Engagement Disclosed At Tea Monday

About seventy-five attended a tea at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Snow last Monday afternoon, at which the engagement of their daughter, Wilma Lorene, was announced. In the receiving line were the bride's mother, Mrs. Snow, her aunt, Mrs. Champ Ferguson and the bride-to-be, all wearing formal gowns.

Rope Snow, little sister of the bride-to-be, a graciously attended the affair. She was wearing a pink frock. Rooms were darkened and lights were dimmed. Miss Ruth Petty sang two beautifully appropriate songs with Mrs. Ben S. Burns playing the accompaniment. Mesdames R. E. Blaney, Frank English, Nellie Branum and the bride-elect's grandmother, Mrs. Anna Brazel poured the tea and coffee.

The table was centered with a Christmas tree, while candles made a subdued light, as guests were served cafeteria style, with several dainty and delicious varieties of tea cakes. The nutcrackers were filled with mints and nuts while tucked in at one side of each was a tiny scroll tied with ribbon upon which was written in gold ink, "Wilma Snow and Bob White, Monday Dec. 29, 1941."

Mr. White was graduated from State College, Class of 1940. During his school life he was a member of Sigma Alpha Omicron fraternity and took an active part in social and scholastic affairs. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. White of State College.

The bride-to-be is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Snow of Carrizozo. She is a member of the Rainbows, was a leader in the younger crowd until she went to State College from which institution she was graduated at the close of this semester and will receive her diploma in May 1942. She is a member of Chi Omega sorority; is accomplished and charming; her quiet dignity wins her many friends and endears her to everyone.

The wedding will be solemnized at home next Monday morning with members of both families present.

NOTICE—The Boy Scouts of Carrizozo will canvass the town for any books that you have around your house you wish to donate. Do so when they call on you. The purpose is to start a public library. Your cooperation will be deeply appreciated. Thank you.

Flood Assistance Program Underway

A series of seven educational meetings were called recently by the County Extension Agent for the purpose of discussing assistance that is now available to farmers in the flood stricken area.

The meetings were conducted in cooperation with the Farm Security Administration and Soil Conservation Service representatives.

Each group of farmers who were interested in a particular dam was given an opportunity to make application for a Water Facilities loan, to apply to the Board of Supervisors for assistance in hauling logs, and to apply for the use of the pile driver which has been made available by the Fish and Wildlife Service.

The reconstruction of dams has started, and if farmers take advantage of the help which is being made available, most of them should be able to irrigate their farms the coming year.

Carl P. Radcliff, County Extension Agent

YOU might not know it, but the next spring training trip is just around the corner.

The two managers who can afford to sit back and yawn are Joe McCarthy of the New York Yankees and Billy Southworth of the St. Louis Cardinals.

With most of his stars young and active—with people such as DiMaggio, Gordon and Keller around, with his younger pitchers moving up—McCarthy didn't have to hang out his Christmas stockings. It was already packed.

Billy Southworth's main worry will be getting rid of talent, not taking it on. The Cardinal leader has 19 good-looking pitchers and 11 good outfielders waiting for the spring call.

Larry MacPhall and Leo Durocher understand they can't afford to stand pat, even on a pennant winner. Their World Series pitching staff averaged over 33 years.

The Dodgers need another good pitcher, at least one more good infielder and one more hitting outfielder, to defend their place against a Cardinal club that should be better in the next race.

The Reds still have a great pitching staff on hand, with Vander Meer and Riddle due for even better seasons, plus Walters and Derringer and a rookie or two.

This will be Derringer's sixteenth season and at the age of 35—Paul was 35 in October—the big Red can't be expected to be what he used to be.

What the American league can do to keep the Yankees from winning the 1942 pennant around mid-August is something more than we can figure out this far ahead. But it will have to be something on the miracle side.

Leading Grid Section

There is an old saying to the effect that "fools rush in—and get away with it where angels fear to tread."

Certainly after the emotional swirls of this late football season no sane person would attempt to open a new argument, any more than one would attempt to throw gasoline upon a burning building.

But under pressure from so many inquisitive letter writers an attempt will be made to straighten out this debate—i.e., viz., "What was the strangest football section or sector for 1941?"

My answer is the Middle West, for these five reasons—Minnesota, Notre Dame, Michigan, Ohio State and Northwestern.

The East can counter with Fordham, Navy, Pennsylvania, Duquesne, and Penn State or Harvard. The South can offer Duke, Georgia, Mississippi State, Alabama and Mississippi, Tennessee, Vanderbilt, Tulane or Louisiana State.

The Southwest can present Texas, Texas A. and M., Texas Christian, Southern Methodist and Rice.

From the Far West we got Oregon State, Washington State, and then a terrible snarl from Stanford, Oregon, Washington, Santa Clara and others.

Missouri's elegant team doesn't hold a habit in any of these locations.

Looking over the lists offered above my vote for the present season still goes to the Midwest when it comes to the combination of size, speed, man power, running, blocking, passing and what it takes in general to win tough games.

Another Argument

"We've always been told to keep your eye on the ball in golf," writes one of the harassed. "I notice the duffer tries to do this and ties himself into knots. The pro gives no sign of this. I don't believe anyone can actually see the clubhouse hitting the ball. What's the use of keeping your eye on the ball if you can't see what happens at impact?"

The main idea back of all this advice is to hold the head in a correct position through impact, and not to swing with a moving head.

There was another slogan—"Keep your mind on the ball." There have been many slogans. But the point to remember is this—"The head is the anchor for the swing"—a Jim Barnes tip.

The fault of head-hitting usually comes from some earlier fault, such as too much tension or from swinging too fast. Also, from thinking ahead of the swing in terms of results and not in terms of what causes results.

SPEAKING OF SPORTS

By ROBERT McSHANE

THE Indianapolis club of the American association annexed a grand guy recently when Charles Leo ("Gabby") Hartnett was named playing-manager.

Gabby went back to the minors after 20 years in the majors, 19 of them with the Chicago Cubs. During those 19 years, Gabby played on four pennant winning teams and managed one of them.

The jovial, red-faced, catcher came to Chicago in 1922 from the Worcester, Mass., club of the Eastern league. For almost a score of years Gabby was the outstanding catcher in the circuit and the idol of Chicago's great North Side. In July, 1938, he succeeded Charley Grimm as manager of the Cubs and was the greatest single factor in bringing a pennant to Wrigley field.

His twilight home run against the Pirates that year will be remembered as long as baseball is played. When Gabby was released by the Cubs at the end of the 1939 season, to be succeeded by Jim Wilson, he had earned a lifetime batting average of .297 and a fielding percentage of .984.

During his 19 years with the Cubs, Hartnett played in 1,926 games. At bat 6,282 times, he accounted for 1,897 hits. During this time he made only 142 errors, averaging slightly more than seven a season. He led National league catchers in fielding percentage for seven years—1925, '28 and '30, and '34 through '37.

He caught 100 or more games a season for 12 years, eight of them consecutive, for a league record. Gabby accepted 452 chances without an error from August 19, 1933, to June 20, 1934, also a record, and caught 1,759 games, more than any other backstop.

Cold statistics aren't enough to furnish an adequate indication of Gabby's worth to any ball club. The big Irishman is a baseball player through and through. Like any real ball player, he hates to lose. He never quits fighting and he expects his team to battle it out every inch of the way.

Indianapolis fans will like the beefy Hartnett. His popularity in Chicago never was questioned. It's true that he lost some of his bluff geniality when he became manager of the Cubs, but conditions at Wrigley field were not too promising at any time during the Hartnett reign. Gabby had too many problems on his mind—and many of those problems still remain to be solved.

Bowling—the Right Way

By LOWELL JACKSON

(This is one of a series of lessons in bowling by Lowell Jackson, one of the country's outstanding bowlers. Mr. Jackson has eighteen 200 games to his credit and has a 12-year league average of 210.)

Curve ball is most difficult.

THE CURVE BALL. The curve ball is the most difficult delivery to use successfully in the bowling game, since it requires a tremendous turn of the fingers and wrist when releasing the ball.

This delivery is not recommended for beginners or the mediocre bowler because of the strain on the hand and wrist and because it takes a lot of practice to control the curve ball.

When delivering a curve, the bowler moves his approach to the center of the alley and lays his ball down at a point in the center of the foul line. The ball is aimed to the right side of the alley and if properly delivered, it will curve back into the 1-3 pocket.

Occasionally, a bowler will find an alley that seems to have too much polish on it, and if he does, he will find he can use a curve to advantage.

On a fast alley, which provides little "gripping" for the ball, an expert bowler will not resort to a curve, since a ball aimed for the gutter in the hope it will curve back into the 1-3 pocket may continue straight on into the gutter.

THE PAPERS OF PRIVATE PURKEY

Dear Ma—

Well I have done a lot of kidding and squawking in my letters but I guess that is all over now. After what them double crossing Japs did there is no longer no funny side to this training and all I want to do is get a crack at them. All the boys feel the same way. Up to the time they heard about them Japs stabling Uncle Sam in the back under a flag of truce I guess they all felt the same as me that the war was too far away to bother much and that this army training was a pain in the neck. But it woke us all up like no bugle ever did.

I kind of felt that nobody wood ever tackle this country on account of we got two big oceans to depend on and all that and I guess I never sweated it a maneuver without saying to myself this is the bunk as Hitler wood be crazy to get more trouble on his hands. I never thought that Japan would be even crazier. I hated the hikes, I hated the drills and inspections and I could not bathe a new crop of corns without burning up inside. But all of a sudden I feel different. Even my bunnions seem patriotic now.

It's the same way all through my outfit. Jeeps who have been squawking eight hours a day look like they become fighting men over night. They know it is not all a lot of foolishness no more and any boy in camp will attack a tank single handed now if you just tell him there is a Japanese doll inside.

As for me personally ma I got a clear picture of what the country is up against for the first time and I wonder now that I did not get the right slant long before this. I guess it was just because I got snatched so sudden from all the comforts of civilian life that I didn't see straight. I was so over giving up a box spring mattress, a personal alarm clock and the right to do what I pleased. But Emperor Hotsy-Togo or whatever you call him woke me up like nobody's business. I am so soar now that I am sorry I ever applauded Japanese tightrope walkers.

This war has all of a sudden become a great exciting show, ma. It don't seem just like a optical illusion no more. All the tanks don't seem like they was just a few things being demonstrated by a auto salesman. My rifle witch has just seemed something I wood like to have carried for me by a caddy has all of a sudden become my BUDDY! It's real and human. And my uniform even when it is wet and wrinkled now looks like the grandest uniform anybody could ever climb into. What has come over me I don't know for sure but I credit the Mikadoo with an assist.

I guess you will have to forget about me being home for Christmas. But I know what kind of a mother you are and I guess you feel just like I do about what has happened. I have done a lot of wise cracking about being leased or tent but I don't care where they use me now, so long as it is where I can take a sock at the world's worst enemies of today, the double-talk nations with jab a knife in your kidney while asking what you want for Christmas.

Well, I must close now. Do not worry. Everything will come out all right with the old Stars and Stripes on top.

Your loving son, Oscar.

P. S.—I serpose pop is trying to get into the army again now. Tell him to forget it and stay home and look out for you as I will do enough fighting for all three of us.

THOUGHT ON FOOD It is the sad, unlucky fate Of some to have a diet: Each time they hear a friend's lost weight They ask him how, and try it.

Rats in Tests Eager Workers

Joy of Learning Seems to Be Adequate Pay for Their Efforts.

NEW ORLEANS.—The better nature of a white rat has been disclosed. It will work for nothing.

Dr. S. Rains Wallace of Tulane university revealed that not only is the profit motive of secondary concern to a rat, but it will learn quickly if not rewarded, has a good memory and probably enjoys continuous labor. It appeared, however, that a rat has little use except in chasing through mazes—a wholly noncommercial endeavor—and outside of that is just a rat.

"Most previous experiments have been based on the assumption that an animal learns much faster when he is rewarded for his success," said Dr. Wallace, who has been putting rats in mazes for three years.

Rats Enjoy Learning. He found that the pure joy of learning itself tended to furnish ample compensation. The rat also probably finds added reward in long periods of running instead of pausing now and then to rest.

"Such an idea," Dr. Wallace said, "has not been seriously regarded before."

Removal from the maze is considered as a form of punishment by the rat and he tends to slow down a bit and make mistakes when he realizes he is about to be forced to knock off work awhile. Dr. Wallace plans to make more investigations along this line.

If not rewarded at the start of experiments, rats may learn more quickly. This, Dr. Wallace said, may be "because the reward makes the rat too emotional to concentrate."

The ability of rats to remember the intricate maze was considered remarkable. Many rats kept out of the maze for three months made only one error when they were returned. Practically, it was possible to make seven errors. Dr. Wallace thought this "retention of memory was due to the 'restricted social life' of the rats in the laboratory."

No Human Link Seen. He didn't care to discuss the possible application of his findings to human beings.

"All I can say is that we have found a number of things about learning in rats which are not in accord with most modern theories," he said. "If they are applicable to human behaviors, they should upset many of the notions upon which our thinking is based."

Regardless of the application, it was conceded that no human would find pleasure in working for nothing as does a rat.

Two weeks before the test the rats became acquainted with laboratory technicians through handling. Despite all precautions, however, some rats can't take it and have to be discarded. Dr. Wallace recalled the case of a female rat, known only as B-10, who insisted on jumping out of the maze and otherwise getting off the beam.

"We couldn't get her to follow the maze," he said with a note of regret. "She had to be retired."

Girl, 10, Bakes Cookies

FOR 'Cute Hungry Soldier' SEATTLE.—Dorothy Howay, 10, has her photograph in the army post office at Fort Lewis, entitled: "Sweetheart of the Gang."

This only goes to show that an army still marches on its stomach. For, without her mother's knowledge, Dorothy baked some cookies and mailed them to "Cute Hungry Soldier." She enclosed a photograph.

In return she received a letter from five men in the army post office, indicating the package got no further.

"Makes us sort of homesick for our mother's cooking," the soldier's wrote. "Your picture shall be put in a conspicuous place as the sweetheart of this gang."

Government Streamlining

Successful in Colorado

DENVER.—Governmental streamlining is a success in Colorado. Urging that other states follow suit to save the taxpayers' money, Gov. Ralph L. Carr has issued a statement lauding the reorganized governmental system that went into effect in the mile-high state on July 1.

The governor said the law consolidating tax-collecting agencies and revamping of the 63-year-old governmental system, has boosted tax collections 10.7 per cent in the first three months of its operations.

Footrace Is a Fixture

On Each Army Payday

FORT LEWIS, WASH.—Sgt. Trevor H. Humphreys and Pvt. Leonard W. Buehl make each pay day a memorable occasion. They race 85 yards—barefoot.

Neither is exactly sure why they began the stunt, but it has become a fixed feature of their company. There's only one hitch: their fellow-soldiers lay bets on the outcome—then lay out the course. And it's liberally sprinkled with rocks.

By L. L. STEVENSON

Ramblings and ruminations: An extremely large husband and a very small wife having a heated argument on Fifth avenue. The little woman evidently wins as he thrusts some bills into her hand and meekly follows her into a glittering shop where feminine apparel is sold. A window display of that new fur which I'm told is a combination of monkey and fox. Looks expensive. Reminds me that at the theater lately, I've seen more ermine than in a long time past. A gold-braided doorman holding a chow in his arms, the dog's owner evidently being inside the establishment in front of which he stands. A pretty brunette losing a heel as she steps from the curb. With her face flaming she limps away without attempting to pick it up. Job for a cobbler.

Musicians milling about on Broadway in front of their union headquarters. Not a demonstration; merely waiting to be summoned to jobs. Taxicab drivers stopped by a traffic light, exchanging information on hockey teams. Drunk staggering into the sidewalk exhibit of one of those sellers of toy dogs and destroying several. And immediately settling all arguments by turning over a dollar bill to the owner, then teetering on his way. If I were a defeated politician I'd have my advertisements taken down as soon after election as possible, though that doesn't seem to be the practice.

Bowery stores that sell second-hand clothing and shoes. A bearded derelict bent under the weight of a packing case, which he is trying to carry up a steep stairway. Carnival men, lean and tanned, back from their wanderings over the country. Two panhandlers stopping to talk over their day's take. Old men looking out of the windows of upstairs lobbies of cheap hotels. Ragged youngsters seeking bits of fuel. Unfrosted globes lighting the windows of cheap clothing stores with a hard glare. Five Points, notorious many years ago because of its gangs, now settled down into modern respectability. A stand where partly smoked cigars, the ends neatly scissored, are sold. A gaunt, hollow-eyed man staring into the window of a fish store at a display, the center of which is live lobsters.

The Chelsea piers, where not so long ago great liners were berthed, looking idle and deserted. Where once there was a regular forest of big funnels, only an occasional smokestack. and that of some small coastwise vessel. The various ferry lines doing business as usual, the blunt-nosed boats bowing with the tide as they churn from their slips out into the river. A police launch, unintelligible noises coming from its radio, pushing a white billow as it hurries upstream. Those little tugs, with rope fenders on their bows, still remind me of children with bad colds. and I still find the odor of rotting wood and salt water alluring.

Two youngsters, in a dispute over ownership, tugging at a nondescript dog. and the animal looking as if it were taking no interest in the proceedings. The clang of an anvil in the shadow of Manhattan bridge, one of the few remaining blacksmith shops. Wonder if small-town kids still make rings out of horseshoe nails. A woman, whose voice has power and beauty, running the scales on the upper floor of a tenement. While from below comes the strains of an accordion. Youngsters turning over pennies to a bearded peddler of hot baked potatoes.

Lately there have been numerous reports of British sailors, here on matters vital to the defense of their country, being defrauded because they do not understand the value of our money. A recent instance was that of a young officer who came into Olney inn with 79 cents, the change a cab driver had given him for a $10 bill after hauling him less than a mile. As that was all the money he had, Clara May Downey not only provided him with a meal, but also with transportation back to where he was stationed. (Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

Embracing Mind

The true, strong, and sound mind is the mind that can embrace equally great things and small.—Samuel Johnson.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste. Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But if they become clogged, their work is not done as nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and spoil the whole body machinery.

DOAN'S PILLS

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is better than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's Pills have been helping new lifelines for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

BEACONS OF SAFETY

Like a beacon light on the height—the advertisements in newspapers direct you to newer, better and easier ways of providing the things needed or desired. It shows, this beacon of newspaper advertising—and it will be to your advantage to follow it whenever you make a purchase.

STAGE, SCREEN, RADIO
By VIRGINIA VALE
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

CUNNING Nancy Walker is the latest Broadwayite to win Hollywood favor. Nancy's busy at present with a featured role in the stage success, "Best Foot Forward," and will report at the Metro studios when the final curtain comes down on that delightful comedy, in which she is making her theatrical debut.

Want to go into the movies, girls? The best advice would seem to be "Get a job as an airline stewardess." Mary Sheppard is the latest recruit who took that route; she was taken off an airliner and given the lead role in Pete Smith's short, "What About Daddy?"

Robert Benchley's all set to be a busy man. All set for the role of a stage producer in Paramount's "Out of the Frying Pan," he discovered that he was also booked to be Rosalind Russell's business partner in "Take a Letter, Darling," the two films to be made simultaneously. A bicycle or a motor-driven wheel chair seems to be the only solution to the problem of getting from set to set.

When you see "Louisiana Purchase" take a long look at Jean Wallace "Mrs. Franchot Tone" and Lynda Gray. They're New Orleans belles in the picture, and Paramount liked them so much that they've just been given new contracts.

Asia, famous canine of "The Thin Man" series, has a plaque all his own, to hang in his dog house. It was awarded by the McKinley Kennel club of Canton, Ohio, for "outstanding service to canine friends and the work he has done to gain appreciation for all dogdom." The perfect rector from all the rest of dogdom is, of course, that few dogs belong to people like Myrna Loy.

Nelson Eddy has co-starred with Jeanette MacDonald in eight films, but only recently found out what she really looked like. During the filming of their recent picture, "I Married an Angel," he asked if he might model a head of her. "You never know what a person looks like till you paint or model that person," said he. Seems that her jaw line wasn't as he'd remembered it, and her eyes were set differently. Said she, "He knows what I look like now! He peered at me so much and so long that I was embarrassed."

David James, the 11-month-old baby whom Marlene Dietrich was carrying in her arms when she tripped over a light cable and broke her leg, recently resumed his film career, in Rosalind Russell's new picture. This time Fred MacMurray toted him.

Charles Laughton sort of starlets the catwalkers nowadays when he shows up for that radio program he's doing with Milton Berle. He looks like a Forty-niner, with an inch-long beard and a month's growth of hair—both required for his role in RKO's "Tuttles of Tahiti." Incidentally, if Laughton goes on making pictures he'll be an expert dancer; he learned the conga for "It Started With Eve," and the hula for this new picture; he did the hula recently at a broadcast rehearsal, with Shirley Ross playing "Aloha Oe" on the piano.

Jack Benny has never lived down his "Buck Benny" routines that were featured on his NBC series a few seasons ago, and later incorporated into one of his motion pictures. "Buck" has become his nickname—the rest of the cast never calls him anything else.

ODDS AND ENDS—Several well known singers will be started in the new musical program, as yet untitled, which makes its bow on CBS January 7th. . . . William L. Shirer always holds an informal discussion of international affairs after his broadcast. . . . Ann Shepherd, of "Joyce Jordan—Girl Intern," posed for publicity pictures at a New York hospital recently, and now she's "interned" for all her spare time. . . . Irene Rich, famous on both radio and screen, has been given a leading role in Metro's "Just Between Us." . . . Bobo Ruth has finally signed up to play herself in "The Life of Lou Gehrig."

Signs of Zodiac Had Significance In Middle Ages

The peculiar figures constituting the signs of the Zodiac are generally looked upon merely as a curiosity today, but they once were credited with strange powers.

During the Middle Ages the 12 signs were supposed to influence human life. As a result each sign was connected with a different part of the body in addition to being associated with various months of the year. The Zodiac itself is an imaginary band in the sky within which lie the apparent paths of the sun, moon and major planets.

Unlike the present calendar which will begin the new year 1942 on January 1, the Babylonian year began in April.

Because rains were sacrificed to the gods during this month, it was associated with Aries, the ram.

APRIL
Aries, the Ram

OCTOBER

JANUARY
Capricorn, the Goat

AUGUST
Leo, the Lion

FEBRUARY
Aquarius, the Waterman

SEPTEMBER
Virgo, the Virgin

MARCH
Pisces, the Fishes

May (Taurus, the bull) brought the approach of summer with the sun being conceived as a bull who plowed his way among the stars. June (Gemini, the twins) was represented by Castor and Pollux, twin sons of Zeus and Leda.

The backward motion of the crab was associated with July (Cancer, the crab), the month when the sun began to retreat toward the horizon. Culmination of the sun's heat came in August. This was represented by Leo, the lion—the ancient symbol of fire.

September (Virgo, the virgin) celebrated Ishtar's descent into Hades in search of her husband. The ancients recognized the balance of day and night which occurred during October (Libra, the balance).

Scorpio, the scorpion, symbolized the darkness of November following the decline of the sun after the autumn equinox. December was represented by the figure of the archer, Sagittarius, god of war. January (Capricorn, the goat) symbolized the nurse which cared for the young gods of the sun.

Even the weather was recognized by the men who drew up the signs of the Zodiac. February (Aquarius, the waterman) was associated with the heavy rains which periodically flooded the Nile river. March (Pisces, the fishes) marked the month when labor was resumed in the fields.

It is believed that Homo Signorum, or Man of Signs, was originated about 1300 A. D. The actual signs of the Zodiac, however, were known for many centuries before.

Two-Week Celebration
Fourteen days are needed in Japan to celebrate the coming of the new year. During the festival streets are made lively by stilt-walking, top-spinning, jumping, ball-playing and rope-pulling. While the youths are enjoying the outdoor sports, the older people write New Year's poems or play games. After two weeks of revelry the festival is brought to a close by burning the kado-matsu and other decorations put up for the celebration.

That Child

By JOHN C. HEYWOOD
(McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

PEOPLE have said that I use the catch in my knee, born of an old wound; to incite sympathy or to bring me to a halt when some touch of humanity attracts my attention. It may be so. Sometimes a limping gait opens a door that would otherwise be shut to me.

One day I was taking a brisk walk in the Park and had just rounded a corner fringed with hydrangea bushes when I saw, a little further on, an extremely pretty woman seated on a bench. In front of her, digging in the soil where the feet of many had killed the grass roots was a little child. Instantly the abominable catch came into my knee. I limped to the bench and sat down. She was well-dressed, in good style, and as I glanced at her face I thought I saw a look of sympathy in her eyes.

"You have an attractive child," I ventured, hoping to be forgiven the lie, for it was dirty and rather unwholesome looking.

"It is not mine," she answered curtly.

"Oh, I beg your pardon. A natural mistake, perhaps."

She turned her face away. But under some circumstances I have found conversational bread cast adroitly returned without waiting, so I continued.

"It must give you much pleasure to have charge of a pretty child like that."

"It doesn't. I—" She stopped suddenly and leaned toward the child. A park policeman rounded the corner. He eyed us both, a steady, inclusive stare, and went on. At the next corner he stopped, turned, looked at us again and went on. The child, who had been watching him, rose unsteadily to its feet. It toddled to me, placed its dirty little paws on my light trousers, and said "Da-da."

"Oh, I am tremendously relieved." The woman's face brightened. She took up her book as though to go. "Your child, isn't it?"

"My child! Good heavens, no!" "But she called you Dada!" "I don't care what she called me! I never saw the kid before." I was mystified. What sort of a plan was this? The child, having apparently claimed me, went back to the soil.

"Be careful," the woman said in a low voice. "Here comes that man again; he's watching us!"

The policeman came briskly up the path. I was about to call to him, leaning forward to do so when the woman said "Don't. Don't speak to him. Talk as if you had known me all your life."

And I did: The policeman passed on.

"Now," I spoke sternly. "Please explain. You must realize this is—er—rather a peculiar situation."

"Peculiar! It's—it's horrible!" She had a most attractive voice. "I never saw that dirty little brat until half an hour ago. I was sitting here reading when she—if it is a she—came running round that corner and settled in that dust."

"I took no notice of it. Then that park policeman came along and—er—eyed me. I knew after that if I got up and went away he'd be after me for deserting my child, get me in court or something. It would kill me. Whose is it, do you suppose?"

"How on earth should I know?" "But she—it called you Dada as soon as you sat down, and you came from that direction." She looked at me with suspicion clearly developed.

I told her why I sat down, about my knee and was going on to describe the pain when the policeman passed again. He was clearly watching us, had no doubt had experiences of people leaving other things than luncheon debris in the park.

When he had rounded the corner the woman continued. "If you really don't own the child—or won't—it looks as though we were both in the same boat. Being a gentleman you cannot leave me in my distress and I can't go and leave you because that man will come along and if you say it isn't yours, suspicion, of course, will fall on me. He will come after me. What shall we do?"

In the distance I saw the park policeman coming toward us. Instead, however, of passing, he crossed the sward. I felt the woman stiffen. But the policeman did not hesitate. He went straight to the child and picked it up in his arms.

"Now, Buddy, it's time to go home," and to the woman he said, "Thank you, ma'am, for keepin' an eye on him."

Post Office 'Gestapo' Claim
The Los Angeles post office department has set itself up as a "little Gestapo," according to Attorney George Acret. He has attacked the constitutionality of the statute in a precedent-setting federal complaint. The constitutional questions, involving a post office fraud order, comes under provisions of an order issued by Postmaster A. E. Harwood of La Verne, who has stopped all of the mail of W. H. Neher of La Verne, returning it to the senders marked "fraudulent."

Neher was forbidden use of the mails at a Washington session, through investigation of a "Cosmic Generator" machine.

According to Attorney Acret, the post office department is condemning persons to starvation without the formality of a court trial.

The Greatest Scout

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

SPEAK of a "great scout, guide and Indian fighter," and the average American will think immediately of "Buffalo Bill" Cody. But old timers will tell you that there were probably a dozen men on the Western frontier who were Cody's equals, or even his superiors, in any of those three roles. If you press them to name "the greatest of them all," the chances are they'll reply "Frank Grouard."

FRANK GROUARD

When Gen. George Crook started on his expedition against the hostile Sioux and Cheyennes in the spring of 1876, Grouard went along as a scout and made himself so valuable to Crook that this famous Indian fighter once said, "I would sooner lose a third of my command than to lose Frank Grouard."

In the early '90s he was living in Sheridan, Wyo., and there a young fellow from Wisconsin, who had gone west to practice dentistry, met Grouard and a number of other famous frontier characters. This "tenderfoot" was Dr. Will Frackelton, and his recently published book, "Sagebrush Dentist," (A. C. McClure and Company, Chicago), written in collaboration with Herman Gastrell Seely, a Chicago newspaper man, is a notable addition to the literature of the Old West. In it, "Doc" Frackelton tells several hitherto-unpublished stories about this great scout.

Dr. Frackelton

One of these particularly interesting because the incident involves both Grouard and "Buffalo Bill."

"Frank Grouard was as taciturn as Cody was loquacious. Grouard was modest, Cody liked the limelight, and there was no love lost between them. I suspect that Grouard resented the publicity given Buffalo Bill's exploits, many of which were of doubtful authenticity, and the deference paid him by some of the army officers," writes Frackelton.

"They met one night in the Sheridan inn barroom and it was Cody who came off second best. Buffalo Bill was wearing his show clothes—beaded buckskin coat and jacket and enormous hat—and was swaggeringly convivial. It required little urging to have him tell his favorite story of the killing of the Cheyenne chief, Yellow Hand. He jumped on a stool, head thrown back and long hair falling about his shoulders, while we gathered around.

"Grouard walked in with quiet, catlike tread and asked for some cigars. Cody paused in the middle of his story.

"Go on, go on," we shouted.

"No," said Cody a little thickly. "Here is my old friend, Frank Grouard. I'll now buy the drinks."

"Grouard was not a drinking man. Buffalo Bill grew more insistent. 'Come on. Everybody belly up to the bar and drink with me.'

"Grouard shook his head. Infuriated, Cody blustered: 'Hey, you, belly up there! Can't you hear?'

"Grouard stepped forward and the men faced each other. Cody, in his show clothes, weighed about 195 pounds and Grouard, in his inconspicuous civilians, about 220. They were of equal height but Grouard's tremendous breadth of shoulder made him seem the shorter.

"Grouard's eyes sent cold chills down my spine. Quietly, and in that deep, determined voice of his he said: 'You are nothing but a picture book scout and a picture book showman. That's all you ever were and that's all you ever will be.'

"Then Grouard's voice dropped into a line of personal profanity, very emphatic but too low for us to hear. Cody straightened up, and for a moment it looked like a fight. Grouard eyed him, then walked over got his cigars and left the hotel."

While living in Sheridan Grouard met Joe de Barthe, correspondent of the New York Sun, who urged him to tell the story of his life. "What good'll that do?" asked Grouard, "People won't believe it." But de Barthe was insistent and the scout finally consented to dictate it to the newspaperman. The result was the volume "Life and Adventures of Frank Grouard," first published in St. Joseph, Mo., in 1894. It is now one of the rarities of Western Americana and a first edition of it—if you can find one—sells for anywhere from $25 to $50 a copy.

Perhaps Official Wasn't Very Good at History

A famous alienist met a certain prominent official. After some discussion on the mentally unsound, the official asked: "If a person is insane?"

"Doctor, how do you really tell 'Oh, we merely ask a few ordinary questions which ordinary people can answer correctly?'"

"What type of questions?" "Well," replied the alienist, "this sort of thing: Captain Cook made three voyages around the world and died on one of them. Which was it?"

"Oh, I say," objected the official, "I'm afraid I've forgotten which one it was."

AROUND THE HOUSE

An ordinary blackboard eraser is an excellent polisher for window panes.

Picture frames should be selected to harmonize with the pictures for which they are intended.

A teaspoon of salt added to the water in which eggs are boiled makes them easier to remove from the shells.

In mixing flour and water for grayies, use a fork or egg beater to make it smooth and free from lumps.

A termite shield must be made of some material that ants cannot work through. Metal is the best one, because anti-tight joints can be made in metals.

If you like a faint flavor of onion rub a slice of onion around your salad bowl or serving dish. The resulting flavor is light, but satisfactory. Garlic, used in the same manner, requires much more careful handling, since fewer people enjoy a garlic taste.

Tenderness of Life

What seems to grow fairer to me as life goes by is the love and grace and tenderness of it; not its wit and cleverness and grandeur of knowledge—grand as knowledge is—but just the laughter of little children and the friendship of friends, and the cozy talk of the fireside, and the sight of flowers, and the sound of music.

Cigarette ashes, put on potted plants, will kill the insects that often infest them.

HIGH PRICES Do Not Go WITH ADVERTISING

Advertising and high prices do not go together at all. They are extremely incompatible to each other. It is only the product which is unadvertised, which has no established market, that costs more than you can afford to pay. Whenever you go into a store and buy an item of advertised merchandise, it doesn't make any difference what you are getting more for your money—more in quality and service—than you would get if you spent the same amount for something which was not advertised.

Colonial refers merely to the time before the Union was formed. New England and Virginia were settled by the English, New York by the Dutch and Louisiana by the French. # Knox Makes Blunt Report on Hawaii: Army and Navy Losses Set at 2,897 In Surprise Attack on Pearl Harbor; Battleship Arizona Among Craft Sunk

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

HAWAII: A Report

From Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, just back from a flying inspection trip to Hawaii came a report the nation had anxiously awaited—the extent of damage done by the Japanese in their first blast at Pearl Harbor and Honolulu. Army and navy casualties were set at 2,897 dead, 879 wounded and 28 missing. Six warships, including one battleship, the Arizona, went down.

Knox was blunt in establishing his points. First he said that Japan failed in what it set out to do—knockout the United States in the Pacific before the war actually got under way. Second, his report stated "The United States services were not on the alert against the surprise air attack on Hawaii. This sole serious attempt against U. S. territory in any volume, and to task the Japanese apparently had dedicated about 200-odd planes, which probably meant at least two aircraft carriers.

The chief Japanese objective unquestionably was Malaya and Burma, with Singapore as a necessary battle before the Japs could consider any permanent success had been theirs.

The cutting of the Burma road was another, but this, it could be realized, would only relieve the pressure from the Chinese army, and would enable the Japanese to remove forces from China only after a long period.

The vital need of Japan was oil, oil and more oil, without which it would be impossible for her to keep her fleet moving, her planes in the air, or to prosecute any sort of war at all.

And this oil was in the Dutch East Indies. Against successful occupation of any of these oil-bearing islands two great obstacles stand.

The Philippines stand astride the China sea at a point where it is only about 500 miles wide, and the huge Singapore base closes the neck of hoped-for Japanese operations at the east.

Hence the most serious invasion effort was made by the Japs via Indo-China and Thailand, with the landings at Malaya; an effort to make the British tenure of the long neck ending in Singapore untenable.

The secondary attack was on the Philippines, chiefly to obtain naval and air bases far enough outside the circle of the island defenses to permit a serious effort at capture.

Army watchers saw little chance that the Japs would spread themselves out thin enough to attempt a strong attack on Hawaii or on the West coast.

While 99 per cent of the "air raids" reported on American continental cities had been rumors or tests, home defense was bustling ahead.

Blackouts were being practiced busily from one coast to the other, and the rules during air raids were being read and re-read in American homes, while men, women and children repeated to themselves the magic words "keep calm, stay at home, lie down"—and all the rest of the litany.

From it all was coming a stronger realization that home defense was needed chiefly to bind the morale of the nation, and as an ever-present safeguard against fifth-column activities, of which there was more than a little.

The sabotage-fifth-column activities in the United States were not, of course, a fraction of what they were in Manila nor in Hawaii, but they were serious and the widespread calling out of the home guards had a much more important effect than did the same move in the last war when territorial United States was safer from attack.

First evidences of the dangers of Pacific shipping were the mandatory halting of rubber tire sales pending a permanent rationing plan, and the freezing of all stocks of sugar.

From these the nation learned it was at war and the man in the street began slowly to get the idea that it was not play.

CHINESE: Fight Jap Rear

Though the troops necessarily were of the guerrilla type, there were reports that the Chinese were making a serious and important attack on the Japanese rear in the Canton neighborhood, a most welcome diversion as the British sought to hang onto Hongkong.

Hongkong was reported completely surrounded by Japanese troops, and the British did admit that their troops had been withdrawn from Kowloon, its stronghold on the mainland, about 20 miles north of Hongkong itself.

The British, however, had said it was part of their plan to abandon Kowloon and to concentrate on a defense of hilly Hongkong itself.

The Chinese attack, they said, tended to divert the Japanese from attempting to attack Hongkong from the Kowloon side.

Messages of cheer following the triple war declarations went back and forth from time to time between the British and American commanders and Chiang Kai-shek at Chungking.

BRITISH: In Malaya

The frightful loss suffered by the British fleet in the first days of the Malaya campaign, in which two capital ships, the Prince of Wales and the Repulse, totaling practically 70,000 tons, had gone to the bottom either the victims of Jap submarines or planes or both, had been somewhat offset by the steady resistance of the troops to Japanese advancing efforts.

By the time the war was in its second week the British were able to report that the "Malayan advance of the Japanese was at a standstill."

The British commanders seemed to have been able to fathom the general Jap plan of attack, and to meet it step by step with the loss of as little ground as possible until something like a plain battle-line could be developed.

Day after day the report had been "the situation in Malaya continues to be confused."

Finally the British stated that they were "holding the invaders to a standstill," and that the battle was being "confined to the northern jungles."

RUSSIAN: Refuse Peace

An effort by the Nazis to make peace with Russia in order that their armies might hibernate in their present positions and renew the war in the spring was indignantly turned aside by the Soviet, which had the victory taste in its mouth and was not to be denied.

Daily dispatches from Red army headquarters continued to develop the victory not only on the southern front, where it all started, but in front of Moscow as well, where the Russians said the German retreat was becoming a panic-stricken rout. The Nazis, they said, were blowing up tanks in the path of the advancing Russians, and were abandoning hundreds of vehicles and guns.

War cannot be fought at 17 degrees below zero, Hitler had told his people in announcing that "no further effort at advance would be made in Russia during the winter."

"Yes it can," shouted the Russians, as, dressed in their warm clothing and with the enthusiasm given them by one success after another they continued to move the Germans back.

The Red's figures were so large as to be almost unbelievable. They claimed 75,000 Germans killed in front of Moscow.

Their total claim for German losses during the entire campaign was 5,000,000 dead, wounded, prisoners.

Though the Russians did not immediately declare war on Japan, Litvinoff, new embassy to Washington, called Japan "the common enemy," another "of the gang of Axis criminals," and indicated that Russia would be glad to "do anything to help."

DEFENSE: At Home

Grim reality of war has come to many U. S. coastal cities. Here in this startling picture big ramparts of sand bags are being hastily constructed in front of one of the telephone company's buildings in San Francisco.

While 99 per cent of the "air raids" reported on American continental cities had been rumors or tests, home defense was bustling ahead.

Blackouts were being practiced busily from one coast to the other, and the rules during air raids were being read and re-read in American homes, while men, women and children repeated to themselves the magic words "keep calm, stay at home, lie down"—and all the rest of the litany.

They are being built hurriedly to prevent sabotage, now that America is at war with Japan. Also each guardhouse will be a powerful searchlight, with armed guards inside.

Patrol Chief

Maj. Gen. John F. Curry, who has been named national commander of the Civil Air patrol. He will seek enlistment of 50,000 licensed pilots and 50,000 student pilots.

Here is one of the war's first heroes—Capt. Colin P. Kelly, who was killed while making a daring air attack on the Japanese battleship Haruna in a battle off the Philippines. He was credited with scoring three direct bomb hits on the vessel, leaving it in flames and later it sank. Kelly was an army flier and former West Pointer.

fact calls for a formal investigation which will be initiated immediately by the President. Further action is, of course, dependent on the facts and recommendations made by this investigating board. We are all entitled to know if (a) there was any error of judgment which contributed to the surprise, and (b) if there was any dereliction of duty prior to the attack.

The secretary of the navy went on to point out that after the battle began the defense by both army and navy was "conducted skillfully and bravely." He pointed out many incidents of individual heroism, though the report did not mention the heroes by name.

Equally blunt was his statement of material and personnel losses. The navy lost the battleship Arizona, three destroyers, a mine layer and the old target ship Utah. In addition damage was inflicted to other vessels and Knox said some of these would take weeks and others months to repair.

He said that the entire rest of the fleet was now out on the Pacific seeking action with the enemy. Morale on the islands was high, said Knox.

Main army losses consisted of planes caught on the ground. Hangars were also damaged.

Enemy losses were declared to be three submarines and 41 aircraft.

PLAN: Of Japanese

As the war with Japan progressed, and as Germany and Italy walked into the picture unbidden, Americans began to get a slightly clearer vision of just what the campaign of Nippon aimed at, and what it was likely to accomplish before the United States got its war machine moving in high gear.

It soon became evident that the disastrous raid on Hawaii had probably succeeded far beyond Japan's wildest hopes, but that it had been simply a "nuisance raid" in the first place, and not made with any faintest hope of occupying the islands.

The attacks on Guam, Midway, Wake islands were, on the other hand, apparent efforts to take those Pacific outposts, and were made with forces that the Japanese deemed sufficient to do the job.

The effort against the Philippines, however, was just as evidently the sole serious attempt against U. S. territory in any volume, and to task the Japanese apparently had dedicated about 200-odd planes, which probably meant at least two aircraft carriers.

The chief Japanese objective unquestionably was Malaya and Burma, with Singapore as a necessary battle before the Japs could consider any permanent success had been theirs.

The cutting of the Burma road was another, but this, it could be realized, would only relieve the pressure from the Chinese army, and would enable the Japanese to remove forces from China only after a long period.

The vital need of Japan was oil, oil and more oil, without which it would be impossible for her to keep her fleet moving, her planes in the air, or to prosecute any sort of war at all.

And this oil was in the Dutch East Indies. Against successful occupation of any of these oil-bearing islands two great obstacles stand.

The Philippines stand astride the China sea at a point where it is only about 500 miles wide, and the huge Singapore base closes the neck of hoped-for Japanese operations at the east.

Hence the most serious invasion effort was made by the Japs via Indo-China and Thailand, with the landings at Malaya; an effort to make the British tenure of the long neck ending in Singapore untenable.

The secondary attack was on the Philippines, chiefly to obtain naval and air bases far enough outside the circle of the island defenses to permit a serious effort at capture.

Army watchers saw little chance that the Japs would spread themselves out thin enough to attempt a strong attack on Hawaii or on the West coast.

While 99 per cent of the "air raids" reported on American continental cities had been rumors or tests, home defense was bustling ahead.

Blackouts were being practiced busily from one coast to the other, and the rules during air raids were being read and re-read in American homes, while men, women and children repeated to themselves the magic words "keep calm, stay at home, lie down"—and all the rest of the litany.

From it all was coming a stronger realization that home defense was needed chiefly to bind the morale of the nation, and as an ever-present safeguard against fifth-column activities, of which there was more than a little.

The sabotage-fifth-column activities in the United States were not, of course, a fraction of what they were in Manila nor in Hawaii, but they were serious and the widespread calling out of the home guards had a much more important effect than did the same move in the last war when territorial United States was safer from attack.

First evidences of the dangers of Pacific shipping were the mandatory halting of rubber tire sales pending a permanent rationing plan, and the freezing of all stocks of sugar.

From these the nation learned it was at war and the man in the street began slowly to get the idea that it was not play.

CHINESE: Fight Jap Rear

Though the troops necessarily were of the guerrilla type, there were reports that the Chinese were making a serious and important attack on the Japanese rear in the Canton neighborhood, a most welcome diversion as the British sought to hang onto Hongkong.

Hongkong was reported completely surrounded by Japanese troops, and the British did admit that their troops had been withdrawn from Kowloon, its stronghold on the mainland, about 20 miles north of Hongkong itself.

The British, however, had said it was part of their plan to abandon Kowloon and to concentrate on a defense of hilly Hongkong itself.

The Chinese attack, they said, tended to divert the Japanese from attempting to attack Hongkong from the Kowloon side.

Messages of cheer following the triple war declarations went back and forth from time to time between the British and American commanders and Chiang Kai-shek at Chungking.

BRITISH: In Malaya

The frightful loss suffered by the British fleet in the first days of the Malaya campaign, in which two capital ships, the Prince of Wales and the Repulse, totaling practically 70,000 tons, had gone to the bottom either the victims of Jap submarines or planes or both, had been somewhat offset by the steady resistance of the troops to Japanese advancing efforts.

By the time the war was in its second week the British were able to report that the "Malayan advance of the Japanese was at a standstill."

The British commanders seemed to have been able to fathom the general Jap plan of attack, and to meet it step by step with the loss of as little ground as possible until something like a plain battle-line could be developed.

Day after day the report had been "the situation in Malaya continues to be confused."

Finally the British stated that they were "holding the invaders to a standstill," and that the battle was being "confined to the northern jungles."

RUSSIAN: Refuse Peace

An effort by the Nazis to make peace with Russia in order that their armies might hibernate in their present positions and renew the war in the spring was indignantly turned aside by the Soviet, which had the victory taste in its mouth and was not to be denied.

Daily dispatches from Red army headquarters continued to develop the victory not only on the southern front, where it all started, but in front of Moscow as well, where the Russians said the German retreat was becoming a panic-stricken rout. The Nazis, they said, were blowing up tanks in the path of the advancing Russians, and were abandoning hundreds of vehicles and guns.

War cannot be fought at 17 degrees below zero, Hitler had told his people in announcing that "no further effort at advance would be made in Russia during the winter."

"Yes it can," shouted the Russians, as, dressed in their warm clothing and with the enthusiasm given them by one success after another they continued to move the Germans back.

The Red's figures were so large as to be almost unbelievable. They claimed 75,000 Germans killed in front of Moscow.

Their total claim for German losses during the entire campaign was 5,000,000 dead, wounded, prisoners.

Though the Russians did not immediately declare war on Japan, Litvinoff, new embassy to Washington, called Japan "the common enemy," another "of the gang of Axis criminals," and indicated that Russia would be glad to "do anything to help."

DEEP WATER ISLAND

by ALAN LEMAY

INSTALLMENT FOUR

THE STORY SO FAR: Karen Water-son, divorced by her lawyer, John Colt, who she has a claim to the island estate and fortune of her grandfather, Garrett Waterson, arrives in Honolulu to attempt to gain control of the property. Here she meets Richard Wayne, or Tonga Dick, as he is known throughout the South Pacific. He is a member of the Wayne family, who has been in control of her grandfather's island, Alakoa, since the old man's disappearance. Although Tonga Dick knows who she is, Karen attempts to conceal her identity from him. Dick offers to take her sailing and she accepts. Dick goes to the home of his half-brothers, Ernest and Willard, for a conference regarding their interest in Alakoa. In the course of their discussion it is revealed that the Wayne family obtained the island for a small sum and under the direction of the boys' uncle, James Wayne, it has been developed to where it has assets of around three million dollars. Next day as Dick takes Karen sailing she learns that he knows who she is and that he is taking her to Honolulu but he refuses to take her. New continue with the story.

CHAPTER IV

She drew into herself, then. After a while Tonga Dick Wayne went aft to stand beside the man at the wheel, but Karen remained at the rail, her eyes on Alakoa.

For a long time the island drew no nearer. The Holokai seemed fixed at a given distance from her goal, racing across a restless sea which forever interposed itself. Under Karen's feet the deck of the little vessel pulsed between the steady boom of her Diesel and the shock of the smooth swells she was smashing to pieces as she drove.

Stealing a glance over her shoulder, Karen saw that Dick himself now took the wheel.

Very much alive with a definite concentration, Tonga Dick Wayne spun his vessel through Alakoa's treacherous shoals. A Hawaiian boy was in the bow with a lead line, his eyes turned to Dick's face, but Dick did not call for the lead. A great mound of water rose under the taffrail of the Holokai, slamming her shoreward like a surfboard before it broke and raced along her counter in a thrashing roar.

Then suddenly upon the little schooner there was silence—unexpected, but complete and final. The engine quit, and the voice of the reef diminished surprisingly, until it seemed no more than a whisper. Effortlessly, on so even a keel that she seemed to glide upon glass, the Holokai drifted under a single scrap of sail into Alakoa's little harbor.

So absorbing was her interest in the little port that for a while she forgot Tonga Dick; she was even unaware of the scrutiny of a hundred pairs of eyes—mostly those of small brown-skinned boys who swam beside the slowing Holokai. What occupied Karen now was this unfamiliar soil where her father had been born: this land which even yet, if John Colt was to be believed, belonged to her.

At one side, just behind the beach, an old warehouse ran, long and low, silver-gray from uncounted rains. It was half smothered in a tangle of sea grapes, and over one end hung a vast flame tree of the brightest crimson Karen had ever seen. Out from it ran a massive but crazily leaning pier; and all except the pier seemed lost in the riot of coconuts and hula palms, breadfruit trees and banyans, which made a veritable jungle behind the beach. This ruined development was the old Waterson layout.

But the pier that Garrett Waterson had built was not the principal landing any more. Farther to the west the Wayne landing stood, a modern concrete dock, long and clean-cut. Behind it a number of long, handsome stucco buildings stood, set in parallel. The roadways between them were ornamented with neat rows of date palms, and here everything was well planned, efficient, and clean.

One hundred yards from the beach the Holokai's anchor roared down, splashing water higher than her booms; and now Dick Wayne was standing beside Karen again.

He spoke to her with an impersonal courtesy.

"The ladder's down. If you're ready to go ashore—"

"No doubt that is very funny," Karen said incisively. "Your jokes are perfectly killing. But meantime I am virtually your prisoner, for reasons of your own that I know nothing about. And I don't like it at all."

Dick Wayne spoke again, his voice very low and gentle. "I'm sorry it worked out this way," he said. "Of course, I understand how you feel. I promise you that things will be made as comfortable as possible for you while you're here. My brothers are in Honolulu, and there's no one you'll have to talk to here."

Karen Waterson's anger died out. This man could put her into white blazes of temper, but, curiously, she did not hate him when the anger was gone. Her tremendous curiosity about Alakoa came on her again, as strongly as if the heart of the island itself were pulling upon every part of her.

She glanced at Tonga Dick, who, as usual, was not looking at her; and, after a moment more, silently went down the ladder into the shore-boat.

"Well, best your line, Hokaso!"

A white blaze was in the old man's eyes and every muscle of his body seemed to tremble.

Karen Waterson landed upon Alakoa: fascinated, deeply stirred, and afraid.

"Your uncle," Charles Wong said, "is very anxious to see you at once."

Ever since Tonga Dick and Karen had arrived, the tall Chinese, secretary to James Wayne, had been hovering near Dick—if Charles Wong could be said to hover. Charles Wong, who had never seen China, showed in his tall and bony frame the stamp of the Manchu, but about him was no mannerism belonging to the Oriental.

Dick was troubled because his uncle had not come out to meet him. "He's in bed?"

"No; he's supposed to be, but nobody can keep him there."

"Well—I'll go right in."

Yet Dick hesitated; he was wondering whether he had better ask the advice of Charles Wong. After all, it was two years since Tonga Dick had met his uncle face to face.

"This girl," Charles Wong said hesitantly, "this girl—" He stopped. Dick Wayne was startled. It was as if the Chinese had read his mind. He remained silent, waiting.

"I was just thinking," Charles Wong said after a moment, "that perhaps it might be unwise, considering your uncle's condition, to introduce a stranger now. I mean, if perhaps we just said nothing—"

"Charles," Dick said, "that girl is Karen Waterson."

He went striding off through the big koa-wood rooms, leaving the secretary paralyzed under the weight of a hundred unanswered questions. James Wayne, deeply swathed in blankets, sat behind a vast desk. His handclasp was quick and strong, as it always had been, though Dick thought there was a tremor in it now.

For the first time, Dick Wayne was looking at his uncle and seeing an old man. Haggard, gray-skinned, deep-carved with the lines which the years had saved up for him, only to mark him with them suddenly, over night—the face of James Wayne was almost unrecognizable to Dick.

"I got your radio, sir," Dick said. "I came on under all power as soon as the message was in."

"I should think," his uncle said slowly, "you would have come anyway, without so urgent an appeal."

Even, Dick noticed, James Wayne's voice had changed; it sounded weary and dry. His old temperate manner of speech, was there, and the courtesy, almost like kindness, which had marked his speech all his life, even when dealing with his enemies, was there; but a rustiness was in it now.

James Wayne's eyes were fixed hard on Tonga Dick's face, and those eyes, clear and direct as ever, now seemed to burn. "Is there any message?" he demanded sharply.

"No message, sir," he said. "Despatches, then?"

"No, sir."

James Wayne stared at him, his eyes boring hard into Tonga Dick. "You mean to say—you mean to say—no message, no letter—no anything?"

"Nothing, sir."

"Yet—he got the despatch from me? He got the word, at the same time you did?"

"I'm certain of it."

For a moment more they looked at each other, the old man's eyes alight with anger, and in his face—not disbelief, but an inability to accept the answer.

"This is incredible," said James Wayne, his unwinking eyes fastened hard upon Tonga Dick's face.

Dick said nothing, and the moments ticked by in such a silence that Dick thought he could count the pulsing of his own heart.

"If this is true," James Wayne said sharply, "then how does it happen that you are here?"

"I'm here against my orders."

Silence again; but now after a moment more Dick saw the light of anger and unbelief die out of his uncle's eyes, giving way to a bleak fatality.

"Name of God!" James Wayne said, his voice low and thick. "Name of God!"

He turned his head and looked out the window, across the darkening fog; and that slight movement emphasized the stillness with which he sat, hardly seeming to breathe. By clear daylight you could see the bay from that window, miles away and far below. Nothing was to be seen there now.

When James Wayne spoke again his voice was flat and dead. It was as if their interchange was over, with nothing more to be said, and that the words he now spoke were routine words, hopeless of result.

"If you've talked with your brothers," James Wayne said, "you know the situation here."

"Yes," said Dick.

"Have you seen this man John Colt?"

"Only at a distance, sir."

"I've seen him," James Wayne said, speaking without emotion. "An acquisitive and predatory type, almost a piratic type; but a man born to succeed, in his way."

"But the girl I have not seen," Dick's uncle said now. "This Karen Waterson—have you seen her, Dick?"

Tonga Dick hesitated. "Yes," he said at last.

"What does she look like?" James Wayne demanded, his voice rising a little. "Does she look hard? Does she appear grasping—predatory?"

Tonga Dick stirred uneasily. "No," he said after a moment.

"Yet she must be," James Wayne said, his voice vibrant. "That girl is evidently made of something harder than glass."

James Wayne had always spoken well; but at the same time he had always spoken briefly, choosing few words. Except for the curtness of anger, Dick had never seen him speak with emotion before. Now, as James Wayne fell silent, Dick wished that he were away.

"Dick," James Wayne said with a deep conviction, "I don't believe she's his granddaughter at all."

"My brothers told me," Dick said. "That they had thoroughly investigated that; they say that her claim of identity can be substantiated in any court."

"I suppose," James Wayne said wearily, "we may assume that the claim of relationship will be substantiated—at least to the satisfaction of the court. Beyond that—beyond that, what is your impression of her case?"

"My advice," Tonga Dick said, "is to settle at once, out of court, at the cost of any compromise whatever. This case must never come to trial. If it comes to trial, they will win."

A strange thing happened then. The immobile, apparently bloodless figure of James Wayne suddenly galvanized with such an explosion of energy as Dick had never seen James Wayne use. The old man shot straight up, and behind him the heavy chair crashed onto its back, and the blankets fell away to a muffle about his legs. A white blaze was in the old man's eyes, and every muscle of his body seemed to tremble.

"Not!" he shouted. "No, I say! Never while I live! Not one cent—not one cent—"

The door opened and Charles Wong was there, and his thick glasses were beseeching upon Tonga Dick's face. In the moment's silence the blaze within James Wayne seemed to die away. Charles Wong picked up the chair, and the old man accepted it. Deftly the tall Chinese sought to rearrange the blankets.

"Dick," James Wayne said, "you know and I know there's a way to break this case."

Dick was silent; but it was the silence of a tentative assent.

"We've come to a showdown," his uncle said. "We've got to show down our cards—both yours and mine."

"Are you sure you want that?" Dick asked.

"It begins to look as if there isn't any other way."

"I'm afraid there isn't, sir. Although—"

"Later," Charles Wong put in. "There's plenty of time for this. Mister Dick, your uncle should not talk any more right now."

Dick attempted to speak, but was checked—partly by his own loss of words and partly by Charles Wong's shaking head. Silently, Tonga Dick Wayne left his uncle's room.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D., Of The Moody Bible Institute, Chicago. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for December 28

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education, used by permission.

THE CHRISTIAN'S HOPE

LESSON TEXT—John 14:1-6; Revelation 22:1-5. GOLDEN TEXT—In my Father's house are many mansions.—John 14:2.

Hope is something this world desperately needs, and which it has all but abandoned. Little wonder when one recalls that the usual meaning of hope is hardly more than "wishful thinking" without any real confidence—and that such hope as men have, has been only in their fellow-men, who have so often grievously failed them.

The Christian's hope—ah, that is something quite different. To him hope is certain expectation resting on the assured Word of God. Such a light only shines brighter as the darkness deepens. As the lights of men's promises and purposes flicker and die out, the hope of God's people shines like a beacon in a dark and stormy night.

How appropriate that we should use the last Sunday of this year to remind one another of that hope, to trim the lamp, as it were, for even brighter shining, as we cast its beams out into the unknown year just ahead. There are three great and helpful things in this lesson.

I. A Sure Promise of Heaven (John 14:1-3).

We are not forgetting that for us who love the Lord there is the blessed hope of His return. He is coming again (v. 3). But whether we have the joy of being caught up to be with Him, or go by way of death, we have a sure promise of the eternal dwelling place which He has prepared for us.

"Let not your heart be troubled"—the very words come like the balm of Gilead upon our restless, troubled lives. Faith in God and in Christ—there we have the sure anchor of the soul. He has promised. We may count on His fulfillment. We show our faith in our fellowmen by trusting their word, even though they often fail us. Shall we not then fully trust the omnipotent, never-failing God?

II. A Safe Way to Heaven (John 14:4-6).

Our Saviour has not just gone before us and bade us follow as best we may, but He is Himself the Way. Having Christ, we have the way. Observe that He does not say that He is the "way-shower," as one religious system names Him. He is not just an example, or the master-teacher, or a martyr to a holy cause. He is "the way, the truth, and the life."

Note, too, that no man comes to the Father but by Christ. Dr. Wilbur M. Smith points out that "the apostle Paul in his epistles constantly emphasizes the truth that we have access to the Father only through the Lord Jesus Christ (Rom. 5:2; Eph. 2:13, 18; 3:15; Heb. 7:25; 10:19-21). Jesus is not one way to God, He is the only way to God. Men cannot come to God through anyone, but only through Christ."

Someone may say, "That's very true, and wonderful. I am a Christian, and I have Christ who is the way. But what is heaven like?"

III. A Symbolic Picture of Heaven (Rev. 22:1-5).

First of all there is "life"—the river of life, the water of life. In heaven there is no death, but only eternal life, blessing, peace, and joy. In this world man lives under the constant shadow of death as the enemy which hurts, destroys, and reminds him of sin. But in heaven all is life through eternity.

"When we've been there ten thousand years / Bright shining as the sun, / We've no less days to sing God's praise / Than when we first begun."

Then we have what Dr. A. C. Gaebelein calls "the seven glories of the redeemed" (vv. 3-5). Let us enumerate them. (1) "No curse"—perfect sinlessness. (2) "The throne of God and of the Lamb shall be therein"—giving perfect and blessed government forever. (3) "His servants shall serve him"—in perfect, unhindered, untiring service. Heaven will not be idleness (perish the thought!), but blessed and happy service for God. (4) "They shall see his face"—an eternal, undimmed vision of God. (5) "His name shall be on their foreheads"—speaking of eternal ownership and possession. (6) "There shall be night no more"—God is the light throughout eternity. No more darkness to fear. (7) "They shall reign forever and ever." Few of us would care to reign in this world, for that brings only sorrow and trouble, but to reign with Him, that indeed will be eternal blessedness.

So then we have—a sure promise of a heaven to which we have a safe way, and concerning which we have such blessed knowledge. But what good is the promise if we do not accept it? What good is the way if we do not receive Him? What good is there in knowing about heaven unless we are going there? "Everybody talks about heaven, ain't going there," sings the folk song. Are you? Or are you only going to talk about it?

FARM TOPICS

FARM PRIORITIES ARE EXPLAINED

Individual Ratings Are Not Needed for Some Items.

By M. CLIFFORD TOWNSEND
(Director, Office of Agricultural Defense Relations.)

Individual farmers are not required to have priority ratings of any kind under the defense program in order to purchase ordinary farm machinery, equipment, repair parts, fertilizers, insecticides, nails, fencing, roofing or similar items.

Priority ratings on equipment and supplies such as these are issued by the Office of Production Management to manufacturers, processors and warehousemen in order to avoid having individuals obtain ratings.

So far as the individual farmer is concerned, he does not have to have a priority rating of any kind to buy his ordinary requirements. There may be things he may not be able to get, such as aluminum pressure cookers, but in cases like this the manufacturer and not the individual farmer is the one affected by the priority rating. On special classes of machinery which are used for purposes other than farming, such as heavy duty electric motors, a preference rating will be necessary. This can be applied for on what is known as a PD-1 form obtainable from the Office of Production Management.

A number of letters have been received from farmers saying their local retailers had advised them it was necessary to secure a "priority rating" before making certain purchases.

Individual farmers who are asked to secure "priority ratings" before making purchases of ordinary equipment or supplies should advise the department of agriculture immediately of the name and address of the dealer and the product on which a priority rating was requested. There's no sense in putting farmers to any more trouble than necessary to get the things they need for food production and we want a chance to explain to the retailers that a "priority rating" is not needed for purchase of products at retail by individuals for ordinary farm or household use.

Blood Transfusions

Save Farm Animals

Blood transfusions, which have saved the lives of thousands of human beings, are now also saving the lives of thousands of dogs, horses, and farm animals—and are being more widely used in veterinary science every day.

"Ring," a collie dog at Waterloo, Iowa, for instance, has given blood to help save the lives of 20 other dogs in the last five years. He gives about a pint of blood for each transfusion and has suffered no ill effect from it, except for a strong craving for water for several days after each transfusion.

Transfusions are also being used for the treatment of navel ill in colts, where it is said that improvement is generally noted within 24 hours after injection of a pint of blood from the dam into the blood stream of the colt. In cases of calf scour, the blood from the dam is also used with excellent results. Sometimes veterinarians also use saline and dextrose solution as a supporting treatment.

In cases of sweet clover poisoning, blood from a herd of cattle which has not had access to clover is now being used to prevent fatalities among clover-poisoned animals.

Although veterinary scientists are unwilling to make definite claims in the matter, according to the American Foundation for Animal Health, they also say that blood from normal or pregnant animals will sometimes overcome certain types of sterility in cattle.

The precautions necessary in human transfusions are also necessary in treating animals. With animals, as with human beings, the blood is seldom transfused directly from one body to another. It is usually drawn into a sterile container before being injected into the sick animal.

It is interesting to note that as new discoveries are made in medical science, they are closely paralleled by similar findings in veterinary science. The American veterinary practitioner is far ahead of other countries in this respect, and his advance in scientific research is perhaps one of the reasons why American livestock is so much better protected from the ravages of diseases and epizootics than the stock of other nations.

Rural Briefs

Cows make their best and most profitable production at from seven to nine years of age, according to a recent study.

A cotton-bagging-for-cotton-bales program, calling for the manufacture and sale of up to 2,000,000 cotton "patterns" or bale covers, has been announced by the U. S. department of agriculture.

Palmyra Island

A little circle of islands 5½ miles long, lying about 975 miles southwest of Honolulu, Hawaii, in the Pacific, is known as Palmyra Island. Here inhabitants have lived at various times during history, but recently the only denizens have been wildlife, including coconut crabs, which feed on the coconuts of the tall coconut trees.

The island has been claimed by both American and British explorers, but the United States took it over again with all the territory of Hawaii in 1893. Until the island was taken over by the navy last December it was considered in the city limits of Honolulu, nearly 1,000 miles distant.

At the present time the navy has a new air station on the coral rock there.

Facts of ADVERTISING

ADVERTISING represents the leadership of a nation. It points the way. We merely follow—follow to new heights of comfort, of convenience, of happiness.

As time goes on advertising is used more and more, and as it is used more we all profit more. It's the way advertising has—

City of Jeanne d'Arc
 Reuen, France, a busy center for weaving, spinning and the manufacture of handkerchiefs, is the city of Jeanne d'Arc. There is the old castle in which she was imprisoned while she awaited trial; a tablet on the archbishop's palace states that she was tried there, and a slab in the marketplace marks the site of the stake where she was burned.

Night Chant Kills Disease
 A Navaho Indian who's unlucky enough to have a bad sprain or to slip accidentally on an icy hill is running the risk of a serious illness, the World Museum Bulletin relates. To he gets the medicine man to hold a "night chant," a nine days ceremony and feast, which blocks the disease on the way.
