Rich Hust and the "Bald Knobbers"

Rich Hust was here from Nogal Monday and said he was interested in the Jesse James story last week, wherein the "bald knobbers" figured so prominently. Rich was born and reared in the locality near Bald Knob. As he talked, he drifted into a reminiscent mood and told many stories about that gang of criminals and law-breakers. Rich belonged to the better side, which finally overthrew the bald-knobbers, but it took the killing of the leader and several others to complete the task.

BUSINESS MEN'S CLUB

A motion was passed to retain the balance in the 1940 Xmas Fund intact, instead of transferring to the Band Uniform Fund.

The secretary was instructed to forward payment for labor and materials for repairing the Carrizozo sign at Hondo.

The club voted to send a wire to our senators and congressmen requesting every effort be put behind the movement to get highway 54 designated as a military highway or be placed in line for federal assistance, in an effort to get additional work at an early date.

The Club will appreciate local citizens writing or wiring to the senators and congressmen, urging them to push the matter on highway 54.

The airport committee reported that a potential site for the proposed airport had been located, and authorities at Santa Fe had been notified to come down for an inspection of the site.

Advance Contingent Arrives

The advance portion of the German sailors, bound for the old abandoned CCC camp at Fort Stanton, arrived on belated 44 coming from El Paso at 12:30 and were taken in army trucks from the local station to their destination. There were 39 men in the crew headed by Captain Dasher, who was the smallest man in the bunch, the others ranging from 5 feet ten to 6 feet three. The men are carpenters and painters who will arrange the camp in readiness for the remainder of 408 men who will be here as soon as the Captain gives moving orders.

A good sized crowd stood in the rain, watching silently as the photographers, Briator for the Life Magazine and Dabradin, the Fort Stanton photo man took flashes at the scene, as the sailors descended from the coaches and ascended the waiting trucks. They were well dressed and showed evidences of having had the best of care and accommodations. It took nearly an hour to complete the transfer. Officers conversed in low tones, while the sailors talked but little all in the native tongue, bordering on the whispering hiss. The Captain speaks fluent English, but the

Short Stories About Jesse James

It was in the spring of 1872, that James Zumwalt, farmer of Platte City, Mo., made a trip to Kansas City and on the following day, went to the First National Bank to draw something over $2000. In the conversation preceding issue of the money, Mr. Zumwalt told the cashier that he intended to go home that afternoon with the cash. The cashier begged him to wait until the following morning and said: "Mr. Zumwalt, it would be extremely dangerous to make that trip today, for it would be long after midnight before you reached home and the Missouri river bottoms between here and there are alive with robbers, among whom are the James Brothers."

With a deaf ear to all warnings, James Zumwalt ordered the money. Before the cash was counted out, the cashier and Zumwalt took a careful look around the bank block, but the coast was clear. Receiving the money, Zumwalt placed the bills in the inside pocket of his heavy hunting shirt, pinned them in carefully, bid the banker goodbye and getting into his buggy, drifted out of town toward Platte City.

The distance from Kansas City to the Zumwalt farm was about 40 miles through the bottoms and that distance over rough and muddy spring roads made travel tough and tiresome, but a full moon came out, making the driving more easy. Jim had gone about 15 miles, when he began to think of what his banker had said, but it was too late to turn back. Hardly had the warning occupied his thought when three masked men rode out from the woods which fringed the road and halted him. One of the three, rode up and said: "Mr. Zumwalt, I am surprised at you risking this trip during the night with over $2000 in your possession. Don't tell me you haven't the money, because we know you have. We are not after your money, but will, as far as we can, prevent others from robbing you." Without another word, the riders disappeared into the woods.

Zumwalt was dumfounded. For a while, he sat rigid in his seat, not knowing what to do; but remembering what the masked rider had said, gave him courage and he drove on. Three times, for the distance of 25 miles, the three riders made their appearance ahead of him. They would ride out of the timber, where he could see their forms plainly in the moonlight, then disappear as silently as they had appeared. The last time he saw them it was near his home, where they halted for a few seconds in the road, waved their hats at him and vanished. Who were the men who saved James Zumwalt and his money that night? That question was answered in about three years after the above happening, when one of Jim's close friends told him to whom the credit belonged—Jesse James. Old settlers in that

A LETTER TO MR. DISNEY

Dear Walter Disney:
I have just read in the papers that you do not think a child could possibly be scared by any of the weirder effects in your new picture, "Fantasia," particularly by the episodes in "Night on Bald Mountain," and while you may be right, what about the grownups? I give you my word, Walt, that the scenes in that episode—had-me-creepy-for-days and I still ain't sleeping well. If that comes under the head of entertainment, then a great idea for the Folies would be a night in a morgue.

You are a genius in my book, Walter, and nobody is even a close second to you in movie entertainment, but it would be okay by me and, I think, most movie fans, if you would cut out a tendency to go in for the creepy stuff. You could throw out the entire night on Bald Mountain and do the nerve doctors and psychopathic ward attendants a great favor.

I know this is supposed to interpret a musical composition for drums, bass fiddles, cymbals, horse pistols, dynamite caps and saxophonists with the D.T.'s, but if it does so, then Mousorgsky should have stayed in bed where he could never make the hair of a movie fan stand on end, man or boy.

"Fantasia" is a beautiful thing full of what the critics call enchantment, but a smart spectator will grab his hat and make for the nearest exit when the Bald Mountain stuff starts. It is nothing but 20 minutes of skeletons, ghosts, slobber-gibbets and assorted apparitions flying across the screen like they was fugitives from Hades, and I mean the basement not the merzanne floor. A skeleton rates at the bottom of the list for purposes of public entertainment, anyhow, even if it is a quiet, dignified unassuming skeleton. And when a skeleton turns out to be a jitterbug acting as if it was being auditioned for a ballet it is no good to nobody nchow, even with the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra as sponsor.

The episode should be retitled "Heebie-Jeebies in Technicolor."

Give them skeletons two weeks' notice, Walt, and give Bald Mountain back to Hitler, where it must have come from.

Yours for fewer goose pimples, with sound.

Elmer Twitchell.

BREEDING HENS NEED VITAMINS

Diet Will Influence Health Of Baby Chicks.

By PROF. C. S. PLATT (Associate Poultryman, Rutgers University)

Check carefully on the diet of breeding hens. Vitamins A, D and G, or riboflavin, for instance, are necessary not only to the health and normality of chicks when hatched but also to their growth during their first few weeks of life.

The yellow corn and dried alfalfa commonly fed to birds contain enough vitamin A, and cod liver oil or sardine oil provide sufficient vitamin D. However, vitamin G, which is contained to some extent in dried alfalfa, is lacking in the other three products and is also lacking generally in poultry rations. But this factor may be added through the use of dried yeast or liver meal, although these products are relatively expensive. Or it may be supplied by dried skim milk or dried buttermilk if used in sufficient quantities.

For practical purposes, 100 birds should receive one pound of dried buttermilk or dried skim milk daily, either incorporated in the dry mash at the rate of 10 per cent, or fed separately in the moist mash directly in the quantity recommended. When a high quality of dried whey is used, the amount can be reduced to three-quarters of a pound per 100 birds daily. As in all vitamin products, the only guide for the purchaser is the reputation of the manufacturer for furnishing grades up to guarantee.

When the essential vitamin G quality is incorporated in a dry mash, care must be taken to insure that 100 birds daily eat at least 10 pounds of mash, otherwise their diet will not be complete. Because of this fact, breeding stock should be limited in the quantity of grain fed each day in order to encourage the proper consumption of dry mash.

Regrassing Old Fields Reduces Insect Danger

Range land well grazed and fairly free of weeds is not a favorable breeding place for most of the insects that are crop pests. Good woodland is also fairly safe. But the weedy old fields in moist regions and weedy land abandoned as too dry or too infertile for grain growing have proved almost "ideal breeding places for a large variety of agricultural pests, one of the most important of which is grasshoppers," according to Dr. P. N. Armand of the United States department of agriculture.

Abandonment of land in the Northwest—cropped during the twenties and stricken in the dry years of the thirties—has been a highly important factor in the grasshopper plagues of recent years, says Dr. Armand.

In the first years after abandonment and before a good grass cover can be restored, these fields are at their worst as a hazard to nearby crops. Any process that speeds up the regressing of land that never should have been ploughed is a step in the direction of insect control.

Mineral Deficiency

When cows and calves gnaw at fence posts and rails, it is usually a sign of mineral deficiency in the ration.

A sufficient quantity of calcium is usually contained in legume hays such as clover, soybeans, clover and alfalfa if these crops are grown on soil not deficient in lime. Where the grain ration contains 50 per cent of wheat bran, cottonseed meal and soybean meal, there is usually a sufficient amount of phosphorus.

However, it will do no harm to allow the cows and calves free access to a mineral mixture composed of one part salt and four parts of steamed bone meal.

Agricultural News

The supply of vegetable seed for 1941 planting is expected to be somewhat short.

The milk of sheep, goat and buffalo is used for cheese-making in many European and Oriental countries.

Two-thirds of the people in South America are in agricultural occupations. One-fourth of the people in the United States are similarly engaged.

Trade between the U. S. and Latin America amounts to about $1,000,000,000 annually, or about one-fifth of U. S. world trade.

U. S. farms and ranches annually produce eight times the amount of beef exported to all countries by Argentina in an entire year.

Argentine hides now have their largest market in this country, the United States taking about 80 per cent of the total produced by the South American republic.

Fortunately for Passenger No Rules Were Broken.

As the west-bound express train thundered through the wayside station, a door burst open and a passenger fell out. Fortunately, he landed on a heap of sand, so, though badly shaken up, he wasn't hurt much. The train shrieked to a stop and the conductor hurried to the side of the victim. "Hurt bad?" he inquired. "No, I guess not," replied the man, "but what'll I do now?" "Let me see your ticket," said the representative of the railroad. When it was produced he examined it closely, then: "It's all right," he said. "This ticket permits a break in the trip."

LET US TELL YOU MORE ABOUT IT

'Know Your Money and You'll Not Be Losing It to Counterfeiters,' Says Chief of the United States Secret Service

Study the above diagram—it shows you the position of important features of United States paper money. If you get a suspected bill, compare it with a genuine bill and observe carefully the following features:

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WHEN your friends say to you, "Well, don't take any wooden nickels!" you laugh heartily for you recognize it as a good joke. Of course, you wouldn't take any wooden nickels! But there's always a chance that you'll do something worse—take a paper bill that looks as though it's worth $1 or $5 or $10. But it's just as worthless as a counterfeit.

In fact, during a recent five-year period Americans were swindled to the tune of $1,000,000 a year by counterfeiters and these crooks got by with it mainly because of the indifference and ignorance of their victims.

How about YOU?

Do you ever do more than just glance casually at the paper bills that are handed you in making change—especially when they're handed you by a stranger?

Do you know whose portrait is on a one-dollar bill, or a five, or a ten?

Do you know what pictures are on the backs of those bills?

If you do, you have made a good beginning towards protecting your pocketbook from the counterfeiters. If you don't know the outstanding features of your money, you have only yourself to blame if you become the victim of the counterfeiter and his vicious racket.

"Yes," you say, "but how can I learn about money? I know what it looks like, but I don't know what to look for."

Well, the United States Secret Service has undertaken to show you what to look for. A trial educational campaign indicated that this loss was largely due to your lack of knowledge about money. But the campaign also showed that enlightenment of the people would protect them. Therefore, the campaign of education against crime was intensified, under the slogan "Know Your Money." For the calendar year of 1940 the public losses through acceptance of counterfeit notes were reduced to about $100,000. The Secret Service believes this 90 per cent reduction is the dividend of its "Know Your Money" campaign.

Newspaper stories, magazine articles and educational pamphlets carry the message into homes, schools and the business world. A 32-page illustrated booklet, just off the press, entitled "Know Your Money," published by the Secret Service, tells how to detect counterfeit notes and coins, and how you may protect yourself against the forger of government checks. The booklet may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., for 10 cents the copy. A sound motion picture, also entitled "Know Your Money," entirely made by the Secret Service, and with Lowell Thomas as commentator, is being shown in high schools in the 48 states and to business groups of 100 persons or more.

"There is no secret formula for detecting a counterfeit note," says Frank J. Wilson, chief of the United States Secret Service. "Years of experience have proven that the human eye is the best counterfeit detector in existence. But it must be properly trained. Genuine paper money is printed on distinctive paper containing tiny red and blue silk threads. The printing is done from steel-engraved plates made by a corps of the most expert engravers in the world."

"Do you have a bill in your pocket or purse? Take it out now and look closely at the portrait of Washington, Lincoln, or another of the great Americans shown on the various denominations. You will see that the facial characteristics are shaded by small dots and dashes, each of which is clear and distinct. In the portrait background you will see tiny perfectly square spaces between horizontal and vertical lines, which are also very clear. Around the border of the bill, face and back, are intricate white lines resembling a net. These are known as the geometrical lathework, and each line is unbroken from beginning to end. Look at the colored treasury seal on the face of the bill. Around its outer edge are many sharp points which look like the teeth of a circular saw.

"The counterfeiter has a hard time to imitate a bill and most counterfeiters are crude, but sometimes he makes one above the average. Whether a counterfeit is a good or poor reproduction, you should be able to detect it by comparison with a note of the same denomination which is known to be genuine. A comparison of this kind will readily disclose defects in the portrait, the seal and the lathework border, and is definitely the best method of counterfeit detection. If the suspected bill is counterfeit, its portrait will be dull, smudgy or scratchy in appearance. The points on the counterfeit treasury seal will be uneven or blunt, instead of sharp and regular. The white net lines in the border will be broken in many places, and generally the texture of the paper and the color of the ink will be quite different than the genuine."

It is often said that if the ink or color can be rubbed off a bill, the bill is counterfeit. Nothing could be more wrong, according to Mr. Wilson. The ink or color can be rubbed from both genuine and counterfeit notes, and such a test proves nothing.

Counterfeit coins are also a source of trouble. Genuine silver coins have a clear, bell-like ring. Counterfeits sound dull. Ring silver coins on hard surface and beware of those which sound like stone. In extremely rare instances, genuine silver coins may have an invisible crack or air bubble which would make them sound dull. However, these are so few that your chances of receiving one are very slight indeed.

The corrugated outer edge of silver coins is known as the "reading." It is this feature which should be closely examined on suspected coins. Likewise, this reading should be compared with that on a coin of the same denomination known to be genuine. On most counterfeit coins the reading is noticeably imperfect, but on genuine coins the corrugations are regular and distinct. In some cases, of course, the reading is completely worn away on genuine coins which have circulated for a long time.

PORTRAIT—On genuine bills, the portrait is lifelike, stands out from the oval background which is a fine screen of regular lines. Notice particularly the eyes. On a counterfeit the portrait is dull, smudgy or unnaturally white; scorchy; the background is dark with irregular and broken lines. The portraits of 11 great Americans appear on United States money. It is important for your protection that you know on which bills these portraits appear. Regardless of the type of bill, all bills of the same denomination bear the same portrait, as follows:

Washington	on all $ 1 bills
Jefferson	on all $ 2 bills
Lincoln	on all $ 5 bills
Hamilton	on all $ 10 bills
Jackson	on all $ 20 bills
Grant	on all $ 50 bills
Franklin	on all $ 100 bills
McKinley	on all $ 500 bills
Cleveland	on all $ 1,000 bills
Madison	on all $ 5,000 bills
Chase	on all $10,000 bills

2. SEAL—On the genuine bill, the sawtooth points around the rim are identical and sharp. On the counterfeit these points are usually different, uneven, broken off.

3. SERIAL NUMBERS—On the genuine bill, they are distinctive in style, firmly and evenly printed in the same color as the seal. On the counterfeit the style is different, poorly printed, badly spaced, uneven in appearance.

4. PAPER—Genuine bills are printed on distinctive paper containing very small red and blue silk threads.

The following information about paper currency will also be helpful:

SIGNATURES—The signature of the secretary of the treasury appears at the lower right side on the front of all United States paper money. The signature of the treasurer of the United States appears on the lower left side.

TYPES OF CURRENCY—Our government now prints three types of currency or paper money: federal reserve notes, silver certificates, and United States notes.

Every note or bill is distinguished by words telling which type it is, printed at the top of the bill on its face or front. The type of each bill is also shown by the color of its treasury seal and serial numbers. The treasury seal and serial numbers are GREEN on federal reserve notes, RED on United States notes, and BLUE on silver certificates.

FEDERAL RESERVE NOTES—Federal reserve notes are placed in circulation by the federal reserve banks, each bank placing its own notes in circulation through the banks located in its district. There are 12 federal reserve districts. Each district has a number and a corresponding letter of the alphabet for its symbol.

CITY	SYMBOL	DISTRICT LETTER NUMBER
Boston	A	1
New York	B	2
Philadelphia	C	3
Cleveland	D	4
Richmond	E	5
Atlanta	F	6
Chicago	G	7
St. Louis	H	8
Minneapolis	I	9
Kansas City	J	10
Dallas	K	11
San Francisco	L	12

The letter "A" in the regional bank seal on a federal reserve note shows that it was issued by the Boston Federal Reserve bank in the First district. The letter "B" in the regional bank seal and the figure "2" shows that a bill was issued from the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, and so on through the list of the 12 banks to San Francisco, whose symbol letter is "L" and district number is "12." The regional bank seal and the district number on federal reserve notes are always BLACK.

Still Up
"Did you hear the step-ladder slip, mother?"
"Yes; I hope your father didn't fall."
"Not yet; he's still hanging on to the curtain rod."

Oh, So!
"What's your favorite dish?"
"A clean one."

American women feel war horrors—perfumes scarce. (Headline in newspaper.) Sentimentalists.

They Can See—
Jim—I wonder why women pay more attention to beauty than brains?
Marion—Because no matter how stupid a man is, he is seldom blind.

No Favors
Nockby—I think it commendable that Jubbs is so impartial.
Dzudi—Yes; but he carries it too far. When we went hunting last week he didn't seem to care whether he shot the rabbits, the dogs or one of the party.

Other Interests
Two boxers were engaged in what appeared to be a hugging match.
A voice from the gallery shouted: "Turn out the lights. They want to be alone."
Came a second voice: "Leave the lights alone. I want to read."

Life may not be all you want—but it's all you'll get, so make the most of it.

Trivial Cause
"What did your father die of?" the doctor asked a Negro who was being examined for life insurance.
"Ah don't know, boss," he replied, "but it wasn't nothing serious."

KNOW YOUR BANK
Why We Have State And National Banks
 "Necessity is the mother of invention" and so the necessity for a flexible banking system to meet the banking requirements of an extensive nation of widely diversified activities and needs gave rise to the American system of banking. Under this system each state has its individual banking laws, and thereby has power to charter banks. Thus are created state banks, trust companies and savings banks. Jurisdiction over state banks is exercised by a department of government usually called a "state banking department." The federal government, through the Comptroller of Currency, also charters banks called "national banks." All national banks, regardless of location, are under one law.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

President's Third Inaugural Address Emphasizes Faith in U. S. Democracy; Lease-Lend Act Fight Rips Party Lines As Cabinet Supports Roosevelt's Plan

EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

THIRD TERM: Inaugural

After taking the oath of office as President of the United States for a precedent-breaking third term, Franklin D. Roosevelt delivered to a waiting nation a high tribute to his faith in democracy. In the inaugural address which was marked with constant references to the "spirit of America" and the "spirit of democracy" the President declared that the purpose in his next four years of office would be to "protect and perpetuate the integrity of democracy."

"For this," he said, "we must have the spirit of America and the faith of America. We do not retreat. We are not content to stand still. As Americans, we go forward, in the service of our country, by the will of God."

While some of the pomp of other Inaugural days was missing because of the solemn pall of foreign affairs that hung over Washington, the thousands that lined Pennsylvania avenue to watch the President pass cheered loudly as they saw his party. The day was bright but a raw wind chilled the onlookers.

High point of the day's historic rituals came when the President standing below the Capitol's white dome, placed his hand upon a 200-year-old family Bible and swore for the third time to "preserve, protect and defend the Constitution." The oath was administered by Chief Justice Hughes of the Supreme court.

CHURCHILL: Looks Ahead

Winston Churchill, following his conferences with Harry Hopkins, Roosevelt's personal ambassador, looked into the future of the war during 1941.

He said that Britain would not find the war less terrible this year than last, would have to face continued destruction of British towns and cities without being able to make adequate reply.

He admitted Hitler's great advantage in being able to move his armies about Europe at will. Churchill said Britain wanted no armies from overseas in 1941, but would need a constant stream of munitions, "far more than we can pay for."

Britain, however, is not in "extremis" if such aid comes, said Churchill. He said: "We have enough men on the fighting line to hold the front line of civilization if we get American aid and American credits."

This unheralded address before a Glasgow audience was widely quoted in the lend-lease fight in Washington.

BITTERNESS: And Unity

President Roosevelt's inauguration day came at a time when the fever of the country was away above normal in a bitter fight over the lease-learn bill—No. 1776.

Not since the Supreme court fight had the press of the nation printed stories of such vitriolic attacks by one group upon another, with counter charges and charges flinging themselves across committee tables with apparent utter abandon.

Party lines were smashed to smithereens, with Willkie claiming the Republican party would kill itself forevermore if it failed to recognize the principle of "blank-check" aid to Britain, and allow Roosevelt all the power he desires.

competent" on foreign policy questions. Ambassador Kennedy was being welcomed with open arms by isolationist editors and hailed as a comrade and then said he considered the isolationists the worst "defeatists" of all.

American unity, supposedly the nation's greatest safeguard during the stress of national defense preparations, appeared jeopardized. National leaders differed in their prescriptions for the critical moment as far as the poles.

They ranged from Carter Glass, Virginia, who wanted the U. S. to declare war at once, to the outright isolationist and non-interventionist of the type of Montana's Senator Wheeler, who opposed No. 1776 from opening word to finish.

While this was the temper of official Washington, a couple of U. S. sailors fanned the flame by tearing down a Nazi banner from a German consulate celebrating the seventieth anniversary of the founding of the German Reich. They clambered up to a ninth-story flagpole in San Francisco to cause a national crisis to become that much more critical, while thousands cheered on the sidewalk below.

CABINET: Rolls Sleeves

For once in a national issue, apparently that entire part of the President's cabinet which could conceivably have anything to do with the situation rolled up its sleeves and went to bat for No. 1776, the lease-lend bill, calling for all-out aid to Britain.

CORDELL HULL With others, he 'went to bat.'

Morgenthau, treasury secretary, stepped into the arena, declaring that Britain was right then at the end of her dollar rope, and that some form of unpaid-for aid must be found if Britain was to continue to get supplies.

Hull, in a most powerful session with the committee which left the nation stunned, excoriated the totalitarians, and called for the nation to realize that the crisis was real and immediate.

Silmsen, war secretary, declared in a two-day bout with the committee that he favored sending American warships "anywhere," and that Britain's complete crisis was a matter of 90 to 90 days.

Navy Secretary Knox hinted that the real crisis might be the wresting of Britain's navy from her control by the Nazis, who then would be able to establish themselves in South America.

ASIATIC: Turmoil Grows

All Europe and all the Western hemisphere was watching the diplomatic battle between the United States and Japan before a backdrop of Asiatic warfare that was becoming daily more sanguinary and gloomy.

Even the Battle of Siam was assuming more headline proportions, with conflicting reports from French Indo-China and from Siam itself as to the success of the counter moves.

Most positive claims were made by little Siam, which claimed that important Indo-Chinese border points had fallen to their arms. And while the French did not deny these facts, they did claim that any such advances had been purchased at an enormous loss in manpower.

Tag Day

Inaugural day was really "Tag" day for news photographers who covered the event as the above picture clearly shows. Here Charles Knell, news photo agency cameraman displays a few of the passes necessary to wear and keep in plain view throughout the day's events.

FORWARD: Go the Greeks

As Germany still continued to withhold aid to Italy in Albania, the Greeks moved steadily forward in their effort to drive Italian forces from the western shore of the Adriatic.

A thousand "crack" troops were reported captured in one engagement, and all along the southern and eastern battle lines, the advance was steady, but slow.

Many American Greeks, most favorable to their countrymen's cause, were most cautious about the situation, however, informed sources holding that the Germans were holding back only because of the difficulties of fighting over mountainous Balkan terrain in the wintertime.

They believed that the Nazis would move in force, perhaps not through Bulgaria (which would bring Turkey, perhaps Russia into the war) but through Yugoslavia.

While admitting that many things may happen in the next two months to change the situation, these sources felt anything but confident that the Grecian forces, in the long run, could drive out the Italians.

Particularly on the northern front was the advance slow, though in central Albania Kilsura had fallen and Tepelini was apparently a certainty, and Greeks in the north, it was felt, might be particularly vulnerable to a sudden attack from either the Bulgarian or the Yugoslavian border.

German aid on the Albanian front to that point, however, had confined itself to the entrance of a few Stukas and bombers from the forces quartered (reportedly) on Italian soil.

EGYPT: Quiets Down

In the African campaign, the Germans began the groundwork of more vigorous aid to Italy, while the land attacks of the British colonial army continued favorably, though not quite so sensationally as in previous weeks.

The fall of Tobruk, another important Mediterranean port, was regarded as a foregone conclusion, and the British armies, in command of Libya's important coastal roads, moved at will toward other objectives like Derna and Bengasi, the country's capital.

Yet there was a feeling, almost like an "aura" of standstill in the land campaign, possibly attributable to a rearrangement of forces for a new offensive.

That the Italians were anything but satisfied with the situation was the most favorable reaction evident in press dispatches. The Fascist army in Africa was regarded as having been rendered impotent, and without German aid in considerable numbers, Britain was favored to make its victory in Africa complete.

Yet events seemed to be pointing to the fact that the Nazis were planning such a move in force, and watchers anxiously awaited the unfolding of such a plan.

PLANE: Versus Warship

Loss of the 9,000-ton cruiser Southampton in the Mediterranean after an attack entirely by Stukas finally settled the question of whether a first-class warship could withstand a first-class plane attack.

Speaking of SPORTS

By ROBERT McSHANE Released by Western Newspaper Union

WHETHER or not you like it, the New York Yankees again will be favored to win the American league baseball pennant in 1941. They won't be the Yankees of 1938 or 1939, but they will be better than the Yankees of 1940.

And that bodes no good for last year's pennant-winning Detroit Tigers. The Tigers' outfield isn't noted for its extreme youth, nor is the Tiger hurling staff any too young, in spite of one or two good-looking rookies. To make matters worse, there's always the chance that Hank Greenberg will get caught in the draft before another year ends.

He'd be an awfully hard man to replace, and the Tigers without Henry would be a changed ball club. Buck Newsom is a stalwart who is far from through, but Bridges and Rowe will have their share of trouble through a long, bitter campaign.

Yankee Chances

The Yankee pitching department will be bolstered by the presence of Ernie Bonham. The remaining young Yankee pitchers will have had another year's experience. And it isn't too much of a gamble to predict that Ruffing will wrap up a few needed victories.

Charlie Keller and Joe Gordon should have better seasons than they did in 1940. Keller fell off badly in his hitting and Gordon forfeited second base honors to Bobby Doerr of the Boston Red Sox. Both Keller and Gordon are young and should add plenty of snap to the Yankees' 1941 season.

Joe DiMaggio's importance to the lineup is almost impossible to over-emphasize. One of the great players of all time, DiMaggio will be as good as ever in the 1941 wars. Too, Priddy and Rizzuto from Kansas City will hear plenty of watching.

Bill Dickey isn't the sure thing of past seasons. A great catcher, he was one of the big reasons for the Yankees' phenomenal success in the seasons leading up to 1940. No other catcher ever drove in more than 100 runs four years in a row. However, Dickey can't go on forever. But even with Dickey something of a question mark, the Yanks can depend on Buddy Rosar to take over when necessary.

If you remember, the Red Sox were scheduled to succeed the ailing champions last year. They were to be the new rulers when the Yankees blew. They had their chance, but when that chance came the Red Sox pitching staff went haywire. The somewhat clouded crystal ball indicates that the Red Sox will need considerable alteration before they can be considered serious pennant threats.

Indian Strength

The Yankees' main challenge should come from Cleveland—providing Bob Feller isn't requested to join Uncle Sam's fighting forces. The Indians' new manager, Roger Peckinpaugh, is one of the smartest in the business. He had to be smart to straighten the club out after last year's unpleasant, and very silly, revolt against former manager Vitti. Because of this insurrection, the Indians tossed away the American league pennant. They shouldn't make the same mistake twice in a row—and you can pronounce "row" either way and still be right. Nevertheless, they fumbled the golden opportunity which was theirs in 1940.

The Chicago White Sox will be the same hustling ball club it was last year, making life miserable for the higher-ups. Skeeter Dickey, Bill's younger brother, is likely to be a big help behind the plate.

Most Improved

The St. Louis Browns were the most improved club in the American league last season and they are likely to continue to improve. How much they improve will depend strictly on their pitching. While they are far from a classy ball club, a season of steady pitching might see them make a strong bid for a first division berth. While they wound up in sixth place last year with a percentage of .435, it was their highest since 1934.

As in all, the Yankees and the Indians should be the two teams to beat, although neither will have a walkaway. There are too many question marks for every team to consider. Veterans are fading, younger men are subject to the draft—the "4's" are more numerous than ever.

Perhaps the most certain thing of all is that the pennant will not go to the Browns, the Athletics or the Senators. Their real need is good material and that's hard to get, no matter how much money is forthcoming.

Sport Shorts

Two of the most highly paid figures in sport are Eddie Shipstad and Oscar Johnson, owners and stars of the Ice Follies. Each earned $135,000 in 1940.

Al Simmons needs 106 hits to land him among the few players who have made 3,000.

Carl Miles, the Athletics' young southpaw, has returned to the University of Missouri to study for a master's degree in physical education.

LOS ANGELES.—My traveling companion, Mr. Clarence Budington Kelland, the victim of 100,000 miles of sporting torture and observation in a drawing room we always share, can also carry his output of thorns. He isn't 100 per cent rose leaves.

Passing through El Paso, Texas, recently, the famous Arizona novelist asked me to name the qualities a champion needs beyond mere physical ability to do things to do things physically better than others who may still move on beyond him in other walks of life.

True champions are not carved from brawn and bone—not even from speed and stamina. They must have something more.

Many competitors may be bigger, faster and stronger than the field they face—and yet not quite arrive at the top, while others with less to work with may carry the banner of stardom well beyond their set barriers.

"Of course," remarked Mr. Kelland, "he must have ability. But ability—plus what else?"

The Top Ingredients First of all I should say there must be a love of the game he plays—the love of the thing he is doing.

The star football player must love football as a game beyond any other reward. This goes for baseball, golf, and every other sport.

It must bring to him the ambition to excel—through practice, through hard work, through condition, through greater concentration.

Davey O'Brien at 150 pounds and Charlie O'Bourke of Boston college were far better football players than most entries who range from 200 to 250, and who are just as fast. Frank Henke, "the disembodied ghost" at 150 pounds, is still a football tradition.

The next two features are natural knack and mental poise. These are born in the athlete, not acquired.

All the scientists and all the chemistry in the world can't supply knack and mental poise from the outside. They might wreck nations, but they can't give man those two things.

For example, Bobby Jones happened to be born with the knack for great golf. He was also born with the ability to concentrate, and later he forced himself to take a harder beating, on the mental and psychological side, than anyone else in his game. He was willing to suffer more in order to win.

As Don Marquis once wrote, "You must suffer to be strong."

There is no easy road to the top of the hill of fame in sport. There are no paved boulevards of indolence and pleasant dreams. Those who arrive must earn the accent by hard work.

And there is no substitute for hard work. The genius can have his on and off day. But Tommy Harmon, for example, was out there taking aim for 55 or 60 minutes of every game. And don't forget Tommy Harmon, always the marked man, took more than his share of punishment. But he was in shape to carry this burden. Condition is one of the great words from any dictionary.

Color and Spirit "What about two other major factors?" Mr. Kelland asked. "I mean color and spirit."

"What is color?" I asked the bronzed son of Arizona. "Color," replied Mr. Kelland, "is that peculiar and intangible quality that catches the public imagination—the fancy of the mob. I mean the thing possessed by Babe Ruth, Bobby Jones and Jack Dempsey—the three most colorful athletes of all time."

Hidden Ways

"You're not," Miss Agatha asked slowly. "A very generous young man, are you?"

"I have too little," I told her, still tingling, "to be generous. That, I suppose, is why I fight to keep it. I'm so far beneath the Pagets—"

"Don't talk nonsense," she bade. "I shrugged, deliberately provoking my hurt."

"So much that is—uncomfortable to me, is nonsense to a Paget," I answered.

She grinned mockingly.

"How proletarian! You care less about lifting yourself than pulling others down?"

"Let's drop it," I said and flipped my cigarette into the wastebasket with needless force.

"Willingly," she agreed and laid hold of the rim of her chair's wheels. "Will you stay to lunch, David?"

"No," I said ungraciously. "I have an engagement. With Cochrane of the Press," I added to rub it in.

"I see," said Miss Agatha calmly. "When you come back this afternoon, we'll get the typewriter from the basement. And before you go out, you might see that whatever is kindling in the wastebasket is extinguished. We've enough on our hands without adding arson."

I smelled scorching paper and bent over the basket.

"Annie," said Miss Agatha, moving toward the door, "should have emptied it, but when the police come in the door reason flies out—"

"Wait a minute," I begged. There was a single balled sheet of paper in the wastebasket and the tip of my castaway cigarette lay on it. I picked up the crumpled wad and an odd feeling, half inspiration, half theory, excited me. My fingers trembled as I undid the ball. It was a half-completed letter, broken off in mid-sentence. As I read it I could see Grove, blindly in love as twenty-odd can be, hammering out reproach and devotion to the woman who had not kept their trust. I could see him look up, where the typing ended, and mark that a window in the Ferriter flat was bright. Ione had returned. She had not failed him. He had torn the paper from the typewriter, cast it into the basket and rushed, headlong, into disaster. I handed the crumpled sheet to Miss Agatha without a word and she, too, read it through before she spoke.

"Poor boy," she said at last, and there was tenderness in her usually brisk voice. "Poor, passionate, foolish Grove."

I had expected something more from her than this, though even to me the misdeed was more pitiful and less ridiculous than most letters of its sort.

"But don't you see," I asked, "what this means?" She turned toward me and replied with equal tartness.

"See? Of course I see? This is what put my nephew's fingerprints on those typewriter keys. This is the letter he said he had been writing. That note the police found on him was written by Everett, bent on suicide, earlier. This merely proves that Grove has told the truth. It seems more of a surprise to you, David, than it does to me."

She read it over again with a crooked little smile and folded it with gentle hands.

I suggested:

"Shan't we turn it over to Shannon. It proves—"

"Shannon?" she repeated with odd indecision. "I don't know. It seems to me a rather sacred thing. You see, no one ever wrote such a letter to me. Let me think it over, David. We'll talk of it later."

She rolled herself away without another word. I looked at the clock. It was almost time for my appointment with Cochrane.

CHAPTER XVII

The food before us cooled while I talked and Cochrane listened. Like the Ancient Mariner's stooge, Jerry had to take it and like it. I had come to the beanery to tell him my mind had been partly laundered by my confession to Miss Agatha. I wanted to complete the cleansing by holding back nothing from Jerry. There was too much darkness for me to increase it by further reticence.

It was bitter, under his mild and trustful regard, to lay bare things I might have told long ago, but I went through with it. I saw his eyebrows go up, and up, as I told of Grove's earlier visit to the Ferriter apartment, of the voice I had heard in Mino's and, finally, of Duke's letter. Then I leaned back, feeling empty but easier and Cochrane looked from me to the salt shaker he fingered.

"Duke," he said, still watching it, "was sore, of course, over the skinning we've handed him. He doesn't know how much worse it might have been, if—"

I said, "If I hadn't held out on you. Go ahead and tell me what I am. I won't argue it."

He looked at me again and gave his beaming smile.

"A guy who's That Way is never quite normal. I might have done worse myself. You have large ideas, Cochrane."

"Listen," I told him. "I've got one idea. That is to get that job and highbrow nap out of this jam and then fade out of the picture."

"I get you," He grinned. "With a sad renunciatory gesture that will live forever in her memory."

I checked what I started to say. "Go ahead," I answered. "Rub it in. I rate it."

He still played, with the shaker. He asked at last:

"So the old lady didn't have Winterbottom show you the door?"

"No. All I have to do is help her get her nephew out of the coop and substitute the murderer."

"Which should keep you busy," Jerry said, "at least until day after tomorrow. Would you like any help?"

I did not understand him.

"I mean," he went on, "is this just a personal or a professional conference? Do I forget all you've told me, or do we work it out together?"

His generosity threw me off balance.

"If you still want me to play ball with you," I began, "after—"

"I don't quite see how I'm to finish it off solo."

He seemed relieved and went on more briskly.

"Since we're still accomplices, I've got something to show you."

He pulled from his pocket a creased and glazed placard, bearing the picture of four men in tights and spangles, posed beneath a good deal of dangling cordage. Below the half-tone was the legend "The Four Flying Ferriters."

Cochrane gave it to me and said:

"Handle it gently. I got it from Henkel, old-time vaudeville agent, and I've got to return it. Recognize anyone?"

I did and started to speak. I looked more closely and at last faced Jerry's expectant grin.

"Either of the two middle ones," I said at last, "could have been Lyon Ferriter, ten years ago."

"Excellent, Watson," Cochrane crooned. "My own idea. The one on the left, Henkel tells me, was Lyon Ferriter. His neighbor was his cousin, Andrew Horstman. The other Ferriters were named Levine and Pappas. They were semi-headliners in the old two-a-day era."

"Proving what?" I asked him, folding the placard carefully and returning it.

"Not a thing in the world," Jerry answered, "except that your friend used to be the daring young man on the flying trapeze. Henkel has the memory of an elephant but even he doesn't know what happened next. He does say that Lyon and his cousin were very intelligent for acrobats. When the movies ruined Art, and the Four Flying Ferriters flew apart, Henkel thinks that Horstman went into acting and played in stock for a while and that Lyon went to Alaska."

"Part of which," I told him, "checks."

"It does more than that," Cochrane drawled with the sleepy air that was his mask for excitement. "It practically proves that the Horstman who joined the Ferriters, Lyon and Ione, in their honky-tonk, or whatever, in Alaska was their cousin. And he, if you recall, went out looking for gold with them. They found it and lost Horstman. He never came back."

"Well?" I asked, at last, for he seemed to have run down, yet I knew the pause was for dramatic effect.

"Neither," Cochrane crooned, "did Lyon and Ione."

He beamed.

"I said, 'All right; spring it.' They never came back to their cozy little shack," Jerry went on. "That's pure Robert Service, eh? Ione and her brother showed up the following spring in Fairbanks, which is a considerable hike from Tanana Crossing, where their place stood."

"They claimed that Horstman got lost in a blizzard and he wasn't there to say he didn't. They had samples with them that started a stampede. Lyon went in with it and sold his claim. When he came back, he and sister went down-river, took steamer for the states and vanished. They left so fast, they forgot to do anything about the dump at Tanana Crossing. This was sold last year for taxes. And, thanks to the assiduous Fairbanks correspondent of the Press, there you are."

"Where?" I asked.

Cochrane chuckled.

"It all adds up," he admitted, "to whatever you choose to make it. It's background on the guy you and the old gal have elected murderer, anyway."

I said, "It's also a problem in relationship. Everett used to be a Horstman. Then he wasn't brother to Lyon and Ione. He may have been—"

I bogged down.

"Brother or something to the Horstman the blizzard is alleged to have abolished," Cochrane finished for me. "It'll take a genealogist to figure it out, eh? And the authority on the subject broke his neck last night. That's too bad. We need him."

"No," I told him, "what we really need is Lyon's weakness. That's what Miss Agatha Paget wants."

I went over my recent talk with her. Cochrane ate and then forgot his food to sit listening, apparently half asleep.

"You know," he said when I ended, "that's a pretty unusual crone. I'd like to meet her."

"Why not?" I asked.

He had been too generous for me to hold back now. The question-shook him out of his drowsiness.

"Do you mean it?"

"I'll phone and see," I said, rising. "But you'll have to keep her out of the papers."

"Oke," Jerry beamed. "It'll be enough of a thrill just to get inside the Morello."

At the telephone, I told Miss Agatha I was bringing Cochrane up to see her. If I had asked permission, I think she might have forbidden it, but I followed up with persuasion and reassurance until she consented and promised at my suggestion to clear our way through the hostile lobby. She was in the workroom when we entered. She seemed relieved that Jerry had neither horns nor tail and welcomed him serenely. I had grown accustomed to the spirit that dwelt intact in that crippled body, but Cochrane was a little dazed.

The tea-wagon, glass and bottle laden, stood beside the old lady's wheel chair.

"One of the few perquisites of age," Miss Agatha told us briskly, "is liquor. I hope you drink, Mr. Cochrane?"

"Only," he said solemnly, "in my social moments."

Miss Agatha's face changed and she glanced at me. She picked her words:

"I had understood that this was a social call."

"It is," Jerry told her, and she chuckled as she reached for the glasses.

We talked and sipped our highballs. I watched Cochrane's reticence melt, and saw the old lady's stiff face relax. Presently, with his doubt completely gone, Jerry was telling her in a low intimate voice all he had learned from Henkel and the Press' Fairbanks correspondent, of Lyon's past. Miss Agatha heard him through, with slowly narrowing eyes. She surveyed the placard Cochrane showed her and looked at it so long that Jerry repeated:

This seemed to rouse her.

"Yes," she said with forced briskness, "yes, I see," and threw off whatever odd abstraction had held her. "He and his neighbor look much alike. So he's the one who went with his beloved sister to the Arctic. I don't think I'm over-inhospitable in wishing they'd stayed there."

"Is she," Cochrane asked suddenly, "his 'beloved sister'?"

Miss Agatha looked at him hard before she spoke.

"I've seen no birth certificates," she replied tartly, "but there certainly is a family resemblance. And he is utterly devoted to her; if he were less so, my nephew mightn't be in jail at the moment."

"Because," Cochrane went on, "I gather from our Fairbanks man—I wish I'd brought along that dispatch—that they quarreled a good deal while they were living at Tanana Crossing."

"Pooh," said Miss Agatha, "brothers and sisters always quarrel. She was good-looking, in a region of few women, and he probably was jealous."

"Our correspondent's idea," Jerry answered, "is just the opposite. He wires that Lyon objected because she wasn't attentive enough to customers. After Horstman arrived, there was a blow-up. He and Lyon had a fight. That was just before the three of them went prospecting."

"And Horstman didn't come back," Miss Agatha thought aloud, and was silent for an instant.

"Well," she added, pulling herself together, "Lyon and Ione probably murdered him. There's nothing to compare with a murder as a solvent or maker of trouble."

Yet when Cochrane had gone, that part of his narrative seemed to irritate her. She spoke of it while Annie rolled away the tea-wagon.

"You've seen for yourself," she appealed to me, as though she needed endorsement, "there never was a more devoted brother than Lyon."

I nodded as the bell rang.

THE INDIVIDUAL'S RESPONSIBILITY REGARDING BEVERAGE ALCOHOL

LESSON TEXT—Habakkuk 2:15; Genesis 9:20-21; I Thessalonians 5:22; GOLDEN TEXT—Abstain from every form of evil—I Thessalonians 5:22, R. V.

"Responsible for the drunkards of my community? Not me; I am against the use of intoxicating liquors." Such is the answer Christian men and women would probably make if faced with that accusation. But wait! Responsibility means more than just refraining oneself or speaking against "booze" in a church meeting. Before we finish the study of our lesson, we may find ourselves guilty of the charge, and needing to ask forgiveness, and see the need of bringing forth works meet unto repentance. We hear God's Word telling us:

I. Do Not Tempt Your Neighbor (Hab. 2:15).

God is very severe in judgment upon those who tempt others. Of course, He condemns the one who gives another a drink of liquor. Nothing could be more despicable than thus to start a man or woman on the way to a drunkard's grave. There can be no question about the guilt of the one who makes the stuff and the one who sells it. But beyond that, those are guilty who share in the profits from such a business, who rent their buildings for the manufacture or sale of liquor, who vote to legalize its sale or support politicians who do such things; in fact, everyone who encourages, condones, or in any way profits, whether directly or indirectly, from "the traffic." Are you still "not guilty?"

II. Do Not Fall Your Brother (Gen. 4:9-12).

Everyone who says, "Am I my brother's keeper?" classes himself with the murderer Cain. Certainly I am my brother's keeper. This is the positive side of the matter. It is not enough that I do not tempt my brother. The question is: "Have I neglected to do anything that I could and should have done to save him?"

That makes it my positive business to eliminate every possible temptation. — It means that the Christian is vitally concerned about the taverns, road houses, dance halls, and what not, which entrap and destroy our young people. It is not enough to passively lament their presence; we must actively seek their removal. It can be done, and is being done all over the land.

III. Do Not Offend Children (Mark 9:42).

The Lord holds His followers to a high measure of responsibility regarding the children whose lives they touch, whether they be in their own family, or in the community in which they live.

Children are innocent until their elders make them otherwise. In their innocence they are trustful and ready to learn. Their knowledge of the right way to live is received from their parents and other grown-ups, and (mark it well!) they learn more from what we do than from what we say.

Here is the question each one of us should honestly face right now: "How does my daily walk influence the children who see me?" Let us answer that in the light of verse 42.

IV. Abstain From Evil—Judgment Is Coming (Mark 9:43-48; I Thess. 5:22).

The Christian is called to abstain from "all appearance of evil" or, as the Revised Version puts it, "every form of evil" (I Thess. 5:22). That may call for the sternest kind of self-denial (Mark 9:43-47), but why not? We do not follow a Christ who sought for Himself the way of ease or comfort. He gave Himself in complete and willing sacrifice, going even to the death of Calvary's tree for us. Do we then falter and seek the easy way?

The fact that there is a day of judgment to come is something to remember, but may we not stress the other side of the truth. "The very sternness of our Lord's strictures regarding the importance of self-denial only serves to enhance the value of the privilege we enjoy in being citizens of the kingdom of God. If it is worth the loss of a hand, a foot, or an eye to gain that life, then, in view of the great value we place on these members of our bodies, how great must be our divine privilege. Christianity is not merely a negative religion, but it takes the negative similes to show us the positive glories" (Dr. John W. Bradbury).

Great and Simple
The greatest truths are the simplest, and so are the greatest men.

Most delicious "bag" of the season... quick and easy to prepare... nourishing... economical... order, today, from your grocer.

Price of Greatness
What millions died—that Caesar might be great!—Campbell.

AROUND THE HOUSE

Grease the measuring cup before measuring syrup or molasses and it will not stick to the sides of the cup.

A window box of seasoning herbs is handy for winter cooking.

Ivy grows best in water in the house and in a glass vase through which light may reach roots.

If rubber gloves are sprinkled on the inside with corn starch or powder they will slip on more easily.

When two glasses become wedged together place cold water in the upper one and set lower in warm water. They will then separate with little effort.

Best for Juice and Every Use!

You can see the deeper color and taste the richer flavor of California Navel Orange juice! You get more vitamins and minerals in every glass—thanks to year-round sunshine, fertile soils and scientific care!

Navel Oranges are grand eating too. They're seedless! Easy to peel and slice or section for salads and desserts.

Look for "Sunkist" on the skin—the trademark of 14,000 cooperating growers for fruit that is "Best for Juice—and Every Use!" Order several dozen Sunkist Navels for economy.

But It's True

During the latter part of the Seventeenth century in Holland, tulip bulbs actually became the medium of exchange. Some bulbs were valued at as much as $25,000. There were entire hospitals set aside for the tulipomaniacs.

The German crown prince, wearing the uniform of a captured English officer, made his way through the British lines, played with the troops more than 48 hours, then crawled back across Neuman's Land. The rabbit is said to be a perfect dwarf.

A Coincident

A remarkable coincident occurred Tuesday night of this week in telephone circles. A certain Carrizozian left here Monday night, arriving at his destination in the east Tuesday evening at about 7 p.m. At exactly 8:30, a Carrizozo relative wishing to tell the absent party some thing he had overlooked, put in a telephone call. In a few minutes the phone rang here and at the same time, the phone rang at the number in the east! The fact of the matter was that they both called at the same time. You may call it a coincident, mental telepathy or what have you, but things of that sort will occur now and then.

Mr. and Mrs. Ysabel Aldaz of Lincoln and Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Flores of Capitan were among those who attended the dance at Community Hall Saturday night.

BORN—Saturday, Jan. 25, to Mr. and Mrs. Speery Farmer, a girl. Mother and daughter are doing nicely.

The Taylor Grazing meeting will convene at Alamogordo on Tuesday to Friday, for the purpose of passing on 1941 grazing permits and exchanging allotments for 10-year permits.

Mrs. Albert Kimbrell and children of Pecosho spent the weekend here with Misses Anna Rogers, Mabel Calderon, Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Ortiz.

Leo D. Merchant and Orrie Smith returned Saturday from Nebraska, where they bought a truckload of bulls from John...

Remember? — WHEN —

(By Joe Chavez)

—The old E. P. & S. W. roundhouse burned to the ground in 1907.

—The first 4th of July was celebrated at the Bar W Ranch and Galindo's Band played "Para Subir al Cielo" all day long.

—The big horse race between Walter Grumbles' gray mare and Florencio Vega's 'baldy' horse The mare won.

—Bill Barnett rode to work at the roundhouse in a chariot, drawn by a big white steed.

—Bryan Tinnon paddled his 'Jinny' from sun-up to sun-down.

—The Bar W outfit, Charley Lemon, the Johnsons, Ed Harris, George and Jet Rustin, Anton and Flo Vega, Frank Phillips and others, would invade town on pay day and "sow their wild oats" (on the streets, yea.)

—Joe Adams and Meyer Barnett drove the dray wagons of the town and would park occasionally for a stimulant on cold days, and iced tea on summer days. Joe's black, bristling team of horses were pretty frisky and full of life and once in a while they took leave - of - absence without consulting their master. Also Textor & Son Drayage.

—"Rusty" Jones was the Tailor of the town and also its best artist. We have a lig flat iron here in the office, which perhaps gave "Rusty" lots of pin-money.

—Dad Kahler furnished the town with water from his big water tank, drawn by a team of jet black mules. 25c a barrel and if you hadn't a tub ready to cover it when he filled it, you would have to contend with mud and slime and like it. The prevailing Sahara desert winds had changed their course in those days.

—Louis, the Dutchman of the Eating House, got tired of pushing the cart to and from the depot, so he bought himself a white burro to relieve him of that burden. One morning just as he had loaded the cart and was ready to start for the 'Beasnery,' a little angel dropped from the sky with his bow and arrow (a horseshoe nail for a point). The next stop for Mr. Jack was on the other end of town, minus his load of juicy oranges, cantaloupes and a flying Dutchman. (We) never heard of him again and didn't care to.

—Shorty Dawson was training the champion boxer of Roswell in the back of the old pool hall and Shorty scored a knockout. The coming fight was held in a big corral, but we didn't know how it came out. There wasn't a single knot hole in the darn structure.

Syl Anderson's and John Doering's barber shops were the Bureau of Information.

—George Dingwall and Johnson Brothers started the first picture show in a plank fence, adjoining the Headlight Saloon. Very seldom missed Charlie Chaplin. Us kids came home to roost at night on the roof of that saloon.

—The kids across the tracks were scared to death of Jake Peck and 'Slater' Hughes. One Saturday morning a stone battle ensued between the two clans, and Marshall St. John put an end to hostilities when he struck Lanky Bill Peters with a rock right square in the knee cap. Ouch! That was too much.

—Nep Taylor fell on a lit box of giant firecrackers at White Oaks on a 4th of July and couldn't get up. Nep weighed close to 400 pounds.

—Red Baker was the teacher's pet and ate high at Rolland's Drug Store.

—Transients (bobos then) would make for Mather Gurney's on a lighting from the train. Never was one ever turned down.

—N. B. Taylor, Bill and Mike Doering, A. Lantz, Jake Hegler, Manuel Gonzalez, Bench Goff, Bill Humphrey and others would sit in front of N. B. Taylor & Sons of an evening to talk over old times.

—When Buster Brown would come in party to, Begler Dean, with his dog Tige, and from the front porch would scatter a bucketful of snapping shobs for the kids. Those who arrived late for the event received a good shower bath from the bucket —The first Jeweler's Shop was located in the portion of the building now occupied by the U & I Bar, and owned by Ashby Roselle.

—Louis, the Dutchman of the Eating House, got tired of pushing the cart to and from the depot, so he bought himself a white burro to relieve him of that burden. One morning just as he had loaded the cart and was ready to start for the 'Beasnery,' a little angel dropped from the sky with his bow and arrow (a horseshoe nail for a point). The next stop for Mr. Jack was on the other end of town, minus his load of juicy oranges, cantaloupes and a flying Dutchman. (We) never heard of him again and didn't care to.

—Vincent Rell put up his first building and for many years was used as a dance hall (building formerly occupied by the Light & Power Co.)

—The leading building contractors were Joe White, Frank English, Harry Little, Wm. Langston, Bench Goff, Gillette, Benson and a few others.

—Roundhouse Blacksmith Lupo Aguirre owned one of the first horseshoe carriages, an old Studebaker which had to be coaxed and overhauled before going out for a joyride to the Vega ranch on Sunday morning. It had the crankshaft on one side and when the motor started, it shook that luxury so, that the rattling could be heard all over town. The late Joe Lopez served as the official "cranker."

—George Olney was the champion billiard and pool player of Carrizozo, and Walker Hyde was so tall that you could see a shadow like that of a cloud, when he traversed the pasture from his home in the highlands to the railroad yards, where he was the "bull."

—District Court was held in the present Prehm Store, pending the completion of the courthouse.

—WHEN You and I were young Maggie!

The above are a few reminiscences of the early days of Carrizozo.
