WAR ON ALL FRONTS

A SERIES OF SPECIAL ARTICLES BY THE LEADING WAR CORRESPONDENTS

Fifth Column in Argentina

By Herbert M. Clark

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with American Magazine)

Members of a powerful Axis organization, which is bustling today in Argentina, have a plan of South American conquest. They are working to carry out by infiltration, by arming a militant fifth column, by propaganda, by sabotage, by espionage.

The only reason they are getting away with it is that Argentina, unlike other South American republics, has not broken off relations with the totalitarians, nor done anything effective to curb the activities of totalitarian agents.

Other South American nations have driven Axis agents underground and cut their communications with Berlin. But in Argentina the agents find it easy to cable or telephone from Buenos Aires to Tokyo, Berlin, Madrid, or Rome. So Argentina today is even more vital to Axis plans than when Hitler first drafted those plans.

In fact, that sharply pointed southern tip of South America which is Argentina has become a dagger aimed at the heart of the Americas. It is our greatest danger point in South America.

Militant Hitlerism.
Here the Nazis already have a military organization numbering about 65,000 Japanese and other Axis nationals, together with Argentine sympathizers, would swell this "army" to more than 100,000—greater than the entire Argentine army, which numbers less than 90,000.

This Nazi army is a camouflaged and hidden army. Its members, who have sworn allegiance to Der Fuehrer, are found in sports and social clubs, singing societies and charity organizations. Behind these false fronts, selected Nazi leaders have brought drill and organization and equipment to such perfection that the entire force could be mobilized within one hour by calling out motorized messengers.

This army is equipped with arms. Government raids are infrequent, and only a handful have been successful. But the few caches discovered have yielded hundreds of rifles, automatic rifles, and light and heavy machine guns, together with thousands of rounds of ammunition and crates of hand grenades, some produced locally in German metal shops and chemical plants.

Command was vested in Gen. Gunther Niedenfur, military attaché to the Nazi embassy in Argentina. He is out of action now, however, for he was also accredited to Brazil, and was in Rio when the Vargas government severed relations with the totalitarians and set in motion the machinery which in April deported all Axis diplomatic personnel.

Strongly Organized.
I have not been able to identify Niedenfur's successor, but I know he left behind a general staff drawn from other military and naval attaches from friendly elements in local armed forces and from officers, especially of the German and Japanese army and navy, who have "retired to South America," and who now turn up on coasts and farm laborers, business men and dentists, tradesmen and sailors, and even priests.

Such is the Nazi strength, as compared with Argentina's defenses, that a returned Argentine general, Ramon Molina, stated: "In case of invasion, Argentina would beyond doubt be forced to capitulate in a very few days."

Local Leadership.
The people of Argentina would bring this Nazi fifth column to a dead stop if they could. But their government stands in the way. At least 25 per cent of the 13,000,000 people are actively opposed to the totalitarians. Unfortunately, the remaining 15 per cent, including the Nazis and the "nationalists," includes a disproportionate number of government officials.

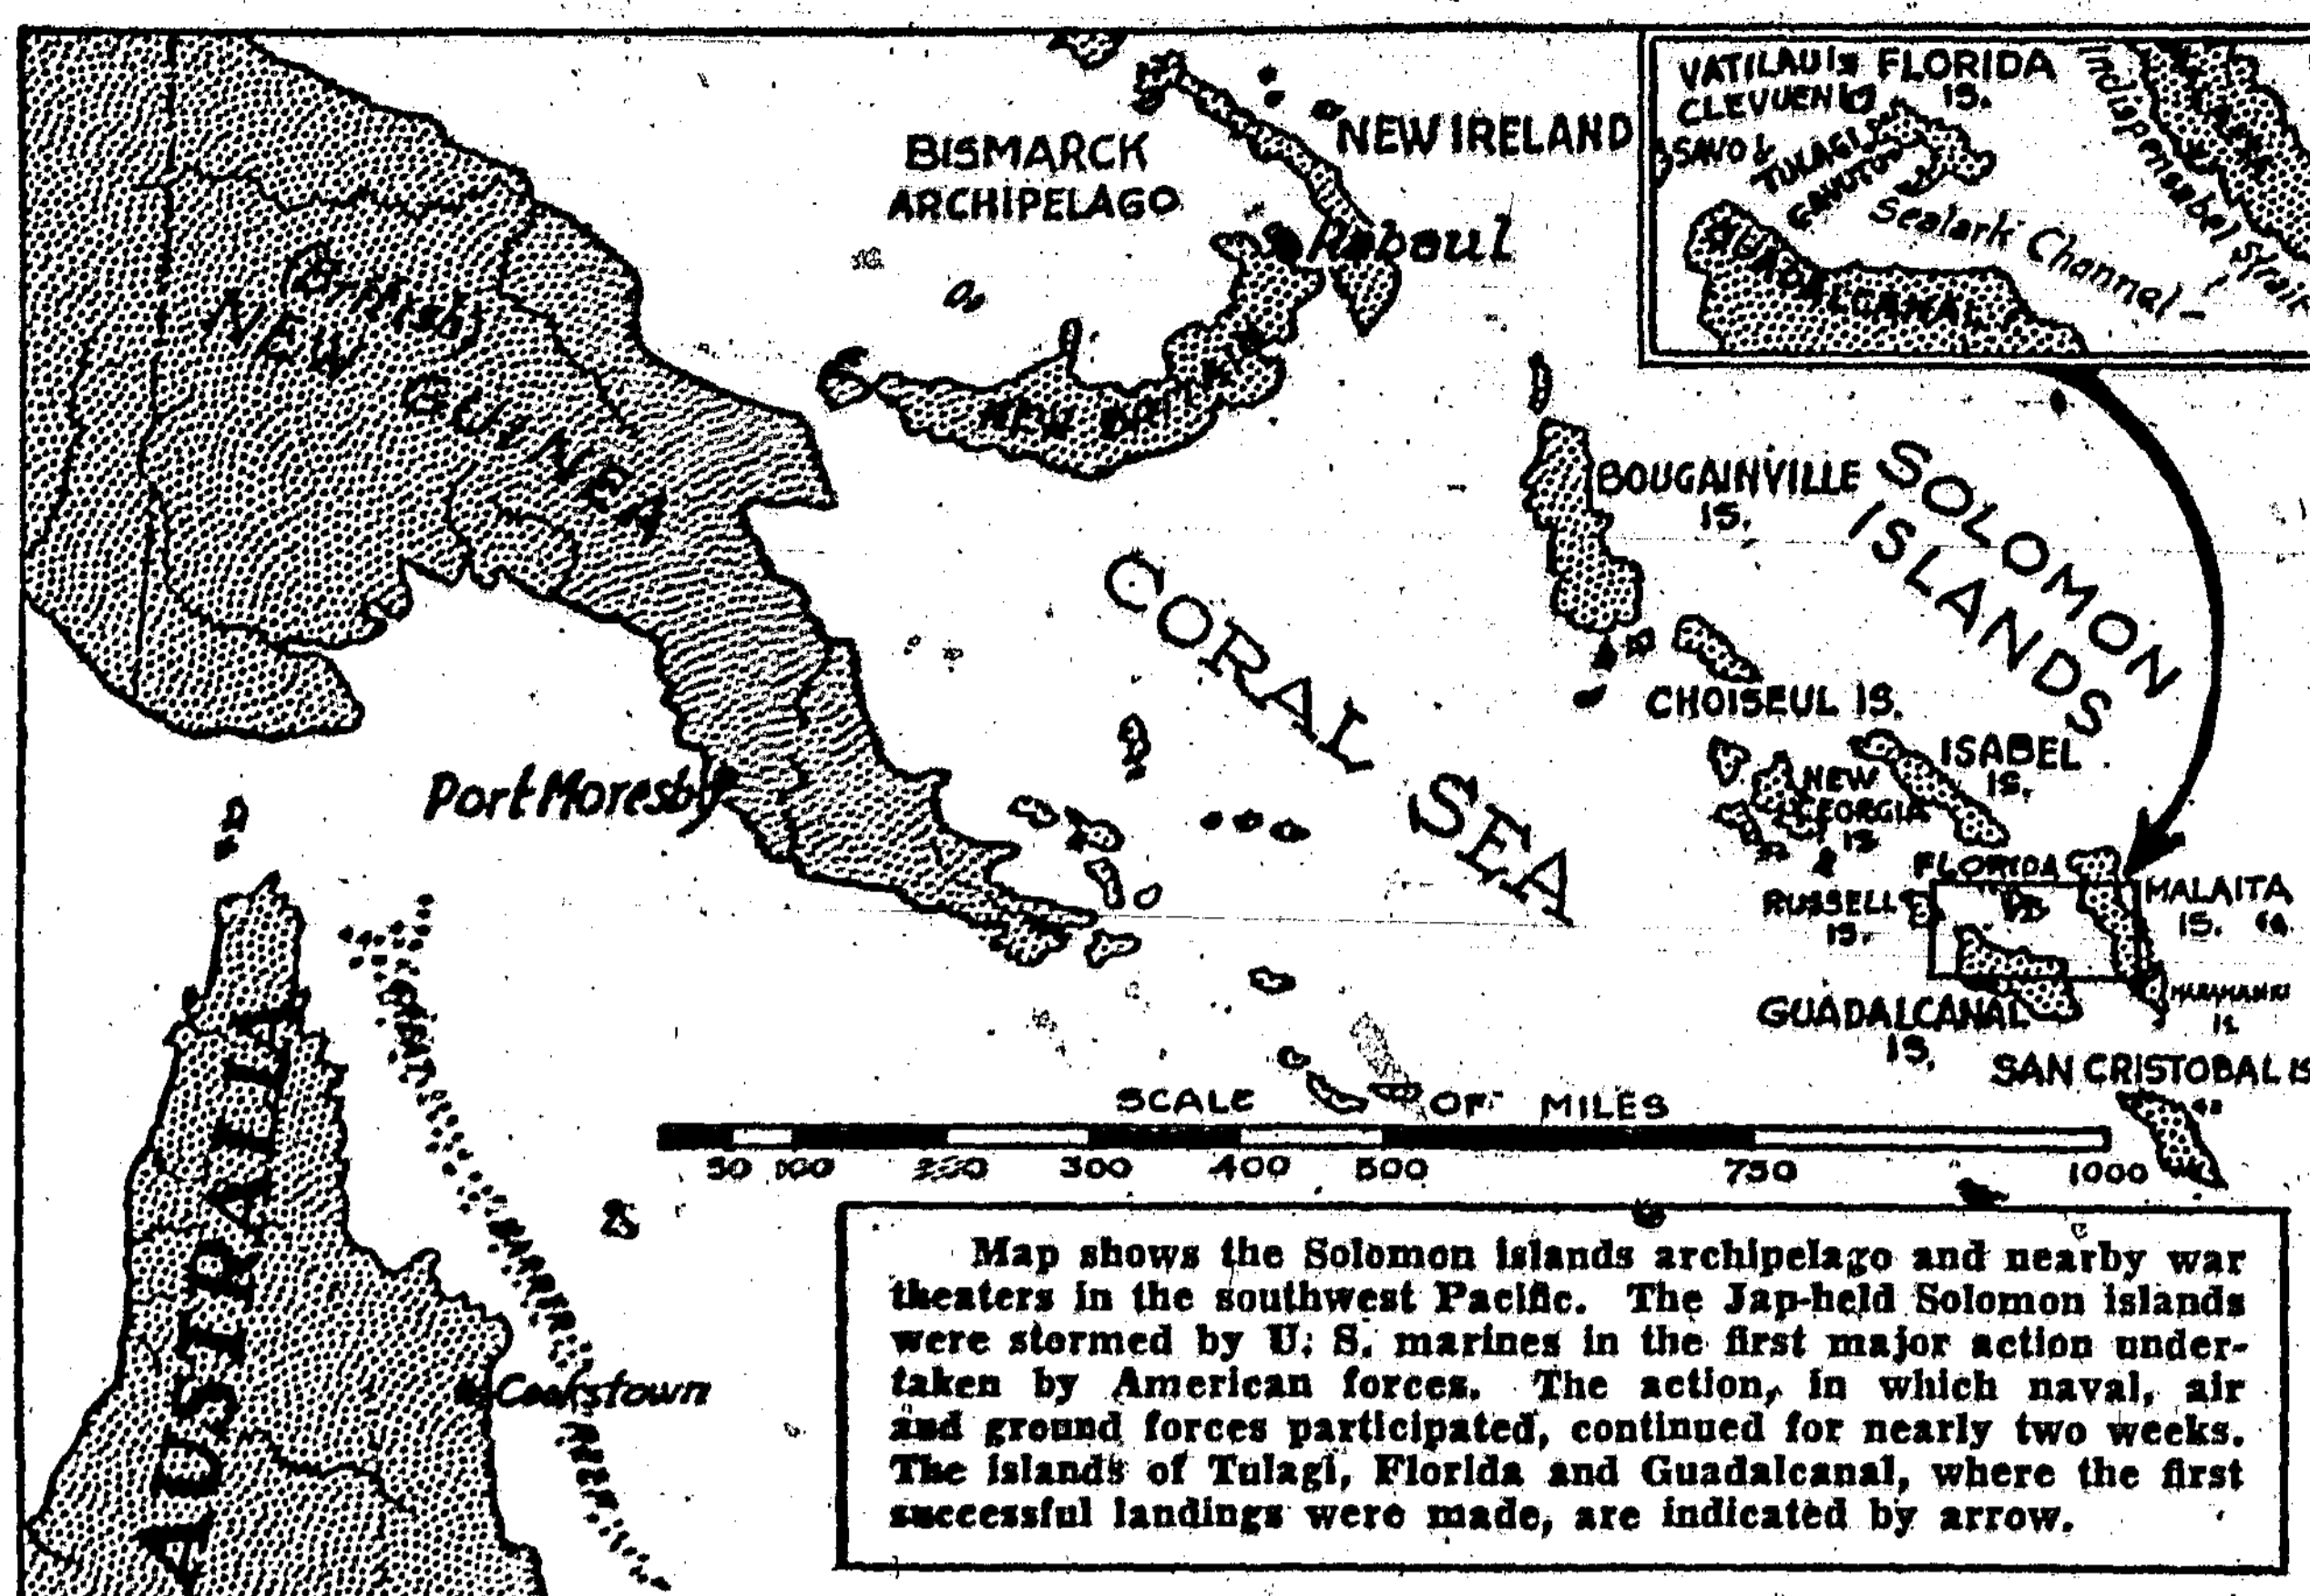

Acting President Ramon Castillo is not pro-Nazi. But he is conservative, even reactionary, and his administration has certainly not been anti-Nazi. Each government department has its clique, small but effective, of men who are pro-Nazi and who occupy key positions.

The official policy, based on denial that any danger exists, is one of indifference, which lets the Germans and their Axis and Argentine colleagues go right on working.

The people of Argentina, however, are determined to fight any attempt to install a totalitarian regime, whether by internal uprising or invasion, or both together.

The Nazis, in their plans for invasion, expect assistance from at least parts of Argentina's armed forces. By the admission of their own officers, these forces would not offer much resistance.

Solomon Islands—here Japs Were Driven Out

Map shows the Solomon Islands archipelago and nearby war theaters in the southwest Pacific. The Jap-held Solomon Islands were stormed by U. S. Marines in the first major action undertaken by American forces. The action, in which naval, air and ground forces participated, continued for nearly two weeks. The islands of Tulagi, Florida and Guadalcanal, where the first successful landings were made, are indicated by arrow.

Gun Girls of the RAF Are Doing Grand Job

A notable organization in Britain is the Women's Auxiliary Air Force service, which is attached to the Royal Air Force. They do all kinds of jobs short of piloting combat ships in action. Shown above (left) two WAAF girls load machine gun bullets into magazines that are installed in the planes. Center: Repairing a gun turret demanded from a bomber. Right: Girls of the RAF armory—angels of death—never give a thought to the grim implications of their job as they service the machine guns and cannons used in the daily fights over the English channel and France.

Trains for Double Revenge on Japs

C. K. Baker of St. Louis, machinist's mate first class (left), learns to use a Tommy-gun at a Seabee base near Norfolk, Va., from which point he will soon depart to seek revenge for the death of two sons in the Pacific. One was killed with the army when Manila fell. The other is missing from the aircraft carrier Lexington, which went down in the Coral sea.

'Jungle Mudders' in Caribbean Outpost

This picture shows one of the phases in the life of U. S. troops stationed in the deep jungles of the Caribbean area. Stopping "out of character," these coast artillery "jungle mudders" now adopt the weapons and methods of the infantryman, and are seen here charging through knee-deep mud. They take to mud and swampy terrain like ducks to water.

Plans 'Ranger' Raids

Lieut. Douglas Fairbanks, one of the American officers who have been serving as planners and advisers on the staff of Lord Mountbatten, head of Britain's Commandos troops. U. S. special volunteer troops of the "Ranger" battalion operated with British and Canadian Commandos in the big raid on Dieppe, a French coastal port.

Riveting Champ

Pictured at work here is Carl Simeon of the Los Angeles Shipbuilding company, who set what is believed to be a record by driving 1,346 7/8-inch rivets in an eight-hour working day.

Lights of New York

by L. L. STEVENSON

Subway Types; An ancient Chinese, wearing American clothes yet with his arms disappearing into the sleeves of his coat, his seamed countenance absolutely immobile and his bright, black eyes staring straight ahead. . . . A thin-faced man, with the corners of his mouth drawn down so sharply it makes him look as though he had taken a drink of vinegar before he boarded the train, staring at fellow passengers and then burying his face in a newspaper. . . . Three women, no longer young, yet all chewing gum vigorously as any school girl, their wagging jaws keeping time with the pounding of a flat wheel. . . . Six slim young sailors clinging to straps and one reading the ads aloud while others make comments that cause all to burst into laughter. . . . A drunk, surrounded by a strong stink of alcohol, sleeping in a car corner with his coat pockets turned inside out.

A thin, young priest, his hat pushed back from his high, white forehead, studying earnestly a small black book with gilt-edged pages. . . . A fat woman, her arms full of newspaper-wrapped bundles, slumping into a space not large enough for one one-quarter her size, and the man on either side jumping to his feet hastily. . . . A messenger boy with a floral horseshoe, almost as large as himself, hard put to protect his freight from the non-observing passers-by in the aisle. . . . A whiskered rabbi, his eyes moving from right to left, deeply engrossed in the inside pages of a Yiddish newspaper.

A poorly dressed woman with curiously gnarled and red hands which look as though they were not unaccustomed to a scrubbing brush, picking up a discarded newspaper and hurriedly turning to the society pages. . . . A guard, with a 30-block interval between stations, resting his tired feet by sinking into an empty seat. . . . An immaculate policeman, apparently just about to go on duty, looking the car over with professional curiosity before resting his broad back against an iron stanchion. . . . A woman discussing the sugar situation with her seat mate, her voice so penetrating that her words are clearly audible above the pound of wheels and all the assorted noises associated with a subway train moving at high speed through the long, dark hole in the ground.

A white-faced woman furtively wiping her eyes with a handkerchief and then, as a sob escapes her, hastily opening her hand bag and apparently busying herself with repairs to her make-up. . . . Musicians, evidently bound for rehearsal, holding various instruments, from fiddles to saxophones, in their arms as tenderly as if they were babies. . . . A woman with a funny little hair straggle down the center of her forehead ("When she was good, she was very, very good—") so interested in watching a hand-holding boy and girl that she is unaware of the fact that her hand bag is open and some bills are exposed to the gaze of all who care to look.

A graying mail carrier tenderly rubbing his ankles, then settling back and pawing through his big leather pouch. . . . A member of the fire department, his silver buttons dull and his shoes unshined, carrying with him an odor of smoke. . . . A mother trying to quiet a crying baby by holding it over her shoulder and patting its three-cornered pants. . . . A subway track walker, his overalls grease-spattered and his face grimy, placing two ill-smelling lanterns on the car platform, then hauling out a box and taking a pinch of snuff. . . . A major of artillery and a major of infantry having some kind of a low-voiced conference.

Three darkly pretty girls chattering in Spanish, their conversation occasionally interrupted by discreet giggles. . . . Two older women, of the house frau type, starting to converse in German, then looking about them and resuming in broken English. . . . A woman with a face like a Madonna, messing her baby to her and tenderly kissing its little, pink ears. . . . Whenever I ride underground, I wish I were a sketch artist.

In my ears as I write this, is the shrill of the whistles of Times Square traffic cops. Through the window I can see the tower of the Empire State building. But in my ears also is the gentle song of the old Scoto as it slipped over the rifles and before my eyes is a great old tree, scarred by lightning, leaning out over brown waters. Oh for the old days!

Worker Makes $46, Puts $37 in Bonds

VANCOUVER, WASH. — War bond records at the Kaiser Shipyard showed one worker whose salary was $46.15 had signed for $37.50 worth of bonds each week. "If I'd gotten into the army I'd be making 21 bucks a month. This way I've got 34 a month left. Besides, I had a kid brother on Bataan."

New and Unusual Pillow Slip Motifs

BEAUTY comes to the linen closet in fascinating pairs when pillow slips are embroidered with these new motifs. At top, there is a picture treatment, unusual and interesting. Next—a scalloped band of dainty flowers in all white is effectively relieved by pastel center flowers. For the third pair, the perennial butterfly emerges in a new and lovely design; lastly, pots of tulips furnish distinctive embroidery in cross stitch.

You'll agree there is beauty in all four designs, and you'll be glad to know they are all on one usable-several-times transfer—29344, 15 cents. Send your order to:

Rain Tells the Time

We use watches and clocks to tell the time, but in Para, Brazil, they rely on rain to check the hours. It rains so regularly in short, heavy showers that people make appointments "after the third shower," or "the fifth shower," and so on.

Many countries have weather fads. In parts of China, instead of wearing one thick coat when the weather gets cold, they add thin silk coats. So, instead of saying that the day is chilly, a man will say that it is a "three-coat day," and if it is very severe, he will probably call it a "seven-coat day."

To Relieve MONTHLY FEMALE PAIN

If you suffer monthly cramps, backache, nervousness, distress of "irregularities"—due to functional monthly disturbances—try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once! Pinkham's Compound is one medicine you can buy today made especially for women.

Thanks for Living
No man is in true health who can not stand in the free air of heaven, with his feet on God's free turf, and thank his Creator for the simple luxury of physical existence.—T. W. Higginson.

Kidneys Must Work Well—

For You To Feel Well
24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.
If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus acids, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.
Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer aching backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at night to urinate.
Why not try Doan's Kidney Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulates the function of the kidneys and helps them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

BUREAU OF STANDARDS

• A BUSINESS organization which wants to get the most for the money sets up standards by which to judge what is offered to it, just as in Washington the government maintains a Bureau of Standards.

"You can have your own Bureau of Standards, too. Just consult the advertising columns of your newspaper. They safeguard your purchasing power every day of every year."

Spy Trial

WHEN President Roosevelt, as commander-in-chief of the army and navy, appointed a military commission, headed by Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy, to try the eight German saboteurs landed on American soil from submarines, he was following a precedent established just 80 years ago.

The term "court martial" is a familiar one in military history and in other nations it had the power to try all forms of offenses in war time. But in the United States the power of a court martial was limited to the trial of offenses by members of the armed forces.

The commission appointed by President Lincoln was made up of only two men, both New Yorkers. One was a leading member of the legal profession in that state, Judge Edwards Pierrepont, who later became attorney-general in President Grant's cabinet.

Edwards Pierrepont

John A. Dix, who had had a varied career. He had been an officer in the army during the War of 1812, held several state offices in New York and served for a brief time as secretary of the treasury under President Buchanan.

While Dix was commanding at Fort Monroe, he was recalled to Washington to serve with Judge Pierrepont on President Lincoln's military commission. Its duties were to examine prisoners who had been arrested for various offenses and determine whether they should be released, held in prison or civil charges or turned over to the military authorities.

One of the first cases Pierrepont and Dix were called upon to try was that of a Washington society leader, Mrs. Rose Greenhow, the handsome young widow of a Virginian. She was a relative of Mrs. Stephen A. Douglas and lived in a mansion across Lafayette park from the White House.

Soon afterwards she was arrested by Allen Pinkerton, head of the Union army secret service, held a prisoner in her own home and then removed to the Old Capitol, a brick building which was used as a jail for political prisoners in 1861.

She declared that "this is a mimic kind of court," she parried all the queries of the commissioners and asked them as many questions as they asked her. Finally she intimated that if they really wanted her to talk freely she would give them information which would be highly embarrassing to many high officials in Washington.

Perhaps the most famous military commission of this kind was the one appointed in 1865 by President Andrew Johnson to try the fellow-conspirators of J. Wilkes Booth after the assassination of Lincoln. Presided over by Maj. Gen. David Hunter, it was composed of Generals A. P. Howe, James A. Ekin, Robert S. Foster, T. M. Harris, Lew Wallace, A. V. Kautz and Henry L. Burnett; Colonels D. R. Clendenin and C. H. Tompkins and two federal judges, John A. Bingham and Joseph Holt, the latter serving as judge advocate for the government.

Agree to Disagree

By R. RAY BAKER

McChure Syndicate—WNU Features.

"DO YOU think we were made for each other, Fred?"

Fred Hamilton's lip curled in scorn.

"Hardly. I have never thought so—except back in our school days when I used to carry your books and share my jaw-breakers with you."

"Then why carry on this farce any longer? It's making us both miserable. We don't love each other; in fact, it's quite the reverse. For one thing, you're terribly selfish, and there are other things about you that I don't like."

"Thanks for the compliment," he said dryly. "Perhaps I am selfish, but remember I am an only child. To be frank, I have much the same opinion about you."

She lifted the vase and inhaled the fragrance from the flowers.

"Thanks for the compliment," she mocked. "Perhaps I also am selfish, but remember I, too, am an only child. It's nice to have an understanding, isn't it? It appears to be mutually agreeable for us to disagree."

"Decidedly," he acquiesced. "It was foolish for us to become engaged in the first place."

"We wouldn't have," she reminded Fred. "If it had not been for our parents. Just because they had all been friends they tried to settle our destiny for us."

When Fred left the apartment occupied by Eva and her aunt he was not in the best spirits imaginable. He was as glad to be free of Eva as she was to get rid of him, but that remark about selfishness rankled.

He had been driving abstractedly, when a sudden cry distracted him. A big touring car ahead had come quickly to a halt, but as abruptly it started off and disappeared. Jamming on the brakes, Fred managed to avoid striking a small, huddled human form on the street.

He looked with a feeling of curiosity for a moment. It was no concern of his, was his thought, until suddenly the trend of his recent recollection flashed back to his mind. "You're terribly selfish," were the words that echoed in his ears, and they prompted him to leave the car and join the group.

A man held the limp form in his arms. Fred recognized the pale face as that of a diminutive newsboy familiar to this busy corner.

"Poor kid," said the man. "That big car hit him and hurried away. What had I better do with him?"

"Take him to Doctor Wilson's office across the street," Fred directed.

"He will get along all right," said the doctor, "but he ought to be taken home at once."

The boy looked up wildly. "No-No!" he exclaimed, in a plaintive little voice. "I can't go, I haven't sold my papers—my papers! Where are they?"

"That's all right," said Fred. "Come on with me and I'll take you home. I have the money for your papers right here. You see, I—I sold them for you."

The lad lived with his father in a hovel in the worst part of the city. The father was an invalid.

"You are very good to us," said the father on the occasion of one of Fred's visits.

"And I like you best of anybody in the world," Little Jim told Fred, "except daddy and one other."

Came a day when Fred called to find Little Jim in tears. His father had suffered another stroke.

The sick man smiled sadly and raised his eyes appealingly to Fred. Then he uttered a deep sigh and lay back, closing his eyes. Little Jim's father had gone to a place where there are no invalids.

A little later Fred took the orphan in his arms and carried him away.

The door at the foot of the stairs opened and a young woman started up the flight. Fred stepped aside with his burden to let her pass, but she came to a stop.

"What has happened?" inquired the voice of Eva Marlow. "And where are you taking my Little Jim? Why, it's—is that you, Fred?"

"It is," he said calmly but somewhat aggressively, "and I'm taking him home because his father is dead. And what do you mean by 'my Little Jim'?"

She appeared indignant.

"Why, I've been coming to see these people for some time. It started by your calling me selfish. That very day I came into this district to see if I could discover a way to become unselfish, and I found Little Jim and his father. I love the little fellow, and I am going to take him home with me."

Little Jim smiled through his tears.

He reached out with one arm and encircled the girl's neck, while the other clung to Fred. It brought the two very close together.

"Eva," said Fred, clearing his throat, "I don't believe I dislike you after all. You are not selfish, and after all, our parents' wishes—"

"Yes," she agreed, "our parents' wishes—"

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D. Of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for September 6

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

THE ALCOHOL PROBLEM: PAST AND PRESENT

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 13:13; 19:23-25; Deuteronomy 32:1-33; Amos 6:1-7. GOLDEN TEXT—The way of the ungodly shall perish.—Psalm 1:4.

The necessity for using to the limit every resource—man power and material—in this time of national crisis should make every American doubly alert to the devastation and loss which has come (and is coming in increasing measure) to us as a result of the sale of intoxicants.

This is no time (nor was there ever a time) when "men should put their enemy in their mouths to steal away their brains; that we should with joy, pleasure, revel and applause transform ourselves into beasts! To be now a sensible man, by and by a fool, and presently a beast!" (Shakespeare).

Christians—and especially Sunday school teachers—should use this lesson to drive home anew the great lesson of moral accountability, of the importance of man's choice of a way of life, and the certainty of judgment.

I. Man is Morally Responsible (Gen. 13:13; 19:23-25).

Life is not just a careless drifting from day to day, from pleasure to pleasure, from sin to sin. Man was created in the likeness and image of God, which means that he is a personal being, knowing right from wrong and possessing the power of choice. Sodom and Gomorrah drew upon themselves the judgment of God because of their determination to persist in horrible wickedness. What happened to those cities, terrible as it was, is but a prophecy of even greater judgment to come (Luke 10:10-12).

If man chooses to do right, he may count on all the resources of the omnipotent God to uphold him. But if he chooses to go in the way of sin, he must look forward to the judgment of God. It is important to remember that

II. He Chooses His Own Way of Life (Deut. 32:31-33).

Moses contrasts the Rock—Jehovah—in whom his people trusted, and the corrupt standards of their heathen neighbors, of Sodom and Gomorrah; but note it well, each one made his own choice.

One greater than Moses, our Lord Himself (Matt. 7:13, 14), spoke of the two ways, and noted with sadness that many go down the broad road to destruction and but few walk in the narrow way of life.

It is a vital matter that we teach our boys and girls the great and noble spiritual standards of Christianity; bring into their lives the power of God through faith in Christ that they may choose well for themselves and be able to lead a bewildered war-shocked world in the right way.

The need of humanity is great now, but it will be even greater in a post-war world of broken homes, broken lives and broken hearts. We must be ready to minister in the name of Christ.

III. Neglect and Ignorance Are No Excuse (Amos 6:1-7).

Surprise attack is always doubly effective. "Remember Pearl Harbor." Yes, and remember man's defeat in spiritual things.

Satan would like to lull us to sleep with the assurance that all is well. The heart of man is prone to cherish optimistic thoughts; to magnify that which encourages him to take his ease; to keep away the fear of reality by sweet music, good food, and flowing bowl of wine.

The people of Amos' day, to whom this message was given, had come to the point where prosperity had made them at ease, when they should have been actively alert; foolishly serene, when they should have been vigilant and ready for battle.

Who can say that the same is not in all too large a measure true of the people of our own beloved America. Many elements enter into that dangerous situation, but not the least of them is our increasing use of intoxicants. It may shock some to learn that the per capita use of alcoholic beverages has increased greatly throughout the country. The appalling fact is that the city of Washington, D. C., which should in these days set an example of sobriety and sanity, has led the nation in the increase of the use of strong drink.

That way is the way of captivity (v. 7) unless we repent—and that right soon. America needs to awaken to the dangers which threaten its precious liberty—and, we repeat, the liquor question is not the least of these problems. We must win a victory over it soon, or we may find that it has won the victory over us—which may God in His mercy forbid!

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

AT NINE O'CLOCK on the night of Tuesday, September 1, every theater in the land is expected to stop its program and stage a "Salute to Our Heroes"; it's planned as one of the features of the treasury's billion-dollar war bond and stamp drive. Patriotic airs will be played as a color guard marches down the aisle, a one-minute speech will be made, the audience will give three cheers and then sing the national anthem. If every movie theater is filled, 11,000,000 people will participate.

Bobby Breen, once famous as a child singing star, who retired from the screen in 1939 at the age of 13, is coming back to it. In Republic's "Johnny Doughboy" he will play himself, a passe movie star, appearing with Jane Withers and Patrick Brook.

During the past year Ginny Simms has been working for RKO, under the usual six-month contract, with options. There's been no big publicity build-up. But recently she sung as the singing mistress of ceremonies for the new "Johnny Presents" radio show, starting September 8—immediately she was cast for three important films, and two other studios that wanted to borrow her were refused!

Orson Welles has given us another superb picture; "The Magnificent Ambersons" rates right along with "Citizen Kane." He makes a story really come to life. And he has done us all a service in bringing Dolores Costello back to the screen.

Dorothy Lamour has a brand-new makeup for "White Cargo," but it sounds like one of those things that one would rather do without. She wears five successive layers of a fluid foundation that combines cream with powder; each is applied all over her body with a sponge and allowed to dry before the next is applied. Then she's sprayed with a film containing gold dust!

"The War Against Mrs. Hadley" has been selected by the Kate Smith radio hour for a nation-wide salute on September 25. It features Edward Arnold, Fay Bainter, Spring Byington, Richard Ney, Jean Rogers and Van Johnson. Quite a way to launch a picture, as the Kate Smith hour is broadcast over 104 stations, and is said to attract more than 30,000,000 listeners.

Susan Hayward can thank her stars that she's a good screamer. Few actresses can scream convincingly, but Susan let out such a good yelp when testing for "Reap the Wild Wind" that C. E. DeMille promptly signed her up for the second feminine lead. As a result of her performance, those in the know are predicting stardom for the pretty little redhead within a year.

Joan Davis can thank broadcast-ing for furthering her movie career. Though she's such a clever comedienne, her roles just seemed to be getting smaller and smaller. Then Rudy Vallee asked her to guest star on his program a few times, and she was such a hit that he made her a regular. Whereupon the film studios began to wake up to what they'd been missing, and she's in demand once more.

Lesley Woods, who stars in Columbia's "Joyce Jordan" every afternoon, likes to remember when she and Tyrone Power were on the payroll of the Motion Picture Exhibit at the Century of Progress Exposition in 1938. She says they stood around and tried to look like movie stars and ate ham sandwiches.

ODDS AND ENDS—When Jacqueline White reported on the set of "Skyway to Glory" she was handed a telegram wishing her good luck, signed "Uncle Frank"—meaning Frank Knox, secretary of the navy. Dave Riman, the "Hobby Lobby" man of radio, has been so busy that he hasn't been able to catch up with his own hobby. For months, he's a stamp collector. Mayor Davis leads a committee of handicrafters to collect musical instruments for American prisoners of war—the Y. M. C. A. will distribute them. William Powell and Hedy Lamour teamed so well in "Crossroads" that they'll be starred in "Starlight," a story of marital complications.

PATTERNS SEWING CIRCLE

1629-B

WHAT will look prettier or fresher on the summer landscape than you in this trim, slim "two-piece" made up in a cool linen, a rayon weave or a crisp cotton? Pattern No. 1629-B presents that all-time love, the dress which looks like a suit, in a spick-and-span tailored version. Brisk turn-down collar and lapels, patch pockets and darts at the waist give the top a precisely tailored air; the skirt has front and back pleats which give it good walking fullness while it maintains the slim silhouette wanted today.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1629-B is designed for sizes 11, 13, 15, 17 and 19. Corresponding bust measurements 31, 33, 35 and 37. Size 13 (31) with short sleeves requires 4 1/2 yards 33-inch material.

BANKS AND THE WAR

"A vital force for VICTORY"

A newspaper editorial recently stated: "In this war banks are doing more than provide financial services—they are a vital force for VICTORY." The nation's banks ARE doing much to help win the war. They aid in financing, in war production, in keeping the economic machine running and other ways. Banks ask for no praise or special credit. We are proud to be of help and anxious to be still MORE helpful in the future.

The above map of New Mexico shows the War Bond quotas, by counties, for the month of July, 1942. Total War Bond quota for the state is $1,771,000. With the National quota total placed at a billion dollars, the nation goes into high gear in its support of the War Financing and to give our fighting forces adequate implemments of war which will bring ultimate Victory.

American Soldiers, Sailors, Marines and Airmen are on every front. They are giving 100 percent for their country. What are we doing here on the home front? Are we lending at least ten percent of income to help them? It's very little. But to fight this war successfully our country needs a billion dollars in War Bonds every month from us—the People. WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Brazil's Declaration of War on Axis Aids Western Hemisphere Solidarity; 'Largest' U. S. Convoy Reaches Britain; Marines Score Again in Pacific Drive

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.) Released by Western Newspaper Union.

U. S. fliers in London celebrate after the first raid on Hitler's European arsenal. Target of the first raid was Rouen, France, which was left in flames. Center: Holding the wire from the first bomb dropped by a Flying Fortress is Capt. William Musselwhite of Jackson, Miss.

LARGEST CONVOY: Arrives in England

Shape of things to come in Europe was clearly etched by the announcement that the largest U. S. troop convoy ever attempted in this war had landed safely in Great Britain.

Included in the convoy were "many thousands" of soldiers and airmen plus vast quantities of war materials. Troops were swiftly disembarked and scattered to the interior of England, there to join other units already in training for the attack on German held Europe.

MORE ACTION: In the Pacific

As U. S. forces were continuing their mopping up activities in the Solomon Islands word from another sector of the Pacific indicated that the marines had done it again. This time it was the Gilbert Islands that felt the power of a marine detachment as it smashed a Jap seaplane base, radio installations and stores on the island of Makin, island in the Gilbert group.

Caught entirely by surprise, the Japs were so confused that bombers from other bases actually destroyed their Jap planes on the ground.

Meanwhile all was not quiet in the Solomons, scene of the earlier and more extensive action by the U. S. forces. Here the marines were busy cleaning out the Japs that retreated to the hills after initial successes were scored by the American attackers.

Trouble for the marines came from another source but an official communique from Pearl Harbor revealed that it had been treated with typical marine thoroughness. This was a night attack by fast boats of 700 Japs who stormed the marine-held positions from the sea.

WAR PRODUCTION: An Important Date Straight from the source that should know—the War Production board—the nation learned how it was doing in the battle of the assembly lines.

Such production also now has a date objective. Nelson said that U. S. war production is being planned to provide the maximum impact on the enemy by July 1, 1943. This does not mean that our offensive will necessarily reach its peak by that date but this is the definite strategic goal of production and all production will be gauged by the one question: "How much will it contribute to the war effort by July 1, 1943?"

ELECTRIC POWER: Less for Civilians

In a move to readjust its wartime power expansion program the War Production board has halted or suspended work on 24 public and private power projects. In addition, the WPB assigned such low priority ratings to 28 federal projects that completion probably will be postponed until after the war, unless new demands arise. The WPB said that "civilian inconvenience and sacrifice must be expected."

ALLOTMENT: Speed-Up

Dependents of enlisted men in the U. S. armed forces will be getting their allotments earlier than November 1 under the terms of a bill passed by congress and now signed by the President.

After the President had affixed his signature the navy said it would issue such allotment checks "very soon" and the army announced that their payments would start early in September.

Originally these payments would have started November 1, although applications filed early would be retroactive to June 1. Basic payment to dependents is $50 per month, servicemen contributing $22 and the army or navy $28.

It could not be determined how many applications for such payments had been made to the army or navy. It was estimated however that about half the men in the service would have dependents receiving the allotments.

YOUR DRAFT STATUS: May Change Soon

Married men and men now deferred because they work in essential industry will be called in the draft in the not distant future. That was the statement of Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, national director of selective service, before a well-packed forum at a Chicago university.

In respect to men deferred because of war work, Gen. Hershey said: "You just can't go on deferring a man for work reasons alone if you can find an older man, a woman, or a physically handicapped person to take that man's place. It's going to be necessary to reclassify those 2A's and 2B's (war-work deferments) — and necessary means just that, necessary. Just because they are in war industry is no reason for permanent deferment. The industrialists will simply have to train substitutes."

He was also asked about the prospects for 3A's—deferred because of dependents. "The first in order are the so-called "grandmother cases," the men with second-class dependents—grandparents, mothers, brothers, step-brothers and so on. I think they're under the light right now. As sure as September 1 comes around—well, obviously, those fellows are next.

"And the men with wives only are just as obviously next after that. Then would come the men with wives and children, and the question there seems to be what is the degree of dependency?"

COFFEE, OVERALLS: One Down; the Other Up

The possibilities of coffee rationing appeared more imminent with the government's order to restrict deliveries to dealers to 65 per cent of 'last year's deliveries as compared with the present monthly quota of 75 per cent.

The decrease in coffee deliveries was but one of several actions which will bring the war ever closer to Mr. and Mrs. John Public.

Increased employment has resulted in steps by the War Production board to make cotton looms turn out more rugged fabrics needed for serviceable work clothes.

The theater-going public may have reduced fare in the not so distant future. Operators of movie and stage theaters were warned by WPB that shortages of materials would make it increasingly difficult to keep all show houses open.

MISCELLANY:

COMMANDER: An ace of World War I, Brig. Gen. Clayton L. Bissell, was appointed commander of U. S. army air forces in China, Burma and India.

IMPROVED: Returning from an official tour of Alaska, Sen. Mon C. Wallgren of Washington announced himself "much improved by the improved military situation" in the Aleutians.

SUNK: American submarines, hammering at Japan's extended Pacific communication lines, sank four and damaged two more enemy ships. Two cargo ships and a large transport were sunk in the western Pacific. A large merchant ship was sunk off the Aleutians.

TEAM: Henry Kaiser, western shipbuilding wizard, and Howard Hughes, noted round-the-world flier, have announced they are joining in a program to build a fleet of 500 "flying freighters" to carry important war supplies to the fighting fronts in all parts of the world.

"YOU brought out an important point in connection with Carl Hubbell," writes Old Timer, "that I don't think you stressed enough. This was about Hubbell after 20 years of pitching, 15 years as a big leaguer, still trying to learn something new or something better.

"I always knew that Carl Hubbell was one of the smartest pitchers in baseball. This proves that he is even smarter than I thought he was. For the great majority, especially those who are above the average in skill, think they know most of it. They are no longer interested in learning something new and something better.

Carl Hubbell

human weakness. Too many think they know enough when no one knows much. Especially in these days no one knows nearly enough.

"What a fine thing it would be to have many more people adopting Carl Hubbell's method of still trying to learn after so many years at the top."

The Meager Minority

This happens to be 100 per cent true. We'll take the argument back to sport.

Those who happen to lack certain qualifications in the way of skill or knack, get discouraged too easily and give up.

They either lack the determination to keep trying or they fail to understand how much they might learn from others that would carry them out of the rut.

Many of those who happen to be rigged out with speed or skill or the winning knack take it for granted they are approaching the superman class and so need no further instruction or improvement.

There never was a human being who knew it all, or anything even approaching the ultimate.

You'll find that Cobb and Tilden were still experimenting, studying, working on new angles after more than twenty years of championship competition.

We could also name a number of others who stopped learning quickly and showed no particular improvement in later years.

They had nothing to learn from coaches or trainers.

Old timers were jokes. They already had the answers.

Sarazen Speaks

"One of the big thrills I've gotten out of golf," Gene Sarazen says, "is this—I've learned something every year I've played.

"I've found out that things I thought were important 20 years ago are not so important after all. I've found other things I payed little attention to meant a lot.

"Hagen was always a great guy in this respect. He was always trying to learn something that might improve his game. After he had been Open champion, I saw him one day taking a lesson, or at least friendly advice, from Harry Vardon on how to play a certain type of shot.

Walter never thought he knew it all, or any big part of it.

"I've tried to learn something that would help my play for the last ten or fifteen years. I thought as a kid I knew most of it.

"It was only when I began to find out how little I really knew that I started winning again after a lapse. You get a lot of foolish and useless advice. But here and there you can pick up something that will help a lot."

Walter Camp and Pudge

Years ago Walter Camp told me an interesting experience he had had with Pudge Heffelfinger, a football star who lasted over 30 years.

"Pudge was so good," Camp said, "that I was afraid he would be another know-it-all. In place of that he kept coming to me for more advice on guard play. I showed him three new variations. Later on he came back and told me he had learned four new angles. One of these was the possibility of the running guard. How many people know that Pudge Heffelfinger had worked out and developed the correct method of the running guard around 1900 or 1907?"

All I know is that as late as 1921 or 1922 Heffelfinger, then 53 years old, kept telling Bo McMillin, then 23, to speed up his start and give him a chance to lead that interference. Ask Bo.

"The more you know, the easier any game is," an old-time trainer said recently. "You can save yourself so much and last so much longer. You can often handle superior physical power and even greater natural skill by knowing more than your rival does. But this can only come from trying to learn everything you can as you go along.

THAT fine old National League custom of dusting off the opposition with a well-placed bean ball finally has drawn down the wrath of League President Ford Frick.

League officials were somewhat embarrassed recently when Larry MacPhail, the exceedingly loquacious president of the battling Brooklyn Dodgers, actually threatened an increasing usage of the skuller.

Aroused by a disgraceful bean ball duel indulged in by Whit Wyatt of the Dodgers and Manuel Salvo of the Braves, President Frick announced that future dusters would result in $200 fines for managers and separate action against offending pitchers.

MacPhail was equally aroused. Calling a meeting of his own ball players with press representatives in attendance, MacPhail declared that "if other pitchers throw at our players we'll toss right back at them—two for one. And I don't care what it costs. No $200 fine by Mr. Frick is going to stop us."

Four Vendettas

The Dodgers have been involved in four duster vendettas, with the Giants, Cardinals, Cubs and Braves. It was the latter game which resulted in Frick's ruling. He fined Wyatt $75 and Salvo $50.

MacPhail charged that the president's decision made it look as if the Dodgers were responsible for the bean ball hurling. He asked that Frick hold an open hearing on the senior circuit bean ball situation. In refusing his request, the league chief said:

"For the good of baseball, I don't want this discussion to be dragged before the public again, with accusations, charges, counter-charges, and who-started-it business. I believe the order to umpires that managers are to be fined $200 when, in their judgment, a pitcher has thrown a deliberate bean ball, is sufficient to handle the situation."

MacPhail's answer wasn't long in coming. "Let's put away the black whiskers and bring the thing out in public," he told Frick.

"Have the umpires read their report at an open meeting and find out who really started this bean ball stuff, I'm sick and tired of having the Dodgers branded as the culprits. I may not be in baseball more than a month (MacPhail is reportedly going into armed service) and while I'm still in it I'm going to find out who is to blame. I'm not trying to run the league but you can bet I'm going to keep after Frick to hold this meeting."

Punishment

The bean ball is an unusual commodity in the American league. There the punitive action consists of a $500 fine, immediate eviction from the game and a 10-day suspension.

MacPhail, evidently in a burst of self-sympathy, announced that the whole world is against Brooklyn. The Flatbush firecracker knows better than that. He knows the fans of the United States want to see the Dodgers repeat. They like their aggressive scrappiness. They want to see Mickey Owen redeem himself, and they want to see the mighty Yankees clouted from their throne.

End in Sight

But the fans want the bean-ball operation brought to a halt—and fast. The paying customer likes fighting ball players, but he doesn't like dirty ball players—nor managers who condone, even encourage, dirty tactics.

In spite of MacPhail's outburst, the new edict by Frick likely will bring an end to the duster. Two hundred dollars means no more to the average manager than his right arm, even though said fine would come from the club treasury.

If everything else fails—which isn't exactly impossible—then President Frick will be forced to follow the American league plan. That's almost a sure cure because very few pitchers become angry enough to toss $500 at the head of any batsman.

SPORT SHORTS

An engineer has designed a pitching machine that delivers the ball at a speed of 204 miles an hour.

When the Chicago Cubs were allowed to play poker, Bill Lee and Claude Passeau were co-champs.

At Simmon's will start work at the Willow Run bombing plant as soon as the current baseball season ends.

Ted McGraw, scout for the Dodgers, says that two Class C and two Class D Dodger farms have folded with their respective leagues due to the war.

We Can All Be EXPERT BUYERS

In bringing you buying information, as to prices that are being asked for what we intend to buy, and as to the quality we can expect, the advertising columns of this newspaper perform a worth while service which saves us many dollars a year.

It is a good habit to form, the habit of consulting the advertisements every time we make a purchase, though we have already decided just what we want and where we are going to buy it. It gives us the most priceless feeling in the world, the feeling of being adequately prepared.

When we go into a store, prepared beforehand with knowledge of what is offered and of what price, we go as an expert buyer, and with self-confidence. It is a pleasant feeling to have, the feeling of adequacy. Most of the shortcomings in the world can be traced to a lack of this feeling. This advertising shows another of its wonderful features—shows that as an aid toward making all our business relationships more secure and pleasant.

SADDLE and RIDE

By ERNEST HAYCOX

THE STORY SO FAR: There's going to be war in the cattle country, war between the big ranchers like Ben Herendeen and the little fellows. Clay Morgan is an important rancher, but he doesn't like Herendeen's methods and doesn't hesitate to say so. A solitary figure who cannot forget the wife who died having him, Morgan is devoted to his nine-year-old daughter, Janet. He has brought her into town with him, where Ollie Jacks, a rancher, is on trial for stealing Herendeen's cattle. Jacks is freed by the jury, but as he steps out onto the courthouse steps everyone knows he is a dead man.

CHAPTER II

The long silence held on, as though everybody waited for something to come. Ollie Jacks reached at his shirt pocket and produced his tobacco.

"Clay," he said, "I never did you no wrong, did I?"

"Not that I know of."

Sweat ran its oil-shine across Ollie Jacks' face; his lips were small and sharp and his eyes—not eyes that any man could trust—clung to Morgan. "All I want is a chance to ride out of this town," he said.

Herendeen said in his blunty unanswerable manner: "Everybody's been talking about things being legal. So we made this legal and see what happened. We won't make that mistake again. You're on the wrong foot, Clay. Better get right."

"Never mind," said Morgan. They saw him now as he seldom was, the quick now of his face showing up. The change was instant; he had no smoothness, no reasonableness. What he said was a challenge—the meant it that way and wanted them to know it. He swung around, speaking to Ollie Jacks. "You're all right in town, Ollie. But when you leave, that's your grief."

"Whoa!" said Herendeen. "I'll make what damned trouble I please."

Morgan came about fast enough to make Lige White jerk his head aside. Morgan said: "All right, Ben. If you want it, you can have it now."

It shocked everybody still, this challenge so unexpected and so deadly in a quick-tempered country. It caught Herendeen with his guard down. Herendeen stepped away from the locust tree, the bright flame of anger in his eyes.

"I've got some business to finish during the week, Morgan. When that's done I'll see you. That is all I care to say."

"Fine," answered Morgan, and walked away. Behind him, the astonished silence still held.

He passed the courthouse and went into the post office, rapping at the wicket until Fred Rich came out of the back room.

"No notice yet on Government Valley?"

"No," said the postmaster. "I want to know when it comes."

"I'll post it on one of the buildings in the valley. That's regulation."

The sun was gone from desert and sky, leaving a soft blue-running light behind. The supper triangle began to beat up its iron clanging from the porch of the Mountain House hotel. The Red Canyon stage rolled out of the hills, made a bowling swing into Main Street and stopped before the hotel in smoky eddies of dust. Morgan left the post office doorway, still interested in the way the Three Pines riders—Herendeen's outfit—scattered themselves along the street. Janet had appeared at McGarrah's doorway and was calling his name.

She took his hand. They went on through the store, into the back quarters. Yellow lamplight poured on the red-checked tablecloth, splintering brilliantly against the glass cruets. Ann McGarrah was in the kitchen, dishing the meal; he passed on to the rear porch, took off his coat and scrubbed away the riding dust. When he returned to the dining room they were waiting for him—Janet and Ann.

They ate, idly talking, idly arguing. The druggist's boy, Fred Tanner, came to the back yard and called Janet's name. Janet moved restlessly in her seat until Morgan nodded. As soon as she had gone, Ann McGarrah said: "You'll be riding a lot this week. Let Janet stay here."

Morgan smiled. "What is it this time, Ann? There's always something."

She said candidly: "A new dress, Clay. And her hair."

He said: "I guess there are some things I can't do for her."

"I can do those things for her. I like to. I want to." But when she said this her manner changed and her eyes were cool and her voice pushed him away. "I don't mean that the way it sounds. For her, Clay. Not for you."

His head was tilted and he was listening to the thinned report of a man's loud voice on the street.

He was straight in his chair, his mind and temper changing back to the world out there. She knew what he was thinking, for she had been on the porch when he had challenged Herendeen. She said in a subdued voice:

"I'm not surprised you were willing to quarrel with him. It goes back a long way. You never forget anything."

He said, "Thanks for the supper, Ann," and walked on through the store to the front porch. She followed him; she was beside him when he passed on the street. Janet ran forward from the store's back alley, out of breath and laughing. At this moment Morgan's interest was wholly on the street. Ann McGarrah saw how closely he studied the roundabout shadows. It was a carefulness that he had always had, as though the need of it had been burned in him since the beginning.

He was listening to the thinned report of a man's loud voice.

Darkness rolled tidally down the hills, filling War Pass. Lights glinted through window and doorway and made yellow fanwise pools on the walks and the night breeze bore in sage scent and pine scent from the upper country. The Burnt Ranch stage stood before the hotel, ready to go. Morgan's attention clung to the dark area around Gentry's corral a long while. Afterwards he said, to Janet: "You're staying here for a few days. Let's take a little walk before I start home."

Ann McGarrah knew where they were going. Paused by the store's doorway, she watched these two, the tall shape of the man and the slender figure of the girl side by side, go down into Old Town, Janet's small hand gripping her father's. One light illumined them a moment, then they were lost beyond Old Town as they walked toward the cemetery.

Beyond Old Town a creek came out of the hills and crossed under the road with a liquid lapping. Past the creek the round-topped wooden headboards of the cemetery glowed vaguely white under the moonlight. Following the irregular row, Morgan stopped before his wife's grave. Janet's hand gripped his fingers more tightly and she stood quite close to him.

He heard her soft, long sigh. "It would be so nice to have a mother."

This was the thing that hit him so hard, his daughter's loneliness for a mother. He stood at the foot of the grave, with his hat removed, thinking back to that long-gone night when Lila Durrie, so full of life and laughter and recklessness, had smiled to him across the dance hall's width, putting everything into her round black eyes. At eighteen a man was like the blowing wind; he had gone over, knowing there would be a fight. Ben Herendeen had brought her to the dance and Ben Herendeen stood by, quietly raging. When the music started Lila Durrie looked up at the sullen Herendeen, laughed at him and took Clay Morgan's arm, dancing away.

At the doorway they had stepped out; down by the row of buggies, in the bland black night, they had stood a moment, no longer cool and no longer laughing. Even now Morgan remembered the sharpness, the wild intensity of his feelings as he kissed her and heard her whisper in his ears. "Clay—Clay, do you love me?" They had gone immediately to his rig. At daylight they were married.

There hadn't been time for a picture or for much of anything else. At that time he owned a small ranch in the Lost Hills and ran a few cows on it. This was where they set up housekeeping, a long way from town, a long way from dances or from her friends. She had been used to better things and couldn't help remembering it. She was a stormy girl, so rash in anger, so quick to seek laughter, by turns so terribly forlorn and so tempestuously happy. Four months after their marriage Herendeen rode up to the place and stepped from the saddle. From the far corner of the meadow, Clay had seen this. When he reached the house Herendeen was laughing and she was laughing but that laughter stopped soon enough, for Herendeen said: "Why stick so close to the house, Clay? Don't you trust your wife?"

Morgan drew the cigar from his mouth, feeling some of the fury of that fight. He had rushed against Herendeen, hearing his wife's scream of protest. Herendeen started laughing again, but when they were finished, both exhausted and drained dry and badly beaten, there was no amusement in Herendeen. That hurt still came back to plague Morgan, even now; he remembered how he walked to the corral and hung his elbows against it to keep from falling, and how blindly Herendeen staggered toward his horse. He had whipped Herendeen in that fight and yet he had lost; for, five months later, shortly after Janet's birth, Lila had looked up from her bed, white and strengthless, all her love gone, and whispered: "I should tell you something, Clay. I made a mistake. It was Ben I wanted to marry. You and I are not at all alike." And so she had died.

He had turned away. But he had turned back, holding the warm small hand of his daughter within his own big fingers, knowing that in his daughter's head was a wistful and wonderful image of her mother—an image made out of a child's longing. Like a fairy tale, he thought, that had to be bright and always fair.

He was thinking of this, pleased by her pleasure, when he saw a low-bent and shadowy shape run from the alley adjoining the Mountain House hotel and whip across the street toward Mike Boylan's blacksmith shop. This was in the corner building of Old Town, and Mike Boylan, late-working, had hung a lantern above the shop's wide double-door. A saddle horse stood loose before Boylan's rack, toward which the running man aimed. Farther up the street somebody shouted a warning and a Three Pines rider rushed forward from McGarrah's store. Slowly pacing forward toward Mike Boylan's shop, Morgan identified the runner as soon as the latter entered the yellow arc of the lantern's light. It was Ollie Jacks.

Ollie Jacks' breath was a lunging, painful sound in the night as he rushed against the horse, threw himself into the saddle and claved at the reins. For a brief moment his face came around and Morgan saw the constricted desperation on it; then Ollie Jacks slashed the horse away from the blacksmith shop, turned into the gap between Old Town and McGarrah's store, and raced down-slope into the desert.

Janet's hand gripped Clay Morgan's fingers. "What's the matter, Daddy?"

"Nothing," he said, "nothing but Ollie Jacks having some fun." He quickened his step, coming into the gap and halting there as a pair of Three Pines men reached it. Herendeen arrived, saying: "Get your horses," and then these men were facing Clay Morgan. One of them had drawn his gun to take a shot at the retreating Ollie Jacks. He held the gun half out of the holster, staring at Morgan, but Ollie Jacks was gone and it was too late and he let the gun drop back, shrugging his shoulders. Three Pines men were riding up behind Herendeen and Herendeen's face was red and round.

The echo of Ollie Jacks' horse made a dying tattoo in the blackness, out in the desert. Other Three Pines riders were rushing from town by the stage road. Morgan said, courteous and quiet: "Maybe Janet and I are in your way. We'll step aside."

"No," said Herendeen, rage running behind his false-cool tone. "There is nothing to hurry about. There's a time for everything, Clay. Good evening, Janet."

Janet said in her precise, little-woman's voice: "Good evening." Morgan pulled her gently on to McGarrah's porch. Ann McGarrah waited there. Part of the Three Pines crew galloped toward the desert, after Ollie Jacks. Herendeen walked up the street, his boots lifting dust.

Morgan said, "I'll ride along, honey. Be back in a few days. You have a good time." He reached down and kissed her, feeling the warmth of her hands as she held them at the back of his neck. He was smiling as he straightened, smiling at Janet, and then at Ann McGarrah's attentive eyes. Out on the desert—far out—a gunshot sounded, quick and faint, and was echoed by two other shots. That was all. Ann McGarrah saw the smile die and saw the flame of temper in his eyes. They both knew Ollie Jacks was dead. Herendeen had respected Morgan's challenge; that and nothing more. Morgan lifted his hat, noting how Ann McGarrah's arm rested on Janet's shoulder. He said, "Good night," and turned into the street.

THIS ALL-PURPOSE COUPON BOOK

Washington, D. C.—The OPA is working on a ration book for all purposes. It will be a general utility book which can be used no matter what is rationed, if the idea works out.—News item.

You've got something there, mister.

A presto-and-there-you-have-it type of ration book would seem to be full of possibilities. For one thing it would enable a man to carry all the necessary coupons without a helper.

It should make the whole business more exciting. Elmer Twitchell looked into the matter yesterday.

"Is this a gag or is it serious?" he asked an OPA official.

"I'm too busy to be sure of anything but I think it is on the level," was the reply.

"You mean one book will do, no matter what the shortages are?"

"That's it."

"How long have your men been working on it?"

"About a month."

"And nobody has gone nuts yet?"

"Not so far, although a couple are beginning to act a little queer."

"Let me get this," pressed Elmer. "I get a ration book for sugar, roller skates, shingles or auto fuel, and if the OPA suddenly decides to ration beer openers, hair oil or liver I just use the same coupons out of the same book? Am I right or just dizzy?"

"Correct. This is to be the positively no waiting ration book, good at a moment's notice in all circumstances. Whatever happens you have the coupons for it in advance."

"This wouldn't be any chance be a plot for a new Olsen & Johnson show?" asked Mr. Twitchell suspiciously.

"I don't think so," insisted the OPA chief.

"But just how will a book with coupons for four gallons of gas be usable for two cans of house paint, a barrel of onions or a box of doorknobs?"

"Our experts will know."

"But how will the gas station man, paint salesman and vegetable dealer know?"

"Well, er, we may have to get out a book for him."

"Another book?"

"Yes, a book of interpretations. A sort of guide book to the all purpose ration book."

"But suppose this guide book isn't clear?"

"It will just mean another book, I suppose," said the OPA man hopelessly.

"Lock me up now," sighed Elmer. "I've been out of my cell long enough."

"Me, too," said the OPA man.

RECIPE FOR OLD AGE

("Exercise after 40 should be avoided."—Dr. Morris Fishbein.) Are you two-score, mister? Save that extra pep; If you can avoid it, Take no extra step.

Do not lift a finger After 40 years! Exercise is silly, So it now appears.

When you are not working Sit quite still and think; Lack of all exertions Keeps men in the pink.

Golf? It's just plain silly—Simply suicide; Never walk a step, sir, Where a man can ride.

Daily calisthenics? Hikes around the park? All these things but shorten Life's three-score-ten mark.

Relax! Scorn all movement! Long hence will you die; You may live to 80— BUT YOU'LL WONDER WHY!

"I will swap works of Honore De Balzac, 33 volumes, for a pair of binoculars and case. Mass. 1958."—Yankee Magazine.

That's what comes of having a reading room that overlooks a bathing beach this time of year.

Wiltling Method for Silage Is Suggested

Experiment, Extreme Care Needed to Make It Work

By C. W. BENDER (Professor Dairy Husbandry, Rutgers University.)

In view of the high price of molasses and the scarcity of phosphoric acid for preserving silage, the wiltling method of ensiling legumes, grasses and cereals—a method requiring practically no preservatives—sounds good.

The wiltling method will work, but it also takes experimental control and extreme care to make it work.

Moisture Content Excess.

Farmers experienced at making grass silage know that mold accumulations, caused by air pockets or air leakage in the silo, often occur even when the silo is filled with material having a moisture content of 72 to 78 per cent.

Yet materials with this amount of moisture pack more readily and develop more pressure than grasses with lower moisture content, and the wiltling method calls for wiltling down the green material to a moisture content of only 65 to 68 per cent. Thus there is a greater danger of mold when the wiltling method is used.

Secondly, some type of apparatus is necessary to determine the exact moisture content of the green material.

How long it takes to wilt the material down to the proper moisture content cannot be determined in advance. One thing is certain: There will be many delays in filling the silo, thus increasing the danger of mold and high temperatures, both of which tend to destroy nutrients.

Fill Silo Three-Fourths.

The silo must be filled more than three-fourths full with wilted green material within two days. The material must be evenly distributed and well tramped. Filling should be continued on the third day, using high moisture grasses or legumes to which a preservative has been added so that sufficient pressure is generated to exclude the air from the partially wilted mass. Delays in filling beyond this period may ruin the silage, a fact which has been learned by many farmers.

Furthermore, the wiltling of a green crop destroys carotene. The longer the period of wilt the more carotene is lost, an important consideration in producing milk of excellent quality.

Trap That Hornfly

Dairy cows will not produce at maximum when infested with hornflies.

The flies cause loss in milk production because they suck cows' blood, and their annoyance often causes cattle to refuse to graze. Hence, they do not get their fill of grass which is the best milk producer, and it takes a part of the feed which otherwise would go to production of milk to replace the blood.

Some investigators claim that during seasons of abundance hornflies are responsible for losses of one-quarter to one-half of the normal milk production. Moreover, annoyance by the flies during milking might lead to contamination of the milk with consequent lowering of its quality.

Sprays, which many dairymen use, will keep flies off cattle during milking and for an hour or more afterward. But this does not prevent loss in milk production. However, a cattle fly trap used as a gateway to and from water, feed, or other frequented places, has been found effective for the control of hornflies on many dairies, farms and ranches.

Farm Notes

Hens that have started to lay have a large, moist vent and a soft pliable abdomen.

New York ranks fourth to Texas, Wisconsin, and Missouri in the egg-drying industry, with 18 million pounds produced in five plants.

Goats respond well to good pasturage if the land is reasonably dry. They also do well on rough ground if enough feed is present.

AROUND THE HOUSE

Filow cases can be made to last longer if after a year's service you rip the one end, fold in the opposite way, and sew together again.

Salt will curdle new milk; hence, in preparing porridge, gravies, etc., salt should not be added until the dish is prepared.

Fresh peas may be boiled right in the pod and the soft part of the pod eaten. Boil not less than one-half hour until quite tender in well-salted water.

Cook raisins in the breakfast food to save sugar and make cake and molasses cookies with raisins instead of sugar.

When washing volle frocks add a little vinegar to the water to freshen the colors, and a small amount of starch to give a crisp, clean look to the garments.

It is easy to substitute honey for sugar in many recipes, as honey has practically the same sweetening power as sugar, measure for measure.

To retain the roughness of rough crashes and linen after they have been laundered, iron them on the wrong side.

When canned goods must be stored in an unsatisfactory place, set jars on shelves on their heads. Then the rubbers will not dry out.

Don't rip off buttons in the clothes wringer. Fold them inside the garment and hold it flat as it goes through.
