The Man With The Shovel

When the poem, "The Man with the Hoe" came out, it attracted universal attention on account of the sentiment it contained. It is hard to find a home which has not among its collection of books, a copy of that sentimental poem.

But among the events of this week, we have had a happening which outclasses it for American valor. When Muhlenbreich kidnapped little Marc de Tristar, he never dreamed that if captured, the great American shovel would figure in the matter, but it did.

The two husky woodmen who halted his march happened to have in their possession, a shovel and when the kidnapper resisted arrest, one of them felled him with that handy instrument. We hail the big labor-saving steam shovel which saves the labor of thousands of workmen and has been the means of relegating the good old hand shovel to the wood shed or tool house where it has been laid away to rust and decay.

But this week, the old implement came back into prominence as a weapon of warfare, which has been the topic of more breakfast conversations than the war across the ocean.

No more should the shovel be held up as an implement unworthy of praise or use, but on the contrary, every American home should see to it, that the old warrior should be given a prominent place among the principal belongings of the family. It should be held in a sort of reverence, cleaned up, polished and decorated in honor of what it was used for in the kidnapping case. You may call a spade a spade, but when you speak of the shovel, it will be remembered with loving kindness by everybody, from the palaces of the rich, to the hovels of the poor. Long live the implement which the Pennsylvania coal miners called in the early days, the "Lackawanna Spoon."

DID CUSTER ASPIRE TO BE PRESIDENT?

A New Chapter in the Story of a Glamorous American

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

SEVENTY-FOUR years ago Cleveland, Ohio, was the scene of a meeting unique in American politics—the "Johnson Soldiers' and Sailors' Convention" of 1866. Although a relatively minor incident in President Andrew Johnson's historic struggle with Thaddeus Stevens and the other radical Republican leaders, this convention has particular interest because one of its promoters and outstanding figures was a man whose name is glamorous in our military annals.

He was George Armstrong Custer. "The Bay General with the Golden Locks," "The Murat of the American Army" and the Indian fighter par excellence until a Sioux bullet ended his spectacular career in what is commonly known as the "Custer Massacre," Custer biographers are strangely silent concerning his part in the Cleveland convention. Yet it was an important milestone in his career. For it was his first venture along a path which, there is reason to believe, he hoped might lead him to the presidency of the United States.

The story of that phase in the career of George Armstrong Custer is here told for the first time. That Custer was an active promoter of the "Johnson Soldiers' and Sailors' Convention" is indicated by an editorial which appeared in the August 24, 1896, issue of the semi-weekly edition of Horace Greeley's "New York Tribune" headed "The Johnson Soldiers' and Sailors' Convention."

"General Custer, the one who gave the Johnson soldiers in the Ohio war to make with them in making a convention in Cleveland to pave the way for a Rebel-Cop perished triumph in the approaching election."

The Tribune was one of the leading newspapers of the day. Not granting the bias of an editorial policy, Custer must have been usually active in Johnson's behalf, for he would not have been singled out for special notice, as he was in the Tribune, as a coverage of the convention. The Cleveland convention opened in a big hall on the lake front of the Ohio city on September 17. The first day's work was to elect a committee to prepare a platform for the approaching election.

That had nothing to do with the election of 1866, but it was a matter of the Ohio war, and Custer was one of the Ohio soldiers who were to make with them in making a convention in Cleveland to pave the way for a Rebel-Cop perished triumph in the approaching election.

Young Custer, by an ambition to see the honor conferred on him by Congress, elected to the position of Secretary of the convention. Custer was elected to the position of Secretary of the convention. Custer was elected to the position of Secretary of the convention.

From through Custer was elected the Secretary of the convention. Custer was elected to the position of Secretary of the convention. Custer was elected to the position of Secretary of the convention.

GEN. GEORGE A. CUSTER

In this photograph, taken by Brady in 1863, Custer wears the picturesque costume of the "Bay General"—wide felt hat, blue tunic and red sash.

according to the Tribune correspondent, "signed by the Rebel Gen. N. B. Forrest of Georgia and Fort Pillow fame, Gen. Chalmers of Hood's old army and Col. Galloway of that notorious Rebel sheet, The Memphis Avalanche—stating that the late Rebel soldiers—the same who massacred negro soldiers at Fort Pillow, and again, more recently, on the streets of Memphis, in a mass convention sent greeting to the Johnson soldiers here, and said they had their sympathy."

This waving of the bloody shirt by the Tribune correspondent was prophetic of the repercussions from this incident which were to come almost immediately. According to Lloyd Paul Stryker in his biography of Andrew Johnson:

"Years later Red Star, one of the Arkansas scouts, during an interview with O. G. Libby of the North Dakota Historical society, recalling the council, disclosed that Custer told the Arkansas 'the had been in Washington and he had been informed that this would be his last campaign in the West among the Indians. He said that no matter how small a victory he could win, even though it was against only five tents of the Dakotas (Sioux) it would make him President, Great Father, and he must turn back as soon as he was victorious. In case of victory, he would take Bloody Knife back with him to Washington."

Later, during the march into the Indian country, Custer again talked with his Indian scouts. At that time, according to Red Star:

"I said he had made up his mind to go on the campaign to fight. He said he had been in Washington and had been informed that this would be his last campaign in the West among the Indians. He said that no matter how small a victory he could win, even though it was against only five tents of the Dakotas (Sioux) it would make him President, Great Father, and he must turn back as soon as he was victorious. In case of victory, he would take Bloody Knife back with him to Washington."

It is no doubt true, as White's statement implies, that Custer's activities during the Ohio war and election of 1866 were only a prelude to the political career which he had planned as a national leader during the Ohio war. This should have warned him to keep away from other political activities, but he failed to do so. During the Ohio war, Custer was elected to the position of Secretary of the convention. Custer was elected to the position of Secretary of the convention.

trovertry has raged over this battle. Critics of Custer assert that he alone was responsible for the tragedy. They say that he was hungry for a victory which would regain for him some of the prestige he had lost in the Bellnap affair and that he was determined to grab all the glory of such a victory for himself. So, they assert, he deliberately destroyed both the letter and the spirit of Terry's explicit orders and by bringing on a battle 24 hours too soon he not only brought disaster upon himself but he broke up a plan which would have insured defeat of the Indians.

Custer-defenders tell another story. They admit his desire for a victory but they deny that he disobeyed Terry's instructions for they read in them an interpretation which gave him considerable latitude of action and fully justify his departure from the letter of those much-debated orders.

In the heat of their dispute, they overlook an incident which may furnish a clue to one of the forces that motivated him. This incident suggests that, despite the unhappy results of his previous ventures into politics, he was contemplating still another and that his ultimate goal was Washington, D. C., and the White House!

Accompanying Custer on this expedition was a party of Arkansas or Red, Indian scouts, many of whom, including a fierce warrior named Bloody Knife, had taken part in Custer's exploration of the Black Hills two years earlier. Before Terry's army left Fort Abraham Lincoln, Dakota territory, Custer held a council with the Arkansas scouts.

Years later Red Star, one of the Arkansas scouts, during an interview with O. G. Libby of the North Dakota Historical society, recalling the council, disclosed that Custer told the Arkansas 'the had been in Washington and he had been informed that this would be his last campaign in the West among the Indians. He said that no matter how small a victory he could win, even though it was against only five tents of the Dakotas (Sioux) it would make him President, Great Father, and he must turn back as soon as he was victorious. In case of victory, he would take Bloody Knife back with him to Washington."

Later, during the march into the Indian country, Custer again talked with his Indian scouts. At that time, according to Red Star:

"I said he had made up his mind to go on the campaign to fight. He said he had been in Washington and had been informed that this would be his last campaign in the West among the Indians. IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for September 29

THE USE AND ABUSE OF WEALTH

LESSON TEXT—Proverbs 11:24-31: Luke 16:11-13. GOLDEN TEXT—Lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven.—Matthew 6:20.

Money—its making and using—is a matter which constantly concerns all of us as long as we live in this world. It is the medium of exchange whereby the labors of one man may be exchanged for the labors of another, in the purchase of goods and services. It may be used to send a messenger to the ends of the earth with the good news of salvation or, on the other hand, it may be the ready instrument to destroy both body and soul of those who abuse it. Man may have money, and be a blessing, or money may have a man, and be a curse.

I. The Right Spirit in the Use of Money (Prov. 11:24-31). What a man does with his money is only a reflection of what he is in his inmost life. The spirit which withholds unless there is a return to itself in pleasure or profit is a selfish and ungodly spirit. To attempt to present one's self before the world as a follower of Christ and to have that attitude toward what one possesses is to deny by one's acts the testimony of one's lips.

Not all "scattering" (v. 24) is commendable. It is possible to be careless and wasteful, and that neither honors God nor helps our fellow men. Then, too, a man may scatter liberally, as the farmer does when he sows seed, knowing that he will have a richer harvest for himself. That is only a different type of selfishness.

II. The Good and Bad Use of Money (vv. 17-23). The man who looks for good finds it, and the one who looks for trouble finds that, too. That is true in the use of money as well as elsewhere in life. One way to end up in certain disappointment is to put your trust in money, for, while it opens many doors, it cannot open the door to heaven, and while it can buy most things, it cannot buy health and happiness. To seek good, seek the Lord and His righteousness, and you will "abound as a branch."

III. The Best Use of Money (vv. 24, 25). One of America's leading business analysts and statisticians said some years ago that the best investment of money was in the raising of souls to Jesus Christ. Had man expended the money which should have gone for that purpose, at the right time, we might have been spared the spending of billions of dollars for war in these latter days.

IV. The Test of the Use of Money (v. 13). "Ultimately each one of us must give an account to God of the manner in which we have lived. These scores and others indicate that one of the heaviest for which we must answer is the manner in which we have used or abused the money or other possessions with which God has blessed us.

We are stewards, and only as we demonstrate our faithfulness and wisdom in the use of the "unrighteous mammon" (v. 13) that in the money of this world, can God entrust us with the money of the world to come with His true riches.

Let us be very clear about this point today. It does make a vast difference in your spiritual life how you spend your money. You cannot spend your life in unrighteousness, with a spiritual bankruptcy and a 40-to-60-year period of probation or social life. The dollar you spend on Monday is an unrighteous investment in God as the dollar you put in the offering on Sunday.

FARM TOPICS LUMBER RUINED BY POOR PILING

Improper Air Circulation Causes Defects.

By CLEMENS KAUFMAN

Such a simple thing as failing to pile newly sawed lumber properly costs farmers thousands of dollars annually. Prompt attention to green lumber in order to prevent warping, checking, staining, and rotting is advisable.

In place of leaving lumber in a heap, or piling it in compact formation where air cannot circulate freely through it, make rectangular piles 6 to 8 feet wide, built square and flush at both ends, with one-inch stickers or cross spacers of seasoned material placed between each layer of boards. An inch and a half or two inches should be left between each board and even-width boards should be tiered directly above one another so that narrow air shafts extend up through the entire pile.

An even and uniform drying of the boards is desirable to avoid the checks and end cracks that result from uneven shrinkage. To insure this a sturdy foundation, well off the ground is needed to permit the wind to blow underneath. Cross sills should be spaced every four feet under the pile and these should be arranged so that the lumber slopes about one inch per foot from front to rear.

Stickers of seasoned material are best in order to prevent the development of blue stain, a harmful fungus growth that would otherwise find ideal conditions in the solid area where the stickers support the boards. Weeds, rotten boards and chips or the presence of woods or trees around the lumber pile also encourage blue stain.

Farmers Urged to Study Crops for Soil Deficiency

It is relatively simple for the average farmer to turn detective and ferret out the signs of soil deficiency in his growing crops.

Various clues are visible on the growing plants themselves when any of the important mineral elements that nourish the crops are absent.

When nitrogen is lacking, the plant fails to grow properly. The young seedling will exhaust its food supply from the seed soon after germination. Then, having removed what little it can absorb from the soil, it ceases to grow. Leaves become thick and brittle. A long yield of poor quality at harvest completes the story.

Phosphorus deficiency is likewise a frequent cause of crop failure. Its symptoms are slow growth and lateness of maturity, stunted plants, discoloration of leaves, poorly formed kernels or fruit.

A lack of potash may affect a plant in a variety of ways. As with the other elements, its absence shows itself in a slowing of growth, followed by a yellowing and sometimes premature drying and discoloration of the leaves. The plant that lacks potash is an easy prey to diseases, parasites and extreme variations of temperature. A complete lack of potash may result in a "night" sweeping over an entire crop.

Once a soil deficiency is discovered," says a recent statement of the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee, "the best procedure is for the farmer to seek the cooperation of his county agent or agronomist at the state agricultural experiment station in working out a well-rounded program of soil improvement and fertilization. Then soil tests can be made which will reveal what plant food elements are lacking, and fertilizer analyses are recommended that will meet the nutritional requirements of growing crops."

Spotlight by GRANTLAND RICE

IN THE Yankee clubhouse they were talking about the fastest pitcher. The argument got down to Lefty Grove and Bob Feller. I ran in my nomination—a fellow named Walter Johnson.

"I never batted against Johnson," Bill Dickey said, "but my vote goes for Grove when he was at his best. I can see Feller's fast one, even if I don't hit too well—but I couldn't see Grove's."

"I never saw Johnson work," Joe Gordon said, "and I never saw Grove at his best, at the top. But I'll string with Bob Feller. He is fast enough for me. Sometimes too fast."

I still stick with Johnson. One answer is that Big Barney pitched more shutouts and had more strikeouts than any pitcher in baseball—113 shutouts, if I recall the exact figures. And Johnson had no chance to ease up with a weak-hitting club. Also every hitter in those days knew a fast one was coming, but they still couldn't hit the Big Train.

"I guess Johnson, with that record, gets the call," Dickey said.

The Detroit Mystery

Here's another angle few fans figure out—I asked one of the Tiger stars how he accounted for Detroit's sudden rise from a sixth-place pick to a pennant contender, and then the mid-season slow-up prior to the final surge.

"Nature," he said. "In the spring we were afraid of Dick Bartell's legs and Charlie Gehring's legs and back. But we happened to get a damp spring which ran into June. We had soft ground to work on until July. This gave both veterans a chance to save their legs. Then the sun baked out all diamonds—and what a difference this makes to older legs."

"This is true enough," Bartell told me. "I was a kid again as long as I had soft ground under my feet. But these hard, baked out diamonds are rough on your legs. I could begin to feel the difference in a few days—sore ligaments, sore feet."

Bartell was one of the main factors in Detroit's early summer charge. Both his spirit and his play were major factors in the Tiger drive. And the same goes for Gehring, who stands out as one of the great second basemen of all time. When these two began to skid the Tiger infield began to look porous.

"Figure this one out," one of the Yankees said. "We all know the value of big, powerful hands in baseball. Hands like Wagner's and LaJolle's—but one of the best infielders I've seen in a long time has the smallest pair of hands in either league."

"Meaning whom?" we asked. "Boudreau, the Cleveland shortstop," he answered. "Boudreau has extremely small hands. They are delicate looking. But I don't know of a better shortstop anywhere today. He has been one of the main reasons for Cleveland's success. When he gets either hand on a ball it sticks with him."

The Eternal Argument

"I'll tell you something," one of the Cleveland veterans said. "Old-timers are always talking about the play of the stars who once made the headlines. They talk about a more scientific game. I'd like to see some of these old-timers handle the ball they hit at you today—infield or outfield."

"The game today is twice as fast. This modern ball comes at you like a rifle shot many times. You can't afford to lose a split second. The same is true in the outfield where line drives come whistling by. It takes much better starting speed to handle the new, faster ball, no matter what position you play. These old-timers were lucky when it came to handling a much slower ball, one that gave you more time to cover your ground."

"Baseball today is far harder on the nerves. You have to be alert every second a man is at bat. You are tense all the time in any close game. The old-time game may have been more scientific, but the game today is largely a matter of speed and power."

Pitchers vs. Hitters

The clubhouse chitchat drifted around to the comparative value of pitching and hitting.

"If you had your choice," I asked one of the veterans, "who would you take—Ruth, Cobb, Wagner and Foxx—or Johnson, Alexander, Feller and Grove—such at his peak?"

"I don't have to wait on that one," he said. "I'd take the four pitchers. Give me those four pitchers and I'll give you any four big hitters you might name in any baseball league, anywhere."

SPEAKING OF SPORTS

By ROBERT McSHANE

Released by Western Newspaper Union

FEW teams in the history of big league baseball have been given so sound a spanking as have the Cleveland Indians during the last half of the present season.

The chastisement hasn't been administered by American league competitors as much as by the press and radio of the nation. Nevertheless, their suffering is just as intense—maybe more so, in that very little sympathy is offered them.

Early in the season the Indians rebelled against their manager, Oscar Vitt. Details of the rebellion were few and for the most part were not substantiated. When it first broke out local newspapers made light of the insurrection. They printed what little they knew of the affair, evidently regarding the player dissension as a temporary matter.

The Rebel Leaders

Finally a few facts began to drift out of the Cleveland dugout. A certain number of the Indians, who had a mutinous attitude toward Vitt, were dominated by Catcher Rollie Hemsley. It has never been exactly clear as to what players were under the Hemsley banner. Hal Trosky was known to be one of the leaders and Bob Feller was one of the signers of the original anti-Vitt petition. Feller since has had a change of heart, as have Mel Harder, Jeff Heath and Ben Chapman. President Alva Bradley is receiving a large share of the blame for falling to take a firm stand either for or against the revolt when it first broke out last June.

Scores of newspaper scribes have refused to pull their punches in denouncing the Indians for their rebellion. Sports writers are more or less accustomed to friction between manager and player. Often the players have a just grievance. But usually they are willing to air that grievance in an above-board manner. The Indians weren't willing to do that. Their secretive, underhanded attitude irritated both the paying public and the press.

Of course, the schools may not be entirely to blame for the fact that little boys grow up into men who yawn as a veterans' parade passes, give a sloppy salute to Old Glory and say "So what!" when told that democracy is in danger.

The old folks at home have something to do with it. Pop never read the Declaration of Independence, and thinks Magna Charta is a new screen actress.

Press Plays Bradley

The extent of that irritation was evidenced by one sports writer when he wrote: "They (the Indians) are branded from top to bottom, from front office to rawest rookie, with intrigue, false statements and petty squabbles. The indolent attempts by Alva Bradley to hush up an anarchistic meeting of players in Detroit cost the Cleveland club caste with the paying public and with the press, whose duty it is to report facts and not to lie about incidents affecting the Indians as a ball club."

The whole affair has made interesting reading, much to the disgust of Cleveland baseball fans. But its effect on the Indians' pennant quest is the important factor. It may be that dissension finally will whip them. However, that dissension has existed all season and Cleveland managed to hold first place from August 12 to September 9, when the erratic White Sox removed them from top billing.

The Present Status

Whether or not the team is "completely demoralized" as charged by various baseball writers, is highly debatable. The Indians are far from a high scoring team. The success is largely dependent upon tight pitching supported by tight fielding. When their pitching falls they lack the run-making power to offset pitching weakness. Therefore they look bad.

Regardless of the outcome of the pennant race, Cleveland can be sure of one definite result of the unsavory revolt. In the fall somebody will have to go. It may be Manager Vitt or it may be Hemsley and Trosky. There just isn't room on the same club for Vitt and the two insurrectionists.

Sport Shorts

Jim McCarthy, sophomore candidate for quarterback at the University of Illinois, was only 13 years old when he began playing regularly as a freshman in high school. Captain Milt Piepik, Notre Dame fullback, who led the Irish in points and total yardage last fall, wears glasses off the field. He's the first back to be elected captain at Notre Dame since 1925. Three members of the Nebraska backfield are wearing special protective helmets.

'SCHOOL DAZE, SCHOOL DAZE' The public schools have opened again and millions of children give up playing outdoors and start fooling in the schoolroom.

They had a lot of fun during the vacation, but weren't anywhere near as idle as they will be when they get back to their studies.

Whether the children have been getting the right sort of education is now a question agitating many nations. That many of the weaknesses in social systems are due to emphasis on the wrong things in school is widely charged. France declares, through Marshal Petain, that its public school system was "a lie," and says that from now on schools will teach "respect of the human individual, the family, society and the nation."

France has blamed about everything else for its defeat, and it may be stretching a point to blame the schools, but this department thinks a little shaking up of the American public school system wouldn't do us any harm.

If Uncle Sam's schools are teaching American boys and girls respect for the family, society and the nation, a lot of the kids are not listening. (There we go preaching again.)

How about getting back to the old-fashioned days when school was opened with prayer and the national anthem, with teacher supplying the inspiration?

The schools are instructing the kids in dates that don't matter, historical episodes that they will never remember and various subjects which will be of little use to 'em.

The only exam they pass quickly is the one which asks, "What was Jimmy Cagney's last picture?" "Name four night clubs most often mentioned in the press," "What six movie stars were divorced in the last 10 days?" and "Has mommer developed a system to beat biggie yet?"

The three Rs would seem to be Robinson, Rooney and Romero.

Of course, the schools may not be entirely to blame for the fact that little boys grow up into men who yawn as a veterans' parade passes, give a sloppy salute to Old Glory and say "So what!" when told that democracy is in danger.

The old folks at home have something to do with it. Pop never read the Declaration of Independence, and thinks Magna Charta is a new screen actress.

And mom is too busy between bridge, the screen scandals, bingo and her efforts to get the right face cream that she isn't much help to the kids either. (So we hear.)

Gatti Casazza died in Italy the other day at 71. He had been director of the Metropolitan Opera in New York for 27 years, and before that was director at La Scala. Gatti was a glamorous figure in the days when the world not only felt like singing, but sang and even paid money to hear others sing. He must have been pretty unhappy lately.

Kathryn Holthman Frank defines an optimist as a man who kept his sunglasses in his hand during the last two weeks in August.

The explanation of the hour: He was going to get married anyhow this summer.

The new France is talking of adopting the "family vote" system of franchise, under which a man has as many votes as there are in his immediate family. The French have something there that we might copy on this side of the ocean. Imagine the rush of party leaders to take Pap Dionne to the polls!

Star Dust

By VIRGINIA VALE

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

ROSALIND RUSSELL, who considers Columbia her lucky lot, has been signed to play the feminine starring role in that studio's new comedy, "This Thing Called Love," a tale of a six months' trial marriage which goes on the rocks before it is well launched. Miss Russell will be seen as a brisk and competent insurance executive (and let's hope she won't over-act, as she sometimes does) and Melvyn Douglas, playing opposite her, will be a mining engineer.

A few years ago the beautiful Rosalind was borrowed by Columbia for the title role in "Craig's Wife," an unsympathetic part, as you'll probably recall, but in it she proved so conclusively that she could act that the picture gave her a place at the top. She scored another Columbia triumph as "Hildy Johnson" in "His Girl Friday."

Two daughters of famous football coaches are up for roles in "Tillie the Toller"; they are Marcella Shaughnessy and Annie Lee Stagg, and were suggested by no less a personage than Maude Adams, the famous actress, who coached them at Stevens college.

The 52.6 record kiss record set by Ann Sheridan and George Brent in "Honeymoon for Three" brought reactions of all kinds from here, there and elsewhere.

A Los Angeles laundry asked for the handkerchief used by Brent to wipe off Miss Sheridan's lipstick, offering to launder it for nothing. An inventor in Indianapolis asked Brent to be the first to try his new lipstick remover. A clock manufacturer inquired what kind of watch was used to time the kiss. A New York promoter telegraphed a $500 offer to the pair if they would officially open a "kissathon" by repeating the performance.

And then a woman's club in Topeka, Kan., passed a resolution recommending that endurance kissing be banned on the ground that it is unhygienic. And countless males between the ages of 17 and 60 were in, volunteering to take over Brent's next assignment of that kind for nothing.

When young Betty Brewer was working with him in "Rangers of Fortune" Fred MacMurray taught her to croon. Since then she has been rehearsing her sister and brother and a little neighbor girl in a quartet which she calls "Betty Brewer and Her Playmates," and it's so good that an advertising agency may put them on the air this fall.

As old as radio is the annoying production problem of performers kicking the microphone stand or striking it with their hands if they make gestures while on the air. If a grating sound comes from your receiving set, that's probably the reason.

Cecil B. DeMille thought he'd solved the problem for his Radio theater last year, by using a hanging microphone—but without a base stand to guide them, actors bumped their heads into the mike. (Gluttons for punishment, these actors!)

Undaunted, C. B. went to work again. And this year when the cast assembled for the theater's first production, "Manhattan Melodrama," with Myrna Loy, William Powell, and, of course, Don Ameche, they found that a circular guard rail had been built under the mike. That suited them perfectly—they could rest their script on it.

ODDS AND ENDS "Most Inspirational Extra of the Year" is the little bestowal on Doris Davenport by the Hollywood Studio Club, because she rose from the extra ranks to the limelight in "The Westerner." Paramount will spend $50,000 on launching "North West Mounted Police"—all for advertising, publicity and an exploitation campaign. Susanna Foster, starlet of Paramount's "There's Magic in Music," was all ready to leave for a vacation in Kearney, Neb., when her dog, Rex, was struck by an automobile. She unpacked her trunks and abandoned her plans, in stay at home until Rex recovered.

SCHOOL again, and this sketch shows a quiet study corner for one girl. It is all very gay in tones of golden yellow and green and was made almost entirely of things already on hand—even down to the hooked rug.

The hanging book shelf doesn't really hang at all. It is made of a box screwed to the wall, and if you never thought of slip-covering a book shelf, here is proof of how smart one will look, especially if it is matched with a chair covered in the same material. The legs of the chair are painted green and so is the old kitchen table which has now become a desk. The yellow tone is repeated in the blotter and an old brass lamp and other desk things carry out the green and yellow color scheme. A shelf like this one would be attractive in almost any room, even the bathroom or the kitchen. This box was so rough that the oil cloth lining was necessary. A box of smooth wood could be painted inside.

Not only did it reign for almost 10 generations, but its branches spread and prospered in virtually every European country. For example, Archduke Francis Ferdinand, who died in 1914, had 2,047 known ancestors, including 1,400 Germans, 100 Italians, 124 Frenchmen, 89 Spaniards, 52 Poles, 47 Danes and 20 Englishmen.

NEW FORD 1941 FORD

In some years, some cars take a big jump ahead. The Ford does that for 1941.

It has jumped ahead in size. It's the biggest Ford we've ever built, inside and out. It's wider. It has a longer wheelbase. Its seating room is wider by as much as 7 inches. It has new wide doors and semi-camouflaged running boards.

You'll notice also a new beauty, achieved by a skillful blending of mass with longer flowing lines. Larger windshield and windows give better vision all around.

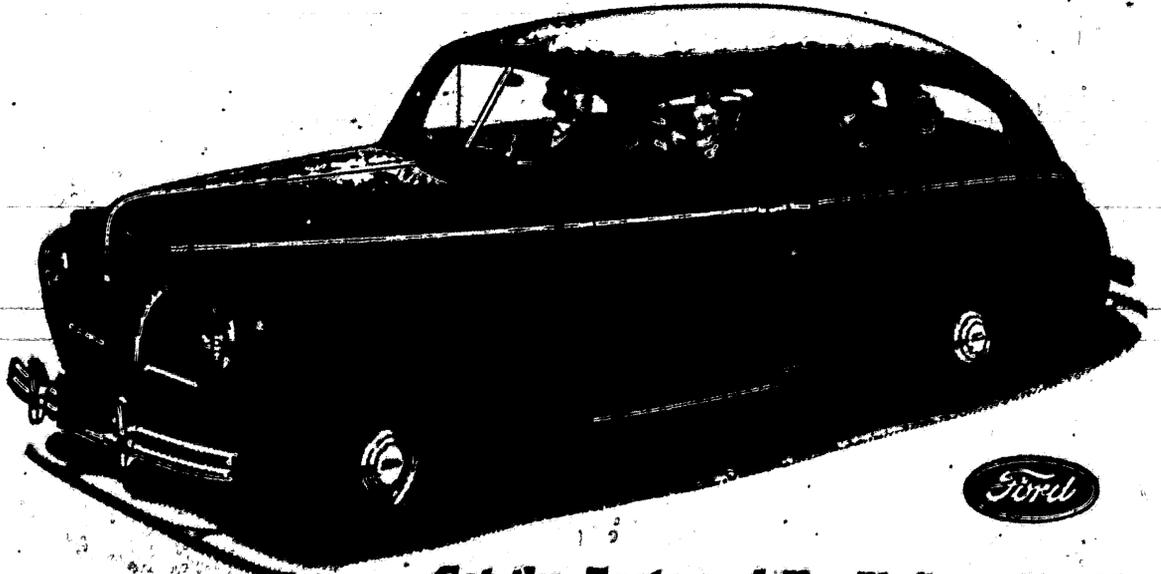

One of its biggest advantages is the new soft ride.

New, slower-action springs give a slow, gentle, gliding movement. A newly designed stabilizer helps absorb road shocks, and maintains balance on sharp curves and in cross winds.

More rapid acceleration to match its familiar speed and power makes this new Ford an even livelier car to drive.

These are only a few of the new car's outstanding features. It represents all the rich experience gained in building more than 28 million motor cars.

Any Ford dealer can give you many good reasons for making this year 1941 car.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

By Roger Shaw

16,500,000 Expected to Register for Draft On October 16, as President Signs Bill; U. S. Political Campaign Is Warming Up; Nazis Continue 'Hammering' of London

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

CONSCRIPTION: Ready, Set—!

Congress passed and sent to the President the Burke-Wadsworth military conscription bill, which provides that all male citizens between the ages of 21 and 36 will be required to register for possible service with the armed forces. Two days later the President signed the bill into law.

Under present plans, such registration will take place on October 16, 1940, with 400,000 trainees scheduled to be dressed in khaki by the end of the year. Seventy-five thousand will probably enter service about the middle of November with subsequent quotas of 100,000 or 125,000 until the 400,000 marks is reached.

The much-debated Fish amendment to the measure, which provided for a 60-day volunteer plan before the draft would be invoked, was dropped before the law was finally passed. The Russell amendment which provides for the "drafting" of industry was modified somewhat in the final act but under its terms the nation will have power to "take over" (lease) manufacturing plants if the owners fail to co-operate properly in the scheme of national defense.

Draft boards will be set up in each community to handle the registra-

THE WAR: Hammers

The war had taken this turn— It was the hammer of Thor, wielded by Hitler, beating down on the more or less solid English anvil. The whole struggle had boiled down into an anvil chorus. Its reverberations shook the world.

When a hammer hits an anvil, one of several things can happen. Either the anvil eventually cracks, or the hammer finally shivers in the hands of the blacksmith. Never does

This nonchalant London gent, who is taking in his milk from the doorstep, is typical of many Englishmen today. While the constant bombing raids naturally upset the daily routine, the English (according to British news sources) are attempting to adjust their lives accordingly and still show as closely as possible to the "normal" way of doing things.

An irresistible force meet an immovable object.

Hitler might hammer England, until his air force began to weaken. That was perfectly possible. But if Hitler turned himself into an anvil, how could the English anvil turn itself into a hammer? The hammer may not be able to crack the anvil. But the anvil can seldom, if ever, hammer the hammer. That was what puzzled the critics. England might very possibly defend itself, but how could it strike back, to defeat Germany? If Germany could not cross 20 miles of water to invade a small island, how could little England counter-invade, to conquer a whole continent? What would Churchill's striking force be?

Anvils

The British blockade is one force. How much it can accomplish in revolt in Germany would be another. But there were no signs of revolt in Germany, and the iron grip of whip-pet tanks precluded revolt in the seven subject states and nations. Would Russia act as the English hammer? Otherwise it might drag on as a deadlock between two anvils, neither of which was equipped with a heavy-enough hammer. In the meantime London was being bombarded mercilessly and invasion threatened from day to day. Buckingham palace was no more immune from Nazi bombs than London's "east end."

PARADOX: What a Shame

The British aviators, over Berlin, gutted the famous local Jewish Home for the Aged. Luckily, nobody was hurt. The same day, the royal air force just missed the luxurious home of Joseph Goebbels, German propaganda minister, one of Nazism's most unavory figures. The R. A. F. had hit Jewish property, and it missed that of the No. 1 Jew-batter. What a paradox, and what a shame. Modern air warfare is, indeed, hit-and-run war in the dark.

YEAR 1940: Campaign

Wendell Willkie invaded the natal town of the powerful Kelly-Nash political machine, the home of the Democratic national convention last July, Chicago.

Willkie was greeted by half a million people, and at once attacked the New Deal in four snappy addresses. He spoke to the stockyards, to the Negroes, to the Westinghouse Electric, and in South Chicago. At one point, he became so pre-occupied that he didn't recognize Mrs. Willkie, when she confronted him.

Said Willkie: "Let me say to you, if you elect me President of the United States, no American boys will ever be sent to the shambles of the European trenches." Then he said: "There are a lot of people in the country who had better do all they can to beat me, because the penitentiary jaws are going to open to some of them."

Just the same his enemies said that he straddled some issues. He had disappointed many mid-western Republicans by endorsing conscription and the 50-destroyer deal with Mr. Churchill, some claimed.

HORRORS: In Jersey

Here are three of the injured victims of the Kenil, New Jersey, munitions plant blast, pictured shortly after they were struck by flying glass.

Thirty buildings were left in ruins at Kenil, N. J. The FBI was called in with a quick rush. Some $2,000,000 worth of U. S. government work was disrupted. Close to 50 were dead, and 200 were injured. It was all caused by a series of hideous explosions at the Hercules Powder company, where 66,000 tons of smokeless powder "detonated" with a series of dull thuds.

Nazi sympathizers were blamed for it, and members of the Dies committee were sent to the scene of carnage. There was open talk of sabotage. The Nazi band has a camp at Andover, about 12 miles from Kenil. Later this camp was raided by authorities. Whatever the truth, it was a bad business all round, and more than equalled the contemporary air raids over London and Berlin. In fact, little Kenil stole the headlines from the spires of Westminster, and the dome of St. Paul's.

III REICH: World's Fair

The long arm of the III reich reached out to Long Island, where the World's fair aqueducts out over many acres. The German "protector" for Bohemia-Moravia—what used to be Czechoslovakia, in part—ordered the Czechoslovak pavilion at the fair to send "home" the products of some 35 Czech firms. The Czech commissioner-general is named George Janacek. Mr. Janacek refused to comply with Baron Von Neurath's command. Said Janacek: "To obey would actually be taking recognition of the German occupation of Czechoslovakia. I will sell as many of the exhibits as I can," added the Patriotic Mr. Janacek, whose joy it is (and no wonder) to defy Mr. Hitler.

He added that the 35 Czech firms in question were "under duress." The 300,000 German soldiers and 50,000 Gestapo men who are holding down the Czechs would tend to agree with Mr. Janacek.

YOUTH: In Flying Boots

Here's a couple of good ones, out of Canada, where men are men, and some people are credulous. It seems, according to Ontario sources, that the German fliers over England are mostly 15 and 16 years old, and that the five-man German bombers are being maneuvered by not more than a couple of kids, still in their teens.

To cap the climax, a Toronto source declared as follows: A German plane was shot down somewhere in England. In the plane were found the bodies of the operating crew. The operating crew consisted of two little girls. These news gems are gleanings from what the boys abroad write home to the old folks. It is all of the same ilk as "Paolo" Revere (Revere's snorting steed was probably named "J. Duce").

REVERE: Call Me Paolo

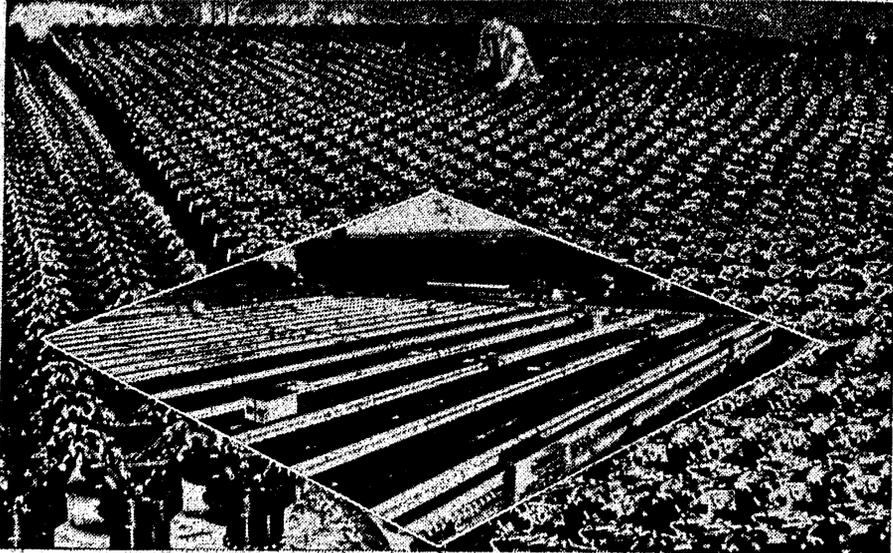

The Italian Paolo came out with a brand-new one. They said that Paul Revere was a good, Anglo-hating Italian. They said that his first name was really Paolo. They said that this patriotic Paolo Revere was born in sunny Italy, in 1735. This came as a complete surprise to American historians, the poor dopes.

The dopey American historians had believed that Paul (Paolo) had been born in Boston, Mass., in 1735. His father was Apollon de Revolre, who came to Boston from the British island of Guernsey (now occupied by the Germans) where they still speak Norman French. In short, Paul Revere was of French Huguenot stock. His silver-smith father anglicized the family name, "naturally on account, that the bumpkins should pronounce it easier."

G B S: Shaw Speaks

George Bernard Shaw, the modern English Shakespeare, advised his countrymen to woo the Russians as quick as they could. He pointed out that Winston Churchill had long been an outstanding anti-Russiar and red-baiter. But, he added, Mr. Churchill had changed his views. He pointed out that Churchill had declared Lenin was a very great man.

Sinews for America's Air Defense

An inspector browsing in a field of completed cylinders at the Pratt & Whitney plant, Hartford, Conn., where motors for U. S. army fighting craft are being turned out. This company was recently given contracts for $27,000,000 worth of motors. Inset: Night view of a section of the Pratt & Whitney plant as the work of building airplane engines for national defense continues, night and day, without a hitch.

Scotch Children Seeking Refuge Here

A large group of some of the more than 300 Scotch children pictured on the S. S. Cameronia, when they arrived in the safety of the United States recently. The children, many of them accompanied, are destined for homes all over the United States. Germany has "washed its hands" of responsibility for the safety of ships bearing child refugees to America.

Seattle Salmon Derby Winners

Automobiles were offered as prizes in Seattle's famous salmon derby. These anglers all won cars. Lily Torkelson (center) with 27-lb. 5-oz. salmon that made her the winner. L. to R. Ray Motzer, 24-lb. 11-oz. salmon for winner man's division; Mrs. E. Carlson, 23-lb. 4-oz. fish; J. E. Webb, 22-lb. 2-oz. and Frank Markham, 20-lb. 11-oz.

As Maine Goes?

Ralph O. Brewster, Republican, elected U. S. senator for Maine in first general election in the nation, defeating former Gov. Louis J. Brand, Democrat, by more than 40,000 votes.

NAMES

... in the news

The duke of Windsor, now governor of the Bahama islands, off Florida, cabled his congratulations to brother George, for his family's escape from German bombs. Premier Mackenzie King of Canada did the same thing.

Authorized German forces declared that Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering, chief of the Nazi air force, flew over London at the controls of Junkers plane, in one of the nightly raids on that city.

The French Vichy government put on (trial) ex-Generalissimo Gamelin, ex-Premiers Daladier and Reynaud, and ex-Minister Georges Mandel, for bawling or treachery, or any odd charge. Really, it was a conservative surge of liberals—one that had been coming on, in France, since the celebrated Dreyfus case of the 1890s.
