GARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our thanks to all those friends who so graciously contributed to the happiness and welfare in the last days of Mrs. Blaney's sojourn here on earth. Also the acts of kindness and the expressions of sympathy have been greatly appreciated.
Dr. R. E. Blaney,
Mrs. Lettie Prehm.

Ranchmen's Camp Meeting

The Ranchmen's Camp Meeting which began Wednesday of last week, ended Sunday night with great credit to the promoters and comfort, convenience and enjoyment of the throngs of people who attended.

Many visitors came provided with tents and remained on the grounds from beginning to end of the lovable event. Religious services were held at the tabernacle all through the period and many went forward on the invitation, asking for prayers and signifying intentions to lead better lives. The services were all non-sectarian.

The meals, which were served three times each day from the willing hands of the ranchmen who stood in line and served the long stream of waiting attendants with smiles of good-will, are deserving of more than ordinary mention for extended courtesies.

There we met many old and honored friends whom we had not seen for several years. The beautiful spot where the fair was held, the unselfish and kind-heartedness of the people, the motives which prompted the event and the successful outcome of the undertaking, which made it 100 per cent, is a strong recommendation for the next Ranchman's Camp Meeting to be held at the same place next summer.

CO-OPERATION REQUESTED

The Carrizozo power system of the Lincoln County Utilities Co., has been sold and transferred to the Carrizozo Municipal Light and Power System. The amount of your consumer guaranty deposit with interest may be deducted, when making final settlement, on presentation of your Customer Guaranty Deposit receipt properly endorsed, or its equivalent. Interest was paid in full on all deposits as of December 31, 1941.

Take your regular monthly service bill and deposit receipt to the power plant office for adjustment and settlement. In the event that your deposit receipt has been lost, notify the power plant office so that applicable provision may be arranged. Duplication claims will not be approved. Your co-operation with respect to this adjustment and final settlement will be much appreciated by both the utility concern and the municipal power plant system.

Mrs. Louis Markel, Miss Mary Frances Markel, Mrs. Thos. Quebedary joined Mrs. French and her guest, Mrs. Frank Roberts, at Mrs. French's cabin on Eagle Creek for several days. They went to Albuquerque, Wednesday. Mrs. French will return Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Maxwell were here from their ranch home near the Gran Quivira Monday and Frank allowed it to leak out, that he now is granddaddy, for he had just received news from Beres, Virginia, to the effect that there was born to Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lantz of that place, last week, a girl, the young lady to be Frank's first granddaughter. Mrs. Lantz is the former Miss Mary Maxwell of Carrizozo. Congratulations, Mr. and Mrs. Lantz.

REPUBLICAN MEETING

In response to a call from the County Chairman J. G. Moore, 45 Republicans attended a meeting at the S. P. Hotel Sunday afternoon. Various matters of interest to the party were discussed and many petitions were signed for the coming primaries. Attorney George Shipley of Alamogordo, candidate for District Judge, attended the meeting and Chairman Moore presided.

New Church in Ruidoso

The building committee of the Episcopal Church was in town today and bought cement for the foundation and fireplaces for the Episcopal Church which is to be built in Ruidoso as soon as funds, materials and workmen are available.

The church is to be a House of Prayer for all the people; and a cabin for a resident minister will be built in a central location, accessible all the year around.

A site has been offered; trees for the woodwork have been donated; some funds are on hand—but not enough.

It is possible that some who are interested in seeing Ruidoso go forward and wish to help will want to give for this good cause.

The building committee for this section is E. S. Fagan, Ft. Stanton and Mrs. R. L. Boyce of Ruidoso.

Folks keep a-tellin' us that this war will be lost or won in the next 70 days, but war is like marriage—it looks like a snap at first, then you figger that iffen you don't win the argument in the next 10 days, you are sunk.

Most of us is losin' patience with this here so-called trial of the German spies. We is spendin' thousands of dollars when a 50-cent rope is all that is needed; so the balance could be put into war bonds.

It looks like we is a-goin' to stall around about this here Second Front until Germany will be able to attack us from the rear.—Cuckoo Comments.

A PLEASANT MEMORY

News of the death of Mrs. R. E. Blaney of Carrizozo brought back a peaceful evening I spent in the Blaney home last Fall, quoting W. J. Hooten of the El Paso Times. I arrived in Carrizozo about dark.

When Dr. Blaney heard I was in town he has me over to his home and it was mighty nice to sit down and relax in an easy chair which Mrs. Blaney insisted that I take.

"Doc" and Mrs. Blaney were an old-fashioned couple; their home was old-fashioned; everything in it was dated long before the dizzy period of cocktail parties and things that go with them.

"Doc" and his wife seemed to understand each other perfectly.—What I am wondering is, how will he get along without her soothing companionship?

Mrs. Arthur Clayton and son Joe of Gail, Tex. and Mrs. Don Clayton of San Antonio, Texas, who were guests of Mrs. R. M. Clayton during the Ranchman's Camp meeting left Tuesday for their homes. The ladies are Mrs. R. M. Clayton's sisters-in-law.

Mrs. R. E. Blaney

Last Friday evening, July 31, another of our much esteemed early day settlers, Mrs. R. E. Blaney, passed away. Her passing, much as it was regretted, did not come as a surprise, as for several days before, we had lost hope of her recovery.

Sunday morning, the remains laid in state at the Blaney home, where they were viewed by hosts of friends until at 1:30 in the afternoon, they were taken to the Methodist Church, where Rev. Klassen gave a short sermon in which he dwelt on the Christian life of the deceased and her many becoming characteristics of perfect womanhood.

A trio consisting of Mesdames R. E. Lemon, Roy Shafer and Margaret English sang, "Have Thine Own Way" and was followed by a duet, "Now the Day is Over."

After the pastor's discourse and also of Rev. James of the Baptist Church, who assisted Rev. Klassen, the remains were taken in charge by Comet Chapter No. 29, Order of Eastern Star and the last sad Rites conferred by Mrs. R. E. Lemon, assisted by officers of the Chapter, of which Mrs. Blaney was a Past Matron. The Flower-Bearers were chosen from the Rainbow Assembly for Girls, of which order, Mrs. Blaney was a Past Mother Advisor. Pall-bearers were Messrs. F. A. English, J. F. Petty, R. A. Walker, J. H. Fulmer, R. E. Lemon, A. J. Roland.

After the services at the church, the remains were conveyed to the Angus cemetery, where after a few brief words from Rev. Martin of Fort Stanton and Rev. Klassen of Carrizozo, the remains were deposited in Mother Earth, from whence they came.

Mrs. R. E. Blaney, nee Maude L. McFarland, was born at Booneboro, Iowa, September 20, 1874. On December 10, 1895 she was united in marriage to Dr. Robert E. Blaney. To that union, one child was born, a boy, but died at the age of nine days. In 1909, they moved from Chicago to Oscura; in 1918 the Blaneys moved to Carrizozo, where they have since resided.

Mrs. Blaney was engaged in the educational profession in this county for 20 years—18 of which she taught school in our town and 2 years at Oscura. She served the County of Lincoln for two terms as County School Superintendent. She was active in Village, County and State organizations. During her residence with us, many of her pupils now married and in their own homes who can recall her early teachings and profited by her kindly advice and wholesome example.

Her life was one of Christian fortitude and benevolence. She has crossed the border to that undiscovered country from whose bourne no traveler returns. She leaves to mourn her loss, her husband, one sister Mrs. E. D. Prehm of Hillsdale, Michigan, two nieces and three nephews at Boone, Iowa, to whom the sympathy of our community is extended.

Lights of New York

by L. L. STEVENSON

Once upon a time, the fabulous "Diamond Jim" Brady gave a $100 a plate dinner party for the glamour girl of that era, Lillian Russell. The dinner was at Jacques Bustanoby's Cafe des Beaux Arts. Brady has long since passed on to his reward. Bustanoby, put out of business by prohibition, died a few months ago in obscurity after making several attempts to stage a comeback. And like Brady and Bustanoby, the day of the $100 a plate dinner has definitely passed. Expensive dinner parties are still given and there are still high-priced eating establishments in New York. But nowadays, a party of four can dine and dine extremely well for possibly $20. Many hotels, noted for the excellence of their food, have $3 table d'hote dinners. The $1 table d'hote is far more popular, however. Also these nights business suits and print dresses are more common than white ties and flowing silks.

Despite the vanishing of spenders like Reggie Vanderbilt, Jim Keene, Jesse Lewisohn, "Diamond Jim" and others, New York still has its epicures who demand and get the best in food regardless of expense though now, due to the war, there is a certain curb on appetites, particularly in the way of fine imported wines. But for the gourmets, before the country went to war, pompano was flown from New Orleans, stone crabs from Florida, crawfish from the West coast and choice (and costly) viands from various other places. The true gourmets make no display about their eating. They may don evening clothes—but at the beefsteak dinners of the New York Society of Restaurateurs, members wear butchers' aprons and at dinners of the Amis des Escouffiers, diners tuck their napkins around their necks.

If one has the soul of an explorer, eating in New York may be made quite an adventure. Food from just about every country in the world is available to those who crave it. Jap delicacies might be a bit hard to obtain since Jap restaurants have been closed. But almost everything else from the roast beef of old England to the shish-kebab of Armenia can be found. The smorgasbords of the Swedish restaurants seem bountiful as ever.

The eating adventurer does better if he leaves the beaten path. There are hide-away places that are discovered quite by accident or learned of through friends. The trial and error method may be a bit hard on the digestion. But often it has its reward. For instance, one night, three of us dropped into a small Spanish bistro almost within the shadow of the Brooklyn bridge. The proprietor suggested arroz con pollo. In the course of time, the waiter appeared with a huge dish of chicken and rice which he said was enough for six. We ate it although the feast was a strain on vests. Our check was $3. Unfortunately the place is closed. The proprietor, despite his modest prices, was so thrifty that he was able to retire.

Many of the small neighborhood restaurants, where good food costs only a small amount, are really clubs. Patrons are unhurried and sometimes spend more than an hour over their coffee discussing affairs of the nation or of the block. In some places, patrons play chess, checkers or pinocle until late in the afternoon. The playing of games in eating places is becoming more and more common. Some swank night-spots have accommodations for those who wish to indulge in games, including of course gin rummy and backgammon. Also there are places on Broadway where chess or checkers may be played at so much per hour.

Real eaters, who want plain food and plenty of it, patronize restaurants along the water front. To longshoremen and others who perform the hard labor of shipping, a heaping plate of beans and a chunk of beef are a mere snack. Then there are the restaurants in the vicinity of Fulton Fish Market where thick steaks are consumed in quantities at 10:30 in the morning. That's not at all strange since the market employees begin their day's work at 2 a. m.

Every once in awhile, I learn something new by scanning ads. For instance, I have discovered that a new process makes hair pins unnecessary for lady's hair-do. Curly hair is simply sewn into place with a "coil needle" and thread. So when a comb is run through the locks, they fall right back into place. Thus nature is given another assist and hunting for hair pins is eliminated. Neil Syndicate—WNU Features.

New York Woman Gets Her Lucky Buck Back

NEW YORK. — When Mrs. Charles Glasco's daughter dropped a dollar down a sewer she told Queens Borough President Burke. Burke dispatched a truckload of members of the Queens bureau of sewers to the scene and, after wading around half a day, they found the bill, washed it off and returned it to Mrs. Glasco.

Passing of a Pioneer

WHEN death claimed William Henry Jackson recently at the age of 89, it not only ended the career of a remarkable American but it also snapped one of the few remaining links between the present and the historic past—the past of the Old Frontier. For Jackson, pioneer photographer and painter and often called the "first news photographer," was the first to make a pictorial record of some of the scenic wonders of the West, it was his camera which recorded for future generations the likenesses of some of the most famous Indian chiefs of the Plains wars, and it was his views of the unexplored Yellowstone, taken back in the seventies, which were instrumental in causing congress to declare that region a national park.

Young Jackson and his working outfit along the line of the Union Pacific in Wyoming in 1869.

His life-span of nearly a century corresponds almost exactly with the history of photography. The son of an amateur daguerreotypist in New York, where he was born April 4, 1843, he experimented with that newly discovered "art," then did some of his most important work with the cumbersome wet-plate methods of photography and ended his career in this modern era of candid cameras, color film and television.

His right to the title of "first news photographer" is based on the fact that in 1896 he made a round-the-world trip for Harper's Weekly and sent back to that publication the photographic results of his 18 months' journey.

But it was for his activities in the West that he was most noted in the fields of photography and exploration. After serving in the Union army, he went west—to St. Joseph, Mo., then the end of the transcontinental railroad. There he got a job as a bullwhacker, driving ox teams to Montana. After a year of this, Jackson decided to start up in the business he knew best. So he went to Omaha and there in 1868 he and his brother set up a "photographic studio."

Omaha was then booming with activities connected with the building of the Union Pacific railroad and this gave young Jackson a chance to satisfy his taste for adventure. For the next year he went up and down the line of the U.P. photographing scenes in the wild country along the route of the new railroad. These pictures attracted the attention of Dr. W. V. Hayden, head of the United States geological survey of the territories, and resulted in Jackson's being appointed official photographer for the survey.

After finishing his work with the geological survey Jackson settled in Detroit. For 25 years he was connected with the Detroit Publishing company and played a prominent part in launching the souvenir postcard business, in which the 40,000 negatives assembled throughout his 40 years of activity formed the major basis of output in that industry in 1898. These 40,000 negatives are now in the possession of Ford Museum's Edison Institute in Dearborn, Mich.

Jackson was the first to photograph the Grand Tetons in Wyoming, the Mount of the Holy Cross and the Mesa Verde cliff dwellings in Colorado, the Hopi villages in Arizona and many other scenic spots which have since attracted millions of tourists West every year. Many of his original negatives are still in the files of the Geological Survey of the department of the interior and some of his views made by the old wet plate process are considered artistically superior to the work of present-day photographers using the most modern equipment.

If it ever seemed to you that the walls and ceiling of an attic room were coming down on your head you know how the owner of this room felt before she began to experiment a bit with wallpaper and furnishings. Large samples of wallpaper were thumbtacked in place to test them. Stripes only accented the slant of the walls. Plain papers brought out angles with sharp shadows. Large designs made the room seem smaller. Wide borders made the ceiling appear to be even lower. But when a paper with tiny evenly spaced pattern and narrow border was tried all these defects seemed to melt away. The long curtains with ruffles on three sides also helped to make the ceiling seem higher. Pink and white striped material to repeat the wallpaper color was used for the chair cover and dressing table skirt. The chair is a remodeled rocker and the orange crate dressing table has hinged arms. Directions for them may be found on pages 4 and 19 of SEWING, Book 5.

NOTE: Book 5, in the series which Mrs. Spears has prepared for our readers, is now ready for mailing. There are 22 pages of these new ideas for homemakers with complete working drawings. Also a description of the first seven booklets of the series. Send your order to:

Star Dust

PEARL BUCK, head of the East and West association, which promotes cultural understanding between the Orientals and ourselves, wants a list of movies which really represent American life. She ought to include "Pride of the Yankees," starring Gary Cooper, with Teresa Wright playing opposite him. It's the story of Lou Gehrig's life—shows an earnest, rather shy young man who loved his mother and worked hard, attaining success and the honest admiration and affection of his countrymen. A typical American, we hope.

It's too bad that the dim-out forbade the use of Kleig lights for the opening of this swell picture. Never did another picture have such a first night; it took place simultaneously in 40 RKO houses in New York, and more than 100,000 people attended it.

If Richard Haydn develops indignation it will be the fault of the writers of "No Time for Love." That's the new Claudette Colbert-Fred MacMurray comedy, and Haydn eats in every one of his scenes. Might sound like heaven to some, but not to him!

They probably won't give Jerry Buckley a chance to dance in "Du Barry Was a Lady"; probably won't even know that she's a dancer. She's gone to Hollywood with a group of fellow models, and if they have an opportunity to do more than just look pretty they'll be lucky. New York models aren't very enthusiastic about Hollywood any more; most of them refuse to go. Even $250 a week for three months or so doesn't tempt them, since they may never face a movie camera in that time, and when they come home folks think they just didn't make good.

Sounds strange, but here's what we hear from Metro about an important role in Katharine Hepburn's picture, "Keeper of the Flame." The actor chosen will portray the star's husband, and will appear in seven important scenes before meeting death in an accident. After that he'll still be a key figure in the picture. But he'll never speak a word. Swell chance to be paid for keeping mum!

The latest addition to the new crop of players recently signed by Metro is William Bishop, nephew of Helen Hayes. He's six feet two, with dark brown hair and eyes, and has won fame as a football player. He's played in stock and in various stage plays in New York; in two of them he supported his famous aunt. He has also appeared on her radio program. A coming star, maybe.

Another newcomer to the screen is Lenore Aubert, chosen by Samuel Goldwyn to play opposite Bob Hope in "They Got Me Covered." Born in Jugoslavia, daughter of a general in the Austrian army in pre-Hitler days, she worked in pictures in Vienna. She was discovered by a talent scout while appearing in a play in Los Angeles. Goldwyn did more testing for this role than he has for any in several years. It's a break for Miss Aubert—she has been signed to a seven-year contract.

Bob Hawk's "How Am I Doin'" show has been on the air for exactly half a year, and in that time 211 contestants have walked off with winnings totaling $15,213. The average take, according to Quizmaster Hawk, is from $10 to $400; Mrs. William Hilley, a South Bend, Ind., housewife, is the top winner. Six contestants have gone over the $400 mark in the last 25 weeks.

ODDS AND ENDS—Ginger Rogers will play the title role in "The Gibson Girl," a romantic comedy in technicolor based on the book of Charles Dana Gibson and his wife. "Lassie Come Home," story of a Yorkshire family and their collie, by Eric Knight, will be filmed in technicolor by Metro. "These who recall Margo's moving performance in 'Winterset' and other productions will be glad to know she'll act as well as sing in the CBS Caravan hour, Friday evenings. Tom Blaine's getting numerous long distance calls from Private Charles Carroll, formerly her leading man in "Fallon Lady."

His Will and Way

By H. I. KING
(McClure Syndicate—WNU Features.)

JETHRO GORTON was a bachelor of large wealth and he had a nephew named Cyril. That name, Cyril, stuck in the crop of Jethro. Cyril himself liked it—not realizing that, with his rich uncle's detestation of "fancy names," it might prove to be an expensive luxury to him. Oliver Gorton, Cyril's father, had been the exact opposite of his brother Jethro. While the hard-headed elder brother had gone in for making money and parsimony, the light-headed younger brother had "whooped it up" as a youth, cultivated society and later, he had married a penniless but pretty, socially elect young lady.

The poor social butterfly died when Cyril was born and Oliver Gorton did not survive long after her death.

"If the boy's name had been anything but Cyril, now," thought old Jethro. "If it had been a sensible name like—like mine, for instance—I might—" He was a lonely old man, and the craving had grown on him as his years crept toward their close for someone to fix his affections on—and leave his money to. "Cyril indeed!" the old man said to himself. "However, I'll provide moderately for the young cub."

And so it was. Cyril was sent to a boarding school, and then to a technical school from which he was graduated as an electrical engineer.

"Whether you live or you starve to death will depend entirely upon yourself," Jethro told him.

"I understand that, sir," replied Cyril. "You have frequently conveyed to me that idea. I am very grateful for what you have done for me and it is my hope some day to be able to pay back to you the money you have expended on me."

"Words!" sneered Jethro. "Well, you have been graduated three weeks now. Got a job?"

"Yes, sir. With Peters, Stimson and Jagers. I go to work tomorrow." This conversation took place in Jethro's library—which was also his office. Old man Gorton was officially put down as "retired from business." But men like Jethro never really retire. He still had in his employ a stenographer-typist-secretary.

She was a pretty young lady about twenty-five years old—the same age as Cyril—and her name was Rachel Granger. Her father had been secretary for Jethro before her; and she had inherited the job and the small salary. As near as one could judge Jethro did not know whether Rachel was pretty or not, young or old. But to Cyril she was ideal. The two had seen more of each other than Jethro was aware of—or rather than they thought he was aware of. You could never be quite sure about what Jethro knew and what he didn't.

The conversation between the uncle and the nephew recorded above took place before Rachel who, busily typing letters, pretended to be an uninterested member of the group. But in spite of their cautiousness, the two young people could not help stealing a glance at each other now and then.

"Let me see," went on Jethro, "I believe that firm you have got a job with is located in Syracuse. I suppose you will naturally go there to live. As after today we may not see one another again, I want you to read this. You will realize then just how you stand." He reached into a drawer of his desk and taking out an envelope labeled "My Will" handed it to Cyril.

The young man opened and read the document. It was a will leaving Jethro's large fortune to various public institutions; no mention of Cyril, no mention of anybody.

"Look that over carefully," said Jethro. "Do you see anything wrong with it?"

"No sir," replied Cyril, "except that you have not signed it."

"Well, I'll sign it now," said the old man. "You and Miss Granger can act as witnesses." Hastily Jethro affixed his signature. Calmly Cyril signed as witness. Rachel came forward and added her signature to the witnesses. Then she threw down the pen and burst out crying. "I think you are just horrid," she sobbed, "to—treat Cyril that way. I resign, right now!"

"Rachel," warned Cyril, "please now—what do we care? Be sensible. Uncle Jethro has been very good to both of us."

"Cyril, eh? And Rachel, eh?" cried the old man. "Dry your eyes, young lady, and just listen to me. I have had my eyes on you two ever since you were able to walk alone—both of you. Cyril has turned out to be everything I thought he would not be. And you have turned out just as I expected you would. As to the will you have just witnessed—here it goes." He tore the document into small pieces and threw the pieces into the open fire in the old-fashioned grate. "There is another will in the possession of my lawyers," he went on, "dividing my money between you two—provided you marry each other. No, don't say a word, I have watched your sly ogling and love-making! I am bound to have my way."

Cyril did not go to Syracuse; he stayed in New York and helped Rachel manage his uncle's affairs—after he married her first.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

ABRAHAM'S INTERCESSORY PRAYER

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 18:25-33. GOLDEN TEXT—The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much.—James 5:16.

Prayer has been the subject of thousands of books of sermons without end; yet how little it is actually practiced. Conferences are held to discuss it, and they attract large audiences, but at prayer meetings we find only a handful.

We are sure that "prayer changes things," and we agree that it is the most powerful force at man's disposal, but we go right ahead trying to change things in our own strength. "O what peace we often forfeit, O what needless pain we bear, All because we do not carry Everything to God in prayer!"

Our lesson from the life of Abraham stresses one important phase of prayer—prayer for others.

I. The Nature of Intercessory Prayer.

1. It is a Privilege. We speak of the burden of prayer, but let us also recall that it is a privilege. Abraham had been honored by a visit from the Lord. The covenant had been renewed and a son promised (Gen. 18:1-16). Then the Lord, because of His friendship with Abraham, shared with him (v. 17) His purpose of judgment on wicked Sodom and Gomorrah.

How glorious to be on such intimate terms with God—to know Him and to know His plans and purposes. Would you enjoy having such fellowship? You may through Jesus Christ and through the study of God's holy Word.

2. It is a Duty.

Privilege brings corresponding responsibility. The two men went toward Sodom, but "Abraham stood yet before the Lord" (v. 22), to pray for the wicked cities.

Those who know God's plans are to share them in prayer. Those who have audience with the King of Kings are those to carry the blessed burden of prayer for others as well as for themselves.

Are we praying for our nation, for its President and leaders; for our city, for our church, our families, our children, our friends? The deeper the need, the greater the wickedness, the more we need to pray. If we as Christians do not pray, who will pray?

3. It is a Reality.

Some modern religious leaders would take all reality out of prayer by making it a sort of spiritual exercise which operates only on the soul of the one who prays, giving him new strength and a sense of well being. Undoubtedly the very fellowship with God which is inherent in true prayer is spiritually beneficial; but prayer is objective, not merely subjective. It deals with nations and cities, men and women, problems and sin and sorrow. It concerns every need of man—physical, mental and spiritual.

II. The Spirit of Intercessory Prayer.

1. Unselfish. Abraham had the assured blessing and promise of God. The cities were wicked and unrepentant. If he had taken the attitude of many church folk, he would have said, "It serves them right. Wipe out their wickedness." But Abraham prayed for them in complete unselfishness. Can those who know the spirit of Christ be selfish in prayer?

2. Bold and Courageous. Note the reverent boldness with which Abraham pleaded the cause of the cities. God is not displeased to have us press our cause in prayer; in fact, the Bible reveals that He frequently answers according to the earnestness with which men pray. He has always honored and used men of holy courage.

3. Persistent. No one—not even God—likes a quitter. Remember those who were heard for their importunity? (Luke 11:5; 18:1-8). Many pray like the little boys on Halloween. They ring the bell and run.

Abraham persisted; fifty, forty-five, forty, thirty, twenty, ten—perhaps he should not have stopped even there. God who saw his persistent faith went the rest of the way and saved the only four who could be saved, and even of those, three were infected with the wickedness of the place.

"Let us not be weary in well doing" as we pray, "for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not" (Gal. 6:9).

III. The Result of Intercessory Prayer.

God had to destroy the cities. There are some kinds of violent infection which must be destroyed by fire for the sake of others. Out of the destruction, however, God did deliver the righteous Lot, which was doubtless Abraham's real desire.

God hears and answers prayers. That is not only the testimony of His Word, but of countless Christian men and women down through the ages even to our day. The one who would deny the efficacy of prayer must face an overwhelming flood of authenticated answers.

YES, your youngster is ready for hours and hours of play when you make her this cunning suit—in a stout durable cotton which "can take it!" We suggest seersucker, poplin, denim or broadcloth. The suit is trimmed down to essentials only—a topper which can be worn tucked in as a shirt or as a jacket—overall and an abbreviated romper suit for sun worship. The last named carries a sail boat decoration which can be applied as a bright patch of contrasting color.

Pattern No. 8166 is in sizes for 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 year olds. Size 3 years set takes 3 1/2 yards of 36-inch material. 1 1/4 yards ric rac to trim rompers.

Wrap-Over Frock. WHAT a comfort, at the end of a hard day to slip into a cool, utterly simple frock like this one—shown in Pattern No. 8164. The fact that it wraps over and is held in place with just two buttons at the waist makes it very easy to slide into! You'll find it a practical and attractive frock for the hurred morning breakfast—in fact it is a jewel in the wardrobe of any busy woman. Extra smart in flowered chifon.

Pattern No. 8164 is in sizes 32 to 44. Size 34 with bias cut skirt, takes 4 1/2 yards 36-inch material, 2 yards ric rac. Send your order to:

Wine Barrel a Church

In California, the fashion of constructing and painting roadside buildings to resemble such objects as animals, fruits, tea kettles, shoes, igloos and airships has even extended to a house of worship. The Church of Our Lady of Mount Carmel in the town of Asti is built in the shape of a wine barrel.

How to make your car last a lot longer

Five neighbors, with only 6,000 miles left on their tires, can, by taking turns driving, each ride 30,000 miles before any re-treading is necessary. Start or join a driving club today and save precious tires.

Don't bump into or scrape curbs. Check pressure weekly. Thirty per cent under-inflation reduces tire mileage 50 per cent. Drive "40 or less." Avoid "squeaking" on turns. ... many extra tire miles will result.

Visit a Pontiac dealer at least once a month for a wheel alignment check. A wheel one-half inch out of line will drag a tire sideways 87 feet in every mile. Have him switch tires every 4,000 miles, too.

Pontiac's FREE "Motor Doctor" inspection prevents little troubles from becoming costly repairs. Regular inspection by your Pontiac dealer is the cheapest way to preserve something you can't replace until the war is won.

This is Total War

Every man, woman and child is in this war. There are no longer only military fronts, as in past wars. Instead, our whole nation is a "front" and we are all "fighters" in the sense that our individual efforts are closely linked to ultimate victory. There are many ways to help; in civilian defense, by supporting war organizations, by helping pay for the war, by doing the best we can in our daily work. WAR COMES FIRST

The weight of war on the telephone lines grows heavier every day. We can't build new lines and switchboards to carry the load because copper, aluminum, rubber and other materials needed for telephone equipment are vital war materials as well. What facilities we have must serve as fully as possible.

Telephone subscribers themselves hold a great part of the answer. Here are some ways in which you can cooperate:

- 1 Limit long distance usage to necessary calls and be as brief as possible. The longer lines, particularly those to the Pacific Coast states and east of the Mississippi River, are especially busy, and calls to these areas should not be made unless they are very important or relate to the war effort.
- 2 If your call is delayed please do not ask the operator for reports unless necessary. Such requests tie up switchboards.
- 3 Please do not call "Information" until you have referred to the telephone directory. Other calls such as for "time of day" should be avoided unless they are necessary.
- 4 We cannot always give you the type of equipment you desire. In some cases we can furnish no new local service, and in general only party-line service. Considerate use of party-line service is neighborly and particularly helpful at this time.
- 5 Long telephone conversations not only tie up the two lines that are connected but also the central office equipment that is common to many lines. Please use the service moderately. A long unnecessary conversation may delay a call essential to the war effort.

We are confident of your continuing cooperation in this emergency.

German Spearheads Across Don River Are Established After Heavy Losses; Nazis Dig In Along Egyptian Front; Gandhi to Japs: 'You're Not Welcome'

In answer to a call from President Roosevelt, representatives of labor and capital met in Washington to discuss anti-inflation measures. Front row, left to right: W. Witherow, president, National Association of Manufacturers; Philip Murray, president of the CIO; Erik Johnson, president of the chamber of commerce; William Green, president of the AFL; and George Henry of the AFL. Back row, left to right: Walter Weisenburger, National Association of Manufacturers; James E. Carey of the CIO; and Joyce O'Hara of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce.

RUSSIA:

Desperate Battles

Bridging the lower Don river, Nazi troops continued to press on in their steady drive into the Caucasus. Russian infantrymen, battling desperately from the southern bank of the Don, 120 miles east of Rostov, threw tons of explosives at the Nazis, but two German spearheads were established.

A Soviet bulletin announced that nine pontoon bridges were smashed, throwing Nazi troops and equipment into the Don. But new reserves were ready to take the place of the drowned men, whose bodies were left to float down the river.

Despite German successes at Rostov, Soviet troops made the Nazis pay dearly for their gains. In part, a Russian communique announced that "One small group of Soviet infantry alone in one day with anti-tank guns, machine guns and incendiary bottles destroyed nine German tanks and killed hundreds of Hitlerites."

The communique said that the fled army still was fighting stubbornly at Novocherkassk and at Tsimlyansk.

Soviet airmen were credited with destroying 299 German planes during the week. Russian losses for the same period were placed at 137.

In one sector of the front Russian soldiers were said to have wiped out more than four Nazi regiments in three weeks' fighting, capturing large military stores, including 400 machine guns, 560 automatic rifles, 40 mortars and 20,000 shells. In addition, they destroyed 328 tanks.

EGYPT'S WAR:

Nazis Dig In

A lull in the desert war saw German troops digging in on the front 75 miles west of Alexandria, from El Alamein to the Quattara depression.

A communique from Cairo announced that heavy British and United States bombers continued to sweep across the Mediterranean to attack Crete and that another force struck at Tobruk again.

Light bombers continued to hammer Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's sea and air bases, troop and vehicle concentrations. Additional information said that fires and explosions occurred when the big bombers struck at airfields in Canada and Timpakton in Crete.

BOMBS:

On Wide Fronts

On several widespread battlefronts the third of United Nations' bombs and shells jarred the Axis into realizing that all offensives in this war were not necessarily theirs.

Six times in ten days warships of the British navy bombarded Matruh, the enemy's most advanced base in Egypt. British reports said that the Axis held city had been knocked "fatter than a pancake" as a result of the some 2,600 shells blasted into the vital harbor facilities. Use of the harbor by the Axis was believed to be out of the question for practically every shore building had been blown into debris.

Meanwhile from Cairo came word that the Germans and Italians based at El Daba, west of El Alamein, had been heavily bombed from the air and U. S. planes were reported to have caused immense damage to the Axis ports of Bengasi and Tobruk, still farther to the west.

Allied ground forces were kept busy consolidating their positions as a despatch out of London said that while the Axis appeared to be on the defensive in Africa, the side arrival of a single enemy conveyer might swing the balance the other way.

On New York Front

Senator James M. Mead, President Roosevelt's choice in the New York gubernatorial race, as he addressed an outdoor second-front rally in New York city. Mead opposes Attorney General John J. Bennett, who is backed by James A. Farley.

NEXT JAP MOVE:

'Fool's Paradise'

"I say we are living in a fool's paradise. It is only absolute fear that will awaken the people to a realization of what they must face in the immediate future."

With those words Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario emphasized the peril which faces the United Nations—particularly Great Britain and the United States.

Hepburn predicted that Japan's next major move would be an attack on Dutch Harbor in the Aleutian Islands. From Dutch Harbor long range bombers could attack the United States production centers on the West coast and a considerable distance inland.

"Untold difficulties" may be in store for Britain because of the desperate situation of the Russian army, the premier said. Nazi subjugation of the entire Mediterranean area "will mean Germany will occupy the whole of France and take the French fleet."

SHIPPING:

Highest Level

One week last month merchant ship sinkings rose to the highest level since the beginning of the war and also "greatly exceeded new construction."

This brought from the War Shipping administration a limit on shipping space to "cargo essential to the prosecution of the war." This action was expected to increase substantially the cargo space for the United Nations' military requirements.

WSA also reported "the several different fleets of the United Nations are combining their operations as complements to each other for war purposes" with the Combined Shipping Adjustment board directing shipping in the various pools.

A definite shortage of trained seamen is reported because of the "tremendous wartime expansion of our merchant shipping."

PRODUCTION:

Greater Increases

While the Joint War Production Committee of the U. S. and Canada was reporting that the annual rate of munitions production in the U. S. for the second quarter of 1942 was nearly four times that of 1941, it was also announced that Canadian production was almost three times the 1941 rate, and even greater increases are scheduled.

A report covering the first half year of the board's activity in coordinating joint production outlined steps taken to increase war output by eliminating duplications, increasing the number of common type weapons, arranging more rapid exchange of supplies, breaking transportation bottlenecks, eliminating tariff and other barriers, and promoting full exchange of information on production methods and designs.

Technical subcommittees maintain constant contacts with those in charge of production in each country.

BRIEFS:

REPAIRS: Whether flown by the Royal Air force or by their own crews, American planes in England will be maintained and repaired by the United States air force from now on. The move is designed to increase efficiency and speed.

INCREASE: The Australian government has decided to increase the pay of service men in the new budget. The increase is expected to consist of additional allowance for dependents.

CONFISCATED: The government has confiscated 29 Italian and German ships, including a German vessel caught in the Caribbean last year masquerading as an American ship. Included also are those ships damaged by their crews while in American ports in March, 1941, as part of a general sabotage plan.

WEDDING: Dark-haired Diana Barrymore, actress-daughter of the late John Barrymore, and Branwell Fletcher, stage star, have applied for a marriage license and announced they would be married within a few weeks.

Speaking of Sports

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

LEO DUROCHER, not-so-genial boss man of the Brooklyn Dodgers, muffed one recently when, in a fit of temper at stories written about him, he barred all except two baseball writers from the Dodger's dressing room.

Lee's vituperative feud with Brooklyn and New York baseball writers started late in June when "the Lip" heaved a wet towel into Umpire Tom Duan's face at Ebbets Field. The local press gave Leo a very thorough going over for his actions. This angered Mr. Durocher, who retaliated with the decree that none of the offending writers should enter the dressing room.

It might well be explained that one of the writers who may enter the sacred portals was off the day after the towel throwing, and so failed to get a chance to crack down on Leo. The other writer represents a newspaper which does not permit its reporters to editorialize in their presentation of the news.

Little Difference

Being barred from the dressing room doesn't really make a great deal of difference to the authors in their work. It means merely that they are unable to sit around with the boys after the game and get a bit of inside dope—which may or may not be truthful. However, it is the easiest way a manager may snub the writers, and it's sure to rankle.

Sports writers usually are an amiable lot, prone to overlook most human weaknesses. But it doesn't pay to discriminate against them. Rival reporters, in line of duty, will try their best to beat each other on stories. But they become exceedingly clamorous when a person other than a newspaper man starts making trouble.

And now—with a war on—every club in baseball needs the solid support of the press. They have been getting it. But it's obvious that such support would be lacking should a few similar occasions arise.

Time to Come

Leo would do well to remember that writers have good memories. Right now he's at the top of the heap. He piloted the Dodgers to the National league pennant last year, and has a fairly comfortable lead in the 1942 race. But there probably will come a time when Durocher's lamp doesn't burn so brightly. Like all managers, he will make his share of errors. If they come too close together—and if the scribes feel unkindly toward him—then Leo's life will not be such a rambunctiously happy affair.

The diamond Boswells of New York have faced such a situation more times than those of other major league cities. About the turn of the century, when Andrew Freedman owned the Giants, he not only kept slightly antagonistic reporters out of the clubhouse, but barred them from the park.

For many years John J. McGraw allowed the writers free run. But then came a time in which John failed to persuade a reporter to hold back on an interview which the Giant manager had given him in a burst of anger. From then on McGraw didn't like reporters in the clubhouse. But Mac always was available after every game, and was of the greatest possible assistance.

About Bill Terry

Bill Terry barred reporters from the clubhouse, and thereby broke down the public relations of the club. It was last winter that Horace Stoneham and Terry agreed to promote Ott to the manager's job. With Ott's regime came a renewal of friendly relations with the press.

So this was not the first time that a manager ever failed to see eye to eye with the sports writers.

It is not the unanimous contention that writers should have the privilege of moving without hindrance among the players. It may be that managers should reserve the right to exclude them from the clubhouse, pullman cars, etc. But such a rule should be enforced without fear or favor. It should be a matter of permanent club policy. It should not come as the result of some manager's anger over a bit of deserved criticism.

GRANTLAND RICE

THESE soldiers, sailors, marines, airmen and coast guardsmen have all the work they can handle, but they still have time enough

Here is a camp query that covers practically every detail of baseball: "To help clear up, a lot of arguments we've had in this camp would you mind answering the following: Who is (1) the fastest pitcher; (2) the hardest hitter; (3) the best natural hitter; (4) the best base runner; (5) the best infielder, fielding and hitting?"

Here are the answers from this lookout:

- 1. Fastest ball pitcher—Walter Johnson, with Lefty Grove second.
2. Hardest hitter—Babe Ruth.
3. Best Natural hitter—Joe Jackson, with Nap Lajoie close.
4. Best base runner—Ty Cobb, going away. Max Carey next.
5. Best infielder—Honus Wagner, great infielder and greater hitter.

Ranking Golfers

Here's another barracks request, this time from a group of golfers:

"How would you rank the golfers from the viewpoint of stroke-making, all-around skill, winning or losing temperaments; putting? If we can get this settled it will shut off a lot of noise in this camp."

- 1. The best stroke-maker I ever saw, the straightest player, was Harry Vardon.
2. The best combination of stroke-making, hard work and putting belonged to Bobby Jones.
3. The best golfing temperaments I ever ran across were Johnny McDermott, Jerry Travers and Walter Hagen. McDermott and Travers were marvels at concentration. Hagen had less tension. He also had as much golf smartness.

The two best putters I ever saw were Walter Travis and Jerry Travers. In modern play this distinction goes to Horton Smith. Paul Runyan is close.

I've seen Harry Vardon play many rounds of championship golf and I can't recall ever seeing him play a shot from the rough or from a bunker. He was a bad putter, with a nervous stab. It was nothing unusual to see him take three putts from 10 or 12 feet.

About Bobby Jones

Capt. Bobby Jones, taking his training at Mitchell Field before being stationed in a southern sector, believes he worked harder around a course in championship play than anyone else. He was supposed to be "The Machine."

"I was far from this," he said recently. "Machines don't take seven-ens. Gene Sarazen used to say you can't take a seven on any hole and win. I had three sevens in my last round at Winged Foot in the National Open of 1929. I've had a flock of sevens, which meant I had to work my head off on the other holes."

Gene Sarazen

"The oddest seven I ever took was at Hoylake in the 1930 British Open. I was only 29 yards off the green in two, got into no trouble, actually didn't miss a shot, and yet took five strokes to get down for my seven here. How could this happen? The cup was on a mound. My first chip shot ran up fairly close, stopped, and then rolled back. My second one slipped by the cup, caught a deep giant and trickled 30 feet on beyond. Then I took three putts.

The Worst Temptation

"Championship golf," Bobby said, "is largely resisting the temptation to quit after one or two bad holes. You begin to feel you can't win, so why keep on punishing yourself? The winner has to work for it all the way, take his beating here and there, and then continue to work, harder than ever.

"I believe the hardest-working golfer I ever saw is Ben Hogan. Ben works over every type of shot, even the ones that look simple. He takes nothing for granted.

"Hogan has made no attempt to master any variety of shots. He sticks to a few simple ones, concentrates on these, and never gets discouraged. Byron Nelson is another hard worker, although Byron can play more shots. But no one works quite as hard, round after round, month after month, as Hogan works.

"I had 18 years of tournament golf, from 12 to 30, and I know the nerve and mental beating one has to take if you are out to win. Just one lapse is enough to cost two strokes. There never was a golf shot that played itself."

SHE LOVED A SPY

by SYLVIA TAYLOR

THE STORY SO FAR: Joan Leland, secretary, in love with handsome Karl Miller, night club owner, is horrified and disillusioned, when he shoots his business partner, Eric Strom, and threatens to implicate her unless she continues her work and remains silent. He confesses he has a wife in Germany and is part of a Nazi spy ring. Paul Mulford, his manager, reveals to Joan that he really is Paul O'Malley, an FBI agent, trying to trap the spy-rings higher-ups and Joan agrees to help him. Joan's sister, Sybil, is missing and Paul believes Karl is holding her as a hostage. Pat Hines, a new singer for Karl, is really Paul's young run-away sister, Patricia, and she innocently betrays Paul's identity to Karl, who captures Paul and Joan as they discover incriminating evidence. He spirits them away on a boat and they find they are in love. A submarine appears to pick up bomber plans stolen by Karl. Thomas, a victim of Karl's, slips a gun to Joan, who shoots Karl as he is about to shoot Paul. They escape in a life boat and land in Mexico. Arthur Mulford, Joan's former employer, offers his plane for a return to the U. S.

Silently they fled out of the plane and at Mulford's command entered a waiting automobile, followed by the bewildered Thomas.

CHAPTER XVII

"And you? Don't you want to go home?" Mulford asked Joan.

"Yes and no. I want to leave—but not without Paul."

"Ah," Mulford said, "I see. But I will be glad to take all of you. I have my own plane, my own pilot, and I am returning to San Francisco tomorrow. Why not talk it over with him? Surely he can have no objection to your leaving since it will be absolutely safe."

Joan wavered. "I couldn't go without him. But maybe he would be willing to go with us. He could get aid in the states and return to Mexico and continue the search. I'm not much help to him now, and neither is Thomas. What I really came down here to tell you, Mr. Mulford, was that what Thomas told you is the truth. He should have his chance to get out."

"I understand, and I'll take him of course. But, Joan, I think you should go too. I'm really shocked at this situation. After all, you were in my shop for almost two years. Naturally your welfare concerns me."

She smiled. "That's nice of you, Mr. Mulford. By the way, what are you doing in Mexico?"

"Since the war ruined my business and I closed the shop, I've been having a vacation. I needed one after all those years. I worked hard, and it's good to be away."

Joan rose. "Can I let you know early in the morning about leaving? I'll have to talk it over with Mr. O'Malley."

"Of course. I do not plan to leave before noon, so take your time."

"You're not staying at the hotel?"

"No. With a friend of mine, Dr. Gomez. I'll give you his number, or better yet, I'll phone you here. About ten o'clock, say?"

"That will be fine. And thank you very much for everything."

What a lucky break, Joan thought. It all worked out so perfectly. If Mr. Mulford had his own plane, how could Karl possibly check on them? She roused the desk clerk and had him ring Paul's room.

"Please come down, Paul," she begged. "I must talk with you."

Thomas came in from the veranda. "What do you think?" he asked.

"It sounds fine," Joan agreed. "That man is my former employer. I've known him for years. He's here on a vacation."

"Then you'll go, too?"

"It certainly seems like a good chance, but I'll have to talk to Paul. In any case, Thomas, Mr. Mulford has promised to take you."

"Thanks, Miss Leland." The gratitude in his eyes was unmistakable. Paul came down almost immediately. "What's going on?" he demanded.

"The most wonderful thing has happened! Arthur Mulford is here! I used to work for him before I got my job with Karl. He was the man who was trying to locate me through the bartender, also the one I saw on the street today."

They went out to the patio, which was covered by a patchwork of shadows and moonlight. Thomas had gone upstairs and Joan and Paul sat down at one of the rustic tables. "So Arthur Mulford has offered to take you home?"

"Yes! How did you know?"

"Very simple deduction, darling," Paul laughed. "I read it in your eyes. . . I suppose Thomas is at the bottom of all this."

"Yes," Joan admitted.

His keen eyes searched her face. "You want to go?"

"Not without you. But, Paul, if we all went, it might be better. We could get help and come back . . ."

A bird twittered sleepily, and the fragrance of a million flowers flooded the moonlight night. Paul smiled. "Okay! I'll go with you."

It did not occur to Joan that victory had been too easy.

It was Joan's first experience at flying. Once or twice she tried to look out but it made her so dizzy she turned to Paul, saying, "I guess I can't make it."

Paul smiled placidly, much too placidly, Joan decided, eyeing him speculatively. This was the first time she had known Paul to give in so easily on any issue. But perhaps he had changed him. She said impulsively, "I know you're doing this for my sake, Paul, and I appreciate it, really I do."

He smiled at her earnestness and said quietly, "You may as well know now."

Joan's peace of mind was shattered. "Now what?"

Paul leaned closer. "I told you I wanted to track down the rest of Karl's men to find out who was at the head of this. Remember?"

"Yes, of course, but . . ."

"That," Paul said, "is exactly what I am doing."

"I don't understand, Paul. What are you talking about?"

"You thought I agreed to come with Mulford because you wanted me to, but there is really another reason."

Her face was white. "What are you trying to tell me?"

"I came because we are at last on the trail. We're being taken straight to the heart of the spy ring."

"You mean that Mr. Mulford . . ."

She could not go on.

"Mulford," Paul said calmly, "is the head of this whole business. I've known it ever since I obtained those papers on the ship."

"And you didn't tell me?"

"No. I didn't want to frighten you."

She leaned weakly back in her seat. "And I thought we were safe! But where are we going, Paul? Do you have any idea?"

"I have a very good idea, and if I'm wrong it's going to be tough on all of us."

"Poor Thomas!" Joan said, looking over her shoulder. "This will be a terrible shock for him. Mr. Mulford, the head of the spy ring! I can't believe it!"

"It's true! He's been working with Karl all the time. His importing shop was only a blind, just as Karl's Club Elite is. All the time you worked for Mulford you were really involved. Mulford fired you and refused to give you a reference so you would be forced to take any job that came along. The want ad was put in that paper especially for you. Mulford had decided you would be loyal and really transferred you to Karl's employ. If you hadn't fallen in love with Karl, you might still not have known what was going on."

Shocked at the revelation his words brought, Joan sat silently listening to the roar of the plane as it winged its way to their unknown destination.

At last the true picture was unfolded to Joan. Paul had made their situation clear as Mulford's plane roared on. It seemed incredible that she could have been so blind. For almost two years she had worked for Arthur Mulford, regarding him as a kindly but rather tiresome employer. She had had no suspicions that his importer's shop was a blind, or that the letters she typed day after day were code messages concerning the subversive activities of a spy ring. She had wondered at her sudden dismissal but even then she had not connected it with the want ad she answered for Karl Miller's secretary. How completely she had fallen into their trap! And as Paul had said, if she had not fallen in love with Karl she probably would not know the truth even now.

What a fool Paul must have thought her, watching her through those weeks when she had happily boasted that Karl was going to marry her. How carelessly she had treated Paul's words of warning, and Sybil's. Sybil! Her sister's name struck fear into her heart. Paul had told her that when they arrived at the end of their journey he hoped to find Sybil. If they would only find her alive! And what about Patricia?

It was night when the plane landed, and forewarned by Paul, Joan was not surprised to see Arthur Mulford confronting them with a gun and saying, "All right now, keep your hands up."

Silently they fled out of the plane and at Mulford's command entered a waiting automobile, followed by the bewildered Thomas.

"What's it all about, Mr. O'Malley?" he begged. "Where are we?"

"Another of Karl's tricks," Paul explained in an undertone. "I think we're somewhere in New Mexico or possibly Arizona."

The moonlight night showed them little as they drove along the rough country road. Barren waste land stretched on all sides.

"You mean this guy is one of Karl's men?" Thomas whispered.

"Just Karl's boss," Paul said wryly.

Thomas, for once, was stunned into silence.

In a short time they arrived at a ranch house. It was the first dwelling of any kind they had seen since landing. Behind the large house was a smaller one and into this Paul, Joan and Thomas were led. The house was modern though crudely finished. There was a fireplace and electric lighting. Several rooms led into the living room but none of the three was inclined to venture from the fire.

"Well," Thomas said, "I guess this is all my fault. I thought Mulford was on the level. I didn't know he was connected with Karl. Honestly."

"We know that, Thomas. It's all right. It had to be this way. I've suspected for some time that Mulford was the chief of this outfit."

Joan sat down in an old wicker rocker and drew it closer to the blaze. "And now what do we do?"

"This ranch is a clearing house. Stolen plans that are not taken from San Francisco by boat are flown here and from here to Mexico where they are picked up off the coast by fishing boats."

Thomas rubbed his hands together nervously. "But why did they want us to come here? Why would they have bothered?"

"That," Paul admitted, "remains to be seen."

"They must think they have some use for us," Joan argued, "or they wouldn't have gone to so much trouble."

The wind whistled outside. The silence of the night held the peculiar loneliness that belongs to the desert.

Joan was so deep in her own thoughts that the sound of footsteps startled her and she leaped from her place by the fire.

The door opened to admit Karl Miller. His arm was in a sling. "You didn't quite finish me," he said smoothly. "Your aim is really very bad."

"What a pity," Paul murmured.

Karl turned his cold blue eyes upon him. "You have caused us a great deal of trouble, Mr. O'Malley. I believe the time has come now for you to be of use to us."

Paul had risen and the two men stood facing each other.

Karl said quietly, "Again I offer you the chance to come in with us. You could be a valuable asset."

Silence. Contempt was written on Paul's face.

"If you refuse to give us your services," Karl said, "Joan will have to pay for it."

He walked over and took her arm, twisting it until she cried out with pain. Paul took a step forward but Arthur Mulford, who had been watching from the door, leaped forward with a gun in his hand.

Although Karl still held her arm, which throbbed with pain, Joan cried, "Don't pay any attention to him, Paul, I'm not afraid!"

Karl said, "Perhaps you are not afraid for yourself but there is still your sister to consider."

"Sybil! Where is she?"

"At the moment, she is safe. If you can persuade Paul to see this situation my way, she will continue to be safe. If not . . ." He shrugged.

Karl looked at O'Malley and smiled. "I believe you will find that you and your government are playing a losing game. Of course, Mr. O'Malley, in our country a man does not let sentimentality interfere with his job. It is unfortunate that you are not constituted the same way—unfortunate for you, and extremely lucky for us. I am sure that, being so fond of Joan, you would rather betray your country than permit her to suffer."

He exchanged glances with Mulford, and they both left the house.

"I told you!" Thomas cried. "They're devils!"

"If I can stall them off for a few days . . ." Paul was saying in a low guarded tone.

AT THE BICYCLE RATIONING BOARD

Q—Why do you want a bicycle?
A—It's the only card missing from my collection.

Q—Do you want a high-wheel or a low-wheel machine?
A—Low. Any idea you have that I am going into a revival of vaudeville is false.

Q—Have you ever operated a bicycle before?
A—No, but I come from an old family of bicycle people.

Q—What do you mean by that?
A—My dad could ride backwards; and I had an uncle who could stand on his head in the saddle.

Q—Are there any bicycles in your family now?
A—Those things I trip over in the dark every night can't be road rollers.

Q—Give the board three reasons why you should be allowed to ride a bike?
A—I can't get any gas. The other two don't matter.

Q—Do you live near a bus line?
A—Yes.

Q—Why not use the bus?
A—When I coast down hill I want to do it on my own responsibility.

Q—Are you aware that there is a shortage of bicycles?
A—Up until the last year I thought they could only be found in antique shops.

Q—What do you want to do on a bicycle that can't be done some other way?
A—Go through a red light and park where I want to.

Q—Do you regard your having a bicycle as essential to winning the war?
A—Of course. It will keep up national morale.

Q—How so?
A—The people need entertainment and when they see me on a bicycle they will get it.

Q—How far do you live from work?
A—Twenty miles.

Q—Our records show that it is only two miles.
A—You forget that it's all uphill.

Q—Have you thought of pooling bicycles?
A—What do you mean?

Q—You take a neighbor to work one day and he takes you the next.
A—Who do you think I am, Joe Jackson Jr.?

The best laugh line of the month in this department's opinion is to be found in "The Crumbury Tiger," a baseball story by Bugs Baer in Collier's. In a fantastic tale about a busher, there is an episode where a shotgun marriage takes place at the plate during a critical inning. The game is then resumed and the batter strikes out. "He is now in a fine spot," says Baer, "He is struck out and married on a wide outshoot."

Potato Breeders Make Test Plantings

Disease-Free Potatoes Only Control of Ring Rot

How new knowledge of plant science can lift some of the load from the mind of a worried farmer is illustrated by results of test plantings reported by potato breeders of the U. S. department of agriculture.

Ring rot is a serious potato disease. It appeared in Canada in 1931, in Maine in 1932, and spread rapidly causing serious crop losses. The only effective control is to plant nothing but disease-free seed potatoes. Traces of the disease in seed stock are difficult to detect and may lead to serious losses. Ring rot has been reported from 37 states.

If scientific knowledge had not advanced in the last 100 years, says Dr. E. M. Salter, chief of the bureau of plant industry, the potato industry and the country generally might well worry over the possibility of a potato famine such as Ireland had in the Hungry Forties.

Potato specialists do not know of a gold commercial variety that will grow in spite of ring rot. But authors of the article report a trial of

"Come on out, guys and gals, see what's cookin'," says this newly hatched chick waiting for pals.

54 varieties artificially inoculated to insure a thorough test. Nearly all were severely diseased, but a precious few came through uninjured.

Various Spuds Tested.

These include two imported varieties "not commercially promising" and several seedlings. Half the hybrids of the cross between "President"—imported from England—and the valuable American variety, Katahdin, showed no infection. Several other seedlings showed signs of resistance.

These tests indicate that resistance to ring rot can be inherited by the potato. The "President" variety is not commercially valuable, but from a breeding standpoint it looks to be almost priceless. Based on these tests and their experience it should not be very difficult to produce varieties resistant to ring rot with good commercial qualities.

Agriculture in Industry

Alfalfa

Although alfalfa is a fairly recent arrival in the fields of the United States and Canada, it is one of the oldest crops known to man and flourished in Asia and Europe for centuries. For the last 20 years, our farmers have given it great preference and the acreage has nearly doubled.

Being especially rich in vitamins, it seems to offer good possibilities for industrial uses. A pilot plant is soon to be set up to extract pigments from dried alfalfa leaves. These will be used in coloring soaps and foods and in preparing medicines.

Some experiments also have been made in extracting alfalfa juice for human consumption so it may some time appear on our breakfast tables. At Michigan State college, scientists have been working on the problem of making plastics out of alfalfa in the same way that soybeans are utilized.

At present, the chief industrial product is alfalfa meal which is merely hay ground into coarse particles which can be fed to animals without loss, and can be shipped more cheaply than baled hay. It can be used in mixed feeds for such small animals as rabbits and poultry. Some of the meal in refined form has been used in breakfast foods for humans and experiments have been made to add carotene extraction to tonics and candy.

Fruit should be fully grown, well colored, but not overripe for good storage.

Production of crimson clover seed this year is expected to be about twice as large as the previous crop record of 1941.

By taking good care of eggs on the farm, especially during the summer months, poultrymen will get better returns for their product.

THINGS for YOU TO MAKE

DOUBLE WEDDING RING—be-loved quilt of many generations—returns in all its traditional beauty. This new pattern gives accurate cutting guide for segments containing either six or eight pieces, so you have your choice of working with small pieces or ones which are a bit larger.

The quilt size is the same in either case—an ample 96 by 96. Turn spare moments into useful moments by piecing the Double Wedding Ring; pieces, plain color and white or a pastel are required. The pattern No. 23131 is 15 cents. Send your order to:

Two Towns Are One

Nogales, Arizona, and Nogales, Sonora, Mexico, are two towns geographically, but only one physically, says Collier's. The international boundary line, which runs down the middle of their one common main street, is marked by a barbed-wire fence. Internationalism is so strong that the inhabitants celebrate all American and Mexican holidays.

Mary Lee Taylor's Lunch Box Sandwich
Broadcast August 6

2 1/2 cups peas and carrots, freshly cooked or canned (No. 2 can)
2 cups twice-ground beef chuck or shoulder (1 lb.)
1/2 cup rolled oats, quick cooking
1 cup Fat Milk
6 tablespoons Sauter's cat onion
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper

Turn on oven and set at moderately slow (350° F.). Grease a loaf pan about 9 x 5 x 3 inches deep. Drain peas and carrots. Save liquid to use in sauce or soup. Put vegetables in bowl with ground beef, rolled oats, milk, onion, salt and pepper. Mix well, but do not mash vegetables. Press mixture in greased pan with back of spoon. Bake about 1 hour, or until firm. Turn out, cool and cut into 1/4-inch slices. Spread meat with catsup if desired. Sufficient for making 9 large sandwiches, using 2 slices for each.

Dual System of School Accrediting

The schools of the United States have two systems in general use of accrediting, one is to be a State Accredited School and the other is a system which gives the school a National rating.

There are at the present five National Accrediting Systems, The New England, The Middle West, The Southern, The Northwest and the North Central Association. The N.C.A. cover eighteen of the forty-eight states, while the other four have the thirty left divided among the associations.

The schools that are members of one of the above associations number far less than the number of recognized high schools of the state, in New Mexico where some one hundred fifty State Accredited schools, with one hundred schools that have a full four year course. The number of schools that were of the N.C.A. last year were forty in number. The schools that are State accredited enter any of the Institutions of Higher Learning in New Mexico, on graduation just the same as the graduates from the schools that belong to both associations. The difference being in that graduates going out of the State to schools may be asked to take entrance examinations before they will be entered in colleges or universities of other states.

School credits made in Carrizozo high school will be accepted by any high school in the State or other States. Graduates of this high school will be admitted without examination to any University, A. & M. College, or Teacher's College in the State.

This school by being dropped from the North Central only lost one and not both of the Accrediting it had, and the State credit is still good, and as the majority of schools in the State had only one, it is at least still recognized fully by all the State Institutions.

The first aim of all connected with the school is to get it restored to the N. C. A. at the earliest possible time.
