IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

HAGGAI URGES THE BUILDING OF GOD'S HOUSE

LESSON TEXT—Haggai 1:2-12. GOLDEN TEXT—And let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works; not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together...

Religious work—or, more correctly stated, Christian work—is a difficult and discouraging task, except for the grace and blessing of God. Not only does the Christian worker have to struggle against that arch-enemy of God and of the souls of men, Satan himself, but he must overcome the deadly indifference and carelessness of men both outside and inside the Church.

Haggai ministered to the Jews who had returned from captivity and who had begun to rebuild the temple. Opposition had developed before they had made more than a beginning, and they at once gave up and turned their interest to their own affairs...

I. Consider Your Ways (vv. 2-6, 9-11).

It was not necessary for the prophet to work up any eloquent plea to stir the conscience of the people. He had only to point to their own ways. They were thus faced with three reproving facts.

1. Indifference (v. 2). They were negligent and indifferent, saying the time had not come to build. The same kind of folk today are very sure that the congregation simply cannot afford to keep up preaching services, or heat and light the church for Sunday School.

2. Selfishness (v. 4). They built for themselves—celled houses and lived in luxury, while God's house lay waste. One is reminded of our own communities, which have money for every conceivable comfort and convenience...

3. Loss (vv. 6, 9-11). Being stingy toward God is a losing business. He has only to withhold His blessing and we will find ourselves destitute. That is true in the physical realm and is even more true in the spiritual life.

II. "Build the House" (v. 8).

God's work is constructive. He may have to destroy and tear down, but He only takes away the old and undesirable that the new and worthy may be built. Three words stand out here.

1. "Go." The Lord wants His people to get into action. Haggai was interested in getting things going. Let us follow his example.

2. "Bring." We are not to come to the Lord's service empty handed. Only as He blesses do we have anything to bring, but often we fail to bring even that which He has supplied.

3. "Build." God's work is committed to us. We are to be His builders.

III. "The People Obeyed" (v. 12). "Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams" (1 Sam. 15:22). God is looking for obedient people, and is ready to bless and use them. This response to Haggai's message came from

1. The Governor. One wonders what progress America would make back to God if its rulers were to lead us in obedience to His commands and in seeking His face in repentance and prayer. Thank God for every truly spiritually minded national leader, and pray that others may yield themselves to the control of the Lord.

2. The High Priest. All too often religious leaders have actually hindered the work of God—and what a hindrance they can be! We read that in Haggai's time the high priest obeyed. Christian leaders, are we too going before our people in unquestioning obedience to God?—If not, why should we not begin now? With such leadership, we are not surprised to hear that

3. The People Also Obeyed and Feared God. Many capable Christian workers believe that the youth of America of our day, far from being worse than their fathers, are actually seeking for real spiritual leadership.

False Christs Shall Rise. And then, if any man shall say to you, Lo, here is Christ; or lo, he is there, believe him not. For false Christs, and false prophets shall rise, and shall show signs and wonders, to seduce, if it were possible, even the elect.—Mark 13: 21, 22.

Speaking the Truth. I had rather suffer for speaking the truth, than that the truth should suffer for the want of my speaking.

Star Dust Stage-Screen-Radio

By VIRGINIA VALE (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

"HOLLYWOOD was never like this!"

Jean Arthur was talking. Dressed in faded jeans, a leaky sombrero and a blouse that most women would use for a dusting rag, she stood in front of the adobe hut which is her dressing room at Old Tucson. Old Tucson is just what it means, a reproduction of the original walled city of the sixties, where Wesley Ruggles is currently filming Clarence Budington Kelland's "Arizona."

"Running water is a luxury out here," Miss Arthur said, wiping the perspiration from her face. "To speak of hot water is heresy. There just isn't any. Not that a tub of water wouldn't reach the boiling point if placed in the sun, but there are so many horses, cows, dogs and pigs around here that a tub of water wouldn't have a chance to get warm."

She has turned her back on glamour these days. She is bent only on making "Phoebe Titus," who sold pies for a dollar apiece, believable and real. She is starred in "Arizona," with William Holden and Warren William backing her up, and she's going to give us a picture worth seeing and remembering, though the thermometer does register 128 degrees.

"Waterloo Bridge" is another picture that you'll remember. Vivian Leigh proves that, in "Gone With the Wind," she was no flash in the pan; in fact, she's as good or better in "Waterloo Bridge" as she was in that Civil war epic.

And the picture gives you a new Robert Taylor. His little moustache is tremendously becoming (even though his wife, Barbara Stanwyck, said "Thumbs down!" when he raised a real one). He puts real life into his role, that of a young British army officer in the last war.

The movies are doing very well indeed by Arizona these days. Two hundred and fifty members of the cast and crew of Edward Small's "Kit Carson" troupe landed in Flagstaff the other day; among the actors were Lynn Bari, Jon Hall, Dana Andrews, Raymond Hatton, Director George B. Seltz, and many others whose names are familiar to movie-goers. From Flagstaff the entire troupe will go to the Indian trading post of Kayente, on the Navajo Indian reservation, where a special town has been built to accommodate the Hollywood folk for their month-long stay.

The mail response to Johnny Green's new "Sunday evening Rhyme-O" program seems to upset the common belief that writing poetry is the special province of a selected few. On this musical audience-participation program, Johnny uses four-line verses, and asks listeners to send them, $5 going to the writer of each verse used.

In one week Green received 10,000 individual letters, containing rhymes—and there was an average of three rhymes in each letter.

The Andrews Sisters, famous "swing" trio formerly heard on Columbia Broadcasting company's networks with Glenn Miller and his orchestra, have journeyed to Hollywood; they're broadcasting nightly from a night club there, and preparing to be starred with the Ritz brothers in a Universal picture called, of all things, "Argentine Nights!"

ODDS AND ENDS. Lloyd Nolan scored such a personal triumph in "Johnny Apollo" that he's been given the leading role in 20th Century-Fox's "I Married a Nazi," replacing the be-dimpled Richard Greene, whose illness caused him to leave the cast. Virginia Lee Corbin, the second greatest child star of her day, and Charlene Henry, who starred in "Baby in Toyland" and "Alice in Wonderland" are so suddenly being seen, in the colorful way of "The Sign of the Cross" and "I Do" is announced as the final side for the movie picture originally called "To Own the World," starring Lana Turner and John Hodiak.

DOAN'S PILLS

The Honorable Uncle Lancy

By ETHEL HUESTON

CHAPTER XIV—Continued

When the door had closed on Hilda, Olympia turned off the lights and for ten full minutes a deep and serene silence held the room. But Aunt Olympia was uneasy. The Senator, poor dumb cluck, could lie there catching anything and never even recognize his symptoms. Unable to endure her uneasiness, she turned on the lights and gave him a straight look. He was lying—bland, near-sighted eyes wide open—with a broad smile on his pink, seraphic face. "Can I get you something?" he said, politely. "No," said Olympia. "What are you smiling about? Do you feel hysterical?" "Oh, no," said the Senator gently. And then, added, with modest diffidence, "Ollie, did you notice the terrific wallop I gave Jim Allen? He went down like a ton of brick. I never realized my own strength."

CHAPTER XV

Hilda went to the girls' room. They had the lights turned on again and were sitting up in bed, talking nervously, in broken sentences, interrupting each other. Limpy, being sad and lonely, had got in Helen's bed for company. Hilda hadn't the faintest idea what had happened and was too proud to ask, but she was apt at picking up threads and piecing them together. And any dunce could see that something had gone wrong. She glowered at the girls. "I should report this to your aunt," she said, carefully closing the door behind her to keep Aunt Olympia from hearing. "Oh, don't, Hilda," said Helen. "She's had a ghastly time! She will go all to pieces if she doesn't get a little rest." "If you got fever, I got to report it," she said firmly, staring suspiciously at the three faces, now flushed scarlet. "We haven't any fever. We're just warmed up from the lemonade and the hot-water bottles," Helen assured her. "We got warm too suddenly after being cold and wet all evening," Adele explained. "I should have been took along," said Hilda. "I knew she couldn't be trusted to keep anybody dry." "Oh, she couldn't help it! She had so much on her mind, you know! She had our clothes all packed up ready for us but she forgot to put them in the sound truck. That's all."

"How did they take it, Hilda?" asked Dave. "They took it hard," said Hilda. "I never saw 'em take things hard." "Is Limpy still crying?" asked Cecil Dodd. "If she is, it's in her sleep and continues in the same place," said Hilda. "Will you take a message up to the Senator?" "I'll take nothing up but coffee and that not till I'm rung for. I'll show you your rooms—" half-inch, turned out the lights, and left the room. Limpy, who had been most passionate, was asleep almost immediately. Adele closed her eyes but, being saddest, did not sleep at all. At three-thirty Helen got up softly, slipped down the hall to the Senator's study, closed the door behind her and spent half an hour at the telephone. Coming out, she tip-toed halfway downstairs and listened. From the closed door of the library she could hear the faint click of typewriters, still at work. Hilda was sound asleep, sitting bolt upright in a kitchen chair. Helen went back to the room and switched on the lights. She closed the windows, lowered the blinds. "Girls!" she said in a soft, brisk voice. "Wake up! I want you! Adele, wake up! Limpy!" Adele sat up at once, looking more wan-eyed, more forlorn than ever. Limpy, mumbling protest, finally turned over and opened one eye. Helen's first words brought her upright, wide awake. "Girls! Get up! Help me! I'm going home!" "Going home!" "This is our home!" "We have no home!" "There's nobody to—go home to!" "This is not my home. Iowa's my home and that's where I'm going." Helen was quite calm, very businesslike. She no longer looked tired. "I am not going to stay here and face those horrible reporters tomorrow. I just can't do it. They've been making speeches all summer"

"Are they all right?" about exercising the sacred franchise. Well, I'm going to exercise mine. I may get there in time to save Brick before it's too late." Limpy bounded out of bed. "When do we start?" she asked. Helen laughed. "You're not starting at all. You're staying here, both of you." "Aw, Helen!" "Now don't try to pull that on me, you little fox. I'm not as weak-minded as Uncle Lancy. I know what I'm doing. My mind is made up. Adele has to stay here until she patches things up with Len. And you have to stay, Limpy, to comfort Uncle Lancy and Aunt Olympia. After all, Limpy, they like you even better than the U. S. Senate. I'm going alone and I'm going to fly. There's a plane taking off at six o'clock and I'm going to catch it. I've already phoned for a cab to stand outside the hedge and wait for me. It will cost about fifty dollars. Have you any money?" The girls ran for their purses and dumped the contents on Helen's bed. "It isn't enough; but the company will take a check for my fare. Do you mind if I draw on the insurance money?" "Helen, don't be silly!" "Whose money is it, anyhow?" "I'll keep account of all I spend. Tomorrow—but not early, girls; let them rest as long as they can—tomorrow, you just breeze in and tell them the speeches made such an impression on me that I flew out to vote. You'd better do the talking, Limpy, they like you best. And Adele can back you up. I'll take only a traveling bag—" "You will not! You'll take all your pretty clothes and look like a million dollars!" "Iowa's going to expect to see something, after your year in Washington!" "Take your wind-up costume to vote in! That'll be something to take a picture of!" The girls, too excited yet to feel the sadness of it, fell to packing Helen's suitcases and helping her dress. And at five o'clock when Limpy on the lookout reported that a cab had stopped near the gate behind the high ledge, Helen kissed them fondly, took a suitcase in each hand and slipped quietly down the stairs. The girls cried a little, for this was their first separation. "The beginning of our united end," Limpy said, tearfully.

Adele and Limpy hung out the window in the foggy dawn of the gray morning and watched Helen walking down the flagstone path, carrying her bags. At the gate, she turned and waved to them, and threw a kiss. Then she went resolutely on and disappeared from their view. The girls waited in the window, waving their hands, until they heard the motor hum away. Then they went to bed together, their arms around each other, crying—laughing a little, too—and finally fell asleep.

CHAPTER XVI

Wakening about seven-thirty they rang at once and Hilda appeared with a promptness almost miraculous. Adele and Limpy were still together in one bed, propped up on pillows, looking no longer wan, but cheerful and bright-eyed, even excited. Hilda, who had brought coffee for three, made no comment on Helen's absence. She seemed almost cheerful that morning, a dour cheerfulness under close control. "She thought Helen was in the bath," Adele said when she had gone. "That's a good thing. We don't want her spilling the beans till the time comes." Regularly at thirty-minute intervals after that, Hilda appeared to ask if they wanted anything or felt a chill. Usually she brought something for them on a small tray, fruit, hot biscuits, or cold milk. Occasionally she brought a message. "Mr. Hardesty says tell you he feels the same and more so," she told Adele. Tears came to Adele's eyes and she tried in vain to harden her heart. "Mr. Dodd is awake from a sleep on the davenport and they're at work again and two boys answering the telephone and he says if you feel nervous he'll challenge somebody."

"I don't feel at all nervous," said Limpy. "But if I see anybody I'm going to be very nervous, so keep everybody off." Another time: "There's a lot of more cameramen would like your pictures." "You tell them to mosey right along and mind their own business," said Limpy. "You tell them the campaign's over and we're never going to have any more pictures taken as long as we live, so help us," said Adele. "They got reporters down there I ain't never even seen before," continued Hilda. "They say will you please answer a few questions?" "Tell them no, we will not answer anybody anything!" "We don't have to see any more reporters," said Adele. "Aunt Olympia said so! You tell them we're in bed and we're going to stay in bed and we've got campaign cramps." "You just let us know when Uncle Lancy and Aunt Olympia have had their coffee and got calmed down, and leave it to us! This is the holy Sabbath and we're spending it in bed." Aunt Olympia too had slept, but brokenly. Whenever she awakened she repressed the wish to look in on the girls—repressed it for the Senator's sake, for Lord knew he needed rest. After all, the girls were young; their very youth would bring them back on the rebound from this frightful catastrophe. But it was a bitter pill for the Senator and would require not only plenty of aspirin, whisky and quinine, but rest as well. So Aunt Olympia lay rigidly in her bed and waited for him to awaken. Olympia was sick at heart. The Senator would be a good sport about the mess, she knew that. But it would cut! It would cut like the very Old Nick! A man like Senator Slopshire eating humble pie at the hand of a louse like Brother Wilkie. "You'd think we'd done enough for him," she mused wretchedly, "listening to all those poor sermons so many years and making a governor out of him! And contributing, too! Always contributing! First to the collection plate and then to the campaign fund! There's no justice! If only I hadn't ordered that Victory Cake!" She started to vent her feelings in an impatient founce but, remembering how lightly the Senator slept, restrained herself. The girls would leave after this, of course. She couldn't blame them. They wouldn't hold her and the Senator responsible for the outrage, but still, they couldn't help feeling they had had enough. Aunt Olympia had had enough, too. She told herself that she would be tickled pink to have it over and done with—except that it gripped her to see Del play second fiddle to a louse. When she felt that she would blow up in spontaneous combustion if she lay still another minute, she turned over on her side, very carefully, making no sound, and took a look at the Senator. To her unbounded indignation he was lying awake, his eyes wide open, looking at her. "Well, for pity's sake, if you're awake why don't you say so?" she demanded, founcing vigorously a half-dozen times or more. "I was keeping quiet not to waken you," he said gently. "You must be tired out. Can't you turn over and catch forty more winks or so?" "Aunt Olympia popped out of bed and started for her bathroom. The Senator went to his. And the splash of running water, the vigorous sloshing of toothbrushes, satisfied that their night's rest, such as it was, was over.

AROUND the HOUSE Items of Interest to the Housewife. Don't hang porcelain or enameled kitchen equipment against stoves, tables or sinks. Standing on a heavy rug or rubber mat will go a long way toward preventing fatigue during long periods of ironing. Take advantage of the next windy day to clean your chintz coverings and curtains. Wall outlets for electrical devices used in the kitchen, pantry or butler's pantry should be placed at table height. Cakes or cookies in which honey is used as a sweetener require a rather moderate temperature for baking.

KNOW YOUR BANK
How To Draw a Check
To help you avoid serious loss through fraudulent use, theft, forgery, or alteration, the following suggestions for drawing checks are made by the American Bankers' Association, of which we are a member: Never write a check with pencil. Use pen, ink, typewriter, or check protector. Write amount of check as far to the left as possible and fill in all blank spaces with a heavy line. Be sure numerals and written amounts agree. Don't erase an error; write a new check and destroy the old one. Avoid making checks payable to "cash" or "bearer." Never sign blank checks. Be careful how and where you sign or exhibit your banking signature. Guard your bank checks and your cancelled checks, leaving none where they can be taken.

Fighting Shifts From Flanders As Nazi Air Force Bombs Paris; Malta Looms as Trouble Spot

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

If Italy should move against Great Britain in the Mediterranean she might very likely direct an attack at the great British naval base at Malta.

II GERMAN WAR: Flanders Battle

The Dutch-Belgian-Flanders-Artois battle came virtually to an end, save for up-moppings and kitty-corner operations here and there.

It seemed that the German air force fell down on this debarkation operation, for British losses, in retreat, were smaller than might have been expected.

Even as these railbirds wondered, Hitler's warbirds came out of the skies and rained showers of bombs upon southern France and later upon Paris itself.

Italic Notes

All private motoring stopped in Italy, due to government conservation of gas and oil.

Pro-Italians were jailed in England's Mediterranean naval base, Malta. Possession of this strategic island is a leading Italian objective.

D. of C. AND—White Housings

President Roosevelt made another request for money. This time it was for more than a billion, for the army, navy and civilian training program, coupled with a fear that all continents may become involved in the II German war.

War department plans called for immediate orders to get 2,800 planes, 1,700 tanks, 500 heavy artillery units, and big consignments of anti-tank and anti-aircraft guns.

Former French Generalissimo Gamelin was said to have committed suicide, while General Corap, chief of the French Ninth Army, defeated at Sedan, was reported as executed.

Proving that American isolation sentiment was by no means dead, some 7,000 earnest Catholics prayed for peace, assembled at St. Patrick's cathedral in New York.

Jean Batten, well-known and well-favored young aviatrix, was exhibited as an ambulance driver in the Anglo-French corps, hooked up with the Gallic army.

Senator Wheeler

Archibald Macleish, "radical" librarian of the Congressional library at Washington, said that the II German war was not a revolt of the masses.

The $65,000,000 battleship, Washington, was launched at the Philadelphia navy yard. It is a 35,000-tonner—1,900 tons bigger than any American battleship now in operation.

'Sixth Column'

It just had to happen! With all the news of "fifth column" activities working in other lands to aid the German cause, somebody had to come through with news of a sixth column.

U. S. REDS: Don't Love Nazis

The American Communist party, in the last six months, has sent $5,000 to German reds, to help them in their underground struggle against Hitler.

ANTI-ROOSEVELT: On-Campaign

Wendell Willkie said, out in Denver, "I'd love to go to the people against that fellow."

ART DEPT.: On P. P. Rubens

Hitler's Vienna paper, on the 300th anniversary of Rubens' death, said that Flemish artist was a "Germanic pagan" who painted Christian sagas with a fleshly relish.

BILLY PHELPS: And the 1,400

Prof. Billy Phelps of Yale, bookman of renown, said he'd rather lose the war with the allies than win with Hitler.

COUP IN CANADA: 'Mosley of Montreal'

The Canadian mounted police, turning into a local Gestapo or OGPU, seized eight members of the National Unity party in Montreal.

PRINCE ALBERT THE NATIONAL JOY SMOKE

IN THE midst of the recent Good-all round-robin struggle for mastery among 15 of the world's best golfers we began thinking again of the part that the mental side or mental-attitude plays in this baffling game of golf.

The 15 contestants in this tourney were all fine golfers on the physical side. Most of them can hit the ball a long, long way and keep it straight, most of them are fine iron players, keen pitchers, and at least a few are consistent putters. The main answer is one's mental attitude for the day or for the tournament—his ability to concentrate along the right lines.

This, of course, is an old story. But how does one locate this phantom will-o'-the-wisp?

I had been watching Jimmy Demaret, winner of seven big tournaments, one of the main favorites at Fresh Meadow. I had seen him smile and laugh and appear care-free coming up to the ball—then suddenly focus perfectly on the next stroke. So I talked to Demaret, the Texas Tarantula of the ancient green.

Demaret's Angle

"I drew a fine break in the art of concentration when I was a young kid," Demaret said. "There were nine in our family. There was always a turmoil around. I had to learn how to study and concentrate with a football game or some other game going on all around me. There was always a din and a racket. I had to force myself to think of what I was reading or working over in spite of these outside distractions. So I had to develop the habit of quick concentration from an early age, when all lasting habits are usually formed—I mean the ones that usually stick with you.

"Here's a funny angle. I am supposed to be free from any nervous trouble. Yet I am one of the most nervous men you ever knew. I mean until a tournament starts. I'm even nervous in practice. But when the tournament gets under way I turn back to my kid days, forget everything else, all the outside distractions. I think of only one shot at a time and I think of a round after the fashion of one shot at a time."

What to Think About

"Bobby Jones once told me," I said to Demaret, "that he thought of at least three things before playing any shot."

"What were they?" Jimmy asked. "First, the pace of his backswing to be sure it wasn't hurried. Next, the full body or the needed body turn, and, last, cocking his left wrist at the top of the swing."

"I also think of about three things before playing a shot," the Texan said. "First, I want to be sure I have a firm, comfortable and correct grip. Next, I want to feel that I have an easy, comfortable stance. Last, I also want to be sure I don't hurry my backswing and that I also take the needed amount of body turn."

"Golf," Demaret said, "is a game you play largely with your hands, wrists and forearms. They swing the clubhead. The body should work together with the hands, but in most cases the body works against the hands. The average golfer lets the shoulders and body, or maybe the feet and legs, tie up the hands."

"Now, the average golfer has a hard time concentrating because he tries to think of too many things. It can't be done. He merely gets a blurred picture of what he is trying to accomplish. I believe in making golf as simple as possible."

"What should the average golfer try to think about?" I asked.

Comfort and Ease

"He or she should try to think first in terms of being comfortable and easy, and not to get all tightened up. After this, he should think about letting the hands and forearms swing the clubhead. He shouldn't start locking his feet and legs, or stiffening his body. He should have a picture of hands, of live hands, taking that clubhead back as smoothly as possible, letting his body turn naturally, and from the top of the swing he should be in no hurry to start any down-swing speed. That's where so much trouble comes from—hustling or hurrying the downswing, which will usually take care of itself if you just learn to leave it alone.

"Golf isn't a left-handed game nor a right-handed game. It is a game in which both hands swing the clubhead. It isn't nearly as difficult as most players make it, if they would only think of the few necessary things one must do.

Let Yourself Go

"Watch any of these 15 players in this field. They all give you the impression they are using their hands more than anything else. And they are. They are not thinking about half as many things to do as the average golfer does. Never mind too many details. They just tie you up. Keep as relaxed as you can. When you begin to tighten up, step away, and take your stance again. And don't think of anything but the swing itself, of using the hands in the proper manner.

THOSE RADIO TAXICABS

There's another revolt in the offing. This time it's against radios in taxicabs. No man can serve two masters and no taxicab driver can do justice to three traffic lights and four or five radio programs.

A public cab should be a conveyance and not a loud speaker with hot brakes and loose fenders.

There is no reason why a man who wants to cross town in a hurry should be obliged to ride with a swing orchestra, a cooking program or a couple of radio comedians.

The taxicab companies insist that the customers prefer radio hacks. They say the riders regard an outside aerial as more important to transportation than four-wheel brakes. But this correspondent doubts it. He thinks the ride is tough enough without the incidental static.

For every cab fare who wants to hear "Oh, Johnny," "Town Hall Tonight" or the United States Marine Band while taking sharp corners on two wheels, there are at least ten who prefer to do their rough riding unaccompanied by symphony orchestras, radio tenors and masters of ceremonies.

It has sprung to the rescue of a long-suffering public with a demand that taxi driving by car be forbidden, and that the hose be turned on the quiet notion that there isn't noise enough in a big city without radios in taxicabs.

The drivers won't give up without a battle, however. They contend that their lives are drab without music, wise cracks, hints on how to prepare a shrimp salad and a voice shouting from somewhere every five minutes, "Right, Miss Turpey! 100 per cent right! Lincoln's first name was Abraham, and you win five silver dollars!"

They insist that, with or without passengers, they are entitled to the full companionship of the Radio Corporation of America. If that contention is sound then a paper hanger is entitled to use his portable radio while papering your living room and a doctor is justified in listening to the Bison City Quartet while discussing your symptoms.

This department is also mildly opposed to radios in private automobiles. Driving is hazardous enough in modern traffic without giving the driver three extra switches, another glass dial and a lot of additional noises to worry over.

WAB NOTE
The servants are listening to the broadcasts all night and both German and French cooking is in a severe slump—in fact, it's terrible. That's why you see so many familiar faces dining out en famille.

A telling commentary on the contrast in living on two continents came over the radio the other day. "The French commander," the voice said, "has called on all men to die at their posts rather than retreat. The fate of the world is at stake," he declared. "Warneke now rubs a new ball. The count is three and two."

Texas Clouter Reminiscent of Benny Leonard

By ROBERT McSHANE
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

LEW JENKINS, the tough little hombra from Sweetwater, Texas, is the hardest-hitting champion lightweight-division has known since the days when Benny Leonard was belting 'em over with remarkable regularity.

Not long ago Lew was an unknown. The cowboy clouter got his title chance when he scored decisive wins over Billy Marquard and Tippy Larkin. Marquard lasted several rounds, looking even better than his opponent. But Lew rallied long enough to draw the curtain over Marquard.

There wasn't much to the Larkin fight. Tippy was considered one of the best boxers and fastest men in the lightweight ranks. But Jenkins jabbed a few times with his left and then let loose with a right early in the first round. That brought the end.

Even with these victories behind him Jenkins was considered the underdog when he signed up to meet Champion Lou Ambers. The thin man of Texas just wasn't scheduled to offer Ambers much competition. The experts had seen him fight. They knew he had a heart as big as himself, and a lethal punch, but they just couldn't visualize how he would stack up against Ambers.

Jenkins crossed them up. He walked out at the bell and rocked Ambers with a wicked right cross from which Lou never recovered. In the second round Jenkins scored him with a short right hook, and had him down twice before the fight was halted in the third round.

No Adonis of the Ring

Jenkins isn't an artist's ideal champion. He'll never pose for the Spirit of Pugilism. He resembles an animated rake handle and is far from a picture of power. His lean, hungry look comes naturally.

LEW JENKINS

Many's the day he has gone hungry, and though recent success has put money in the bank for him, he won't forget those thin days of his past.

He has legs of pipe stem proportions, and his knees look like the weak spot of an inflated inner tube. His arms are long and thin, his face is hatchet shaped. His hair is wiry and unruly, standing like the quills of an annoyed porcupine.

But he can fight—and his opponents will never forget it. His punches are as fast as a radio comedian's comeback, and they contain a crushing power. His force comes through perfect timing and leverage. His fighting style is reminiscent of the Dempsey of old. He parks courtesy outside the ring, ready to give and take as long as he can stand up. He hit Ambers once while Lou's head was bobbing outside the ropes, and he cuffed him twice after the bell had ended the second round.

Champ—the Hard Way

Jenkins' story is the old, old Cinderella-like tale. Two years ago he was a cavalry recruit in the army, serving as blacksmith. In need of a bit of change while on furlough in Fort Worth, Texas, Lew offered to fight for coffee money. He won the bout and quit the army. His next victories weren't as simple. In fact, he was ready to quit a year ago when his wife persuaded him to go to New York for one more chance.

Starting in the small clubs, Lew won a couple of fights for a starter. That gave him heart and he continued his string of victories. Finally his name became known and he was brought to Madison Square Garden, where he accounted for Marquard, Larkin, and eventually Ambers, the champ.

Springtime Is Season of Joy And Zest for Wild Creatures

With Nature in Her Gayest Mood, Animals Enjoy Their Own Games and Frolics.

SPRINGTIME in the wilds is playtime. The majority of our mammals have their young in the early months of the year, and in April and May it is possible to watch the most delightful games among the puppies of the fields. Badger, fox and otter cubs are very playful little creatures. The otter and badger appear to have a certain amount of method in their games, but fox cubs simply romp among themselves in a wild abandon.

On a sloping sand cliff near my home seven fox cubs came out of a large hole; on the ledge just outside they played with a round stone, pushing it with their feet, tossing it in the air and allowing it to run down the slope.

When tired of this they played a game which resembled "Follow the Leader." One would run forward, dodge and leap over all kinds of imaginary obstacles, and the others would follow in its tracks; then all would roll together in a rough and tumble, in which their small teeth would tug at the fur of their companions.

Bouncing Badgers. Young badgers are among the most amusing cubs to watch at play. With their bold black and white markings they are quaint looking little creatures, and rather clumsy, but there is no doubt that they thoroughly enjoy life, and their play is exuberant and strenuous.

First they poke their noses in the ground, searching for hidden grubs; then, without any warning, all stiffen their fur, making it stand upright, and now they look twice their size. With their short legs also stiffened they bounce round one another like footballs, then leap in, grip a mouthful of fur, and roll over and over. They break apart, and again play the bouncing game, and just as suddenly as they started to play they cease, and the next moment all are diligently searching for more food.

Fun in the Water. Many young otters are born at an awkward time, that is at the beginning of winter, but they are hardy little creatures and appear to be able to stand any amount of cold. Otters, more than any other wild creatures, show us that they thoroughly enjoy life; a plentiful supply of food makes them contented, and both parents and young play the most delightful games.

What appeared to be a large, brown ball was floating gently down stream, hardly making a ripple as it swept along. Suddenly the ball seemed to burst open with a loud splash, and four excited otters with their bright, eager eyes well above the water, started swimming round one another. One leaped right out of the stream and over its companions to dive on the other side, and as they floated along this acrobat made circles around them, those below trying to grip it as it passed over. Then they all joined up again, and seemed to be having a struggle as to which could pull the others under the surface, a sort of spirited ducking game.

They continue to play until all are tired. Then the parents lead their young off to a well-hidden lair, where they all sleep until hunger and high spirits call again. —Oliver G. Pike in London Tit-Bits.
