E. S. Bello of Claunch was here Monday in the interest of a free dance at that place tomorrow night, August 9. Everybody is invited to come out and help Senor Bello celebrate.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hoffman and family, who returned last week from an extended visit through the south, were wonderfully impressed with the progress of the new south, but they were not very fond of the mosquitoes, which exercised their usual amount of torment to people, more especially those from New Mexico.

Mrs. Wilbur Dishman was here from Corona Tuesday, accompanied by one of her neighbor ladies, who is ill and Mrs. Dishman saw to her comfort at the Turner hospital, thus carrying out the proverbial "milk of human kindness."

Mrs. Preciliano Pino and baby spent last week visiting relatives at San Patricio. On Saturday night, Mr. and Mrs. Pino left for Kansas City, where Percy will enroll in the Dilly Aircraft School.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Roberts left Friday for Douglas, Arizona, where they were joined by Mr. and Mrs. Louis Bacon, the party going on to California to be absent about two weeks.

Another big dance at the Cortez Hall at San Patricio, Saturday night, August 9. Read Mr. Cortez' ad elsewhere in this issue and plan to attend.

THE RODEO

With this article, the public is informed that on August 16-17, the Sheriff's Posse will give a big Rodeo on the old grounds adjacent to the baseball park.

Big crowds are already assured. The affair will be one which will bring prominent riders from over the state and also from the states of Arizona, Colorado and Texas. The coming event will be well advertised and as the Sheriff's Posse will manage everything and assume all responsibilities, the business firms will not be asked to donate one cent to the undertaking.

As the dates fall on Saturday and Sunday, our business houses will be requested to close during the two hours in which the program will be in operation. This will not work a hardship on the business men, as during that period, our people will be at the doings and consequently, there will be no business during that time. At the grounds, the business men of Carrizozo will be free to sell anything without any charge, but no concessions will be granted to outside parties. This will be purely a good-will affair and the only aim will be to show everybody a good time with no intention of making money.

All we ask is that the people give us their moral support. Admission to the grounds and other information will be set forth in the advertising the Posse will put out. Members of the posse will pay the price of admission the same as other people, so it will be seen that the event will be one in which unselfishness will be the leading feature.

Your attention is called to the big display ad on page five.

Chance to Join Navy-Army

Harold Beckwith, Recruiter U. S. Navy and Eddie Walton, Recruiter U. S. Army, of Roswell, will visit Carrizozo on Thursday, August 14. The Army and Navy recruiters are conducting a drive for recruits. Both branches of the service are now offering excellent opportunities to ambitious young men. Any young man of draft age who enlists in the Naval Reserves for a trade school, will be discharged at the end of the National Emergency.

Mrs. Fred Pfingsten, daughter Edna and Mrs. Maggie Pfingsten were here Monday from the Nogal-Mesa.

All Master Masons are invited to a Regular communication at Masonic Temple, on Wednesday night, Aug. 18. Ben S. Burns, W. M. R. E. Lemon, Sec'y.

The Ranchmen's Meeting

Which closed Sunday night at Indian Divide, was a great success from every point of view. Prominent preachers from different parts of the country were present, services being held three times each day. The services were non-sectarian, so that anyone wishing to unite with any church of their choice, were free to exercise that privilege.

L. A. Whitaker supervised the dressing and serving of the meat, when 11 steers were butchered, prepared and served to the people free of charge by the ranchmen. On the brow of the mountain, small trees and undergrowth was hewn down so that from that distance of about 15 miles, Carrizozo is plainly visible. The meeting will be repeated next year on the same dates.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Poage, daughter Jan and Mrs. Charlotte Abernathy came over from Albuquerque and returned home Sunday, leaving Jan here for a two weeks' visit with her grandmother, Mrs. Pearl Stearns at the Stearns ranch-farm in the Nogal Canyon. Robert and four other Albuquerqueans will go on a fishing trip to old Mexico in a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Ed Harris of their ranch near Claunch were visitors in town Wednesday of this week.

Mrs. Clyde Adams, who has been visiting relatives and friends here and at Nogal for the past ten days, left Wednesday for Alamogordo, where after a visit with her friend Mrs. Ward Charles, she will go to El Paso, visit friends there before returning to her home in Lamesa, Tex.

W. A. Hart of the Ruidoso Light & Power Plant, was a business visitor here yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Bayney Wilson of Ancho were here yesterday.

Dr. T. H. Williams took Dr. M. G. Paden back to White Oaks yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Nickels, Mrs. Dick Willis and small daughter Sharon of the Nickels ranch at Jake Springs were shoppers in town yesterday.

Mmes. Boops, Key, Young, Larsen and Walker were here yesterday from Capitan.

Honolulu Moon

It happened in the month of July, 1917, that Lieut. Thomas Bragaart of the U. S. Army, then stationed at Honolulu, had a sweetheart by the name of Nellie Stanton, to whom he was engaged and had gone from San Francisco to that far away port to pay her a visit and bring her back to this country where they were to have been married. Through some unavoidable circumstance, the young lady could not leave as they had expected, so the young army officer had to return on account of the world war which had already taken place. On the last evening he had to spend with her, they went to the beach and occupied a seat where the beams of a big, full Honolulu moon shone upon them. There in the glow of the moon, they repeated their vows and prayed for the time to come when they would be united forever.

On the following morning, Lt. Bragaart sailed for France, thence mainland to the east where he embarked on a vessel for France, under sealed orders for active foreign duty. While in one of the hottest battles of the war, he with others under his command, were gassed — his being the worst case of all. He was in a French hospital for nearly a year, during which time, he was delirious. All the nurses could get out of him, was a raving about a beautiful moon, but no more could they learn.

After reaching this country, he destroyed all of his identification papers and became an outcast, roaming about aimlessly and working at whatever he could find. One night in the city of Milwaukee, Wis., he wandered to the beach on Lake Michigan and remained until the harbor lights were dimmed and the moon came out in all its glory, spreading silvery rays over the face of the water.

Finally, a car drew up near to where he was sitting. A man and two ladies alighted and occupied a seat next to Bragaart. Unmindful of the people in the adjoining seat, the wanderer was audibly glorifying the scene, when they heard him exclaim, "It's the same moon I saw in Honolulu! Honolulu! Honolulu!" Repeating the name three times. One of the ladies approached him and recognizing him, said: "Yes, Tom, it is the same old moon we saw in Honolulu when we last separated so long ago." Remembering all about him, she took him to Washington where his identity was established by the records. Under a long treatment, he recovered from the amnesia, his reason restored, and the old lovers were married.

George Titworth of the Titworth Co., Inc. of Capitan was a business visitor here yesterday.

Dan Conley, who has a government job in Santa Fe, spent the week-end visiting his family here.

Gilmore--Green Re-Union

The annual re-union of the Gilmore-Green relationship families was held Aug. 2-3, on the Ruidoso Camp Grounds. The re-union was saddened by the loss of three members during the past year, Mrs. A. J. Gilmore, Carrizozo; Eldon Eddleman, McCamey, Texas; T. C. Key, Capitan.

There were 48 members and a number of visitors present. From Texas there were: Mr. and Mrs. Minnie Green Lee, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Lee, Eden; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dillow, Cody Lee Davis, Iraan; Kate and Jerry Eaker, Ft. Stockton; Mr. and Mrs. Barney Lee and family, Mr. and Mrs. Dorval Lee and daughter, Eola; Mr. and Mrs. Brooks Green and family, Lomita; Robert Gilmore, El Paso; Vernon Lee, Clovis; Mr. and Mrs. Matt Gilmore and family, Mrs. Mae G. Miller, Tulareosa; Mrs. Ora G. Tully & Son, Glencoe; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mayer, Ernest Key, Carrizozo; Mmes. T. C. Key, Jack Young, Capitan. The Texas people were delighted with the cool air and beautiful scenery and hope to come again next year. Two pleasant days, no rain, good things to eat, an ideal camping ground; and if anything was forgotten, the Ruidoso stores had it for the gathering.

Business Men's Club

A very interesting meeting in the form of a Round Table Discussion was held this Wednesday, in which several reports were made regarding local Activities.

Asst. Scoutmaster Dorsett reported on Boy Scout work. Mr. Dorsett announced a Scout Camp to be held at Weed the latter part of August.

The Club, as sponsor of the local Troop, voted to arrange for transportation of local Scout Members to the Camp.

The cost of each Scout attending the Camp is $8 for the week. All Scouts who are interested in attending this camp should contact Mr. Dorsett at once.

—Frank Adams, Sec'y.

The Sheriff's Posse Rodeo Needs a Band

The Committee in charge of the musical part of the Big Rodeo event is negotiating for a Band for the occasion — and it is a pity that such Maestros as Clyde Brewster and Lou Fink are not here, for they would certainly stir up some good music for the event.

If the Rodeo dates would fall after school opens and Brewster got his band lined up, there would be no question about the matter — we would have no cause to worry. The committee, so we understand, is communicating with Lou at Roswell and perhaps he can fill the bill. At any rate, we will have the music and lots of it!

Mr. and Mrs. T. G. James of the O—O ranch returned Wednesday from a trip to California, where they attended a reception at Hollywood, given by Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Kudner. Friends of the Kudners were present from all parts of the country. At San Gabriel, Mr. and Mrs. James were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Gilbert, Mrs. Gilbert being well known to many of our people.

Spotlight

By GRANTLAND RICE

THIS may seem premature, but the midsummer date hasn't been early enough to check football gossip on more than a few fronts.

Most of the coaches I've run across are still uncertain about army enlistments and the draft, but there is no uncertainty about what might be one of Minnesota's greatest teams.

Bernie Bierman will deplore any such talk, just as any football coach would, but reports from Big Nine camps are all along the same line — "Look out for Minnesota—speed and power—quality and quantity—a great combination in every way."

"Minnesota will be the best football team in the country this fall," a Michigan entry told me.

"If any team can go through the season unbeaten it will be Bernie Bierman's outfit, with a brilliant backfield working back of a big, fast line."

Which reminds you that Michigan has lost Tommy Harmon and Evashevski, and a combination of this sort isn't easy to replace. Bo McMillin writes that his Indiana squad has good prospects and that, outside of Minnesota, Big Nine rivals can look for trouble from Ohio State, Wisconsin and Northwestern.

In the East

Conditions in the East are still uncertain until draft requirements are known.

But you might keep an eye on Swede Larson's Navy team when the first kickoff arrives. After considerable pressure the modest Major of Marines finally broke down and confessed that Navy might get along rather nicely before December's snows are reported.

"We have a good-looking squad," Coach Larson said, "losing few men from last fall. With any luck this should be one of the best Navy teams in some time."

Lou Little's Columbia squad should also move up, but there is still uncertainty at Harvard, Yale and Dartmouth.

On a recent trip to Texas we found that Dana Bible's Texas university outlook was the brightest of the Lone Star range. There is the chance that he may lose one or two of his star backs, but if he retains the material that is due back, including Layden and Crain, Bible will have a big Bowl contest on his hands.

SMU to Be Strong

Southern Methodist will again be strong, and so will Rice. Texas A. and M. loses most of her star cast from 1940 and T.C.U. is still looking for another Sammy Bough or Davey O'Brien. They do not grow on every cottonwood tree.

Along the West coast Stanford still has the ball, with many of her unbeaten veterans ready to pick up where they left off.

Red Sanders, the Vanderbilt director, looks for the usual steamy season in Dixie where Duke, Alabama and Tennessee, plus Tulane, will be well up.

Coach Sanders is looking forward to one of the season's feature battles when Princeton invades Nashville on the first southern trip a Tiger football team ever took. Both Princeton and Vanderbilt will be good, if not outstanding, and the Commodores will go all out to avenge last year's one-point defeat.

Season of Questions

It is doubtful if any football season ever opened with more questions at hand.

"How will Spiko Nelson make out at Yale?" "How about Red Blaik at West Point?" "And Tuss McLaughry at Dartmouth?"

"What will Tennessee do with Bob Neyland absent?" Neyland's record is one of the best in football history.

"Will Ohio State's ex-high school coach stop the Buckeye slump of 1940, with so many stars missing?"

"What's the outlook at Notre Dame under new coaching?" My guess is that Notre Dame will be among the best.

Speaking of SPORTS

By ROBERT McSHANE
Selected by Western Newspaper Union

BEN HOGAN, 140-pound professional from Hershey, Pa., is so accustomed to lining up at golf's payoff window that he can't remember just when his winning streak started.

When Hogan won the Chicago Open a couple of weeks ago his tournament earnings for the year totaled $11,587—top money in the pro ranks. The Chicago Open was the fifty-first tournament in which Ben has been in the money. Though he remembers the number of consecutive meets in which his efforts have been rewarded with cash, he can't remember where or when his streak got underway. He thinks it was in September, 1939, but doesn't know where.

The Chicago Open netted Ben $1,200—and he figures he works hard for every cent of it. The record bears him out. He fired a 13 under par 274 to dethrone Dick Metz, whose 279 landed him in third place, and to beat Craig Wood, National and Masters' champion. Wood's 276 was good for second place.

The Pressure Tells

Hogan admits that the pressure of these innumerable trips to the payoff window is beginning to tell. The undersized dynamo estimates that he hasn't been out of the money more than five times since 1937.

BEN HOGAN

And that means a day-after-day, week-after-week pressure, with never a moment's letup. The golfer who didn't develop internal jitters would be an iron man.

But Hogan managed to quiet any jittery feeling he may have had during the three days of battle in the Chicago Open. His opening day 68—five under par—put him ahead of the field—and he tore through the rest of the tourney slapping old man par in the face with rounds of 70-69-69.

Wood took a 73 in the opening round, thereby losing his chance at the championship. His subsequent rounds of 69-67-67 were nothing less than colossal, but the initial two-over-par effort was too much of a handicap.

No Walkaway

Hogan shot a 60, 2 under par, to take the 54-hole lead with 206, four strokes in front of Wood. During the course of that third round the gallery realized that Hogan was not going to walk away with the tournament. Wood, a champion's champion, had trailed Ben by six strokes at the start of the last day's play. He caught up with the pacemaker on the thirteenth hole of the morning round. However, he took a bogey on the fourteenth and finished 4-5 on the par four seventeenth and eighteenth while Hogan came back with a pair of birdies to assume a four-stroke lead as they went into the final round.

In the last 18 holes, Wood came within one stroke of reaching Hogan. But the master workman carried too many guns. From a technical standpoint, Ben's victory came at the thirteenth of the final round. He hooked his drive to the rough and his second shot landed in a trap. A beautiful swing with his bluster placed him a foot from the hole and for a par four. From there on he couldn't miss.

The outcome of the tournament pleased most of the 8,000 spectators who were at the finish. Hogan, the mighty midget, had more than his share of supporters. Always a tough competitor, his current winning streak is to golf what DiMaggio's hitting spurge was to baseball. Fans get a kick out of seeing the diminutive Hogan belt a golf ball just as far—and often farther—than his heftier opponents. His size hasn't handicapped him. That is evidenced by the fact that he has cashed in on so many consecutive appearances.

In addition to being a fine golfer, Ben is a fair-to-middling business man. He won the Vardon trophy in 1940 and led all money earners last year. He wasn't at all awestruck when he was presented with the $1,200 Chicago Open check. In fact, he looked over the huge, ornate galleries at Elmhurst Country club and opined, via the public address system, that the amount of the purse couldn't have been determined by the size of the crowd.

And it doesn't take a genius to figure out just what he meant.

THE PAPERS OF PRIVATE PURKEY

Dear Oscar:
I have not slept hardly a wink since reading about American forces being in Iceland and I wish you would not say like you did in your last letter that the boys sent there are lucky because it is so hot in American draft camps in summer. I would not like it if you were in Iceland of all places and how can you say Iceland is not so bad when all you know is what you have seen in the travelogues at the movie houses.

It is all very well to say that the climate is not so terrible and that it is not at all like the North Pole but when you are in the Arctic zone you are in the Arctic zone and your father says that Iceland is awful and is the place where Peary and Dr. Cook had all that trouble and where Admiral Byrd is always getting stuck in the ice floes.

Our groceryman who used to be a sailor says your father is wrong and has got his geography all mixed up. He says he was in Iceland and that he has seen it a lot colder in this country but if it is so good why did he only make short stops there?

I looked it up in a book at the free public library which was quite a job as every book on Iceland was either out or was being read in the reference room and I had to wait all day in line with a lot of America mothers who are as worried as I am about the place.

It is even farther away than I suspected. I never paid much attention to Iceland but I always had an idea it was just off the North American coast near Labrador. Why, Oscar, it is even farther away than Greenland which is so far away it is not on any map we ever had in our house.

It looks so close to the British Isles on the map that it almost seems like it got accidentally detached in a storm, and a yellow line with the words Arctic Circle printed in red letters goes right through the top of it in case anybody is in any doubt.

The atlas says it is a volcanic plateau covered by glaciers in the northern part and pastures and meadows in the south but it would be just your luck to get sent to the northern part and it must be terrible to be where there are volcanoes and glaciers all mixed in together. You would never know what underwear to put on.

Your father and I hope you stay right where you are so please do not talk about wanting to go to Iceland any more. I am sending you the things you asked for and will write more soon.

With all my love,
Mother.

Dear ma—Just a line to let you know I dropped the idea of trying to get switched to a Iceland division on account it is too hot in this country just now. Do not worry. You are wrong about Iceland and so is pop. This time of year it has flowers and farm crops and even heat waves and before Americans have been there much it will have Miss America contests.

Even should I ever get sent there I have just read that its principal export is cod liver oil which you half been telling me was good for me all my life. The camp atlas says its best crop is potatoes which is alone enough to keep me from wanting to go there. I never seen so many potatoes since I got into the army and I have personally peeled all but two or three quarts of 'em. I wood want no part in saving any country which had more of them.

So do not worry. Tell pop he must of slept all through his geography classes at school. Lots of love, Oscar.

A draftee contributor who is stationed at one of the hottest camps in the country, heard of the occupation of Iceland with envy. "The lucky stiff!" he cried when told U. S. troops were there. "They must of had infloence!"

"Iceland!" he was heard to remark later. "That's the place that used to be on the gingerale hour."

To casual visitors to America who listen to the radio it must seem that America is a land which has but three major worries: Scalp irritation, intestinal irregularities and diet.

Gets New Data On Man's Ills

Dr. Crile Isolates Diseases of Civilization by Study Of Animals.

CLEVELAND.—Dr. George W. Crile, noted clinician, traveled nearly 100,000 miles, tracked down 3,700 animals and survived a major plane crash in a Florida swamp to establish a new recently announced, basic physiological law.

Dr. Crile, head of the widely known Cleveland clinic, with his research associate, Dr. Daniel P. Quiring, sought to answer a riddle that has plagued medical men for decades:

"Why does civilized man alone, and not aborigines and animals, suffer such diseases as high blood pressure, diabetes, and heart disease?"

The result of the quest was a new physiological law that demonstrates for the first time a basic relationship between the size of the brain and the rate of metabolism—the speed at which calories are burned by the body.

Apes and Man Suffer.
Dr. Crile, noted for his blood pressure experiments, and his assistant found that in all animals except man and the higher apes the metabolism rate is relatively constant in relation to the size of the brain.

Thus 12,115 "small calories" are consumed every 24 hours for each gram of brain in these animals. There is but small variation.

In man and the more advanced animals such as the apes, however, this basic relationship or law no longer applies.

Because of this disequilibrium, according to the theory, there is increased strain upon organic activities. This results in diseases peculiarly human.

The scientists said that practical applications of the new law cannot be envisioned as yet. However, they expressed a belief that the law, a fundamental contribution to physiology, will have valuable effects ultimately.

Wide Area Covered.
Dr. Crile's search for physiological facts in animals led him and his party to areas ranging from the Arctic seas to tropical jungles.

It was on their return from a trip to southern waters that Dr. Crile and his wife were involved in the plane crash. A northbound airliner crashed in a swamp during a severe storm. The passengers remained in the shallow water for hours until rescuers arrived, and Dr. Crile was seriously injured.

While in Florida, just before the crash, Dr. Crile and his party used a blimp to spot a manatee—commonly known as a sea cow—which later was brought to Cleveland to be placed on exhibit with many other animals in the Crile collection at the Sarah Todd McBride museum.

The animals in the collection include the manatee—a 935-pound mammal with an ugly snout—an ostrich, iguana, shark, alligator, lion and snake specimens.

Also on display is the largest elephant ever known to have been shot. The great animal weighed 7¼ tons and had a heart the size of a medicine ball.

It was from animals such as these that Dr. Crile and his helpers removed the brains, hearts, thyroids and adrenal glands. By careful calculations they found it possible to determine the new basic law.

Shift Grazing Service

Away From Washington
WASHINGTON.—Transfer to the West of the entire grazing service headquarters staff, involving 67 government workers, to obtain space for defense activities in the crowded national capital, was announced recently by Secretary Ickes.

This was the first move of an entire bureau, made in response to the administration's request to find government space here for defense activities.

The space vacated by the grazing service will be occupied immediately by the new office of the petroleum co-ordinator for national defense.

While a few of the grazing service's functions would be divided among various field offices, location of the new headquarters would not be announced until leases now being negotiated were effectuated, Mr. Ickes said.

Richard H. Rutledge, director of the service, recommended the transfer after Mr. Ickes laid before the staff the need for additional space in the capital.

The service has 2,074 field employees besides the headquarters workers. The service was created by congress in 1934 to restore the depleted range in 10 public land states.

SALEM, N. J.—Charles Wilson, 27, is trying to curb his gambling instincts for practical and moral reasons.

He bet $10 that a police car could not traverse a narrow street. Then he called the police, faking an "uprising." The police car traversed the street, Wilson lost the bet and went to jail for 30 days.

Rapid Heart Often Due to Nervousness

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WHEN an individual is sitting quietly and his heart suddenly begins to beat very rapidly—twice as fast as normal—he is naturally going to become worried. Just as suddenly as the rapidity started up, it stops, and the heart rate is back to 72, or 76 again. When the heart beats rapidly, it is called tachycardia—"tachy," meaning fast, and "cardia" the heart. When the rapid beat occurs suddenly, lasts for minutes or hours, and stops suddenly, it is called paroxysmal tachycardia.

While the cause of paroxysmal tachycardia is said to be unknown the cause in some cases is believed to be nervousness, disappointment, worry or some other depressing emotion. I have one case in mind of a teacher who had worked and planned for two years to take a certain trip and at the last moment circumstances prevented his trip.

From that time he began to have attacks of paroxysmal tachycardia which were controlled by the drug quinidine sulphate, now in general use for these attacks. Others state that these attacks occur when they have to do some special work or duty which is unfamiliar or distasteful.

Attacks Not Dangerous.
The treatment of this common type of rapid heartbeat is to assure the patient that there is no danger to life. This assurance is often all that is necessary to prevent further attacks. These attacks can sometimes be stopped by pressing on the nerves of the neck running along the "cord" which runs from back of ear to breast bone.

However, in some forms of tachycardia where there is also some disturbance of regularity (rhythm), of the heartbeat, rest in bed is absolutely necessary, in addition to the quinidine sulphate.

The thought then is when the heart suddenly begins to beat rapidly, is not to become frightened, but to send for your physician. If it is the common type, he can prescribe the quinidine sulphate.

Neurology And Psychiatry

IN MY student days there was not much instruction given on "behavior" problems, or psychiatry.

Today most neurologists combine with neurology (knowledge of nerves) the study of behavior (psychiatry) and are thus qualified to tell us when the symptoms are due to a disturbance of the nerves themselves or whether the emotions, circumstances, surroundings are affecting the individual's judgment and so affecting his behavior.

When there is no real disturbance or change in the structure of the nerves or nerve tissue, yet the individual behaves abnormally, the condition is called a neurosis.

A simple classification of the neuroses is outlined by Dr. A. L. MacKinnon, Homewood sanitarium, Guelph, in the Canadian Medical Association Journal. This classification makes it easy for us to understand such common conditions as neurasthenia, hypochondriasis, hysteria, psychasthenia and anxiety states.

1. Neurasthenia: A condition of mental and physical tiredness.

2. Hypochondriasis: A hypochondriac is a patient who has the fixed idea that he is suffering from organic disease, when no disease is present.

3. Hysteria: Where patient thinks he cannot walk, cannot remember, throws himself about but never hurts himself because he is conscious—not unconscious as in epilepsy.

4. Psychasthenia: "Psych" means mind or nervous system, "a" means not, and "thenia" means strength; thus mind or nerves are not strong and there are thus fears, obsessions, a feeling that he "must" do certain things.

5. Anxiety states: A continuous state of anxiety with rapid or hard beating of the heart, breathlessness, nausea and vomiting, and diarrhoea.

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of their efficacy. And favorable public opinion supports that of the ablest physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions.

These physicians, to improve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good, direct treatment for disorder of the kidney function, and for relief of the pain and worry it causes.

If more people were aware of how the kidney constantly removes waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when the kidneys are out of order. Burning, scanty or too frequent urination, sometimes with or without kidney function. You may suffer aching back, aches, periodic headaches, or other ailments, getting up at night, swollen feet, and a host of other troubles.

Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has been used for so long than on something new and untried. Ask your neighbor!

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

SUSANNA FOSTER, the 16-year-old who sings C above high C, has appeared in two pictures, is being co-starred for the first time in Paramount's "Glamour Boy." Jackie Cooper is her leading man, and thrilled her half to death recently when he came on the set with a huge box for her. It was a present, said he.

The box contained a set-chair—you know, one of those special chairs with a canvas back-rest that stars always have, with their names painted across the back. Susanna took one look at it and burst into tears. Her name had been spelled wrong! Not until a sign-painter had fixed it did she really feel like a star.

Joan Blondell and Binnie Barnes discovered a new way of reducing; in "Three Girls About Town" they had to drag Walter Soderling around—from one room to another, through hallways and down fire escapes. Each girl promptly lost five pounds, and it seemed likely that they'd be mere shadows by the time the picture was finished. Furthermore, the loss of weight began to show on the film. So the director, Sam Bischoff, had a dummy head made, with a face like Soderling's now the girls are dummy-dragging!

It does seem as if the young people of Hungary would be too much upset at the moment to think of forming a fan club. But one Joseph Hamor wrote to Virginia Weldler recently, from Budapest, to tell her a Virginia Weldler club had been formed. The members wear badges bearing her picture, and are obliged to learn English. Virginia's honorary president.

Corp. James Stewart showed his family around the Metro lot the other day; Mr. and Mrs. Stewart and their daughters, Mary and Virginia, visited the sets of "Honky-Tonk" and "Smilin' Through" and had a chat with Clark Gable.

Laraine Day has been going on and on as Nurse Mary in the Kluge series—the latest is "Dr. Kluge's Wedding Day"—but she has the most important role of her career in "The New York Story," with Edward G. Robinson, Edward Arnold and Marsha Hunt.

RKO Radio received a nice communication not long ago; it was a letter from Maj. Gen. E. S. Adams, adjutant general of the United States army, saying that "Parachute Battalion" is "the most satisfactory army picture produced to date."

Remember "Ruggles of Red Gap," in which Charles Laughton recited the Gettysburg address so effectively that he's been in demand to do it ever since? It's been re-issued, which is good news for everybody who missed this hilarious comedy the first time out, as well as for those who want to see it twice.

Charles Laughton

In Warner Bros.' "The Maltese Falcon" Humphrey Bogart plays his first detective role—sort of a relief from gangsters. So he can play love scenes. He has one with Mary Astor that was a change for both of them; gangsters can't have true loves, under the producers' code, and as for Mary, she said that the last time she'd been really kissed was in "The Prisoner of Zenda."

Speaking of the beautiful Miss Astor, she certainly stacked up laurels for herself in "The Great Lie," if you want to realize what excellent character portrayals the girls gave, see the picture on a double bill with one of those phony B pictures that Hollywood turns out.

Those who loathe the commercials mixed into their radio programs will hail with delight the announcement that the FCC has granted a permit to Muzak Inc., to build a station in New York that will carry absolutely no advertising.

ODDS AND ENDS—Margaret Lind... signed to appear in four more of Columbia's Ellery Queen pictures... Victor McLaglen ended his personal appearance tour because "The Marines Are Ready" was ready... Jack Benny will make "The Widow Wontons' Weep" for Warner when he returns from his vacation in September... Richard Travis, cast opposite Betty Davis in "The Man Who Came to Dinner," owes his big chance to her recommendation after seeing his last... Bob Hope's bad numbers held up "Louisiana Purchase"... ZaSu Pitts will appear her hands in RKO's "Wink for Three"... Ginger Rogers will play a secretary again in "Self-Made Cinderella."

First-Credit Reporters

IF YOU'RE accustomed to "buying it on time" instead of paying cash for it, you can thank two brothers named Tappan for that convenience. For your ability to "buy it on time" depends upon your credit rating, and Messrs. Tappan were the first credit reporters. They established that business just 100 years ago.

Their doing so was one of the results of the panic of 1837, the first great financial disaster in America. Arthur and Lewis Tappan were natives of Massachusetts. In 1814 they established a dry goods business in Boston, importing most of their goods from England. They were very successful, and accumulated a large fortune. Then they branched out and in 1827 became silk merchants in New York and financial sponsors of button-manufacture; under the name of Arthur Tappan and Co.

For 10 years they prospered in New York. But when the panic of 1837 hit the country, among its first victims were the Tappans. Their failure was the result of the "freezing" of hundreds of thousands of dollars owed them by country merchants. Although they re-established their business within 18 months, this disaster gave Lewis Tappan an idea.

He realized that the method of granting credits to country merchants, often on forged letters of introduction, was not only unreliable but out-of-date. True, a few of the big American importers had individual credit reporters and others cooperated to hire one. But the expense of sending a credit-reporter into the West and South was too great even for a group of importers.

So he proposed the establishment of a mercantile agency, the function of which was to serve as a central office of credit information. This information would consist of the contributed experiences of the leading importers, commission houses, wholesalers and bankers which would be supplemented by the reports of correspondents appointed in every community.

After their disastrous experience with the old slipshod methods of extending credit, all of these business men were quite willing to listen to Tappan's proposal. So the first credit reporting agency was opened in New York on August 1, 1841, and was a success from the start. Soon two young men came into the company who did a great deal to develop the credit reporting business. They were Benjamin Douglass, the son of a West India trader, who joined the firm in 1846, and Robert Graham Dun of Ohio, who came in 1854.

In 1859 young Dun purchased full control of the company and the Tappans retired from the business to devote their time to the various philanthropies and social reforms in which they were interested. Meanwhile John M. Bradstreet had established a similar credit reporting company in 1849. For 85 years the two companies were competitors. Then in 1933 the Bradstreet company and R. G. Dun and Company were merged to form the famous combination of "Dun and Bradstreet" which has become synonymous with the word "credit."

In 1859, when Dun bought out the Tappans, the first "credit reference book" was published and it contained 20,000 names. The 1941 "Blue Book," its descendant, lists 2,300,000 names of commercial enterprises in 50,000 different communities! Moreover it is published six times a year and is the largest publishing venture of its kind in the world.

It is interesting to note that among the early correspondents of the pioneer credit reporters were four future Presidents—Abraham Lincoln, Ulysses S. Grant, Grover Cleveland and William McKinley.

The Tappans were also journalists and reformers. They started the New York Journal of Commerce in 1828 and Arthur Tappan founded the Emancipator, an anti-slavery organ, in 1833. Both were ardent abolitionists. Arthur Tappan frequently aided fugitive slaves in their flight northward and he rescued William Lloyd Garrison, editor of the Liberator, when he was imprisoned in Baltimore. He was president of the American Anti-Slavery society and contributed $1,000 a month to its support for several years.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D. Dean of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for August 10

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copied by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

JAMES TEACHES CONSISTENT CHRISTIAN LIVING

LESSON TEXT—James 1:17-22; 2:14-17; 4:12-17; 5:12

GOLDEN TEXT—Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unstained from the world.—James 1:27.

Spiritually minded but very practical was James, an outstanding leader in the Church (Gal. 2:9; Acts 15) and the brother of our Lord. His epistle speaks little about Christ, but it reflects more of His teachings than any of the other epistles. It parallels the sermon on the mount and in that way, as well as other ways, greatly resembles the teachings of Jesus. It is a straightforward discussion of practical Christian living.

There is so much inconsistency among Christians in their daily walk that nothing could be more needed than a careful study of the exhortations of James.

I. Be Doers of the Word—Not Hearers Only (1:17-22).

Knowing God's will is important, but it amounts to little except to bring condemnation upon us, unless we do it. It is good to hear with swift apprehension, but there is no point in talking about what we have heard unless we practice it.

God is the "giver of every good and perfect gift" (that's literally and wonderfully true). He has not withheld one blessing, even to the giving of His Son, who was sent down from heaven to redeem us.

His very goodness should prompt us to lay aside everything which dishonors His name. Wrath (v. 20), all uncleanness of speech or thought, pride (v. 21)—all these must go, and will go, as we permit the Word to take root (be "engrafted") in our hearts and lives. Note that it is not enough to read the Word, or even to memorize it. It must take root and grow in our life.

II. Believe—But Do Not Forget to Work (2:14-17).

Saved by faith? Yes, we are, and in no other way; but the man who says he has faith in Christ will inevitably show the results of that faith in his life.

James is not in any way contradicting the teaching of Paul's epistles regarding justification by faith, but is clearly stating what must be true, "that a faith which does not result in works, i. e., in a manifestation of a true Christian life, externally and visibly, is not the kind of faith commanded by God, and constantly revealed in the New Testament as the only instrument for the appropriation of the redemption that is in Jesus Christ our Lord. There is no such thing as real, genuine, vital, living, Christian faith, except it has its fruits in the works of faith" (Wilbur M. Smith).

How that faith will show itself in the practical dealings of daily life is graphically presented in verses 15 and 16. Pious talk has always been very cheap, and it certainly accomplishes nothing. Real Christianity works.

III. Trust—But Do Not Boast of Tomorrow (4:12-17).

There is a strange religious attitude which talks about faith as though it were something of which to boast, which encourages people not only to believe, but actually to presume. There is a radical difference between faith and presumption.

All Christians are subject to the temptation of talking about being "strangers and pilgrims" (Heb. 11:13) in this earth, and then planning their lives and their business as though everything will continue as it is through all eternity. It is right to plan, but every day we should plan subject to God's will, always realizing that this may be the day when we shall be called into His presence to give an account of the deeds done in the flesh.

Every hour of life should find us ready to meet the Lord, and with all in readiness, so that our going may leave behind a clear testimony of faith in God, and of consistent Christian living.

IV. Be Honest—Without the Need of an Oath (5:12).

A Christian should never need to give an oath in the ordinary affairs of daily life. His life should be so transparently honest and consistently aboveboard that his word ("yes, yes, or nay, nay") will be "as good as his bond."

The Jews were accustomed to use formulas for oaths such as those mentioned in Matthew 5:33-37. They would have felt much at home in our day when there is so much dishonesty that people are constantly calling on God to witness to their truthfulness. Those who have least to do with Him and the worst records for dishonesty are most prone to thus seek to bolster their word.

What a striking contrast is the simple "yes" or "no" of the true Christian. Let us make our word always good, because it is the expression of the integrity of our lives.

A New Voice Highway for National Defense

Across Nebraska, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Nevada and California, work is proceeding rapidly on a new voice highway—an all-cable transcontinental telephone line.

Cable crews are equipped with mechanical plows hauled by large tractors. The cable laying train digs a trench about 30 inches deep, feeds the cable into it and back fills the trench in one continuous operation. Protected against ordinary hazards by being underground, the cable is also insulated against rodents by steel tape wound around the cable making it "gopher proof."

Increased facilities provided by this cable are designed to meet any demands that may arise for communication between centers of industry, railheads, troop concentration points and defense centers from coast to coast.

WEEKLY-NEWS ANALYSIS

Japanese Movements in Far East Bring Freezing of Assets by U. S. Plus Philippine Troop Mobilization; Nazis Claim Gains on Three Fronts

EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—Japanese are shown intently reading "extra" news bulletins posted at a newsstand in Los Angeles' "Little Tokyo" telling of President Roosevelt's order freezing all Japanese assets in the United States.

JAPAN: Shows Hands

Dwarfing even the Russo-German war, with all its actions, the Japanese situation because of its closeness to involvement of the United States, stole the world spotlight.

While there were indications that the Japanese were to continue the war with China, perhaps on even a more vigorous basis, and that Nippon was attempting to strengthen its hand on the Russian front, the main move was the military and naval occupation of French Indo-China.

While this had been foreseen as a major Japanese objective, and even regarded as a probable one during and after the period of the change in government in Tokyo, the actual occurrence fell with a sense of considerable shock on the United States.

For once the nation began to feel the hot breath of actual war blowing upon it, and the feeling that "all that" was far, far away began to be a distinctly shaky sort of thing.

For the action taken by this government was swift, drastic and met with complete collaboration by Great Britain, Canada and Australia. It consisted of this, as the first step:

The freezing of Japanese assets. The limiting of all trade with Japan under special license.

The mobilization of the troops of the Philippines.

In addition to the British empire's collaboration with the first two plans, Britain's far eastern troops were on the qui vive in expectation and a request by Thailand for British aid in case her territory was violated was met with instant assent.

In fact, it seemed extremely likely that Britain would move into Thailand in order to create a buffer state that might prevent Japanese attempt to cut the Burma road, which has only a short distance, relatively speaking, from Hanoi in the northern part of Indo-China.

REACTION: And Results

The immediate reaction of Japan was what amounted to a "sparring for time." Nippon was caught with several ships tied up at American ports, automatically, by this government's declaration, prevented from moving.

Some 40 additional ships were en route here, and were hove to at sea. And if the Pan-American republics were to take similar action to the United States they might find it hard to make a port where they would be able to unload. One of the vessels was carrying a $2,500,000 silk cargo and nearly 500 passengers bound for the U. S.

Most serious result, however, was seen as the immediate stoppage of oil exportation to Japan from American sources. Utterly dependent on foreign supplies of petroleum, and for much of her scrap metal as well, Japan was visualized as practically forced to move on the Netherlands East Indies for the former and for supplies of tin as well.

Most observers felt that if and when such a move was made, it would find the United States taking some sort of direct naval action of a preventive nature.

Tokyo, immediately after President Roosevelt's outline of American action with regard to the Indo-Chinese incident, broadcast an ap-

COINCIDENCE:

It so happened that the sudden move by Japan and the counter-moves by this government were timed exactly to coincide with congressional consideration of the measure to keep draftees, guardsmen and reservists in the armed forces for the duration.

There was no question but that the back of the opposition to this measure was badly bent if not broken by the quick change in the international situation.

deal to the United States to "reconsider."

The government took immediate retaliatory action, freezing all American, British, Canadian and Australian assets, and Ito, head of the Japanese Board of Information, said:

"If the United States refuses to understand Japan's real intentions and is now bent on taking measures to exert pressure on Japan, the conclusion is inevitable that it is the United States that disturbs the peace. The responsibility rests entirely with that government."

Thus Japan, and this was recognized as the most militant statement against this government that had been made in the history of the relations, many times strained, between the two nations.

NOTICE:

Served on Japs

The reaction of Tokyo, as expressed by Ito, was coupled with a none-too-veiled threat in the newspaper Nichi-Nichi as follows:

"The United States may be confronted with a perilous situation fraught with the danger of war."

The newspaper Asahi said: "This is no longer an economic problem which could be dealt with economically, but provokes the fundamental determination of the Japanese people."

These words were particularly significant, because they bespoke the nation's inability to face the withdrawal of the exports of the United States and Britain and her dominions, or to replace these missing goods without going to war to get them.

Thus observers saw in the Philippine mobilization order that this government was serving notice on Japan that the United States is getting ready to defend her territory in the South Pacific and her trade lifelines to that part of the world with armed force.

Gen. Douglas A. MacArthur, former chief of staff of the United States army, was called out of retirement to take command of all the far eastern forces. The handsome, socially debonair general, still vigorous for all his years, immediately went to work.

The forces involved total now in the neighborhood of 100,000 trained or partially trained men, and with draft machinery already at work in the islands, and equipment ready to be rushed there, an armed force considerably larger was a possibility.

RUSSIA:

Holding Hard

While it was still practically impossible to make any definite sense out of the German and Russian claims, the consensus was that the Russians were making a surprisingly good fight out of the war.

As time wore on the battles were admittedly severe according to both sides, and the main objectives were clarified as Smolensk, Kiev and Leningrad.

There was nothing definite to indicate that any of these three German claims had actually been carried out.

This lent general credence to the belief that if the Germans were not stalled, they at least were able to make only thin forays past these points, and were probably having a hard time of it.

German dispatches tending to prove this to be so told of "bad roads" and "unfavorable weather," plus "stiff resistance" of scattered units of the Red army as making it difficult to advance.

The Finns were more frank, and stated "there can be no talk of a blitz campaign. We are advancing but have to take one bunker after another."

From time to time there were indications that Moscow was taking the offensive, certainly at some points in the front.

Special Envoy

Harry Hopkins, administrator of the Lease-Lend bill, serving again as President Roosevelt's special envoy to London, is pictured here at the American embassy in London. In a speech broadcast to the British empire, Hopkins promised the British that the "tools" needed for victory are on the way from American production lines.

PAN-AMERICA: Having Troubles

While the governments of the Pan-American republics were standing firm on their solidarity pledges with the United States covering hemispheric defense, they were beset by many troubles, some of them reportedly generated by a Nazi diplomatic and fifth column offensive ordered from Berlin to occupy America's attention on this side of the Atlantic.

However, the close of hostilities between Peru and Ecuador, in which it was thought that the Nazi-Japanese hand could be seen, finally were halted, and neither the casualties nor the fighting apparently had been heavy.

Bolivia nipped an attempted Nazi coup d'etat in the bud and dealt drastically with the reputed author.

The Herald Tribune came out with a story from Buenos Aires telling of the seizure of some 400 pounds of packages of spy material, messages and the like uncovering a very definite Nazi plot against the government of Argentina.

One German embassy fled the capital by plane, carrying 440 pounds of excess baggage, presumably afraid of having it seized and examined. He finally got it all into safe-deposit vaults in Lima, Peru, after great difficulties en route and after arrival, but there was doubt whether the mysterious baggage would be permitted to remain there.

This doubt was quickly resolved by the Peruvian authorities ordering the whole baggage to be shipped back to Buenos Aires. There it fell into the hands of an investigating committee which found the baggage to contain a radio transmitter and a large number of walnuts, which, when opened contained the plot evidence in the form of messages.

RED:

Defense Technique

Still another described the military technique near the front. The plan was somewhat similar to that of Weygand in his attempted halting of the Germans in France, except that it was implemented by better mechanized equipment.

The Russians give way before the German mechanized advance, which finally, however, meets a "wall of Russian tanks," which at least temporarily halt their advance.

Then the Russian artillery in the rear, already trained on the roads behind the advance German lines, batters away at the supporting columns. When these are sufficiently disrupted to prevent refueling of the tanks and motor-fighting-cars, these have to fall back and the attack is broken up.

The Russians, when this point is reached, military observers were reporting, then attempt to put the "pinchers" on the German advance force. This, it was said, was the detail back of the three divisions destroyed, according to Russian claims.

Some let their minds drop back to the Russo-Japanese war of 37 years ago and recalled that the modern Russian army was giving a very different account of itself today against sterner than Japanese opposition:

One of these stated, as a matter of course, that "five Nazi attempts to bomb Moscow had been frustrated in succession," told of seeing two Nazi bombers wrecked 38 and 52 miles west of Moscow, and of watching "peasants calmly tilling their fields" near the wreckage.

INVASION:

By Stratosphere

Huge American-made Boeing "flying fortresses" yet not the largest ships soon to be sent overseas, made British aviation history by participating in the first "stratosphere" raids.

They were sent, with heavy cargoes of bombs, to a height of 33,000 feet, at which point, according to the British, they were practically invisible in the daytime, and apparently undetectable.

Rider of Buck River

THE STORY SO FAR: Buck Hart, brother of Sheriff Hart, is found with a bullet in his back. A reputed rustler, his friends blame the murder on the big cattlemen. Someone fires a shot at Calhoun Terry from the Red Triangle.

Lane guessed. "Jeff Brand?" "Yes. I told him I was going with a handsomer man." Ellen smiled at her father. "So you mustn't let me down." "I won't," Lane answered. He did not smile back at her. "I hope you're not going to be interested in a man like Jeff. I'm afraid he's bad medicine, Nell." "For girls?" she inquired. "Yes, and for others too. He's a lawless young devil heading for trouble. My guess is that he is already a cattle thief. Don't be more than civil to him." She smiled reminiscently. "He probably thinks I wasn't even that, today."

CHAPTER V

Among the rolling hills to the north of the Diamond Reverse B lay the empire of the Bartlett Land & Cattle Company, familiarly known as No. 50. The manager, Clint Ellison, rode in from watching a beef cut to hold a conference in his office with important guests.

He brought glasses and a bottle of whiskey from the cabinet, a pitcher of water from a tray on a sideboard. "Help yourselves, gentlemen," he invited.

John McFaddin, joint owner with his brother of the Flying V C, a very large ranch far up on Elk Creek, poured whiskey into a glass and drank it neat, after a perfunctory "Here's how!"

Perry Gaines, manager of the Two Star Ranch, shook his head. "I never drink until I'm through my day's work."

The third guest reached for a glass and the bottle. He was a round, roly-poly man of middle age, rubicund countenance, and bright, twinkling, merry eyes. "I drink before I begin it, during same, and after I have finished," he announced. "Here's to you, gentlemen. Happy days."

McFaddin thrust into words the thought that was in his mind, that had been present with all of them for some days. "So an accident happened to one of the gents too free with a rope and a running-iron near your range, Clint."

Ellison passed a box of good cigars and took one himself. "Referring to Buck Hart, I take it."

The foreman of the No. 50, by Joe looked at the Flying V C man, no expression whatever in his steely eyes. "I'm told he was shot. With a rifle. In the early morning. By a person unknown."

Slanting a grin at Ellison, the plump, red-faced man—he was Tod Collins, manager and part owner of the Antelope Creek Ranch—offered a chuckling suggestion. "Have to call him Mr. X, I reckon, like they do in these detective stories."

Ellison looked a long time at his cigar tip. "Like the rest of you, I've been mulling this over night and day, gentlemen. We represent four out of the five biggest ranches in this part of the territory. I didn't ask Cal Terry to join us today because he isn't in quite the same position as we are. A few years ago he was a little cattleman himself, and though his old friends hate him like poison now, he may still have scriptures against what I have in mind. Later we'll have to take him in, but we might as well make our plans first. If we're going to protect our properties from wholesale thieving we must wipe the rustlers outenmasse."

Tod Collins grinned. "The Antelope Creek rides to war with the rest of you. Cut loose with what's on your mind, Clint."

Clint leaned forward and in a low voice began to outline the plan he had in mind.

CHAPTER VI

Ellen drew up on the bluff at the edge of Johnson's Prong. A windmill on Sheriff Nate Hart's place, near the upper end of the valley, caught the sun's rays and heliographed them to her.

Her glance picked up a puff of smoke, and a fraction of a second later there came the sound of a shot. She dipped down into the Canyon, following the steep trail winding among the boulders.

She swung around a great boulder and came face to face with a man. Both of them pulled up, taken completely by surprise. He was a lean, bronzed man, broad of shoulder, strongly built. A vague memory stirred in her. She must have known him when she lived here before going to school.

"Good morning," he said. "Did you meet anybody as you came down the canyon?"

"No," she told him.

"Are you headed for Round Top?" he asked.

"Yes."

"Don't go," he replied curtly. Ellen sat a little straighter on the horse. Her chin set. "Why not?"

"There has been some trouble. A man has been killed."

INSTALLMENT THREE
saloon. Terry dismounts, sees enough to make him feel the shot was fired by Lee Hart, brother of the slain man, also believed to be a rustler. Terry is manager of the Diamond Reverse B ranch. Formerly a small rancher, he Ellen echoed the last word. "Killed?" "Shot from ambush—drygulched." She stared at him, her eyes on his. "Who was killed?" "Man named Tetlow. Lives on Fisher Creek."

"Who did it?" "I don't know. I heard someone galloping away through the brush, and a little later I came across the body."

"Just before I started down the canyon I heard a shot," Ellen said. "Just one. Do you think they had a quarrel?"

"No. Tetlow didn't have his gun out. A bullet from a rifle went through the back of his head."

"Murder." The word fell from the girl's lips in a low, shocked voice. "The second in a week. Are all the cattlemen starting in to kill all the rustlers who are in their way?"

"No," he spoke sharply, instantly. "These men were both rustlers, according to common report. They lived violently and made enemies. Maybe they quarreled among themselves."

"One of them was my cousin." Then, as her glance fell on the rifle in its scabbard beside the saddle, there jumped to her mind a horrid thought. He might have done it himself. Why was he carrying a rifle in a country where the almost universal custom was to wear only revolvers?

Ellen echoed the last word, "Killed."

"Then you live in the hills here," he said.

"My name is Ellen Carey." There jumped to his mind the picture of a thin, long-legged, harum-scarum girl fying about the Black Butte country on a pinto horse. It was amazing that such a child could have developed into such a beauty.

"Lane Carey's daughter?" "Yes." She frowned at him, on the verge of a discovery. "You are Calhoun Terry," she said. "I knew I'd seen you before. You were a friend of my father then."

"Before I committed the crime of trying to better myself honestly and lawfully," he explained.

She knew those who looked at what he had done from another angle, but she did not intend to discuss it with him.

"What are you going to do with the body?" she asked.

"I'll notify his friends where to find it."

"I could tell the coroner while I'm in town."

He shook his head. "Better not go to town this way, Miss Carey. The killer may still be down there in the flats somewhere."

Ellen looked at him, startled. "You don't think he would hurt me, do you?"

"Not unless he thought his safety required it. I'll ride up the canyon with you as far as the Hartman place."

"It's not necessary. I haven't seen anybody coming up the canyon—except you."

Grimly he smiled. "Nobody—except me. And I came direct from the scene of the crime, carrying the rifle that may have held the cartridge. Maybe it is not safe for you to ride up the gulch with me, since you're the only eye-witness against me."

Their eyes met and held, searching for what lay beneath the surface. Into Ellen's consciousness there beat an assurance that this man was no assassin.

sold to the big outfit, and is hated by the small men for it. Ellen Carey, back from school, sees some cattle driven hard one early morning, probably by rustlers. One of the men, she thinks, is Jeff Brand.

looked across the North Fork Valley, the creek winding through it a ribbon of silver, to the forests marching up the huddled hills to the blurred horizon's edge. A snatch of Heber's missionary hymn jumped again to his mind. He laughed sardonically.

The girl looked at him. "You are amused?" He quoted the verse:

"Every prospect pleases and only man is vile."

Her eyes, judging him indignantly, refused to join his mockery. "I don't find murder funny," she said.

"I wasn't thinking of murder, but of the man who turned his back on his friends. I suppose you would call him a traitor."

"It isn't my business to call him anything."

"You don't need to have anything to do with him—after we reach the fork in the road just ahead. That's so. You can go back to your nice good friends, who shoot at enemies as they pass, through a window."

"That's not true!" she cried. "My mistake. I should have said cousin, not friend. The name is Lee Hart."

"When did he shoot at you—if he did?"

"Wednesday a week ago, about 4 p. m., from the Red Triangle Saloon."

She did not speak for a moment, and when she did it was to repudiate Hart. "He isn't really my cousin. Only a distant relative by marriage. I haven't spoken to him five times in my life."

They had come to the trail fork. The path to the left led to Black Butte, the other eventually to the Diamond Reverse B.

For days Ellen's mind was full of this adventure.

CHAPTER VII

Excitement ran like a prairie fire through the Buck River country. The heat of it converged on Calhoun Terry. He had reported finding the body of Tetlow, after having been seen by two men an hour or so after the killing not far from the upper end of Box Canyon. When seen, he had a Winchester rifle in a scabbard tied to the side of his saddle.

The sheriff's posse had followed the trail of a horseman from the body to the lower mouth of the canyon. Here he had been joined by another rider.

Sheriff Hart rode up to the Diamond Reverse B to ask Terry to explain his movements. His brother Lee had suggested a posse, on which Jeff Brand and Jack Turley had offered to serve, big enough to capture the foreman of the ranch unless his men offered organized resistance. But Nate Hart decided against this.

"We haven't evidence enough on which to convict him—nothing like enough," he said. "No sense in going off half-cocked."

"You'd better let me and some of the other boys go along," Lee insisted.

The sheriff's eyes drifted a little scornfully over his heavy-set, bow-legged brother. "I'm going for business, not war. If I took you along, Lee, it would be like waving a red rag at Cal."

The sheriff found Terry looking over the ranch accounts.

Hart was in his early thirties, big and rangy and vigorous. The general opinion was that he was by all odds the best of the Hart brothers.

"I've heard a lot of talk, Terry," he said. "Thought I'd better ride up and find out what you have to tell me."

"You mean about your brother shooting at me from the Red Triangle," Terry said, on the theory that a swift attack may be the best defense.

"Don't believe all you hear. My brother didn't shoot at you."

"I must have imagined the holes in my hat," Calhoun said.

The sheriff did not pursue that line any further. "What I want to talk about is the Tetlow killing. You were the first to reach the body. Were you in time to see the killer?"

"No. I heard the shot. He was gone when I found the body."

"What were you doing down on the North Fork at that time?"

"I was on my way back from Jim Creek, where I had been to see the station agent about wiring for some cars I needed to make a shipment."

FARM TOPICS

CARE ESSENTIAL IN FILLING SILO

Dry, Unpacked Materials Spoil Readily.

By PROF. R. C. MILLER
(Agricultural Engineering Department, Ohio State University.)

Most effective results in avoiding spoiled silage are obtained by taking proper precautions in silo construction and by harvesting the silage crop at the right period.

In general, silage spoils because it comes in contact with air after it is placed in the silo. Defects in silo construction, use of material which is too dry to pack well in the silo, and too much speed in filling or too little tramping of the material are the chief agencies that permit air to ruin the silage.

Every type of silo whether it be a permanent upright type, a temporary fence structure, or a trench below ground surface can be built to preserve silage effectively if the material placed in the silo is moist enough to pack well or if water enough is added to permit thorough packing of drier material.

The rule of thumb method for determining the correct moisture content for plants going into a silo is that it should be possible to press or wring water from the chopped material. If that cannot be done, water should be added. Plants with 60 to 75 per cent moisture are at the right stage for silage. Materials placed in the silo while too green may result in considerable losses of juice and produce silage which is unpalatable to livestock.

The spoilage of silage at the top of an above-ground silo or at the end of a trench silo cannot be avoided entirely without prohibitive cost. Repacking at intervals of a few days after the silo is filled or putting chopped, wet straw or other material on top of the silage will reduce the loss.

Considerable silage is lost while the silo is being emptied because too great an area of surface is exposed in feeding. This loss can be reduced by feeding from half the area of a surface silo at a time or by taking a slice only a few inches thick from the end of a trench silo.

Egg Production Reflects Kind, Quantity of Feed

Efficient egg production is influenced by the amount of feed it is possible to induce each laying hen to eat daily, according to George P. McCarthy, extension poultry husbandman at Texas A. & M. Normally one hen will eat about 80 pounds of feed a year, approximately half of which should be mash and one half grain for best results.

Egg mash, or laying mash, is the important portion of the feed for hens that are expected to lay. Laying mash is a combination of feeds which are high in protein and other ingredients essential for keeping the hens in good health, as well as for producing a maximum number of eggs.

Laying mash must constitute one-half, or 40 pounds, of the yearly ration. The usual mixtures for laying rations comprise 100 pounds protein supplement and 200 pounds of ground home-grown grains to make a suitable mash mixture. The grains may be corn, maize or hiegarl in combination with oats.

One hundred laying hens will consume about 3½ tons of home grown grains a year, McCarthy adds. If the net income from the flock is figured on the basis of increased return from home produced grain, the producer will find that he sold his grain at about double the market price. In some cases even greater return can be made.

Farm Notes

The 25 per cent of the people in the United States living on the land are furnishing 60 per cent of the increase in the country's population, according to the bureau of agricultural economics.

A dairy bull, after he is two years old, should be kept a little on the thin side rather than fat. He will be more fit for breeding, and this slight limitation of feed need not injure his growth.

The U. S. department of commerce has ceased publication of statistical information on exports of American farm produce and will keep such information secret because of the war.

An effective farm windbreak should have several kinds of trees, including evergreens.

Business Was Going On As Usual Despite Repairs

He was an Englishman and a high-speed salesman who had joined the army, gone into action, and had been seriously wounded. For several days he lay delirious at the base hospital, but eventually he turned the corner, and slowly started the climb back to health.

On the first day of his recovery he was surprised to see all the nurses standing around his bed, offering him money.

"Why, what is this for?" he asked. "I do not understand."

"This is for the radios, refrigerators and vacuum sweepers you sold us while you were unconscious," they chorused.

Lockless Suez Canal

The Suez canal is a sea-level "ditch," requiring no locks. The narrow ditch in the sand runs for 104.5 miles through desert and marshy land from Port Said on the Mediterranean to Port Taufiq on the Gulf of Suez. Its channel depth is now 45 feet, and its narrowest width is 70 yards. Although it has been concreted at some places to halt erosion, the banks are chiefly sand or gravel.

The northern half of the canal cuts straight through the desert; the southern half leads through a chain of small lakes which act as "expansion chambers" to help take up the flow of the four-foot tide from the Red sea.

Our Gold and Silver

Since 1918 the U. S. mints have coined $1,574,009,146 in silver, and since 1920 they have coined $4,520,218,478 in gold. The United States stock in gold at the end of the fiscal year in 1940 was $19,963,090,863 in gold coin and bullion, and $457,078,371 in silver dollars and $402,260,815 in subsidiary coins.

YOU

ARE AN INFLUENTIAL PERSON

The merchant who advertises must treat you better than the merchant who does not. He must treat you as though you were the most influential person in town. As a matter of cold fact you are. You hold the destiny of his business in your hands. He knows it. He shows it. And you benefit by good service, by courteous treatment, by good value—and by lower prices.

Medical Association

More than 5000 low-income farm families working with the FSA in New Mexico, Texas, Colorado, Kansas and Oklahoma, are participating in a Group Medical Care Program. This information was received here this week by John Paul Jones, rural rehabilitation supervisor for Lincoln County. This program makes medical attention more readily available to low-income rural people at a cost they can afford.

Dr. Turner said today that the medical program for families in Lincoln County has been in operation since March, 1939, and that on the whole the doctors and families have been satisfied with the way in which the plan has operated.

John Paul Jones,
Rural Rehabilitation Supervisor.

Mayor W. J. Ayers and daughter Miss Gertrude of Polly were
