Out-Of-The-Ordinary

Lyle Collins, 31, taxicab driver of Grand Rapids, Michigan, had a hobby for cutting curls from the heads of girls. He would lay in wait in a dark place and when a girl came along with an escort, he would spring out, clip the curls from her head and disappear. Police were mystified for sometime, because after getting the curls, he would go to his taxicab, where he would be free from exposure. One night, just as he had clipped a girl's hair, a policeman suddenly turned the corner and escape was impossible. He was taken to the police court and fined heavily and in addition, was given a jail sentence for six months. His cellmates soon found out the truth and procuring a large pair of shears, they sheared him like a spring lamb. In order to make the job complete, they shined him down, cut his hair and then shaved him as close to the skin as they could. Before they began the work of cutting his hair, they asked him what he wanted with the curls and he said he wanted to make himself a pillow with them. As a further means of punishment, they promised to keep his head shaved as long as he remained in jail. Thus did he receive a double dose of his own medicine.

"Bad Girl," a St. Bernard show dog, owned by Miss Anna Marie Schmidt of Cincinnati, Ohio, has always been loyal and obedient to her mistress until one day last week after being led about town by her leash, Miss Schmidt was surprised to find her tugging violently at the leash. Annoyed at that action, Marie tugged back as hard as she could and the leash broke. Marie shouted to her as she sped away toward a 40-foot embankment. Down the steep incline went bad girl, deaf to the shouts of her mistress, who felt that she had lost control over the 175-pound pet. But in a short time, Bad Girl returned up the embankment carrying a starving German Shepherd puppy in a basket and put it gracefully down at the feet of her beloved mistress. Another puppy in the basket was dead. Chastisement for the act was abandoned after Marie saw the humane instinct which led Bad Girl to perform that act of the Good Samaritan. How the dog found out the predicament of the puppies, Marie will never know.

Dear Ma—
Everything is about the same here in camp, especially the weather which has been of two kinds all winter bad and worse and anybody who gets drafted this spring instead of in midwinter like I did is getting a great break. My feet have taken so much abuse they are unconscious, and don't believe that stuff about this being a machine war as I have never seen so much walking done in peace or war. From my experience I think I have been drafted in a bum's derby.

Nothing makes the boys so sore up here as when they get a paper and read about all them strikes and walkouts around the country. Every time I hear about those guys with nice warm jobs who go home every night to home-cooked chow and yet squawk about the hours and the pay it gives me a pain you know where. Believe me if I was out of the army and had a job where I could quit every night and not saloot nobody I would mow down anybody who tried to sell me the idea I was not getting a square deal.

Well, I am getting used to spending all my time in a uniform now but it is no cinch after being used to having three soots in different colors, one with patched pockets and one with cuffs on the pants all my life. Gee, ma, it would feel swell to get into a white shirt, striped necktie and Sunday soot once in a while. In the army you have to wear the same soot Sunday you wore all week.

I can be transferred to a tank corps if I want to but I don't know whether I would like it much. The work looks too confining and while I would like to get into a service that would be easier on my feet a tank unit my idea of no pleasure kar. A friend of mine was in the tanks and he says it is like going to war in a safe. A tank is like a taxi with no springs and with all the upholstery done by a scrap iron man. I guess I would be safer from stray bullets in a tank but I do not think I will sign up unless I thumb a ride and see for myself how it is. Before a soldier joins a tank corps the least the government should do is give him a demonstrayshun.

How is the defense program coming on back home? I see where some Washington witnesses say the country is short of planes, guns, tanks and everything. As the old gag goes, this is a fine time to tell me, heh, ma?

I wish the government would turn the whole thing over to Henry Ford. He is the father of quantity production and the mother too, I guess. All you have to give him is a monkey wrench a few nuts and a general idea what the war needs and he will turn it out so fast that Uncle Sam will not only have enough planes, tanks and guns for 1941 and 1942 but will be giving previews of the 1943 models.

Do not worry about me as my flew is a little better and I am getting used to chills. After all I was lucky not to get send with them boys to New Fundland.

Love,
Oscar.

SONG FROM THE SIDELINES
I'm lost in admiration
Of virile folks like these
Who leap from snowy mountaintops
Upon a pair of skis;
Who skate with zest on icy ponds
And have a tibia cracked
But 'll just stand upon my feet—
I like myself intact!

Gene Tunney is now in service at Pensacola. Speaking of defense, nobody ever knew more about it than Gene.

A Yankee Captures Derna

WHEN General Wavell of the British army marched along the coast of northern Africa in his campaign against Il Duce's Italians, he was following in the footsteps of a bold Connecticut Yankee who was making the same march 130 years ago. William Eaton was his name and although his heroic exploit has been all-but-forgotten by his fellow-Americans, Wavell's capture of the town of Derna has brought Eaton's name into prominence again.

In 1804 Eaton went to Tripoli as the American naval agent to the Barbary states. For years the Barbary pirates had been preying upon the commerce of Europe and when American shipping became worldwide, the United States as well as other seagoing nations were forced to pay tribute to the pirates. Finally ting of these appeasement efforts the new republic persuaded the pasha of Tripoli to sign a treaty for "peace without ransom."

A Deposed Ruler

But the Tripolitan ruler did not keep the agreement and was soon demanding tribute again. When his demand was refused, he declared war and American warships blockaded the harbor of Tripoli. The pasha, Jussuf Caramilli, had gained the throne by deposing his brother, Hamet. When Eaton learned that Hamet had taken refuge in Egypt, he sought him out there and, with the sanction of the American government, offered to help him regain his throne.

In the early part of 1805 Eaton assembled a force of about 400 men at Alexandria, Egypt. It included six American marines and a sergeant from the warship Argus; Lieut. P. N. O'Bannon, Midshipman P. F. Peck, a troop of Arab horsemen led by two sheiks, Pasha Hamet's personal escort of 90 men; 38 Greek mercenaries with their two officers; 25 Ethiopian cannoners with one brass cannon and an Englishman named Farquhard who apparently went along just for the fun of being in on a good scrap.

Eaton arranged for the co-operation of the American naval squadron in the Mediterranean and on March 8, 1805, with his motley army set out on the 600-mile march across the Libyan desert towards Derna (as the name was then spelled). Almost from the start Eaton had trouble with Hamet and when the pasha wasn't threatening to quit the expedition, the Arab sheiks were threatening to mutiny. Using both threats and bribery, Eaton managed to keep his force together and after a weary journey of five weeks he arrived on April 15 at the Bay of Bomba, into which the two American warships, Argus and Hornet, commanded by Isaac Hull, sailed the next day.

After a week's rest there, the expedition set out for Derna and on April 26 arrived before that fortified town which was garrisoned with 800 men. Eaton sent an ultimatum to the governor of Derna to surrender and received the reply of "My head or yours!" The next day the Argus, the Hornet and the Nautilus arrived in the harbor of Derna and under cover of a heavy bombardment landed a force of marines. Then Eaton organized a charge of his forces and to the credit of the mercenaries it must be said that they fought bravely beside the Americans and swept through the breaches made in the walls of the town by the warships. Eaton was slightly wounded in the battle but by late in the afternoon the Stars and Stripes floated over Derna—the first time they had ever been raised over a fortress on that side of the Atlantic.

A Fee of Appasement.
Eaton was born in Connecticut in 1764. At the age of 16 he enlisted in the Continental army and served until it was disbanded in 1783. After graduating from Dartmouth, he was made clerk of the house of delegates and served there until 1797 when he was appointed consul at Tunis. His experience with the bay of Tunis soon convinced him that only armed force could make the Barbary pirates respect American right. This belief was responsible for the expedition against Derna.

LOS ANGELES.—The original purpose of spring training trips from the snow banks of the North into the sun of the South was to get a ball club in condition for 154 championship games in daily battles for nearly six months.

In the last few years that original purpose has been changed—and sadly warped in the changing. The main purpose today is to pay expenses through an extended and extensive exhibition schedule that is beginning to run beyond all reason.

"When winter comes," as the late Mr. Shelley remarked, "can spring be far behind?" Well, "the hounds of spring are on winter's traces," and the hour of the sunland march is here again.

Talk to the ball players about this. They'll tell you. Especially the old-timers who are working to get fading arms and fading legs ready for the long haul on ahead.

Another Angle
When you face a daily competitive schedule of 154 games, one of the main handicaps ahead is staleness. The big drive usually comes in August and early September.

John McGraw told me the same thing some time before he died. "Twenty games are just about enough," he said, "before you open any big league schedule. That still means more than 170 ball games in a stretch."

McGraw, who liked fight and fire, knew the curse of staleness. This is what a long exhibition schedule is likely to bring on.
Ty Cobb's Example
Ty Cobb thinks along the same lines. In talking to Ty a day or two ago the citizen of Menlo Park said, "The best thing a ball player can do is keep in shape through the winter, either by hunting or playing golf."

Best Pitchers
In discussing the greatest pitchers of all time Cobb still believes that Ed Walsh heads the list for any five-year stretch. "Big Ed's five top years were remarkable," Ty says. "I recall one year when he won 40 games and saved at least 10 or 12 others. He worked in 68 games that season. Even a Walsh could not keep up this pace any too long, so he had no chance to keep going with such pitchers as Johnson, Mathewson, Alexander and others," he added.

"I don't see how anyone could name a greater all-time pitcher than Walter Johnson." The Big Train had more speed than any pitcher who ever threw a ball. He didn't have to be as smart as Matty or Alexander," Cobb continued.

Speaking of SPORTS
By ROBERT McSHANE

IS JOE LOUIS one of the greatest? If not the greatest—heavyweight fighters ever to climb into the ring, or is his competition so second-rate that he looks good by comparison? That question never will be answered to everyone's satisfaction.

More than one good authority wraps the mantle of true greatness around Louis' brawny shoulders. Others, equally wise in ring lore, hold that the Louis reputation has been built on a flimsy foundation—that any good heavyweight could look great against the second rate opponents the dusky dynamiter has laid to rest.

Second Rate?
Those who claim real greatness for Louis are quick to question the matter of second-rate competition. Why, they ask, is this particular era so devoid of good heavyweight contenders? Louis, after all, has defended his title 14 times. It isn't logical to suppose that all 14 contenders were pugilistic washouts.

We believe that Louis has built up a reputation for greatness by whipping opponents who, though the best to be found, were not worthy to be fighting for the world's heavyweight championship. But we also believe that Louis had—and has—the ability to whip much better fighters than have been offered him up to date.

Taney's career bears witness to the value of his teaching. In 1923 Gene met a preliminary fighter in the same ring where Dempsey stepped Carpenter. From that time on he refused to rush things. He started building his defenses as carefully and as thoroughly as he did his body.

Dangerous Champ
Then, when his defenses were perfected, he started to work on offensive strategy. The rest is ring history. Always a dangerous, hard-hitting fighter, Taney was truly a self-made champion. He did it the hard way, and because of that was the master of almost any ring situation.

We stated a short time ago that Louis has the ability to whip much better men than he has met in the past. That still doesn't say too much for the champ. In his last few starts he has won easily enough, but he didn't show his old fine form in cancelling Messrs. McCoy, Burman and Derazio. It wasn't so long ago that sports writers were authoring sanguine epistles concerning Joe's savage, killer instincts. They haven't been mentioned during recent months.

The old incentive is gone. Though Joe doesn't spend all his time eating fried chicken, he is smart enough to know that he doesn't have to keep razor sharp to blast nine-tenths of his opposition. Remember those 14 title defenses. Those bouts called for many a long hour of training. The endless grind doesn't always seem necessary to a champion, particularly when he sizes up the current crop and finds it wanting, almost to a man.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

THE LORD'S SUPPER

LESSON TEXT—Luke 22:14-30. GOLDEN TEXT—As often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come.—1 Corinthians 11:26.

Old things pass away, and new things take their place—such seems to be the law of life. That which is useful and greatly desired fulfills its time of service and is set aside for that which takes its place. The change which occurred in our lesson shared this aspect, but was in reality so vital and fundamental that it merits our closest attention.

I. The Last Passover (vv. 14-19). Our Lord looked forward with intense desire to the Passover which He now observed with His disciples, for it was the last feast of that kind recognized by God. All that it had foreshadowed of deliverance and hope was fulfilled in Him who now sat at the head of the table. He had moved forward with resolute purpose and desire to the day when His mission on earth was to be accomplished, and He was to become our Passover (1 Cor. 5:7).

II. The First Communion (vv. 19, 20). Taking the unleavened bread and the unfermented wine of the Passover, which had just been observed by Him for the last time, Jesus established a new feast, the Christian feast of remembrance, which we call communion or the Lord's table. As we have already suggested, it is a feast of remembrance. "For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup ye do show the Lord's death till he come" (1 Cor. 11:26). At the Lord's table His followers find spiritual strength in remembering His death for them, and they also find joy as they remember that He is to come again. In doing so they testify to the world that they believe in and cherish these truths.

III. Betrayal and Strife (vv. 21-30). Someone will say, "That point does not belong with the other two. Both the feast of the Passover and the Lord's Supper are for the joyful remembrance of deliverance and redemption." The objection is well taken except for one thing—we are dealing with human beings as they are, not as they should be and could be by the grace of God.

Here in the inner circle of the twelve there was one traitor. It seems impossible, but apparently Judas had maintained such outward conduct as to turn no suspicion in his direction, even though all along he had in his heart the blackest of treachery against his Lord. It is a sad and soul-searching fact which is here revealed, that it is possible for one to make a high profession of faith in Christ and even so to live as to give no cause for criticism, and yet to be unregenerate and in fact the enemy of Christ.

What about the strife regarding position? Shame on us, for it still goes on in the church. Not even the remembrance of our Lord's death and the reminder that He is coming again is enough to keep men from wanting to be greatest. May the spirit of Christ get hold of some self-seeking Christian as he today sees Christ as the One whose body was broken and whose blood was shed for him.

"N. S. F."

An N. S. F. check is one drawn on an account in which there are 'Not Sufficient Funds' to cover payment—in other words, it is an overdraft. An overdraft is actually a forced loan because if an N. S. F. check is honored the bank must pay out more money than it has received from the depositor and therefore the money must come out of the funds of other depositors. If a check is returned unpaid because of insufficient funds it is naturally injurious to the credit of the maker of the check. Depositors should keep an accurate record of checks drawn on their check stubs, and should avoid issuing N. S. F. checks.

THE SMOKY YEARS

Dusty King had been named—Dusty, who had been like a father to Bill Roper. Then Roper—who had been a respectable man—turned "outlaw" to "get even."

Now Bill Roper gathered together a team of cowboys and yankers, beat the Thorns gang at their own game, and drove them out of the country. It told with heartless speed and with fidelity in the history of those up-to dates in "The Smoky Years." Don't miss it!

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

By Edward C. Wayne

Bulgarians Are Rebuked by Russia For 'Allowing' Nazi Troops to Enter; Turkey Closes Strategic Dardanelles As Crisis Looms in Mediterranean

EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

ENGLAND: At Crossroads

The sending of Anthony Eden into Turkey was no empty gesture on the part of England, but a vital move in the war as the nation approached what appeared to be its most dangerous parting of the ways.

The Nazi move in the Balkans, plus the infiltration into Italy, plus the move into Spain, plus the appearance of German troops in Africa, plus the removal of French citizens from the invasion coast, all pointed in different directions and tended to place English war directors on the horns of a dilemma.

It appeared that the British must decide (1) whether to extend and continue their successful drive in Africa; (2) whether to concentrate on defense of the channel and fighting the submarine menace; (3) whether to lighten the African force by sending troops to strengthen the defense of Greece and to the aid of Turkey.

Most British leaders did not believe that all of these varied objectives could be accomplished at the same time. They viewed with dread the possibility that one or another of these German spearheads might they disapproved of the Bulgarian action because it "does not lead to consolidation of peace."

Whether this meant Russia would take any action to prevent Nazi troops from penetrating too close to soviet borders was not immediately learned. London at first did not believe that Russia had any action in mind but looked upon the statement merely as "a mere verbal protest."

One thing was sure: The signing of the Axis-Bulgarian pact was to have far-reaching effect in the progress of war in the Balkans.

The signing had been prefaced by the infiltration of uncounted thousands of Nazi troops in civilian clothing, and two days before it all happened, Nazi generals, also in plain-clothes, practically took over the leading hotel in Sofia as their headquarters.

The day before the signatures were placed on the historic document Britain issued a warning that she would withdraw her embassy if the treaty were signed.

The next step was the cutting off of all telephonic communication between Bulgaria and the outside world. In all this, the blotting out of another autonomous country was carried out in the true Nazi method, the blueprint being followed in every detail with mathematical precision.

The following day the city of Sofia was in German hands, completely under German control, the British ambassador had asked for and demanded his passports, and Bulgaria's home rule was ended.

MARTIN DIES: Steps Out Again

The Dies committee, quiescent for several weeks, stepped back onto Page One when Representative Dies charged that American Peace Mobilization, Inc., which in Washington is largely made up of government employees active in opposition to the lease-lend bill, receives its chief support from Communist "front" organizations.

Public meetings against the lease-lend bill were being run by the "Keep America Out of War Committee," but the sponsors of the meetings, when asked what other groups were involved, would only answer "and other peace and labor groups."

Mr. Dies said chief among these was the Mobilization body, and he cited that one of its vice presidents is Vito Marcantonio of New York, the only American labor party member in congress who has been voting against national defense and appropriations measures ever since the congress convened.

The Dies committee, during previous investigations, pronounced to be a Communist front organization the American League for Peace and Democracy. Mr. Dies said that from what he had learned so far, the Mobilization chapter in Washington appeared to be the successor of the League for Peace, which became defunct after getting the Red label from the Dies body.

Executive secretary of the Washington chapter of Mobilization, Inc., was Mrs. Sarah A. Montgomery, wife of the consumers' counsel for the AAA. Dies served a subpoena on Mrs. Montgomery to bring her records before the committee.

Subpoenas were served for several weeks on the chapter, Dies said, without avail in getting the records before him. He continued to demand them, and would continue to do so, he said.

COTTON: For Shelters

Members of congress from the southern states were jubilant when a New York engineer, E. C. Wallace, declared that cotton was better than reinforced concrete as rocketing material for air-raid shelters.

Wallace said that a seven-foot thickness of cotton would resist the penetration of a 5,000-pound bomb falling from 20,000 feet.

He said the cotton could readily be reproduced, so that incendiary bombs would have little effect.

A KING: Takes a Trip

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND—This radiophoto shows King George of Britain (right) as he greeted John G. Winant, new U. S. ambassador to the court of St. James, upon the latter's arrival in Britain.

When Ambassador Lord Halifax arrived at Annapolis, President Roosevelt journeyed to Annapolis to greet him. Not to be outdone, King George went halfway across England to welcome American Ambassador John G. Winant with a hearty handshake at a railway station between London and Bristol.

Winant, ex-governor of New Hampshire, had made the trip to Lisbon by plane, and from Lisbon to Bristol by another plane. He was accompanied by President Conant of Harvard and by Benjamin Cohen, who is Winant's personal assistant.

London newspapers said they considered the King's gesture in breaking all precedent to go to a railway station to greet an ambassador was caused by the Roosevelt action in going to the shores of the Chesapeake to meet Lord Halifax.

King George kept up the parallel by taking Winant and his companions in his own automobile to tea with Queen Elizabeth. The place of the meeting was carefully guarded by the censors.

Winant was nervous at all this attention. He said, simply, hitting his lip and shifting from foot to foot:

"I'm glad to be here. There's no place I'd rather be than in England."

ITALY: Taken Over

There is little doubt that Italy actually has been taken over by Germany. This is a significant step which several observers have reported bit by bit from time to time, but it has scarcely received the attention it deserves.

This movement started with the sending of diverse commissions into Italy from the Reich, then it was followed by the sending of units of the Gestapo and the storm-troopers; more lately by large forces of armed and uniformed troops, planes, tanks and the like.

These moves have been "covered up" in press dispatches from time to time, and the latest step, the sending of huge numbers of troops, was diagnosed by such subtleties as these:

(a) The Germans announced that Italy had given valuable aid in the bombing of England, and therefore Germany would send help to Italy in Africa and Greece.

(b) The Germans said that they would start operations in the Mediterranean to harass British bases there, and that they would have the consent of Italy to do this.

The actual case, according to competent observers, is that Italy, badly whipped in Greece and Africa, was bogging down in the sending of supplies to Germany, supplies that had come willingly enough before Italy entered the war, but which, since Italy's series of defeats, had been falling off appreciably.

Italy was in sad need of raw materials for her factories, particularly those producing munitions and materials for war.

Also, severe rioting against the war and the government was going on in several vital industrial areas of Italy, and Germany realized that she was in danger of losing an ally—not one that was helping much, but one which, if she lost, would make Germany "lose face" at home.

LEASE-LEND: Filibuster

Senators opposing the lease-lend bill, H.R. 1776, refused to call it a filibuster, but the length and virulence of opposition speeches sounded very like one, and charges that filibuster methods were being used came freely from desks on the administration side.

Leaders in the fight against the bill were Senators Wheeler, Hiram Johnson and Gerald P. Nye, with considerable unexpected help from various others, including Senator Reynolds of North Carolina.

Many of these senators were taking radio time to carry their fight to the people, and there were indications that the bill was getting much more bitter opposition on the senate floor than had been expected.

Much of this battling took place on a very high plane, with little personal mud-throwing and calling of names. Both opponents and proponents of the measure were setting themselves up as patriots, the opponents vigorously denying that they were pro-German, and all of them were very much anti-filibuster and anti-oppression.

Star Dust

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

"TOBACCO ROAD," that painfully realistic drama of life among the poor whites that has been running for years and years on Broadway, has reached the screen at last. There's been considerable speculation about what would be left of it when it became a picture, since practically all of it was highly censorable. Well, just about nothing got by.

Most of the sizzling dialogue of the original version was omitted, of course. The characters have been changed. The result is a rather innocuous movie with a few beautiful camera shots.

Dennis Morgan says that the only time he was ever broke, hungry and desperate was the day he became a full-fledged movie star.

Morgan, who is co-starring with Merle Oberon in Warner Bros. "Affectionately Yours," was "discovered" by Mary Garden when he sang "Don Juan" to her "Carmen." She called the attention of movie scouts to the handsome and popular young singer.

"I signed at a good salary and thought I was sitting on top of the world," he said. "Instead, I found myself, broke and hungry, sitting out in the desert in a broken-down jalopy." He didn't understand that a yearly movie contract provides for a 12-week layoff without pay. He bought an ancient auto and headed West. But his layoff period came first.

The days of the glorified bathtub are back. In "Ziegfeld Girl" Lana Turner, as one of the glorified showgirls, steps into a marble tub wearing her jewelry, including earrings and a tiara, and apparently nothing else.

Though the much-publicized episode of the Anna Held milk bath will not be used, the scene with Lana is based on an actual occurrence, when a slightly tipsy Follies Girl stepped out of her bathrobe and into the tub wearing her hat and jewels. But when Miss Turner slips out of the bathrobe there's a flash colored bathing suit on her, as well as the jewels.

What kind of noise does a planet make when it explodes? That's what a group of serious-minded men in Miami, Fla., want to know. They're bringing "Superman" to the screen at the Fleischer Studios, and in one of the opening scenes a planet explodes—only "Superman" in a rocket ship, escapes. Max Fleischer thinks it ought to be very, very loud; Dave Fleischer thinks it ought to be a combination of heavy gunfire, earthquake—and an apple breaking in two, much multiplied. Unless somebody thinks up something more satisfactory, the apple wins.

Lauree Tuttle has played, to date, 2,000 different radio roles; she's so much in demand that she dashes from one rehearsal directly to another. Here's her formula for success—Master your own art; keep your mind open to suggestions—never think you're too good to learn from others. That may be responsible for the fact that she's gone on and on, when so many radio stars rise to the top quickly, and then sink out of sight even faster than they rise. Lauree puts over a role with her voice alone; doesn't rely on gestures, make-up or costumes.

Paul Schubert is naval expert for the Mutual chain because he plays the accordion. Mrs. Schubert has a nice voice, and when she auditioned for the chain some time ago he went along and accompanied her. That interested him in radio. A couple of months later he phoned the man who'd handled the audition.

"Do you remember me—the man who played the accordion?" he asked and made an appointment for an interview. The appointment revealed his extensive study and writing experience in connection with naval affairs—and presto! he was signed up immediately.

WATER NEEDED BY DAIRY COWS

Plentiful Supply Increases Milk Production.

By H. R. SEARLES

(Extension Dairyman at University Farm, St. Paul.)

Dairy cows sometimes fall in milk production because the herdsmen skim on the least expensive of all the milk-making materials. Plenty of water is absolutely necessary if a cow is to produce up to her natural ability. The best possible feed-water ration will not get results if watering is irregular and limited.

Water is doubly important because the dairy cow needs it for feed utilization as well as for the milk which is itself about 87 per cent water. Water is the carrier by which nutrients and wastes are transported in the body; it keeps body cells in good shape to carry out their work; it helps break down feeds for use; it controls the body temperature. A shortage of water results immediately in lower milk production. Heavy milking cows are affected even more than light producers.

Cows on dry feed need correspondingly more water than those on succulent feed such as green grass or silage. On the other hand it has been shown that the cow is not particular how she gets her water. If plenty of water is available to drink, the animal will do as well on dry feed as on feed which carries moisture.

The U. S. department of agriculture reports that drinking cups in the barn result in definite increases in milk production. With water at hand at all times the cow will drink about 10 times a day.

Declining Soil Fertility Causes Drouth, Flood

"We don't have weather like we once had," is a trite saying which is unsupported by any scientific evidence. But the experience of recent years has shown that the effects of weather are worse than they once were, according to Dr. William A. Albrecht of the department of soils, University of Missouri. "All because we have neglected our soil."

Drouths are more disastrous than formerly because the eroded and shallower surface soils can't take and hold the rainfall, he explains. More of the precipitation runs off and less is stored in the deeper soil zones to be drawn on in drouthy periods.

Studies at the Missouri agricultural experiment station during drouth years revealed that the earth three feet below the surface of tilled, eroded or shallow soils was completely dry and slow in moisture recovery. But earth three feet under sods or deep surface soils showed good evidences of moisture. Recovery was rapid and the moisture moved down into the deeper levels as storage water.

Man alone can help counteract the results of his carelessness, Dr. Albrecht added. The remedy lies in an intelligent, never-ending program of soil conservation. It lies in putting back into the soil the valuable plant nutrients—nitrogen, phosphorus and potash—that have been drained away by constant cropping. It means raising and maintaining the total fertility level of the soil rather than trying to spur the growth of a single crop.

Growing Spinach Seed May Be Profitable

An expected spinach seed shortage for next year is causing many farmers to consider growing the seed for sale.

Spinach seed is not difficult to grow if weather conditions are favorable, according to C. H. Nisley, of New Jersey college of agriculture, Rutgers university.

Seed should be obtained either from wintered-over spinach or from very early plants. The seed should be matured before mid-summer, he added.

Nisley explains that because the seed develops at different times, it is advisable to harvest plants when the first ripened seed begins to shatter. Then the plants should be cut, tied in bundles and stacked, or they may be cut, gathered and placed on large canvases protected from rains to dry before being threshed.

An average acre yield of spinach seed is 500 pounds, but yields of 1,000 pounds per acre are not uncommon.

Baby Chicks

Buttermilk or sour skim milk are the best feeds for chicks when they are first placed under the canopy, advise poultry specialists of the North Carolina State college. The baby chicks should also have access to dry mash and water. Another good feed is cooked infertile eggs left over from the first candling. Grains feed may be given after the first seven to ten days. It is very essential that plenty of mash hoppers be supplied.

TIPS to Gardeners

GARDENS FOR DEFENSE

THE home gardener has an important place in our program of national defense, a much more important role than he played during the first World war.

In the face of these facts, gardeners are advised to do two things: "Plan to devote increased space to vegetable gardening; and perfect plans for the 1941 garden so as to get the greatest possible yield from the available space."

In stepping up yield from vegetable gardens of limited size, two major devices should be relied on, first, companion cropping—the planting of fast-growing crops like radishes, spinach, and lettuce between rows of slower-growing vegetables like tomatoes; and cabbage. The fast growers will be pulled and used before the other crops need the space.

Second, succession cropping—the repeated planting of major crops such as beans, sweet corn, radishes, carrots, beets, and lettuce. Moderate-size, new plantings made at regular intervals during the early part of the season will provide a steady supply of fresh vegetables until the season's end.

just to be a foiling move with the very purpose of causing the British to put their chief attraction at the wrong spot.

There was little chance that the British would do anything that would jeopardize their defense of the Island Kingdom itself. Robert G. Nixon, returning correspondent, described in detail the defense of the entire English coastal territory, north, south, east and west, giving a picture of a nation rather anxiously hoping for invasion than fearing it.

But Britain's Mediterranean and Middle East situation was causing tremendous concern, with the two vulnerable points at each end of the inland sea, Gibraltar and Suez, and with Greece to be aided, Turkey to be strengthened, and African gains to be held and consolidated.

The crucial move in this whole dilemma was the sending of Eden, the prime "fixer" to Turkey. The conference with Turkish leaders lasted only 2 1/2 hours, and ended in a complete accord, it was reported.

First definite action resulting from Turkey's concern over the situation became known when it was announced that the Dardanelles had been closed. Those strategic straits, which separate the Mediterranean from the Black sea, are of vital concern to the axis powers for they form the outlet of German occupied territory to the Mediterranean.

BALKANS: Lose a Piece

Bulgaria lost its autonomy to all practical purposes when Bogdan Philoff and Von Ribbentrop signed a dramatic treaty through which the Bulgarians officially joined the Rome-Berlin Axis "for the duration."

This was widely viewed as an unwilling surrender, but a move which could hardly be criticized by fair-minded persons, as it was a surrender to a pistol held firmly to a nation's heart.

Russia, however, felt otherwise. Shortly after the pact was signed and the Nazi troops had entered Bulgaria, that nation was handed a message from the soviet foreign commissariat which in effect expressed displeasure with the Bulgarian attitude. According to the Russians,

THE STORY AND THE AUTHOR
 Many metropolitan writers of western fiction, he knows that part of the country intimately, and can set it on paper without losing much of the freshness and feeling of the plains and mountains. He can describe a vicious gunfight so graphically you can

CHAPTER I

This was the crisis—the climax of all that long war. Here they sat, these men who had fought a common enemy for so long: Dusty King, who, with the hoofs of countless cattle, had carved many a Great Plains trail deep into the short grass; young Bill Roper, who had begun following those trails with Dusty King before he was big enough to hold a horse; and old Lew Gordon, Texas man, whose wild marketless herds had been the roots of fortune.

Dusty King and Lew Gordon constituted King-Gordon, the famous partnership that had developed with the great cattle trails; until now their many brands marked far-scattered herds beyond estimate. They were here because of tomorrow's auction of land leases. Under the hammer would go the grazing rights on the Crying Wolf Indian lands—those miles and miles of stirrup-deep grass that King-Gordon wanted, and that Ben Thorpe had to have.

It was curious that their long war with Ben Thorpe should have met its true climax here. The three in this room understood that the outcome would rest upon what the two older men decided here. Possession of the Crying Wolf meant dominance in the north to King-Gordon, or to Ben Thorpe; there was no longer going to be room for both.

"This is an old fight, Lew," Dusty King said. "It goes back as far as that first time you backed me with a little herd, to see if I could make it through to Abilene. Don't hardly seem like we better draw back now."

Lew Gordon stirred, swaying his shoulders imperceptibly, like a stubborn bear. "Credit's going to be terrible hard, this coming year," he said at last.

Dusty King seemed to sprawl a little more loosely; he was playing poker in a way of his own. Swagging, easy-going, spendthrift—he still was a man who believed invincibly in himself.

"I passed Ben Thorpe in the road today," he said. "He was looking mighty prosperous. I bet he weighs two hundred and twenty-five pounds now, with his stomach pulled in."

"His backing is terrible strong," Lew Gordon said, his eyes on the floor.

No one knew better than Lew Gordon that Dusty King, in tackling the impossible a hundred times, had a hundred times shown the way for the rest. But Gordon remembered too the poverty of the cattle-poor days before any outlet was found for Texas beef. To risk all they had won, in a single slashing stroke at an old enemy, was almost more than Gordon could bear.

"You know why Ben Thorpe's strong," Dusty King said. "And you know how he got his start. We know why it is that so many Texas outfits stand in Ben Thorpe's name; and how many different ways he's found to jump down on little lonely Texan cowmen and leave them broke or dead. And we know what's happened to many a little outfit that started north, but never brought their cattle through, nor got home."

"Every year," Dusty King said, "since we began driving up the big trails, we've locked horns in one way or another with this one gang. I'm not forgetting who started the Red Crick stampede where Dave and Bob Henry died under piled up cattle; nor the Tularosa shootings, with four more of my boys dead. There's some good cowboys under the prairie, Lew."

Gordon said almost inaudibly, "Never could prove anything."

"His herds have grown faster than ours have grown," Dusty King's expressionless voice droned on. "He's as big as we are; he'll be bigger soon. From the Big Bend to the Tetons, he owns more outfits than he knows the names of. He's never run an honest deal where he could run a crooked one, nor a square trick where he could play a mean one; it's a long time since he rode all night with his rifle in his hands, but Lew, if he isn't stopped—there's plenty he can hire to do his dark-of-the-moon stuff now."

"Dusty," Lew Gordon said, "we've blocked him every way we could."

"That's why he'll get you, and me too, in the end."

"Again the silence closed, with behind it the perpetual bawling of the cattle, far off in the spring night. Dusty King said casually, "Cleve Tanner's here."

Bill Roper saw Lew Gordon's eyes flick up to look at Dusty King. "Cleve Tanner?"

"Here in Ogallala."

"What the devil's the meaning of that?"

"Cleve and Walk Lasham are the only two of Ben Thorpe's men that railed the cross timbers with him in the old days; the only two he can really trust, now."

"It's natural that Walk Lasham should be here," Lew Gordon conceded; "but Cleve Tanner, all the way up from the Big Bend—"

"Shows you," Dusty King said, "what store they set on the Crying Wolf lands. Ben Thorpe is sold mighty deep into next year's deliveries. Already he's committed for more northern-fed cattle than he can show—unless he can get the Crying Wolf."

"Maybe thirty-five cents an acre."

Slowly Lew Gordon got a frayed tally book out of his back pocket. "The survey—" Lew Gordon's voice was curiously bewildered—"it's hard to believe there's any land as good as this."

Their private survey had been made by Bill Roper; it represented weeks of hard riding, and shrewd calculation of the strength and depth of the feed upon the surface of the broken land.

"One place here reads fifty head to the section," Lew said wonderingly. "Fifty head of cattle grazing one section of land! It's past belief."

"This isn't Texas, Lew."

"I figure we might pay as high as thirty cents to the acre," Gordon said, "by the year's lease."

A flicker like that of heat lightning showed for a moment behind Dusty King's eyes; but his voice was low and monotonous as before. "Thirty cents be damned," he said.

Lew Gordon looked at him for a long time. How deep you figure to go?"

"Get the land," Dusty King said. "Ben Thorpe is liable to go crazy and bid his head off."

"We're looking down his throat," King said for the second time. "The least the deputy commissioner can accept is drafts on Kansas City. Ben Thorpe hasn't realized the value of the land. We'll catch him short and force him off the board."

"At what cost to ourselves?" Gordon demurred.

"At all costs."

Slowly Lew Gordon shook his head. "Maybe thirty-five cents an acre."

Dusty King's voice rose explosively for the first time. "Thirty-five cents," he echoed—"or fifty cents, or seventy-five, or a dollar! Get the land!"

Lew Gordon sighed, and he looked like a man who was weary and old. "You want that land," Gordon said, "even if—"

"At all costs," Dusty King said again.

Gordon looked his partner in the eyes. "Go in and bid!"

Swinging down the board walks of Ogallala in the cool spring sunlight, Dusty King and Bill Roper looked a whole lot alike. The more than twenty years difference in their ages had not changed Dusty King's loose-jointed swagger, the rakish cock of his old soft hat, nor the cracking ring of the spurs he was believed to sleep in.

The trail years had leathered his face, but they could not diminish his gay exuberance; just as prosperity was unable to take from him the look of the trail. Whatever Dusty King wore, he always appeared to be wearing disreputable saddle clothes.

Perhaps young Bill Roper had picked up a lot of Dusty King's characteristics in the course of an association that had lasted almost as long as Bill Roper's life.

Everybody who knew King-Gordon at all knew the story of Bill Roper and Dusty King. Fifteen years ago, at the age of five, Bill Roper had been found hiding in the brush, like a little rabbit, beside a wrecked outfit on the old trail to Sedalia. It was Dusty King who had found him there; and it was Dusty King who had buried the bullet-shattered body of Bill's father beside that God-forsaken trail.

In the fifteen years since then, Bill Roper had learned guns and horses and cattle, and the tricks of the trail as only Dusty King knew them. He had been able to read prairie signs before he could read print, and if it had not been for tomato can labels, perhaps would never have learned to read print at all. Everything he knew he had learned with Dusty King. There was every reason that he should have grown to look something like the great trail driver who had brought him up.

Now, as they made their way down the muddy street, before the false-fronted wooden buildings, half the women that thronged Ogallala hailed Dusty with comradeship and delight; so that his progress was that of a celebrated character, already famous. The other half—they were Ben Thorpe men—refused not to see him at all. It was hard to tell which tickled Dusty King more—the warmth of his many friends, or the bitterness of his innumerable enemies.

The bidding for the Crying Wolf lands was being held in a disused store, and here the sidewalk and half the street were filled with knotted groups. Through this crowd Dusty King and Bill Roper waded, Dusty trying to look like something bewildered, from the tall country. Beside the door was posted a handbill in black type, giving due legal notice of the auction of leases, and Dusty stopped to study this with a grave empty face, as if he had never heard of it before.

"Mr. King," somebody said, "they've been waiting for you, fully an hour."

Dusty looked blank. Then he clutched his hat to his head in a startled way, and rushed inside with a clownish representation of haste.

Within the crowd of plains-country men—bronzed men, saddle-faced men, sometimes bearded men—gave way as King, followed by Bill Roper, shouldered his way to the back.

"Is this the place," King asked, "where the feller is selling the horse?"

The deputy commissioner took his feet off his table. "The sale was supposed to start at two o'clock," he complained.

A little tribute, there. The commissioner—perhaps already in Ben Thorpe's pay—hardly dared start an important sale, without present this slouching, nondescript-looking representative of King-Gordon.

"No word has come from your partner at all," the commissioner said.

"He ain't coming."

Three men who sat in chairs grouped around one end of the table looked at each other. They ignored King and Roper, as hostile dogs ignore an enemy of whom they are not yet keenly aware.

The big man in the light-colored hat was Ben Thorpe—the Ben Thorpe whose far-scattered holdings perhaps already exceeded those of King-Gordon. Thick-shouldered now, heavy-bodied, he was today more than ever a power feared in the cattle country—still unscrupulous, still menacing, but now of a different sort—a power of wealth, of organization, and of bought-up law.

Beside him, the tall man, lean and narrow-bodied as a slat, was Cleve Tanner, a hawk-faced man, keen-eyed, so cleanly shaven that the tight skin of his jaws seemed to shine. Cleve Tanner was manager of Ben Thorpe's Texas holdings, the breeding grounds from which Thorpe's whole organization drew its strength.

The other, the man who seemed uncommonly dark, even among these sun-darkened men, was Walk Lasham. He was Ben Thorpe's manager in the north, now; under his poker-faced watchfulness lay Ben Thorpe's northern holdings, the feeding grounds now necessary to any wide operation in the cattle trade.

The deputy commissioner raised his voice. "This," he said, "is a federal auction, to place by public bidding certain lands in the charge of the Indian Department, by the authority of the Secretary of the Interior and the President of the United States; namely certain lands.

He droned through his preamble perfunctorily; everyone in the crowd knew exactly what was involved. Something more than land was here changing hands. To hold the Crying Wolf would all but mean supremacy in the north. But this thing was bigger than that. The two organizations which here clashed again were the great powers of the trails; behind each of them were whole counties of Texas mesquite grass plains, great areas of the middle short-grass country, scores of outfits. The struggle between them had developed with the Chisholm trail itself—a decade-long combat between men of diametrically opposed principles and methods. And now—

"This land," the deputy commissioner concluded, "is thrown into blocks. I think, gentlemen, you are already familiar with the placement of the lands. Block 1 includes, as previously agreed, an estimated one hundred sections, or sixty-four thousand acres, known hereinafter as 'Block 1'; bounded on the north by—"

Cleve Tanner leaned close to Ben Thorpe, whispered, and Thorpe nodded.

"I shouldn't think," said the deputy commissioner, "we need hear any bid of less than ten cents per year, per acre."

There was a moment's silence, and the deputy commissioner got out a big silk handkerchief and mopped his head, as King now let a slow smile come to the surface of his impassive face. A curious rumble ran over the room, and the crowd seemed to sway.

"I got a proposition," Dusty King said. "Nobody is bidding on this land but just us two; nobody means to bid. Throw the whole thing in one pot and we'll bid on the works."

"I'll agree to that," Thorpe decided. The black anger in his face had submerged again, so that he was poker-eyed.

The deputy commissioner was beginning to look like a man who wished he were some place else.

"If there are no objections—"

"Fifty cents," said Dusty King.

Ben Thorpe's face had turned a curious color, not gray, certainly not bloodless; an odd congested color, like dark sand. "Fifty-five," he said.

"Sixty."

"Sixty-five."

"A dollar," said Dusty King.

"A dollar, five."

"Just in confidence between you and me," Dusty King said; "Mr. Thorpe can't pay that."

"I think my name is good anywhere in the cow country," Thorpe said to the commissioner.

"It ain't good here," said King.

The deputy commissioner slapped his pen down on the table. "Gentlemen," he said, "I'm sorry to do this; but in the interests of the government, and of the Indian Department which I represent, all further bids in this auction will be accepted only as representing American gold."

"Cash on the nail!" King asked.

"There was no question now about the sweat that stood out on the commissioner's forehead.

"Seventy cents," said King.

"I'm already bid a dollar, five!"

"Sure; but we got different rules now. God knows Thorpe can't back a dollar, five in gold. What kind of shenanigan is this, anyway?"

The eyes of the deputy commissioner went to Ben Thorpe's face again, but there was nothing to be read there. Thorpe seemed so lumpishly still that it was not apparent that he breathed.

"Seventy cents," said Dusty King again in the silence. "Whoop'er up, boys—I've only begun!"

Silence again through the pack of those saddle-faced men; perspiring silence on the part of the deputy commissioner, dead lumpish silence on the part of Ben Thorpe. Cleve Tanner, his hands locked back of his neck, looked at the ceiling; Walk Lasham sat motionless, his eyes on the face of his boss.

"You—" the deputy commissioner wavered, "you—you can back this bid in gold!"

"Immediate delivery by Wells Fargo," King said. "Right now, in Ogallala."

"Mr. Thorpe," the commissioner wavered, "Mr. Thorpe, will you—do you—"

They waited for what Ben Thorpe would say. His face was expressionless still, as he got up from his chair; but men stumbled over each other to get out of his way, as he walked down the length of that packed room, and out into the street.

The deputy commissioner seemed melted down, unrecognizable now as the crisp little man who had opened the bidding. His face was white and set, and his eyes showed fear.

"Well?" said King.

"The Crying Wolf," the commissioner said huskily, "the Crying Wolf lands—if there are no other bids—go to King-Gordon."

Something like a sigh, a general release of tension, ran through that jam of men.

Close to Dusty King's ear Bill Roper asked, out of the side of his mouth, "How high would we—how high could we have gone?"

The mask of Dusty King's face broke up; every muscle in his face came into action, every tooth showed as he grinned.

"Seventy cents," King answered him.
