

CARRIZOZO OUTLOOK

To The People Of Carrizozo

For the record and so that the people may know, we, the Mayor and Trustees now retiring, believe that a partial review of the city's accomplishments, under our stewardship, be re-counted. Believing that the town's independence be benefitted most by as rapid retirement of water bonds, as possible, we have retired $7,000 of the bonds. We have paved 4 miles of the city's streets. In collaboration with the citizenship and W.P.A. we have completed 9 miles of curb and gutter. In like manner, we have completed 35 blocks of cement sidewalks and have finished a flood control job, that we feel sure will stand. We have purchased and paid for, out of fire department funds, a $2400 fire truck, giving the town one of the best pieces of equipment in the state.

We have aided in the completion of the Woman's clubhouse; have improved the park, and installed the Municipal Gas System. Through no fault of our own, we got off to a bad start in the gas business. Our first meters were graduated to accommodate natural gas instead of liquid gas, and the readings of the first few months showed a considerable loss to the city. Also, due to careless handling, we were without the service of the Master meter for some months, and were unable to check the amount consumed against the amount in storage. We have, now, however, gone far enough to be able to say, that our gas system is the finest, cleanest, most economical system for cooking that exists, up to this time. The cost on installation is small, and thus saving both in money and labor, will in a few months, more than compensate. Also, please remember that the gas system belongs to you, The People, and that there will never be any more revenue sought, other than enough for bond retirement and upkeep.

F. E. Richard, Mayor.

GLENCOE WOMAN'S CLUB

Held their regular meeting on May 1, at their clubhouse. A delicious luncheon was served to 10 members and 8 guests by hostesses, Mmes Jackson and Beavers. One very distinguished guest was our State Pres., Mrs. Frances Goddard. We were very happy to have her with us. It was her first visit to our club and coming right after the state convention at Las Vegas, we learned many things of interest. Our delegate was not present to report on the convention, so we have something saved for next time. We are working and looking forward to "A Day in Old Lincoln" with everyone. See our brand quilt on display at museum.

Eaker also attended the festival.

Honored at Tea

A tea was given Saturday at the home of Mrs. Clyde Luckey in Nogal, by Mmes. Luckey. Orsa Stearns and Hardy Shrum, honoring Mrs. Jack Pfingsten, teacher. Spring flowers used for decorating the home were tulips and pansies. Mrs. Stearns received the guests at the door. As a surprise to Mrs. Pfingsten the Tea turned out to be also a miscellaneous shower for her, in appreciation for her efforts and help in our school. She will make her home in El Paso after this term. The honoree received many lovely and useful gifts. Presiding at the tea table were Mmes. Maggie Pfingsten and Yates, mothers of the honoree and husband. At the tea were over 80 guests, which proves the young lady's popularity. —Contributed.

The Old And New Town Boards

With becoming courtesy to each other Tuesday night at the meeting of the Business Men's Club at the Community Center Building, the outgoing and incoming Carrizozo Town Boards passed friendly compliments to and fro when both bodies were guests of the club. Past Mayor F. E. Richard and the new Mayor, M. U. Finley, both made talks, Mr. Richard offering his assistance to the new board if at any time it should see fit to call on him. Mayor Finley responded in the same vein, while members of both boards exchanged greetings of extreme friendliness.

After the meeting, both boards retired to the Trustees' Building, where the old Board turned over the property of the Town to the new Board.

When the retiring Board took charge of affairs, The Outlook offered its assistance in all affairs for the good and welfare, and has endeavored to fulfill that pledge.

It now comes forward with the same offer to the new Board, and it now becomes the duty of every citizen to get behind the new Mayor M. U. Finley and his Town Council and stand abreast with them for the future progress and prosperity of Carrizozo.

Mrs. Reil purchased the properties from Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Lee of El Paso. Another deal went over the passing week, Mrs. Reil selling her ranch at Lucy, N. M., to Alex Hinda of Duran.

"Gone With The Wind"

Will Open at Lyric Theatre Sunday, May 26 and 27

The long-awaited film version of "Gone With The Wind" will open at the Lyric Theatre in Carrizozo at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon, May 26.

There will be two performances Sunday at 2 and 7 p. m. and two shows Monday at 2 and 7 p. m.

The picture is approximately three hours and forty-five minutes long, but that isn't a bit too long for the screen version of the Margaret Mitchell story of the Old South, according to those who have seen the picture.

Reviewers do say, however, that the film version follows the book so closely that few, indeed, are readers of the book who can name any character that has been omitted.

Filed entirely in Technicolor and shown exactly as at the first premiere in Atlanta, Ga.

It will be necessary for patrons to reserve their seats for all four performances.

Quite a number of Carrizozo people played golf in Ruidoso last Sunday.

Mrs. J. F. Petty has recovered from her recent illness, while Mr. Petty is under the weather.

Mrs. J. H. Fulmer of White Oaks was in town yesterday.

Are Birds 'People'? All You Have to Do Is Watch Them at Work or at Play; Then You'll Be Convinced Some of Them Are!

By ATHELENE WATSON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

ARE birds "people"? Why not? For they work like real people and they fill almost as many professions.

"The butcher, the baker, the candlestick-maker" of the world of men become "the butcher, the weaver, the busy street-cleaner" in the bird realm. Birdland is a veritable Greenwich Village, for butchers nest next to actors, carpenters, acrobats, divers and singers.

But who are these butchers and street cleaners? Do they exist? Yes, there really are birds which are aptly called by these names.

The northern shrike and the loggerhead shrike are called "butcher-birds" because they impale their prey on thorns and barbed wire fences or hang them away in the cleft of a tree limb to be eaten later. The northern shrike looks like a masked bandit as it swoops down upon its victims, for it has a strip of black feathers extending from the eyes to the back of the head like a black mask. It flies low over the ground spotting its victims—grasshopper, beetle, mice, snakes or even small birds. Then it turns, climbs upward before it hurtles down to the ground again in one last cruel pounce.

You may be sure that little Jenny Wren does NOT sing, "O, ma-ma, it's the butcher boy for me," for all of the small birds are filled with fear and run for cover when they hear the heavy rapid flapping of the shrike's wings. It is a curious fact that during the mating season the shrike is a very sweet singer, seemingly trying to whitewash the crueler side of its nature during the period of wooing.

And the street cleaner? Why, he's the noisy archin of the bird family who chatters and quarrels on your roof every day—the English sparrow. He's a bold, selfish fellow with uncouth manners for he will crowd uninvited into a well-behaved robin's or bluebird's nest and drive away the real owner. He'll take possession of the house you built for Sir Christopher and Mistress Jenny Wren but in return he'll do one good deed, at least. English sparrows are city scavengers and they'll do a thorough job of street cleaning in front of your house or in an alley nearby.

Baltimore Oriole, the Weaver. The weaver? That's the Baltimore oriole, a weaver by trade. Madame Oriole is a skillful artisan. She fashions a warp of strings fastened firmly around the forked branches of a tree.

DOWNY WOODPECKER

Through this she weaves plant fibers, horsehair, string and strips of bark to make a nest shaped like a pocket-like bag. Baby orioles are lulled to sleep by each gentle breeze in their hammock in the tree-tops.

Orioles are very fond of bright colors and they are not always so scrupulous about property rights in their eagerness to gather material for a nest. A neighbor of mine was seated on the porch sorting scraps of yarn left over from a crocheted afghan. Noon came and she left the yarn in a box while she prepared lunch. When she returned the yarn had disappeared as if by magic. A month later her small son discovered the thief. High in the branches of an elm tree a mother oriole sat proudly on a colorful nest decorated with the stolen yarn!

The humming bird is an artist as well as a weaver for its nest is a thing of delicacy and beauty. The entire nest is about the size of a walnut. It is made of plant down and dried flower petals and held together by silvery spider's web covered with bits of moss. This dainty creation resembles a baby's silver-lined thimble.

There's an industrious fellow among birds who is an excellent carpenter. Nature has given the woodpecker family the tools of the carpenter's trade. Their strong beaks are shaped like chisels so they can easily bore into a tree trunk. Their long cylinder-shaped tongues end in a hard tip, barbed on both sides which can be pushed out underneath the bark of trees. Their legs are short and stout, their claws strong and sharp. Their stiff tail feathers end in sharp spines which can be pushed against the bark of trees to hold them upright as they hammer away at the trunk.

Equipped with these tools it is no trick at all to drill a neat, round hole in a tree and make a snug warm nest. In digging out these retreats, the woodpeckers go in horizontally to the center and then turn downward in an enlarged tunnel until the finished nest is the shape of a long, deep pear. The sawdust which falls while the drilling is going on makes a soft lining for the nest.

The Missus Dissents. The woodpecker is a meticulous worker. It selects the site of its home with care. If the first attempt at excavation proves unsatisfactory, the bird abandons it and tries again. I watched a red-headed woodpecker hammering away one day at the dry limb of an apple tree. His mate, who was perched on a limb nearby, surveyed the work of her brilliant-headed spouse with a critical eye. Suddenly she darted near with a loud whining "charr-r-r-r" and for a few seconds the air was filled with their angry cries. He evidently had the better of the argument for she flicked away with her brown feathers ruffled indignantly.

MEADOWLARK

I cannot vouch for the fact that she had pointed out a flaw in his work, but I do know that an hour later the red-head was chiseling away a few inches down the limb. After drilling in for two inches he seemed to change his mind and flew away in the same direction his mate had taken. When I examined the holes, I discovered that the limb was too badly decayed and a chip had come out, making a hole in the outer wall. In the second cavity the workman had again come too near the surface and scarcely more than the bark remained as protection from the weather. No doubt, the woodpecker's flaming head drooped with shame when his triumphant wife had her chance to chirp "I told you so!"

He's a "Swing" Addict. Singing is, of course, the most popular profession among birds. The song sparrow is a "swing" addict. Their usual song opens with three high-pitched notes followed by complicated warbling trills but no two song sparrows sing exactly the same song.

Are birds people? I was never quite convinced until I found a catbird's nest in our orchard one spring. Held fast to the outside wall by interwoven twigs was a scrap of newspaper containing part of a poem. The title of the poem was a mute appeal "Don't Kill the Bird!"

AMERICAN CROW

The meadowlark thrills you with a clear, sweet "spring-o-the-year, spring-o-the-year" until he notices that he has a human listener. Then he will impolitely turn his back upon you to hide his conspicuous yellow breast from your prying eyes.

The rose-breasted grosbeak is the Beau Brummell of the song-birds but he is the soul of chivalry to his mate for he uses his rich whistling carol to entertain her during the nesting season. He is an example of what the well-dressed young bird is wearing for he has a handsome summer coat of black and rose. In winter he favors a duller suit of brown and rose.

Just as human singers specialize in certain fields of entertainment, such as radio, opera or vaudeville, so do the bird musicians develop their talents along one line. The mocking bird is the king of mimics. He not only imitates the voice of other songsters but improves upon the sound which he imitates.

Charlie McCarthy of Birdland. The scarlet tanager and the wood thrush are both ventriloquists for they can "throw" their voices. I discovered this trick once when a sleepy-looking little owl in a mulberry tree apparently greeted me with a sharp "chip-churr, chip-churr." Then there was a flash of scarlet in a tree nearby and I found that a saucy tanager had used the owl as his Charlie McCarthy.

The blue jay has a cruder sense of humor and uses his power of mimicking to frighten small birds by imitating the scream of the red-shouldered hawk. This is in keeping with his role as the bad boy of birdland, a rogue and a bully who steals from other nests and "picks on" smaller birds. Not all bird musicians choose a vocal career. The downy woodpecker prefers instrumental music. He's the drummer boy, the Gene Krupa of the bird world. For a drum he may use the stub of a dry limb about the size of one's wrist. The ideal "drum" has an outer shell that is hard and resonant with a heart decayed and gone.

The clumsy crow turns buffoon to entertain his fellow birds. He tumbles, hops, skips and turns somersaults as skillfully as any circus clown.

High-Diving Champion. The belted kingfisher chooses water instead of land to exercise his athletic skill. He lives along ponds, lakes, rivers and small creeks for he depends entirely upon fish for food. He hovers over the water until he spies a flash of fins beneath the surface, then plunges after his prey with the accuracy of the butcher bird.

It is one of the fundamental instincts, mother love, which makes the bob white turn actress. If an intruder comes too close to her nest this clever bird pretends to be lame until she has lured her sympathetic follower far from her young.

Are birds people? I was never quite convinced until I found a catbird's nest in our orchard one spring. Held fast to the outside wall by interwoven twigs was a scrap of newspaper containing part of a poem. The title of the poem was a mute appeal "Don't Kill the Bird!"

Star Dust

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO
By VIRGINIA YALE
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

THERE'S a superstition in Hollywood that an actor cast as a newspaper reporter goes right on into bigger and better roles. Robert Paige believes in it firmly, because it's worked for him.

He was brought into pictures from radio because of his ability as a singer—and then he was given one part after another in which he had no chance to sing. He seemed to be stuck in melodramatic roles. Then he was cast as a newspaper reporter in "Golden Gloves," and again played a reporter in "Opened by Mistake." And now he's booked for the leading male role in Paramount's "Dancing on a Dime," a musical comedy, in which he'll play opposite Grace MacDonal—and will sing and dance, at last!

At 75, May Robson has no idea how many roles she has played on stage and screen, but she's ready to tackle her newest one, that of Ellen Drew's grandmother, in "Texas Rangers Ride Again." It's one of Birthday greetings from Gary Cooper to May Robson. The most strenuous parts of her long career, that of a spunky old lady who looks upon modern Texas peace officers as poor successors to the ones she knew in her youth.

You'll be able to see Pat O'Malley, of radio's "Alec Templeton Time," on the screen before long. His first picture will be "Captain Cautious," in which he will play a Cockney sailor who is captured during the War of 1812—and in which he'll sing the "Apple Song," which he has already performed on the Templeton program.

When you see "A Night at Earl Carroll's" you'll also see what was, two years ago, the community's most expensive night club. Remember when it opened, with a special section for movie stars? Nowadays it's a dime-and-dance emporium in the evenings, but during the days it's been returned to its former glory by Paramount. Ken Murray and Rose Hobart play the leads in the picture, Cobina and Brenda, radio's comedy team, and some of the much publicized Earl Carroll beauties will support them, and Earl Carroll, besides acting as producer, will play himself.

The Philadelphia-LaScala Opera company wants Deanna Darbin to make her operatic career under its auspices next season. James Melton's already signed with the company.

Ben Grauer has grabbed off the most-coveted announcing assignment in radio. He's been selected to introduce Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt when she takes the air. Oddly enough, he and she will be in studios hundreds of miles apart, since she will be on the go most of the time; she'll broadcast from a city convenient to her schedule, and he'll chime in from a New York studio.

He is an energetic, jovial young man, who, since he joined NBC 10 years ago, has been working toward liberating the announcer from his stiff-necked, plush-voiced make-up. He's been trying to sound like a human being, and deserves a medal for the way that he has succeeded, and inspired other announcers to unbend.

Radio's "Uncle Ezra," (Pat Barrett) a confirmed bachelor in his National Barn Dance air show, found on his arrival in Hollywood recently that the screen expects him to have a wife. In the Bob Burns picture, "Comin' Round the Mountain," "Uncle Ezra" will find himself wedded to a movie actress, whether he likes it or not.

Nine years and 49 weeks ago Joan Blondell decided that she might as well leave Hollywood and go back to New York, because she'd never get anywhere in pictures. She was working in "Sinner's Holiday," with James Cagney, and she made up her mind that she'd stick it out till the picture was finished. But she never got away. In fact, she's been so much in demand that she's had only a few trips to New York to do shopping, and the one she made with Dick Powell on their over-ballyhooed honeymoon.

The Once-Over

By H.I. Phillips

THE CAUTIOUS SALESMAN ("The automobile industry is asked by the Federal Trade Commission to adopt a code. Under it there must be no exaggeration of gasoline mileage. And in selling a second hand car strict truth as to its history is demanded.")—News Item.)

Customer (interested in a new car)—This looks like a wonderful car for the money?
Salesman—Well, I wouldn't want to go that far.
Customer—It's by far the best looking job on the market, today.
Salesman (ever mindful of the code) — Suppose we just say one of the best, and avoid all chance of trouble.

Customer (still elated)—What is the horse power?
Salesman (hesitatingly) — I understand direct from headquarters that it is ninety horse, but I would rather not say so on my own responsibility.

Customer — Has it four-wheel brakes, shock absorbers and the new magnetic shift?
Salesman—The catalogue, which I have every reason to believe is correct, says so. It is my belief that it has. But if you decide to take this one I will crawl under and check up to make certain. In fact, I would feel it my duty to do so.

Customer—How many miles does it give to the gallon?
Salesman (who has been dreading this one)—I was afraid of that. And you will have to accept whatever I say as being my best opinion. The factory says it will do twenty to the gallon, our sales manager has been heard to claim twenty-four and we have customers who claim they only get eighteen. Washington thinks nineteen is a better estimate. I would be inclined to stifle along with the government and avoid criticism.

Customer (now a little less enthusiastic)—Have you any good used cars?
Salesman—That is a question we have to be very careful about answering these days. Here is one that came in yesterday.

Customer (looking it over)—Has it been driven much?
Salesman — It depends on what it is meant by "much." I try to avoid the word as having too many shades of meaning.

Customer (pretty tired of it all by this time)—What I mean is how old is it?
Salesman—The serial number is 678456, and, according to the records, this makes it a car manufactured in 1938.

Customer—How many miles has it gone?
Salesman (wincing)—The speedometer says 11,000 miles. The owner has given an affidavit swearing that the speedometer has not been tampered with. Our office manager certifies that it has not been changed or fooled with here. I can say nothing more. Washington is very strict on this point.

Customer—Has it—
Salesman (with an air of finality)—Now, I'll tell you what to do. Take it out. Run it for a month or so. Make your own decision. Then make us an offer. THEN I'LL PUT THE WHOLE PROPOSITION BEFORE THE PROPER FEDERAL OFFICIALS AND WE'LL SEE IF WE CAN ALL CONCLUDE THE DEAL WITH CLEAR CONSCIENCES!

HO HUM!
When people grow lyric about the spring,
And gush over bluebirds and daffodils;
Wrens building nests out of grasses and string;
Only taxes I see, and overdue bills.

Blue of the jay is the hue of my mood.
Chirp of a robin brings curse on his head;
Give me a crow, though his manners are rude;
He is always in black—I am tired of red.

The estate of John D. Rockefeller has succeeded in getting Lakewood, N. J., to accept, free of charge, the 650-acre showplace of the late oil king down there. Some people have all the luck.

SPRING
Sniffy colds, forsythia,
Daffodils and men with picks,
Pussywillows, funny hats,
Love, hand organs, baby chicks.

Fishing pamphlets, grass seed ads,
Paint and varnish, spring-lamb stew,
Robins, peas and liver pads—
Doc, I can't shake off this flu!

The home builder's last words:
"Now, then, let's take up the extras, if any."

Our Faults
To acknowledge our faults when we are blamed, is modesty; to discover them to one's friends in ingenuousness, is confidence; but to preach them to all the world, if one does not take care, is pride. —Confucius.

Speed housecleaning!
Save hours of time. Polish as you clean!

Lady, you needn't tire yourself, waste hours of time cleaning and waxing your wood-work, furniture and floors. Instead, O-Cedar cleans, polishes and shines as you clean; do both at once so easily. . . for O-Cedar cleans the ugly dirty film of dirt and grease instead a lovely glow, a soft and silken lustre. The same is true of Bob Feller. The 21-year-old Van Meter sensation is only getting under way. With only a fair share of luck Feller has at least 15 big years left—years during which he might easily turn out to be the same thing to baseball that Bobby Jones was to golf...

A Close-Up on Feller... I had breakfast with Bobby Feller in Tampa the morning of the all-star game for the Finnish fund. He was as unspooled as any prominent athlete I have ever known...

I noticed another leading point. For example, as Joe Cronin, boss of the Boston Red Sox, came into the dining room he came well out of his way to slap Feller on the back and say, "Hello, slug." As other veterans came by they'd all stop by Feller's table with "Hello, bucket," "Howya, kid," "Hello, Bob,"

Fiction Pales Before Career Of Kid McCoy

By ROBERT McSHANE (Released by Western Newspaper Union.) NORMAN SELBY was the "real McCoy."

It was under the name of "Kid McCoy" that Selby became one of the best and most glamorous boxing champions of half a century ago. The "real McCoy" was originated when the Kid billed himself that way in opposition to a rival who also called himself McCoy.

There were no tears shed at the Kid's funeral. He had caused too much trouble during his lifetime, had pulled too many mean tricks and was never too particular about how he fought as long as he was victorious. But Kid McCoy was a great fighter. Boxing old timers remember him as a paralyzing puncher...

Lesson in Cunning... McCoy reveled in victimizing his opponents. The old shoe lace gag was one of his best. In the midst of combat he would pause, point down, and tell his opponent to "hurry up, tie your shoe laces." When the victim looked, McCoy struck.

Sailor Tom Sharkey, now living in San Francisco, recalls the Kid with no fond memories. He tells about their fight in New York back in 1899. The Kid came into the ring that KID (THE REAL) McCOY... night with his gloves on. Sharkey's manager, Tommy Rourke, ordered the gloves removed. They were full of plaster. One good punch could have brought a permanent close to Sharkey's career.

That's a fight Sharkey will never forget. Odds were 10 to 6 McCoy would beat him. When the Kid knocked him down in the first round the ringside odds went to 10 to 3. But the Sailor weathered the storm. He started working on his opponent's stomach; and the referee counted 10 over the Kid in the tenth round. Sharkey couldn't forget the matter of the loaded gloves.

The most lurid fiction is tame when compared to McCoy's life story. At various stages in his career he was a millionaire and a hobo. He was a world's boxing champion and a jailbird. He married nine times—three times to the same woman. He served eight of a 28-year sentence for murder. Once he was proprietor of a jewelry store, and once he swamped out saloons. It's almost impossible not to be melodramatic when writing of McCoy. His life was a series of fantastic adventures.

Unpleasant Memory

Tom Sharkey recalls another unpleasant incident in the Kid's life. "I remember," Tom says, "how he met Tommy Ryan, in 1898, after working as Ryan's sparring partner and learning all his tricks, still hiding his own skill. He wrote Ryan he was dead broke and sick and wouldn't Ryan give him a chance to make some money? It would be just a workout for Ryan, but it meant a change for the Kid. He told Ryan he wouldn't even have to train. Ryan took him at his word and gave him the fight. McCoy beat him unmercifully—and laughed about it."

The tables were once turned on McCoy, however. He was the victim of an upset that ranks with the game's most inexplicable. Meeting Jack McCormick in 1899 in Chicago, the Kid was rated a 100 to 1 shot to win. One second after the bell the Kid was stretched on the floor senseless. McCormick had knocked him out with the first punch.

Rugged Individualist

A note was found beside McCoy's body. His message was that he no longer could stand the "madness of the world." Perhaps the Kid was discouraged because there was no longer a spotlight shining upon him. He was a rugged—and ruthless—individual. Only extremes meant anything to him. He scorned the well-trodden path, always seeking glory and excitement. When they could no longer be his he decided, for the first time, to throw in the towel.

NEW DRUG AIDS WAR ON PESTS

Kills Insects Without Injury To Animals.

Government chemists have developed and proved a new drug, known as phenothiazine, which will kill insects without injury to warm-blooded animals, including man.

Scientists who conducted the research said phenothiazine is "one of the most versatile chemical substances brought to light in recent years." It has not as yet been placed on the market.

As soon as manufacturers make application to the secretary of agriculture, phenothiazine will be released as a medicine for treating certain infestations of sheep, swine and horses which heretofore have resisted medication.

As an insecticide, phenothiazine has been specifically effective in controlling such pests as the codling moth, Mexican bean beetle and grape berry moth. It has not been effective against the boll weevil, tobacco hornworms and the Japanese beetle.

The drug has proved effective in the control of mosquitoes, but its use is somewhat limited because of the cost. But for rock garden ponds for example, enough phenothiazine to prevent mosquito breeding will not harm goldfish, nor is it harmful to wildlife that might drink at treated ponds.

Flexible Farm Lease Cuts Moving Losses

More than four-fifths of the Farm Security administration tenant-borrowers now have written leases, one-fourth of which are either automatically renewable or run for periods of more than one year, said Dr. Will W. Alexander, FSA administrator, in a recent report to the secretary of agriculture.

Favoring written leases is one of Farm Security's steps toward slowing down the movement of tenant farmers. In 1936 one-third of the tenant farmers—approximately 5,000,000 people—moved. Minimum cost of moving was $50 per family, for the families involved. Landlords also suffered damage and depreciation. The nation lost by waste of soil encouraged by such tenure practices. "Oral agreements lead to disagreements and unnecessary moving," Dr. Alexander comments. A flexible farm lease form has been prepared by the Farm Security administration which can be fitted easily to needs of farmer and landlords in any part of the country. It provides that the lease shall continue in effect for several years, or that it shall not be terminated by either party without written notice to the other, several months in advance.

Best Churning Cream Determined by Tests

The best test for cream to be churned into butter is about 29 per cent—at least from the standpoint of avoiding loss of butterfat with the buttermilk, according to trials of the Wisconsin agricultural experiment station.

Cream testing 29 per cent had a satisfactorily short churning time of less than 36 minutes. Cream with a test of 21 per cent churned in 28 minutes, and 25 per cent cream in 32 minutes, but the time and power saved with these lower testing creams did not offset the disadvantage of losing more fat in the buttermilk.

This work showed it is doubly desirable to avoid churning cream with a higher test than 33 per cent, because under such conditions there is not only a high loss of fat but also a tendency toward salty or oily body in the butter.

All these trials were carried out with cream standardized to a desired butterfat content, pasteurized at 150 degrees Fahrenheit for 30 minutes, cooled to 45 degrees, and held for 16 hours at that temperature, and then churned at 50 degrees in motor-driven churns operating at a fixed speed.

Fish Meal as Feed

Two per cent of codliver oil in the chicken fattening ration or 2 per cent of best quality codliver oil plus a 15 per cent level of high-grade fish meal, fed for a six-month period up to the time of killing, was without detrimental effect on the flavor of the meat, either fresh or stored. This was the finding with Light Sussex chickens in a test reported from the school of agriculture at Cambridge, England.

Bang's Disease

Failure to eradicate Bang's disease in dairy herds usually is due to three factors. First, farmers may fail to remove promptly all aborting cows from other cattle and to destroy the aborted material before it has infected other cows. Second, owners may introduce into their herds cattle carrying the Bang's disease organism. Third, owners may neglect to have the Bang's tests made at sufficiently close intervals.

How tall is Venus de Milo? 5. Who was the first man elected to the presidency who knew how to drive a car? 6. What makes wood decay? 7. What is a mahout, an Indian chief, a hog caller, or an elephant driver? 8. Do stars produce static over the radio? 9. Why were old-time bridges covered? 10. What live river flows into the Dead sea?

The Answers

- 1. The side to the left of a person facing downstream. 2. Los Angeles. 3. They develop their blossom buds during the previous summer. 4. Six feet three inches. 5. Warren G. Harding. 6. Bacteria and certain microscopic plants called fungi grow in the wood and destroy its structure. 7. An elephant driver. 8. On certain wave lengths a small amount of static comes from interstellar space, evidently being produced by the stars. 9. Many old-time wooden bridges were built with roofs and sides to protect them from the weather and thus save them from quick deterioration. Despite a popular impression to the contrary, they were not covered to shelter travelers during storms. 10. The Jordan.

AROUND THE HOUSE

When you boil potatoes and want them to be fluffy, put a heaped teaspoonful of sugar in the boiling water. They will taste delicious.

A generous-sized shoe bag hung on the inside of the downstairs hall closet door can serve for storing many articles—caps, mittens, rubbers, small brooms, hat brushes, etc.

If you like scented linens and use scented soaps store the soap, unwrapped, in the linen drawers or closet. Sachets, too, lend pleasing odors.

Mildew can be avoided if damp articles are never placed in clothes hampers. Dry all clothing and household linen thoroughly. Don't let it collect in damp basements, dark closets or other spots that are likely to be damp.

To clean bed springs use a long-handled, moderate-sized bottle brush. Dip the brush in hot water quite often. Such a brush gets into corners much more easily than the dish mop which ordinarily is used for this purpose.

Your stockings will not ladder if you add a few drops of vinegar to the water when you wash them for the first time. It strengthens the weave.

Slide fasteners are very convenient for furniture coverings. They make it easy to remove and replace the covers for cleaning. Such fasteners are available in washable, nonrust materials.

In sewing buttons back in place on upholstered furniture put the button on the loop end of a wire hairpin. Push the opposite end of the hairpin through the fabric and catch the button in place with a heavy needle and strong thread. Remove the hairpin and finish sewing on the button.

Nazis Solidify Norwegian Gains As Fierce Fighting Is Reported; Britain Claims Sinking 30 Ships

II GERMAN WAR: Nordic Phase

And still the Nordics fought among themselves up north—Norsemens, Germans, English, Anglo-Canadians and an occasional Norman peasant from Quebec. As some of the smoke and propaganda clouds lifted a bit, interesting news items revealed themselves to the American public. The Germans had captured Oslo, Norse capital, with an air-wafted force of 2,000 men. They had captured Narvik with a few hundred men. They had taken Bergen, second city of Norway, with a corporal's guard of 100. They had occupied Trondheim without firing a shot. So much for expert Trojan horsemanship.

It appeared, further, that many of the English troops dumped from the transports into Norway, were ill-equipped "territorial" militia, or half-trained regulars, without proper aerial support, heavy artillery, tanks, or even automatic rifles. The Germans facing them, had plenty of good, new automatic weapons, air bombers and fighters, anti-aircraft, tanks, and considerable knowledge of the Norwegian language. According to the military critics, the German leadership and staff work, too, seemed superior. As the German invaders worked their militant way along portions of the Swedish frontier, Sweden recoiled in terror, although German "promises" offered to soothe them. German "promises" make shaky Swedes.

Under leadership of Admiral Lindstrom, Sweden's small but powerful navy is being tuned to full war-time strength.

Sea Losses

London claimed the loss of 30 German ships in two weeks; most of them troop transports. Four, said England, were captured; the rest were destroyed. Sinking transports is always a hideous process, and English sources reported 3,000 German bodies washed ashore on the eastern rocks of Oslo inlet. In the Skaggerak, the usually optimistic French reported the sinking of a couple of German patrol boats, at the hands of a flotilla of Gallic destroyers. Rumors from Berlin—and elsewhere—continued to whisper that more than half of England's 15 big capital warships were down or out.

But the English countered with the announcement of five coming new sea mammoths, an effort to fill up the decimated ranks. These water monsters would be paid for out of the coming fiscal year's budget of $3,000,000,000, including sales tax, "for the sake of victory." Excluding marines, sailors, deck hands, and flyers, England announced that its armed and armored man-total was now 2,000,000.

Norse Notations

Two Norse flyers stole a big German seaplane, painted out its insignia crosses, and flew it to England, where they joined the royal air force. The incident shows the evils of drink: the Nazi pilots had been beered.

C. J. Hambro, president of the Norwegian parliament, issued a statement that his country has definite proof that Germany planned its invasion of Norway for months. He also said that the night before the invasion a German whaling boat, crowded with hidden troops and supplies, sailed into the port of Narvik—flying the American flag.

Enterprising German troops, dropped by parachute behind the Norse lines, eddied down to earth carrying collapsible bicycles, machine-guns, radio-transmitting sets, cameras, saws, other tools, and gas-welding equipment.

President Roosevelt recognized officially the still undeclared Nordic war, and put Norway, like other belligerents, on a strictly cash-and-carry basis. Germany set up a puppet government in German-occupied Norway, modeled on that of German-occupied Czechoslovakia-Slovakia.

HAIL COLUMBIA: III Term

It looked more than ever like a Third Term effort by the White House white father. The President let out tentative plans for a three-week junket around the country in June, to counteract the Republican national convention at Philadelphia that month. Some of the political railbirds thought that Franklin would keep the Populus Americanus guessing until the very opening of the Democratic convention, at Chicago, in mid-July. Anti-duodecimals continued to yammer loudly against the President's seeming indecision. Pro-Roosevelt smiled sagely. Republican Publisher Frank Gannett of Rochester, N. Y., declared that four more Rooseveltian years might spell some great national calamity. Mr. Gannett seemed to indicate that there was a fiery Trojan Horse (of purest Norse breed) in the White House back-room. But Democratic Senator Guffey was renominated in Pennsylvania—on the ticket of a man who was a totalitarian for Roosevelt.

Taussig Tempest

Rear Admiral Joe Taussig, assistant chief of American naval operations, stuck his neck out, when he testified on the navy expansion bill to a senatorial committee. He said we needed badly an independent China; that we better fight Japan with the help of England, France and Holland; and added that it would be, strictly, a naval war—as the Yankee buffalo and the Nippon whale could hardly get at one another by land.

Everybody scrambled around disavowing Mr. Taussig, "Cromwell" of the navy department. Secretary Hull, Secretary Edison, admirals, and "bureaucrats" all talked in worried, unhappy circles. Senator Clark of Missouri suggested a court-martial, to the open approval of masses of plain American citizens.

Japanese spokesmen took the incident with remarkable tact and good manners, considering that they are often labeled as "Far Eastern Prussians." They merely reminded their public that this was a Yankee election year, with plenty of "free" talk—to which they were too polite to add "cheap." Nevertheless, in service circles, Mr. Taussig ("would he were tongue-tied") is considered a good man.

PROPAGANDA: Anglo & Teuto

The Germans brought out still another propaganda job (White Book), to prove that the English had issued orders the first week in April, to seize Norse strategic points. According to the "plan," Norse defense against England, was to be phoney. Anglo-Norse "connivance" was the keynote of this masterpiece, ceremoniously distributed to the faithful, and to the press.

The London press tried turning on the pessimistic faucet, to explain Norse reverses, and English trimmings in Norway. The newspapers told their readers it would be a long, hard war up north, and appealed primarily—a clever propaganda dodge in England—to native Briton bulldoggery. On Germans, French, and Americans, this type of gloom-spreading has been proved disastrous; in Russia, as in England, it works!

It's a strange fact, but Americans know more about their war than Europeans themselves.

SUPREME COURT: Pro-Picketing

The nine, not-so-old any more, men stood up for labor again. They ruled an unconstitutional the anti-picketing legislation of Alabama and California, and said that free discussion of laborite lapses was a basic part of democratic government. Roosevelt-appointed Justice Murphy, now a "sophomore" on the court, wrote the opinions. Justice Matthews, Wilson-appointed, hardly popular at any time, dissented.

First Out

When the Germans invaded Norway, Captain W. A. McHale, skipper of the American freighter Mormacsea, was warned that if he left the harbor of Trondheim, he was "on his own responsibility" because of the naval warfare in the North sea. Nevertheless he sailed and is pictured here as he arrived safely in New York—his boat being the first to reach the United States from the Scandinavian war zone since the outbreak of hostilities there.

YANKEE OGPU: Doctor Dies

A sensational New York subway worker, and union leader, told the Dies committee that Reds, on the up-and-up in labor organizations, were all set to shut down industry and public services, and to tie up Manhattan, while they practiced with firearms in gun clubs. Lots of people seemed much impressed by all this. Others derided the testimony, and its talkative source.

Another witness declared that Mervyn Rathbone, president of the American Communications association, was a dangerous red. Roosevelt had put him on the board of the National Youth administration, and Mrs. Roosevelt had praised him in her news column. This witness said that 150 red radio men, on U. S. ships, planned to tie up the whole Yankee marine in case of war. Here was another thrill.

An ex-communist said he feared a red general strike, and a second American civil war. Mr. Dies, himself, feared Trojan horsemanship; but Mrs. Roosevelt, perhaps better informed in these matters, said Americans had better be calm. Mr. Dies and Mrs. R. are not keen about one another. Dies also feared herds of red and brown Trojan Horses, grazing allegedly on the pampas, if any, of Mexico.

NAMES in the news . . .

Premier Mackenzie King of Canada, on a vacation junket in Dixie, visited President Roosevelt at Warm Springs, Ga., and John D. Rockefeller Jr. at the magnificent colonial restoration job in Williamsburg, Va. The premier also sight-saw and chatter-boxed in Washington, where he is well liked, and even better known.

Handsome Sir Anthony Eden, almost forgotten, welcomed a "rough" gang of "ready" Newfoundlanders to England. They came to join up, but unlike the spruce Canadians, had no uniforms. They will serve as loggers, trawlers, gunners, and flyers. Eden made much of them, the tactful young Apollo now being dominions secretary, in the Chamberlain-Churchill cabinet.

Tom Dewey's loyal New York office reported that the demon district prosecutor had been away from his office only 17 days out of the last 66½. Anti-Dewbirds (if the breed is called) replied that, anyway, the bright young man got around much too much for his age. Meanwhile, Dewey was golfing in Colorado Springs.

Since the Germans took over unhappy Denmark, Iceland has become virtually independent. Bertil E. Kvialheim, a U. S. foreign service officer, now becomes our consul-general in this new "nation" of 100,000 people. Stefan Joh Stefansson, Icelandic trade commissioner in New York, becomes consul-general, here in America, for his historic island home, till lately a Danish dominion. Iceland is about the size of Scotland; has the world's oldest parliament. Meanwhile, Lawrence Steinhart, U. S. ambassador to Russia, left the Soviets for America, on a two-month vacation. Critics wondered whether this was a "tactical" way to call home our top-nuncio from that red Moscow.

Capt. J. W. Keegan, U. S. N., was chosen first commander of our new naval aircraft-carrier, Wasp. The Wasp is nearly 15,000 tons, and carries about 3,000 men. This is the sixth ship, named Wasp, in the history of the American navy.

Gov. Arthur James, Republican governor of Pennsylvania, told Indiana editors that idle men and idle money might drive a desperate President Roosevelt into that second German war. Pa's favorite son stressed "peace and jobs"; Louisa, in 1917, stressed a platform of "peace and lead."

Who's Afraid of the Big, Bad Pups? Not Susie!

Jack fell down and lost his crown (as best pet), and Jill came tumbling after. Both pups were decidedly glum after Susie, coy maiden in the center, was named blue ribbon winner in the New York Boys' club sixth annual pet show. And look at the kittenish twinkle in her queenly eyes as she lords it over the droopy-eared pups. Jack, incidentally, is pictured on the left.

Swedish Defense Units Practice Maneuvers

With the rumble of cannon in their ears, Sweden's army and navy prepare for any eventuality. Left: Gunners of the Swedish submarine Malmö shown manning the rapid-fire anti-aircraft (pom-pom) gun on the deck of their craft. This gun, made in Sweden, is one of the most effective anti-aircraft guns manufactured. It is particularly useful against diving bombers. Right: A huge, new Swedish army tank demonstrates its ability to climb a sandbag barricade.

Next White House Occupant?

Robert Taft of Ohio, Rep. Joe Martin of Massachusetts, Postmaster General James A. Farley, and Wendell Willkie. Taft, Martin and Willkie are Republicans; Farley a Democrat.

Mormon Leader

Heber J. Grant, 83-year-old president of the Mormon church, who was released recently from a Los Angeles hospital after treatment for a stroke. Ordained an apostle in October, 1932, and made president in November, 1933, he has spent 63 years in the service of his church.

'American Mother of 1940'

"American Mother of 1940" was the title bestowed upon Mrs. Edith Graham Mayo, widow of the late Charles Mayo, Rochester, Minn., surgeon, at her Tucson, Ariz., winter home. Award was made by the American mothers committee of the Golden Rule foundation of New York city. Mrs. Mayo is the mother of eight children.

"I'd like to wring Len Hardesty's neck," said Aunt Olympia. "This is what I call a blow below the belt."

"Len Hardesty." Adele looked suddenly sick. "Aunt Olympia—do you think Len did this to my sister?"

"Oh, naturally," said Aunt Olympia philosophically. "That's his business. But he never seemed to notice Helen—he never paid any attention to her or what she was doing. I didn't suppose he even knew about it. Those lousy newspaper men! They know everything. Can't keep their minds on one girl—even a beauty—got to be nosing into everything!"

Adele stood up. She looked dazed. "I told him," she said faintly. "I told him Sunday. I thought it was funny."

"You told him Sunday, Adele? Oh, that's it, then! He cooked up that speech and sicked the A.P. onto us."

"But Aunt Olympia—would he do that?" Adele stammered. And her face was so white and anguished, her wide eyes had turned to such midnight darkness, that Aunt Olympia's heart went out to her.

"It's his job, my dear, and a job's a job." Hilda appeared in the door. "It's Mr. Hardesty, looking like the wrath of God—and if he didn't sleep in those clothes then I'm no laundress."

Adele started swiftly for the side door.

"Don't go, my dear," said the Senator gently. "It's always good politics to hear both sides."

Adele turned obediently and went to the window and stood with her back to the room, to the door Len Hardesty would enter, staring out into the garden with eyes that saw nothing. Helen and Limpy stood up, rigid, white of face, as Len Hardesty came in. Aunt Olympia poured herself a cup of coffee. The Senator patted his lips with a napkin, despite the fact he had eaten nothing.

"Hello, Len," he said. "Bring some hot coffee, Hilda. Sit down, Len."

"The wrath of God" well described him. He was pale. He had not shaved. His eyes were black and dark-circled. He glanced just once at Adele's slim back silhouetted against the windows.

"Well, there's the devil to pay now," he said dejectedly. "Well, pay him!" said Olympia crisply. "You've got your fingers on his purse-strings, haven't you?"

"Oh, I'm paying and don't think I'm not," he said doggedly. "Senator, I—I give you my word, I never anticipated this."

"Was it a nightmare?" asked Aunt Olympia. "Oh, I know I should have realized I was stirring up a hornet's nest, but we've been in such a damned hole over the whole mess—I just thought it would be one more jack-in-the-box from the bag of tricks."

"You wrote that speech, Len Hardesty, and don't you dare to deny it." "I don't deny it. And that's all I did do. I thought maybe it would stir up a little local fuss and maybe entice a few rabidly Americanistic partisans, and God knows we need them. I thought it would shut the Senator up on subversive activities, which the Governor doesn't know a tinker's dam about."

"If that's all you did, how about these papers?" demanded Aunt Olympia. "The dirty skunk! d'Allotti, I mean. It suddenly dawned on him that if he could drag you into it, Senator, you'd get him out to clear your own skirts. Use your pull with the administration. He called the newsmen after I left. A pal down there tipped me off and I flew back down. I've worked like a devil on it but I couldn't stop it."

"You'd better have a drink, Len," said the Senator kindly. "Vof look all in. Ring, Ollie."

"Scotch and soda for me," he said briefly.

"You'd better have ham and eggs. Bring him some food, Hilda. After all, we can't starve snakes on our very doorstep. It would give us a bad press."

"It's not irreparable, even yet, Senator," said Len Hardesty. "Now if you had a good publicity man—like me, for instance—"

"He's on his way out here, now," said the Senator. "Cece, too. We phoned him."

"He'll work out the details. And if he's good enough, he can even make capital of it. Of course, he'll get you a nation-wide hook-up to answer the charges. He will not let you make any statements until you have spoken straight to the nation. He will have you start off by saying that from the beginning of time it has been the practice of cowards and curs to hide behind the skirts of a woman—preferably, a young and pretty woman."

"Now, in the second place, after holding him up to public scorn for trying to ease out behind a petticoat, you will adroitly mention that his purpose is to get you to use your influence to get him out of the jam."

"Get him out! I'd get him into the electric chair, if I could!"

"Work that in, in your own snave and diplomatic language. You will bring out that he was received at all the best houses in Washington, and if you meet a man at the home of the President or a cabinet member, you cannot very well ask if he is a spy. You'll use your record—which is okay, for I've been combing it myself. Of course, you can prove that Helen didn't show him any papers because you never took any home with you and they were locked up. This really should make a sort of martyr out of you and win you any number of votes. You know voters."

"But how about me?" asked Helen faintly. "What does it do to me, Len?"

Len looked at her. Helen looked more anguished, Aunt Olympia thought, than she had at the funeral so long ago.

"It's a tough break, Helen," he said. "You've just got to keep your head up and take it on the chin. He's using you as a cover-up and everybody will know it. You didn't tell him anything, and stick to it. You merely met him."

"She couldn't tell him anything confidential," said the Senator stoutly. "For I never told her anything. Most of it was so technical I didn't really understand it myself. I just believe we ought to have a strong defense; and anything they said was for better defense, I was in favor of."

"Helen," said Len, diffidently, "do you mind—telling us about—the map you gave him?"

"Map! I never gave him a map!" "She couldn't! I haven't got a map myself."

"He says you gave him a map of our national defenses." "She never had a map!"

"He couldn't possibly mean that relief map of the United States, could he?—Don't you remember, Uncle Lancy? I asked you about it. He brought the map to show how vulnerable we are and I asked you."

"Was it your map, Helen?" "No, he brought it. He marked all our vulnerable points with a red pencil. And I asked you, Uncle Lancy, and you said the Mexican border was defended, and the Atlantic seaboard had strings of defenses all across the country and that all the shipbuilding places were fortified, and Boston and Manhattan and Washington. Don't you remember? I marked them with a blue pencil."

"And you gave him the map?" "No. After we had it marked, he rolled it up to take along and I said I wanted it to send—as a sort of souvenir. I kept it."

"Have you got it?" "Yes. It's up in my desk."

"Will you get it?" "Yes, of course."

Aunt Olympia turned to Limpy. "Do you feel better, darling? Do you want an aspirin?"

"No. I just want a good sharp stiletto with a poisoned point. Helen is so good—"

"Sow the wind and reap the whirlwind," said Len moodily. "That's what I did."

"Well, experience is a good thing," said the Senator sympathetically. "I know I've learned a lot that way."

"Here is the map," said Helen. "See, Uncle Lancy? Gabriel drew the blue lines to show where we are vulnerable. I didn't know anything about it myself and you told me about defending the shipyards and the cities and the harbors."

The Senator examined the map with two pairs of glasses. "Dear me, Helen, you did a very bad job of it," he said reprovingly. "You must have those forts 200 miles off. And those submarine bases—tch, tch, tch!"

"I didn't try to be accurate," said Helen. "I didn't know enough, in the first place. We weren't being technical about it. But when he was criticizing our unpreparedness, I just boastfully drew red lines around every city I could think of."

"Is anything of secret nature indicated on this map?" asked Len. "Lord, no," said the Senator with unwonted profanity. "There's not only nothing secret; there's nothing right. I'm afraid I didn't make myself very clear, Helen."

"Yes, you did, Uncle Lancy; but you weren't trying to be explicit and I didn't think it made any difference whether I put the red marks north or south, or even if I missed the town entirely; we were laughing; it was just a joke—then!" she added pathetically.

"You can give photostatic copies of this map to the press," suggested Len Hardesty. "Not till after your speech. That's the highlight. And rest assured, the nation'll be on the air, from White House down to white wings."

"It's more easily repairable for you—than for me," he said with another glance at Adele's silhouette before the window. "Well, I'll be getting along, Senator. I'm sorry. We're reduced to snatching at straws; I thought this was a straw and snatched at it; I didn't realize it was tied to dynamite."

The Senator held out his hand. "Good-by, Len. It was a bad break. You look thin. Doesn't Brother Wilkie see that you get your three squares a day?"

"You look terrible," said Aunt Olympia cheerfully. "You're a couple of swell sports," he said moodily. "You've ruined the whole campaign for me. Remember how I used to love campaigns? Not any more!"

CHAPTER X

It seemed to Aunt Olympia that she had been called upon that day to endure more than could reasonably be expected even of a President's wife. But the day was not over. She had no more than seen them all comfortably relaxed and settled down when Dave Cooper arrived with Cecil Dodd. Dave looked disconcerted, almost disheveled. Before he could say a word, Cecil Dodd crossed debonairly to Limpy's chair, smiling, and said, "Hello, Limpy! I brought you a present!"

Aunt Olympia's backbone stiffened stanchly. "Limpy's too young to be receiving presents," interrupted Aunt Olympia. "She's not of age yet."

"She's not too young to be receiving presents," said Cecil Dodd. "This is a political present. Any Slophshire-Senator fan can receive political presents. Look, Limpy. It's a little Slophshire pin. I had it made to order."

"Let me see that pin!" said Olympia angrily. "What does it say on there? That doesn't look like Vote-Slophshire to me!"

"Oh, there wasn't room for all that!" explained Cecil Dodd. "I had to cut it down to Slophshire, or it wouldn't go on. And I didn't think enamel would look good on platinum, so I just had it engraved."

"Look at this, Del," said Olympia. "If those are diamonds around the edge of it, Limpy can't have it till I pry them out."

"Aw, Uncle Lancy!" wailed Limpy. The Senator put on his glasses. "They don't look like diamonds to me," he said firmly.

"They're brilliants," said Cecil hastily. "Certainly," said the Senator. "I could see that. And if they are diamonds, they're only chip diamonds. Cece says they're brilliants."

"Well, what's a diamond but a brilliant?" demanded Aunt Olympia. "Rhinestones are brilliants," said Adele helpfully.

"Sure! Brilliant rhinestones!" corroborated Cecil Dodd. "Del Slophshire."

"Uncle Lancy!" from Limpy. "I feel very much honored to have little Limpy flashing through the campaign in a Slophshire pin," said the Senator determinedly.

"Sure! Let me pin it on your shoulder, Limpy!"

Before the rapt eyes of the rest of the family, the outraged ones of Aunt Olympia, with Limpy smiling pleased approval, Cecil Dodd deftly attached the tiny pin to the shoulder of her frock and smiled down into her face.

"Lord, it's been lonesome," he said devoutly. "I thought we'd never get back."

"Lonesome!" boomed Aunt Olympia irritably. "Lonesome in the thick of a political campaign? Lonesome while the Senator is being accused of high treason and likely to be knifed at the polls if not strung from a gibbet? Of all times and places to be lonesome, that beats anything I ever heard!"

"I hope you didn't have a good time while I was gone," said Cecil. Limpy was slightly disconcerted. "A good time? Oh—I can't remember exactly what we did."

"I know we had a lot of trouble. No, we didn't have a good time at all, Cece."

"Put him to work," said Olympia, waving the Senator to take him away. "And if he's got money to go around buying platinum pins and—brilliants—we can cut down on our expenses by reducing his salary."

The Senator had no trouble taking care of the spy challenge. There was no one, either Democrat or Republican, who could seriously push the charge, for Gabriel d'Alotti had been received everywhere. The Senator did not stop with citing his record, virtually from the cradle to the trailer of '38, with documentary evidence to support his claims. He went further. He demanded a complete, inquisitorial investigation of the entire case, and wrote the Department of Justice offering himself to be a witness, along with every other member of his household from Hilda up.

The Opposition was obliged to drop the issue, but their fingers were already slightly burned. As for Helen, there was no more pleasure in the campaign for her. She had become terrified of the whole business. She wrote frantically to Brick imploring him to withdraw from the rotten mess before it was too late. And she was not greatly reassured by his loyal declaration that she had nothing to fear; they didn't play politics that way in Iowa.

The campaign was spoiled for Adele, too. She wrote Len Hardesty a brief note.

"I can't see you or speak to you again, Len, until it is all over. I try not to think of you, but that is too hard. When it is over, if you feel the same, we will try to talk it through and see where we stand. But I simply can't see you. I couldn't draw a free breath in your presence until Uncle Lancy has either won or been defeated."

Aunt Olympia remonstrated with her, reminding her that this was Len's job and he had to do the best he could; reminded her, too, that his contract with the Governor would be up this year, and the Senator could use him in '44. Adele was gently obturate.

Len wrote to her and she read the letters again and again, and kept them, but she made no answer. When he saw any member of the household, or when he called over the telephone to get news of them, he had one invariable message for Adele:

"Tell her it's nearly over, and I feel the same."

When the message was passed on to Adele, tears came to her eyes and she got up and left the room. But she did not weep.

Aunt Olympia was none too happy either. She couldn't turn her usual robust enthusiasm into the campaign because she had to watch Limpy; rather, she had to watch Cecil Dodd. It seemed to her as a simple act of loyalty he might have postponed his admiration until after the election. She even suspected, bitterly, that he was working for the Opposition; it would be like Len Hardesty to bribe him to do this just to get her mind off the campaign.

"Do you like that creature, Limpy?" she asked hopefully. "Oh, sure, I like him. He's all right. Yes, I like him."

"I mean, do you like him better than anybody else?" persisted Aunt Olympia. "Oh, no, of course not! I like Helen and Adele and you and Uncle Lancy best; and I like our grocery man back home and I'll like Len Hardesty again as soon as Adele gets over being mad at him. I like Dave and Martin and Hilda and I don't really mind Brother Wilkie, though I don't care much for the brats."

The girls teased Limpy, who, after the first flush of confusion, rather enjoyed it.

"I can't understand why you should be surprised," she said loftily. "I had admirers at home, didn't I? Who got Carl Walker to sing in the choir—best tenor we ever had? You'd think I was some beldame hobbling around on a tin trumpet."

When Aunt Olympia couldn't stand it another minute she asked the girls confidentially to drop the subject. "For Limpy's own good," she assured them. "I don't want her to get her mind set on him."

"She's used to being teased," the girls told her. "We all are. Teasing doesn't mean a thing to us."

"But if we keep dangling him before her eyes she may get to thinking of him," pleaded Aunt Olympia. "Besides, it upsets me. If we don't get rid of that button I'm apt to go straight to the polls and vote for Brother Wilkie."

The girls considerably dropped the subject. But there was no dropping Cecil Dodd. As the campaign grew hotter, it was inevitable that he should be with them almost constantly. And even when Aunt Olympia did connive to send him off on quite distant missions, he returned so soon—with favorable reports of his activities—that Aunt Olympia swore he had just hidden behind a tree for five or ten minutes.

During September there was a succession of deluging rains, but the campaign had to go on. She bought raincoats with matching umbrellas and galoshes for the girls and made them drink hot lemonade every night. Even in raincoats, they photographed well. She bought aspirin for the Senator—who believed in it—by the dozen boxes.

When at last it appeared that the sun was to shine again they took the trail back to Shiloh, to get their clothes and bedding thoroughly dried out and laundered.

"There's no place like home to dry out," she remarked contentedly. "Did you say dry out or dry up?" asked Limpy.

Aunt Olympia laughed good-naturedly. "No hope of crying up Bill the election," she said. "We're lucky even to get dried out."

HABAKKUK FIGHTS THROUGH DOUBT TO FAITH

LESSON TEXT—Habakkuk 1:12-17. GOLDEN TEXT—"The just shall live by his faith"—Habakkuk 2:4.

"The just shall live by his faith"—the great rallying cry of the Reformation; in fact, the very essence of Christianity, is found in the glorious conclusion which the prophet Habakkuk reaches in his triumphant confidence in God. Trying circumstance, doubt and fear must all yield to faith in God.

The lesson for today is peculiarly appropriate to the situation in which the world finds itself just now. Men's hearts are falling them for fear. It seems to them that all is chaotic disorder; they wonder whether God has any plan for the world and its people, and whether He really cares. "Why doesn't God do something?" is the question on many lips. The answer is in our lesson.

I. Believe, Though Surrounded by Questions (1:12-17).

Habakkuk does not question that his people had sinned—and were worthy of God's disciplinary chastening, but he is astonished to learn that God plans to use the wicked Chaldeans to bring it about. Questions pour in upon him as he describes their iniquity (v. 13), and speaks of them as catching Judah in their net (vv. 14, 15) and gloating over their victims (vv. 16, 17).

He does not yet know the answer to his questions, but he has already stated the foundation of his faith in verse 12. Whatever happens, no matter how sore the trial and non-understandable the outworking of God's plan, the prophet is sure of his God as the eternal and holy One. The point to be borne in mind in such a time is that God is not making plans for the moment or because of some unexpected change in circumstances. He is "from everlasting"—(v. 12)—His plans are eternal. But He is also the "Holy One" (v. 12). It may seem for the present that sin and wickedness have triumphed, but let us remember that the eternal plans of God are conceived and executed in holiness and power.

II. Be Alert in the Midst of Uncertainty (2:1).

One who does not have faith in God is prone to say in such times that all hope is lost, and give up in despair. Not so Habakkuk. He knew that there is nothing harder than to wait patiently for God. He determines to be neither discouraged nor impatient, but to stand watch in the tower (v. 1). "His words bespeak a very right and proper condition of soul. Perplexed and confused by the seeming enigma of God's ways, he owns he may require reproof, and takes his stand upon the watch tower, above the mists of the earth and beyond the thoughts and doings of men, where he can quietly wait on God and look out to see what He will say to him" (Ironsides).

How desperately we need such alert and earnest watchers in our day. Christians, arise! Do not permit yourself to be either lulled into a false security or into deadening discouragement.

III. Receive the Answer of Triumphant Faith (2:2-4).

"The Lord answered me." He always does, if we are ready to listen and to abide His time. Habakkuk received a vision of God's truth in which he was to write so plainly that everyone who read it would understand it and, in turn, run to others with the message. Those of us who teach and preach would do well to follow that admonition. All too often our message is not understood or fails to stir those who hear it to go quickly and tell others.

Looking forward to Christ, the just man of Habakkuk's day was to live by faith; even as we of this day, looking back to the cross of Christ, are justified by faith and then are to go on to live by faith. This is the word which, as we have already suggested, stirred Luther and his fellows to bring about the Reformation. Long before Luther's day, however, the same words had come by the Holy Spirit's inspiration to be the heart of the great messages of Paul the apostle as he taught justification (Rom. 1:16, 17), as he defended grace against legalism (Gal. 3:11), and as he portrayed "the pilgrim's path through this world from the cross to the glory" (Heb. 10:38).

Works of the Lord

Oh, that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men! And let them sacrifice the sacrifices of thanksgiving, and declare his works with rejoicing.—Psalm 107:21-22.

PARDON THE LANGUAGE

Out in the wide, wide spaces,
In the real wild woolly West,
Where we eat beef rare,
And the thick black hair,
Always grows right there,
On our chest.

And we even pray in an eastern
