Mysterious Death Near Luna

Tuesday afternoon while Undertaker T. E. Kelley and Jimmy Brister were dove hunting near Luna, about 26 miles north of here, Viola Johnson, 13, who had been hunting her cow, came to Mr. Kelley and told him she had discovered the body of a man and took him to the place, where he found the same badly decomposed, it having been dead to all appearances for about two weeks. Wm. Balow, Justice of the Peace of Ancho, acted as coroner.

Mr. Kelley came in and on Wednesday morning returned accompanied by Sheriff Stover and several men. The body was nude with the exception of a light undershirt. Being so badly decomposed, it was impossible to ascertain as to whether or not foul play had been employed in the man's death. Investigators found a pair of shoes, overalls, a pair of glasses and a torn shirt, neither of the articles bearing anything that would give out the slightest information.

A coroner's jury rendered a verdict that the man met his death from some mysterious cause. A cut just behind one of his ears, might have been credited to a knife stab, but the bad condition of the body prevented any certainty of foul play. The body was buried where found, in as humane a manner as conditions would permit.

LATER—Section foreman Pruet of Ancho has found and made known to Justice Balow, the following which was picked up on the track and which may give some clue to the identity of the dead man.

"H-33 Social Security Act. No. 663-12-1267, Gustav Wilhelm Erickson." Another card in case shows his occupation as coat maker, address 1219 Los Angeles. Also have certificate of naturalization No. 1019666 and discharge certificate from U. S. Army in his favor."

Business Men's Club

Eighteen members and 8 visitors present. President James M. Carpenter presiding. J. E. Hall was in charge of the program arranged for the District Court officials, who were guests of the club. Talks were made by most of the visitors present.

A motion was passed to have a double program Sept. 17, celebrating National Defense Week and National Constitution Day. The wives of the members are invited. A special program has been arranged for the event and all business operators of the city are invited to attend.

In Memoriam Mrs. Ivy Lindsey Adams

The general public and the former students of Mrs. Adams mourn the untimely, tragic end of the career of a fine mistress of education. Mrs. Adams had a deep, abiding conviction that it was the students of today who counted most in this world. It is in this conviction that the key to an understanding of her interest in, and unstinted service to, education is to be found. Could she directly by her own intimate, personal contacts and counsel, and indirectly by stimulating an able faculty to adopt a similar approach, develop young people into progressively maturing, clear thinking, well-rounded adults imbued with a desire to serve their fellow citizens, her goal would be achieved and the effort and sacrifice required in its attainment be more than amply repaid. It follows naturally that much of her work with both students and parents alike was not readily observable because of its intimate, personal nature, the intimacy of which she did not violate. Much of this work went beyond the conventional bounds of educational obligation. In her mission she succeeded with signal success.

Boy Dragged to Death

At 3 o'clock yesterday morning, Sheriff Stover and Deputy Vega received information that a ranch hand at the Downing ranch about 70 miles north of here had been dragged to death by a vicious horse. They made the trip and found where one Manuel Barreras, having been out hunting a stray calf, he became entangled in the rope and the horse dragged him for a distance of over half-mile, crushing the life out of him. His body was entirely nude when found, not a vestige of clothing left on the body with the exception of one boot. A coroner's jury here with Judge Elderdo Chavez as coroner, rendered a verdict according to the facts related above.

SPEAKING OF SPORTS

By ROBERT McSHANE

THE battle down the stretch between the Dodgers and the Cardinals promises to be a dog fight, right to the finish.

But that isn't a new development. From the middle of April through August—a four months' struggle—those two teams spent the greater part of the time battling eye to eye, each trying to outdistance the other.

Both teams play for keeps. The Cardinals have pitching, hitting and speed. They aren't as colorful as the old Gas House Gang, but they have just as much vigor and snap. And they have plenty of heart. It seems that every day or two one of their key men is injured. Yet they keep right on rolling, regardless of an unkind fate.

The Dodgers have an unusual hold on the nation's baseball public. They are much more than a local attraction—they are national heroes. The cause of that phenomenon is not known. Psychologists can't give you the answer. It may be in the fact that Brooklyn, to outsiders, is an unusual place. And Brooklyn's ballplayers reflect the spirit of the city. Brooklyn has a reputation—and tradition—for loyalty and affection in baseball. The current team is known to Flatbush residents as Our Bums. The term is a kindly one as employed by the home folks and the players accept the title as an expression of friendship. Larry MacPhail and Leo ("The Lip") Durocher unquestionably are Brooklyn's leading citizens.

Which is the better team? That question takes a lot of answering. The two teams have remained practically deadlocked, shoulder to shoulder, after playing more than 120 games.

Equal in Strength

It wasn't so long ago that the Cardinals dropped five in a row to inherit a four-game deficit. But they bounced back and showed themselves none the worse for wear and tear.

Then, when the Cardinals started moving up, the Dodgers blasted their immediate hopes, proving that they, too, have their share of heart.

There isn't a great deal of difference in the strength of the two teams. That, of course, is obvious. Both are capably managed, both are good hustlers, hungry for victory, and both can field and hit.

Too, there is little difference in the pitching abilities. St. Louis has no duet to match the combined winning records of Whit Wyatt and Kirby Higbe. But the Cardinals have a bit more average strength.

A bit of history isn't completely out of line at this point. It was only 11 years ago that St. Louis and Brooklyn were locked in another life-or-death struggle. The Cardinals and the Dodgers were playing a three-day series which started on September 16. The league-leading Dodgers were on top of an 11-game winning streak for a one-game margin over the Red Birds, who had taken 21 out of their last 23.

In the opening tilt, Brooklyn's great Dazzy Vance went out to meet Wild Bill Hallahan, Cardinal money pitcher. At least 30,000 fans were going completely mad.

At the end of six innings the two old masters were deadlocked 3-3. Nine innings and still no runner had crossed home plate. Then, in the last half of the tenth, Andy High, a pinch hitter, lined a double to right center and later scored on a single to right. The first game had ended with a 1-0 win for St. Louis. The Cards had eased into first place by one percentage point. Gloom descended on Brooklyn.

Lugue, opposed Sylvester Johnson in the second tilt. A 3-3 deadlock in the ninth and with two abagard in the Cardinal half. High hit another double to right, scoring two men for a 5-3 victory. Brooklyn was a blighted place.

Bleeding Hearts

Burlingame Grimes pitched the third game for St. Louis. The Cards won again, 4-3. The anguished cries from Brooklyn could be heard plainly in Newfoundland.

That series broke the Dodgers' hearts. With only seven games left to play, they lost four straight. The Cards stomped through their last nine games, giving a young, loud-mouthed hucker a chance to show his mettle in their win against Pittsburgh. It was Dixie Dean's big league debut. He won 3-1.

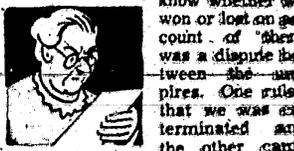

This ancient history isn't meant to be indicative of the present struggle. It merely shows what can happen in the national pastime. Those two teams of 1930 were about the same in strength. They were hard fighting, fast and alert. While each team had its supporters, unbiased observers were hesitant about picking the eventual winner.

So it is today. It has been a close affair—as close as a lumps as you'll ever find. There isn't enough difference to start a debate.

PRIVATE PURKEY ON 'MANOEVERS'

Dear Ma— Well I am just back from another maneuver with my outfit and I don't know whether we won or lost on account of there was a dispute between the umpires. One ruled that we were terminated and the other came up with a decision that we were not even touched. It is all on account of the flag system, which I guess you never heard of so I will explain it to you ma.

Of course we do not shoot each other in these here war games but at the same time nobody can tell how the fight came out if it is all forgot as just a cross country thing. So a lot of flags is used to denote where we are and what happened. All we jeps do is obey orders and we don't even know what the main idea is. But the observers and umpires who have the whole thing worked out on maps get a idea what wood of happened if it had been a actual battle. Here is where the flags come in.

An umpire waving a blue flag indicates that you are smack in the middle of an area which is under artillery bombardment and that it is a very unhealthy spot to stay in. If he has a yellow flag it is supposed to show that you are under machine gun fire and that if you go any farther into it you wood be shot full of holes in a real war. Another colored flag means that we are advancing thru a heavy smoke screen and so on. I heard that in this last battle somebody got all mixed up on the flags and it still is a question witch got mixed up most the officers or the referees. Anyhow one official said the flags meant my Division had walked right through a area witch the enemy was giving the works and that we was nearly all dead or wounded. He said that in a real fight all of us wood have been legible to be buried as the known Soldier. Another referee said nothing of the kind. He said he was a better judge of flags than the other fellow and that from what he saw we had been safe all the time except from more bunters.

Of course for all I know one of our is color blind but I do not care as long as the generals do not order the game played over again.

Believe me I am glad the summer is almost over as the weather gets twice as hot in a army as it does anywhere else and it seems to me I have spent the last four weeks in a dust cloud I never knew there was so much dust in America. It wood almost be a great break for me if I got sent to Iceland, except that I do not think I would like the long days up there.

Sergeant Monecy says the sun does not set at all in the summer in Iceland and that it is day time 24 hours. A 12-hour day is plenty for me, especially in the army. In a place where the sun does not go down I wood be afraid the bugler wood get all mixed up and start blowing me out of bed at midnight.

Well anyhow I am getting so used to tough brakes that nothing bothers me much no more, except when I do not get regular letters from you and Lillian and Doris and all the girls witch reminds me do you know where Lucretia Willets has moved? All my letters to her come back.

Two ample strokes Loosen the yokes Fashioned by tyranny. Marked in the night Yield, in the light, Omens for all to see.

On wall and on door More and yet more Symbols of victory. Pointed and narrow, Sharp as an arrow, This is the letter Y.

Elmer Twitchell says a lot of people won't really get aroused to the realities of the war crisis until they see the prospect of a return of prohibition and homemade gin.

A PAIR OF CYES I'd like to see him go to prison. Also pay a fine. We both raise dogs and let his whip that pup of mine.

What was once all for the lamps of China has become all for the scamps of Japan. Well, maybe it's an easier way to pleasure than just using less matches.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By KAROL L. LUNDQUIST, D. D. Dean of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for September 14

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education, used by permission.

THE ETERNAL GOD, THE SOURCE OF HELP

LESSON TEXT—Revelation 7:9-17. GOLDEN TEXT—Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty, which was, and is, and is to come.—Revelation 4:8.

A look into the future is something that would interest most of us, and we have it in this lesson. We agree with Dr. Wilbur Smith that "this is an excellent opportunity to bring to the hearts of our pupils some of these divinely revealed truths which the world, in its mad panic today, so easily and tragically puts aside."

The portion of Revelation, chapter seven, which is before us comes immediately after a section dealing with Israel. The Church is not mentioned. The ones spoken of have come out of "the great tribulation" (as the Revised Version rightly translates it) and are evidently Gentiles who have come to believe in Christ during that time of unparalleled tribulation described in later chapters of this book.

Our lesson therefore deals with a specific time and a certain people in connection with an event yet to take place. But we find in this passage the description of the experiences of those who, like Christians of our day, triumphed through their saving faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. We may therefore here learn something of the future blessedness of the redeemed.

I. Saved Forever and Ever (vv. 9-17). Salvation is a reality, and we are never going to be more certain of it than when we, like this multitude, stand in God's presence to praise Him for what He has done in our lives. It is real. Praise God!

Notice that there was an unnumbered multitude from all nations. The good tidings at the time of Christ's birth were for all people (Luke 2:10), and some from all nations respond. Note too that the deeds of the Lord are greater than we might at first suppose.

These redeemed ones had immediate access to God's throne, offering their praise direct. They were clad in the white robes of God's own purity and bore in their hands the palms of victory. They, with the angels, the elders (possibly representing the Church already caught up into heaven), and the living creatures (not "beasts" as in A.V. They are divine beings of highest character) ascribed a seven-fold praise to God "forever and ever. Amen." It is a glorious picture of completed redemption.

II. Serving Day and Night (vv. 15-17). It should be observed that even those who came through the great tribulation did not look to their own needs or faithfulness to save them. They were washed in "the blood of the Lamb" (v. 14).

Now that they had reached eternity through peril, toil and pain, they would (according to many of our ideas of heaven) sit down for an eternal rest and retirement. Not at all! They found their joy in serving their blessed Lord "night and day"; that is, without any weakness or exhaustion, without any failures or defects.

III. Satisfied Throughout Eternity (vv. 15-17). To be covered by the "flood" of God (whatever it may mean) surely betokens the perfect and constant protection of His own presence. Everything destructive and anything will be gone. There will be no lack of any good thing needed to satisfy every desire. There will be no thirst quenched and no hunger unsatisfied (see similar description passage in Rev. 21:3, 4).

The redeemed are said to be under the tender care of the Good Shepherd Himself; the Lamb (our Redeemer) who is in the midst of God's Cross shall lead them, not by "the still waters" of the "fountain of life" but "unto living fountains of water." Thus in the beauty of figurative speech, we are assured that God's provision for His children, the redeemed in Christ Jesus, will perfectly satisfy every need of soul and spirit. There is no such satisfaction this side of eternity, but we shall find it there.

Then too, there is to be no sorrow. God Himself is the guarantee that there shall be nothing in that blessed land to cause anyone to shed a tear. Think what that means! Think of the weeping of boys and girls, men and women, who in this world of sorrow, sin and suffering, shed bitter tears of pain or sorrow. Well, it were almost enough to know that heaven is a place where there shall be no tears.

Remember that the promise of perfect completed redemption for those, the Gentile believers of the great tribulation, will be for all God's children, for us who believe in Christ. Remember, will you not join us today if you are still an unbeliever? Take Christ now as your Redeemer.

TURKEY RANGES AND SANITATION

Four Important Points for Good Birds.

By GEORGE C. CRANDALL (Assistant Poultry Husbandman, New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station.)

Sanitation on the turkey range is an important point in good management of growing poult. Here are four points vital to good range conditions. Check your turkey range now to see if it comes up to the desired standards.

First, the range area should not have been used by other poultry for at least two years. The land should not be contaminated by drainage water or poultry manure, and should be well drained and free from swampy areas.

Second, all feed hoppers should be so constructed as to exclude the droppings of the turkeys. The feed hoppers should be moved at least once a week to a clean place on the range. This helps to maintain good range conditions and avoids bare spots on the range.

Third, watering equipment should be so constructed or protected so that the dropping or foreign matter cannot contaminate the water. If the water equipment is stationary, wire platforms will keep the area around them dry and sanitary. Water pans or troughs should be scrubbed with a brush once daily. Disinfecting all water equipment at regular intervals is desirable. If the equipment is not stationary, it should be moved weekly to dry, clean places on the range.

Fourth, if the turkeys are allowed on open roosts on the range, this roosting area should be fenced separate from the range and so placed that the drainage from the roosting pens does not contaminate the range. The turkeys should be driven from the roosting area early in the morning and not allowed access to them until roosting time at night.

Tests With Homemade Paint Are Suggested

Many farmers are using a homemade paint of mortar coloring and used motor oil on barns and outbuildings. Some get good results, but others do not, says Howard M. Ellis, extension agricultural engineer. He suggests that some "experimenting" be done.

"Ordinarily," Ellis says, "from three-fourths to one pound of brick red mortar coloring will be required for each gallon of used oil. The blacker the oil, the more coloring it will require. Determine the proper mix as follows: Divide one pound of red mortar coloring into four parts. Mix in two parts (one-half pound) of the coloring, slowly, while the oil is being stirred. Paint a small section on the back of the building to be painted. Add another fourth of the mortar coloring to the original mixture and paint a second section beside the first. Repeat with the last fourth." Allow the oil to penetrate the wood for a time, inspect and then decide which mix you desire.

Ellis says the homemade paint can be applied with an old orchard sprayer or with whitewash brushes. Mortar coloring is about six cents per pound at hardware stores. Crankcase drainings may be obtained free from some filling stations.

Advises Rest for Cows After Every Lactation

A dairy cow that is allowed a rest period after each lactation will produce from 5 to 10 per cent more milk annually than a cow that is milked continuously, says Dr. George E. Taylor, extension dairyman at the New Jersey college of agriculture, Rutgers university. "There are several reasons why this is true," he says. "During peak production, cows secrete more nutrients than they are able to assimilate from the feed consumed, thus depleting the body reserve. By storing a reserve of fat and minerals, especially calcium and phosphorus, in the body before freshening they are able to maintain a higher level of production following calving. The udder also undergoes a change during the dry period, resulting in a recuperation of the glandular milk secreting tissue. "Research workers have shown that production during the subsequent lactation increases with a lengthening of the dry period."

Handling Hay

A method of handling hay which is gaining in popularity with farmers, is what they call the automatic sweep or back rake. These sweeps or rakes are mounted on tractors, old trucks, or old automobiles and are used to pick the hay up out of the windrow and transport it to the barn, stack, or stack. With a large increase in hay acreage during the last few years, many farmers find it necessary to change methods of handling hay.

Later Acquaintance

The henpecked husband was moaning his lot. "But," said his friend, "I knew your wife Gertrude as a child—she was just 'Gert' to me!" "Well," came the answer, "she's just 'rude' to me!"

No Burden

"A wfully decent of you to send us a check as a wedding present," said the bridegroom at the wedding reception, to his new father-in-law. "I came back marked 'No funds,' but we took the will for the deed, and you'll notice it has a prominent place among the presents."

That Was Proper

Father and son were running a business. "Bear in mind," said the father, "I am the main support of the firm." "Right!" said the son. "You're on our billheads as 'J. Brown, Prop.'"

Cutting Reply

"Your hair needs cutting badly, sir." "No it doesn't; it needs cutting well. You cut it badly last time."

No Burden

"No doubt you will allow me to take my lumbly with me," said the haughty butler who had been backward with his presents. "Certainly," replied the landlady. "Your other collar is downstairs."

A Kiss It Was!

There was a sudden screaming of brakes as the sports car skidded around the corner, struck a lamppost, careened across the pavement, turned back into the road, bumped into three cars, narrowly escaped knocking down a policeman, hit a wall, and finally came to a stop. A breathless girl climbed out of the car, followed by an equally breathless young man. "Darling," she said, rapturously, "that's what I call a kiss!"

Star Dust

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO
By VIRGINIA VALE
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

REMEMBER when Colleen Moore was trooping about the country with her dolls' house? Well, if present plans go through Charles Boyer may soon be engaged in a slightly similar journey. He will make personal appearances with the openings in various cities of "Hold Back the Dawn," and will also display his model of the city of Paris in theater lobbies and department stores. Valued at more than $50,000, the miniature city shows Paris as it was before the German occupation. Part of the proceeds of the tour will go to war relief organizations. When traveling, the city is housed in eight crates; setting it up keeps four men occupied for two days.

Apparently everybody who saw Kathryn Grayson in that last Hardy film wanted to know what her next picture would be. Letters poured into the Metro studios, and out went the word that she will appear in "The Vanishing Virginian." She's but recently returned from her honeymoon—in private life she's now Mrs. John Shelton—and will be back before the cameras soon.

It's rather a shock to realize that Hedy Lamarr has been resting for nearly eight months—hasn't worked since "Ziegfeld Girl." She's beginning a new picture now, "H. M.

HEDY LAMARR

Pulham, Esq." based on the Marquand novel—it's difficult to see how either of the two leading feminine roles can be twisted around to fit her, but stranger things are happening in Hollywood all the time.

Maybe you'll be crazy about the latest Walt Disney, "The Reluctant Dragon." But a lot of us wish that Mr. Disney would abandon these long features and stick to good short ones. Both this one and "Fantasia" could be cut into several good shorts.

In "Sullivan's Travels" you'll see a Veronica Lake who'll startle you—a boy hobo, apparently, in turtle-necked sweater, old cap, blue denim work trousers and a coat that's too large for her. Her daughter's birth interrupted her picture making for a while, but Paramount went right on making plans for her; she'll be starred next in "This Gun for Hire," in which she'll portray a magician who becomes involved with a munitions magnate in a mysterious murder. Which means that she'll have to take lessons in the art of magic.

Lewis Stone is taking time out from the "Judge Hardy" role, between the family chronicles, to play an army colonel in "Steel Cavalry," the new Wallace Beery picture. But he'll have to be careful not to do anything the Judge wouldn't do, or the fans will protest.

Charles Laughton (have you heard the new radio program, "Three Ring Time," starring him and Milton Berle?) would have been an inn keeper if Laughton, Sr., had had his way. He placed Charles at Claridge's, in London, to learn the hotel business. And his son learned one valuable thing—how to impress a haughty waiter. "Just order water and a poached egg on toast," says he. Seems that it gets them down every time, especially if they've been urging champagne on you.

The children who attend New York city's public schools ought to find at least some of their lessons pretty enjoyable. They'll be shown Warner Brothers' national defense and historical shorts as part of the curriculum.

ODDS AND ENDS—Raymond Gram Swing has just bought a 250-acre farm half way up Putney mountain in Vermont. . . . As a youngster Bob Hope used to do imitations of Charlie Chaplin at church socials. . . . Paramount's "Air Raid" is a tale of adventure, love and murder during a practice blackout in an American city. . . . Richard Whorf, who replaced John Garfield in Warner's "Bridges Built at Night," has been replaced by Craig Stevens. . . . Andy Devine will join radio's Al Pearce and His Gang October 3rd. . . . Columbia has given a new contract to Jane Fawcett, known as America's Number One model; perhaps you saw her in "Two Lutes."

Rent Groups to Fight Gouging

Henderson Reports Committees Established in 21 Defense Centers.

WASHINGTON.—In an effort to prevent profiteering in rents in national defense areas, the office of price administration and civilian supply reports that fair rent committees have been organized in 21 cities, and urged the creation of others where abuses appeared.

Publicity for outstaying landlords was suggested by OPACS, which also said that the division of defense housing administration would refuse to register any dwelling unit or room, the rent for which had been declared unfair by a fair rent committee.

Quick Action Needed.
"Surveys now being conducted by federal research agencies at the request of the OPACS rent section and thousands of letters of complaint show that rapid rises in rents are under way in more than 100 defense areas," it was stated. "Quick action to head off this trend is urged by the OPACS rent section. Designation of fair rent committees, ably led, guided by OPACS and backed by the full force of public opinion and the local press is one method by which local authorities can curb rent profiteering."

Leadership in the rent campaign has been taken, said the agency, by citizens in Wilmington, N. C.; South Bend, Ind.; San Diego, Calif.; Newport News, Norfolk, Portsmouth, Hampton and Virginia Beach, Va.; Knoxville and Warren, Ohio; Pontiac, Mich.; Alexandria, La.; Columbus, Ga.; Mobile, Sylvania and Talladega, Ala.; and Hartford, New London, Groton, Waterbury and Bristol, Conn.

Series of Offense.
Under the OPACS plan, the fair rent committee would be appointed by mayors or other responsible authorities. When organized, a committee would determine a "fair rent date," that is, a day on which local rents had not yet been affected seriously by defense activities. Tenants, roomers and lodgers would then be invited to file complaints against increases. On evidence of profiteering the landlord and complainant would be asked to appear. If the landlord complied with the committee decision, that would end the matter, but if he stood fast, "full publicity" might be given "to all the facts in the case."

Leon Henderson, the OPACS head, said that profiteering in rents during the emergency was "a serious offense against the nation's welfare."

Traveler Wasn't Praying, Mattress Needed Inflation

VISALIA, CALIF.—Dr. E. H. Betts returned to his home here after participating in a 100-mile horseback trek with a reputation among his fellow travelers for being a devout, pious man, for they had noticed that he knelt at his bedside each evening. One commented H. A. Orrison, a fellow traveler of Dr. Betts, on the fact that the physician prayed so regularly.

Orrison investigated the next evening. Sure enough, Dr. Betts was on his knees at the side of the bed, but instead of praying he was blowing away on a rubber sleeping mattress.

"No," said Dr. Betts, "I'm not praying now, but the next time I come on a trek like this I won't forget the pump that goes with this mattress."

Private Holds That Line As Bride and Pals Cheer

SAN DIEGO.—Cat calls and heckling from a long line of impatient soldiers, waiting to use a Camp Calian pay telephone, turned into cheers for Private Robert P. Kronewitter.

He set a new high for army pay-as-you-go phone calls at the San Diego camp by talking for 21 minutes to South Bend, Ind.

Kronewitter, a bridegroom of less than three weeks, was celebrating his wife's birthday by talking to her. Before the number, he put 69 quarters and three nickels in the slot.

Said Kronewitter, emerging from the booth with a sweaty brow and a sublime expression: "It sure was worth it!"

Bible Published in 12 More Tongues in Year

NEW YORK.—The Bible was published in 12 new languages last year, bringing to 1,054 the number of tongues in which some part of the scripture has been printed. The American Bible society said the languages were Zuni (New Mexico) Indian and dialects of Africa, Burma, Palestine and Ecuador.

Players May Rent Clubs At St. Louis Golf Course

ST. LOUIS.—The city's parks and recreation department has inaugurated a plan to really make golf the "poor man's game."

Players may rent a set of golf clubs for 15 cents a day at two city-operated golf courses. No deposit is necessary. The set consists of five clubs, a bag and three used golf balls.

There's one rub though—a charge of 25¢ for each ball lost.

Camp Cavalcade

SHADOWY figures in a cavalcade of American history—such are the men behind the names of the great army cantonments scattered all over the United States, where young Americans are learning to be soldiers in order to defend their country when the need arises.

If the deeds of a man who served brilliantly in three wars can inspire his fellow-Americans, then the men who are training at Camp Shelby, near Hattiesburg, Miss., have plenty of cause for inspiration. For it is named for Colonel Isaac Shelby, (1750-1826) born in Maryland—but a settler in western Virginia at the outbreak of the

Isaac Shelby

Lord Dumore's war in 1774. He fought in the historic Battle of Point Pleasant but he won his greatest fame during the Revolution as one of the leaders of the frontier riflemen who won the great victory over Major Ferguson's British at the Battle of King's Mountain. Moving to Kentucky after the Revolution, Shelby was one of the framers of the constitution of Kentucky and in May, 1782, was elected first governor of the new state. At the outbreak of the War of 1812 he led 4,000 volunteers to help Gen. W. H. Harrison fight the British and Indians in the Northwest and for his bravery at the Battle of the Thames he was given a gold medal by congress.

Another Revolutionary war hero is immortalized in Camp Stewart near Hinesville, Ga.—Gen. Daniel Stewart, born near the site of the camp in 1761. He enlisted in the Patriot forces at the age of 15 and served under Marlon and Sumter in South Carolina. Captured by the British, he escaped from a prison ship in Charleston harbor and immediately re-enlisted in the fight for freedom. After the Revolution he served in several Indian wars and rose to the rank of brigadier-general before his death in 1829.

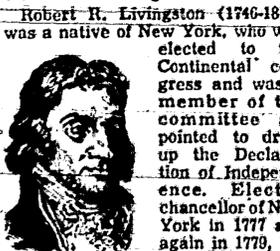

Louisiana has two camps named for notables whose careers were closely associated with the history of that state. They are Camp Claiborne and Camp Livingston, both near Alexandria, La. William Charles Cole Claiborne (1775-1817) was a Virginian and a friend of Thomas Jefferson, who persuaded him to study law. He moved to Tennessee, where he became a member of the first Tennessee constitutional convention and was elected to congress. When the historic contest for the presidency between Jefferson and Aaron Burr was thrown into the house of representatives for a decision, Claiborne cast the deciding vote for his friend on the thirty-sixth ballot. Thereafter Jefferson appointed him territorial governor of Mississippi and in 1803 named him and General Wilkinson commissioners to receive Louisiana Territory from France. He became the first governor of the new Territory and finally United States senator but died before taking office.

Robert R. Livingston (1746-1813) was a native of New York, who was elected to the Continental congress and was a member of the committee appointed to draw up the Declaration of Independence. Elected chancellor of New York in 1777 and again in 1779, he, as the head of the government of that state, administered the oath of office to George Washington as first President of the United States. In 1801 Livingston, as United States minister to France, opened negotiations for the purchase from Napoleon of the territory beyond the Mississippi and two years later he and James Monroe signed the Louisiana Purchase treaty. He was associated with Robert Fulton in developing steam navigation, and when he retired to private life it was to his estate, "Clermont," for which Fulton named his historic steamboat.

Origin of Army Titles

A captain commands a company, and his title is derived from the Latin word for head, "caput." His second in command was his lieutenant, the man who held (tenant) the company in place (lieu) of his superior officer. Next came the sergeant, one who served (servir). Several companies together form a column commanded by a colonel (column). His second in command is a lieutenant-colonel and the third in command was originally a sergeant-major but is now a major.

APRON problem! It is solved here with two exciting new motifs in the Accordion Flare and the Water Lily. Iran—Battle Front for Four Days

The Iranian government bowed to superior force after four days of token fighting against British and Russian invaders. Get Going, Boys and Girls, Here She Comes!

This sequence of pictures is said to be among the finest ever made of a tornado. They were made by Mrs. Omar Shields as the writhing funnel-shaped cloud neared her home at Lincolnville, Kan. The first photo, taken from a distance of approximately three miles, shows the dark, twisting menace as it first struck the ground. The second picture (center) taken when the twister was but a mile away, shows the tornado at the height of its fury as it rushed towards Lincolnville. The third picture (right) was taken after the gale had leveled Lincolnville. The tornado is seen swerving from its path as it began to disintegrate. An instant after first picture was made the twister ripped through the Highland rural school and demolished it.

Roosevelt Asserts Positive Stand Against Appeasement as Lindbergh Sees Trouble With Great Britain; Diplomats Try Their Hand in Far East

(EDITOR'S NOTE.—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

PEOPLE: And Realization

President Roosevelt, realizing that he was faced with a determined anti-intervention bloc, both in press and congress, which was taking as its theme "pooh-pooh, there's no danger," had been making strides in his effort to bring about in the American public a realization of what he considered to be the real seriousness of the international situation. Coupled with this was an effort he was making to have Americans also make a more realistic evaluation of their own blessings. In recent utterances, particularly in one from Hyde Park, he quoted at length from a personal letter to him finding themselves at least technically enemies of the British. Lindbergh's speech was headlined in many newspapers as "Lindbergh Says British May Fight U. S.," and given prominent position.

At about the same time Representative Cox of Georgia, bitterly denouncing the presidential shakeup of the defense production group, declared that the White House was letting the "left-wingers" take control of industry, and that the new alignment would "tie the hands" of William S. Knudsen, and "kick Stettinius out of the picture."

Yet on the same day Mr. Knudsen himself was quoted as saying: "I feel that the new arrangement will achieve splendid results in increasing the rate of production." It was a succession of incidents like these which enlivened the American war effort at the same time confusing newspaper readers as to the thought of leaders on controversial subjects of how the effort should be conducted.

VICHY:

In Limelight

The shooting of Pierre Laval and Marcel Deat by Paul Collette, a Norman youthful assassin who had to join the French Legion to fight the Soviet in order to get close to the Nazi collaborator with his pistol, turned eyes suddenly toward Vichy, and the double assassination attempt seemed confirmatory of previous reports of serious unrest.

At almost the same time that stories were coming across the wires telling of the sudden arousal of sympathy for Collette, a New York newspaper writer uncovered a story about the operations in the United States of a clique of Vichy agents, working under the direct control of Gaston Henry-Haye, French ambassador to the United States.

It was a romantic yarn, telling how advance plans of General De Gaulle's ill-fated expedition against

SEES PRESIDENT

Ambassador Nomura recently delivered a personal message to President Roosevelt from Prince Konoye, Japanese premier. This started rumors of "peace" negotiations for the Pacific.

from an unnamed mother, in which she said, in part:

"It is terrifying, coming from Europe, to realize that many of these people (in America) in their untroubled existence, seem to have no idea of what hangs over their heads today.

"They put themselves in a posture where they cannot squawk about what they don't see.

"They go about their 'daily dozens' ignoring the threatening heel of human beings who want to destroy the freedom, the normal life to which they have been accustomed.

"In Europe there is not a nation of those who have suffered abuse whose people are not aware of what America stands for. They pray daily that America will save itself by helping greatly to defeat Hitlerism."

The President, echoing her sentiments, said:

"That is a thought we all feel. We want to keep America so that in all the years to come, long after all of us here are gone, someone will be able to meet us as we are doing, as we hope to meet next year."

And, later, in a message particularly to labor, along the line of urging America to consider its own blessings, he said:

"Only in a democracy could there be a day set aside for millions of workers, free men and women in a free country.

"Only in a democracy could they spend the day in free worship, enjoying the right to speak their minds, to read uncensored news and to hear uncensored radio programs.

"Today we in America are faced with the great task of preserving that democracy and we, too, will offer our utmost in labor and sacrifice just as our fathers and our fathers' fathers did." His Labor day talk declared unequivocally for the defeat of Hitlerism and his refusal to become "a Benedict Arnold" by accepting appeasement and "crumbs" from Hitler's "peace" table.

LINDBERGH: Sees New Menace

Charles A. Lindbergh, chief administration critic, enlivened the discussion of extended aid to Britain and Russia by turning on England, and warning the American people in an address that if we banded too much on the British, we might find ourselves in the same company with Finland and France.

Pointing out that these two nations, like this country, started out in their participation of the war as allies of Britain, and now were

SHOT

The shooting of former Premier Pierre Laval, Nazi collaborator, is believed to be but one instance of widespread opposition in France to the Petain-Hitler program.

Dakar was smuggled into the U. S. in the gasoline tank of an automobile shipped to Hoboken from London and on a Greek steamer.

The plans presumably were turned over to the Vichy government by agents here. The story, evidently the result of long and careful investigation by the writer for his newspaper, named more than a dozen names, including that of the ambassador himself, and created a profound sensation, certain to bring repercussions.

It was charged, among other things, that a secret French police agent had been sent here and had established the undercover organization.

At the same time that Laval and Deat were near death from their wounds as a sort of culmination of French unrest and sabotage against the pro-Nazis, it was reported from Stockholm, mine of information about conditions in Norway, that Quisling himself had tried suicide by taking sleeping pills.

The report stated that the nervous puppet Nazi leader in conquered Norway had been found unconscious and that prompt medical attention saved his life.

The Swedish sources stated in passing that their country, as well as Switzerland and Portugal, the only three European nations not engaged in the struggle one-way or another, were being strongly propagandized by Germany on taking sides, with considerable "advice" as to which side to take.

Household Hints

Dry salt sprinkled immediately on new fruit stains will prevent them from being permanent.

Tea should never be stored near anything with a distinct odor, for it will absorb the stronger odor and lose its own flavor.

Ground nutmet on fresh peaches with your breakfast cereal is a palate tickler.

Chicken fricasee does a lot better with a pinch of ground ginger cooked with the chicken.

Every two weeks your list of household tasks should include a thorough airing of the mattress. This can be done by opening the window wide.

To help keep your plastered wall from cracking when you're hanging pictures with nails, heat the nails first and they will then more easily go through paper or plaster.

It is not wise to soak clothes in hot water and leave them in it until the water is cold, as cloth fiber expands in warm water and contracts in cold and will in this way hold the dirt. Make a sud of cold water if you want them to soak for any length of time.

As soon as you take a sponge cake from the oven, invert the pan on a cake rack until the cake is cool. This lets air circulate under the cake, helping to prevent gathering of moisture in the pan. When cake is cool loosen the sides with a spatula and slip the cake.

After you have washed small rugs, dry them on a flat surface. Then they will lay flat on the floor.

After picking chickens, ducks or geese, rub them with a damp cloth dipped in cornmeal and see how well it cleans them.

TRUTH

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of a satisfactory result. The favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who find the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions.

These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the object of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorder of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes.

It is more people were aware of how the kidneys most constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys are, and diuretic medication would be more often employed.

Urinary activity or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, stinging of the eyes, or a feeling of heaviness, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—head, neck, or all played out.

Use Doan's Pills. It is better to pay a few cents for a box of world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

DOAN'S PILLS

Riders of Buck River

THE STORY SO FAR: Ellen Carey, daughter of the postmaster, is interested in two men—Dashing Jeff Brand, supposedly a rustler, and Cal Terry, manager of the big Diamond Reverse B ranch, whom rustlers and small cattle-

"Better sit down, gentlemen," Calhoun said.

Brand looked at him, hostility in his hard eyes. "I'll stand."

The ranch manager's gaze met his coldly. "Better take a chair, Mr. Brand. This isn't a social occasion. After we get through with our business you can shoot at me just as properly as you could have before!"

"Is it straight goods that Black Yeager has been killed?" blurted out Jeff.

"Yes. That's why I sent for you."

"Who killed him?"

"I don't know. It looks as though he had been killed by a man supposed to be his friend."

Brand sat down. "All right. Spill it. I'll listen."

Calhoun Terry told the story of the attack on him.

CHAPTER XVI

Jeff Brand said bluntly, "That's your story. Sounds likely, doesn't it? Black and this friend of his were trying to drygulch you, then suddenly the side-kick turns on Black and blasts him. I reckon almost anybody would believe that."

"Don't get on the prod, Jeff," the owner of the Box 55 suggested. "Mr. Terry could have buried the body if he had been minded that way. He didn't have to send for us and tell a yarn so improbable that I reckon it must be true."

"How could it be true?" demanded Brand. Have you got any friends who would go out with you to do a job and right when you were doing it pour slugs into you?"

"I hope not," Carey said. "But I'm not Black Yeager. He was a tough, surly hombre, and there might be one of his so-called friends waiting to get a chance at him."

"So he rode with Black for a couple of hours and didn't crack down on him till he knew there was a witness in the neighborhood to testify against him later maybe. Too thin, Lane. I'm not that easy."

The rustler swung round on the Diamond Reverse B manager sharply. "What was the idea in sending for me?"

The frosty blue eyes of Terry met those of the outlaw steadily. "The idea is to have you examine the ground and see for yourself. I don't enjoy the reputation of being a man who kills from ambush."

"Did you bring the body in, Mr. Terry?" Carey asked.

"No, I thought it better for you to see it on the ground." He added: "Two of my riders are camping out in the grove to keep off wild animals. We can't read sign till morning. You had better turn in and get some sleep. We'll have breakfast early and take off by daybreak."

"That's good medicine," Carey agreed. "How about it, Jeff?"

"No obligations on either side, Mr. Brand," his host said. "As I mentioned before, a strictly business transaction. There will still be an open season on me."

Brand and Carey followed Terry to the dining-room. Jim Wong had set two places. There were sandwiches on a platter and a pot of coffee beside some cups. A bottle of whiskey and glasses were on the sideboard.

"You've had a long ride in the rain," the foreman said. "Jim Wong fixed you up a little refreshment. I'll have your horses looked after while you eat."

He left his two guests to themselves.

"Terry is no more guilty than I am," Carey said. "At least I don't think so. But we'll know more about this tomorrow."

Lane leaned forward and spoke, almost in a murmur. "Has it ever struck you, Jeff, that the big cow outfits may have stock detectives right in our midst?"

"You mean some of their own cowboys?"

"No, I don't. Somebody closer to the rustlers. One who sees them oftener and maybe rides around with them. A nester, perhaps."

Brand thought it over. "Might be so. If I could prove it on one I would sure give him a quick ticket to Kingdom Come. But what has that got to do with this affair?"

"Might have nothing to do with it. Might have a lot. A spy like that who could be hired to give away his friends would not stop at murder from ambush."

The three men breakfasted early and were on their way before sun-up. They took with them a pack-horse to bring back the body. During the night the rain had spent itself and there was now not a cloud in the sky.

The Diamond Reverse B riders joined them at the edge of the grove. "Tracks of the horse are still showing," one of them said. "I was scared the rain might wash them out, but it didn't come down hard enough."

Carey and Brand examined the body. It told a story of unexpected death. The powder burns on the face showed that the revolver had been fired very close to the victim.

INSTALLMENT EIGHT

man slugs. Three rustlers had been shot from the back; in retaliation Lee Hart, a brother of one of the victims, takes a shot from the back at Terry. Now a fourth man, Black Yeager, is shot under peculiar circumstances. Two

"Lemme see that note the fellow pinned to Black's coat," Jeff said.

Calhoun took it from his pocket-book and handed it to the rustler. Brand studied it for several minutes. "I've seen writing like that somewhere, but I can't just remember when," he mentioned to Carey. "Look how he makes his s's, with the tails flying away."

Brand put the note in his pocket. "Mind if I keep it?" he said to Terry insolently.

"Not at all. Nate Hart may want to keep it, but you fix that up with him." Terry's voice was scornfully polite.

On the way back to the ranch Carey rode beside Terry and Brand with the two cowboys.

"I reckon we have come to the same opinion as you did, Cal," the man from Black Butte told his companion.

"What opinion?" Terry inquired.

"That this killing was done by a cattle detective hired by some of the big outfits."

"That's my opinion, is it?" the Diamond Reverse B manager asked sarcastically.

"I think so. It explains the facts better than anything else I can figure out. My notion is you wanted to put us on our guard against this fellow."

"Even if I was employing him?"

"I don't believe you are in this at all, but I expect you can give a good guess who fired this killer."

Terry said carelessly, "I don't know anything about it."

"Well, I'll leave it there, Cal," Lane Carey concluded. "A wink is rifle shots had been fired at Terry while he was riding and immediately after that two revolver shots were heard. Black Yeager had been killed by a companion, Terry sends for Lane Carey and Jeff Brand.

"That's funny," commented Turley. "Looks like it may have been one of his own men bumped him. They got into a quarrel, maybe."

"The story is that it wasn't one of the Flying V C men did it," Alford said. "They are all accounted for. And the man was tracked for several miles."

"Something queer about this," Turley cut in, frowning. "I don't get it. If the fellow who did it was one of our friends, say—he wouldn't of shot it out in the open that way. He would of waited to get a crack at him from the brush."

"Would he?" Brand asked. "Maybe not. Maybe he wanted to show the big outfits that we had the nerve to do our killing in the open."

Ellen felt a fluttering heart beat against her ribs. She was watching Jeff. He had spoken carelessly, but in his sturring drawl she had read an undertone implacable and deadly. She knew, as well as one could know without evidence to back it, that he had been the other party to that duel.

"The way you talk sounds dumb to me, Jeff," snarled Lee Hart. "What you expect a fellow to do? Buck didn't have any chance, did he? Not on yore tintype. They rubbed him out when he wasn't expecting it. Why shouldn't I do the same with one of them?"

Hard-eyed, Brand looked at Hart. "I'm not telling you what you ought to do. I don't give a damn. What I'm pointing out is how a white man would want to settle a difficulty."

Dark blood mantled Hart's flat-featured face. "If you claim I'm not a white man—," he blustered.

A faint expression of contempt kindled in the narrowed eyes of Jeff. "I wouldn't be interested," he said, his voice insolent and dry.

Ellen had work to do at the house, and as soon as she had turned over the office to her father she left. Jeff Brand was waiting outside. He rose to join her, reaching his feet in one swift movement of rippling ease.

"You're certainly the workingest girl I ever saw," he told her. "There's a proverb about that. All work and no play makes Jeff a dull boy."

"So you think I'm dull," she said. "No, no, I'm dull when you work too long. Have you ever thought that maybe in sixty or seventy years we may be too old to play? We have to leave some time for love and kisses, you know."

She was not up to nonsense today. It was not worth trying, not while she had this queer feeling of suffocation in her breast.

"Why do you go out of your way to insult men who are dangerous—men like Lee Hart?" she asked.

He looked at her, surprised. "So you heard?"

"I couldn't help hearing."

"You pack a lot in one little question," he said. "First off, I didn't go out of my way to insult Lee Hart. I wasn't thinking about him when I spoke, though he is sure welcome to take it personal if he likes. For the fact is, I can't stand the fellow. He's low-down mean. As to his being dangerous, I don't reckon he is—long as he is in front of you."

He spoke carelessly, as if the matter were not important.

"You look to me like a man who is dooming himself," she said soberly, with a kind of proud defiance. "You frighten me, as if—as if you were walking on your own grave."

"Would you feel badly if you knew I were?" he asked in a low voice.

She did not look at him. But the blood was beating stormily through her heart.

"I would feel sorry for any young man condemned to death," she said. "I see," he said dryly. "Yore Christian duty. I would want a girl to give me more than that."

She turned on him, courage in her eyes like a banner. "What would you expect to give her in return?" she demanded.

"If she was the right girl I might give her a lover."

"A lover," she said scornfully.

He surprised himself in his answer. "A husband, then." It was the last thing he had expected to say.

"That would be a fine gift," she told him. "What kind of a girl could keep step with you? Do you think a wife would be happy waiting at home in terror for fear you were being shot or hanged?"

"Aren't men supposed to settle down when they marry?"

"You aren't even thinking of it. Your mind is full of revenge and hatred." Excitement was carrying her, much farther than she had intended. It had lit an explosive spark in her breast. "Where were you yesterday afternoon? What were you doing? But no—don't tell me! I don't want to know."

She flung out a hand in a gesture of hopelessness, and turned away, running up the porch steps swiftly into the house.

"Terry is no more guilty than I am," Carey said.

as good as a nod to a blind horse. I've a notion you don't like this state of affairs any better than I do."

CHAPTER XVII

Black Yeager was buried at Round Top, and his funeral was the largest ever held in the county. The feeling was very bitter, and it was almost unanimous against the big ranches among those at the graveyard. Even the people who did not justify rustling resented this high-handed destruction of suspected men who had not been found guilty by a jury. Among the rustlers themselves, a mourning tear lay back of their furious rage. A killer was loose in the land, and he might strike at any one of them next.

Several men without property slipped away quietly.

"Bart Demison pulled his freight last night," Lee Hart said. "Left on the train for Chayenne."

Jeff Brand's laughter was brittle. "Some folks scare easily," he said.

Through the window his words reached Ellen. She had no doubt he was a thief, but she applauded the spirit of his defiance. What he had told her about Pete Tolman was even more true of himself. He had lived fully, physically at least. There was in him a deep capacity for enjoyment.

A rider was dismounting at the hitch-rack. They watched him walk across the dusty road to join them. The man was Ross Alford.

"Cuth Rogers got in from Elk Creek an hour or so ago," he mentioned. "Says Jim McFaddin of the Flying V C was shot yesterday."

"Shot?" demanded the crook-nosed Turley. "You mean, on purpose?"

"Yep. Some of the riders of his ranch heard the shooting and came a-running. They found him dead. He had his six-gun out and had fired it twice. Fellow had sent a revolver bullet right spang through the heart."

Brand asked a question. "Was McFaddin shot from behind?"

"Cuth Rogers says not," answered Alford. "He saw the body. Says it musta been a duel. The bullet came from directly in front and there was no brush for several hundred yards."

Blackout Sept. 12

Plans have been completed for the Blackout. The Wardens and Auxiliary Policemen for each of the four zones have been appointed and will receive instructions as to their duties during the blackout. The First Aid and the Ambulance and Evacuation groups are appointed. The fire department is organized and the cooperation of the entire community and public will be required to make the trial blackout a success.

On that night, all persons within the Village of Carrizozo, who are driving their automobiles, should, at the signal for blackout, park at the curb immediately with all lights extinguished so as to facilitate the movement of air raid wardens and spotters and to avoid all movement or action that may result in accident.

Traffic Safety

Time and again we have cautioned the public against reckless driving until it seemed that words were of no avail. It appeared to be as little heeded and had as little effect as the fellow we once heard of, who during a sermon about the salvation of the soul, tickled the man in the seat in front of him behind the ear with a straw. We again make the attempt with the hope that we may prevent one or perhaps more injuries or deaths on the highways.

Now, as never before, is there need for more caution. Highways being better makes speed faster and consequently less fear of danger which lurks just around the corner.

Union of our schools has increased the bus driving to such an extent that bus drivers must undergo safety examinations.

Statistics show that there are 25,000 school children over bus routes. Your child may be among this throng.

You, with your pleasure-driving car are the one we are addressing first now.

Will this warning be heeded? If this doesn't make sense, pass it up and go heading into something you may regret to the end of your life.
