Short Stories About Jesse James

Down in southern Missouri in the Ozark mountains stands a tall mountain called the "bald knob," so named on account of its smoothness at the summit resembling in shape to a mammoth door knob.

In the wilderness surrounding the bald knob, lived a queer, illiterate people who followed moon shinning and in the early days, many detectives who dared to venture there in the name of the law, never returned.

Everything went all right until the surveyors got into the territory of the "bald-knobbers," then they met with reverses. They scouted the story told by the surveyors and with letters showing their mission and that they were not sent to make war on the people, the gang insisted that they were federal spies and made preparations to deal with them accordingly.

They took them into the timber, tied them up to trees and had, if not been for the arrival of four men who happened to pass that way, the surveyors would have been shot. The four men came on the scene so suddenly, that the bald-knobbers were shocked, but being accustomed to surprises, they acted quickly. They began to fire, but the four strangers were better in their aim. Two of the six bald-knobbers went down and the remaining four beat a hasty retreat. The strangers untied the grateful surveyors and escorted them out of danger. Thus in another story of Jesse James, never before put into print, he rendered assistance to agents of the government which at the same time, had a standing price on his head.

BLESSED EVENT

The arrival of a daughter, Jan. 20th in the Good Samaritan Hospital in Phoenix, Ariz., to Mr. and Mrs. Montie Gordenhire was a pleasant surprise. Arizona Republic.

1841-INAUGURATION DAY-1941

"I do solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States."

March 4, 1841—"Old Tippecanoe" Harrison, Indian fighter, rides in triumph to be inaugurated President of the United States.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)
INAUGURATION DAY in 1841 was an historic occasion—for several reasons. After one of the most colorful and riotous political contests in the history of the nation the Whigs had succeeded in electing a Presidential candidate for the first time. So they were ready to celebrate in a big way.

Despite a heavy rain, the greatest crowd that had yet attended an inauguration crowded into Washington to see "Old Tippecanoe" Harrison become President. A salute of 26 guns at daybreak heralded the opening of the big celebration.

Early in the morning a carriage, drawn by four white horses, presented by the Whigs of Baltimore, called for him at his hotel. But the general insisted upon riding horseback to his inauguration. Mounted on a white charger, with an escort of mounted marshals, he rode to the Capitol, holding his hat in his hand and waving it to the cheering crowds massed along his route.

Behind him streamed "Tippecanoe clubs" from Virginia and Maryland, dragging floats on each of which was mounted a log cabin with a hard cider barrel in front and a coonskin nailed to the door. Prophetic of the new industrial era just opening in America was a power loom, mounted on a wagon, sent there by a factory at Laurel, Md.

More than 50,000 persons gathered before the east portico of the Capitol to hear his inaugural address—and they heard the longest speech that any President had ever given on that occasion. He stood for an hour, without hat or coat, in the biting wind until he had finished. But that was only the beginning of his hardships.

All the afternoon he stood in a receiving line at the White House, greeting the thousands who streamed past him to shake his hand. That night there were three inaugural balls and the old soldier (he was 68—the oldest man ever elected President), borne up by the excitement of the occasion, attended all three.

served by an American President.

Twenty years later an even more momentous inaugural parade moved through the streets of Washington. In a carriage was James Buchanan, an old man in a rusty swallow-tailed coat, slumped down beside a tall, lanky backwoodsman from Illinois in a new black suit and a shining high, augurated in 1800, again soldiers were on guard because there had been threats against his life. But again fears for the safety of the President-elect proved groundless. Grant's inauguration drew the biggest crowd that had yet gathered in Washington for this event. Many had to walk the streets of the city all night because the hotels were filled and hat with a gold-headed cane in his hand.

Double files of cavalry rode on each side of the carriage as it moved along Pennsylvania avenue and riflemen were stationed on roofs commanding the thoroughfare. For men in the South had sworn that Abraham Lincoln should never be sworn in as President of the Disunited States. But they could obtain no lodging. Grant laid aside his inevitable cigar when he was sworn in but disappointed the crowd by not wearing his uniform of blue. Throughout the reading of his inaugural address his little daughter, Nellie, who had slipped away from her mother, stood beside him and held his hand.

His second inauguration took place on one of the coldest March fourths ever recorded in the national capital. Many people were frostbitten, as were some of the West Point cadets who paraded without their overcoats. The inaugural ball was a failure because the building was so cold that the musicians could scarcely play, the refreshments were frozen solid and none of the guests dared remove their outer wraps.

Wilson's first inaugural was little more than a triumphal procession of Democrats celebrating their first victory since Cleveland and it was marked by the presence of suffragists in the parade. It was marked also by the first illumination of the capital by searchlight. His second inauguration was without the customary festivities, due to the threat of war hanging over the nation. Again a President-elect rode to and from the Capitol between lines of heavily-armed soldiers and with armed watchers on the roof tops. A cold, misty rain-storm added to the gloom of the occasion. It was the President who led with a cold, then giving impetus to the demand that Inauguration Day be moved forward to April, as it had been when our first President, George Washington, was sworn in.

Instead the date was moved back to January 20 and the first President to take his oath of office on that date was Franklin D. Roosevelt, who will take it again on January 20, 1941—the third time!

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

CHRIST'S CONCERN FOR THE LOST

LESSON TEXT—Luke 15:1-10.
GOLDEN TEXT—The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost.—Luke 19:10.

Lost! What fear and disquietude grips our hearts when we hear that word! A little boy strays away into the forest, and the whole countryside gives up its work to go and seek him. An airship fails to reach its destination, and hundreds of ships go to seek after it, while an entire nation waits in suspense. A ship is lost at sea, and the whole world grieves.

But listen! It is only when applied to the spiritual life that the word "lost" finds its real depth of meaning. To be "without God in the world" (Eph. 2:12) and without hope—that is to really be lost. Yet parents who would not rest a moment while their child was physically lost go on without concern over his spiritual condition.

Our Lord had no such unconcern. He was deeply moved over the lost condition of men; He came "to seek and to save that which was lost." The two parables of our lesson teach us three truths.

I. Lost and Lamented (vv. 1-8).
The publicans and sinners recognized their need of a Saviour and He, knowing their lost condition, received them, much to the disgust of the Pharisees and scribes who felt no need to be saved. They have their descendants in our churches today.

The good shepherd cannot rest while one of the sheep is lost. Though "there were ninety and nine that safely lay in the shelter of the fold," he sought the lost one. His grief-stricken heart compelled him to go out into the night to find him.

One wonders how we who profess to follow Christ, the Good Shepherd, can be so complacent about the lost. What if we do have the ninety and nine in church—where is the lost one? Even if we do have a large Sunday School class—where are the boys and girls who are lost? Do our hearts grieve over them? If so, we will go and seek them. We who would quickly join the woman in seeking for her coin—will we join our Saviour in seeking the lost?

II. Sought by Sacrifice (vv. 4, 8).
The woman laid aside her usual duties and the pleasures of life to seek her coin. The shepherd left the warmth, the comfort, and the rest which he had earned to go out into the wilderness to seek his sheep.

"But none of the ransomed ever knew
How deep were the waters crossed;
Nor how dark was the night that
The Lord passed through Ere He found His sheep that was lost."

Soul-winning calls for sacrifice. If the love of Christ constrains us, we will do it gladly, but if the self-seeking, comfort-loving spirit of this age controls our lives, we will always find some excuse (not a reason, but an excuse).

III. Restored With Rejoicing (vv. 5-7, 9, 10).
The lost coin back in the owner's hand brought joy to her and her neighbors. The shepherd calls in friends and neighbors to rejoice over the restored sheep. How intensely human that is, and how altogether appropriate.

The great truth, however, is found in verses 7 and 10, where we learn that the repentance of one sinner sets even the bells of heaven ringing as the angels of God rejoice.

How long is it, my Christian friend, since you caused such joy by permitting yourself to be used of God in winning a soul? Yes, I know that it is God who seeks, but He uses human beings as His messengers, as His seekers. That is our first business after we ourselves have been saved.

Our lesson will not be complete unless we consider the rest of the chapter—the parable of the prodigal son. In its main points it is like the other two parables, but there is this vital difference—the shepherd sought his sheep, the woman searched for her coin—the father did not seek the son; the son sought the father.

Some prodigal, far from the house of his heavenly Father, may read these lines and say, "I wish someone would seek me out and bring me to God." But, my friend, you need not wait for anyone. Do as the prodigal did—"arise and go" to God. He is waiting for you; His love has never faltered; He wants you to come now. Make His heart rejoice, and set the choirs of heaven singing, by coming to Him by faith—just now.

An Ye Go, French
And as ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand. Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils; freely ye have received, freely give.—Matthew 23:7-8.

Star Dust

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WHEN talk began of 50,000 airplanes a year, the American public was surprised to learn that it takes at least five men on the ground to keep one man in the air, but the picture makers of Hollywood considered the number rather small; you see, they use anywhere from thirty to forty persons behind the camera to keep one actor in front of it.

In-a-scene made for "That Uncertain Feeling," in which Merle Oberon appeared alone before the camera, there were 35 persons on the set to help her make a shot which will last 15 seconds on the screen. If you're interested, the list included two assistant directors, a cameraman, a camera operator, two camera assistants, ten electricians, three carpenters, two property men, four sound men, a painter, a wardrobe woman, a makeup man, a body makeup woman, a hairdresser, a still photographer, a playback operator, a pianist for off-stage sound and a stand-in. The thirty-fifth was Director Ernst Lubitsch.

Betty Brewer's ship has really come in at last. Betty's the attractive but not beautiful youngster who made such a hit in "Rangers of Fortune," remember?

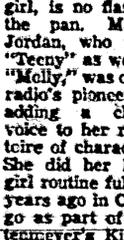

Betty Brewer

She's been the bread winner for her family of five for a year—she's 13 now. Her family migrated from Joplin, Mo., to Sacramento, Calif., in a flivver, but her father couldn't find work there and Betty began singing at conventions and banquets.

She went to Hollywood, sang on the radio, lost her job and had to go on relief. She was singing on the streets for pennies when Sam Wood, the director, discovered her. Her second picture was "The Roundup"; she's working now in "Las Vegas Nights," and next will do "Two Bad Angels," and she's just signed a brand new contract with Paramount.

Katharine Hepburn has had her revenge on the people who not so awfully long ago considered her "poison at the box office"; her new Metro picture, "The Philadelphia Story," topped all records for New York's huge Radio City Music Hall for the last five years. Cary Grant, James Stewart, Roland Young and Kirk Hussey give her perfect support. Miss Hepburn evidently knew that she had a good thing when she found "The Philadelphia Story"; she is still starring in the stage version—she is part owner of the play—and she is full owner of the picture, as well as its star.

The success of "Teeny," Fibber McGee and Molly's little "I betcha!"

girl, is no flash in the pan. Marian Jordan, who plays "Teeny," as well as "Molly," was one of radio's pioneers in adding a child's voice to her repertoire of characters. She did her little-girl routine fully 12 years ago in Chicago as part of Kalmeyer's Kindergarten, one of radio's first network children shows.

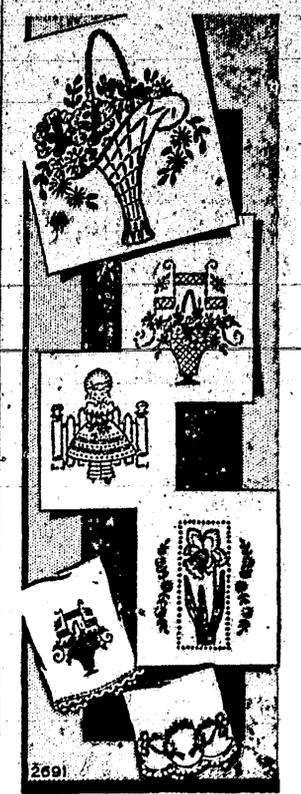

Fibber McGee and Molly weren't even named on a radio script until six years later, when Don Quinn, the Jordans' script writer, thought them up.

If the "Quiz Kids" are among your radio favorites prepare to see them on the screen before long. They're making a series of shorts at Paramount's Long Island studios. The star performer is sure to be that very young man, Gerard Dowd, who ranks with John Kieran of "Information Please" when it comes to natural history.

Don't be surprised if you happen to meet your favorite radio stars and discover that their voices sound altogether different than they do when you hear them on the screen or radio. Rudy Vallee, John Barrymore and Billie Burke are outstanding examples of this difference in voices; theirs are all pitched lower naturally than they are when they come over the air.

ODDS AND ENDS
* Franchot Tone has signed up to make two pictures a year for five years for 100,000.
* Charles Boyer co-stars with Deanna Durbin in "Ready for Romance"—which Deanna is.
* James Cagney and the newlywed Bette Davis will co-star for the first time in "The Bride Came C. O. D."
* Bing Crosby and Bob Hope are going to star golf for Britain. They're understood that they will begin a golf tour in March, named with two golf professionals, the proceeds going to British war relief.

March 4, 1913—Woodrow Wilson takes the oath of office.

After the last ball was over, the general returned to the White House but he was too tired to sleep. Tremors of exhaustion shook his body as he stumbled into bed. Outside his window an owl hooted all night and the next morning the general complained that a howling dog had kept him awake. Negro servants at the Executive Mansion shook their heads sadly. It was a "sign," they said. And they were right. For within a month President Wilson's heavy nervous system had broken down. He had been the shortest term the journey was made without un-lucky incident. A few minutes later the tall lanky man came out on the east portico, to be greeted by only the faintest of cheers. Then, standing before Chief Justice Taft of the Supreme Court, he took the oath of office. As he drew the manuscript of his address from his pocket, he could find no place to put his hat. So Stephen A. Douglas, his old friend and political enemy, stepped forward with the remark "If I can't be President, at least I can hold the President's hat."

Ancient Egypt in Role of Modern War

'War' in Snow Here and War in Sand Over There

The picture at the left looks like the real thing, winter warfare as it is probably being waged in the mountains of Greece, but it was made at Lake Placid, N. Y., and the troops are of the U. S. army engaged in winter maneuvers. To the right a British soldier posted as a lookout somewhere in western Egypt, looks as though he is buried in snow. The white sand of the desert and his white overalls form an effective camouflage.

London Took This But Fights On

The very core of London, the "ancient city," presents this woeful aspect as famous old buildings and modern structures gave to the sky from which German raiders rained down thousands of fire bombs. Crumbling walls, same weakened timbers, and twisted steel attest to the fury of the raid. This photograph was made from the dome of St. Paul's cathedral.

Seen' Double in the Navy

The navy will be seeing double from now on. Two sets of identical twins, whose names are quite similar, are shown taking the oath as they sail in New York city. They are, left to right, Charles B. Pierpont and William Charles Pierpont, 19, of Woodstock, N. Y., and Charles Francis Well and Francis Charles Well, 17, of Newburgh, N. Y.

LOS ANGELES.—What happens to our star football pros after the last kick-off? How do they manage to kill time between December and next August when they put on the old harness again? You might be surprised.

On my way to Texas for the Cotton Bowl game I spent two days with a pair of fair country football players from Texas. They were Sammy Baugh and Dick Todd of the Washington Redskins, who had just left the all-star battle against the devastating Chicago Bears.

"Well," I said to Baugh, one of the great forward passers and also one of the great kickers of all time, "nothing to do now until next August."

"No," he said, with the old Texas half-drawl, "nothing to do but handle my 500-acre cattle ranch and see those cattle get plenty to eat. I know an 800-acre ranch isn't so much in Texas, but I hope to add another 300-acre patch this winter and give my cattle plenty to eat. That'll keep me busier than chucking a few passes, even against those Bears."

"What was your college weight?" I asked Baugh, who is 6 feet 2.

"One-eighty-two pounds," Sammy said.

"What was your reporting weight in August and what did you finish with?" I asked.

"Silent Sam" answered. Sam is strictly on the laconic side. He says what he has to say in the fewest possible words, which is one of the greatest of all human virtues.

"Where are you headed for, Dick?" I asked 165-pound Dick Todd, one of the best of the running backs.

"Just a little ranch outside of Sweetwater and a few head of cattle. Gee, I'm glad to get back. That home on the range looks good to me."

About Sweetwater

Both Baugh and Todd got off at Sweetwater. This, also, is where Lew Jenkins lives. There must be something in the Sweetwater air that breeds athletes.

"Lew's a much better fighter than he looks to be," Todd said. "You see he came up the hard way and I guess that's the best way, if you are trying to get somewhere. I don't want any part of the fight game myself, but this pre game is no easy way either."

"Early in the season I took a pass from Sammy here (meaning Baugh) and just as I straightened out of a half-spike Falaschi hit me. All he did was to drive part of my intestines back against my spine and I had to live on milk for two weeks till I got straightened out. Don't let anybody tell you they don't hit you in this pro game. Both Sammy and I ought to know."

I asked Baugh about better protection for the passer, after he has gotten the ball away.

"That's where the damage comes," Sam said. "I've had to take plenty. I think the officials might keep an eye on what happens after the pass is thrown. I don't mind being knocked down so much, but I don't like fists in my face."

"Who does?"

I can't remember ever seeing an official watch the passer after the ball was thrown down the field. They all watch the ball. I've seen plenty myself that should have been called double-roughness—which never was called. Or was even seen.

About Danny Fortman

Sitting on the bench you look at Danny Fortman, the star guard of the Chicago Bears.

Danny in his harness is a burly looking individual who doesn't seem to be headed anywhere in particular—off the football field. But Danny graduated at the head of his school at the age of 16. He graduated from Colgate at the age of 20 summa cum laude. He was a brilliant student.

He is using pro football to get his medical degree and there is certainly no student in the Ivy league who has more ability or greater ambition.

He is one of the great football guards of his era—smart, keen, aggressive, alert, and physically powerful. He is an exceptional medical student who is almost certain to go a long way in his profession.

Pro football has done a great job for these college graduates who otherwise might have been left out in the blizzard of the depression. It has given them the chance to make enough money to carry out their earlier dreams. I don't mean all of them. I mean a great many of them.

If gave Sammy Baugh and Dick Todd and many others the chance to carry out their hope for a "home on the range." It has given many of them chances which our present economic system couldn't offer them.

Speaking of SPORTS

By ROBERT McSHANE

Released by Western Newspaper Union

LOU NOVA, the big blond heavyweight from Alameda, Calif., never will be known for his shyness, reticence or lack of ability to advertise himself.

For Lou, who has just recuperated from a brutal beating administered by Tony Galento, has announced to the world in no uncertain terms that he is the contender who will brush Joe Louis off the championship throne as easily as you or I would shoo a fly from our coffee and cakes in the Greasy Spoon Lunch Shoppe.

In the face of this grim determination it seems a shame to bring up past history. However, the record book shows that Tony Galento, Newark's former pride and joy, disposed of Lou in 14 rounds in Philadelphia little more than a year ago. The book doesn't tell that Nova was whipped in one of the bloodiest battles in ring history.

The thoroughness with which Nova was beaten may or may not be indicative of his ability. Galento was a freak—a fat, loud-mouthed clown who wouldn't hesitate to use any means possible to annihilate an opponent. Nova—like most good fighters—wasn't particularly well equipped to handle such competition.

Curtain of Gloom

Shortly after his fight with Galento, Nova was stricken with a strange illness, believed to be an infection in the blood stream. In the hospital for a long time, he was figured by the experts to be all washed up. In fact, Nova entertained the same idea as did the experts.

"When you lay on a cot in a little cubicle in a hospital, you get plenty of time—too much time—to think," Nova said recently. "I'd lift up on my side and see crutches—my crutches—standing in a corner against the wall."

"Those sticks seemed to portend my never walking, let alone fighting, again. Things looked so gloomy that I honestly thought of sneaking out of the hospital come night and jumping off the Golden Gate bridge."

But that thought didn't linger for long. As soon as he had disposed of the crutches, Nova knew he could whip anything on two feet. Already he is ashamed of the transient thought that he might not be the world's greatest heavyweight.

Last July, quite well on his way toward recovery from the Galento fiasco, Lou went to prison—of his own volition. He started to train in the Nevada State penitentiary at Carson City, under the determined hand of Warden Bill Lewis. Nova's novel training site was picked for him by his manager, Ray Carlin.

Back in Shape

When he quit training in Carson City, Lou was in better shape than he had been for many years. He now claims that his illness was of long standing, and that it had handicapped him in several previous fights. But that, he says, is a thing of the past. He has recovered—both his health and his self-confidence.

The California Adonis has often declared his longing to fight Billy Conn and Joe Louis.

"I don't think," he said, "that Conn has licked any good heavyweight. That fellow—Leo Savold—whom he defeated in the Garden a few weeks ago never was anything more than a good preliminary fighter. The other heavies on Conn's list of victories were not much better."

By and large, Lou holds present heavyweights in rather low esteem. He veers sharply away from the Galento tack, refusing to speak of his contemporaries as "dope bums." He reduces their pugilistic stature in a more grammatical fashion.

Regardless of his defeat by Galento, don't sell Nova too short. He has a determination amounting to stubbornness but he has always a definite goal in mind and unlimited faith in his ability to reach that goal.

Bill Komenich, Marquette's high scoring basketball guard, formerly attended the University of Belgrade.

Henry Clason, Northwestern university basketball forward, scored more than 300 points during his high school career in Goshen, Ind.

Bloomin' Parrot Was Passing Its Lesson On

Bert had spent hours trying to teach his parrot to say "Hello, Uncle," ready for the visit of his wealthy relative.

To no purpose, Uncle came—and went—and the parrot was dumb.

Bert seized the bird by the throat. "Say 'Hello, Uncle,' or I'll wring your bloomin' neck," he roared.

And when silence continued he twisted the bird's neck and threw it into the fowl pen.

Queer squawks drew him to the fowl pen next morning. On the ground were three dead hens! The parrot had a fourth by the neck, shaking him and shouting: "Say, 'Hello, Uncle,' or I'll wring your bloomin' neck."

'Truth' is subject for Sunday. Golden Text: "Thou art near, O Lord; and all thy commandments are truth. Concerning thy testimonies, I have known of old that thou hast founded them forever." Citation from Bible: "No man can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon." Passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The best sermon, ever preached is Truth practised and demonstrated by the destruction of sin, sickness, and death. Knowing this and knowing too that one affection would be supreme in us and take the lead in our lives, Jesus said, 'No man can serve two masters.'"

KNOW YOUR BANK

A Bank's Duty To Its Stockholders

The obligation of a bank to its stockholders is clearly and concisely stated in the American Bankers Association's "Statement of Principles of Commercial Banking." "The very existence of a commercial bank depends upon the investments in its capital which have been made by its stockholders. In any serious emergency, the bank's capital funds stand as the last reserve for the protection of the depositors. The conduct of a commercial bank should be guided by recognition of the vital contribution which has been made by the stockholders, and of the fact that they are entitled to a fair return on their investment." We pledge ourselves to the fulfillment of this obligation.

Trail Blazers to the Sea
 The Louisiana Purchase in 1803 added more than a million square miles to the United States. After securing an appropriation from Congress to explore the vast territory, President Thomas Jefferson chose Captains Meriwether Lewis and William Clark to lead the expedition.

Starting up the Missouri River near St. Louis in May, 1804, they returned in September, 1806. Not only had they found a land route to the Pacific and located a river flowing to the sea, but they had transferred the western boundary of the United States to the Pacific Coast.

Lewis and Clark were the trail-blazers who opened up this vast new territory holding so much of promise for the future of the country.

There are trail-blazers in industry today. In the telephone service they are not only the men who build the lines over mountains, deserts and plains, but the trail-blazers in science in the Bell Telephone Laboratories, ever seeking better ways to do the job.

Keeping the nation's channels of communication open twenty-four hours a day is the job of your telephone company... a responsibility it shoulders eagerly. Whether it may be a local emergency or one of national defense, telephone men and women are ready.

Hidden Ways

By FREDERIC F. VAN DE WATER

"Don't bother," I said, "to ring for the maid to show me the door. I can find it. I ask you—not now, but later, when you've less to disturb you—to think seriously whether I've ever violated your confidence. I knew about Grove and his key. I saved him once from the jam he is in now. I knew of his liaison with Ione. See how much of that you can find in the Press, or any other newspaper—up to now."

Allegra gave a little laugh of disbelief. She tossed Duke's squeal on the desk between us and went from the room. I bowed jerkily to Miss Agatha and headed for the door. Her voice checked me.

"Up to now," she repeated, "Do I understand that is a threat?"

I had stood plenty. Her stern eyes could not beat mine down.

"And do I understand," I answered, "that your question is a prelude to bribery?"

"Are you," she inquired, "doing your best to be insulting?"

"I am," I told her, "and I didn't begin it."

She chuckled. The hearty sound never seemed more bizarre. It wrecked melodrama and spoiled my pose. I stared. Miss Agatha grinned.

"Put down your hat and coat," she bade me. "I want to talk to you. Don't stand there gawping. Do as I say. Allegra is troubled with ideals. She'll outgrow them in time. Suppose you tell me, as politely as you can manage, just how you happen to be on the Press."

She smoked one of my cigarettes while I confessed my arrangement with Cochrane, and the difficulties of being pulled two ways by conflicting loyalties. Once or twice, while I spoke, she nodded and when I had ended, gave that preposterous grin of hers.

"You make me feel better," she told me. "I didn't want to believe I'd twice been mistaken in my estimate of character in so short a time."

I found myself defending Grove.

"You'll learn when this thing is unscrambled that he's been just a young idiot, nothing more. No one can make me believe that."

"No one can make me, either," she broke in, quietly. "He's a good boy. He's lacking in common sense, that's all. Well, it's a family failing."

"Miss Agatha," I blurted, smitten by the calm she preserved above the anguish that must be tearing at her, "you're a game guy!"

Her face relaxed a trifle.

"David," she said, "when women reach my age, they cry easily, or not at all. I have no gift for tears. Grove is in trouble and I have to help him. I always used to pull him out of scrapes. That's my job again."

She looked at me and the wrinkles about her eyes deepened.

"If you had a spark of chivalry," she mocked, "you'd offer to help me."

"And if," I answered, "you had any intuition whatever, you would know that anything I've got is yours."

"I do know it," she admitted with another chuckle, and then grew suddenly grave.

"Will you help me," she asked, "to save my nephew from the trouble into which a scoundrel and a stupid police force have plunged him and out of which a pompous lawyer apparently can't get him? I am an old woman, David, and a cripple. I can't put a murder and a suicide where they belong, by myself."

"All you have to do," I promised, "is point out the murderer."

"Do you think so?" she asked tartly. "I've found him already."

I looked hard at her.

"It's Lyon Ferriter," said Agatha Paget. "I've known that all along."

ving her need, I offered a cigarette and lit it for her. Smoke and something more dire had narrowed her eyes as she went on:

"Lyon Ferriter was clever in his alibi. Since the part that anyone can check was fact, it has to be presumed the rest was too. No one can prove he was in that flat when the man was stabbed. What?"

"I had started to speak. Now I said, 'Excuse me,' and held my words."

"And until," Miss Agatha went on, "that is proved and it is found how he got out afterward, Lyon Ferriter thinks he is safe. He is proud of his cleverness. That is dangerous—for him."

"Well?" I asked as she paused. She did not seem to hear me. She pursued, her eyes still narrow, her voice daffling in its calm:

"All of which has been none of an old woman's business—up to now, Lyon Ferriter called on me this morning. He said he wanted to help Grove. What he wanted was to admire his own cleverness. If he had come to me fairly, David; if he had said, 'Your nephew and my sister have been having an affair. How can we get them out of trouble most easily?' he would have had me as an ally."

She rubbed the cigarette out on the ash tray with slow violence. I gave her another. Her voice had an odd ring as she went on:

"Do I understand that is a threat?"

"But he didn't. He had no idea why Grove was in his flat! He said that he had given the boy a key because Grove was in and out of the apartment a good deal. Implicitly he served notice on me that that was what he had told, or will tell, the police. He'll protect his sister and leave Grove to be scapegoat for the death of Everett and the earlier murder, if possible. My nephew's plight is a godsend to him."

"And to Ione?" I asked, doubtfully.

"And to Ione," Miss Agatha answered and her jaw grew hard. "She hasn't spoken, has she? She has not come forward with the truth to help her lover. Hers is the perfect fear that casteth out love. I wish I knew what it is."

Her self-possession got me by the throat. I blurted:

"How foul people are!"

Miss Agatha cocked an eye at me.

"So you're finding that out?" she asked.

She sat silent a moment and I thought of the weathered figurehead, immune to storm.

"Miss Agatha," I said, "what do you want me to do?"

She answered indirectly in a level voice:

"All my life, thanks to my legs, I've been audience to the sorry dramas mortals play. I don't like the way this particular one promises to end. I don't like the thought of Grove still in jail—though I understand he is only being held for questioning," according to Senator Groesbeck."

"Has he—your nephew—given any explanation?"

The affectionate smile that accompanied her reply was pitiful. Grove, it appeared, had said nothing to the police and little enough to his lawyer. He had been typing a letter at the desk in the workroom and had seen a light in the apartment, across the air shaft. He had gone to the Ferriter flat and had found Everett about to throw himself from the window. He had tried to hold him, but the man had screamed and torn free. That was all. He would say no more. He would not even explain the note the police had found in his pocket.

"And they say," Miss Agatha ended, "that chivalry is dead. Grove, the young sophisticate, posing as Sidney Carton would be funny if it weren't so tragic. He won't see that. He won't help himself. Very well, I shall have to save him by putting Lyon Ferriter in his place."

The certainty in her voice stirred mine to awe as I asked: "How?"

Miss Agatha looked at me hard for an instant and the wrinkles about her eyes deepened.

"David," she said, "I haven't the least idea," and she gave her deep chuckle.

I sat on the desk's edge and told her everything I knew. It was a relief to talk to someone without holding back. We smoked together at first and then, as I passed from the scuffle in the basement to the duel with Lyon and the rifling of my room, the cigarette burned down unheeded in her fingers. She asked at last:

"And why have you had all this attention?"

"Miss Agatha," I told her with a grin, "I haven't the least idea."

She chuckled again.

"At any rate," she said, "we start even as allies."

"Wait," I bade, and told her of the foreign voice I had heard at Mino's. She looked at me hard when I had finished.

"Are you sure?" she asked.

I shrugged.

"Right now, I'm not very sure of anything. Yet I don't think I'm beginning to hear voices. And it may be important, but it isn't evidence, unless we can persuade Lyon to drop back into it again for the benefit of the police."

"No," she said thoughtfully. "You're right. It's a signpost, nothing more. There is a flaw in Lyon, somewhere. Everybody has one. If we could only find it and work on it."

"You said he was proud," I reminded her.

"And clever," she added. "And also lucky, at poor Grove's expense. Think a minute."

She gathered her fragile body together and looked hard at the hands clasped in her narrow lap as though they held a seer's crystal ball.

"Think," she went on, "of his luck. Everett knew Lyon had killed Blackbeard. And Everett was frightened. Anyone could see that. He was not of the breed of heroes. You were to be killed by accident while Everett rifled your room. The Ferriters thought you had something that was key to the murder."

"And Everett failed," I offered as she paused, "and that, plus fear, destroyed him. So he wrote a farewell note to his family, who were waiting for him to show up at Mino's, and killed himself out of sheer terror."

The surprise in her face heartened me.

"Yes," Miss Agatha said slowly, "that is quite possible and Grove found the note and since its implications seemed to threaten the well-being of his precious beloved, pocketed it—he would—and thereby damned himself."

There was excitement and odd relief in thrusting facts into the pigeonholes of theory where, at least, they would lie without falling out in confusion. Faint pink had come to Miss Agatha's cheek-bones and her eyes sparkled. I asked:

"Has your nephew told to whom he wrote the letter at this desk last night?"

"He has not," Miss Agatha answered. "I never have known silence less golden than his."

"Because," I went on, "I think he is telling the truth," and then I confided my own experience at that desk when, looking up, I had seen a light across the area and Grove pulling down a shade in the Ferriter flat.

Miss Agatha, when I had ended, reached out a hand and, amazingly, patted my knee.

"I think, David," she said quietly, "a very wrong-headed pair of women owe you more than an apology for what they thought of you this morning."

"Forget it," I told her.

She shook her head.

"No," she said. "Just postpone it. Mightn't it be well if we were to write down, separately, all we know and suspect of this—bewildering? Thereafter, comparing our lists, we might find some hint of what else we should do?"

"It might," I granted, humoring her.

"There's another typewriter about," Miss Agatha thought aloud. "I believe it's in the basement storeroom. I'm sure it was put there when it came back from the repair man's. Allegra!"

I do not think she saw the movement I made to check her call. I had small desire to face the scornful girl again. It hurt too much and, at the same time, angered me. But in an instant there she stood in the doorway, looking at her aunt and plainly not recognizing my existence. Slight of her smoldering niece made Miss Agatha revise her purpose.

"My dear," she said briskly, "I have already apologized to David for what we both thought when his friend's letter came this morning."

She paused. Allegra's face did not stir nor did her eyes move. I fumbled for some word to end this ordeal and found nothing.

"Why should I apologize?" the girl asked. "So that I can read about it in tomorrow's Press?"

If she could hurt me so, I might be able to reach her. I said, as easily as I could:

"News must be either interesting or important."

I was sorry then, for she looked at me, caught her breath and said:

PREPARE COWS IN DRY PERIOD

Special Care Assures Better Production.

By GEORGE E. TAYLOR

(Extension Dairyman, Rutgers University.)

Cows that are properly fitted and managed during the dry period may produce as much as 25 per cent more milk and butterfat during the following lactation period.

During the lactation period, especially during the first six months, the animal's body reserve of minerals, protein and fat becomes depleted. And the cow does not have an opportunity to build up this reserve again until the animal is given a six to eight weeks' rest period prior to the following calving.

Neglect on the part of the owner regarding proper feed, care and management of dry cows may cost the owner the value of one ton of milk. The loss in dollars and cents may be computed by using the market value of one ton of milk under any known market condition.

The amount of hay and grain which should be fed during the dry period depends upon the condition of the cow at the time she is turned dry. Animals that are in fair condition may be properly fitted on a liberal allowance of quality roughage, including pasture, hay and silage. Other cows may require some grain in addition to all the roughage they will eat. A daily grain allowance of six pounds is usually ample. Thus not more than 250 pounds to 350 pounds of grain in addition to one-quarter ton of hay, is needed to put a cow in proper condition.

Figure the cost of 250 to 350 pounds of grain and one-quarter ton of hay and compare it with the value of one ton of milk. The figure proves that a rest period of six to eight weeks along with proper feed and care during the dry period, really pays dividends.

Seed Treatment Proves Good Crop Insurance

Seed treatment is one of the most important phases of crop insurance. Not only can the crops be disease-free, but in most cases freedom from disease results in increased yield. Therefore, the use of high quality treated seed is a big step forward toward success.

Now is the time to make preparation for treating wheat, oats, and barley for smut. There are several materials on the market that, if properly used, will give good results. The first important step is to learn exactly the method recommended. If instructions as to the proper method of treatment are not followed, it is a waste of time and material.

Copper carbonate and mercurial dusts are suitable for the control of seed-borne diseases in a wide range of seeds, because they control a large number of seed-borne diseases besides smut. For this reason they can be used with crops of wheat, oats, barley, beans, and others.

Formaldehyde is still popular with many farmers but this material must be properly applied to give good results. The placing of a teaspoonful of formaldehyde in the top of a sack of grain and then turning the sack upside down for treatment is ineffectual. Formaldehyde when exposed to the air vaporizes as a gas; this gas is heavier than air. The above procedure prevents the formaldehyde from coming in contact with the seed.

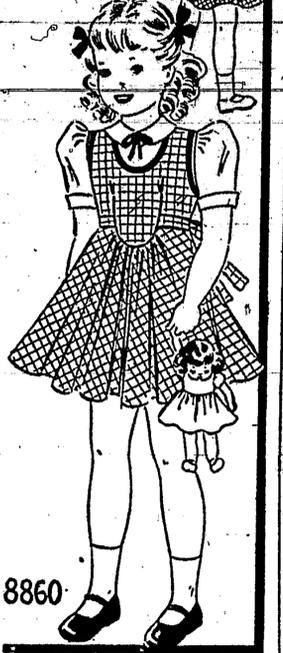

Week-Old Calves Can Be Dehorned

Horns, at one time, were a necessary part of a cow's equipment. They were necessary for protection, but under present modern methods of management, cows do not need horns. Horns may be taken off when the calf is a week old without any loss and not too much discomfort to the calf. Do the job of dehorning as soon as the horn button can be found; clip the hair around this tiny bump and place a ring of vaseline on the lower side to prevent any drainage into the eye itself. Roughen the spot gently where the horn is starting with a cori cob or by scraping it. Moisten a stick of caustic potash and rub it on until the skin is a distinct pink. Caution: Use gloves on your hands and let no liquid from the caustic stick get into your eyes or the calf's eyes—it's dangerous!

Repair Now

The "stitch in time" adage applies forcibly to machinery care, according to Ray W. Carpenter of the University of Maryland. He says that an hour at this time of year, when the machinery is in storage, spent in oiling all polished surfaces to prevent rust, repainting bare wood parts, and checking, ordering, and replacing badly worn or broken parts will avoid delays, aggravation, and hours of valuable time when the spring season rush is on.

NO WONDER she looks sweet as pie and decidedly pleased with herself! This little miss, with the bows in her curls and her doll by the arm, is wearing the newest and best of pinafore-jumper fashions, and one that you should make up immediately for your own small daughter. The pinafore-jumper is so deliciously full, below that down-scooped cut in the front, and the sash bow in the back accents its saucy flare. The little gimpe is plain and tailored, as it should be for school and kindergarten, with a round, tailored collar and a little neck bow.

Send for the pattern right away (the number is 8860). Make the pinafore-jumper of checked gingham, printed calico or plain chambray, and trim with braid or bias binding. Repeat the gimpes several times in batiste, lawn, dimity or linen.

Pattern No. 8860 is designed for sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. Size 4 requires 2 1/2 yards of 35-inch material for pinafore-jumper; 1 1/2 yards trimming; 1/2 yard for blouse. Send order to:

AROUND THE HOUSE

To remove mustard stains from linen, soak the linen as quickly as possible in cold water to cover. This loosens the mustard so that it will come out when laundered in the usual way—in plenty of warm water and soap suds.

Save left-over griddle batter and use it for dipping chops, cutlets and so on.

Candied cranberries are just as effective as candied cherries for garnishing winter foods.

Best time to clean the egg beater is immediately after using it—before the egg dries and makes washing difficult.

Try this candle arrangement for a youngster's birthday cake: Arrange small candles to form the numerals telling the age. Or place them on the cake to form the child's initials. If the first name is short it can be spelled out with tiny candles or small, hard candies.

Fruit-gelatin mixtures gain in favor and nutritive value if fruit juices are substituted for the liquid called for in the recipe. Left-over canned fruit juices are as good as juice from fresh fruit.

Be careful not to season meat gravies so much that they lose their characteristic flavors. Usually salt and pepper or paprika are enough. If you like a prepared meat sauce add only a dash. Better yet, pass the sauce and let the family use what they please.

If your kitchen storage space is limited, make file-like shelves in a lower cupboard and use them for storing lids, pie and cake pans and other flat utensils. This will be a time-saver.

Speculation is rife over the sudden blossoming friendship between Wendell Willkie and F. D. R., bitter foes a few months ago. The GOP standard bearer in the last election said he was making the trip at his own expense to "make a survey of conditions there."

Is this the real story? We wonder if Willkie's visit would have any connection with the controversy over aid to Britain. What future role is Willkie destined to play in the deal? At any rate, Wendell will feel the pulse of Britain and report his findings to FDR upon his return.

Roosevelt took his former "enemy" behind the scenes of his foreign policy, and was even so gracious as to arrange for a "conference" between Willkie and Cordell Hull.

Oakland, Cal. — It cost Salvatore Spino, 65 year old laborer, exactly $25, to join the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo axis. According to a complaint filed by Phillip Bierman, he argued about the war with Spino. Two days later Spino charged into Bierman's store, "So you don't like Mussolini," Spino said. "This is what Italy is going to give England." Then, according to Bierman, Spino set upon him with his fists and feet $25 fine was levied against Spino in police court.

The custom of clinking glasses goes back to the days when Roman gladiators would prepare drinks for each other before fighting. They would each supply one glass of wine, and then the contents of the two would be mixed to make sure that if poison had been put in either it would get into both drinks. Through the years the formality has been shortened, until today the mere touching of containers stands for an exchange of good will.

Coronado and the Seven Cities of Cibola

IN 1510 Don Francisco Vasquez de Coronado left Mexico, leading a band of fellow-adventurers north into the unknown wilderness to extend the Spanish empire by half a continent. Before the English Pilgrims first landed at Plymouth Rock, Coronado and his successors had built a royal palace in Santa Fe.

Crossing southern Arizona, New Mexico, hitting the Grand Canyon, Texas, and on across the Texas panhandle into Kansas, Coronado and his army failed to find the fabled "Seven Cities of Cibola," and headed toward their expedition's failure because they did not find gold.
