Concert Extraordinary

Next Tuesday evening at the High School Auditorium, music-lovers will be treated to a concert of rare value. The concert will be given by Mrs. G. C. Kroggel for the benefit of the Woman's Club of Carrizozo.

Those who will assist Mrs. Kroggel will be a trio consisting of Mrs. Ben S. Burns, Pianiste, Mrs. Don English, Cellist and Prof. Lou Fink, Violinist. This will be the third of a series of concerts given by Mrs. Kroggel in the state during her residence here in the past two years.

The violin solo of the schools, under the direction of Prof. Fink, will appear on the program.

Prior to that time, she had been church soloist for four churches in Phoenix, Arizona, and also appeared on numerous programs with the Arizona Symphonic Orchestra.

Aside from her musical activity as stated above, she has been repeatedly on the radio, singing over station KPHO (N. B. C.) at Phoenix, more especially. Here will be an opportunity to hear an excellent program of music and at the same time, you will be assisting the Woman's Club, as the proceeds of the concert will be turned over to that organization, of which Carrizozo is justly proud. Admission, adults 50c; School students 25c. Let's give Mrs. Kroggel's final Carrizozo concert a resounding attendance!

Burns' Studio to Photograph 1941 Senior Class

The Senior Class of Carrizozo High School has given the order for the 1941 photographs to the Burns Studio of our home town and we congratulate the class on its wisdom in selecting our home gallery to do the work.

Heretofore and for the past 12 years at least, we have sent away and have photographers come here for the expressed purpose of taking the photos of our graduates, but this year, not only that the class wishes to patronize our home industry, but it is a well-known fact that the Burns Studio can do the work equal to that which has been done by outside photographers, but even better.

We again congratulate the class on the observance of home patronage. Let this be an example to others, to "go thou and do likewise."

Public Library For Carrizozo

It is with pleasure that I offer the services of the Rural School Library, building to the public. This service will include library space and use of building for 5 nights each week, 7 to 9 p. m. Individuals and civic organizations wishing to contribute cash for purchase of books or donations of good fiction will please see me. A committee will select books to be purchased, and books donated will be the property of the Carrizozo Library. Let's make this a worthwhile project for young and old.—Ole C. Jones, Co. School Supt.

F. C. Stover, son of Sheriff and Mrs. A. F. Stover, was here from State College last week-end and also Mildred, their daughter from the Stover home at Hondo, both of whom spent two days with the home folks, making the gathering in the form of a family reunion.

Local Mention

Mr. and Mrs. Osborne Wood of La Luz, are the parents of a son, born at Hotel Dieu, El Paso, Feb. 1. He has been named Leonard, for his illustrious grandfather, the late Major General Leonard Wood. —Alamogordo News.

Ed H. Witte, Pres. of Witte Engine Works, oldest and largest manufacturers of small Diesel engines in the world, and Mrs. Witte of Kansas City, visited for two days here last week with Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Kroggel.

BORN—Monday, Feb. 10, to County Clerk and Mrs. Felix Ramey, a boy. Mother and son are doing nicely and the smile of pride is easily noticeable on the face of our genial clerk.

Jack Aguayo was here this week in the interest of his ranch holdings near Stanley, N. M. Jack has a nice ranch and farm over there, which he purchased not long ago. Molsters has been exceedingly good and prospects are of the very best, and what's more, Jack is more than deserving of the height of prosperity.

Deputy Sheriff Nick Vega made a trip to Santa Fe Monday, to take Manuel Verdugo and Enrique Vigil to the penitentiary. Verdugo to serve from 1 1/2 to 2 years and Vigil from one to one year and a half. Nick was accompanied by Mrs. Vega, daughters Maggie and Rita and Isidro McKinley, Sr.

Mrs. Chas. Thornton, daughters, Mmes. Edwards and Moore, were visitors from El Paso Monday.

Meedames Will Titworth of San Patricio and Bert Bonnell of Glencoe were Carrizozo business visitors Wednesday.

Florentino Lopez was elected Tuesday to the Municipal Board of Education, to succeed Ben C. Sanchez, whose term has expired. Congratulations, Tinol

Carrizozo Lodge No. 30 I. O. O. F., held an interesting meeting Tuesday night. After the business session, the third degree of the order was conferred on Attorney Elfred Jones. The lodge went on record as highly approving of the public library project as is being sponsored by our County School Superintendent, Mrs. Ole Jones and pledging assistance to the same.

Frank Maxwell, wool-grower of Claunch, was a business visitor Wednesday and brought a good report from that locality. Frank said that the Mountain district has had five feet of snow so far this winter, which assures good spring range and is also a boon to the bean-raisers of that locality. Frank's oldest son Warden, is now in the army and located at Fort Hill, Okla. Frank's daughter Mary, is with her grandmother, Mrs. Martha at Wardenville, West Virginia.

The Harkey Lumber Company has installed a complete Butane Gas system at the home of W. J. Ferguson. The installment includes three stoves for cooking and heating purposes. Mr. Ferguson will soon have a modern bath room in his new home which the Harkey Co. will install.

Memories Of Yesteryears

A. L. Hurke

THE FIRST AUTOMOBILE IN BURLINGTON

It was in the spring of 1886, when the first automobile made its appearance on the streets of Old Burlington, Iowa. The machine was designed by the owner of the Berg Wagon Co. and Mr. Berg was very proud of it. It had but one cylinder, so one can imagine how it would run. We distinctly remember the first trip Mr. Berg made with his new creation. When it came down Osborn street and started down Jefferson street, everything gave it a clear track. It took it about half-hour to get down to the levee, during which time it would buck, pitch, steam and squall like the lamentation of a lost soul. People rushed to and fro in order to keep out of its way.

It was the beginning of the automobile in Burlington. Horses reared, plunged and many runs always resulted. People fussed and even cursed it and wondered why the newspapers, the Hawk-eye and Gazette didn't raise it—but we know—Mr. Berg was an advertiser. What become of that infernal machine, we never knew, neither did we care, for the people were rid of a public nuisance.

THE LAST ROSE OF SUMMER

It was in the late fall of 1884, that Wanda Loy and Sam Hutton were lovers at their home in Clinton, Iowa. Sam had an offer to go to South America, which he accepted and as he was about to start on his trip, that was their last meeting. Of course, they were engaged. As they walked toward the gate, Wanda plied a rose, which was the only one in the garden. She plucked it and going back to the home she returned with a small Bible neatly bound in a leather case. She placed the rose in the book, closed it and gave it to Sam, saying, "Keep this near your heart with my blessing and the hope that it will shield you from harm." Sam went to Buenos Aires and engaged in the cattle business. One day while arranging a business deal, a heated controversy arose between the two cattlemen and the South American became so enraged that he drew a gun and fired straight at Sam's heart. Others rushed in and held the fellow from further shooting. Sam thought he had been killed, but that night he took the little book out of his left vest pocket, where he had always kept it and found that the ball had entered the book and lodged in the heart of the rose. Queer, wasn't it?

which, under his direction, renders beautiful and impressive anthem each Sunday morning. The M. E. joins with other churches in the union service to be held at the High School Auditorium Sunday evening, Feb. 15, at 8 p. m. L. A. Hughes, Pastor.

BUSINESS MEN'S CLUB

Members present, 18—Dr. R. E. Blaney reported progress on the airport project and also on highway 54, the engineer to be here in the near future. Dr. Blaney, J. E. Hall and Frank Adams were appointed to inspect till now before the legislature to be supported by the club.

The Secretary reported that Dr. Kunkel, Commanding officer at Fort Stanton will address the club next Wednesday evening at the Father and Sun Banquet. The Secretary requests that anyone wishing to attend the banquet, please notify the management of the S. P. Hotel. Frank English reported that Band uniforms had been ordered, but yet not received. Frank Adams, Sec'y.

SPECIAL SERVICES

Rev. H. F. Burns of Albuquerque, will be the guest speaker at the Baptist Church Sunday morning, Feb. 16, and will also speak on the American week program at the Auditorium Sunday night. He is editor and publisher of the Baptist New Mexican, the state paper. You are invited to any and all of these services.

L. D. Cochran, Pastor.

SELECTIVE SERVICE

The following will be inducted Feb. 18: Elmo Traylor, A. I. O.; Pablo Moyn, Ancho; Juan Padilla, Carrizozo. Replacements: Joe Morales, Procopio Salis, John Elliott, Carrizozo.

Edith McKinley, Clerk.

SEED TREATING DEMONSTRATION

According to Carl P. Redcliff, Co Extension Agent, a seed treating demonstration will be held at the farm of A. T. Pfingsten about one-half mile east of Hondo, Feb. 17, 2 p. m. Clayborn Wayne, Extension agent will be present. You are urged to be present.

Mmes. J. V. and Gerald Tully of Glencoe were hostesses at a party, honoring Miss Johnnie Bell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bell of Hondo, who is soon to become the bride of Mr. Dimmitt Bond of Corona. There were 30 guests present, including the faculty of Stetson school, of which Miss Bell is a member. The bride-to-be received many beautiful gifts after a session spent in quiz contests, at which Mr. Craig excelled. Refreshments of cake, candies and tea were served by the hostesses.

Valentine to U. S. Women

ON FEBRUARY 14, 1842, a Bostonian, named Corson, and his wife presented a valentine to the women of America—at the time they had no way of knowing they had done so. For on that date the Corsons became the parents of a daughter to whom they gave the name of Juliet. And it was this little girl who was destined to establish the first cooking school and thereby have a far-reaching effect upon the diet of future generations, not only of Americans but of people all over the world.

Juliet Corson's parents moved to New York when she was six years old, and because she was a sickly child and denied the joy of taking part in most children's pastimes, she became an avid reader and devoted most of her time to her studies. Forced to make her own living at the age of 20, she became librarian of the Working Women's library for which she was paid $4 a week. However, she raised that to $9 by writing a weekly article for the New York Leader. This led to her being asked to prepare the semi-annual index of the National Quarterly Review and later to her becoming a member of the editorial staff of that publication.

In those days most Americans still believed that "women's place is in the home" and the nearest thing to a career open to them was employment as a seamstress. In order to make them more efficient in this occupation, Miss Corson in 1873 started in her own home a free training school for the young women of New York city. The school grew so rapidly that she was forced to seek larger quarters and these were provided by Wheeler and Wilson, manufacturers of sewing machines in their building. They lent machines for the use of the school, as did other manufacturers, and within a year more than 1,000 girls had been taught how to sew and at least three-fourths of them immediately found employment.

Trained Stenographers.
By this time Miss Corson had also added stenography and bookkeeping to the curriculum of her school and soon afterwards began giving training for domestic service. As her school grew she took a large house, used the top floor as a dormitory for her students, the first floor for classrooms where sewing, laundering and other household work was taught and the basement for a kitchen where meals were served at cost to many girls employed in the neighborhood.

Out of the latter grew her belief that "diet can make men strong or weak, intelligent or stupid" and she began her life-work of teaching both the rich and the poor the proper way to prepare foods. She did this through public lectures and through articles which she wrote for the newspapers.

In 1878 Miss Corson established in New York a "cooking school for ladies," the first of its kind in America, and within a short time 1,000 women were receiving instruction there annually. She charged rich women high fees to attend the school but asked only 50 cents a lesson from women of the middle class and gave instruction free to poor girls. The next year, during the railroad strikes, when there was great distress among the poorer classes she wrote a valuable little book, "Fifteen-Cent Dinners for Workingmen's Families." It cost $5,000 to print and distribute this booklet, free of charge, to workmen earning $1.50 a day or less, but all but $100 of this sum was provided by Miss Corson out of the earnings from her school. Incidentally, her booklet was translated into several foreign languages and soon had a world-wide circulation. It was a boon to the poor people of every nation.

After the success of this booklet, Miss Corson became a lecturer on diet and founded many other cooking schools. She also began campaigning for the introduction of the study of cooking into the public schools and because of this she was asked by the United States commissioner of education to prepare a "Dietary for Schools" which was published and distributed by the department of the interior. Her long career of usefulness, especially to the laboring classes, came to an end with her death in 1907.

Another Claim to Fame.
Another of Juliet Corson's claims to fame rests upon her pioneer work in preparing "concentrated foods" for soldiers and explorers, and medicated foods for invalids. At the Chicago World's fair of 1893 she was the only person who was given an award for "scientific cookery and sanitary dietetics." She was also chosen as a member of the committee of judges of food products at the exposition, was twice elected to that position and was finally asked to serve permanently.

Star Dust

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO
By VIRGINIA VALE
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

CAROLYN LEE is only six years, but already she has made more money in the movies than most people are able to save in a lifetime.

By spring, when her latest picture, "Virginia," will have been seen by many people, she should be established as a child star. In "Virginia" she has an important role and speaks almost as much dialogue as the stars, Madeleine Carroll and Fred MacMurray. Yet she can't read. Her mother reads Carolyn's lines to the child two or three times, and little Miss Lee commits them to memory.

The infant seems to have been shot with luck two years ago; she was in a hotel in Wheeling, W. Va., just a few miles from her home town of Martin's Ferry, Ohio. She toddled up to a man, a stranger—and he just happened to be a movie executive. He let her lead him to her mother—and a screen test and a bit in "Honeymoon in Ball" resulted.

Fibber McGee and Molly have been signed by RKO to co-star in a picture with Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy; the picture, a feature film, will be produced by David Hempstead, who produced Ginger Rogers' "Kitty Foyle."

Maureen O'Hara, RKO-Radio's star from Ireland who is now at work in the leading feminine role of "They Met in Argentina," recently bade farewell to her mother with the injunction to "bring back a bit of the old sod" and a shamrock. Mrs. Fitzsimmons sailed for Lisbon, but expects to return soon with another gifted daughter.

She and Maureen came to this country two years ago, when Maureen made her Hollywood debut in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." "The Bill of Divorcement" and "Dance, Girl, Dance" followed, and Mrs. Fitzsimmons, who used to be an actress herself, is perfectly satisfied with her talented daughter's achievements.

How'd you like to act as a target for tomatoes and like it—and even ask for more? That's what George Michelson spent his time at the other day, and after the fourth shot he was the happiest man in Hollywood.

Michelson is assistant property man on James Roosevelt's "Pot o' Gold," and he had to make the tomato that James Stewart throws at Charles Winninger. He did it first by filling the thin outside skin with a mess of catsup, chocolate sauce and other little items, and then had somebody throw it at him while a camera turned.

After the first three smacks Michelson shook his head. "Nope," he said. "This won't do. I'll have to put some whipped cream in it."
So the whipped cream was added, and once more he took a tomato right between the eyes. This time he could grin—he'd made a photographic tomato, one that photographed as well that when it meets up with Winninger on the screen all of us will think it was just the ordinary garden variety.

Fran Allison, singing comedienne on the "Uncle Ezra" air show, can scratch her forehead and tickle a rib with the same motion, at the same time—and thinks probably she's the only person who can. About a year ago she had a plastic surgeon repair some injuries she'd suffered in an automobile accident, and he fixed up her forehead by building it up with one of her ribs.

ODDS AND ENDS—Fred Allen reads nine newspapers every day and clips everything that seems to contain a suggestion for his radio show; then he selects the best items and points up the humor. . . . The thousands of Brian Donlevy fans who have begged Paramount to give him a romantic role are going to have their wish granted—he'll play the part of a romantic burglar in "Pioneer Women," with Barbara Stanwyck and Paul McCree. . . . This year's concert tour which Nelson Kelly is twenty dates—he'll return to the coast by April 7th, to start on Nelson's "The Cheapest Ticket" with Rex Brown.

HOUSE PARTY

MURDER

By JAMES FREEMAN
(Associated Newspapers.)
WNU Service.

IT WAS a high-pitched, ear-splitting scream; the scream of a woman.

Following it there was a shot, a series of groans, a heavy, thudding sound.

Then silence. A profound, heavy silence.

Clyde Greene was the first to reach the corridor. Clyde's room was next to that occupied by Marie Leland. As the youth opened the door he switched on a light button and the corridor was brilliantly illuminated.

Clyde bounded on Marie Leland's door. There was no answer, and he decided to force the lock. By this time, the corridor was filled with people. Doors opened and frightened, curious faces looked up and down.

At sight of Clyde opening Marie Leland's door, they came running.

Clyde paused just inside the room. A shapeless bulk on the floor obstructed his passage. He felt along the wall, found a switch and snapped it on.

The bulk on the floor was a dead man. Blood oozed from a wound in his temple, Clyde recognized him at once as one of his week-end guests. His name was Howard Lund, and he was known to be madly in love with Marie.

Marie lay on the bed, unconscious. A dressing gown partly covered her form. Her face was white as chalk.

Clyde kept his head. It was his house; he was, in a sense, responsible. He kept the crowd back, turned to look at them. Jack Chase seemed the calmest.

"Go down and call the police, will you, Jack. And the rest of you please get back into the corridor. We don't want to disturb anything until the police get here."

It was fully a half hour before Inspector Oscar Bean and his chief aide, Bert Ross, arrived on the scene. They went immediately to Marie Leland's room. Minutes later they came back downstairs and confronted the scantily-clad guests in the drawing room.

And with them came Marie Leland, still pale, frightened looking. She hung herself on a divan and immediately broke into sobs. Homer Dunlap came and sat down beside her, and Marie clung to him.

Inspector Bean spoke to Clyde. "You're Greene, aren't you?"

"Yes."

"You'll save yourself a lot of trouble, Greene, and a lot for your guests, by answering my questions unreservedly. You understand what it will mean if I clear this thing up tonight?"

"Of course. Ask your questions."

"Bean glanced sidewise at Marie. "Was this man Lund in love with the girl?"

"I believe he was."

"Did she love him?"

Clyde looked uneasy, but Marie wasn't watching him.

"I don't think so."

"Possibly she loved someone else, and Lund was forcing himself on her?"

Clyde glanced meaningfully toward the divan. Bean nodded and strode in that direction. He sat down, close by the girl, ignoring the threatening look with which Homer Dunlap regarded him.

"Miss Leland, will you please tell me exactly what happened?"

The girl dabbed at her eyes. She was holding Dunlap's hand, and when he looked at her reassuringly, she turned to Bean.

"I don't know how long I'd been asleep. I was awakened by a noise. I looked up and saw a man's wrist watch glowing in the dark near the door. I screamed. There was a flash, a loud report. The door opened and closed. I saw a figure dart into the corridor. Then I must have fainted."

"You didn't recognize the figure, have no idea who it was?"

"No."

"Had Howard Lund been forcing his attentions on you?"

"Yes." She paused, seemed to consider, and went on. "We used to be engaged. It was a silly love affair. I soon got over it. Then I met Homer and fell in love with him. Howard kept hounding me."

"Hounding you?"

"Yes. He said he'd discovered some things about my past, and unless I'd let him come to my room he'd tell Homer. He always said that Homer was a no-good rich man's son."

"Did you tell him he could come to your room?"

"No!"

Bean spoke musingly, looking at Homer Dunlap. "It might be possible that someone who thought a good deal of Miss Leland overheard Lund make that threat. That same someone might have anticipated Lund coming to Miss Leland's room; might, in fact, have been there himself, or in the corridor nearby and—"

He broke off, got to his feet. "However, that isn't what happened—Greene, you'd better have your guests leave the room. These things are upsetting."

Greene nodded. He didn't understand, but he was glad to comply with the request.

Greene remained in the room until after the guests had gone.

"I'm sorry you didn't get anywhere with your questioning, Inspector."

Bean shook his head. "On the contrary, Greene, I got a long way. It didn't take a great deal of ingenuity to identify the killer."

Clyde's face was a mask of astonishment. "You don't mean you know who the culprit is?"

"That's exactly what I do mean."

"Well?"

"Marie Leland!"

"Marie! But good heavens, how could it be? When I arrived in the room she was lying on the bed unconscious."

"How do you know she was unconscious?"

Clyde bit his lip. He regarded the inspector steadily, wanting to believe, fearful of what the man knew.

"She identified herself as the murderer when she told her story. She mentioned awakening and seeing a man's wrist watch glowing in the dark. A man's! Why not a woman's? She knew it was a man's because she was expecting a man. And she wanted that man out of the way because of what he might tell. Besides, how many men who were in this room tonight wore wrist watches? None. All but Howard Lund had removed their watches for the night."

Bean paused. "She shot him. The gun was lying close by his hand. She had wiped it off with a handkerchief. I have the handkerchief in my pocket. It's spotted with grease marks from the gun. She had barely time to feign unconsciousness on the bed when you arrived. She must have been breathing heavily. It's odd you didn't notice."

Clyde sank into a chair. He turned his head as a sound came from near the door. He opened it and Detective Ross stood there. Behind him was Marie Leland, fully clad, miserable of expression, frightened, sobbing hysterically.

Clyde turned away. It was a nasty business.

Family Trouble Starts

Over Handling Finances

Nothing causes more friction in the American family than the question of who shall handle the family's finances. Man is traditionally the provider, so of course, his self-esteem makes him unable to bear the thought of a woman telling him how to handle his money.

The thing to do, according to one expert on financial problems is to treat the problem as a business concern treats it. A business concern makes its purchasing agent the shrewdest bargainer it can dig up and to hire the best bookkeepers it can find for its auditing department. It doesn't give the purchasing job to a good-contact-idea man, or the auditing jobs to a bunch of good salesmen.

Do the same thing in your home, the expert advises. Take stock of each partner—rule out the vanities and taboos—determine which of the two firm members is the better at stretching a dollar and keeping track of all the dollars that come in and go out, and then simply elect that partner chancellor of the home exchequer.

Run the business side of the family as a business, unemotionally and shrewdly and you will likely detour a lot of emotional upsets, not to mention a lot of inefficient use of what money you have to use.

Why It's Stalewall Jackson
Time: July 21, 1861.
Place: Manassas, Prince William county, Virginia.

Dramatis Personae: Generals Thomas Jonathan Jackson and Bernard Elliott Bee, Federal and Confederate troops.

It was the first Battle of Bull Run, or as the South prefers to call it, Manassas.

Under the withering fire and irresistible charge of the Federals, the Confederate General Bee's brigade had broken and was on the verge of utter rout.

As from nowhere, appeared General Jackson with five of Virginia's crack regiments, who, though confronted by superior numbers, were holding their own, were indeed beginning to press forward.

"See, there is Jackson standing like a stone wall!" shouted Bee to discouraged soldiers.

Suiting their actions to his stirring words, which passed from lips to lips, the fast faltering troops reformed their ranks and put up such a stiff fight as to contribute materially to shifting the tide of battle, the Federals coming off second best.

General Bee was killed leading the fresh rally; but his sobriquet, "Stonewall" for Thomas Jonathan Jackson survives lustily.

SOIL FERTILITY VITAL TO U. S.

National Security Requires Productive Land.

By PROF. J. C. CHAPMAN
(Department of Agronomy, University of Wisconsin.)

American agriculture is coming to realize that a national defense program against the forces of soil depletion and exploitation is just as vital to the future of this country as defense against foreign aggression.

In every past age, soil fertility has played a dominant part. Successful civilizations have sought and fought for fertile lands that would provide food and clothing.

The restlessness of the earth's early inhabitants, their migrations and invasions of new countries were in most instances due to the depletion of the soils in their own countries and a desire to acquire and settle the more fertile areas of the then-known world.

It was not until comparatively recently that the development of the science of soil chemistry taught the nations of the world how to maintain soil fertility on their lands.

Of recent date, too, is the recognition by American agriculture of the dangers of soil exhaustion in this country. Farmers have come to realize that every year they are selling plant food from their land in the form of cash crops, dairy products and live stock. They have discovered that even in a system of live stock farming where all the crops are fed to stock and the manure returned to the fields, they are losing fertility at an alarming rate.

Everywhere we have been drawing checks on our bank account—the soil—and spending and using our fertility much faster than we have been replacing it with plant foods.

The hopeful fact in our situation, however, is that farmers in increasing numbers are becoming aware of the seriousness of these losses and are taking steps to prevent them.

They are using lime and fertilizers and following soil and crop management practices that will restore the native productiveness of their farms.

This national defense program against the forces of soil depletion is steadily gathering momentum. It is being spurred forward through the co-operation of the federal government, the AAA, the state agricultural colleges, and farmers' organizations everywhere. The war against soil exhaustion gives promise of final victory.

Capons Require Special Care Before Marketing

Where capons are being fattened for market they should be fed a regular growing ration and plenty of whole grain, which should be hopped fed. Clean quarters and range are important. Close confinement should be avoided. A clean open field with protection from the weather, such as that afforded by a good range shelter, is ideal.

During the last couple of weeks before marketing, it will pay to feed a wet mash twice a day consisting of growing mash and milk or whole grain soaked in milk in addition to the usual ration. Such feeding will improve the quality of the birds, but actual poundage is made by keeping them on a full and complete growing ration throughout the summer and fall months.

Worms should be strictly guarded against, tapeworms in particular, since wormy capons simply refuse to get fat. If the birds are wormy, they should be treated without fail. After which, they should be removed to a clean range.

Mulch of Pine Needles Reforests Eroded Field

Pine needle mulch can sometimes be used to reforest old fields or clay gull areas, recent experiments at the Southern Piedmont Soil Conservation Experiment station at Athens, Ga., show.

Seeking an economical way of seeding eroded areas, the station mulched four clay-galled plots with 800 pounds of pine-needle litter from adjacent woods. In five months a healthy mixed vegetation developed, including more than 1,600 shortleaf seedlings—an average of two seedlings from each pound of mulch.

The study will observe for several years the survival and height growth of the seedlings resulting from this simple and inexpensive scattering pine-needle litter over the bare area to a depth of about one inch. If only one-fourth of the existing seedlings live for five years, the area will be well planted.

LOS ANGELES.—Golf's Hall of Fame is now moving into an established setting. I suggested the idea two years ago and found immediate sponsorship from the Professional Golf Association of America, more briefly known as the P.G.A.

It was suggested that I name a committee of veteran golf writers who had the background of more than 30 years of American golf.

This committee includes Linde Fowler, Boston, experience 36 years; Kerr N. Petrie, New York, experience 34 years; O. B. Keeler, Atlanta, experience 34 years along the paths of the "ancient game."

The committee will offer its suggestions to more than 200 writers and column conductors who go in for golf-writers covering the bunkered landscape of the country—and their votes shall be decisive. It was the original idea of this committee to start things rolling by naming four men who certainly belong at the top—Walter Hagen, Bobby Jones, Francis Ouimet and Gene Sarazen, to put them alphabetically. They are, considering every angle, without any question, the four top men of American golf.

Jones and Hagen alone won 19 national championships—U. S. Open and Amateur and British Open and Amateur. Francis Ouimet by beating Vardon and Ray in the U. S. Open back in 1913 made American youth golf conscious, removing golf from the social and financial pages to the sporting page. Gene Sarazen has won the British and U. S. Opens more than once, the P.G.A., and after 29 campaigns came back last June to the Lawson Little for the U. S. Open at Cleveland.

All four were great golfers, great sportsmen, great fellows, and packed with personal color. I believe the vast majority of the golf writers will support this selection or this nomination.

The Long Parade
The idea was to make eligible all golfers who had lived or held club positions in the United States. This, of course, would leave out such stars as Harry Vardon, Harold Hilton and Ted Ray. They were welcome invaders, but not U. S. golfers.

In addition to the homebreds and the homeborn it would leave such eligible entries as Willie Anderson, Alec Smith, MacDonald Smith, Tommy Armour, Long Jim Barnes, Bobby Cruickshank and others who have given most of their golfing time to America.

In addition to these others there are other big names left—Jack McDermott, who led for the Open in 1910 and then won in 1911 and 1912, the first homebred to roll back foreign born domination; Jerry Travers, who won four U. S. Amateurs and one U. S. Open; Chick Evans, the first to win the U. S. Amateur and U. S. Open in one year—1916; Walter J. Travis, who, starting golf at 36, was the first American player to win the British Amateur—in 1904; Lawson Little, a strong entry, current U. S. Open champion and winner of both U. S. and British Amateurs two years in a row.

If Jones, Hagen, Sarazen and Ouimet are named as the first four—as I believe they will be—the scramble for the next place should be wide open—McDermott; Evans; Travers; Alec and Mae Smith; Willie Anderson, winner of four U. S. Opens, three in a row; Armour; Barnes; Travis; Little; Sweetser; Goodman; Robert A. Gardner; and then the new crop coming on—Nelson, Hogan, Snead, Guldhaf and others. There is more than enough talent in sight.

The committee, with the aid of Freddy Corcoran, tournament director of the P.G.A., will be ready to make the first nominations by April and so open the main door to the Hall of Fame.

Ladies and Location
The next two problems concern the ladies of golf and the location of the Hall of Fame.

There also will be a Hall of Fame for the women stars to be considered separately. Such golfers as Alex Stirling, Genna Collett, Marion Hollis, Helen Hicks, and Patty Berg should be near the top.

There has been a keen rush to establish headquarters for this hall. Savannah, Ga., claiming the first golf club in 1811, is already in with its request. So is St. Andrews, claiming the first golf course and golf club combined.

Atlanta wants it in behalf of Bobby Jones, Boston in behalf of Francis Ouimet, Rochester in behalf of Walter Hagen.

Lowell Thomas, the well-known sports commentator, sponsored in a golf way by Gene Sarazen, would like to build a special hall at his place in New York and make this a golfing shrine.

Speaking of SPORTS

By ROBERT McSHANE
Revised by Western Newspaper Union

FRITZIE ZIVIC, current king of the welterweight division, has one of the oddest boxing careers on record, having whipped some of the greatest fighters in the country and having lost to some of the worst second raters.

During the past seven years Fritzie has fought 116 times and lost only 20. He has lost to such gentlemen as Johnny Barbara, an individual whose mediocre talents commanded little respect even among his friends. On the credit side he whipped Henry Armstrong twice—whipped him thoroughly not more than half a year after being clouted around by the ham-and-eggers.

Among his opponents have been Billy Conn, Sammy Angott, Mike Kaplan, Milt Aron, Chuck Wood and a host of others.

Fritzie, one of five Zivic brothers, all of whom have at one time or another made a living with their fists, is slightly on the screwball side.

According to Scotty Strachan, a Detroit promoter, Fritzie will fight 10 times a week if the bouts can be arranged.

No Training Slave
While the 26-year-old Pittsburgh youth may like to fight, he isn't enthusiastic about training. In fact, he is practically immune to training rules. It has been suggested that he stays up to four or five in the morning sometimes drinking beer. This is a great sorrow to Lew Carney, his manager, but to date Mr. Carney has not discovered a pastime which his fighter is willing to substitute.

The youngest of the Zivic boys has one or two other ideas which are strictly original. Occasionally he will send Carney back to Pittsburgh and tour the country alone, handling himself and making his own contracts. While this may not be an ideal arrangement from a managerial standpoint, Carney still gets his share of the swag.

Self-Analyst
Whether or not he's the family's best fighter, Fritzie is quite well pleased with himself. He knows, too, why he has the unhappy habit of dropping an occasional fight to a dope. That, he says, is because the Zivics are an emotional lot. He admits that at times his fighting is far from inspired. And that's because the opposition hasn't the fire to move him—isn't dangerous enough to be taken seriously.

He was inspired for the Armstrong brawl, however. He was so eager to meet the champion that he instructed Promoter Al Abrams to offer Armstrong a $25,000 guarantee. Zivic was willing to fight for expenses in the match, originally scheduled for Pittsburgh. Mike Jacobs was so impressed by the set-up that he booked the fight for Madison Square Garden, figuring the bout was good enough for New York. The rest is ring history. Hammerin' Henry lost, then lost again in a return engagement.

If ever a fighter came by his trade naturally, Fritzie did. A Zivic who couldn't scrap would have been at an awesome disadvantage. Each of the five boys believes that he could, during his prime, have whipped any and all of his brothers.

To make it even more baffling, their friends agree with them. To do anything else would not be diplomatic.

Zivic never will be known as the greatest welterweight champion in ring history. He doesn't take his business seriously enough for that. But when the blue chips are stacked high on the table, and the competition is tough, then Fritzie gives the family plenty of reason for its Zivic pride.

The Once Over

DRAMATIC REVIEW OF A 1941 INCOME TAX BLANK
"You Can't Take It With You" or "Tax Blank for 1941" has had its presentation before the American public, and, while it met with a mixed response, your reviewer would describe it as adequate. It is a straight, direct, merciless, tightly written affair which, despite muddling passages here and there, gets its message across. That, after all, is its purpose.

"Tax Blank for 1941" is in a sense a revival. It follows the pattern of other years but has been extensively rewritten, with many new lines and some startling effects, particularly that part of the narrative where it is discovered that Jonathan Q. Doe, our hero, supposing he gets the same exemption as in the past for being a married man, finds the exemption has been cut from $2,500 to $2,000. This is an obvious slap at matrimony, and, since it is a widely cherished institution, we do not think the authors have done a service to society by belittling it in this way.

A moment of high drama comes in a bleak scene laid in the Upper Brackets country. Here we have the same heavy mood of resentment, of anger, pain and despair so characteristic in previous years. Sel-dom has there been a more moving scene than when T. Dudley Softtouch and Luther Gettahead come face to face with Paragraph 6, Item 7, Page 4 and find that on the same income as they had last year they must now pay a supertax of almost twice as much. Here is action belonging to the sternest school of realism.

Perhaps the peak of emotion comes in a little scene where Soft-touch, almost a mental wreck after having finally figured up what he owes the government (with the help of six lawyers), is about to make out a check when he suddenly discovers that congress has placed a separate defense tax of 10 per cent on top of all. For a moment this reviewer thought the performance had all the elements of a fusion of "Hollzapoppin'" and "Macbeth." Screams penetrated the rafters and seldom have such lines as "They can't do that to me!" "This is an outrage!" and "It's that fellow in the White House" been delivered with such power and feeling.

There is both drama and comedy in the later chapter when millions of Americans in the lower income group, who have been laughing at the upper groupers all these years, discover that at last they must come across too.

All in all (and that's the way they take it now), the production is sure to have the usual appeal, coupled with the additional response always occasioned by the surprise note. Your reviewer must say in all candor that "Tax Blank for 1941" lacks laughs. There is hardly an amusing line anywhere if you exclude the old gag, "Were you damaged by fire or storm during the last fiscal year?" But it is set for a run lasting through to next December 15. Nothing can stop it.

Bill Priender says that Mr. Roosevelt's broadcasts these days might be billed as "Firearms Chats."

Wendell Willkie has now gone over to the administration side so completely that some people are even speaking of him as Wenlin Wilcovelt.

New York city will have a population of eight to nine million people ultimately, an expert says. It is hard to imagine that many people running around asking questions on how to reach destinations in New York city.

The annual National Automobile show has been abandoned for this year. The public will have to find some other good excuse for going to the big city for a two or three-day spree.

The Jackson day dinner by the Democrats will be a unity banquet. This will require special arrangements to see that nobody gets hurt.

I trust Wendell Willkie doesn't get into a bombing raid in London and send Roosevelt a card "Having awful time; wish you were here!"

The only difference between our aid to England in the last war and this one will be that this time our aid will have a zipper on it.

De Luxe "Torpedo" Six Four-Door Sedan, $921* (white sidewall tires extra)

WITH THE INTRODUCTION of its glamorous new Metropolitan "Torpedo" Sedan, Pontiac rounds out the most complete line of low-priced cars in its entire history—six big, handsome De Luxe models with bodies by Fisher, every one available with either a six-cylinder or an eight-cylinder engine.

The new Metropolitan Sedan takes its place among the motor car style hits of all time. Patterned after a higher-priced and sensationally successful Pontiac model, it combines unusual rear-compartment spaciousness with the privacy possible only in 4-door, 4-window design.

In addition to the new Metropolitan, Pontiac's De Luxe series now includes the 4-door 6-window Sedan; the Sedan Coupe; the 2-door Sedan; the Business Coupe and the very smart Convertible Sedan Coupe.

All six of these lowest-priced Pontiacs offer the sound, time-tried engineering principles which have won Pontiac such an excellent reputation for riding comfort, handling ease and long, trouble-free service. And all of them are exceptionally economical to own and drive.

Plan to see the Metropolitan Sedan—as well as the Pontiac "Torpedoes"—which are offered in a wide range of prices. And remember... if you can afford any new car, you can afford a Pontiac.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Threat of German Invasion of Britain And Congressional Lease-Lend Debate Present Grim Picture of War Situation; Italians Continue to Fall Back in Africa

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.) (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

CRISIS: For Lease-Lend

The real crisis in the lease-lend legislation found a well-defined public response to the antagonistic efforts of the isolationists and the non-interventionists.

The result?—The administration called big guns to the support of the measure, and predicted its passage during the week beginning March 3. The schedule called for unlimited debate in house and senate, but there were many indications that this limitation would bring forth tremendous opposition in Republican floor circles and in senate committees as well.

Generally speaking, the public attitude, as disclosed in numbers of polls of sentiment conducted by newspapers throughout the country, seemed to be that the all-out aid to Britain principle was favorably received.

The public, on the other hand, seemed to feel that there was at least a reasonable doubt whether the President should be given as much and as drastic power as the original lease-lend draft indicated.

This was reflected even in the sponsorship of the measure, because Representative Bloom (N. Y.) who was chairman of the house foreign relations committee, scarcely put up any opposition against three or four major amendments, limiting the time for which the presidential powers would be granted, declaring in principle against convoys and other items in which the opposition found fault with the bill.

This showed the administration forces to be in the unusual position of fostering legislation of which they do not approve themselves, at least in part.

Either that, or they were "shooting for the moon," and willing to give and take in order to reach their main objective—of the passage of a bill which would in effect repeal the Johnson act forbidding loans to belligerents who had not paid their World War debts.

INVASION: Threat Near

As the lease-lend argument reached its zenith, predictions that England was nearing the critical period in the Battle For Britain were legion. Lindbergh had set the most gloomy picture, figuring that Britain could never withstand the onslaught.

One could figure which side of the lease-lend battle the predictor was on by the darkness of the picture he painted. Knox and Stimson predicted a crisis, but gave few details and little soothing as to what would be the outcome.

But those opposed to the lease-lend proposal varied widely in what they saw in the future's crystal ball. Most gloomy of all was Von Wiegand, who in a dispatch dated Shanghai, purported to report what German and Japanese authorities believed was about to occur.

Six weeks would tell the tale, said Von Wiegand. He envisioned 247 divisions of trained men, 15,000 paratroopers, a score of tank divisions, descending on England, and Hearst papers printed an "artist's conception" of the "Blitz on Britain," which would tear London into shreds—long before American aid could swing the balance.

Every authority who discussed blitzkrieg on London talked of poison gas—new forms, lethal gas for which "no gas mask" has yet been provided.

HIGHLIGHTS in the week's news

Horse—The practice of killing horses for meat was attacked by the newspaper La Tribune, which said: "The horse is more useful when alive than when put in the form of beefsteaks and sausages." Baltimore—A "sample" blitzkrieg started a near-panic in a movie house. Tanks and motortrucks vibrated the pavement, setting off the automatic fire alarm.

LABOR: Raises Its Head

The domestic labor situation became steadily worse during the weeks that the lease-lend bill was "on the tapis" in Washington.

Perhaps the Allis-Chalmers strike was the most serious, affecting as it did not only that single industry, but as Allis-Chalmers was making parts, it meant a serious hold-up all along the line, particularly in planes and tanks.

But the most striking labor development of the week was the statement issued by Henry Ford through one of his industrial lieutenants. Ford authorized this man to say in his name that the Ford enterprises would never yield to the government demand that defense products be manufactured under union labor conditions.

Ford's rejoinder was that he would never knuckle down to labor's demands, that instead he would leave his industries to the government at one dollar a year, and let the government run them.

Ford agreed in principle with the necessity of American arming in its own defense, and with the principle that in defense work patriotism was the primary urge, and profits had no part.

He therefore offered to give up his industries, and let the government operate them under a non-profit arrangement, producing whatever vital materials were wished for.

The only government answer to this was to refuse Ford a contract on which his organization had been low bidder.

Basis of the dispute had been Ford's refusal to sit down with Sidney Hillman, labor chief of the national defense, and to find some plan by which the Ford interests could operate in the defense scheme—settling the labor difficulty once and for all.

Labor, as personified by the C.I.O., had set as its major objective for 1941 the organization of the Ford plants.

This objective seemed to mean aly one thing—abandonment of the Ford plants—of their complete divorce from national defense contracts.

ITALY: In Africa

The African campaign of the British forces against the troops of Mussolini continued to be a victorious one, despite the fact that it was reported that the Nazi air force had given considerable aid to the Fascist legions.

In succession one port on the Mediterranean after another had fallen to General Wavell's men—Salum, Bardia, Tobruk and Derna. In Libya, none but Bengali remained to be conquered.

All the cities previously captured, some of them cities only by courtesy, for they were only a few huts huddled together and a small group of embryo wharfs, had been on flat land. In passing Derna the British were moving on the capital of Cyrenaica, and were stepping into a more mountainous territory, the so-called Green Mountains of Libya, where a force of 50,000 Italians were determined to hold out to the last.

The same combination of land attack, backed up by air force and navy shelling from naval craft at sea, was being used by General Wavell in the final phase of the Libyan campaign. There was every belief that with the capture of Bengasi the campaign would end.

London—The RAF claims that 370 German and Italian planes were downed in January, as compared with only 33 British warcraft. The total for the war shows 3,000 German planes downed over Britain. Lansing, Mich.—Wild geese, formerly forced to swim across the Au Sable river, this winter have a rustic footbridge. It was built for them by the conservation department.

WEYGAND: Finally Unmasked

GEN. MAXIME WEYGAND He'll 'track-along.'

Gen. Maxime Weygand went to Africa an enigma.

Much of this enigmatic quality was dispelled when he issued a statement in which he definitely refused to "throw in" his hand with DeGaulle, but said he would "track along" with the Petain regime in Vichy.

Yet it was not quite so clear as all that, although it was extremely important that Weygand should have finally unmasked himself.

For the Vichy situation was still, in its way, considerable of a mystery.

The Nazis were reportedly much disgusted with Vichy's failure to back up the Laval ideology, particularly in regard to the use of Tunisia for Nazi bases of operations in Africa.

So the stand, announced by Weygand, that he would continue to support the Vichy regime, could or could not be taken to mean that Weygand had fallen in with the Nazi party line.

Yet Great Britain had hoped that Weygand, in going to Africa, was "escaping" from Vichy, and would turn in the direction of DeGaulle.

That hope, at least, was completely dispelled by Weygand's statement, which unhesitatingly lined him up with the Vichy government. What that government would turn out to be, remained undecided.

G. O. P.:

On Two Sides

Oddest picture of the lease-lend bill fight in America was the sudden junket of Wendell L. Willkie, late G. O. P. standard-bearer, to England to take "his personal look" at the state of Britain.

Willkie's departure was speeded by a paternal pat on the head from his erstwhile opponent, President Roosevelt, and a note written by hand to Winston Churchill.

Willkie flew to Europe. He was greeted practically with presidential honor in the Azores, where the natives could not be convinced they were not greeting the President himself.

He landed at Lisbon, was ferried hastily to England, dined with Churchill, lunched with royalty, and hobnobbed with the plain and fancy in London.

He underwent air-raids, habitually roamed about the streets without helmet or gas-mask, (on three occasions he had to be handed both with a gentle reprimand from some higher-up), and generally inspected the state of Britain as he, Willkie, had intended to.

America was treated to the strange spectacles of the Democratic administration "needing" the testimony of the ex-Republican standard-bearer to help it over the hill on the lease-lend bill.

The whole situation was something of a shock to Republican leaders of the fight against the measure, especially when Hull let it be known that Willkie's sudden return had been demanded by Senator George, head of foreign relations in the senate, who wanted the Indianan to testify before the committee hearings on the bill.

In fact, the shock was so drastic in some quarters that Republican groups in various centers held meetings to "decide Willkie's status" in the party, with the evident intimation that if he should prove too good a friend to the administration, he might be "read out of the party."

JAPAN: The 'Peacemaker'

With dramatic suddenness, peace came in the Indo-China war with the Siamese.

Japan, it developed, had been "invited" by the belligerents, when a strong Nipponese fleet had appeared in the offing, to sit down and settle the hostilities.

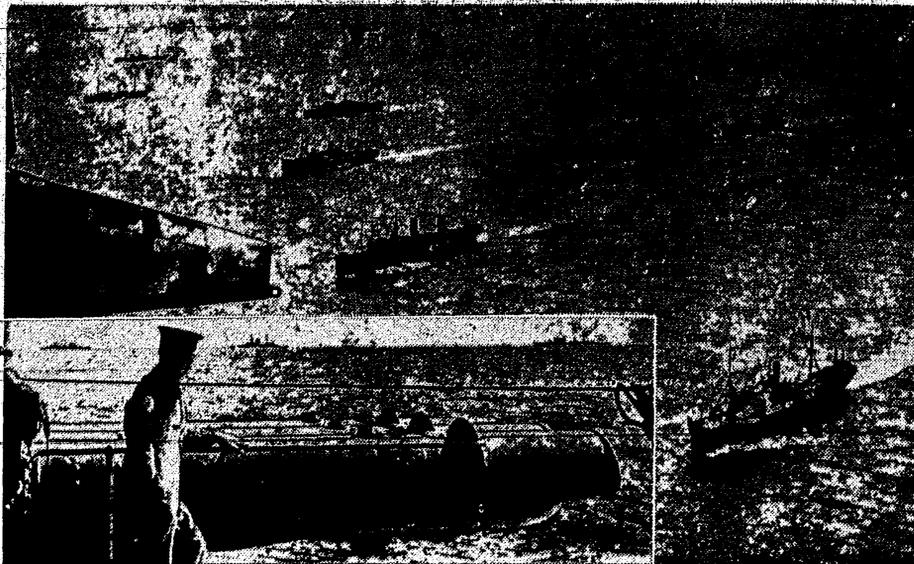

This settlement, as might have been expected, was that Thailand should keep what it had taken from Indo-China, together with some additional cessions of territory.

Keenest observers of the far-eastern scene foresaw in the Japanese intervention only one outcome.

They believed that Japan would become so dominant in southeastern Asia that Thailand and Indo-China would soon be mere puppet states similar to Manchukuo.

The state department in Washington viewed these events with a serious eye, seeing in them assured proof that sooner or later there would have to be a showdown of power in the Pacific between the United States and Japan.

For the Empire on Which the Sun Never Sets

Above: This photo, made from a short Sunderland, long range reconnaissance flying boat, shows a convoy of merchant ships with food and the sinews of war coming into port in England. Part of the Sunderland may be seen at left of photo. Inset: Giant triple torpedo-tubes are swung overboard from a British warship, ready for action, somewhere in the Mediterranean. Other units of the British fleet are seen on skyline.

German and Italian Prisoners of War

Although the censor does not reveal the city, the name on the train verifies the fact that it is in Canada that these German prisoners (left) are being marched to their train from the prison ship at an east coast port. Right: Some of the thousands of Italian prisoners made captive as the doughty Greek warriors and their assistants, the British, pressed farther and farther into Albania.

Der Fuehrer Welcomes New Soviet Envoy

This picture, which was approved by the German censors, shows Adolf Hitler, chancellor of Germany, chatting with Wladimir Detskosov, in the new Reich chancellery, shortly after Detskosov had presented his credentials as the new ambassador from Soviet Russia to Germany. The German leader is all cordiality.

Trouble in Paradise

With plenty of snow and nice-cold (br-r-r) water, Mr. and Mrs. Polar Bear at the Prospect Park zoo, in New York city, indulge in a family squabble. Mrs. Bear is sore because the old man used up all the ice water before she had a chance to take her bath.

Lion of Judah Leads Revolt

Somewhere in the Sudan, near the Ethiopian frontier, Haile Selassie, "Lion of Judah," ex-emperor of Abyssinia, inspects some of the troops with which he hopes to overthrow Italian rule and regain control of his empire. Already his revolting tribesmen have been credited with several successes against the Italians.

R.A.F. Pays Call

A rare picture, passed by the German censors, showing some of the extensive damage caused by raiding planes of the R.A.F. on the residential section of Wurzburg, Germany.

Hidden Ways

By FREDERIC F. VAN DE WATER

"Intelligent people!" Cochrane grinned. "But you missed something this morning. The Sphere had a picture of Ione Ferriter. I suspect that our competitor, Mr. Duke, bribed some cop to steal it from the flat across the hall. Anyway, he tied a knot in my tail, or thought he did. Now I'm ready to tie two in his."

He paused to enjoy the drama of suspense. The doorbell thwarted him. Shannon strode into the room. His companion lingered in the hall, satchel in hand. The Captain glared at Cochrane, who beamed in reply, and whatever question he was about to ask concerning the reporter's presence was blown away by Miss Agatha's voice.

"I sent for you, Captain," she said precisely, "because we have found the knife that stabbed Mr. Ferriter's visitor."

At my side I heard Jerry grunt. He uttered no other sound while Shannon rapped out questions and Miss Agatha replied as calmly as though she were giving census information. The Captain strode to the table and gingerly undid the handkerchief.

"Yes," he grunted, almost as though he regretted it, "it looks like it."

He held it by forefingers pressed to point and butt and turned it this way and that.

"Blood," he proclaimed, and I never knew before how ugly that word could be. "As for fingerprints—"

He wheeled and glared at me. "You didn't wipe it, or mess it up, did you?" he barked.

Miss Agatha's voice cut: "Mr. Mallory and I found it together as I told you. If we had wished to suppress evidence, we should have suppressed it entirely."

The bullying note left Shannon's voice as she looked at him.

"Right you are, Miss Paget," he granted and turned to his assistant. "We'll be going over it, Al. Miss Paget, is there a bathroom handy? We'll make a bit of a mess here."

Miss Agatha rang for Annie. They followed the maid down the hall. Cochrane looked reproachfully at me and more sympathetically at aunt and niece, who sat still and stiff in their anxiety. The silence grew unbearable. Jerry said at last:

"And I thought I had hold of something!"

Allegra did not seem to hear him. Rigid and intent she watched the doorway.

Miss Agatha asked: "And it has no importance now?"

Cochrane had forgotten his pretense of indifference. He frowned and shrugged.

"It may, or it may not," he grumbled, "according to what Shannon finds on that knife. Dave has told you of the mysterious siren who called on him?"

"No," said Miss Agatha wryly, "I've always understood gentlemen don't talk of such things."

Cochrane grinned at her in admiration.

I muttered: "It didn't seem important."

"That was one of the things," Jerry went on, "that made me think it might be. The night our bright young friend was jumped in the basement, the night that knife was lost, Dave had a call from a dark young woman who wouldn't leave her name with the landlady, good Mrs. Shaw, who has a stern sense of virtue and, what is better, an eagle eye and an elephantine memory."

"Because," said Cochrane, resuming his sleepy air, "she has recognized the picture of Ione Ferriter in the Sphere as Dave's would-be visitor. There seems to be no question about the identification. Mrs. Shaw is positive. Why should Lyon Ferriter's beloved sister want to see you, Dave?"

her breath. Miss Agatha repeated, almost in satisfaction: "Nothing?"

Shannon said to her: "That's probably blood on the blade. There are no fingerprints at all."

Cochrane hummed beneath his breath. Shannon glared at him, and went on, with aimless anger: "There's a mark on the hilt that might have been made by the fingers of a damp glove—a lady's glove."

Jerry glanced at me and let his eyes slide quickly away. The silence that followed was strangely filled with relief and disappointment.

Miss Agatha mused aloud: "He is very clever."

"Who?" Shannon snapped.

She seemed to hear suspicion of her nephew in the query. Her face hardened, and she spoke slowly and purposefully.

"The murderer," she told the Captain. "Or if you want me to name him, Lyon Ferriter."

Shannon flinched at the word.

"How do you know?"

"How do I know?" asked Miss Agatha coldly. "How does Mr. Mal-

Allegra looked at me and turned away.

lory know? How do you know yourself, Captain Shannon? By something that's worthless in court. Lyon Ferriter killed that man. He used that knife you hold. I don't know why. Perhaps to protect that precious sister of his, for whose sake he's willing to let an innocent and foolish boy play scapegoat."

At each word Miss Agatha spoke in her bitter, careful voice, my mad idea grew more normal in shape and color. It drove me to speech, but Shannon's harsh voice rode over my words.

"Miss Paget, whether you're right or wrong, no one can say. That was my own thought at first and now—"

He shrugged.

Cochrane completed it for him: "And now," he said softly, "when you announce you've found the murder weapon, but no clue to how it got in the basement, or who left it there, you're through—whipped, outwitted, scuttled. Mr. Ferriter, who hasn't been sure where that knife has been, wins. He'll sleep easier from now on."

"All right," Shannon snarled in angry helplessness; "that's like most of the newspaper suggestions. It's a help, isn't it? What would you do, wise boy?"

Cochrane shook his head. "I heard Miss Agatha say: 'I know what I'd do.'"

We looked at her. Her face was hard and her voice, that spoke what I had feared to utter, was firm: "If Lyon Ferriter has a weakness, it is his love for his sister. I think he can be reached by attacking her."

Shannon had not the sort of brain that is fired by abstract theory. There was scorn in his grunt.

"Would you then? And how?"

If the old lady's suggestion had rolled his mind, it had clarified mine. Her speech had been a key, unlocking the door of my mind behind which that wild, originally fantastic idea had waited. I said, before Miss Agatha could speak again: "Arrest Ione Ferriter."

I had uttered her thought. I saw her start and look at me in wonder. "Arrest her?" Shannon jeered. "For what?"

His crooked smile was mocking. Allegra's eyes widened. Cochrane looked at me as though he were dozing. I stood their combined regard.

"For murder. For the murder of Blackbeard. There's enough to make it stick—for a while."

"For a while," the policeman echoed in derision.

Miss Agatha said quickly, sitting straight and flushed in her wheel chair: "Captain Shannon, Lyon Ferriter killed that man. I know it. Mr. Mallory knows it. You suspected it at first. But you could not reach him. His story, his alibi, had no apparent weakness. Yet he has a weakness. It is his love for his sister."

Shannon stared as though he wondered whether she had lost her mind. I prodded him further:

"Through her you can hit him where it'll hurt most. If you're game to carry through a bluff, you may break him."

Cochrane had caught my intention. I heard him mutter blasphemous approval. I felt Allegra's eyes on me, but I watched the policeman's smoldering doubt.

"It's your one chance," I told him. "Take it or leave it."

Miss Agatha started to speak. Then she checked herself and I knew her nod meant that she surrendered her plan—our plan—to my keeping.

Shannon ruffled his hair and took two uneasy strides away from the desk. I started to speak again. He said:

"Wait a minute. Al, close that door from the outside and don't let anyone come near it."

CHAPTER XIX

It took an hour to bend Shannon to the mad purpose. Miss Agatha and Cochrane were my allies. They followed my lead and, at need, took the lead themselves. We hammered the Captain with reasons, prodded him with persuasion, while he walked the floor as though he sought cover from our argument. All through the clash of voices and purposes, Allegra sat silent beside her aunt but the pent excitement reached her. Severely left her face. Color came to it and her eyes woke up and moved quickly from speaker to speaker. Slight of her helped me stand up to Shannon.

From the second when I lifted my voice, I knew the least faltering would emphasize the desperate fantasy I put forward. At first I feigned confidence, linking fact to fact in arbitrary union. Then, as I spoke, I converted myself. It seemed as though speech washed away mystery to bare at least coherent outlines.

Cochrane sat beside me. His innocent face was drowsy but his nimble mind kept pace with mine, endorsing my contentions, supplying pointed comment when Shannon balked. Miss Agatha said little, but her rare words cut. We outraged the policeman's sense of propriety and stripped that from him. We pried his mind loose from official procedure. He withstood us stubbornly, tramping to and fro, rumppling his hair, now and then shaking his head like a fly-pestered horse. He took that afternoon the sweating he and his associates had dealt to many.

"It's—it's illegal," he blurted at last with a cornered air and glared at Cochrane who chuckled.

"So," Jerry drawled, "is a length of rubber hose."

It was luck more than logic that broke Shannon at last. He raked his hair and shook his head again.

"Maybe," he granted, "it would make a good movie. But the girl has an alibi. You can't get over that. Somebody downstairs—Hoyt it was, saw her come in."

I got up. "If that's all that gags you," I said, "I'll see Hoyt. He'll back our play. His story will be that he didn't want to get a lady into trouble."

I did not wait for Shannon's objection but opened the door, almost upsetting Al who guarded it. I found Hoyt at the switchboard. I told him, as quickly as I could, what I wanted and why. He gasped and boggled and at last consented, when I reminded him of his earlier offer of aid. Then he whispered something that sent me hot-footing it up the stair again.

I saw when I re-entered the work-room that Shannon wavered.

"Personally, Captain Shannon," Miss Agatha was saying, "I place justice above orthodoxy. The murder was unconventional. Why shouldn't the arrest be equally so? I know he did it. You think he did. If he didn't, Ione or Everett did and the two survivors are accessories after and, perhaps, before-the-fact. Are you always so wedded to legal formality, Captain?"

Cochrane leaned forward. "Listen," he wheedled, "what can you lose? Say it doesn't click. So what? Are you worse off? It's a crazy idea. Sure. But so is this whole set-up. We're trying to give you the chance to tear this case wide open—and solo at that. Do you want to be just a captain all your life?"

Allegra was watching me. She alone in the room seemed to feel the tidings I bore. Shannon spoke with the muffled roar of the hard-pressed.

"All right. Suppose I go goofy and throw in with you? How are you gonna work it? Tell me that! Call up Lyon—at the Babylon—and say, 'Can we bother you to come on down here so we can tell you what we've got on your sister, before we make a collar?'"

In the silence he glared about and breathed loudly through his nose. I said as quietly as I could: "If that's all that's worrying you, Lyon is next door now. He came in a while ago, Hoyt says."

"By God!" Shannon said at last in an unwilling voice.

I went on: "Eddie will ask him to stop in here, when he starts to go. You might send your man downstairs just to make sure that he does."

Shannon wavered for the last time. Then he squared his shoulders, inhaled like one entering a cold plunge and called: "Al!"

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D., Dean of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. (Revised by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for February 16

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education, used by permission.

JESUS TEACHES FORGIVENESS AND GRATITUDE

LESSON TEXT—Luke 17:1-4, 11-19. "COULD YOU have kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you."—Ephesians 4:32.

Did you ever hear of "vinegar saints"? They are the Christian folk who are "preserved" (as Paul prayed in I Thess. 5:23), but are apparently pickled instead of sweetened. Every housewife knows that things may be preserved with sugar or with vinegar.

God never intended it to be that way. All through His Word there are admonitions and encouragements to gracious and considerate living. Every Christian is under orders to "grow in grace" as well as in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ (II Pet. 3:18). This lesson stresses two leading Christian graces.

I. Forgiveness—Not Always Easy, but Always Possible (vv. 1-4).

The Bible is ever realistic in its approach to life. God knows that Christians must live in just our kind of world; in fact, your kind of world, and makes provision for it.

Offenses cannot be avoided. There will always be occasions for stumbling. No matter how closely we may guard our children, they will face temptations. Let us prepare them to meet them with the power of Christ, and let us be so prepared ourselves.

The fact that offenses must come does not excuse the one who creates the cause of stumbling. Someone is responsible for every such occasion for offense, and the woe of God is pronounced upon him.

What shall I do about the one who thus tempts me and others? Just grieve over it and look the other way? No indeed. "Rebuke him," says God's Word. Let us do it! If he does not repent, there is no occasion for forgiveness. To do so would only encourage him in his sin.

If he repents, or even says he repents, we are to forgive, not just once, but over and over again (v. 4). That's not easy for any of us, but it is possible if we, like the disciples (see v. 5), ask God to "increase our faith," and use it as Jesus directs in verse 6.

II. Gratitude—the Almost Forgotten Christian Grace (vv. 11-19).

Nine men wonderfully healed of the dreadful disease of leprosy, and only one said, "Thank you," to Jesus, "and he was a Samaritan," an outsider or stranger. One wonders whether in our own day of professed enlightenment and culture the average of those who express their gratitude would even reach one-tenth.

"Gratitude is as scarce as friendship." Many there are who profess to be Christians who never offer praise to God for the provision of their daily food, let alone for all other temporal and spiritual blessings. The kindness of friends is taken for granted. The thoughtfulness of others is accepted without comment.

Have you told your minister that you appreciate his sermons and his ministry in the community? Does your Sunday School teacher know that you have received help and blessing in the class? Does the editor of this paper know that you enjoy and appreciate this column? If you do, why not encourage him by calling him on the telephone or writing him a note to tell him so?

Young people, have you ever said a real heart-felt "thank you" to your father or mother for all they have done for you? Perhaps some older sister or brother or school teacher or neighbor would be greatly heartened by such a word from you.

Someone may say, "I am grateful, but I am not the type that talks about it." One wonders whether Henry Van Dyke was not right when he said, "A dumb love is accepted only from the lower animals." A dog will show his thankfulness by wagging his tail, but a man has a tongue with which to say kind and tender words of appreciation to both God and man.

Most important of all, let us bear in mind that God awaits our words of praise. Christ valued the words of gratitude of this man and missed them from the nine others. When He was in Simon's home (Luke 7:44-46), He gently rebuked His host for failing to show him the ordinary courtesies of the household!

Appreciate Beauty Never lose an opportunity of seeing anything beautiful—welcome it in every fair face, every fair sky, every fair flower and thank Him for it who is the fountain of all loveliness; and drink it simply and earnestly with all your eyes; it is a charmed draught, a cup of blessing.—Kingsley.

Bible Is Valuable Guide I have read it (the Bible) through many times; I now make a practice of going through it once a year; it is a book of all others for lawyers as well as divines, and I pity the man who cannot find in it a rich supply of thought and rule for conduct.—Daniel Webster.

Christian Science Services

"Soul" is the subject for Sunday. Golden Text is: "Let all those that seek thee rejoice and be glad in thee; and let such as love thy salvation say continually, Let God be magnified." Citation from the Bible: "Who can understand his errors? cleanse thou me from secret faults." Passage from Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "If we have triumphed sufficiently over the errors of material sense to allow Soul to hold the control, we shall lose the slip and rebuke it under mask."

Porfelo Chavez made a business trip to Albuquerque the first part of the week.

Mike Doering returned Tuesday from Evansville, Indiana, where he attended the funeral of his brother Joseph, 85, which occurred on January 20.

Did You Know?

(By Joe Chavez)

—That Mr. A. H. Harvey was the first operator at the depot and one of Carrizozo's first residents. And that Frank Richard, John Harkey and Dan Elliott were once employees at the E. P. & S. W. roundhouse.

—That Andres Lueras, Sr., built the first house on the east side. It still stands.

—That Mrs. G. C. Kroggel is giving a Concert at the High School Auditorium Tuesday, Feb. 18, at 8 p. m., for the benefit of the Woman's Club.

—That a bakery was operated by the Gavi brothers on the site adjoining the Outlook office and in later years served as a restaurant and tailor shop. Gordon, the tailor, owned a vicious black goat which not only butted the kids who deviled him, but also would charge the women. Someone made quick work of Mr. Billy.

—That Carrizozo's first school was held in a building which was located on the site of the present Shafer home, and that the late G'adney White wore tresses like a girl.

—That the first coal chute was a large red structure and was located near the old Carrizozo Trading Co. warehouse. The men had to shovel the coal from the cars into the chutes in those days.

—That the supply of water for the engines came from deep wells on the east side of the tracks. That was before the Bonito waters were piped to Carrizozo. The writer lived at Nogal when the pipeline had reached that far and until it was finished.

—That the Woman's Club are giving their Sixth Annual Valentine Dance at Community Center Building, tomorrow night.

—That the first postoffice in Carrizozo was located on the site next to Andy Padilla's place. The late William Reilly was the postmaster and Mrs. Brown his clerk.

SEE the advance Spring Models in Coats at Burke's.

—That two hurricanes have visited Carrizozo. The first missed the town proper, but tore down fences, telephone poles, uprooted sagebrush and grass and almost made a glider out of a homestead shack. Ask Sat at Petty's about it. He was the sole occupant of the dwelling. The next one wrecked the porch at Mr. Paul Mayer's office and left the Community Hall like a Roman arena.

—That there will be a Big Dance at Cortez' Hall, San Patricio, Feb. 15. Music by Otero Orchestra of Roswell.

—That the first electric light in Carrizozo was turned on in the building now occupied by the U & I Bar and Cafe. That was the first office of the Light Co., which was called "Los Gatos de White Oaks." The back portion of that building served as the study room for the Carrizozo Band. We have an old baritone of those days here in the office.

—That the first Edison phonograph in Carrizozo was owned by Alejandro Duran of the east side. On Sunday, the neighbors would pay him a nickel apiece to hear it. The favorite song was, "Yo Tango Una Rancherita."

—That the firemen of Capitan are giving a big dance at the Capitan Gym on Washington's Birthday, Saturday, Feb. 22.

—That in the early days of Carrizozo we had a school on the east side, where they taught both English and Spanish. They had night classes for the men and women. Juan Biza was the teacher. On different occasions they would put on plays, at which, Sat Chavez, Nathan Adler, Don Sandoval and Damian Ogilva furnished the music.

General Motors to Have Mammoth Airplane Engine Plant

Vincent Reil of the City Garage, Carrizozo, was recently informed by H. H. Curtice, vice-president of the Buick Division, General Motors Corporation, that Buick has contracted to construct an Air Plane Engine plant at Melrose Park, Chicago, at a cost of $31,000,000.

According to Mr. Curtice, this plant will contain more than 1,000,000 feet of floor space, located on a 125 acre site and will employ about 10,000 persons with an annual payroll of around $17,000,000. This plant will manufacture under government contract, the 1200 horsepower Pratt and Whitney aircraft engines. When the plant is completed, production is scheduled at about 500 completed engines per month or an annual output of around 5,000.

Mr. Curtice stated that the new organization has already executed contracts with the United States Army and other government agencies for approximately $94,000,000 for aviation engines and parts. When this plant is in operation, General Motors Corporation will then have around 20,000 employees engaged in aircraft and part production of which 25 per cent will be in the Buick Chicago Division.
