Time Softens the Harsh Verdict of His Contemporaries on an American Military Genius Who Was Born Just 200 Years Ago

HIGH TIDE IN THE CAREER OF A MILITARY GENIUS—Benedict Arnold leads the successful attack on the Hessian redoubt at the Battle of Saratoga, October 7, 1777.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

ON THE battlefield of Saratoga in New York stands a monument that is unique. One side of the simple marble slab is adorned with a column, in bold relief, in the shape of a cannon. Carved at its top are a wreath, an epaulet and—a boot! But there is no word engraved there to indicate why anyone should erect a monument to a boot.

Walk around to the other side of the monument and you will read on the smooth face of the stone these words:

Erected by JOHN WATTS & FEYSTER
Brev. Maj. Genl. S.N.Y.
2nd. Y. Frest' Saratoga Mon't
Ass'n

In Memory of the "most brilliant soldier of the Continental Army" who was desperately wounded on this spot, the Sally port of BURGOYNE'S "GREAT (WESTERN) REDOUBT"
7th. October 1777, winning for his countrymen the Decisive Battle of the American Revolution and for himself the rank of Major General

If, as this inscription says, the monument was erected in memory of the "most brilliant soldier of the Continental Army" who won for his countrymen "the Decisive Battle of the American Revolution," then why isn't his name mentioned? The answer is, of course, that if it were, this would become a monument to treason, also. For the name which would be engraved here would be "Benedict Arnold" and, for a century and a half, that has been synonymous with "treason." As for the boot, it is a replica of the one worn by Arnold on his left leg which was wounded at Quebec and at Saratoga. The story back of this unusual monument is this:

In 1877 when the Saratoga Monument association was organized to erect a monument on the site of battle which was the "Turning Point of the Revolution," it planned a monument with four niches. In three were to be statues of Generals Horatio Gates, Philip Schuyler and Daniel Morgan of the American army, but the fourth was left vacant—a silent memorial to one of the heroes of Saratoga who later turned traitor to the Patriot cause.

But General de Feyster, one of the vice presidents of the battle monument association, was not satisfied with this negative gesture. He believed that even though Arnold had been a traitor, there should be some recognition of his services at Saratoga. Even though he could not honor Arnold by name, or the whole of him in a statue, he could honor Arnold's leg which had received two bullets in the cause of liberty.

So he commissioned George Edwin Blewett, a noted American sculptor, to carve the memorial to Arnold and it was set up in 1877. At that time the land on which it stood was private property and could be reached only by a footpath across a swamp. Consequently, few visitors to the battlefield ever saw it. In 1929 this land was taken over by the state of New York and incorporated in the memorial park which includes approximately 1,700 of the 3,400 acres over which the British and American armies fought so desperately in 1777.

Today the Saratoga battlefield is one of the best-known "shrines of American liberty," visited annually by thousands. The Arnold memorial, "touching in its simplicity and symbolism" (as R. L. Duffus of the New York Times has phrased it) is one of the chief points of interest on the battlefield and many Americans who see it are now inclined to think somewhat differently of Benedict Arnold than to associate his name always with the word "traitor" as they learned from their school book histories to do.

In fact, the passage of time has softened the harsh verdict which his contemporaries passed upon this man who was born just 200 years ago (January 14, 1741). Through the perspective of a century and a half Americans are beginning to see more clearly the real tragedy that was the life of Benedict Arnold, and they are learning to share Washington's emotion—sadness that a brilliant career should end so darkly—rather than hatred for a man who, with good reason for being disappointed and embittered, betrayed his trust. Without seeking in any way to excuse his treason, they can more readily understand why he acted as he did and they can recognize the fact that not even his one great act of faithfulness can obscure his greatness as a military genius.

Arnold proved that he was a great soldier many a time before that fatal day in 1780 when his plot to hand the stronghold of West Point over to the British was foiled. At the outbreak of the Revolution he led a company of militia from his native state of Connecticut to Cambridge to join Washington's army. But, tiring of the inactivity of the siege of Boston, he obtained permission to enlist men for an expedition against Crown Point and Ticonderoga on Lake Champlain.

This resulted in his first frustration. For another spirit as bold as himself—Ethan Allen with his Green Mountain Boys from Vermont—was ahead of him. So Arnold took part in the capture of Ticonderoga as a simple volunteer with Allen but he did lead an expedition which pushed forward and captured St. John's. However, when a committee came from Massachusetts, it was not to praise him for his feat but to inquire into his conduct. Disgusted at this, Arnold resigned from the service and returned to his home.

This inauspicious start to his military career was prophetic of the suspicion and jealousy that was to pursue him from that time forward. For Benedict Arnold always had enemies and his hot temper, his arrogance and his impatience with less impulsive men were responsible for most of them. They prevented his winning the recognition due him for one of the most brilliant exploits soon afterwards. That was his epic march to aid Gen. Richard Montgomery in the attack on Quebec late in 1775. Though the expedition was a failure, Arnold succeeded in bringing the remnants of his command back by way of Lake Champlain, beat off an attack by a British fleet and, although he had to beach his boats and burn them, he saved his army.

"Surely a more active, a more spirited and sensible officer fills no department of the army" was Washington's praise of Arnold after this exploit. But it did not save him from the machinations of his enemies, who spread false reports about him. So when congress, in February, 1777, promoted five brigadier generals to major generals, Arnold's name was omitted from the list.

That fall he was sent to aid Gen. Philip Schuyler in resisting Burgoyne's invasion. Then Gen. Horatio Gates replaced Schuyler as commander of the army of the north and the two armies came to grips at Saratoga on September 19. Arnold, commanding the left wing, distinguished himself while Gates was showing all the ineptitude that characterized his whole career. There was a furious quarrel between the two generals which ended in Arnold's sending his resignation to Washington. He was replaced by General Lincoln but remained with the army.

On October 7 came the final great battle at Saratoga and when the tide seemed to be running against the Americans Arnold could no longer remain sulking in his tent. Mounting his horse, he rushed into the battle "with the fury and impetuosity of a tiger," led his men in a successful assault on the Hessian camp, and went down with a bullet through his leg. This was the turning point of the battle.

Although Gates and his friends tried to disparage Arnold's great contribution to that victory, congress made him a major-general, Washington presented him with a "pair of elegant pistols" and he was named commander of the American forces in Philadelphia. Then the hatred of his enemies began to dog him again. Eight charges of personal and official misconduct were brought against him and although he was virtually acquitted by a court martial, he was sentenced to be reprimanded by Washington, who carried out the distasteful duty as considerately as possible.

But this was the last straw for the embittered, disappointed man. Soon afterwards followed his appointment as commander at West Point, his plotting with the British to hand that post over to them, the exposure of the plot, the capture of Maj. John Andre, adjutant-general of the British army and Arnold's fellow-conspirator, and Arnold's flight to the British.

After the war was over Arnold went to London to live. Although the king received him graciously he found that the English had little admiration or liking for the "American traitor." When he walked the streets, he was always conscious of their sneers as much as he was of the undisguised hostility of Americans in the British capital. Later he engaged in trading in the West Indies, then lived for a time in St. John, New Brunswick, where many American Loyalists had settled. But they had little more use for him than the English and eventually he went back to London, where he died June 14, 1801, a broken-hearted, poverty-stricken old man.

At Close Speaker's Remarks Had Become a Nightmare

The dinner came to an end, and the chairman called for silence. "Gentlemen," he began, "I will now call upon Mr. Long, our distinguished guest, to make his speech."

The guest rose and was greeted with polite applause.

At the end of ten minutes he was still speaking, but when at the end of half an hour he had not finished the patience of his listeners began to get exhausted.

In the end the speaker wound up with: "Speaking is nothing to me. As a boy I used frequently to talk in my sleep."

"And now," a drowsy voice was heard to exclaim, "you talk in ours."

KNOW YOUR BANK

The Importance Of The Purpose Of A Loan

In making a loan a banker is lending money which belongs to the bank's depositors, and so his primary responsibility is to see that the loan will be repaid when due. Therefore, the banker is entitled to know how the money is to be used. He asks the purpose of the loan in order that he may determine the soundness of the purpose. Banks are prohibited from making certain types of loans, so they must be sure that your loan is not this type and that it will not get the borrower into legal or business difficulties. The borrower should be frank about the purpose for which he desires to borrow money—it makes the granting of credit easier. The banker of course will keep this information absolutely confidential.

DOES FORD PAY GOOD WAGES?

HERE ARE SOME FACTS about Ford Labor. During the year ended November 30th, 1940, the Ford Payroll throughout the United States averaged 113,628 hourly wage earners, not including office employees, students, or executives. They were paid $185,105,639.12. On this basis, the average annual wage was $1,629.05.

According to the latest available government figures, the annual average wage of all workers in employment covered by old age insurance law was $841.00.

If the 45,000,000 workers of this country received the same average wage as Ford employes, they would have had additional wages of more than $35,000,000,000, thus increasing the national income about 50%. Think what such an increase would mean to the workers of this country and to the American farmer, whose prices are based on the national income.

Wage scales in the Ford Rouge plants are divided into three classifications:

Unskilled . . . Minimum hiring wage . 75c per hour
Semi-skilled . . . Minimum hiring wage . 80c per hour Skilled . . . Minimum hiring wage . 90c per hour Higher wages are in consideration of ability and years of service.

Minimum wage scales for unskilled labor at the Rouge plant are the highest in the industry. Top wages for skilled labor compare favorably with, or are higher than, wages in other automobile plants.

Now some facts on Ford labor conditions: Not only are sanitation and other health conditions the best in the industry, but Ford also leads in safety devices for the protection of employes. Proof of this is found in the following comparison of compensation insurance costs:

The national average rate in automotive manufacturing plants as computed by the National Association of Underwriters is in excess of $1.50 premium on each $100 payroll. The Ford cost of workmen's compensation is less than 50c.

This indicates that the chance of injury in a Ford plant is much less than in the average automobile plant.

The Ford Motor Company has no age limit for labor, and in fact deliberately attempts to keep older workers working. The average age of Ford workers at the Rouge and nearby plants is 38.7.

A recent check-up shows that nearly one-half the workers at these Ford plants were 40 or over, falling into these age groups:

25,819	between 40 and 50
14,731	between 50 and 60

In addition to the so-called regular employes, the Ford Motor Company has hired, and now has on the payroll, at the same regular hourly wage, thousands of workers who are blind, crippled or otherwise incapacitated for normal productive work. They are not selected for their ability to build cars or to maintain the plant. They are on the payroll because of Henry Ford's belief that the responsibility of a large company to labor goes beyond the point at which the unfortunate worker can no longer produce profitably.

The above are facts. They are open to anyone who really wants to deal in facts. Anyone who wants to get a job . . . buy a car . . . or place a national defense contract on the basis of fair labor treatment must place Ford at the top of his eligible list.

"The FIRESIDE PHILOSOPHER"
 BY ALFRED BRIGGS
 If you think you're faultless, you're a fool.
 Would you be popular? Be a good listener.
 The only failure to fear is failure to do right.
 Sincerity comes from the heart, not the tongue.
 The earth seems like an institution for the money-blind.
 You can learn more in your garden with a microscope than by going around the world.

With the Air Arm of the Royal Navy

Military Training Helps Reformation

Free French Fight on for Liberty

Somewhere in England, and in an English port, this destroyer now flies the standard of the Free French forces who fight on for liberty. It was one of the ships of war that came over to England rather than surrender when the French government capitulated to the Nazis. Craft of the Free French navy are now doing regular duty with units of the British fleet.

The Army's Men in White

"Ten below zero" is what the thermometer said as this old patrol of the U. S. Army started its winter training at Fort Monmouth, N. J., barracks for a winter training unit. The men in white like those made famous in the Great War are the members of the Twenty-sixth Infantry. They are being trained in winter maneuvers.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

By Edward C. Wayne

President Calls for Armaments Drive With Increased Aid for Democracies; Irish Investigate Bombings of Dublin; New Congress Tackles Vital Problems

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.) (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

CONGRESS:

State of the Nation

Calling upon all U. S. citizens to "make the sacrifices that the emergency—as serious as war itself—demands," President Roosevelt in his personally delivered message to the new Seventy-seventh congress pledged full defense and help for those "people who are keeping war away from our hemisphere." He pointed out that he believed the United States to be facing an unprecedented foreign peril and he asked for a "swift and driving increase" in armament production. Both the United States and the "democracies" would reap the benefits of such increased production, according to the President.

"I also ask this congress," said the President, "for authority and for funds sufficient to manufacture additional munitions and war supplies of many kinds, to be turned over to those nations which are now in actual war with aggressor nations." While he did not actually list the nations to which such aid would go it is generally believed that he meant Britain, China and Greece.

President Roosevelt then proceeded to make clear that he did not consider such aid an "act of war even if a dictator should unilaterally

IRELAND:

On War's Brink

Aerial war reports were featured by a small but continued bombing of neutral Ireland, and George Bernard Shaw rushed an interview over the cables saying that either Britain or Hitler would get Ireland into the war somehow before long.

Hitler, said Shaw, wants Ireland in on the Axis side, to give him a possible landing site for aerial invaders. England wants Ireland actively in on the British side to give her good naval bases and a better defense against submarine activities in the eastern Atlantic.

Investigation of the bombs that dropped at first seemed to indicate that the Germans were attempting to line the Irish coast with magnetic mines and that some of them had inadvertently landed inshore.

This, however, was not borne out, for later bombs were not of the marine type, and then came a full daylight raider, with no excuse for missing, and popped one or two right into the streets of Dublin.

Examination of the bombs showed them to be of German manufacture. The Axis, both Rome and Berlin, immediately leaped into print claiming that the bombs had been taken from downed planes by the British, who had been calmly bombing her neighbor, trying to get the Irish mad enough to declare war on Germany.

GREEKS:

Still on Move

Despite the rumbling thunder of Germans about to swoop through Bulgaria toward Salonika, the Greek armies, facing worst blizzards in Albanian history, continued to move forward, but more slowly in the face of stiffening Fascist resistance.

Chief gains were made on the southwestern front, but gains were reported in all sectors. Interesting were the dispatches telling of how Italians were taking to skis with disastrous results, and how Italian mechanized forces were bogging down.

Picture editors in this country continued to get dozens of photos of Italian surrenders, one of the captions even saying that when a cameraman happened not to be present at one "surrender scene," the Fascist troops obligingly posed for the picture when one finally showed up.

"Tirana by Christmas" did not materialize, and the Italian stiffer resistance did—but there was continued evidence that if the Greeks were to be beaten back and Italy kept in the war, German planes and German troops would have it to do.

Hitler's statement, made when he was "mad" with Italy before her entrance into the war on the eve of the fall of France, that it would take 10 to 15 divisions to keep Italy going if she did come in, seemed to have been conservative.

Estimates of German troops already available for an invasion of Greece through the Bulgarian door had risen to half a million, or four times the maximum of Hitler's estimate.

NEW YORK.—John G. Paine (standing), general manager of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, is shown with Dave Stamp, well-known composer, at one of the machines used to record all radio broadcasts so that any infringement of ASCAP copyrights may be detected. In the midst of a bitter fight with radio broadcasters over royalty payments ASCAP officials are taking no chances on missing tunes on the air.

FOREIGN BRIEFS:

LONDON.—British report that since October 15, more than a dozen German infantrymen, representing eight different units of the German army, have been captured on British soil. They called them the "first men of the invasion army" to reach England alive.

ROME.—The Axis will knock England out of the war before U. S. aid can arrive for Britain, the Lavaca Fascists prophesied.

COMMENTS

Little old town, good afternoon!

Como sta, Senoras y Caballeros!

R U Listenin'?

Messrs. Wm. Gallacher, Corbin Hester and Manuel Corona, the progressive Board of County Commissioners -- We see the cement brick walls are about up on the two - story construction of the new addition to the Court House. It won't be long now until it will be ready for occupancy -- here's hoping.

Declaring she was acting as she hoped "any true American patriot would" Municipal Judge Ida M. Adams of San Pedro, Cal., burns a Nazi flag which precipitated a court row. The flag was brought into court by a seaman charged with assault after the asserted display of the flag in a private home.

Have you kicked in? The Carrizozo HI School band is raising contributions for their new uniforms; we saw a sample on a Miss -- and it looked snappy.

Mayor M. U. Finley has been appointed County Chairman and Tommy Cook as local Chairman of the forthcoming President's Birthday Ball, held for the benefit of crippled children.

Regarding the forthcoming school election, we think the same school board should run again;
 namely, Messrs. Wm. Gallacher, Henry Hoffman, Mrs. Turner and Snow. The School Board and County Commissioners are just starting a new addition to the Carrizozo school buildings, and it is not wise to change horses in the middle of a stream.

I guess the main attribute of Democracy is the right to get different answers to the same problem in simple arithmetic. -- That's the way we operate and usually without an anesthetic.

Well; it was good enough for Lincoln, it was good enough for Madison, it was good enough for Washington.

Do you realize that we are having an inaugural next week in the middle of all this turmoil?
 Well, we are still voting while over in Europe they are still drawing straws. -- Baer.

More than 75,000 of Italy's picked troops who were to have marched to the Suez Canal to sever one of Great Britain's life lines, are now prisoners in Africas. Among the more than 30,000 captured at Bardia alone were General Annibale Bergansoli, commander-in-chief of the Bardia forces, one air corps commander and four other generals.

Reasonable Coats to wear new and next winter. -- 20 per cent reduction at Burke's.

Heard this over the radio last night -- There are so many Faccial or Italian Generals in the reason for Italy's reverse in the war.

Just like down in Mexico,
 everyone wants to be a General;
 if they can't, they will start a revolution. -- M. Ben-yoi!
