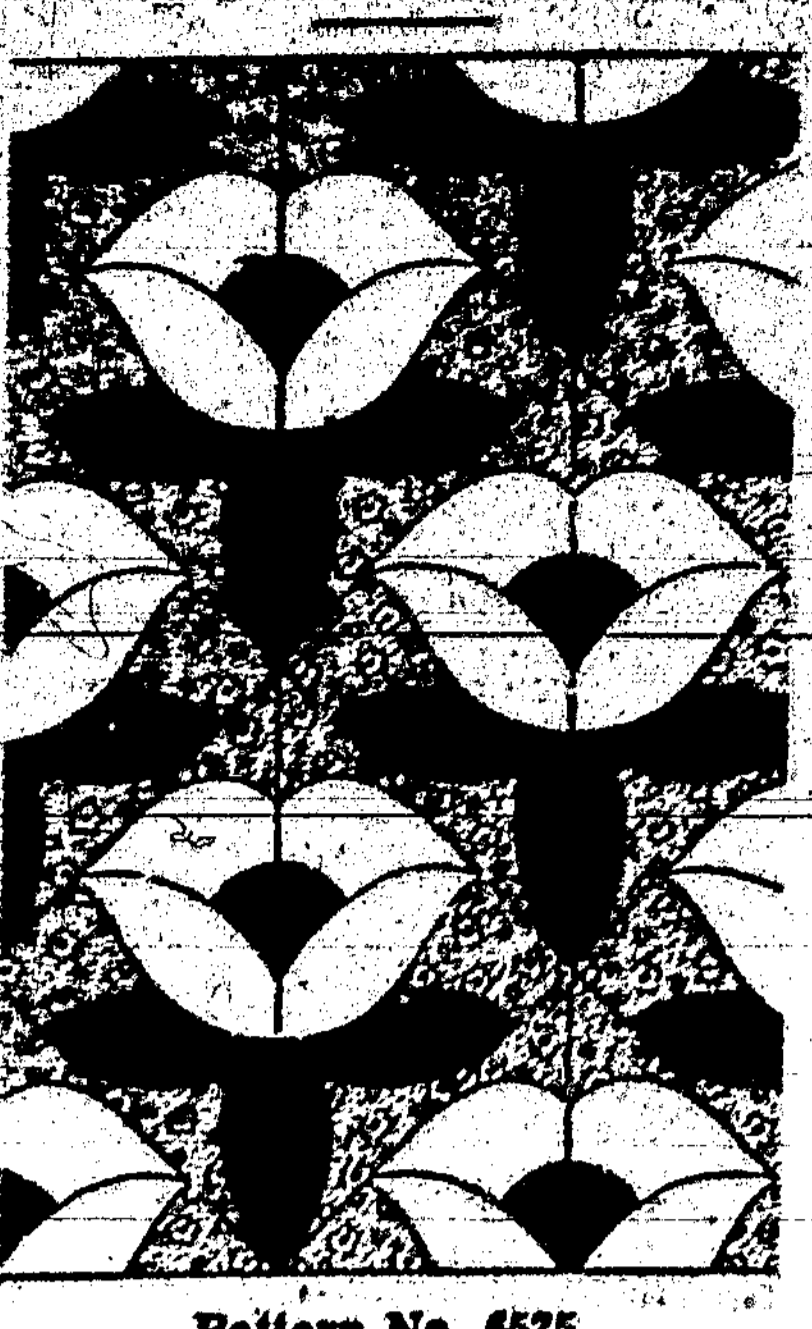

Points for Louis

In the same way Billy Conn has been pointing for Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis. He is obsessed with the idea that he has Joe Louis' number. He doesn't "seem off" for the prize and call Louis a bum, a pushover and a setup. But he's quickly convinced that he will be the next heavyweight king of the world...

Speed Is Unquestioned

There's no argument about his speed. He delights in slipping his opponents around—particularly if they're big. His speed and accuracy have accounted for far more victories than any punch which he possesses. Conn remembers that Jack Dempsey weighed only 185 pounds when he fought Gene Willard. Willard weighed 250. Many fans thought it was criminal to send Dempsey against such a giant. If you remember, Jack the Great Killer finished Willard in three bloody rounds...

White sauce for boiled potatoes, cauliflower, carrots and asparagus can be dressed up by a liberal sprinkling of paprika.

When measuring syrups or molasses, dip cup in hot water and mixture will not stick to the sides of the cup.

Chewing gum can be removed from washable material by softening the gum with egg white, then washing.

Look over dahlia bulbs stored away for the winter. If they seem dry or shriveled sprinkle them with water.

New Flannels.—It is an excellent plan before washing new flannels to soak them for a quarter of an hour in cold water with a good handful of salt. Then wash them in the ordinary way. This makes washing much easier and the articles look beautiful when dry.

Cooking Apples.—Apples are over 80 per cent water, thus in cooking them only enough water should be used to prevent them from scorching or sticking to the pan.

Tasty Nuts.—To give a better flavor to nuts heat them for five minutes in a moderate oven. Such heating is especially advisable in the winter time when nuts are likely to be stale.

Preparing Starch.—To give a glossy finish, use soapy water in preparing starch for laundry.

Garnishes.—Thin slices of tomatoes, oranges, limes or grapefruit, sprinkled with sugar and broiled 10 minutes, make effective and tasty garnishes for roasts or fowls. Red or green jelly, dotted on top of the slices, gives added color and flavor.

Nancy Hanks Hears News of Her Son

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON (Released by Western Newspaper Union)

AMONG the countless tributes paid to Abraham Lincoln are several, written by newspaper men, which have become Newspaper Classics, i. e., pieces of prose that so caught the public fancy as to result in frequent requests that they be reprinted in the newspaper in which they originally appeared.

It was written in 1914 for the Boston Herald by Robert Lincoln O'Brien, at that time editor of the Herald, from 1931 to 1937 chairman of the United States Tariff commission, and now publisher of the Cape Cod Colonial at Hyannis, Mass. It reads as follows:

Nancy Hanks—I see the calendar says it is 1914, nearly a century after my life in the world ended. Pray tell me, spirit of the Present, whether anyone mortal remembers that I ever lived, or knows my place of burial.

The Present—Oh, yes. There is a monument over your grave at Pigeon Creek. A man named Studebaker of South Bend, Ind., went there in 1879 and spent $1,000 in marking it.

The Present—He was no relative of yours. As a matter-of-fact citizen, he thought your grave ought to be marked. Twenty-three years later the state of Indiana erected a massive monument in your honor; 10,000 school children marched in procession when it was dedicated.

The Present—If you had one copy of every book that has been written about him, you would have a larger library than you ever saw in your mortal life. If you had visited every city which has reared his statue, you would be more widely traveled than any person that you ever saw.

The Present—This is the 12th of February! Nancy Hanks—That was the birthday of my little boy, a slender, awkward fellow, who used every night to climb a ladder of wooden planks driven into a log, up into a bed of leaves in the loft, and there to dream.

The Present—Of course I have heard what became of him. Few have not. The people who could answer your question number hundreds of millions today. There is no land and no tongue in which the information you seek could not be supplied, and usually by the "man in the street."

Nancy Hanks—Pray tell me more of the miracle of my little boy's life. I cannot wait to hear what it all means! The Present—If you had one copy of every book that has been written about him, you would have a larger library than you ever saw in your mortal life.

This cartoon titled "Hardin County, 1869" is also a Newspaper Classic. Drawn by H. T. Webster, it was first printed in 1918 in the Kansas City Star and other newspapers receiving the syndicate service of the Press Publishing company (New York World). Every year since then it has been reprinted in the Star at the request of readers.

boy's life. I cannot wait to hear what it all means! The Present—If you had one copy of every book that has been written about him, you would have a larger library than you ever saw in your mortal life. If you had visited every city which has reared his statue, you would be more widely traveled than any person that you ever saw.

secular history who so vitally appealed to the imagination of mankind today. Nancy Hanks—And so my little boy came into all this glory in his lifetime! The Present—Oh, no. He died at fifty-six, as unaware of how the world would eventually regard him as old Christopher Columbus himself.

been. But he dismissed all the honors of the big world by saying that the one thing that remained most worth while in his three-score years and ten was that he had shaken hands and conversed in private audience with your little boy, whom this cosmopolite pictured as "leading the procession of the immortals down the centuries."

The Present—That might be as hard for you to understand, without a knowledge of what has taken place in the meantime, as the skyscrapers and the ocean cables and railroad trains that I have spoken about. But I will try to tell you something of what he has done.

The Present—We have in the United States a great democracy. We are making a great experiment for the nations. Your little boy gave friends of democracy, the world over, the largest measure of confidence in its permanency and success of any man that has ever lived.

More than a million people a year now pour into the United States from lands beyond the seas, most of them unfamiliar with our language and our customs and our aims. When we Americans who are older by a few generations go out to meet them we take, as the supreme example of what we mean by our great experiment, the life of Abraham Lincoln. And, when we are ourselves tempted in the mad complexity of our material civilization to disregard the pristine ideals of the republic, we see his gaunt figure standing before us and his outstretched arm pointing to the straighter and simpler path of righteousness.

He became President of the United States, but that affords small clue to his real distinction. Few Americans ever refer to him as "President Lincoln." In the idiom of our people, he is Abraham Lincoln, called by the name you gave him in the wilderness gloom. To that name of your choosing no titles that the vain world knows could add anything of honor or distinction. And today, from the Atlantic to the Pacific seas, and in places under distant skies, children will recite in their schools his words, men will gather about banquet boards to refresh their ideals by hearing anew some phase of his wonderful story.

To the list of Newspaper Classics associated with Lincoln's Birthday should be added another. True, it appeared first in a book but it has been "reprinted by request" in the papers so many times that it rates as a Newspaper Classic. It was written by Rosemary and Stephen Vincent Benet and was included in their "A Book of Americans" published by Farrar and Rinehart in 1933. Its subject is:

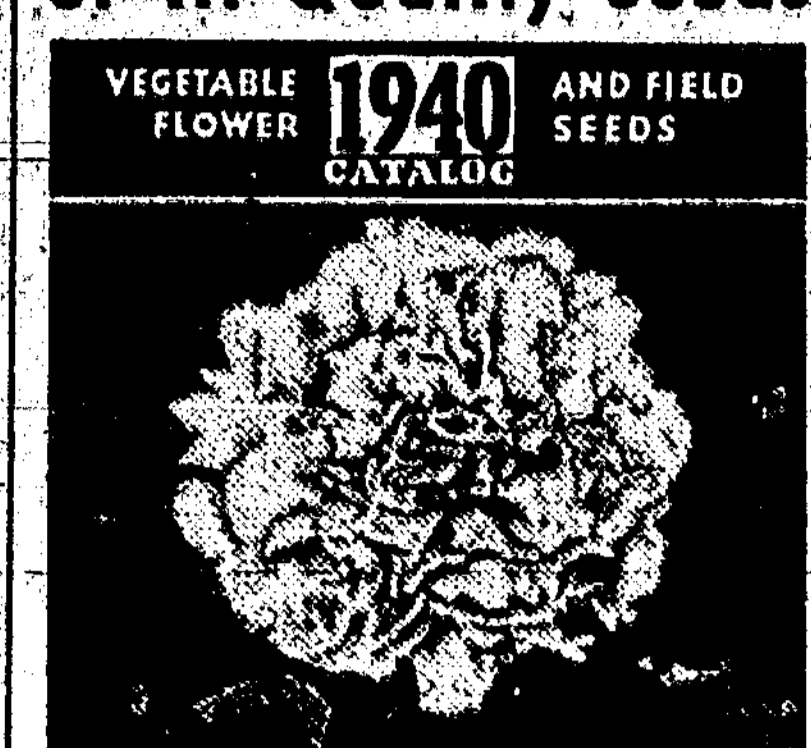

NANCY HANKS If Nancy Hanks Came back as a ghost Seeking news Of what she loved most She'd ask first: "Where's my son? What happened to Abe? What's he done?" "Poor little Abe Left all alone Except for Tom Who's a rolling stone! He was only nine The year I died. I remember still How hard he cried. "Scraping along In a little shack With hardly a shirt To cover his back And a prairie wind To blow him down. Or pinching times If he went to town. "You wouldn't know About my son? Did he grow tall? Did he have fun? Did he learn to read? Did he get to town? Do you know his name? Did he get on?"

Soon after "A Book of Americans" appeared and the reprinting of "Nancy Hanks" began, D. R. Graff, a contributor to Franklin P. Adams' column "The Conning Tower," then appearing in the New York Herald Tribune, wrote this:

REPLY TO THE GHOST OF NANCY HANKS I remember your son Whose bonny hands Left a plow to rest In prairie sands And came to town In his Sunday suit Wearing Tom's hat And shirt to boot. He got a job In a grocer's store Weighin' out beans And sweeten' the flour. Then he bought leather boots For his awkward feet And practiced law In the county seat. He studied hard (Almost every night) Till the pages blurred Beneath the candle light. You'd have smiled In your pioneer way To see him readin' About Henry Clay And hear him talk In a law-pitchadance To a lawyer's table In a room, all alone When he'd think of you Before goin' to sleep. He'd pray the Lord And he'd see your face When the rain'd drip Through the quiet hours Of a fatigued day. "Did he have fun?" Yes, in his youth And he'd often laugh In a way uncouth; But in later years When his head'd sleep He kept his laughter Way down deep. "Did he grow tall?" A good six feet. With a roony chest Where a stout heart beat; With hairy hands To grip a plow And a blacksmith's feet That'd stun a cow. "Did he get on?"— If what you mean Is a white frame house In a yard of green, Or money to buy A bottomland farm Or store-bought clothes To keep him warm, Or the extra horse So he could ride Along country roads With his village bride— Well, Gettin' on like that Wasn't his way. He didn't gauge success By the bales of hay, Or the cords of wood A man can buy, Or acres he owns In wheat or rye. He didn't care For wealth in gold But for wealth in love That a heart could hold Your son Abe Was of different clay. He'd forget to ask His rightful pay As a lawyer should When he wins a case And the right prevails Against the law. He made his way By a different road And his shoulders carried A heavy load While cannon belched And generals led Gaunt gray troops Of marching dead. While fear-crazed boys Slogged through mud And canisters were Flecked with blood While Sherman rode Through a southern street And a drummer died In a field of wheat. Yes, Abe got on Though few can tell How he'd ever lived through The war's black hell And he died at last In a President's bed While the nation mourned Its departed dead. So, if you're the ghost Of Nancy Hanks, You'll find Abe there Where armor clanks And you'll see his face If you care to look For his eyes will smile With a God-like look.

As Our Convictions Reputation is in no man's keeping. You and I cannot determine what other men shall think and say about us. We can only determine what they ought to think of us and say about us, and we can only do this by acting squarely up to our convictions.—Holland.

Pioneering for Progress!

THERE ARE PIONEERS today just as in the days of our forefathers when trails were blazed through trackless wilderness. Today's pioneers lead the way in business, in medicine, in engineering—in the advancement of many fields of human endeavor.

This year we salute some of telephony's pioneers in commemorating the twenty-fifth anniversary of the first transcontinental telephone call. It was late in January, 1915 that the continent was first spanned by telephone—a thrill for those in New York and San Francisco whose words traveled back and forth in a fraction of a second.

In 1915 it took about half an hour to complete a connection. Today you call the nearest town or across the country without hanging up—like making a local call.

Telephone pioneers who build the speech trails—the men in the laboratory who are working constantly to make the service better and more comprehensive, represent the never ending effort of the Bell System to continue pioneering for progress.

"My dear child," Mrs. Follette said, "have lunch with me. Mary has baked fresh bread, and we'll have it with your berries, and some Dutch cheese and cream."

"I'd love it," Jane said. "I hoped you'd ask me. We are going at four to Delafield Simons for the weekend. I shall have to be fashionable for forty-eight hours, and I hate it."

Mrs. Follette smiled indulgently. "Of course, you don't mean it. And don't try to be fashionable. Just be yourself. It is only people who have never been anybody who try to make themselves like others."

"Well," said Jane, "I'm afraid I've never been anybody, Mrs. Follette. I'm just little Jane Barnes."

"What's the matter with you, Jane?" Mrs. Follette demanded. Jane clasped her hands together. "Oh, I want my mother. I want my mother." Her voice was low, but there was a poignant note in it.

Old Mary came out with the tray, and when she had gone, Mrs. Follette said, "Now tell me what's troubling you?"

"I'm afraid," Jane said. "Of what?"

the east window which overlooked Sherwood. It was a mahogany desk of the secretary type, and there was nothing about it to drain the color from Jane's cheeks, to send her hand to her heart.

Above the desk, however, where his eyes could rest upon it whenever he raised them from his writing, was an old lantern Jane knew it at once. It was an ancient ship's lantern that she and Baldy had used through all the years, a heritage from some sea-going ancestor.

Since her return from Chicago she had not been able to find it. Baldy had complained, "Sophy must have taken it home with her." But Sophy had not taken it. It was here, and Jane knew, with a certainty that swept away all doubts, why.

"You are a lantern, Jane, held high."

She found the miniature and carried it back to Mrs. Follette. "I told you you were pretty and you have never gotten over it."

She had regained her radiance. Mrs. Follette reflected complacently that girls were like that. Moods of the moment. Even in her own day.

"I hope it won't rain," Edith said.

She spoke of it to Evans that night. "Jane had lunch with me. She was very tired and depressed. I told her not to worry. It's natural she should feel the responsibility of the future. Marriage is a serious obligation."

"Marriage is more than that, Mother."

terested her weak husband beyond anything he had ever known in his drifting days of bachelorhood. "After dinner," she told Eloise, "I'll show you Del's roses. They are quite marvellous. I think his collection will be beyond anything in this part of the country."

"Del's roses, but she says I am to do the work."

"But why not have a gardener?" Eloise demanded.

"Oh, we have. But I should hate to have our garden a mere matter of mechanics. Del has some splendid ideas. We are going to work for the flower shows. Prizes and all that."

"I shall name my first rose the 'Little Lucy Logan,'"

Edith, locking arms with Jane, a little later, as they strolled under a wisteria-hung trellis towards the fountain, said, "Lucy's making a man of him because she loves him. And I would have laughed at him. We would have bared each other to death."

"They will never be bored," Jane decided, "with their roses and their little pigs."

They had reached the fountain. It was an old-fashioned one, with thin streams of water spouting up from the bill of a bronzed crane. There were goldfish in the pool, and a big green frog leaped from a lily pad.

"Think of this," said Jane, "and Lucy's days at the office."

"And yet," Edith pondered, "she told me if he had not had a penny she would have been happy with him."

"I believe it. With a cottage, one pig, and a rose-bush, they would find bliss. It is like that with them."

"The two women sat down on the marble coping of the fountain. The peacock trilled by them, its jewels all ablaze under the sun."

"Do you know," Jane's voice was also lowered, "when I look at her, I feel that it is she who should marry your uncle."

people uncomfortable. She was uncomfortable herself. Jane, in billowing heavenly blue with rose-ribbons floating at her girdle, was youth incarnate. And it was her youth that had attracted Towne.

The three women walked towards the house together. As they came out from under the arbor, they were aware of black clouds stretched across the horizon. "I hope it won't rain," Edith said, "Lucy is planning to serve dinner on the terrace."

Adelaide was irritable. "I wish she wouldn't. There'll be bugs and things."

Jane liked the idea of an outdoor dinner. She thought that the maids in their pink linen were like rose-leaves blown across the lawn.

When they reached the wide-pillared piazza, no one was there. The wind was blowing steadily from the bank of clouds. Edith went in to get a scarf.

And so Jane and Adelaide were left alone.

Adelaide sat in a big chair with a back like a spreading fan; she was stately, and knew it, but she would have exchanged at the moment every classic line for the effect that Jane gave of unpremeditated grace and beauty.

Jane agreed. "Mr. Towne always seems to be a very busy person."

Adelaide carried a little gauze fan with gold-lacquered sticks. When she spoke she kept her eyes upon the fan. "Do you always call him 'Mr. Towne'?"

"Of course."

"But not when you're alone?"

"But, my dear, it is so very formal. And you are going to marry him."

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D., Dean of The Moody Bible Institute, of Chicago. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for February 11

THE PERILS OF REJECTING CHRIST

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 21:28-43. GOLDEN TEXT—"I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me.—John 14:6."

Fearlessly facing crucifixion within a few days, Jesus stood in the temple, there facing His bitter enemies and replying to their attacks in words such as no man ever spoke.

Every Sunday School lesson is of great importance, but, possibly no lesson we shall ever have to teach will be as important as this one, for it deals very plainly with the awful peril of rejecting Christ.

All church members, who have come into that relationship by smoothly spoken words of acceptance and devotion to Christ which then have not been lived out in the daily walk, may see themselves pictured in the son who courteously and glibly assured his father that he could depend on him, and then promptly went his own way.

Note the word of encouragement to repentant sinners. Perhaps someone who reads this paragraph has at some time rejected Christ and has since thought that he could not turn back, that it was too late for him to do the thing which his heart tells him to do even though his lips have spoken unkind words of rejection.

This parable clearly relates to the Israelites who had rejected the prophets sent to them by God and who were now about to kill His Son. The heartbreaking story of Israel's rejection and judgment which has been upon them all the years since then, is not something over which we should gloat, but rather something which should move us to tears and prayer for our Jewish friends.

No man or woman can go on selfishly taking the benefits of God, using them for self advantage or comfort, turning a deaf ear to the cries of God's messengers, and hope to have any ultimate result other than Christ-rejection. It is high time that thoughtless people who perhaps have no deliberate intention to be wicked or to turn Christ away, should awaken to the fact that they are doing just that by their manner of living.

At first glance one wonders why Christ at this point turned so abruptly from the figure of the vineyard to that of the cornerstones. The reason why He leaves for a moment the image of the vineyard, is because of its inadequacy to set forth one important part of the truth which was needful to make the moral complete, namely this, that the malice of the Pharisees should not defeat the purpose of God—that the Son should yet be the heir—that not merely vengeance should be taken, but that He should take it. Now this is distinctly set forth by the rejected stone becoming the head of the corner, on which the builders stumbled and fell, and were broken—on which they were now already stumbling and falling, and which, if they set themselves against it to the end, would fall upon them and crush and destroy their uterity.

God was not defeated by the crucifixion of Christ. Christ will not be defeated simply because men reject Him in the world. We who are on His side, we who are the followers of the Lord are on the victorious side. Those who oppose Him and speak ill of His name may appear to be victors for the moment, but the judgment of God is yet to come upon them.

Shirred Dress With Corsette Waistline

THE corsette waistline is scheduled for much popularity this coming season, probably because it makes you look so beautifully slim. This simple little dress (8634) with a piquant peasant air about it, has bodice fullness and a rippling skirt, shirred at the top, that look perfectly charming on slender figures. The square neckline is quite deep, the sleeves very round.

This dress will be very pretty made up in bold-figured cottons like percale, calico or gingham for house wear, with rows of rickrack braid. And you'll also like a dress like this for street and informal afternoons, of printed silk or flat crepe.

Pattern No. 8634 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 14 requires 3 3/4 yards of 39-inch material without nap; 1 yard binding; 8 1/2 yards rickrack.
