There are approximately 75 of our boys in the service whose addresses haven't been mailed in. If you know one of these service men, we urge that you send these in to the American Legion at Carrizozo at once, so that their names may be included in this column.

George W. Coe

The funeral of the above named gentleman was held last Saturday afternoon, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Elza Perry at Glencoe. The services were conducted by Rev. L. A. Roll of Finnie, and interment was made by Ballard Funeral Home of Roswell. Following the services at the home, the remains were conveyed to the Coe cemetery, situated on the mesa, high above the Coe estate, where all members of the family who have gone before, are laid to rest, the one preceding Mr. Coe being his devoted wife, Mrs. Phoebe Coe, who passed this life nearly two years ago. The day following the funeral would have been their 62nd wedding anniversary.

The scene at the interment was strikingly suggestive. The foliage on the towering mountain sides were clothed with diversified colors of the late autumn season and symbolized the changes in nature from youth to old age and from the cradle to the grave. As the leaves, stirred by the mountain breezes, fell upon the ground, we recalled the time-honored adage, "All that is born must die." The active casket-bearers were J. V. Tully, Roderick Johnson, I. N. Wiggfield, Arthur Allison, Roy Morgan, Lee Joiner, Honorary: George A. Titsworth, A. L. Barke, Hugh L. Carpenter, Fount Miller, W. C. VanDoren, Claude Allison.

A vast assemblage of old friends from all parts of this section of the state was present to pay their last respects to their departed friend, whom they had known and honored for so many years.

George W. Coe was born at Brighton, Iowa, July 13, 1856, and departed this life Nov. 12, 1941, at Roswell. His age was 85 years, 3 months, 29 days. At the age of 18, Mr. Coe came to New Mexico, settling in Colfax county in 1874. He moved to the Ruidoso country in 1876, but was absent from here until 1884, when he returned and continued his residence until his death. On Nov. 16, 1879, he was married to Miss Phoebe Brown at Aztec, to which union 8 children were born. He leaves to mourn his loss, two children, Mrs. Elza Perry, Will T. Coe and families of Glencoe, two sisters, Misses Jennie Gentle, Creston, Iowa, Libby Way, Gary, Indiana, 21 grandchildren, 17 great grandchildren, other relatives and a legion of friends.

In 1892, he united with the Baptist Church and was baptized by Rev. John Hunter. Mr. and Mrs. Coe attended the first Baptist association of the southwest held at Pennaco. In 1938, he united with the Ruidoso Baptist Church and during 41 years, he was a faithful and devoted deacon in that organization. He was a lifetime member of the National Red Cross. The survivors named above have the sympathy of our people in general.

Editor's Note—Mr. Coe was one of the writer's warmest friends. On coming to Carrizozo, he was always sure to pay this office a friendly visit. He would always leave other members of the family to go about town and transact their business affairs, while he occupied a seat in the office armchair at my right, while we engaged in conversation. I always found him to be a gentleman of lofty ideals and one who was well-informed on the latest of current events. He had a clear vision of life's re-

He was kind, considerate, charitable in nature and strongly patriotic in his views. The writer considered it a high honor to be named among the honorary casket-bearers at the last sad rites of his departed friend. THINGS FOR YOU TO MAKE

THE STORY SO FAR: Ellen Carey seems interested in two men, Jeff Brand, rancher, and Calhoun Terry, ranch manager. Frankly, she had been mysteriously killed. The big ranchers, though much over Terry's pocket, hired an

CHAPTER XXXVI

The raiders under Ellison reached Packer's Fork safely and found the wagons waiting for them. After a hot meal they bedded down for the night.

When morning dawned one of Sunday Brown's men who had been scouting in advance of the others came back at a gallop to report that he had been fired on by men hiding behind large piles of baled hay on a hilltop which commanded the road.

There were, he guessed, forty or fifty men behind the rampart of bales. The leaders quickly decided to leave the road and took to the foothills in a detour to a ranch known as the Wagonwheel Gap.

Collins swung from his horse and stepped to the porch. Bluntly he stated the situation. "Hell has broke loose in Georgia, boys. The whole damn country is headed this way for the war. That means we're in for a fight. We don't want to be caught in the open, and this spot is made to order for us."

The ranch was excellently situated for defense. On all sides of it were low, rolling hills with little large brush except in a few gullies. Plenty of water for the horses could be got from Bear Creek, which ran close to both the stable and the house. An adjoining corral had a large haystack near the barn, in case the supply in the loft gave out.

The arrival of a large body of settlers interrupted these preparations. Bill Herriott was in command. He stationed his men along a ridge to the north of the house, and they began to pour down a scattering fire that drove the ditch-diggers and the timber workers to cover. As word spread that the cattle barons and their Texans had been trapped, reinforcements poured in to join the attackers.

Clouds scudded across the sky and obscured the moon so that nightfall brought darkness. The ditch-diggers went to work again, protected by ramparts of logs built between them and their enemies along the bluff. The firing did not die down entirely, but it became intermittent and sporadic.

The leaders of the party held a conference in the living-room of the ranch house. They did not deceive themselves about the ultimate outcome of the battle. In time the settlers would overpower them by sheer numbers, unless help came to them from outside. That help could come only from government troops.

Collins lit a cigar as he lounged in an easy chair. He laughed sardonically. "We fixed it all up so nice to have the soldiers looking another way when we pulled off our raid that I don't reckon it will be easy to attract their attention now. Like as not the Great White Father can't hear us when we holler."

Ellison paced the floor anxiously. He more than anybody else had got them into this trap, and he was worried about the outcome. To the others he read a telegram he had written. It was directed to the Governor, and it asked him to urge the President to order troops from Fort Garfield to the Wagonwheel Gap Ranch at once.

A volunteer called for to get it to Cheyenne. It was decided that the safest place from which to send the wire was Jim Creek. The station agent there was friendly to the big cattle interests and would not hold up the message.

A dozen men volunteered to try to run the enemy lines and get the telegram through. A young Texan named Hal Yancey was chosen. He was not married, and he had once worked on the Two Star Ranch and knew the country fairly well. Moreover, he was a seasoned man, game and determined.

"I'll get the message through if I can," he promised.

"You'll have to hoof it unless you can pick up a horse somewhere," McFaddin said. "Take care of yourself, boy. Until you are through their lines you'll have to lie low when the moon comes out from behind the clouds."

Yancey followed the stream, moving through the water carefully in order not to make a misstep on a slippery rock that would cause him to stumble and make a splash. The creek was lined with willows after he had passed out of the cottonwood grove in which the ranch buildings were situated. The Texan left the creek and crept toward the log fence which separated him from the enemy.

He waited until a dark cloud swept in front of the moon, then clambered over the fence and moved forward through the brush.

A voice hailed him. "Hello, fellow! Where you been?"

The messenger knew he had been mistaken by one of the other party for a friend.

"I slipped down to that log fence to have a look at it," Yancey answered. "Nothing doing there. The logs are too close to crawl through."

"Hmp! I could of told you that. Got the makings?"

The Texan handed the man a sack of tobacco and his little book of paper wrappings. He had to wait while the homesteader shook out the tobacco and rolled the cigarette. The hillman had not taken a second look at the donor, but Yancey felt very nervous. He heard somebody else moving toward them through the brush.

"Say, I gotta be beatin' it," he mentioned. "I'm supposed to be with the remuda."

"Hell! This ain't no regular army. We don't have to take orders."

The advancing man loomed out of the darkness. Yancey recognized him. He had known Lee Hart when he had worked on the Two Star Ranch three or four years earlier. Hart spent a good deal of time loafing at Round Top and everybody in the county knew the man.

"Just had word there's a big bunch of boys coming down from Larkspur to join us," he said. His gaze rested on the Texan. It was a moment before his memory placed the young fellow. "Why, it's Hal Yancey! What you doing here? Thought you went back to Texas."

"I did. Got into Larkspur only three days ago. I'm on the bread line. How's everything, Lee?"

"Fine. We've got these sons-of-guns where we want them at last," Hart pulled his talk up abruptly. He stared at Yancey blankly. A sudden suspicion had disturbed him. "Say, we'll go talk with Bill Herriott. A lot of Texans have come in mighty recently. Maybe—"

Yancey followed the stream.

The barrel of Yancey's revolver pointed at Hart. "Let's not talk with anyone, Lee. Let's all three move deeper into the brush. I'm on an errand, and I don't want to talk with Bill. Drift along to the right, boys. I'm not allowing to harm either of you if you behave."

They drifted, but unfortunately directly toward another group of three or four men. Yancey bolted into the brush as Hart yelled out a warning. Bullets whistled in the darkness. The Texan knew he had been hit, but kept going. He dodged into a draw and ran limping down it. When he reached a clump of aspens he buried himself in them and sank to the ground. He believed he had evaded the pursuit.

A low voice, not six feet from him, asked, "What seems to be the trouble?"

CHAPTER XXXVII

When Terry and Carey offered their services as mediators to the little group who seemed to be leading the attackers the proposal was rejected at once. The Diamond Reverse B superintendent was not in favor with the people's party, even though he had escaped lynching by a narrow squeak. Lane Carey had always been liked by the settlers, but he too had signed the telegram asking for the soldiers and was temporarily under suspicion.

"We don't aim to do any mediating," Lee Hart sneered. "We're figuring on wiping out this bunch of killers—the cattle barons have brought in, and with them some of the high muggs themselves."

Bill Herriott was less ferocious but just as uncompromising. "They can hang out a white flag if they want to surrender," he said. "Until then we haven't any terms to offer."

"What terms will you give if they do decide to surrender?" Carey asked. Herriott's bleak gaze rested on the face of the Box 55 owner. "I wouldn't know. We'll cross that bridge when we come to it. The fellows who hired Turley to kill our friends will have to pay the price. So will those who murdered Dave Morgan and Sib Lee. There won't be any compromise about that."

Argument was of no use. The bitterness of the feeling was too great.

wounded. A rescue party takes Jeff to town for medical treatment, and Terry and Larry are arrested by sheriff for safekeeping. Jeff explains to the mob. Cal Free, doesn't know Ellen loves him, not Jeff.

When they went to get their horses they were met by the announcement that they were to stay here for the present. They had not been asked to come, but since they had done so they were not to leave.

"Who says so?" asked Terry. "Doesn't matter about that. You stick around."

Terry strolled down toward the firing-line, from which occasional flashes came. He was not apparently under surveillance, but the horses were being watched. A draw brought him to an aspen grove. Calhoun hesitated, uncertain whether to go round it or go back to the summit of the hill from which he had just come. He passed into the aspens.

Guns sounded, close to him. What surprised him was that they were revolver shots. The distance was too great to reach the ranch house except with rifles. He heard excited voices, and presently the sound of a runner coming into the aspens. The escaping man collapsed and sank to the ground.

Almost in a murmur, Terry said, "What seems to be the trouble?" The man on the ground turned a startled face toward him and reached for a gun.

"Not necessary," the Diamond Reverse B man said. "I won't hurt you or call anybody."

Yancey recognized him. What are you doing here with these fellows, Mr. Terry?" he asked, surprised.

"I came to try to fix up a truce, but the settlers wouldn't have it," Calhoun asked a question. "Was it you they were shooting at?"

"They hit me in the leg. I'm one of Sunday Brown's Texans. They sent me from the ranch to get a telegram through to Washington asking for troops."

"Hit bad?" "Not so bad. I can't travel, that's sure. Not on that game leg."

"You have a written message?" "Yes," he added, worried, "They're depending on me at the ranch."

"I might get it through for you. But I can't leave you here."

Terry gave instructions. "Stay here. I'll have a try for the horse. When you hear me coming move to the edge of the aspens."

Terry walked up the incline toward the draw and met Lane Carey. "I heard some revolver shots," Lane said. "Hope they weren't firing at you."

"No. At a fellow named Yancey who was trying to get through a telegram from the beleaguered men to send to the Governor. They hit him, but he got away and is hiding in the aspens. I'm trying to get a horse for him—that one in the draw there."

"How badly is he hurt? Can he ride?" "He says so. If I could get two horses I'd try to go with him."

"You'd be shot down before you got twenty yards."

"I'm not so sure. It's dark when the moon is under a cloud. More men keep riding in to join the attackers. Nobody is paying any attention to us."

"Not as long as we don't try to get away. But they have sentries out. I ran into one and he warned me back."

They were moving in the direction of the saddled horse. It was a rather heavily built sorrel gelding.

"I'm going to try it," Terry said. "They'll find Yancey soon if I don't get him away, and if they do he's a goner."

He untied the horse, and the two men walked back with it toward the aspens. They met a man whom they recognized as the owner of a wagon yard at Round Top. He said, "Hello!" and passed without question.

Yancey was waiting at the edge of the aspens.

"How is your leg?" Terry asked. "Fine," the man answered in a thin voice.

"Let me look at it," Carey said. While he examined and dressed it as best he could, Terry took the horse deeper into the aspens where it would not be seen. Carey called him when he was ready.

The Box 55 man said in a low voice, "This man can't make it alone to the railroad."

Terry frowned. "I've been thinking that. I'll go with him. Later on we'll pick up another horse somewhere."

"You mean, both go on this horse?"

"Yes. He isn't going to make it without help."

Yancey spoke up stoutly, but in a weak voice. "I am too. Boost me into the saddle and I'll burn the wind out of here."

They helped him to his feet. He leaned heavily against Terry. The eyes of the ranchmen met. Each was telling the other that the Texan would not get far alone.

Out of the darkness a man walked. He asked peremptorily, "What you fellows doing here?"

DIET OF LEGUME IS VITAL FACTOR

Can Detect Distress Signs When Food Is Lacking.

By E. E. DETURK

(Professor of Soil Fertility, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.)

Legumes, like other crops, by unmistakable distress signals when their diet lacks important plant food elements, observations made in the past cropping season indicate. Yet they frequently show these nutritional deficiencies by slow growth, rather than by any specific abnormalities of form or color. They are likely to produce undersized plants which are normal in appearance otherwise.

Ordinarily the early symptoms of plant food hunger take the form of changes in color. The most common color symptom results from chlorosis—or loss of the green color. This may be followed by the death of the affected area. The chlorosis may consist of paling of the ordinary green color, or the appearance of various shades of yellow or even white dots and patches.

In general the lack of one or more of the three major plant food elements—nitrogen, phosphorus and potash—will result in ill health for the crop.

Nitrogen deficiency results in slow growth of the legumes, a decrease in the branching of the plants and smaller plants at maturity. These may occur without the appearance of specific symptoms and have little value to the farmer or agronomist attempting a diagnosis. Severe nitrogen deficiency often causes mild chlorosis in which the leaves gradually become pale green with a yellowish tinge rather than distinctly yellow. The chlorosis usually spreads evenly over the entire leaf surface.

A lack of phosphorus manifests itself in slow growth. The legume plants remain small and undeveloped. Flowering and seed production tend to be delayed and a bluish-green tinge may develop in the leaves. But there are no specific symptoms that can be used with assurance for purposes of detecting phosphorus deficiency.

Of all the symptoms observable in legumes, those of potash hunger are probably the most outstanding and easily recognized.

Broad-leaved legumes such as the soybean show evidence of insufficient potash by irregular yellow mottling around the edges of the leaflets. The discolored areas soon merge, forming a continuous yellow border around the tip and along the sides, but rarely around the base. Death of the chlorotic area that first became mottled follows promptly along with a downward cupping of the leaf edges. Then the dead tissue falls out, giving the leaflet a ragged appearance.

Dairy Production

The "all-out" dairy production program for defense needs and higher returns to the dairymen should be tempered with careful feeding and management practices, believes C. S. Rhoads, extension dairy specialist of the University of Illinois college of agriculture. Overfeeding on high protein rations, short dry periods and failure to supply adequate amounts of minerals are some of the things to be avoided. Balancing the grain mixture to fit the kind and quality of available roughage, the use of bone meal in the ration when needed and a dry period of a month to six weeks are some of the points that should receive attention.

Good Care of Soil Aids Defense Plans

Contour farming, strip cropping and terracing can help in increasing yields to meet the needs of the national food for defense program, says Lindley G. Cook, extension soil conservationist at Rutgers university. This is the time to make plans for 1942, he reminds farmers.

"American farmers will be asked to produce greater quantities of food than ever before in the history of the country," Cook reports. "Farmers are fast finding out, by means of research and experience on their own farms, that conservation practices play a definite part in increasing yields."

"This is the time to begin planning the farm program for next season in such a way that record production can be obtained without the wasteful practices of the last war."

Lines' Bending

Swinging round the circle to see where soil conservation is working and where farmers are still losing too much of the soil that they might be saving, Dr. H. H. Bennett of the U. S. department of agriculture found that out in "the region of straight line plowing," the contour method is making progress. More than half the corn in the typical Corn Belt county of Montgomery, in Iowa, was planted on contour this year. None was continued in 1937.

How Do Bank Checks Provide Safety?

Checks provide safety in at least two ways: (1) They eliminate the need of carrying cash and (2) They furnish valid receipts in the form of cancelled vouchers which prove that payment has been made to the designated person. Both of these features are entirely automatic yet the amount of money they have saved for people with checking accounts, if possible to calculate, would be enormous.

DEEP WATER ISLAND

By Alan LeMay

The struggle to wrest the fertile little isle from Richard Wayne and his half brothers makes interesting reading, especially so after Wayne falls in love with the young lady. If you like mystery with your romance this is the story for you.

In the vast expanse of the South Pacific Karen Waterson felt as out of place as snow on a straw hat. But John Colt, her lawyer, had convinced her she was heir-ess to the island of Alakoa, and he was determined to get it for her. Incidentally, John was in love with Karen.

MERCHANTS Your Advertising Dollar buys something more than space and circulation in the columns of this newspaper. It buys space and circulation plus the favorable consideration of our readers for this newspaper and its advertising patron. LET US TELL YOU MORE ABOUT IT

Star Dust STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO By VIRGINIA VALE (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

NOT content with having a very promising film career, Susan Hayward has turned actors' agent. Dining at a New Orleans hotel, she was impressed by the young singer and trumpet player with Chuck Foster's band; he stopped the show at every performance. So when he was brought over to meet her she questioned him. Why wasn't he in films? Nobody'd asked him to be. Where did he come from? Los Angeles, but he'd never been able to get near a film studio there! So Susan placed him under contract, and arranged for his Hollywood debut at a cafe there. His name? Ray Robbins, professionally; in real life, it's Foster.

A new romantic duo makes its debut in RKO's comedy, "Obliging Young Lady," in the persons of Edmond O'Brien and Ruth Warrick.

RUTH WARRICK

He recently scored in "A Girl, a Guy and a Gob" and "Parachute Battalion." She made her film bow as Orson Welles' first wife in "Citizen Kane," the picture that's been a springboard to motion picture contracts for so many actors and actresses.

Robert Taylor has an exceptionally tough beard, and while he's being shaved talks about show horses, like his Arabian stallion; Clark Gable chats about guns and fish and venison, under the same conditions, and he also has a tough beard. Spencer Tracy yells wisecracks at everybody while he's in the barber's chair. Bob Young makes a few remarks about his riding horses. Jimmy Stewart sits and says nothing. All this information from Jim Adamson, major domo of Metro's barber shop, who began snipping locks and news from movie stars way back in the days of Inceville—he's been at it for 2 1/2 decades, and has his own Hollywood Who's Who.

We're told that Inez Cooper, a Hollywood new comer, looks so much like Hedy Lamarr that experts can't tell them apart. Miss Cooper has worked in "Unholy Partners" and "The Shadow of the This Man"; she's now appearing in "Mr. and Mrs. North," and is slated for a role in "I Married an Angel." None of these pictures have yet been released, yet she's already had a flourishing screen career.

People whose memories go way, way back will remember Harold Lockwood, one of the big stars of his time. His widow died recently, after having been a member of Paramount's make-up department for nine years. Today's movie stars are more farsighted financially than were those old-timers. For example—Joel McCrea is listed by the government not as an actor (though he's been making pictures for 11 years) but as a good producer, thanks to the annual profit of approximately $5,000 which he makes from his ranch.

Madeline Lee, who's "Genevieve Blue" on the "Amos and Andy" broadcasts, has found herself turning into a hat designer. She entered a hat designing class on a dare, found that she not only liked it but was good at it; now she makes all her own hats, and her friends beseege her to turn out little numbers for them.

Correction: Last week's item about "The Chocolate Soldier" was partly wrong; Metro's picture by that name includes only music from the operetta so known; the story is the one you're familiar with under the title of "The Guardsman."

ODDS AND ENDS—RKO has signed St. Brendan's Boys' choir of 20 boys for church sequences in "Joan of Paris," which will star Michele Morgan, the new French star, and Paul Henreid... Bud Abbott and Lou Costello will play the leading comedy roles, and Kathryn Grayson and John Cullum will have the romantic singing leads in the new movie version of "His Girl Friday"... Walter Pidgeon returns to his first career, that of a singer, in "Design for Scandal," which he has just completed with the newly wed Rosalind Russell... They sing "A Bicycle Built for Two"... Olive Brook's daughter Felish, makes her film debut in "Suspicion."

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D., Dean of The Cook Bible Institute of Chicago. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for November 23

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

PRAYER AND THANKSGIVING

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 6:5-15; Ephesians 6:10; 1 Thessalonians 5:16-18. GOLDEN TEXT—Pray without ceasing. In every thing give thanks.—1 Thessalonians 5:17, 18.

Being one with Christ, the Christian finds prayer to be as natural as breathing. As he walks with the Master he talks with Him, praises Him, thanks Him, makes his petitions and his needs known to Him. We feel, however, like Christ's disciples who asked Him to teach them to pray (Luke 11:1).

I. Instruction in Prayer

Approaching the subject from the negative viewpoint, Jesus told them: 1. How Not to Pray (Matt. 6:5, 7). Prayer, which is the highest privilege of the Christian, is beset by some deadly dangers.

a. No hypocritical performance (v. 5).—Some who wished to be seen in prayer managed to be in a conspicuous place at the Jewish hours of prayer (nine, twelve, and three o'clock). There, before a crowd, they put on a prayer "show" for the benefit of the onlooking audience. Such a prayer is designed for the ears of men and never reaches God.

b. No vain repetition (v. 7). We do not need to repeat our petitions. God knows our need (v. 8). When repetition is the outpouring of an earnest and urgent heart it means much, but that is different from just repeating phrases.

2. How to Pray (Matt. 6:8, 14, 15; Eph. 5:20; 1 Thess. 5:16-18). Public prayer is sometimes both necessary and proper, but usually our prayer should be:

a. In secret (v. 6). When we pray we should be free from distracting influences or personalities. We are talking to God and should give ourselves entirely over to communion with Him.

b. In faith (vv. 8, 9). God knows what we need even though He waits to be inquired of concerning it. He will answer prayer so, as to honor His name in our lives and in our testimony before others.

c. With forgiveness (vv. 14, 15). No one who comes before God with an unforgiving spirit toward his brother is ready to ask God for the forgiveness which he himself so greatly needs.

d. With thanksgiving (Eph. 5:20). To give thanks is altogether fitting as we come to God in prayer. Note that we are to be thankful "always" and "for all things," not just when some special blessing or favor has come to us.

e. Without ceasing (1 Thess. 5:16, 18). Union with Christ enables us to pray without ceasing, even as He ever prays for us. This does not call for the constant utterance of words, but the moment by moment prayer of a heart and life lifted to Him. With such praying comes constant rejoicing (v. 16).

II. A Model of Prayer (Matt. 6:9-13)

The prayer which our Lord taught His disciples was intended to be a model rather than a form of prayer. We may repeat it, however, if we put into it the prayer of our hearts.

1. God and His Glory (vv. 9, 10). Recognizing Him as our Father to whom we may and must come for all things, we in all humility ascribe all honor to Him. Then we pray that His kingdom may come, not only in the future (and we look forward to it!), but now, in our own hearts. The true believer wants the will of God done in his own life and throughout the earth, even as it is perfectly done in heaven.

This prayer begins at the proper point: A right relationship with God brings true blessing on earth. The one who prays is now ready to present to God:

2. Man and His Needs (vv. 11-13). Daily bread is mentioned first, for without it life could not continue. This is the constant need of man, and his great struggle. God is able for that problem, and only He is able. Unless He gives "seed to the sower and bread to the eater" (Isa. 55:10) we are gone.

But man has even greater spiritual needs. Sin needs forgiveness, weakness needs strength, the power of the enemy of our souls calls for deliverance. Again God is able and ready to hear man's prayer.

One of the sad things about the study of prayer is that we are all so ready to talk about it, discuss it, even preach about it, and then do so little praying. Knowing how to pray, and admiring a model of prayer, will profit us nothing, unless we pray.

Good Work Never Fails

So, then, Elijah's life had been no failure after all. Seven thousand at least in Israel had been blessed and encouraged by his example, and silently blessed him, perhaps, for the courage which they felt. If God's world, for those who are in earnest there is no failure. No work truly done, no word earnestly spoken, no sacrifice freely made, was ever made in vain.—F. W. Robertson

No. 1 U. S. Naval Hero

FOR more than 30 years the body of John Paul Jones has rested in a marble tomb in the crypt of the United States Naval Academy chapel at Annapolis. Recently a precious relic was placed in front of his sarcophagus. It is a plaster bust of America's No. 1 naval hero, made more than 150 years ago by Jean Antoine Houdon, the famous French sculptor.

This bust, one of only five of its kind known to be in existence, was presented to the Naval Academy museum by an organization known as the Friends of the United States Navy. Back of this gift is an interesting story.

In 1779 Capt. John Paul Jones was placed in command of the American frigate Bon Homme Richard. Upon his arrival in Paris, Jones, who had been a Mason since 1770, applied for affiliation with La Loge des Neuf-Souers or the Lodge of the Nine Sisters (meaning the nine Muses). This lodge, besides being a fraternal organization, was also a club for artists, writers and other intellectuals. Benjamin Franklin was its worshipful master and among its members was Houdon, the sculptor.

Before the lodge could act upon Jones' application, he had sailed away to challenge the power of the "Mistress of the Seas." On September 23, 1779, occurred his historic victory over the stronger British man-of-war, the Serapis, during which he uttered his immortal words of defiance—"I have not yet begun to fight!"

When Jones reached Paris the next spring, all France was eager to honor him. Not only did the Lodge of the Nine Sisters welcome him and initiate him into its membership, but it commissioned one of its members, Houdon, to make a bust of the victor for the lodge. King Louis XVI was so delighted over the defeat of the British frigate by the Bon Homme Richard that he gave Jones the Cross of Military Merit, the first time it had ever been presented to a foreigner.

Jones was proud of this honor and asked Houdon to depict it on the lapel of his coat when the sculptor made the original terra cotta bust of him in 1780, even though congress had not authorized him to accept a decoration from a foreign monarch.

Between 1786 and 1791 Houdon made 16 plaster copies of the bust on orders from Jones, who presented them to Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Franklin, Lafayette, Robert Morris, John Jay and others. The one presented to Jefferson was owned by the Boston Athenaeum for many years. But some time before 1900 it mysteriously disappeared from that museum and has never been found. Today the whereabouts of only five of the plaster copies of the original terra cotta, including the one recently presented to the Naval Museum, are known, but several scholars are trying to find out what became of the other eleven.

In 1791 Jones ordered Houdon to make a plaster replica of the bust and on it, besides the Cross of Military Merit, show the Order of St. Ann, which Catherine the Great, empress of Russia, had given him in recognition of his services during the Russian war with Turkey. Soon afterwards Jones wrote to Jefferson, then secretary of state, asking Jefferson to obtain for him authority from congress to keep the decoration. At this time he stated that a congressman from North Carolina, his adopted state, had asked for a bust of him and that he had directed Houdon to prepare one, showing the Cross of St. Ann, and forward it to North Carolina. The state has no record of having received it and some of its historians are trying to determine what became of it because of the celebration in honor of Jones which is planned for 1942.

Houdon's bust of Jones was declared by some of his contemporaries to be a remarkably accurate likeness. President James Madison wrote to one of Jones' first biographers: "His bust by Houdon is an exact likeness, portraying well the characteristic features stamped on the countenance of the original." In criticizing a portrait which this same biographer had chosen for his book, President Thomas Jefferson wrote: "Houdon's bust of him is an excellent likeness. Why have they not taken a side face of him from that? Such a one would be perfect."

Civilian Defense Week

Beginning Nov. 11 and ending Nov. 16, was properly observed by our merchants and organizations. Armistice Day was celebrated by a parade featuring the Red Cross, our Band and floats, and concluding by an American Legion member halting parade, facing the east and everyone standing in silent reverence for 1 minute. Rolland's Drug Store prepared a very attractive Red Cross window. Wednesday, War Against Waste Day was assigned to the Business Men's Club and speeches were made at their dinner. Windows demonstrating "war against waste" were arranged by the B & M, and T. & G. Grocery.

Thursday afternoon, was Sign Up for Defense Day. The Carrizozo Hardware Co. prepared an appealing window on "Sign Up for Defense."

Health and Welfare Day came on Friday. Supt. J. M. Carpenter called Assembly for 11:15, at which time the Band gave several selections, and Mrs. Blanche Shilling gave a very interesting talk on "Welfare." Also Mr. Carl Reddick spoke on conservation of food. Both addresses were instructive and very interesting. On Friday, Mr. Elmer Eaker of the Paden Drug Store prepared the display window on the theme "Health."

Saturday, the Boy Scouts exemplified "Civilian Protection Day" by enforcing the usage of "Stop" signs. At sundown, the flag was lowered by the scouts and Legion members. Mr. Petty exhibited the scouts' equipment in his window. Sunday finished the week by all churches using "Freedom Day" as their topic for services.

The Local Defense Council wishes to thank all organizations, business men, local speakers and schools for their aid in carrying out this program.

Legion Auxiliary

Held its regular meeting Nov. 13. Mrs. Lela Brewster presided in the absence of Pres. Mrs. Laura Norman. After reading of the minutes, reports of various committees were read. Mrs. Scharf reported a profit of $33 to date on the rummage sale. Magazine subscriptions sold by the auxiliary netted $16.50. The Child Welfare committee reported the purchase of a railroad ticket to send a 15-year-old girl who had run away from home and who had been in care of different families in Lincoln County for some time and which had proved very unsatisfactory, back to her home in Oklahoma. $30 worth of old clothes have been given to 18 worthy children. The Auxiliary aided the Red Cross one afternoon in sorting and packing clothing for destitute families. The Membership committee reported one new member, making a total of 26 to date, one above the quota. After business, a Defense Program, to which the public was invited, was given. Dr. Turner spoke on First Aid and Mrs. Degitz on Child Welfare. The meeting proved very interesting and educational.
