"Life" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Societies and Churches of Christ Scientist, on Sunday, January 21.

The Golden Text is: "This is the Record, that God hath given us eternal life, and this life is in His Son." (1 John 5:11)

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible, "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good" (Romans 12:21).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, "Ask yourself, Am I living the life that approaches the supreme good? Am I demonstrating the healing power of truth and love? If so, then the way will grow brighter 'unto the perfect day.' Your fruits will prove what the understanding of God brings to man."

Allen of the Church of Christ officiating in the presence of Miss Thelma Shaver, George Peake, Bobby Shafer, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Shafer. The bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Church of Ilmo, Mo. and the niece of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Adams of Carrizozo. She is a graduate of the Ilmo High School and the Southeast Missouri State Teachers' College. She has attended the State Teachers' College of New Mexico and the Normal University. In high school, she was prominent in social activities and outstanding in various dramatic clubs. After leaving college, the bride was employed in the public school system of her home state for a period of two years and is now completing her second term as primary teacher in our schools.

The groom is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. N. L. Caton of Forrest, N. M. He is a graduate of the Forrest High School and the New Mexico Normal University. He has featured prominently in campus activities, having been voted the most outstanding student in his senior year. He was prominent in athletics, having been placed on several all-star teams, and at different times, he rejected opportunities to play professional basketball. In 1937 he accepted a position as coach of the local football and basketball teams, in which he has realized gratifying results. The Catons will be at home at the Garrard Hotel for the remainder of the school term after which they will make a tour of the east and will visit Mrs. Caton's parents, thence to Greeley, Colo., to attend summer school. La Guardia's Horse-Laugh

The recent arrest of 18 men in New York charged with undermining the government with an organization which they called the 'Christian Front,' but charged by the G-men of being enemies of the government in the interest of foreign agencies, created quite a stir in circles of Americanism. The G-men found much ammunition besides guns of different kinds and going into their effects, they found strong evidences of un-Americanism, evidenced by reading matter of communistic nature, as well as plots and plans to undermine the government.

Now comes Mayor La Guardia of New York in a statement in which he says in substance that it is all a big joke. Quoting him, he said, 'How could 18 men with a few old guns hope to do anything against the powerful police force of New York?'

We are surprised at such a personage as the mayor of that great city, making such remarks and in other words which he uttered, seeking to belittle the arrest of members of that organization, calling under the name of Christianity and using that for a cloak to hide their evil intentions. True it is that the 18 men could do nothing with the New York police, but that does not settle the argument nor does it alter the truth.

It is not what these men could do, but what they stand for that the government should be interested in. If that organization is working against our government, as the G-men say, there is no grounds for a horse laugh from the mayor of New York. His attempt to laugh off the present conditions will receive no applause from Washington, but quite to the contrary, he may hear something that will change his attitude from the comical to the serious.

We wonder what the mayor thinks about the plot which has been unearthed to blow up the Boulder Dam-will he also give that the horse laugh? If he thinks the same about that as he does about the above charge of un-Americanism, we would be compelled to doubt his allegiance to this government. A few more cracks like the one of trying to laugh off the so-called Christian Front, will place him in a queer light with all true Americans.

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

When draining the pulp from liquid such as orange juice, if a piece of cheesecloth is placed inside a strainer none of the pulp can go through.

Grape Juice With Grapefruit.—Two tablespoons of grape juice added to a grapefruit after it has been cut gives a delicious flavor and a pretty color.

Crusty french rolls, cut diagonally into slices a fourth of an inch thick, buttered and toasted, make a good salad accompaniment.

Give house plants an occasional feeding of a teaspoonful of bone meal dug into the earth in flower pots.

To remove feathers from ducks, first pick them dry. This leaves a down all over the skin. To remove the down, wring out a large cloth in boiling water and wrap it around the duck for five minutes. Remove the cloth and the down can be wiped off easily with a dry cloth.

Tips of canned asparagus may be removed whole if the bottom instead of the top of can is opened.

To prevent gowns slipping from wooden coat hangers, cover the hangers with velvet.

Creamy Fudge.—For a smoother and creamier fudge, add a teaspoon of cornstarch to each cup of sugar used in making it.

As chocolate burns easily, it is safest to melt it over hot water.

Give your cacti plants all the light possible during the winter. Keep in a cool place and in a dry atmosphere.

A MAN IS FOUND

By THAYER WALDO (McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

THEY were seated together on a gaily cretonned divan in the little apartment's living room.

Before them a broad window overlooked the twinkling panoply of Hollywood boulevard.

The boy leaned back, rousing slender fingers through his tousled wavy hair.

"It's no use, June," he said; "I want that as much as you do, but we just can't until—until something happens."

His tone was dreary, fraught with an indefinable fearfulness.

The girl laid a hand on his arm. "But what, Curt? We've been waiting so long now, and it's hard to wait with a love like ours, I wouldn't say that if I didn't know you felt it too. Yet there's always something that seems to be holding us apart. What is it, dear?"

His hands made a vague gesture. "Oh, you know, darling—this whole thing. Here I am just playing bits at Zenith, with no contract, no real way of knowing from day to day whether I'll have any job. Can't you see we don't dare get married while it's all so uncertain?"

June let her hand slip from his sleeve.

A sense of weary discouragement oppressed her. Here again was that baffling something in him which she could never surmount—an utter lack of confidence and decision.

It wasn't, she knew, just sober caution, for his fears were actually groundless. Through all the time they'd known each other, neither had been idle.

The vogue for revue films had brought her constant dancing jobs, while Curt—well, even if he weren't rocketing to stardom, the studio at least had kept him busy. Still this strange, frustrated hesitancy persisted.

June sighed. Then suddenly the thought of what was about to come reawakened a spark of hope in her.

"Perhaps it won't be so uncertain much longer," she suggested eagerly, "now that you're going into that Newsom picture. Think what it would mean if he liked you!"

The boy turned toward her with a wan and almost plying smile.

"And how much chance," he countered, "do you suppose there is of my getting noticed? Why, a big-shot director like Newsom never even sees anyone who hasn't a name in lights."

June wanted to cry out against that hopeless, beaten look on the face that was so dear to her. Instead she only remarked:

"Well, at least we'll be together. There's going to be a night club scene, and they told me to report for rehearsals on it."

His glance showed such pleased surprise that her resentment vanished at once in a rush of warm affection.

"Really?" Curt exclaimed; "gee, that's grand. First time it's ever happened, too."

She nodded and snuggled closer to him. After all, love was love and you took your man as you found him. Maybe this would all work out somehow. Meanwhile—Curt reached back and turned the lamp out.

After three hectic days of rehearsals, actual shooting got under way.

Curt had nothing scheduled the afternoon June's dancing sequence was to be filmed, and she persuaded him to come watch it.

It took urging, however; Curt was leary of being on set for any but his own scenes. He had always been funny about things like that—dreading the idea of reprimand and humiliation.

Sound stage four, with its huge cabaret setting, was a motley scene.

But when Director William Newsom appeared, order came quickly out of the seeming chaos.

With deft handling he ran the bey of girls through the first of their dance routines.

To June's specialty number he gave particular attention, and she found herself responding with work she knew was more than just good.

Immediately after that bit, there came a pause while Newsom poré over the script, studying details.

June looked for Curt and at last saw him far back in a corner of the building.

He was smiling at her and looked as if he'd like to run up and say how proud and happy he was, but didn't quite dare.

Suddenly she became aware of talk coming from two cameramen who stood near her:

"... know I've seen him around a lot. Who is he?"

"You mean that kid sitting alone over there? Oh—" with a short chuckle, "—just another ham who'll never get anywhere. Some people thought he was a find once, but he's queer—always skittish—scared of his own shadow. Curtis Blair's his name, I think. . . . By the way, Jack, how're you betting on Saturday's game?"

June's face had gone scarlet. She realized that the director was within earshot and for once was glad of Curt's insignificance.

Newsom, at least wouldn't recognize the name.

She glanced again toward the boy and a mingled wave of loyalty and heartache swept her. If only he could

"All right, girls," the director's voice cut in; "we'll take that ensemble finale now. Places!"

When the number was completed, Newsom called it a day.

Players and technicians began to file off the set. June saw with annoyance that Curt still hesitated to come forward.

As she left the stage to go to him, the director's voice stopped her. "Oh, girlie," he called; "come here a minute."

June obeyed.

He was seated in an officer's camp chair that had his name on its back. She stopped before him, wondering.

"You know," Newsom said slowly, an ambiguous smile playing over his mouth, "I could help you do big things if you wanted to be nice to me. How about it?"

In a swift movement he caught her wrist and pulled her down on his lap. June struggled, but his embrace locked her tight—his face was bending close above hers.

Then suddenly something vice-like closed on her arm and she was wrenched away.

Stumbling, she slid to the floor and looked up to see a murderously transformed Curt yanking Newsom to his feet.

She heard the dull smack of fist against flesh—once, twice.

A figure topped to the floor within arm's reach of her. It was the director.

A hand reached down and swept her up with one pull into encircling arms that were stronger, more possessive, than she had ever known.

"My poor darling!" murmured Curt's voice; "what a fool I've been to hesitate about us with you facing things like this all the time!"

June's breathless answer was cut short by excited voices.

She turned and saw a trio of men helping Newsom rise.

The director came up wobbly, his countenance conspicuously damaged.

He looked at Curt and Curt met the gaze with flaming defiance, an arm still tightly about June's waist.

Then, to everyone's amazement, the director grinned.

"Well, Curt," he mumbled through lips already beginning to puff; "it seems to have worked. I hope so. For half a year I've watched you dally with that girl until you were both eating your hearts out. Today I overheard someone saying you were the same about everything, so it struck me that maybe if you had to fight for her it might put guts into you and make you what you ought to be. Believe I was right, too. There may be a good part in this show for you now; come see me about it in the morning. Right now what I want's an ice pack and a long, strong highball!"

Marine Corporal Fired First U. S. Shot in 1917

America's first shot after entrance into the World war in 1917 was fired by Corporal Chockie of the marines at Guam, according to "Sea Power," organ of the United States Navy League.

The shot was fired April 6, the date of the United States declaration of war, across the bow of a German launch on a warning to "heave to."

Not until October 23 were American shells screaming across the lines in France.

Account of the incident in "Sea Power" follows:

"A German launch, with cutter in tow, was speeding across the harbor of Guam on the fateful morning of April 6, 1917, the day that America entered the World war.

Out on the bay lay the interned warship Cormoran, its Teutonic crew unaware that President Wilson had just signed the war resolution.

Suddenly a shot whistled across the bow of the launch, followed by two others. The first shot was fired by Corp. Michael Chockie, one of a party of 15 U. S. marines commanded by Lieut. W. A. Hall of the navy.

Every seafaring man understands this manifest command to "heave to." The enemy launch immediately surrendered.

"Meanwhile the governor of Guam had sent his aide in a barge to the interned Cormoran, demanding her surrender. He was complying with orders received from the navy department at Washington, when word of our entry into the war had been flashed to the faraway naval station in the Pacific.

"Soon the aide boarded the warship and informed her captain of the surrender order. But the Germans had anticipated his errand, and the Americans scarcely had time to leave the vessel before it was blown up by its own crew. For the next half hour small boats in the harbor were picking up survivors.

"More than six months later, on October 23, the men of Battery C, Sixth Field Artillery, First division, hauled a gun up on the firing line near Bathelmont, France, and sent a shell screaming in the general direction of the German lines. It was America's first hostile shot in France."

"The Sieva," a Waterfall "The Sieva," just outside Uruapan in the state of Michoacan, Mexico, doesn't fall over rocks. It sifts through the volcanic basalt dike in a thousand small waterfalls that catch the sun's light, refract it, and crown the boiling waters below with a shimmering rainbow. Points at which the Sieva's waters break through the rock are from 80 to 150 feet above the basin.

The Danger Zone . . . Pay for College Football Players Debated . . . Reasonable Bounds And the Commercial Side.

LOS ANGELES.—In the active presence of some 400 famous football coaches and athletic directors from all over the map, I have been trying to get some group to answer one or two questions—"Has football moved into the danger zone of proselytizing and pay for athletes?" "Has the commercial side grown too important?"

Most of them tell you their universities give a certain number of athletic scholarships and try to provide jobs—but nothing more. Yet it is a well-known fact that any number of universities or their athletic associations have from $10,000 to $15,000 to help roundup, corral and capture star high school talent from coast to coast.

The pursuit of the elusive ball carrier, the crack forward passer or the big linemen emerging from school play is the keenest I've ever seen.

There is another school of thought that believes, the football player doesn't get nearly enough. They tell you he furnishes the battered body for the billion-dollar industry.

I've found no coach who believes in paying any football player any form of salary. Yet in one way or another, I know many are paid. It is entirely too complicated for my limited brain.

Maybe there isn't any real danger zone. But football is too great a game, it affects directly too many American kids, including the high schools, to move along unguarded. The count goes into the millions.

One answer may be the different conferences.

As it is now the Ivy league has gone into a covey of its own. It rarely leaves the fold. Try to slip some outsider into an Ivy league contest. The Big Ten has done about the same, outside of playing Notre Dame, and members of the Big Six.

As one of the Ivy league coaches told me, "We have Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Cornell, Pennsylvania, Dartmouth, Columbia, Brown, Army and Navy. Syracuse and Colgate are O. K. Who else do we need? We can't play everybody."

The Pacific conference and the Southwest are hanging together. They play most of their games among themselves.

In spite of all this, I have found a strong feeling of distrust when it comes to the matter of proselytizing and taking care of star players.

In the last few weeks I've covered several thousands of square miles through hot football territory. Today almost all territory is football hot.

I've heard over 40 stories of high school stars offered board, lodging, scholarships, and a fairly substantial wage. I know part of this is bunk. I also know part of it is true. Almost every high school kid likes to boast of the offers he has had. Most of them are baloney. But not all of them. A kid likes to brag.

I asked one veteran athletic director just how much money he figured colleges were putting out or giving away for football talent, one way or another.

"There are only about 100 colleges or universities," he said, "which can afford to meet the competition. Their funds range from $8,000 a year to $20,000 a year. My guess would be around $1,000,000. This isn't so much when you figure 40,000,000 people look at football each fall—that football is easily a billion-dollar game for all concerned—colleges, hotels, railroads, planes, tickets and so on."

The main fault goes back to the colleges and the universities. The directing people are the ones who have turned football into a billion-dollar industry. They are the ones who have stood back of all the bowls and stadia. They are the responsible people. It is something bordering on a crime to start blaming the coaches.

"I'll give you one answer that will help some," a prominent athletic director said. "Pass a rule that no team can play over two men who live over 300 miles away from the university they play for. Don't think we get fooled when we see teams with eight or ten players on the squad who come from 800 to 1,500 miles away. And there are plenty of these."

I still think the main answer has to be on the scholastic or scholarship side. This is where the final segregating will take place.

Who run our colleges and universities? Presidents and boards of trustees—or the football coaches and athletic directors? Most of the schedules today are money schedules. Why? Because too many universities have built up expensive plants that must be paid for.

Who pays for all this? The football players! The football players and the coaches.

Teams are given schedules they have no chance to handle on even terms.

Coming Year Headache to Ring Industry

By ROBERT McSHANE

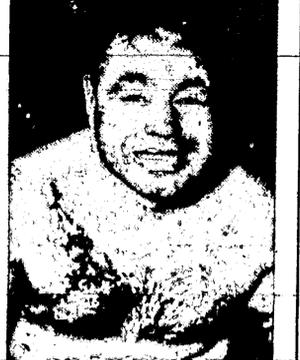

BOXING, like world peace and the St. Louis Browns, is in a bad way as it pulls itself together and starts in a new year.

It survived many a first class beating—during 1939, but is merely holding its own at present. Recovery is a slow, painful process, skillfully hindered by many of the men who should be nursing it carefully during the period of recuperation.

The truly alarming state of affairs is evidenced by the fact that Tony Galento, the battling barkeep, again was ranked No. 1 challenger for Joe Louis' crown. A glance at the list is discouraging. Bob Pastor is ranked as No. 2, followed by Lou Nova, Tommy Farr, and your old friend, Maxie Baer.

Not that these boys didn't deserve their ranking. They did. The discouraging part is that no better fighters have appeared on the scene to replace them.

The old year limped out with a juicy ring scandal still unsettled—a fitting farewell to a year which saw few favorable developments. The Harry Thomas fixed fight case still remains on the books to haunt boxing commissioners and prizefight officials. It should have been settled immediately. Blame should have been fixed and punishment meted out while the story was "hot." Then boxing fans would know that officials were doing their part to keep the game at a high plane.

Memory Lingers

Instead, a dark brown memory lingers in the minds of those interested in the sport. The investigation has been kicked around so long that it's little more than a joke. Details of the scandal are largely forgotten, but the subconscious memory of another rotten deal lives on.

Boxing promoters have helped themselves into their present predicament. They have arranged and built up matches which were merely second rate exhibitions.

It is true that these fights have been widely patronized. But a starving man doesn't demand caviar.

The boxing enthusiast is interested "in his sport. He wants to see good men pitted against each other, not a ham-and-egger or a novice matched against a big name. Promoters should, and sooner or later must, realize that their customers know a great deal about the game. Even the less ring-wise can recognize a poorly matched fight.

Edward C. Foster, National Boxing association secretary, is none too enthusiastic at the beginning of the new year. However, he is heartily endorsed in his statement that at least one beneficial step has been taken. The two-title and three-title champions have been eliminated for good.

It will be remembered that Hammerin' Henry Armstrong, during 1939, held three titles at one time. He was featherweight, lightweight, and welterweight champion of the world. He relinquished his featherweight title, lost his lightweight title to Lou Ambers, and retains his welterweight championship.

One Title Rule

That was as it should be. No fighter should be allowed to hold more than one crown. If Armstrong was the logical welterweight champion then it was unfair to the top-ranking contenders in the two other weight divisions for him to be their king.

Boxing must put its house in order to regain the confidence and continue the patronage of fans. It is inconceivable that the public will continue to support the kind of a program to which it has been subjected for the past year. Second rate fighters participating in questionable matches have done much to drag boxing into the gutter.

There is a brighter side: Fighters like Joe Louis, Billy Conn and a very few more always do their best, regardless of their opposition. But they are in the minority.

The housecleaning must come soon and it will require the combined efforts of fighters, managers, promoters and ring officials to do a thorough job.

And anything less than a thorough job will be insufficient

Roosevelt's Latest Budget Has Congress Pretty Badly Muddled

Arguments, 'Ifs,' Suggestions and Suppositions Leave Solons in Daze; Leaders in Congress to Seek Facts for Themselves.

By WILLIAM BRUCKART

WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON—Congress is pretty badly muddled up over the latest Roosevelt budget of estimated expenditures and receipts for the government's next fiscal year. And well it may be. There were thousands of greater and lesser items of government cost dumped into its legislative lap at once the other day, but these were not alone. There were arguments and "ifs" and suggestions and suppositions and an official defense of the policy that for 11 years has seen government income fall far behind the expenses—11 years of deficits. And, along with these things came a proposal by the President to add a special tax, or a tax for a special purpose—national defense.

In view of the fact that few persons have been able to arrive at an absolute conclusion on the financial problem submitted by Mr. Roosevelt, some of the more influential leaders of congress have taken the lead in a plan to find out for themselves. Men like Senator Pat Harrison, the old Mississippi w a r-horse, who has been chairman of the senate committee on finance for years and who once missed being Democratic leader of the senate because President Roosevelt wrote a letter to "Dear Alben" Barkley of Kentucky. Senator Harrison has support in the move and I am told that he is determined to get affirmative action.

Senator Harrison

The Harrison plan calls for something new in congressional policy. He would have a joint committee of 12 senators and 12 representatives, divided equally among two senate and two house committees, to do some spadework on the new budget—the budget for the year beginning next July. It is a thing never attempted before and may or may not be a wise course since it attacks of utilizing a great new power by congress. But this much can be said: for the first time, if the Harrison plan eventually is adopted, congress will get some information through its own channels instead of accepting the unsupported statements, the wishful thinking and the planned extension of power by the bureaucrats intent upon preserving their agencies.

Annual Federal Budget Once Comparatively Simple Thing In years gone by, the annual federal budget was a comparatively simple thing, or as simple as mazes of figures could be made. Its proposed items of expense were set down and totaled. The anticipated revenue was calculated. But such is not the case with the current budget, nor any in the last few years since operations of the federal government have become as general as flies around the barn in midsummer.

Times have changed, indeed. Here is a budget that covers the astounding total of $3,424,191,576. It is smaller by $676,000,000 than the last one and that reduction was described by Mr. Roosevelt as a first step toward gradual accomplishment of a balanced budget.

But the total of proposed expenditures shown was circumscribed with a handful of "ifs." The amount of $3,424,191,576 will remain that way if cuts are made (from last year's totals) in public works, in federal jobs, in CCC camps, in relief and farm benefits and if there are no other increases voted except for a vast program of expansion in the army and navy.

On the basis of the budget calculation, the government's income will be $3,547,000,000 in the next fiscal year if congress will lay a special tax for paying the cost of a part of the cost of expanding the army and navy. The President said this tax should be made to yield $400,000,000. Thus, on the basis of the budget, the government will be in the red next year, if all things remain as planned to this point, by a total of $2,416,231,000. The President intends, however, to cut that way down by using up some odds and ends of money lying around among the government-owned corporations. By executive order, the President can restore to the federal treasury funds loaned by it to the various corporations. He said there was something like $700,000,000 in this pot of gold and that will be used to reduce the deficit further.

Budgets These Days Merit Earnest Consideration And there you have it. If all of the things go through as planned and if there is not another request from any office or agency of government and if there is as much tax collected next year as calculated and if the proposed "national defense tax" is passed and collected, the government deficit for the fiscal year that ends June 30, 1941, will be $1,716,231,000.

Senator Harrison may be wrong or he may be right in his proposal to have congress do something about understanding this and subsequent budgets; but it must be said there is something about the condition of budgets these days that merits earnest consideration. These latter day budgets somehow remind me of the broomstick horse that I used to ride when I was a kid. That broomstick had at least 20 different names, but it was always the same broomstick, and my imagination was never successful in transforming it.

There was merited applause from congress for Mr. Roosevelt's declaration that he was prepared to curtail spending. He tossed some cold water on that enthusiasm, however, by a statement of policy that he did not favor too much curtailment at one time. Rather, "government support" for the many functions now a part of the federal structure ought "to be tapered off." There was not too much pleasure about that among the real supporters of an economy policy, and there was considerably less when attempts were made to analyze the true results.

I have a hunch that more disappointment is due. The budget that was sent to congress the other day, in my opinion, is not going to be nearly all that will be needed in the way of money.

It is just a guess that I here make: the totals for relief and for agricultural benefits and public works, etc., are not nearly large enough for 12 months if an election

BRUCKART ON THE BUDGET

Find congress badly muddled over the latest estimates. Harrison plans for congress to get information about the budget through its own channels. Something new. Present estimates will leave the government in the red $2,416,231,000. Condition of budgets these days merits earnest consideration. Possibilities cause wonder as to the future.

falls within that year. So, the forecast I offer is that requests will be in the hands of congress, in January, 1941, for deficiency appropriations to cover expenditures that have run short.

Present National Debt Runs Right Close to Line

There is, however, still another "if" to be considered. Mr. Roosevelt advised congress that if all conditions materialized as he expected, the national debt on June 30, 1941, would be $44,938,877,022. That is right close to the line, for the present law limits the national debt to $45,000,000,000. It was suggested that the administration was able to stay under the limit only by taking away some of the funds from the in-laws and stepchildren, known as government corporations. That probably is proper, for the government gave each of them money with which to set up housekeeping. It was more important to the administration, however, since it thereby became necessary to ask congress to raise the limit of the national debt—a request that was sure to raise a row.

One cannot survey the budget and all of its possibilities and probabilities without wondering what lies in the future. Whether this is the reason behind the action of the conservatives in congress who seek to end this spending spree of seven long years or whether the conservatives are worried about future burdens of taxes, the fact remains there should be some tangible policy laid down. And that policy must come from congress. The present administration will not do it. Each year, there have been statements about a balanced budget—in the future.

Takes a look at this general division of where the federal money is being spent, and I think you will agree there is a critical need for a general revamping of the functions of the government at Washington:

- National Defense, $1,800,000,000. Work Relief Programs, $1,300,000,000. Agricultural Programs, $600,000,000. Public Works and Investments, $1,100,000,000. Interest on the Public Debt, $1,100,000,000. Pensions, Retirements and Annuities, $1,300,000,000. Regular Operating Expenses, $1,800,000,000.

THE President's son plans to give us a mystery picture—made from one of the best mystery plays ever written—as the 'first release of his Globe Productions. It's "The Bat," by Mary Roberts Rinehart and Avery Hopwood, and has everything that a thriller should have. It was filmed by Mary Pickford's company in 1926, and done again, as "The Bat Whispers," in 1931. Norman Foster will direct the new version.

Hard on the heels of her scrap with Warner Brothers over her refusal to appear in "Married, Pretty and Poor," Jane Bryan showed the studio that she preferred to be married, pretty and rich—she announced her engagement to Justin W. Dart, who is general manager of a drug firm.

Mickey Rooney may rank first at the box offices of motion picture theaters in this country, but in Great Britain and Ireland he comes second, with Deanna Durbin pushing him out of first place. She was not among the first ten in this country.

If you are devoted to the story, "The Light That Failed," you'll like the picture version, which sticks to the original, even to the unhappy ending. If it's Ronald Colman, rather than the story, who's responsible for your interest in the picture, you'll enjoy it hugely, for he gives an excellent performance.

So do Walter Huston, Dudley Digges, and Ida Lupino. Miss Lupino has had a hard time of it in Hollywood; she was put into ingenuo parts and kept there; now that, at last, she had been given a chance to show what she could do with a real role, she had made the most of it.

Hers is rather like the one in "Of Human Bondage" that established Bette Davis as a dramatic actress. Miss Lupino's performance is good enough to do as much for her. No longer can she be thought of as just one of those pretty blondes who are so numerous in the picture-making metropolises.

If you're interested in the present activities of former radio favorites, here's news of some of them. Jimmy Melton is now known as James Melton, and is a concert singer. Morton Downey wound up his summer engagement at the World's fair and followed it with an equally successful one in a Hollywood night club. Singin' Sam is making money by making recordings.

Jessica Dragonette makes occasional appearances on the air—and when you see "Gulliver's Travels" you'll hear her voice. Vera Van, Leah Ray and Annette Henshaw have retired.

Gene Autry, the singing screen star who is Public Cowboy No. 1, heads a new western series from "The Double M Ranch" over the Columbia network each Sunday. Incidentally, did you know that Gene was discovered by the beloved Will Rogers? Rogers stopped at a small town in Oklahoma to forward his syndicated column; Gene, the telegraph operator, was singing a western ballad. Rogers advised him to capitalize on his talents—and a little more than a year later Gene Autry was a popular radio and recording artist.

Del Courtney, who features Capitol Camera music over NBC, has borrowed an idea from the movies in his presentation of "previews" of his forthcoming programs. Before concluding his broadcasts, he plays a few bars of some of the new tunes to be featured on the next program. It's a novel idea, and will probably be widely copied by bandleaders who don't hesitate to imitate their more successful brethren.

ODDS AND ENDS—The New York Film Critics picked "Wuthering Heights" as 1939's best picture... It's a role more than twenty years since Cecil B. De Mille, Sumner Redstone and Jules LeRoy began filming "The Sign of the Cross" the first motion picture made in Hollywood. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Arthritis May Be Result of Three Factors

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

I CAN remember as a boy an older brother telling me of a wonderful drug that would "cure" rheumatism. The new drug was acetyl salicylic acid (aspirin). It does not cure rheumatism but does relieve pain and the spasm or tightness that aggravates painful conditions.

A few years later it was discovered that infected teeth and tonsils caused rheumatism and it was felt that with the cause known, and then removed, rheumatism would be soon a disease of the past.

"Chronic arthritis (rheumatism) counts more victims than tuberculosis. While not as fatal, it may be quite as disabling." Instead of just the one cause, focal infection—infecting teeth, tonsils, sinus, middle ear, gall bladder, intestine—there are three ways in which arthritis may be produced. One is from without (injury or strain); another is from within (infection). The third combines these two, the effect of strain on a joint damaged by disease resulting in a vicious circle. Other factors entering into the cause of arthritis are gland conditions and lack of vital elements in the food. Still more subtle or difficult to find is an inherited inferiority of joint tissue.

I am quoting from an article on treatment of arthritis by Dr. Bernard Fantus and Eugene F. Traut, in the Journal of the American Medical Association. As these many factors—injury, infection, lack of necessary food elements, inherited tendency, changes in climate, emotional disturbances and others—may be causing arthritis, all must be taken into consideration in the treatment.

Factors to Consider. For a long time, the usual treatment of arthritis was to remove all infected teeth, tonsils and gall bladders, as they were believed to be the entire or whole cause. Today, while they are not believed to be the whole cause or, in some cases, even a part of the cause, they are removed just the same in order to build up the general health of the patient. By improving his general health, his resistance is increased. It is in improving his resistance to infection that has set up the new diet method of treating arthritis.

"The diet should, in general, be low in carbohydrates—starches, especially as to concentrated, refined starch foods such as white flour, corn starch, rice and sugar. If patient is very thin, more fats—butter, cream, egg yolks—may be eaten. One serving of meat, eggs or fish is allowed daily.

Appendicitis Pain May Be Varied

AS IT seems to be the general opinion that the pain in appendicitis must be in the lower right side of the abdomen, many health writers, including myself, try to remind readers that the pain "usually" starts up near the stomach, then gradually shifts down to the appendix and stops there. It might be well, therefore, to learn that while the pain usually starts high in the abdomen, in a number of cases it starts elsewhere.

Dr. Gordon Murray, Toronto, in Canadian Medical Association Journal gives an analysis of 1,000 cases of appendicitis whose records in the Toronto General hospital have been carefully studied. In this group, the proportion of appendicitis in the male was four to one in the female. Abdominal pain was the first symptom in 80 per cent. The situation of pain was (1) general cramps in abdomen, 75 per cent; (2) right lower part of abdomen (appendix region), 10 per cent; (3) above the stomach proper, 7 per cent; (4) umbilicus or naval region, 2 per cent; (5) at side of abdomen, 2 per cent; (6) underneath the stomach, 2 per cent.

Pain Area May Vary. It can thus be seen that the pain in appendicitis may start from various parts of the abdomen, as in only 10 per cent did the pain start in the appendix region. However, in all cases whether the pain started high up, low down, or at the side of the abdomen, in 100 per cent of the cases the pain finally shifted to the region of the appendix. The pain was crampy at first, but frequently became less severe, leaving a dull aching sensation in the appendix region.

Aside from the pain and its location, other symptoms mentioned are: Loss of appetite was an early symptom; vomiting occurred early and in about 80 per cent of the cases; nausea was present often. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Our Old-Time Couch Is Made Streamline

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS WAS there a couch like the picture at the top of this sketch, in the family "sitting room" when you were a child? Let's get it down from the attic, for just see what can be done with it! Properly streamlined it will look like the middle picture. First paint the front of frame; then cover well up onto the head portion with cotton batting; next use bright cotton upholstery material. Remove stuffing at high end. Now, make box-like end tables like those illustrated. The dotted lines indicate how the couch fits under these box tables and how a partition and shelves are put in the one at the lower end. Paint tables to harmonize with fabric. The final touch is the back and end cushions covered with the upholstery material.

The Better Way to Correct Constipation

One way to treat constipation is to endure it first and "cure" it afterward. But there is a way to avoid having it by getting at its cause. So why not save yourself those dull headache days, plus the inevitable trips to the medicine chest, if you can do it by a simple common-sense "ounce of prevention"? If your trouble, like that of millions, is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, "the better way" is to eat Kellogg's All-Bran. This crunchy, toasted, ready-to-eat cereal has just the "bulk" you need. If you eat it regularly—and drink plenty of water—you can not only get regular but keep regular, day after day and month after month. All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. ### CHAPTER XIII—Continued

"I know. But—Oh, I can't analyze it, Edith. I love you—no end. More than anything. But I won't ask you to marry me."

"Do you know how selfish you are, Baldy?"

"I know how wise I am."

She made an impatient gesture. "You're not thinking of me in the east. You are thinking of your pride."

He caught her hand in his. "I am thinking of my pride. Do you suppose it is easy for me to let Jane—take money from him? To feel that there is no man in our family who can pay the bills? I am proud. And I'm glad of it, Edith—I want you to be glad that I won't take—alms."

Her wise eyes studied him for a moment. "You blessed boy. You blessed poet," she sighed, "I am proud of you, but my heart aches—for myself."

He caught her almost roughly in his arms and in a moment released her. "I'm right, dearest?"

"No, you're not right. If we married, we'd sail to Italy and have a villa by the sea. And you would paint masterpieces. Do you think my money counts beside your talent? Well, I don't."

"My dear, let me prove my talent first. As things are now, I couldn't pay our passage to the other side."

"You could. My money would be yours—your talent mine. A fair exchange."

He stuck obstinately to his point of view. "I won't tie you to any promise until I've proved myself."

"And we'll lose all these shining years."

"We won't lose a moment. I'm going to work for you."

He was, she perceived, on the heights. But she knew the weariness of the climb.

Coming out of the garden in the late afternoon, they were aware of other arrivals at the inn.

"Adelaide and Uncle Fred, by all the gods," said Edith, as they peered into the dining-room from the dimness of the hall. "Oh, don't let them see us. Adelaide's such a brome."

They crept out, found Baldy's car and sped towards the city. "I should say," Baldy proclaimed sternly, "that for a man who is engaged, a thing like that is unspeakable."

"Oh, Uncle Fred and Adelaide," said Edith, easily; "she probably asked him. And she was plaintive. A plaintive woman always gets her way."

Adelaide had been plaintive. And she had hinted for the ride. "Why not an afternoon ride, Ricky? It would rest you."

"Sorry. But I'm tied up."

"I haven't seen you for ages, Ricky."

"I know, old girl. I've had a thousand things."

"I've—missed you."

It wasn't easy for Frederick to ignore that Adelaide was an attractive woman.

"Oh, well, I can get away at four. We'll have tea at the old Inn."

"Heavenly. Ricky, I have a new blue hat."

"You could always wear blue."

He decided that he might as well make things pleasant. There was a shock in store for her. Of course he'd have to tell her about Jane.

So Adelaide in the new blue hat—with a wrap that matched—with that porcelain white and pink of her complexion—with her soft voice, and appealing manner, had Frederick for three whole hours to herself.

She told him all the spicy gossip. Frederick, like most men, ostensibly scorned scandal, but lent a willing ear. What Eloise had said, what Benny had said, what all the world was saying about Del's marriage.

"And they were married here today. I didn't dream it until Eloise called me up just before lunch. Edith had told her."

"Edith was here?"

"Yes, and young Barnes."

She stopped there and poured the tea. She did it gracefully, but Frederick's thoughts swept back to Jane behind her battlements of silver.

"Four lumps, Ricky?"

"Um—yes."

"A penny for your thoughts."

"They're not worth a penny, Adelaide. Lots of lemon, please. And no cakes. I am trying to keep my lovely figure."

"Oh, why worry? I like big men."

"That's nice of you."

Martha's little sponge cakes were light as a feather. Adelaide broke one and ate daintily. Then she said, "How's little Jane Barnes?"

Frederick was immediately self-conscious. "She's still in Chicago."

"Sister better?"

"Much."

"When is she coming back?"

"Jane? As soon as Mrs. Heming can be brought home. In a few weeks, I hope."

Adelaide drank a cup of tea almost at a draught. She was aware of an impending disclosure. When the blow came, she took it without the flicker of an eyelash.

"I am going to marry Jane Barnes, Adelaide. The engagement isn't to be announced until she returns to Washington. But I want my friends to know."

She put her elbows on the table, clasped her hands and rested her chin on them looking at him with steady eyes. "So that's the end of it, Ricky?"

"The end of what?"

"Our friendship."

"Why should it be?"

"Oh, do you think that your little Jane is going to let you philander?"

"I shan't want to philander. If that's the way you put it."

"So you think you're in—love with her?"

"I know I am," the red came up in his cheeks, but he stuck to it manfully. "It's different from anything—ever that I've felt before."

"They all say that, don't they, every time?"

"Don't be so cynical."

She shrugged her shoulders. "I'm

"Edith told me."

not. Well, I shall miss you, Ricky, dear."

That was all, just that plaintive note. But Adelaide's plaintiveness was always effective.

Jane was home again. Judy was better. Philomel sang. The world was a lovely place.

"Oh, but it's good to be back," Jane was telling Baldy at breakfast. The windows were wide open, the fragrance of lilacs streamed in, there were pink hyacinths on the table.

"It's heavenly."

Baldy smiled at her. "The same old Jane."

She shook her head, and the light in her eyes wavered as if some breath of doubt fanned it. "Not quite. The winter hasn't been easy. I'm a thousand years older."

"And with a wedding day ahead of you."

"Yes. Do you like it, Baldy?"

He leaned back in his chair and surveyed her. "Not a bit—if you want the truth—I shall be jealous of Mr. Frederick Towne."

"Silly. You know I shall never love anybody more than you, Baldy."

She was perfectly unconscious of the revelation she was making, but he knew—and was constrained to say, "Then you don't really love him."

"Oh, I do. He's much nicer than I imagined he might be."

"Oh, well, if you think you are going to be happy."

"I know I am—dearest," she blew a kiss from the tips of her fingers.

"Baldy, I'm going to have a great house with a great garden—and invite Judy and the babies—every summer."

"Towne's not marrying Judy and the babies. He's marrying you. He won't want all of your poor relations hanging around."

"Oh, he will. He has been simply dear. I feel as if I can never do enough for him."

She was very much in earnest. Baldy refrained from further criticism lest he cloud the happiness of her home-coming. The thing was done. They might as well make the best of it. So he said, "Do you always call him 'Mr. Towne'?"

"Yes. He scolds, but I can't say Frederick—or Fred. He begs me to do it—but I tell him to wait till we're married and then I'll say 'dear.' Most wives do that, don't they?"

"I hope mine won't."

"Why not?"

"I shall want my wife to invent names for me, and if she can't, I'll do it for her."

Jane opened her eyes wide. "Romance with a big R, Baldy?"

"Yes, of course. I should want to be king, lover, master—friend to the woman who cared for me. That's the real thing, Janey."

"Is it?" But she did not follow the subject up; she drew another cup of coffee for herself, and asked finally, "When is Evans coming back?"

"Not for several days. He will go to Boston when he finishes with New York."

"I see. And he's much better?"

"I should say. You wouldn't know him."

He rose. "I must run on. We're to dine at Towne's then?"

"Yes. Just the five of us. It seems funny that I haven't met Cousin Annabel. But she's able to take her place at the head of the table, Mr. Towne tells me. He told me, too, that she wants to meet me. But I have a feeling that she won't approve of me, Baldy. I'm not fashionable enough."

"Why should you be fashionable? You are all right as you are."

"Am I? Baldy, I believe my stock has gone up with you."

"It hasn't, Janey. You were always a darling. But I didn't want to spoil you."

"As if you could," she smiled wistfully. "Sometimes I have a feeling, Baldy, that I should like life to go on just as it is. Just you and me, Baldy. But of course it can't."

"Of course it can, if you wish it. You mustn't marry Towne if you have the least doubt."

"I haven't any doubts. So don't worry." She stood up and kissed him. "Briggs will come out for me—and we are all to see a play together afterward."

"Edith told me."

"Baldy," she had hold of the lapel of his coat, "how are things going with—Edith?"

"Do you mean, am I in love with her? I am."

"Are you going to marry her?"

"God knows."

She looked up at him in surprise. "What makes you say it that way? Has she told you she didn't care?"

"She has told me that she does care. But do you think, Janey, that I'm going to take her money?"

He patted her on the cheek and was off.

Jane picked a spray of princess-pine and stuck it in her blouse. Oh, what an adorable world! Her world. Could there be anything better than Frederick Towne could give her?

Baldy's words rang in her ears—"Do you think I am going to take her money?"

Yet she was taking Frederick Towne's money. She wished it had not been necessary. Each day it seemed to her that the thought burned deeper: she was under obligations to her lover that could be repaid only by marriage. And they were to be married in June.

Yet why should the thought burn? She loved him. Not, perhaps, as Baldy loved Edith. But there were respect and admiration, yes, and when she was with him, she felt his charm, she was carried along on the whirling stream of his own adoration and tenderness.

She went back to her own little house, and found a great box of roses waiting. She spent an hour filling vases and bowls with them.

Old Sophy coming in from the kitchen said, "Looks lak dat Mistuh Towne's jes' fascinated with you, Miss Janey."

"Aren't the roses lovely, Sophy?"

Jane wanted to tell Sophy that Mr. Towne would some day be her husband. But she still deferred the announcement of her engagement.

"I've told one or two people," Frederick had said.

"Whom?"

"Well, Adelaide. She's such an old friend. And I told Annabel, of course. I don't see why you should care, Janey."

"I think I'm afraid that when I go into a shop someone will say,

"Oh, she's going to marry Frederick Towne, and see how shabby she is."

"You are never shabby."

"That's because I made myself two new dresses while I was at Judy's. And this is one of them."

"You have the great art of looking lovely in the simplest things. But some day you are going to wear a frock that I have for you." He told her about the silver and blue creation he had bought in Chicago. "Now and then I take it out and look at it, I've put it in your room, Jane, and it is waiting for you."

She thought now of the blue and silver gown, as Sophy said, "Miss Jane, I done pressed that wite chifon of yours twel it hardly hangs together."

"I'll wear it once more, Sophy. I'm having a sewing woman next week."

With the old white chifon she wore a golden rose or two—and sat at Frederick's right, while on the other end of the great table, Cousin Annabel weighed her in the balance.

Jane knew she was being weighed. Cousin Annabel was so blue-blooded that it showed in the veins of her hands and nose—and her hair was dressed with a gray transformation which quite overpowered her thin little face with its thin little nose.

As a matter of fact, Cousin Annabel felt that Frederick had taken leave of his senses. What could he see in this short-haired girl—who hadn't a jewel, except the one he had given her?

Jane wore Towne's ring, hidden, on a ribbon around her neck. "Some day I'll let everybody see it," she had said, "but not now."

"You act as if you were ashamed of it."

"I'm not. But Cinderella must wait until the night of the ball."

It was while they were drinking their coffee in the drawing-room that the storm came up. It was one of those cyclonic winds that whip off the tops of the trees and blow the roofs from unsubstantial edifices. The thunder was a ceaseless reverberation—the lightning was pink and made the sky seem like a glistening inverted shell.

Cousin Annabel hated thunderstorms and said so. "I think I shall go to my room, Frederick."

"You are not a bit safer up there than here," Towne told her.

"But I feel safer, Frederick." She was very decided about it.

So she went up and Baldy and Edith wandered across the hall to the library, where Edith insisted they could observe other aspects of the storm.

Jane and her lover were left alone, and presently Frederick was called to the telephone.

"I'm not sure that it's safe, sir, in this storm," Waldron warned.

"Nonsense, Waldron," Towne said, and stepped quickly across the polished floor.

Thus it happened that Jane sat by herself in the great drawing-room of the Ice Palace, while the wind howled, and the rain streamed down the window glass, and all the evil things in the world seemed let loose.

And she was afraid!

Not of the storm, but of the great house. She was so small and it was so big. Her own little cottage clasped her in its warm embrace. This great mansion stood away from her—as the sky stands away from the desert. All the rest of her life she would be going up and down those great stairs, sitting in front of this great fireplace, presiding at the far end of Frederick's great table—dwarfed by it all, losing personality, individuality, bidding good-bye forever to little Jane Barnes, becoming until death parted them the wife of Frederick Towne.

United States Marine Band Is 140 Years Old

From an organization composed of a handful of "fife and drummers," the United States Marine Band has grown to one of the most famous military musical groups in the world.

The smartly clad bandmen, arrayed in scarlet-coats, scarlet or white caps, and elaborate ornamentation across the uniform are in constant demand for affairs of state and patriotic gatherings. They appear frequently at White House receptions and concerts of the Pan-American Union.

The Marines' fife and drum corps, organized shortly after the Marine corps was established just prior to the Revolutionary war, usually consisted of "bands" of 10 or more musicians.

When the war ended, military activity virtually came to an end and the Marines' musical unit ceased to function. In 1798, however, the Marine corps was brought to life again and provision was made for a band.

When the national capital was moved from Philadelphia to Washington in 1800 the Marines also were transferred.

Washington at that time was a desolate spot and, according to the Marine corps in its publication, "The United States Marine Band," did much to dispel the gloom.

The band often held its concerts on a hill where the Marines pitched camp, and the music supplied much-needed entertainment for the populace.

In those days the band consisted of two oboes, two clarinets, two French horns, a bassoon and a drum. The band did not possess a bass drum and efforts to obtain one "were not successful for several months."

The band made its official debut at President Adams' New Year's Day reception at the White House in 1801. Ever since that day the band has been called by succeeding Presidents to play on this occasion.

The band's most notable appearance was when President Lincoln made his immortal Gettysburg address.

Springs Long Forgotten

In the year 125 B. C. the Romans established a thermal station at Aixles-Bains, France. After the Roman period the springs were forgotten until the Seventeenth century. Aix is now an important spa and summer resort.

FARM TOPICS

INSULATED BARN MAY BE DRAFTY

Ventilation Problems Must Be Closely Watched.

By E. R. GROSS

Although insulated animal shelters represent a great improvement over old-time, drafty farm structures, insulated structures may develop moisture conditions more prominent than those in a leaky building. For this reason, farmers are urged to study the ventilation problems in their barns and shelters before insulating them.

The day will undoubtedly come when insulated farm structures will be the rule rather than the exception. Insulation for farm buildings is not new, agricultural studies at Rutgers university reveal. The use of sawdust in the ice house is a good example of its early use. Now that farmers are better acquainted with the materials and how to use them and because insulation is now more readily available and reasonable in cost, more farm buildings are being insulated than ever.

Generally speaking, it pays to insulate animal shelters. Insulation reduces the rate of heat loss from the building, hence should make it warmer and more comfortable for the live stock. Suppose, however, that cracks around windows and doors allow air leakage causing a greater heat loss than that through the walls themselves. Under these conditions, insulating the wall will do little good and is not advisable unless the doors and windows are also repaired to prevent air leaks. This sort of reasoning must be applied to poultry houses, dairy stables, hog houses, horse barns and the like.

Early farm structures made of barn boards and battens had cracks allowing ample ventilation of its kind. The stock lived under reasonably healthful conditions although often at quite low temperatures. Tighter walls resulted in less air movement with consequent condensation on walls and ceiling indicating the need for ventilation. So we see that the use of insulation amplifies the ventilation problem and that the volume of air required for ventilation is so great that the flues must be very large.

Government Develops Better Grass Strains

Grass breeding is "catching up" with research on other economically important plant crops, reports M. A. Hein, pasture specialist of the federal bureau of plant industry. Grass long has been recognized as the cheapest of live stock feeds, but until recently little attention was given to better grass strains through breeding. Department forage specialists co-operating with various state experiment stations have shown that grasses can be improved by breeding as much as field crops.

Recent studies, for instance, show that length of day, light intensities, air and soil temperatures all play an important part in grass growth. How to induce and increase the production of grass seed, particularly in the Southeast and the Great Plains—where many of the more desirable and most promising grasses fail to produce any quantity of viable seed, is another problem that the scientists want to know more about. Why some grasses are more palatable and higher in nutritive value than others also is being studied.

To carry out grass studies as rapidly as possible, the country has been divided into regions where there is a similarity in the problems and consequently in the methods of attack. Adaptation studies of large numbers of domestic and foreign grass species are made at nurseries in the various regions. In this preliminary work studies are made of the palatability and the reaction of the introduced grasses to grazing. As far as possible those that fail to show promise in this initial phase of the breeding program are eliminated.

R. E. A. Dollars

For each dollar loaned by the Rural Electrification administration to bring central station service to farm communities, the farmer spends approximately another dollar for wiring and appliances so as to take advantage of the energy brought to his home, REA records show. Available electricity creates a demand for radios, irons, washing machines, water pumps, vacuum cleaners, and many other items that bring comfort and entertainment to the farm home and employment to industry.

Skimmed Milk

All farmers know that skimmed milk is a good feed for pigs, but many people do not know just what its feeding value is. Skimmed milk, and buttermilk too, are both deficient in vitamins A and D and in iron. Vitamin D, which aids in the assimilation of minerals, is supplied by the sun. Vitamin A and other vitamins, proteins and minerals, including iron, are supplied by good pasture, and to some extent by green, leafy legume hay.

Hour-Glass Silhouette Is a 'Must' Fashion

THIS is really a "must" fashion for this season when your figure should by all means have the delicately rounded, small-waisted look that distinguished the gracious ladies of the eighties. Gathers on the shoulders and at the waistline, gathers on each side of the front skirt panel which flattens your diaphragm beautifully—that's all the detailing there is to $567, so that anybody can make it without any trouble at all. And the result is a charmingly elegant, tiny-waisted fashion that you'll love for afternoon and general wear.

Make it of wool broadcloth, faille, flat crepe or sheer velvet, and revel in the satisfaction of having an ultra-smart dress that looks expensive and costs really very little.

Pattern No. 8567 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20 and 40. Size 14 requires 4 1/4 yards of 39-inch fabric with three-quarter length sleeves; 4 1/4 yards with short sleeves.

For a pattern of this attractive model send 15 cents in coin, your name, address, style, number and size to The Sewing Circle, Pattern Dept., Room 1324, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill.

Lewis Burke

Little old town, good afternoon!

Itza Rumor says one of the delights of living in a small town is that people will sympathize with you when you are in trouble, and if you have none they will hunt up some for you.

A short time ago, says the Santa Rosa News, Joseph Stalin, dictator of Communist Russia, was re-elected to his seat on the Moscow municipal soviet. His majority was exactly 100 percent.

They must vote for Stalin "or else."

POLITICS BEGINNING TO BOIL

"I hear that so-and-so is liable to run for the nomination as Sheriff; and did you hear that they were grooming Mr.
 Stanton for County Clerk," said a Fort
 Stanton man the other day.

WUN BUM LUNG OPINES

No man is strong who is unable to conquer himself.

Foreman Jess Garrison and his WPA crew have finished laying cement sidewalks on east Almogordo avenue, running past the cottage formerly occupied by S. P. Conductor and Mrs.
 Pat Collins and up about one block to the Lincoln County Utilities Company.

Foreman Garrison and his men are next going to put in concrete sidewalks around Mrs. Ladema
 Joyce (Carrizozo Home Laundry) establishment and the Prehm residence.

We saw two charming schoolteachers, the Misses O. F. and
 E. S. taking a brisk walk last Sunday afternoon.

—Guess we'll try it next Sunday. Walking puts p-e-p into a person (but it's swell to ride in the car.)

Congratulations! Coach Caton and Miss Bobbe Church, both popular teachers of the local schools were married Tuesday.
 Best wishes to you both, Coach and Mrs. Caton.

Beauty Hints

By Jane Heath

HOT days—work days—play days are here. What's the news on summer make-up?

"As little as possible," answer the beauty experts. "The idea is to look healthy and natural. Let your skin breathe. Discard rouge and powder if you like. But, even if you're rusticated back on the farm, you'll still accent two features—eyes and lips."

Eyebrows should be kept groom-ed and free of stray hairs at all times. This is tricky done with the convenient tweezers with acciders handle, sketched above. Keep to the natural hairline and avoid any artificial look which is now definitely "dated."

Luxuriant lashes are another beauty aim which may be achieved, as you tend your garden, with care and cultivation. Kurlons, a fine eyelash dressing made of rich, natural oils, will do the trick. Applied with the tip of the finger or an eye beauty brush, it leaves the lashes silky and pliable.

And now comes the final touch, a wide starry-eyed effect, produced with a clever eyelash curler that trains lashes upward with no heat or cosmetics. In selecting a lipstick, choose one with clear, warm blood tones, lighter than you've been using.

Accent your eyes and lips this summer, to look healthy and natural. But the wise girl will use just a bit of art to aid Nature.
