Funeral of Don B. English The funeral of our much esteemed friend and neighbor, Don B. English, who passed away this life in El Paso last Sunday morning, was held at the Methodist Church Wednesday afternoon with Reverends Klassen and Lawson conducting the services, jointly. A quartet of singers composed of the Misses Ruth Petty and Lou Collins, Messrs Colonel Jones and Ansel Swearingen, sang two selections, "Asleep in Jesus" and "Beautiful City." Rev. Klassen read from the scriptures and gave as the text for the sermon, "Let not your Heart be Troubled; neither let it be Afraid." Taking the above named text, Rev. Lawson made a beautiful sermon and began his discourse with these words, "There is not much to say," meaning as he afterwards explained, that the gathering of the hosts of friends of the deceased was a sufficient tribute to the love and esteem in which Don English was held not only in our home community, but elsewhere over Lincoln County. The pallbearers were: John E. Hall, James Garner, Manson Hicks, Lesnett Anderson, Walter LaFleur, Holm O. Bureau, Jr. The flower bearers were: Mes James Elmer Baker, Wm. W. Gallacher, Will Ed Harris, Lillian Richard, J. M. Beck, Carrizozo; Clark, Ruidoso; Champa Ferguson, Eddie Long, Capitan; Elzy Perry, Glencoe; Walter LaFleur, Roswell; Hutchins, Tucumcari. After the church services the Masons took the remains in charge and at the grave, Masonic rites were held with Past Master R. E. Lemon conferring the same and Past Master Roy Shafer offering the litany for the dead. Don was a Past Master of the Masonic Lodge. Don Burleson English was born in Carrizozo, June 30, 1909. On Aug. 27, 1932, he was married to Margaret Magruder, to which union was born one son, Frank Charles, who is now 7 years old. He passed away in El Paso, Mar. 8, 1942, after a short illness. They say that Life is a highway, and its milestones are the years--And now and then there's a toll-gate where we buy our way with tears--It's a rough road, and a steep road, but it stretches broad and far--And at last it leads to a Golden Town where Golden houses are. Will Robinson For County Clerk We notice by the Roswell Dispatch that our old friend, Will Robinson, has announced for the nomination for County Clerk of Chaves County. Will has already served as Treasurer in a most creditable manner and his record is so good that in our opinion, he is entitled to the office he now seeks. We don't want to butt into any affairs in our neighboring county, but we just ask permission to ask, if we have the floor, that we only wish it were in our power to help Will--for regardless of politics, we would take the greatest of pleasure in helping to give him anything he wants. This is just to let you know Will, what we think of you--and that will harm nobody. Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Huntsinger of Vaughn attended the funeral of Don English Wednesday afternoon. ## With Our Boys 'Somewhere in Northern Ireland'

Generals Learn How to Keep 'Em Rolling

Brig. Gen. T. E. Marchant (left), and Brig. Gen. J. C. Hutchinson get into overalls at motor transport school, Holabird, Md., where, for the first time in history, high ranking officers are taking a two-weeks' course with a view to giving the officers first-hand information on driving convoys in difficult terrain. Right: A master sergeant shows three brigadier generals the inside of a truck wheel, and how to keep it properly greased and prepared.

War Bonnet for 'Big Joe' Stalin

The head of the Russian Reds has been named honorary chief of the Red Indians, an outstanding warrior for 1941, although the Indians associated with the Indian Confederation admit that Gen. Douglas MacArthur is a sure candidate for honors in 1942. A new war bonnet, which will go to Stalin, is being presented to Edward Carter, president of the Russian war relief, by Chief Falling Trees at the Indian Confederation pow wow in New York.

Paraski Troops Ready for Action

After a hard training grind, six troops of the 82nd paratroop battalion are now seasoned paraski soldiers. A group of the jumping snowbirds are pictured inside their transport planes on route to their jump-off place near Albi, U.S. Their skin and other equipment will be dropped to them by large parachutes after they have leaped.

Wide Shift in Foreign Trade

Secretary Jones Says This Will Have Effect in Post-War World.

WASHINGTON.—Shifts in United States foreign trade of such major significance "that they must have a decided effect upon the pattern of world trade in the post-war world" are remarked upon by Secretary Jones in his annual report.

Mr. Jones said that the development which perhaps was of chief significance was "the sweeping extensions of government controls not only in this country but in nearly all the other countries with which we now have trade relations."

"Generally speaking, the goods exported to an increasing extent leave by permission of this government, and they are bought largely by, or with the permission of, the governments of the important countries," he said. "Our imports are increasingly purchased by and imported by our own government. To an increasing degree, both exports and imports moved only as shipping space was allotted to them. Geographically, the currents of our trade were markedly altered by the loss of continental Europe as a market and a source of supply, and by its replacement by an enlarged trade with the British empire countries and Latin America."

Largest Exports Since 1929.
Exports of United States merchandise during the fiscal year 1941 totaled $4,048,000,000, the largest since 1929, while imports of $2,925,000,000 were exceeded since 1929 only by those of 1937. The export balance for the period thus, was $1,118,000,000.

During the second year of the First World War (fiscal 1916) the export balance was nearly one billion dollars greater, due largely to the fact that while exports were a little larger then, imports were much less than in 1941.

But the difference between the two periods is much accentuated when the movements of gold and silver are included—because the net movement of merchandising plus precious metals in the fiscal year of 1916 yielded an export balance of $1,750,000,000 while in 1941 there was an important balance of $1,650,000,000, resulting from the continuation, even though in smaller volume than in the two preceding years, of the gold inflow.

Gains in Industry Income.
Not only in trade but as an income producer, observes Mr. Jones, the government is now playing an increasing role. Although manufacturing, as usual, contributed most to the national income—more than one-fourth of the 1941 total and an even larger share than in the boom year 1929—government, with roughly half its amount, was in second place, exceeding trade by a narrow margin. Prior to 1931 trade had ranked next to manufacturing as an income source.

In 1929, for instance, trade, in second place, produced 13 per cent of the national income while government, in seventh place, produced 3 per cent of the total. In 1941, the government and trade contributions were about equal. All major industry groups produced more income in 1941 than in 1940, with contract construction registering the sharpest gain.

25 Pounds in Ten Days Makes Army Air Weight

HAMILTON FIELD, CALIF.—Donald Dobbie of Berkeley passed army air corps tests after losing 25 pounds in ten days in a determined effort to qualify. He was instructed to report February 12 at a California training school.

Before turning himself over to the army doctors Mr. Dobbie said his bathroom scale registered his weight at 189 pounds, one pound under the army maximum of 190.

Ten days earlier, when he applied for enlistment, he weighed 214 pounds. Told he was too heavy, he began an immediate campaign, under his wife's supervision, to reduce his weight by diet and exercise. Mrs. Dobbie signed an affidavit saying she was capable of earning her own living.

New Weapon Hinted in War Against Submarines

LONDON.—British sources hinted that a mysterious new weapon was being used to fight German U-boats in the battle of the Atlantic.

The new weapon makes it impossible for the enemy submarine to escape if it is hit, it was understood.

No definite clue to the weapon was given but it was said that it has greatly improved "the efficiency of our attack and puts U-boats out of action at once, preventing their escape if in a damaged condition."

Seductive Women Invade Mexico City as Spies

MEXICO CITY.—Seductive women spies were reported to have recently flocked into this capital and begun to use their charms on government and army officers in efforts to extract vital data for Germany and Italy.

They were said to have concentrated on trying to obtain secret military and diplomatic data on Mexico's collaboration with the United States.

VIEWPOINT

Our part we must do in a terrible war—
A victory final we seek;
So forward to rescue the world (maybe more)—
On forty-four hours a week!

No time's to be lost in this job that's ahead—
Our efforts must rapidly soar;
So let our endeavors be rapidly spread.
On forty-four hours, no more!

The world is on fire; we feel the hot flames;
Around us we see the walls fall;
So into the blaze and the holocaust, James!
For forty-four hours, that's all!

The enemy, ruthless, is at us full tilt,
Our lives and our homes are at stake;
So into the fight in which no one can wilt—
Unless the work limit we break!

We never have faced such a terrible fight—
Defeat is a possible fact;
So over the ramparts with all of our might—
Observing the Walsh-Healy act!

Like slaves we would live if the enemy won
And get a few pennies per day,
So into the battle! And no ordeal—
Excepting one affecting our PAY!

A barbarous foe's winning great victories—
He stops at no outrage or crime;
So forward to bring the beast down on his knees—
UNLESS IT INVOLVES OVERTIME!

What's causing all those Florida train wrecks? The last one was a head-on collision in broad daylight, and Elmer Twitchell suspects that, the racing influence being what it is down that way, somebody thought the trip was a jumping event.

"Sir Stafford Cripps, the new minister named in the British cabinet shake-up, was a firm critic of Stanley Baldwin's policies, he regarded the British action in the Ethiopian crisis as hypocritical, he held that the League of Nations had gone back on its pledges, he opposed the British support of General Franco, he fought appeasement all the way and had no use for Neville Chamberlain."—Newspaper item.

That would seem to make him pretty much a man of the hour if you ask us.

Why Congressional Speech Readers Go Mad

Mr. Snyder: "Mr. Chairman, we are now engaged in a most stupendous and destructive war . . . The question confronting us today is what we, the democracies, must continue to do, or must initiate and do, to eventually win. The University of Pittsburgh's football team last fall started off by losing to small colleges like Westminster. They lost every game except the next to the last one. Fordham had won every game and was looked upon to be the outstanding contender for the Rose Bowl invitation. Fordham went to Pittsburgh to play their annual game. Only a few thousand people turned out because they thought it would be a pushover at 100 to 1 for Fordham. But what happened? Pittsburgh's football team pulled itself together and ran over Fordham. "Mr. Chairman, I mention this because it is appropriate and applicable to our world situation. What enabled Pittsburgh to win that day? Only one thing, spirit and determination."—Congressional Record.

Now that that's all cleared up, let's go!

End of the Trail

WHEN Capt. James H. Cook died recently on his 15,000-acre Agate Springs ranch in Sioux county, Neb., the passing of this 84-year-old Westerner broke one of the few remaining links between the present and that era in American history...

A descendant of Captain James Cook, the famous English explorer, the future frontiersman was born in southern Michigan August 28, 1857. His father was a seafaring man but young Cook did not choose to follow in his sire's footsteps...

By the time he was 17, the call of adventure had taken him west—to Kansas, where he found a job as a herder near old Fort Harker. Then he went to Texas with some cowboys who had brought a herd up the trail from the Lone Star state...

CAPT. JAMES H. COOK

kid so much that he gave young Cook one of the best of his three-year-old colts. But Cook didn't remain a tenderfoot long. Within a year he was working as a cowboy for the famous Ben Slaughter and during the next four or five years he became one of the most expert "brushpoppers" in the cattle country...

At Fort Laramie he met Baptiste Garnier, famous on the frontier as "Little Bat," hunter and army scout. Under the tutelage of "Little Bat," young Cook became a skilled big game hunter and in 1878 he made his last trip up the trail as a cow waddie. At Cheyenne, Wyo., he fell in with "Wild Horse Charlie" Alexander, renowned for his skill in capturing wild mustangs...

During the next four years Cook served as a guide for many a hunting party of Easterners and Englishmen in the wilds of Wyoming and this led directly to his being employed by one of them—Harold C. Wilson of Cheltenham, England—to take charge of the ranch which Wilson purchased in southwestern New Mexico. Cook was manager of the "W S" ranch until 1887 and during that time he won his greatest fame as a scout by serving with the United States troops in running down the Apache leader, Geronimo, after his last outbreak in 1885-6.

In the meantime Cook had purchased the ranch in western Nebraska which was to be his home for the next 50 years. At the time of the Ghost Dance excitement among the Sioux in 1890-91 he performed valuable service for the army because he was one of the few white men whom the Indians trusted. Ever afterwards they were frequent visitors at his Agate Springs ranch and when he died on January 27, 1942, there was sadness among the Oglala Sioux for they had lost their good friend, "Little Eagle."

In 1923 his autobiography was published by the Yale University Press under the title of "Fifty Years on the Old Frontier" and the introduction to that volume was written by Gen. Charles King, who served as a lieutenant and adjutant of the "Fighting Fifth" cavalry in the Sioux and Apache wars. In it General King paid tribute to "the scouts of the Plains, men famous in song and story, of whom Kit Carson and Jim Bridger in the early days and 'Buffalo Bill' Cody and, later still, 'Captain Jim' Cook were the shining lights."

THE MIGHTY WORKS OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 8:23-34. GOLDEN TEXT—What manner of man is this, that even the winds and the sea obey Him!—Matthew 8:27.

The mighty works of Jesus declared Him to be the Son of God—yes, very God Himself. Unbelieving men who would discredit the Word of God and deny the Godhood of the Son are at much labor and trouble to explain away the miracles, but without any success.

In our lesson for today we have Christ showing His divine power over the forces of nature, and over the demons of the evil spirit world. We find the disciples in the storm—

1. Fearful—but Not in Danger (vv. 23-27).

The Son of God—who had become Son of man—showed His true humanity by that weariness which made Him sleep through a tempestuous storm such as often came upon Lake Galilee. "Like a general in time of war Jesus slept when He could."

As He calmly slept, fear of destruction laid its deadly grip upon the hearts of the disciples. For the moment they saw only the angry waves, the smallness of their craft, the hopelessness of their situation, apparently forgetting that with Christ in the boat they were in no danger, in spite of the fearfulness of their surroundings and circumstances.

Is this not clearly a lesson for us in this day so full of alarms and fears? If we think of circumstances and conditions round about us we shall be overcome with fear—and well we may, if we do not have Christ with us in the boat of life. But if He is there—if we are His in the kinship of regenerating grace—we are in no danger. Shall we not accept the tender rebuke, "Why are ye fearful, O ye of little faith?" (v. 26).

The majestic scene of Christ stilling the tempest, reminds us not only that He can control any force of nature, but also that there is no storm of heart or mind or life to which He cannot authoritatively say, "Peace, be still!" (Mark 4:39). Will you trust Him with your problem?

On the other side of the lake Christ met another kind of need—and cared for it. He there delivered two men who were—

II. Demon-dominated, but Not Hopeless (vv. 28-34).

There is only one devil, but he has many demons who do his bidding. The evidence is clear that these demons were able to enter into the personality of a human being and take control of the life. This was not insanity or a sickness of the body, but devil domination.

These two men (Mark and Luke speak only of one—perhaps the more violent of the two) were so strong and wicked because of the demon in them, that their relatives and friends had given them up as hopeless and had sent them out to live in the wilderness.

How horrible is the power of the devil in the life of any man or woman. But let us never forget that while no man can control such a situation (Mark 5:4), God is able. "With God all things are possible" (Matt. 19:26). We have not done all we can for our devil dominated friends and relatives until we have brought them to Jesus.

Notice that the demons recognized Christ as the Son of God (v. 29). They knew that He had the power to control them and that the day was to come when He would judge them.

The men were completely cured (Mark 5:15) as the demons were permitted to enter the herd of swine. Those poor beasts, apparently not content to harbor the evil spirits, cast themselves into the sea.

When the people of the land heard what had taken place they asked Jesus to leave. They evidently weighed the relative value of two men in their right mind over against a herd of swine and decided that they could not afford to have men delivered from the devil at such expense.

Unfortunately the "descendants" of those people seem to be in some of our churches today. They can afford anything in the way of luxury for themselves, but they are sure it costs too much to keep the church open—or to provide a preacher—or suitable equipment for the Lord's work. How unspeakably sad!

Perseverance Soldiers must break step in marching over a bridge, for the vibration caused by their marching in step would shake down the most solid structure. And so it is with the spiritual obstacle you may meet: steady tramping, the plodding going of your duty day after day, will in time tumble it over. In any task be which God sets you perseverance is all the power you need.

EDUCATORS HELP ON MACHINE CARE

Youths Shown Best Care of Farm Equipment.

By DR. A. K. GETMAN (Chief of Agricultural Educational Bureau, New York State College of Agriculture.)

The training of rural youth in high schools and institutes throughout the states meshes with the states' programs of farm machinery repair and adjustment, in which repair clinics, tractor tune-ups, and field adjustment meetings for adults are planned during 1942.

Since "victory in arms needs machines on farms," teachers of vocational agriculture in high schools, heads of departments of farm mechanics at technical institutes, and all school executives have been urged to co-operate with county agents and manufacturing agencies in the program under the general guidance of county agricultural defense committees.

A critical situation is ahead in maintaining and increasing American food production, and the current need is to put farm equipment in the best possible condition. It is imperative, he said, to use the present shop facilities and personnel to the utmost, and that all available public and private resources act together.

School garages, or similar buildings, it is pointed out, would make ideal places for farmers to bring their machinery for community repair clinics under engineers trained and employed by the state colleges of agriculture.

AGRICULTURE IN INDUSTRY

By Florence G. Wood

(This is one of a series of articles showing how farm products are finding an important market in industry.)

Grape Refuse Salvage

Almost every state has commercial vineyards. California raises wine, raisin and table grapes or about 85 per cent of the total. Eastern grapes are grown for juice, wine and fresh market. Since imported French wines have been cut off by the war, this may increase the demand for domestic wines pressed in California, New York and Ohio.

At present, grape pomace left from winemaking is a waste material. Research is under way to find economical methods to recover crude tartarates from which come tartaric acid used in the manufacture of baking powder.

Raisin seeds were once a waste product. Now a California manufacturer is distilling raisin seed oil to use as a coating to prevent packaged raisins from sticking together. The oil offers a promising base for cosmetics since it contains better than average quantities of vitamin F. So far, it has not been economically practicable to utilize waste grape seeds from wineries in the East, because of the cost of transportation.

The thrifty French have developed new outlets for their grape crop under the stress of war time. Since the start of hostilities they have been contributing to wartime fuel which is a mixture of gasoline and grape alcohol made by distilling grape skins after the juice is pressed out.

Soap, hard to obtain because of the dearth of fats, is being made from oil crushed from grape seeds, once discarded in the wine making process. Tons of natural sugar are being retrieved when fresh sweet grapejuice is boiled down. Many of these products could not be economically produced if other products were available, but are worth doing in war time.

Agricultural News

To make farm machinery last longer: (1) store machinery under cover, (2) repair if necessary and order repair parts now, and (3) clean machine thoroughly.

In feeding a dairy cow, a good rule is to give her as much grain, in addition to roughage, as is needed to maintain daily milk production and good body condition.

An increase of 82 per cent over the previous year in electricity delivered to consumers is shown in a report of REA-financed power systems for the last fiscal year.

Prospects of a higher average level of consumer purchasing power in 1942 means more income for vegetable producers in general, reports the U. S. bureau of agricultural economics.

Soybean wool, used in making plaster fiber panels and upholstery padding in automobiles, may increase the demand for soybeans, a crop of growing importance in the South. Your local county agent will have information on soybeans.

PATTERNS SEWING CIRCLE

WHEN you wear this charming frock your best friends will query you, "my aren't you getting slim?"—for your waistline will just melt away under the slenderizing influence of this smartly shaped girle. It is the feature of Pattern No. 1502-B which makes it one every size 12 to 40 should want!

The frock has youth and femininity, too, expressed in an attractive open neckline, a full shapely bodice, which fits smoothly over the bustline, a skirt which flares to a wide hem and perky, puffed sleeves.

Correct for any occasion—work, study or fun, this dress is simple to make and can be effective in many fabrics—challis, printed rayon crepes, bengaline, or light weight wools. Later, for spring, you'll repeat the frock in washable cottons and linens! Finish it with lace, braid or ric-rac and a cheerful row of tiny buttons.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1502-B is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20 and 40. Corresponding bust measurements 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 14 (32) requires 3 1/2 yards 36-inch material, 2 1/2 yards edging. Send your order to:

KNOW YOUR BANK

What is the "Dual System" of Banking?

Our American banking system is often referred to as a "dual system" because it is composed both of Federal-chartered and state-chartered banks. The state and national systems are under separate controls, but each is operated for the best interests of the public. This principle of optional charter is in keeping with the American traditions of free enterprise. Our bank favors this dual system because of the friendly competition it promotes in the cause of better bank management, and because it tends to prevent the centralizing of banking control at any one all-powerful point.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Wavell Is Removed as Commander In New Southwest Pacific Shakeup; Pincers Movement of Russian Army Closing on 96,000 German Troops

EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

BAD NEWS: From Pacific

The warnings given the American and British public by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill that more reverses could be expected in the South Pacific were borne out when the Japanese, in the face of determined naval opposition, made three simultaneous landings on Java.

There were signs, immediately, that the fall of this island of 40,000,000 people was expected, though the shore garrisons were apparently ready to put up a determined fight.

Admiral Helfrich's combined Dutch, American, British and Australian squadrons had sailed out to meet the invaders, and first reports were that, though terrifically outnumbered, the defending vessels had forced the invaders to scatter.

Later news, however, showed that the Japs had managed to evade the ring of steel about the island, and had landed on the east, in the west and on the north central front of the island.

The attack was costly to the Japanese, as they lost a large cruiser and three destroyers. But they got ashore, and in force, the landing on the central portion being described in Batavia dispatches as "extensive."

The disturbing news was accompanied by word that the American Removal of Sir Archibald P. Wavell, the British general, as commander-in-chief of the United Nations' fighting forces in the southwest Pacific paved the way to full Dutch command of land, sea and air forces in the Netherlands East Indies.

Wavell, the British general, as commander-in-chief of the United Nations' fighting forces in the southwest Pacific paved the way to full Dutch command of land, sea and air forces in the Netherlands East Indies.

PINCERS: British Variety

Something brand new in warfare had been developed by the British who went across the channel, knocked out an important German radio location post 12 miles from LeHavre, France, got back to Britain again with only two men slightly wounded, inflicted "heavy casualties" on the enemy and accomplished fully their objective.

It was a pincers movement, British style. It was a combination of parachute troops and commandos. The commandos rode across the channel on naval vessels, blacked their faces, loaded their arms into small, shallow-draft boats, and rushed ashore.

At the same time the paratroops, their faces also blacked, were shooting across the channel in big bombers. In squads of seven they shot earthward, their supplies, ammunition and weapons parachuting at the same instant from the bomb-racks.

The station's equipment was smashed, prisoners were taken, and the two groups now one, dashed again to the beaches. There they met determined opposition. There was a sharp fight, the Nazis suffered heavy casualties and more prisoners were taken.

Just as the boats shoved off into the blackness, headlights of heavy German motorized reinforcements were seen dashing to the spot, too late.

Air Minister Sir Archibald Sinclair said this type of offensive against occupied countries would be used again and again. Necessary ingredients were light winds, good visibility, and moonlight. Not to mention perfect timing, courage, and surprise.

RUSSIANS: Close Trap

The indomitable Red army, pursuing its constant offensive against the retreating Germans, was closing its trap in which it claimed a German army of 96,000 men were hopelessly surrounded.

The spot was the Staraya Russa sector, which had been converted into an important base by the Germans.

Repeated Russian demands for surrender had been ignored by the Nazis, who were being methodically wiped out, in a series of smaller actions within the circle.

One of the latest German moves to attempt to break through was heralded, the Russians said, by the sending into the territory of huge supply and troop transport planes.

Thirty-eight such craft were destroyed in one day, the Reds asserted, 18 in air combats with Stormovik fighters, and 20 on the ground.

The Russians also said that after the transports landed and were destroyed, some of the occupants were taken prisoner. They said they were new troops which had been in training for the spring offensive.

MISCELLANY:

Tokyo: The newspaper Nichi Nichi warned that the U. S. is about to attack Japan from the Aleutian Islands. The Japs claimed a similar attempt from the south had been beaten off.

Washington: Science has developed a marvelous process by which pure tin can be recovered from discarded tin cans. The by-product, also highly valuable, would be scrap metal.

Long Beach, Calif.: "Wrong Way" Corrigan is flying airplanes the right way now. He had joined the ferry command.

Stockholm: Probability that Sweden might soon enter the war was seen in vastly stepped-up military exercises. Many observers felt that if the U. S. and Britain invade Norway this spring, Sweden will have to come in.

Miami: The duke of Windsor had returned to the Bahamas after what he said was a "satisfactory" conference regarding American aid for the defense of the islands.

COURAGE: MacArthur's Men Continue Forays

What appeared at the time to be a series of surprise counter-attacks along the whole Bataan front merely to harass the enemy and keep him guessing, had turned out, for those surprising men of MacArthur, to be a five-mile gain, on the average, along the entire line.

The Japanese advance posts which were taken were later held against counter-attacks, and the enemy was forced to reorganize his front at the new position.

It had been another successful use by General MacArthur of the swiftness and courage of his troops to land a "left jab" on the enemy's "jaw" and hurl him at least temporarily on his heels.

There were many evidences, that the Japanese on Luzon were not having a bed of roses, that expected supplies and reinforcements had not come, and that they were finding MacArthur not just a hard nut to crack, but a tough one to keep from cracking them.

Of considerable importance was the recapture of Pilar, coastal town, in the current MacArthur drive. From Bagac to Pilar was a good highway, and as the new lines in Bataan were considerably past this road, the defenders presumably now had regained its use.

The fighting had remained desultory, the Japs apparently at a standstill, but the American-Filipino army giving them no quiet in the front lines. Repeated forays by patrols were keeping the enemy on constant tenterhooks.

ECONOMIC: Battles Here

There were signs that the farm bloc, wishing to put through a plan to place all agricultural products on no ceiling below parity, was unwilling to put itself in an unpatriotic light, and wished to confer with President Roosevelt before taking a definite stand.

This placating attitude bid fair to iron out one of the tough economic battles the administration had been facing.

Labor troubles loomed here and there, but in the main hard work and plenty of it was being done by war industry.

Washington voted to continue in principle the 40-hour week for labor, but all war industries were ordered on a 24-hour day and a seven-day week by WPB Director Nelson.

In the meantime senators interested in unnecessary spending in Washington were pursuing their cleanup of the OCD and were urging that it be transferred under the control of the war department.

Since financial income often is the measuring stick of success, the survey paid particular attention to salaries. More than four-fifths of those questioned listed their incomes. Of those, 21 per cent are earning between $1,000 and $2,499 annually.

Thirty per cent receive between $2,500 and $3,999; 15 per cent between $4,000 and $5,999; and 19 per cent are in the $5,000-$10,000 bracket. The top 15 per cent report incomes of more than $10,000.

These figures prove that while the former gridders don't spend all their time clipping coupons, at least none of them is elbowing his way into a bread line.

More important is the fact that the players are convinced that the advantages of the game far outweigh its disadvantages. Ninety-six per cent stated that if they had it to do over again they would play football. To the question, "Would you favor your son playing football?" 87 per cent voted in the affirmative, six per cent in the negative. The remainder were neutral or did not answer.

SPEAKING OF SPORTS

By ROBERT McSHANE

Underdog

ROB PASTOR'S recent eighth round knockout of Lem Franklin was one of the most amazing upsets of the current heavyweight situation.

Pastor was a 5 to 2 underdog in the betting. Friends conceded that he might outpoint Franklin if the burly Negro lost the use of his right arm before the fight. Franklin had won 19 fights in a row, the last eight of them by knockouts. Pastor scaled 181 at the weigh-in. Franklin weighed a tidy 197 1/2.

Lem opened up with a blaze of speed. Pastor's head was snapped back with two fast rights in the opening round. A long, roundhouse right opened a cut alongside Bob's left eye in the second. But by the third round there was little dynamite left in Lem's right. He caught Pastor's jaw with a wallop that had no more effect than a feather duster.

In the fifth Pastor opened up his big guns and hurt Franklin so badly that Lem was forced to clinch and hold. Three rounds later, when Bob saw an opening, he turned killer. He caught Franklin in a neutral corner and hammered his head with all the rapidity of a machine gun. Lem finally went down—flat on his face. He rolled over at the count of eight and then managed to get to his feet. He was too late—the fight was over.

Sadly enough, Pastor's unexpected victory probably will give him another shot at the title this summer. He already has had two fights with Joe Louis. He mounted his bicycle to go the full 10 rounds in their first fight. In the second brawl he came up off the floor six times to last 11 rounds.

Pastor looked good against Franklin. He fought one of the best fights of a somewhat dull career. A third tilt with the champ likely will be little more than a discouraging repetition of the first two encounters.

Grid Grads Do you ever wonder what becomes of college football players? How they compare in later life with their classmates?

The answers are easy. They become successful business men and they earn more than the average college alumnus.

A study made by Northwestern university of all the school's living football alumni blasts much of the criticism which has been leveled against the game during the past decade.

The survey, which covered 330 lettermen, indicated that they have better-than-usual records of public, civic and military service.

Since financial income often is the measuring stick of success, the survey paid particular attention to salaries. More than four-fifths of those questioned listed their incomes. Of those, 21 per cent are earning between $1,000 and $2,499 annually.

THE duffer in golf—meaning the millions who shoot between 90 and 120—may soon see new light through the darkness. He may come upon better days if instructive plans now set up by the P.G.A. work properly.

In past years the duffer, or average golfer, has developed swing-in-digestion from too many complex instructive mixtures. One teacher would tell him to do this and another would tell him not to do that, until his mental picture was all badly blurred. At least this is the belief of a number of P.G.A. instructors, including Lou Scott and Joe Novak, who know their trade.

After more than 20 years of teaching the young and old how not to slice or hook or top or flub, Lou Scott, the Lakeside veteran, has a new and helpful angle to present. This idea consists largely in wiping out all the old slogans, the old maxims and such that have baffled the golfer for so many high-scoring years.

Things to Forget "We must first clear up the golfer's mental blur," Scott says. "He has been given too many things to think about and to work on. We have finally discovered that golf instruction must be simplified. Craig Wood and others have been working on this idea in Florida. We have been working on it along the Pacific coast.

"Now here are the old slogans or forms that must be wiped out—that must be forgotten—

"1. To keep your eye on the ball.

"2. The straight left arm.

"3. Any part of pronation.

"4. The body pivot.

"5. Swinging from inside out.

"6. Weight transference from one foot to the other.

"7. Cocking the wrists.

"8. Uncocking the wrists at a certain spot on the downswing.

"9. The upright swing.

"10. The flat swing.

"11. Foot work.

"These things may be part of a good golf swing," Lou Scott says, "but who can put a jig-saw puzzle together in the second or so needed to start and finish a swing? It just can't be done. So they all must be eliminated to give the golfer a new and fresh start in picking up the few fundamental things required for lower scoring.

The Next Step "We will now," instructor Scott continued, "take it for granted that the golfing brain or mind has been cleared of all the old obstructions mentioned before. What is the next move? Starting with a fresh slant the first move must turn to the work of hands and wrists swinging the clubhead.

"You must know what your hands are doing, what your wrists and arms, all working together, are doing in relation to the head of the club. Only the hands touch the club and only the clubhead touches the ball.

"For one thing, the golfer must pay more attention to the pace of his backswing. The natural tendency is to think only of hitting the ball, to think largely of the downswing. But after a bad backswing there can be no such thing as a good downswing, unless an accident or a miracle happens.

"Take a comfortable stance, unlock those feet and legs, and swing the clubhead smoothly back in a natural way. If you do this the body will turn with the swing and the foot weight will handle itself. If you throw a baseball you will find that the weight first goes to the right leg and then moves back to the left leg. But you don't have to think about this when throwing a ball. It is a natural move. It should be the same in golf.

Main Faults "What are the main faults among average golfers? The first starts with tension. The average golfer has no swing he can trust, he is trying to think about too many things, so he tightens up from feet to neck.

"The first result is usually a hurried backswing. This in turn leads to a hurried, jerky downswing and to head lifting. This will rarely happen with a smooth, even backswing where the hands are in control.

"There must, of course, be a firm left hand and a firm left arm. But that doesn't mean a tightened, straight left arm."

Golf is a two-handed game, but to most people it is strictly a one-handed game, with the stronger right hand in control. But the left hand must do its full share with the right.

"We all realize now that the golf swing and golf instruction must be simplified. The golfer must be given only one or two fundamental things to think about. He can't be expected to operate a jig-saw puzzle in about two seconds and make all the pieces fit. But if he can get working co-operation between hands and clubhead he will at least be on his way to a much better game."

Perhaps Joe Was Out to Set a Non-Stop Record

A Negro called upon an old friend, who received him in a rocking-chair. The visitor noticed not only that his host did not rise, but that he continued to rock himself to and fro in a curious way.

"Yo' ain't ill, is you, Joe?" he asked, anxiously.

"No, I ain't ill, Mose."

There was a moment's silence during which the caller gazed wide-eyed at the rocking figure.

"Den," continued Mose, "why does yo' rock yo'self dat way all de time?"

"Well," explained Joe, "yo know Bill Blott? He sold me a silver watch cheap, an' if I stop moving, dat watch won't go!"

DEEP WATER ISLAND

by ALAN LEMAY

INSTALLMENT FIFTEEN
THE STORY SO FAR: Karen Water-son, who has come to Honolulu to press her claims to the island estate of Alakoa, learns that she is not an heiress at all, as her grandfather, Garrett Water-son, is still alive and on his way to the island. She and Tonga Dick or Richard Wayne, a member of the Wayne family which has been in control of the property since her grandfather's disappearance, and they are in love but they quar- rel over Karen's claim to the island. Karen and her lawyer, John Colt, who is also in love with her, decide to leave Alakoa. But when their ship's captain, Ramey, asks for a man to pilot them through the dangerous reefs in Alakoa's harbor, Dick refuses him.
 Now continue with the story.

"So that's the way the wind sets," Garrett Water-son said at last. "Well, I guess that's the worst of all."

"By Gar, then," Ramey jabbered, "I'll pilot her out myself! I'll run your damn channel! I'll run your damn shoals! There's no coral in the Pacific that can stop me."

"You won't pilot this," Dick told him. "The tide has changed on you, Ramey; you'll never find the way without someone to tell you where you are. Go ahead and pile up your boat; when you've piled her up I'll take your people off. But the Seal will never get out of this bay to- night."

"I'll get a Kanaka pilot off the beach!"

"You've already tried that—or you wouldn't be coming to me."

A storm of blasphemous vituperation from Ramey's boat assured Dick that what he had guessed was true; Ramey had already failed to find a pilot ashore. Wary of argu- ment, weary of Ramey, very much tired out with everything that was going on around him, Dick left the rail and went to the other side of his ship. For a little while the shout- ed imprecations of the Seal's skipper still disrupted the night. But, since he answered no more, even these at last died away; and the bay of Alakoa was silent except for the clink and thug of oarlocks as the Seal's boat went home.

Dick grinnedardonically at the anchor lights of the Seal; but it was not the boat he was thinking about. "At least," he said aloud, "I know exactly where she is; and where she will stay, this one night more."

CHAPTER XIII

Presently Dr. Shimazu came on deck and talked to Dick Wayne.

"I think she's all right now," he said. "You go look for yourself."

"The knife wound—?" Dick asked.

"The wound isn't going to amount to anything, I hope. But you come with me and look, so I can go home."

Dick went below with Dr. Shimazu, and hesitantly made his way into the little stateroom in the stern where he usually slept.

Hokano was stretched out face down upon the bunk beside Lilia, his face upon his arms; and Lilia had turned a little so that she could hide her face in Hokano's shoulder. When Dick had stood there for a moment, Lilia lifted her head, and looked at Dick without expression.

At first he thought that she was unable to see him; but in a few moments he decided that she did. She was simply looking at him with com- plete impersonality, like a cat; or perhaps simply like a girl looking at someone who doesn't mean anything to her any more. Soon Lilia low- ered her head again, returning her face to Hokano's shoulder; and it was perfectly evident that Dick was instantly gone from her mind.

"I guess you were right," Dr. Shi- mazu said. "It takes a Kanaka to fix a Kanaka—providing they don't kill each other first."

"Of course I was right," Dick said. "Can she be moved ashore now?"

"I think so; yes."

"Inyashil! See that the girl is moved ashore—carefully—and taken home."

"Yes, Tonga."

"Maybe," Dr. Shimazu suggested, "I can go home now?"

"Your night is only starting," Dick answered; "I've got other work for you now."

Dick called away the shoreboat again, and, with Shimazu, went aboard the Sarah.

Garrett Water-son's cabin, as they entered it now, was a strange mess. It differed from all other cabins in that it was full of more charts than most people have ever seen. There were charts all over the wall, over- lapping each other in reefs and pads—and a great number of these had been drafted by Dick Wayne. There was even a chart nailed to the bot- tom of the deck above Garrett Wa- ter-son's bunk, where he could read it as he lay in bed. Hardly any- one ever got into this room; cer- tainly, since Garrett Water-son had first taken possession, no one had ever cleaned it up. Old shoes, and sea boots, and miscellaneous cloth- ing were piled about, or hung upon nails. But all this litter could mean nothing in this room—the charts were everything here.

Everything, that is, except the man. The ancient figure in the bunk had been a man of huge frame, once. Fever had carved his face very close to the bone, taking away much of his substance. Yet neither old age nor wasting fever could ever make this man appear ascetic—he simply never had been made on as- cetic lines. Everything about him had been built in the beginning to be big and vital. There was something arresting, even terrible, about this big frame which had been built to a vitality for which the fuel was now gone.

And there was no doubt about the fuel being gone. A faint surprise showed in the eyes of Dr. Shimazu as he perceived that Garrett Wa- ter-son was still definitely alive. Lit- tle but the body structure of the frame itself now remained to show what Garrett Water-son had been. First inspection found no sign of life in the face, or in the big skele- tonized form under the blankets.

After a minute, though, they saw the gleam of the living eyes. In Garrett Water-son's eyes still lived the embattled flame which had driv- en this man always to wild, extrava- gant, and uncompromising things.

Garrett Water-son spoke huskily to Tonga Dick. "You're a knockout, you little squirt, you are," he said. "What's the idea?"

Perhaps no one else in the warm seas had ever been able to domi- nate Tonga Dick as Garrett Water- son could. Shimazu was amazed to hear Dick speak hesitatingly.

"Well," Dick said, without much effect, "I thought I ought to come back here."

Garrett Water-son's voice roared hollowly. "What the hell else should we do but come back? Do you have to duck out with our only fast ship?"

"Didn't know you meant to come."

This time the effect was galvanic. The old skeleton form that had seemed dead whipped up on one elbow with a dreadful, inappropriate energy. Garrett Water-son's voice came like the ghostly shell of a roar that once would have blown a main- sail down.

"Who are you, you insufferable pup, to say what we are going to do?"

As Garrett Water-son raised him- self, Shimazu made a quick, instinc- tive movement, as if he wished to stop an effort which obviously was more than that ancient and wasted frame could stand. But Dick halted Shimazu with a gesture so casual that it carried an implication of utter fatality. He knew, if Shimazu did not, that only one thing would ever stop Garrett Water-son from any unwisdom whatever.

"Sorry, sir."

"Damn your sorriness," Garrett Water-son said in a diminished voice. He eased himself back until he lay as lifeless as before. "And damn you," he added.

"Okay," Dick said. "Damn me. What then?"

"Where is this girl?" Water-son demanded.

"Well," Dick began, "the fact is—"

"What's she like?" Garrett hur- ried him.

"Well," Dick began again, "she weighs about one hundred and twenty pounds, with kind of blue eyes, and—"

"Blonde and sallow," Garrett Wa- ter-son said bitterly. "By God, I knew it! Self-righteous, holier-than- thou. Preaching half the time. Wears starched clothes. Oh, I knew it!"

The outburst winded the old man, and the silence that followed gave Dick time to consider. He supposed that Garrett Water-son was assign- ing to Karen the attributes he had chosen to recognize in the family into which his son had married. Or, perhaps, the old man's resentment had been inspired by something even more unhappy than that.

"No," Dick said. "She isn't like that. There isn't anything like that about her at all."

Garrett Water-son rolled question- ing eyes upon Dick and waited.

"She has blue eyes, like I said, but she has black hair; and she's the color of a gardenia, and she doesn't ever tan at all. There's no preaching about her—for all I know there isn't even any morality. And she's more alive than anything you ever set eyes on yet."

There was a silence again. "So that's the way the wind sets," Gar- rett Water-son said at last. "Well, I guess that's the worst of all."

"Doesn't anything ever please you?"

"From what you say," Garrett Water-son said, "the girl takes after me. What worse luck could you have than that, I'd like to know?"

There was something ridiculous in the suggestion that Karen Water-son

"look after" this gnarled and huge old man; yet Dick could see that in both there was a certain essential spirit that was the same.

The old man seemed to rest for a moment, and Dr. Shimazu took the opportunity to attempt a counting of Water-son's pulse. Water-son made an irascible resistance. "Get this Jap's hands off of me! Who do you think—"

"You'll either let him examine you," Dick said, "or I'll walk out on you altogether, and you'll proba- bly never so much as set eyes on this girl!"

There was anger in old Water- son's eyes, but he must have known his disadvantage. He attempted to ignore the situation by pretending not to notice Shimazu as the Japa- nese put a stethoscope to work.

"No wonder," Garrett Water- son said to Dick, "that she goes rattling all over the Pacific, trying to grab stuff that doesn't belong to her. If you take my advice you'll stay away from this girl! She isn't good to come to any good end. And neither will you, if you fool around with the likes of her!"

"That's a hell of a fine way," Dick said, "to talk about your own granddaughter."

"Don't you think," Garrett Water- son said savagely, "I know my own breed? She's no good, you mark my word! Or else what's she doing here, at this late date, trying to dig up old trouble?"

Old Water-son closed his eyes, ex- hausted again.

Shimazu looked at Dick queerly as he rolled up the tubes of his stetho- scope; he came to the door and con- sulted with Dick in whispers.

"I'll take his temperature as soon as we're sure he's asleep," Shimazu said. "But even without that, I can tell you, this is a very weak man. He should have been in a hospital long ago—certainly he should never have tried to come here now. We're going to find out there's more than one kind of fever in this case. Black- water certainly; and maybe some- thing worse."

"Do you think he's in danger this time?"

Shimazu permitted himself a queer waxy smile. "At his age, and with so much wrong with him, there's no reason why he should be alive at all. His heart is very irregular, weak, and slow. My ad- vice is if you want anything from this man, get it soon. For all I can guarantee, he may never talk lucidly again."

"It's as bad as that, is it?"

Shimazu shrugged. "This is a worn out machine. Yes," he added, returning to the understatement that he favored, "this man is sick."

They stood silent for the space of more than a minute, looking at the figure in the bunk. A huge flying cockroach, with a body bigger than a mouse, few blundering across the cabin, and hit the bulkhead with a metallic clatter; it recovered itself immediately, and ran behind a large chart of Rotoava Anchorage.

"I've got to get up," Garrett Wa- ter-son mumbled. "I've got to see James Wayne."

They ignored this, and the mum- bling ceased. There were a few moments of complete silence.

Suddenly the still figure spoke in a surprisingly strong voice, a voice that seemed wrung from it by an unexplainable emotion. "I would have given my whole life—my whole life, and a lease on my soul in hell, just to see her—just to look at her one time!"

For some unknown reason Shima- zu looked appalled.

"By God," Dick said, "then you shall!" He turned to the ladder.

"It's no good," Shimazu said. "By the time you get her here, he'll never know her. Tomorrow maybe, if he is still alive—"

"Then she'll be here tomorrow, too," Dick promised. He went up the ladder like the jump of a marlin.

Then, as he came out of the companionway, he was instantly checked. Now that he was on the open deck he could hear, across the quiet waters of the bay, the clatter of the Seal's loose-jointed Diesel, and he could see the Seal's lights mov- ing away from her anchorage. Cap- tain Ramey had weighed his anchor, and was putting to sea.
