V-MAIL SERVICE

On June 15, 1942, the Postoffice department inaugurated the V-Mail Service. This provides a safe means of communication with American soldiers overseas as well as giving the most expeditious dispatch available. Because of the small space taken up by the films, they often can be carried on ferry planes or bombers.

Simply call at the post office for a V-Mail envelope. You then write your message in the space provided on the envelope, address it, place your return address on it, fold, seal, stamp and place in the mail box. It is then sent to a post office where it is photographed on micro-film and the micro-film dispatched in a sealed penalty window envelope to the member of our armed forces.

Herman E. Kelt,
Postmaster.

Sally Silvers, daughter of Mrs. Jackie Silvers of Ancho, left Friday for the Baptist Academy at San Marcos, Texas to resume her school work. Sally is a freshman this year in S. M.
A. She left earlier than expected as Mrs. Safstrom, the Dean of Senior Girls, requested her assistance in receiving and placing the new girls.

point of religion, now hear what Christian laymen have to say of this vital force in your life.
There will be no evening service
during these Sundays.

Business Men's Club

There was more than ordinary attendance at the club meeting
Wednesday night at the S. P.
Hotel, R. B. Moore, supt. of the Carrizozo Light and Power plant, was the guest of Mayor M. U.
Finley and Lewis Thomas, coach of the Carrizozo schools was the guest of Rev. John Klassen. In the absence of secretary Briester, the President appointed Felix Ramey.

Mr. Thomas has been a visitor on numerous occasions and in view of that fact, coupled with his desire to become a member of the club, the rules were suspended on motion, Mr. Thomas was made a member by a unanimous vote.

Felix Ramey stated that he would leave Carrizozo and offered his resignation, but in view of his faithful activity and attendance at the Club meetings, the club voted him an honorary membership. The President named the first meeting in Oct.
as the date for entertaining the faculty and teachers of the Carrizozo schools, as that is the yearly custom of the club for that particular custom.

Attorney John E. Hall, chairman of the coming junk drive which is to be held on Oct. 16, he set forth ways and means for the collection of junk and everybody is urged to clear up any junk which may have accumulated around the homes in Carrizozo and also at the different ranches in this vicinity.

Other matters of local interest received the attention of the club. For donations for the advertising which will be run in both of the local papers, a committee composed of Mayor Finley, Sabino Vidaurri, G. T. McQuillen,
Frank English and Otho Lowe, was appointed by the chair for the purpose of soliciting donations of $1.00 from each business house to reimburse the papers for the advertising.

Felix Ramey,
Acting Secretary.

SADDLE and RIDE

By ERNEST HAYCOX

THE STORY SO FAR: Clay Morgan is determined to play a lone hand against Ben Herendeen, a rancher who is out to run the cattle country his own way. As a rancher, Morgan knows he must protect his own rights, but he doesn't like Herendeen's methods. Of his former friends, only Hack Breathitt has not gone over to Herendeen's side. The rest—Charley Hillhouse, Gurd Grant and Lige White, for example, are supporting Herendeen, more or less in self defense. They don't like his methods, either, but they believe that if they don't follow him they will lose everything.

CHAPTER IV

At daybreak Clay Morgan rode as far as the Antelope Plains with the roundup crew and worked with it until mid-morning. Afterwards he set off to have a look at the grass and water on the western edge of the Moguls. Gurd Grant, having business at his own ranch, went along. Gurd was a big and completely friendly man of Morgan's age with light features and a consistently pleased expression in his eyes. There was no malice and no subterfuge of any kind in Gurd. But now, as he rode, he spoke in a rather troubled, uncertain way of Herendeen.

"You know, Clay, he ain't such a bad fellow. I hate to see you two start chewing the same piece of leather. Of course, you never did like each other. I can remember as far back as school when you and Ben got in some pretty tough jangles."

"Gurd," said Morgan, turning toward his partner, "I want to warn you. Ben's the kind of a fellow that gets worse the farther he goes. Maybe he'll start by chasing a few crooks out of the country. But he won't stop there. He'll get the idea that nobody has any rights unless they're riding close to him."

Riding on through the short hills, they came to Crowfoot's quarters seated in a small round valley backed against the Haycreek Hills. A creek, charging out of the pine timber, crossed the meadow in front of a low, long-galleried white house surrounded by poplar trees. The two dismounted in this pleasant shade and went back to the dining room for a late noon meal. They were still at the table when a single rider came out of the hill trail at a full gallop. A moment later Catherine Grant appeared.

"Gentlemen," she said, "you are both very solemn."

Gurd Grant held his seat with a brother's habitual indifference but Clay Morgan rose at once before this laughter-loving girl with the gay and gently blue eyes. This was Catherine Grant, who, with her brother Gurd, ran Crowfoot.

"Once," she reflected, "there was a man named Morgan. He lived on top of a mountain and never did come down. He grew a beard, so they say, and got the habit of talking to himself. I wonder whatever happened to him?"

"Crazy as always," said Gurd. "And quit running your horse down that trail, you hear?"

She didn't hear. She stood in front of Clay, stripping away her riding gloves—smiling and watching his answering smile break the solid healthy darkness of his face. Gurd Grant sat on an interested and forgotten spectator to this scene, quick to note his sister's instant gaiety in front of Clay, and Clay's lightning expression. There always had been an odd elateness between these two people. Sometimes, as now, that elateness puzzled him and sometimes bothered him, he never could get at its meaning. All he knew was that whenever they met they seemed to share some old memory which excluded everybody else, as now he rose and left the room.

The cook brought Catherine her meal. She sat opposite Clay, eating a little and talking a little. Clay lighted a smoke. He braced his elbow on the table, chin propped in his long, heavy hand. "Your hair," he said, "is getting darker."

"That's gray you see. Gray from worry."

"When you were eighteen it was almost a carrot red."

She said: "I remember you said that once, a long time ago. It almost made me cry. I came home and wondered if I could dye it."

"We used to talk pretty straight, didn't we? We had some tall quarrels."

She gave him a straight, smileless look. "Why did we ever quarrel, Clay?"

"Maybe," he said, "it was because we always stuck together and had so damned much fun." He wasn't sure of what he wished to say. This girl was a close, deep part of his life. Once, she had been nearer to him than any other woman. Some of that old feeling remained, so that when he sat by her now he had a feeling of pleasant ease; knowing that he had to explain nothing to her, knowing that she understood.

Suddenly she rose and turned away, knowing what was in his mind. He left the table, following her out to the house porch. He said: "See you later, Catherine."

"All right, Clay."

Gurd came around the house. He said to his sister in a teasing, amused voice: "Rakin' up the ashes on a log fire?"

"Hush."

"You two," commented Gurd, "used to be pretty thick. Before

"Why don't we go into War Pass some night, Catherine, and paint the town?"

Lila came along. I always wondered how thick?"

She straightened against the porch post and showed him a self-contained expression. Gurd laughed a little, seeing his sister crouch up on him, and ceased to laugh, when he thought of something else. "I don't like the way he's acting. He won't talk to Ben."

"No," said Catherine. "He never will."

"It was something that had to do with Lila and Ben, wasn't it?"

She shook her head. "Never mind, Gurd."

The quick ruffle of horses' hooves turned her against the porch post and in this attitude she watched Herendeen and Lige White cross the meadow. When they reached the porch Lige White lifted his hat with a gallant flourish he could never escape. Herendeen simply stepped down, saying: "Want to see you, Gurd."

Herendeen said, "Why don't we go into War Pass some night, Catherine, and paint the town?"

They sat down in the drowsy shade of the living room. Lige White looked around, chuckling over a sudden fancy. "I remember how your mother used to receive visitors here. A very proper and courteous woman, Gurd."

"Gurd," said Ben Herendeen, blunt and impatient as always, "we're going to set some men on these hill trails at night. Just to see who travels 'em after dark. Lige has agreed to take care of the Antelope Plains. I'm posting one near the west base of the Moguls. I want you to keep some men up there on the high trail to War Pass. Be sure they don't talk and be sure they do this after dark."

"All right," said Gurd. "But you're fishin' with a pretty loose net. What we need is a man to just ride around with his eyes and ears open, without being suspected."

"Range detective," said Lige White.

Herendeen gave both of them a stolid look. "Already got that man."

"Who?" asked Gurd.

Herendeen bent forward and let the man's name drop softly into the room. "Now," he added, "say nothing about it. Anybody knew it was him, his life wouldn't be worth much." He put his hand sternly on Gurd Grant. "I don't want Morgan to know, either."

"Well now," answered Gurd Grant with slow discomfort, "I don't know about that. He's in this, too."

"What was he playin' along with Ollie Jacks for? Anybody know where he really stands? Anybody got a square answer out of him? No. Until we do we'll keep this to ourselves." He had a way of dropping his closed fist through the air to drive home his talk; he did it now. Then he added, dryly: "It may be he's on the other side of the fence."

"That's a damned fool thing to say," flared up Gurd Grant. "I don't like it."

"He's protecting Hack Breathitt," pointed out Herendeen. "And what's Hack? Figure it out."

"Wait a minute," said Gurd Grant, "Hack's all right."

"He made camp with Pete Borders last night," said Herendeen. Grant scowled at the news. "Foolish thing to do," he admitted.

Herendeen rose. "You two fellows meet me at my place around six. Maybe I can show you something. Maybe, before long, we'll smoke out Morgan. Far as I'm concerned, it's fish or cut bait. We'll have this country empty of people that don't belong in it by ninety days." He slapped his hand sharply against his knee and rose, leading the other two to the porch.

Catherine remained by the steps. Herendeen paused and put his round blue glance on her, cool and appraising; he betrayed himself to her, in the way he used his eyes. He showed her what he was thinking. "Friday night then, Catherine," he said and went to his horse, riding out of the meadow with Lige White.

"Gurd," reflected Catherine, "be careful in what you promise Ben."

Gurd said: "We've all got to stick together," and went back through the house.

Catherine turned into the house, climbing the stairs to her own room. She started to remove the riding habit but stopped and sat on the edge of the bed, closely thinking. All the talk of the men had come through the front room's open window to her—all of it, excepting the name of Herendeen's informer.

Leaving Grant's ranch, Clay Morgan rode north through a gentle up-and-down roll of hills carpeted with bunch grass and loosely studded by twisted, ancient junipers and jack pine. Later in the afternoon he passed the valley of Herendeen's ranch at some distance and entered the footholes of Mogul, through short ravines shaded by box elder and alder and cottonwood.

Thus he rode upward with the quartering trails of Mogul, toward his plateau in the late afternoon hours. The sun fell behind the western mountains in a formless red eruption. In another half hour twilight, cool and tremendously still, whirled about him. Beyond eight o'clock he sighted the glint of light from his ranch house, shining across the flats. Reaching home, he had supper and sat on the porch. Muscular weariness loosened his long frame and the ease of the darkening night got into him; fed and indolent, he swayed the rocker across the loose porch boards and breathed the fragrance of his cigar.

Quietly he smoked his cigar, until he heard the far rhythm of a horse coming out of the west, around the foot of the Mogul Hills. He took the cigar from his mouth, cupping its glowing tip in his palm, and sat quietly until the rider turned in at the porch. Catherine Grant called quietly, "Clay," and got down.

He brought over another rocker. She sat beside him, lying back. Her arm trailed over the rocker's arm, her face was a round soft-shining blur in the dark. But he didn't need to see it; he remembered how her lips would be long and gently pursed, how half-grave and half-amused her eyes would be. She said in a serious voice: "Maybe I'm doing something you won't like. I'm carrying tales. Ben and Lige White came over to see Gurd directly after you left. Ben's going to have men out in the hills, looking for rustlers. He's got somebody in the country pussyfooting for him. I don't know who it is—but somebody we're all acquainted with, I think. Gurd wanted to tell you all this. Ben said he didn't trust you."

Morgan said: "Sounds natural."

She let the silence go along quite an interval. Her voice was cool and near: "You hate him more than people realize, Clay. As he hates you. Nothing ever would bring you together. Is that why you took Ollie Jacks' part?"

"No," he answered.

She didn't press the point. This was the way they had always been, close and tolerant, sometimes angered and frank, but never demanding. She had a silent streak of her own, a depth she never let other's see; and she gave him the same respect. She said now: "Do you know why I came?"

He said, cheerfully: "To sit on my porch again."

"Clay," she said, almost as a warning, "let's keep away from that."

"Why did you come?" he said obediently.

"To tell you I think Ben would do anything to lay a trap for you. Remember that—always remember that."

He said: "I'll tell you this," and turned slowly in the rocker, hearing other horses sweep around the base of the Mogul Hills. Catherine came to her feet. She murmured: "I don't want to be seen here," and stepped inside the house.

Morgan went to her horse and led it around to the dark side of the house. A single rider rushed at the porch, with other riders pounding more distantly behind him. Clay returned to the porch, watching the first rider's shape break the blackness and circle into the yard. His horse was hard-breathing, pushed by a long run; he said, as he stepped to the ground, "Me, Clay. Me—Hack."

"What's the trouble?"

PSYCHIATRY AND WAR

(Suggested by the proposal that, before being inducted, all men in the armed forces should undergo tests by psychiatrists.)

CASE 3462: Subject's name is Paul Revere. Very impulsive type. Admits he likes to ride horseback at night. Prefers to do so alone. As a child played with lanterns, rejecting toys. First words as an infant according to parents was "Giddap!" Admits he liked to go around at night waking up neighbors.

Conclusion: Erratic, stubborn type with little emotional stability. We think he should be carefully watched, kept away from horses and not trusted with any mission of importance.

CASE 7629: Subject's name is Israel Putnam. Admits he can't stand being left out of a fight. Will drop everything to get into one. Highly impulsive and quarrelsome. As a child he was left in his baby carriage a few minutes by a nurse. He promptly took hold of the wheels and rode it down a steep flight of steps. Seems proud of the incident when reminded of it now and says he would do it again. Likes to argue. Very difficult to stop. Impatient of those who differ with him. Has sharp temper and is given to violent actions on occasion.

Conclusion: Clearly a mental case. Keep in a cool dry place and permit no initiative.

CASE 9726: Subject's name is George Washington. Exhibits many unusual traits and tendencies. As a young man he cut down a fine cherry tree without being asked to do so. When father asked him if he did it he promptly told the truth, in fact it was difficult to tell whether he was confessing or boasting. Liked to fight Indians although he could make good living as a surveyor. Openly says kings are over-rated. Says he wouldn't be one if he could.

Conclusion: Schizophrenia or something. Plainly not type suited to position of leadership.

CASE 9277: Name, U. S. Grant. Very unstable. Case history shows him indolent and disposed to let things slide. Careless about personal appearance. Difficult to draw into a discussion but very vehement when once aroused. Smoked cigars in grammar school. Drinks. When asked if he drank anything, he replied: "Anything!"

Conclusion: Unreliable, intemperate and a little touched in the head. Sailed only to ladsor work under careful watch.

CASE 6223: Benedict Arnold. Subjected this man to exhaustive tests. He met them all with pose and patience. Very intelligent. Has remarkable self-confidence. Expresses self lucidly and seems well informed on everything. Is somewhat vain, a bit impetuous and rather fond of money and position, but on the whole a charming, highly intelligent person.

Conclusion: This man is clearly of exceptional character. We would not hesitate to trust him anywhere.

Conservation Farming Most Effective Way

Nation's Farmers Learned Lesson During Last War

This time it's going to be different!

American farmers learned a bitter lesson from the last World War. In today's war they are answering the demand for more food by careful Conservation farming is the most effective way to boost output now and make even greater production possible tomorrow.

planning to avoid the ruinous exploitation of soil resources which cost so much last time.

"Plow to the Fence for National Defense" was the cry during the World War. Forty million acres of grass never before broken were uprooted by the plow. Much of that land should never have been permitted to be sown to anything but grass.

Conservation practices were forgotten in the zeal for "more of everything."

This time farmers have a national wartime farm program developed by farmers and co-ordinated through the United States department of agriculture adjustment and conservation agencies. It is a plan for getting more of the right things and it stresses conservation farming.

Experience has shown conservation farming is the most effective way to boost output now and make even greater production possible tomorrow.

Farming on the contour, for instance, has increased corn production twofold on farms in test areas. Also, it has required 7 per cent less time and 10 per cent less fuel in preparing land and seeding small grains than non-contoured farming.

It is estimated that if contouring were extended to one-third of the corn acreage in the corn belt, production would be increased 100 million bushels, an average increase of six bushels per acre.

In West Virginia, a 30 per cent increase per acre in tomato yields was achieved through use of strip cropping.

By following good range management, a West Texas rancher increased the weight of his calves by 75 pounds at selling time.

This year a minimum of 20 per cent of the crop land of a farmer participating in the AAA program will be devoted to soil-conserving crops and land uses.

Conservation is already paying farm dividends. Without the advances of recent years, America's farms would not have a chance of reaching 1942 production goals, not to mention the strains of producing even more in 1943.

Thus farmers recognize conservation as the key to getting the most of the right products now and continuing to get them as they are needed without permanent injury to our land resources. That is the lesson they learned from last time.

Agricultural Notes

Domestic consumer demand for farm products will continue to rise during the next few months.

Ground which has been planted continuously to corn loses almost half of the normal rain fall.

Over 215,000 tons of food are represented by the game animals, game birds, and game fish taken by sportsmen in one year.

Talkin' to a fellow the other day, I couldn't help thinkin' that lots of folks claim they have an open mind when the fact of the matter is it's only wantin'.

Which reminds me that if you really think straight about vitamins, you'll see why I keep tellin' folks about KELLOGG'S PEP. An' that's because this swell cereal is criss-cris in the two vitamins most often short in ordinary meals—B, and D. And believe me, PEP is a mighty alick-tasting cereal. Why don't you try it tomorrow?

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a narrow job. Their task is to keep the body free from the waste products of toxic impurities. The act of urinating—No doubt—is essentially a protective process. The kidneys must remove from the blood the waste products of the body.

When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, irritation of the bladder, and other symptoms. These are the signs that the kidneys are not doing their job.

Fructose, sugar or burning passages are sometimes further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.

The recognized and proper treatment for kidney trouble is to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body wastes. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are used by thousands of people. Doan's Pills are sold at all drug stores.

SPEAKING OF SPORTS

By Bob McShane

GROANS of pure anguish will make the welkin ring in several major league cities when the two most valuable players finally are selected by the nation's sports writers.

In the National league, Brooklyn offers by far the greatest number of candidates for the much-discussed honor. The Flatbush hopefuls include such sterling individuals as Pete Reiser, Pee-wee Reese, Joe Medwick, Whitlow Wyatt and Larry French.

Should the committee of writers Whitlow Wyatt neglect the Brooklyn delegation in favor of Mort Cooper or Enos Slaughter of the Cards, or Claude Passeau of the Cubs, the fine citizens of Brooklyn probably would take a firm stand against freedom of the press.

And, as a scaring thought, should Mel Ott of the Giants be given the nod, then the mighty screams from blighted Brooklyn would be heard the length and breadth of the land. Reiser, in that particular city, is looked upon as the No. 1 guy.

More Candidates

Quite a few players on other teams figure that Enos Slaughter deserves the honor insofar as hitting is concerned. Although Slaughter is a few points behind Reiser in averages—328 to 323 as this is written—the players figure Enos really hits a ball while Pistol Pete gets more flukes—beating out a lot of singles. Too, Slaughter has passed both Reiser and Medwick in driving in runs.

Ott has a definite place among the candidates. The Giant manager, who still likes to be known primarily as a player, is turning out one of the best performances in the senior circuit. He's battling Johnny Mike and Dolph Camilli for home run honors and leads the league (to date) in runs scored.

In addition to his playing ability, the writers should take into account the excellent job he has done as manager. This extra chore was added to an already full-time job.

As you may remember, Dolph Camilli, Dodger first baseman, was named the National league's most valuable player last year. He led the league in home runs and in runs-batted-in. The only player whose name appeared on every ballot, Dolph received 300 points as against 163 for Reiser. Chances are the balloting will be considerably closer this year.

The American League

Things are no more definite in the American league. Joe DiMaggio won it last year in a close race with Ted Williams, 408 batting king of the league. In the 1941 balloting, Joe received 291 points as against 254 for Williams. Just a few weeks ago Williams appeared to have the award all sewed up. It looked as though he might get the batting, home run and runs-driven-in championships.

But then Joe Gordon came along with a strong challenge for batting honors, plus an excellent extra-base record. These factors, plus his standing as one of the greatest infielders in major league baseball, made him a definite threat.

There was plenty of walling in 1941 when Williams failed to get the award. Many sports writers, players and fans believed that he deserved it by reason of his amazing .406 batting average. It may be that the breaks will go his way this year. His close shave last season won't hurt his current chances.

It is quite probable that Pitcher Ernie Bonham of the Yankees and Tex Hughson of the Red Sox will be given quite a number of votes. Some writers feel that pitchers are the forgotten men in the annual voting. Their yeoman services are all too often paled by the bright light which centers on the boys with the big stick and fat batting average.

SPORT SHORTS

Football coaches on the Pacific coast are agreed that California's Golden Bears will win the conference championship this year.

The only unassisted double play by a major league outfielder this season was made by Dom DiMaggio of the Boston Red Sox.

The American league has won all three All-Star games played in New York.

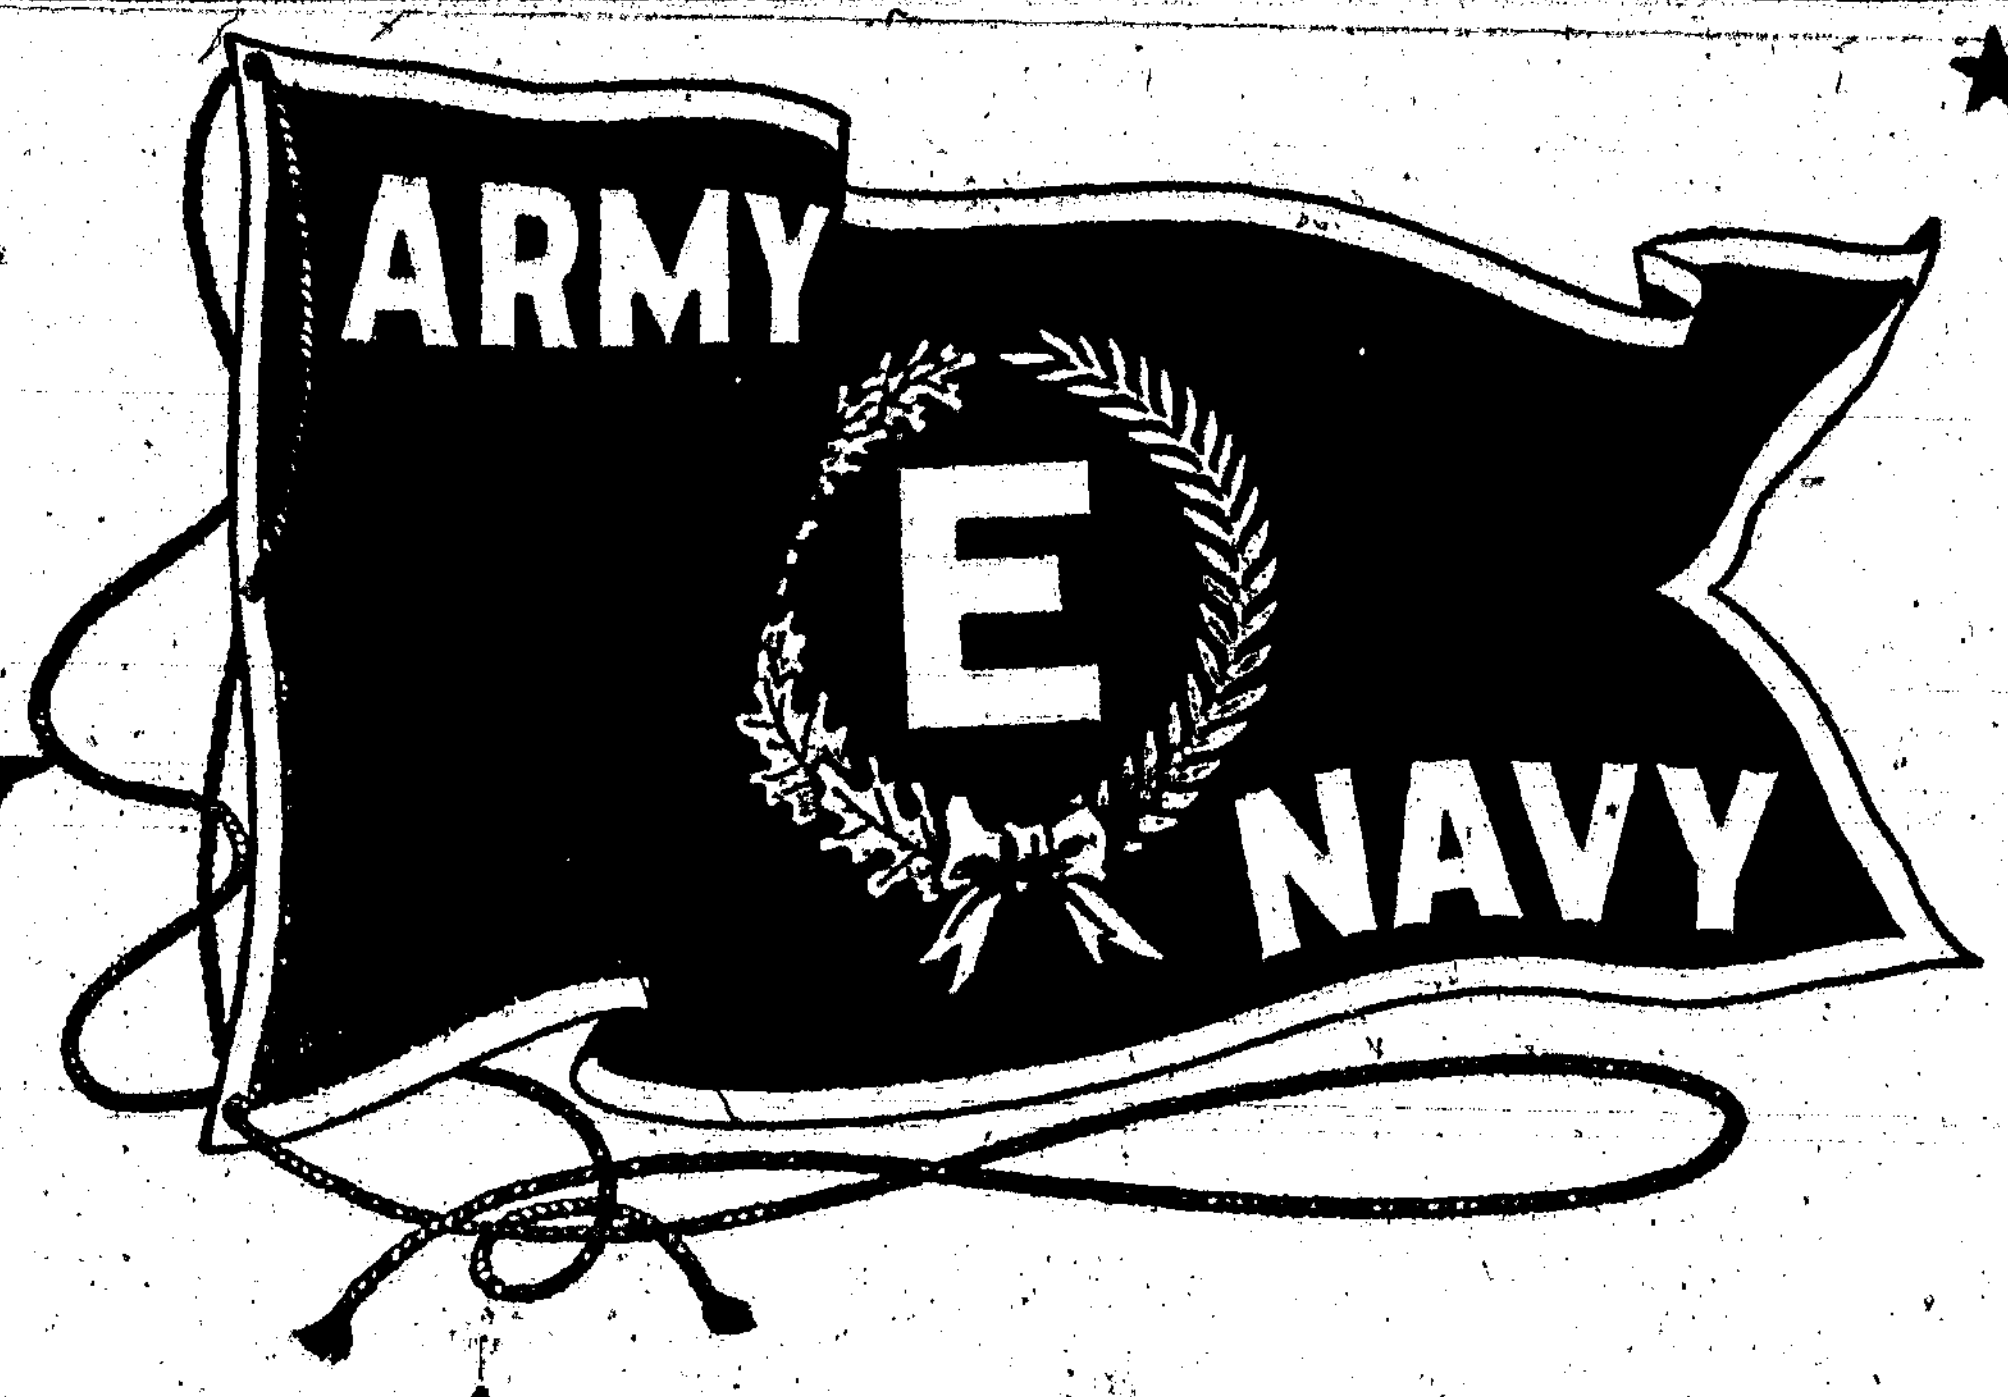

The New York Yankees of 1941 set an all-time double-play record with 196.

Babe Ruth's lifetime salary in the major leagues totaled more than $506,000.

Lefty Grove, Rube Walberg and George Earnshaw each won 25 or more games for the 1941 Athletics.

The 1942 championship Chicago Cubs set the National league all-time home attendance record with 1,400,000.

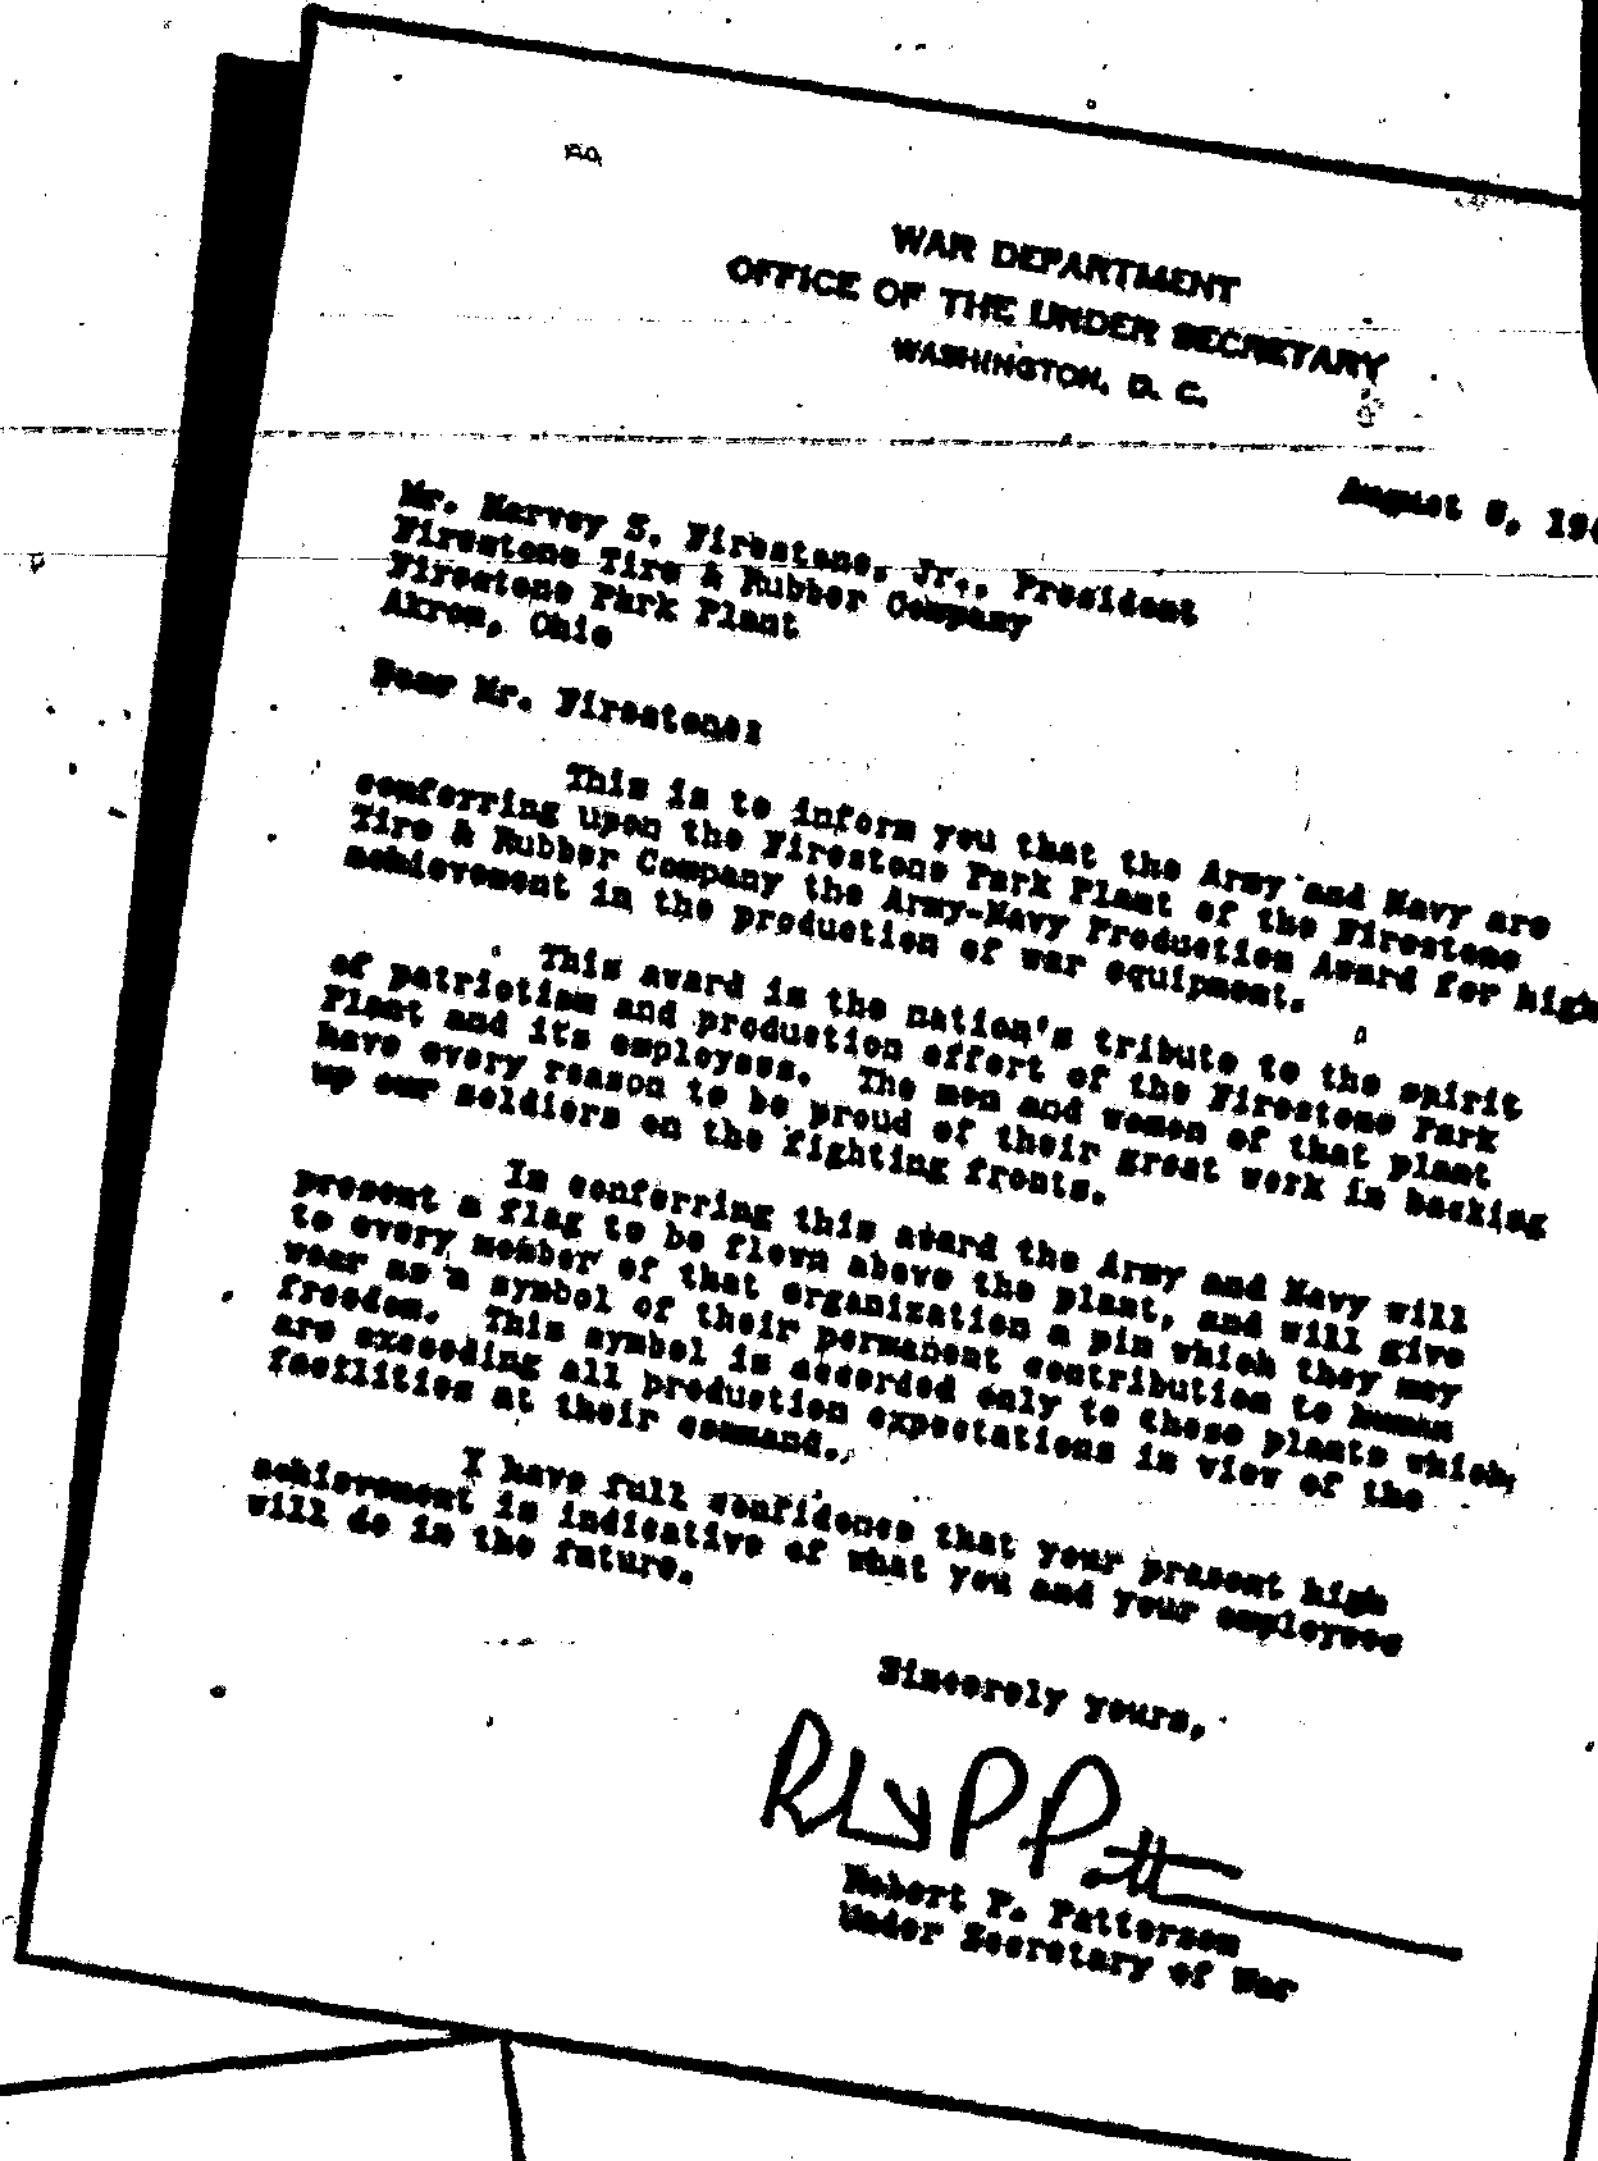

All Out FOR VICTORY AT Firestone

To the men and women of the Firestone organization, whose loyalty, skill, and efficiency have won the nation's highest industrial tribute, we extend our sincere appreciation of the fine spirit and whole-hearted cooperation which merited these Army-Navy Production Awards.

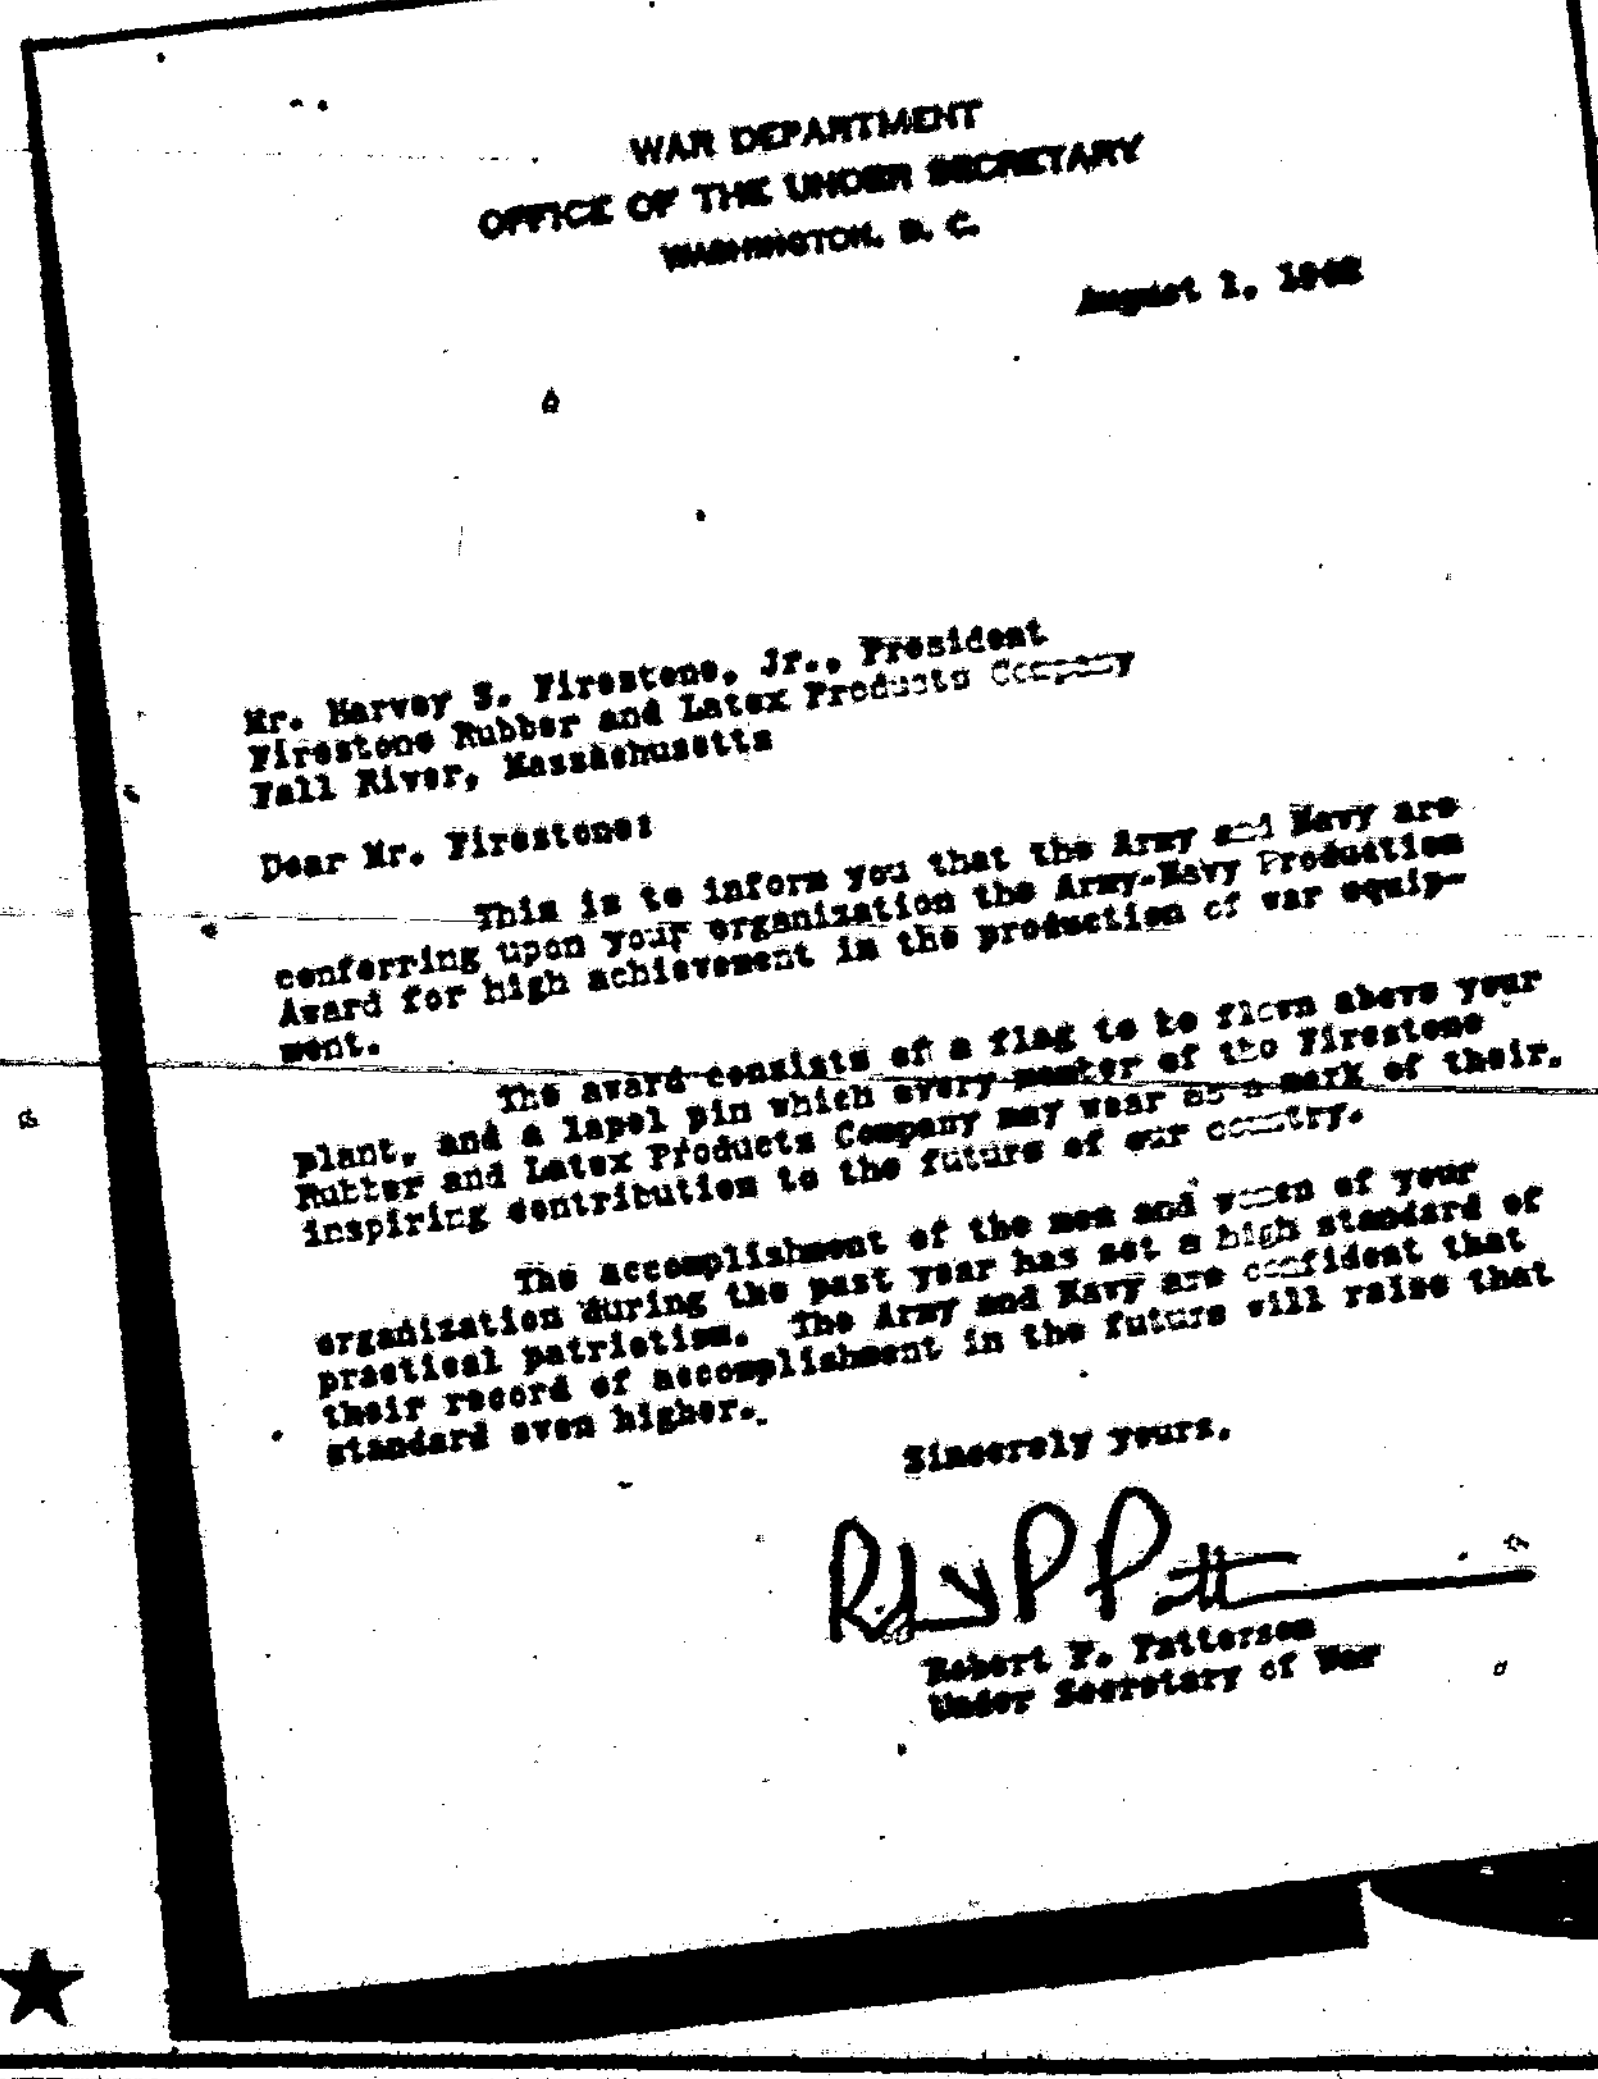

To our fellow Americans, we of the Firestone organization affirm that we regard this high honor as a challenge for the future as well as a reward for the past. It shall serve as a continuing inspiration to all of us to strive for increased quality and quantity of production in further contribution to the war effort and to final victory.

RED CROSS INFORMATION

The American Red Cross has developed a "hopeful" plan for dispatching messages from relatives and friends to members of the armed forces missing in action but not yet reported by the Japanese as prisoners of war. Persons in this area who have received notification that their relatives are missing in action but have not been notified that they are prisoners of war may go to the Chapter headquarters, at Carrizozo and be assisted in the preparation of the messages. All messages received by the Carrizozo Chapter will be sent immediately to Red Cross Inquiry Service, in Washington and should be presented to the Chapter in the next few days.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Navy Cruisers are built in two classes, light and heavy, the latter displacing about 10,000 tons. Our navy has about an equal number of light and heavy Cruisers, the 10,000 ton Cruiser costing approximately $20,000,000. Many Cruisers are under construction and many more are needed.

To pay for these speedy and powerful ships with their heavy guns and armament we must buy War Bonds. Citizens of a large town or a given community, working in unity, could buy one of these ships for the Navy if they put at least ten percent of their income in War Bonds every pay day.

Did You Place Your FALSE TEETH in a Glass Last Night?

Thousands do and wonder why their dentures remain dull and stained - why they still have a disagreeable breath. They fail to realize that water should not be used for cleaning dentures. There is a great formula known as "Denture Drench" which cleans and whitens dentures. It is a simple matter to use. Just place your dentures in a glass of water - add a few drops of "Denture Drench" - and let them soak overnight. The result is a clean, bright, and pleasant-smelling set of dentures.

OFFICIAL U. S. TREASURY
WAR BOND QUOTAS FOR SEPTEMBER

U.S. Treasury Official War Bond Quotas for September

September Quota for State, $1,250,000

Washington, D. C., Sept. 8.—September War Bond Quotas for the 3,970 counties in the nation were announced today by Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Secretary of the Treasury, to make up the national September total of $775,000,000. The September quota for the State of New Mexico is $1,250,000. In fixing the county quotas, the Treasury has continued its announced policy of setting the monthly quotas in line with the seasonal distribution of income with the billion-dollar monthly national average as the annual goal. The national quota for May, when the nation went on the billion-a-month annual basis, was $600,000,000. For June the quota was $600,000,000 and for July it jumped to $1,000,000,000. The August quota was $815,000,000, so to maintain the billion-dollar annual monthly average, the quotas for the Fall and Winter months will necessarily be stepped up considerably to reach the objective set. WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

FDR Moves to Stabilize Living Costs With Deadline Ultimatum to Congress; Labor 'Frozen' on Jobs in 12 States; New Pacific Action Takes High Jap Toll

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.) Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Granting labor a greater voice in the management of war production, Donald M. Nelson, WFB chairman, told AFL and CIO leaders that he would consider labor nominations for two vice chairmanships in WFB. Union labor leaders had told Nelson that WFB's approach to war conversion, curtailment and production policies was "unbalanced and one-sided" because top administrative posts were held by industrialists. Pictured here among the labor chiefs are (seated, second from left) William Green, AFL president; Donald Nelson and Phillip Murray, CIO president.

HALT LIVING COSTS: FDR Orders Congress

In a forthright speech to the nation, President Roosevelt carried his battle against rising prices to the people, demanding immediate anti-inflation action to avoid a "serious domestic economic crisis."

In a message to congress he demanded legislation by October 1 to bring farm prices under control. "In the event that the congress should fail to act, and act adequately, I shall accept the responsibility and I will act," he said.

With farm prices stabilized, he himself would act to stabilize wages, he promised. He stressed the point that the control of the inflationary threat could be obtained only by control of all the factors influencing it. Wages and farm prices remain to be stabilized.

I give you the solemn assurance that failure to solve this problem at home and to solve it now—will make more difficult the winning of this war.

"I cannot tell what power may have to be exercised in order to win this war. The American people can be sure that I will use my power with a full sense of my responsibility to the Constitution and to my country. When the war is won, the powers under which I act automatically revert to the people—to whom they belong," he said.

EGYPT: The Tide of War

Although his Africa corps was stopped cold in its second major bid for the valley of the Nile, Nazi Field Marshal Erwin Rommel was reported to have retained certain territorial gains at the southern end of the El Alamein line.

Reports from Cairo indicated that Rommel's chief gain was the El Hemmat ridge, a 700-foot observation post from which the Nazis can watch British movements.

However, the position of the retreating German and Italian troops was given officially as west of the British mine fields which they entered the previous week. This indicated that Rommel had been forced to retreat beyond his starting point.

A blow to Axis strength was revealed with the information that Maj. Gen. George von Bismarck, first cousin of Chancellor Otto von Bismarck, founder of the modern German empire, was killed in action. Von Bismarck was one of Hitler's most able generals.

MANPOWER 'Freeze'

Labor in essential war industries in 12 western states was "frozen" under terms of a far-reaching order of the U. S. War Manpower Commission. Announced by Paul McNutt, head of the commission, the order specified that no worker in the 12-state area engaged in non-ferrous metal mining, milling, smelting and refining, or in logging or lumbering, could seek other employment without first obtaining a certificate of separation from a designated representative of the U. S. employment service.

States included in the "critical" area were: Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Utah, Wyoming, California, Nevada, Oregon, Washington, New Mexico, and Texas.

SOUTH PACIFIC: Back for More

The Jap evidently had not learned his lesson. He knew that the marines had taken important bases in the Solomons. He knew, too, that these marines had been backed up by regular army and navy detachments and that important air bases had been taken away from him and put to use for the United Nations. All this did not discourage him.

For despite these facts the Jap came back and after heavy losses succeeded in establishing small landing parties on Guadalcanal in the Solomon group. According to U. S. navy communiques this was but one of several minor Jap operations in the Solomons. "These communiques attached importance to large loss of life by the landing parties and the implication seemed to be that those Japs unlucky enough to get ashore would be dealt with in typical marine fashion.

From New Guinea the news was different. Official reports from Melbourne, Australia, reported that Jap ground forces penetrated a gap in the Owen Stanley mountain range and advanced down the southern slope toward Port Moresby. About this same time a heavy Jap bombing attack on Port Moresby broke a three-week lull in this type operation.

A series of frontal attacks made it possible for the Jap to reach this objective. As he approached Port Moresby the fighting grew more terrific and his losses grew higher.

RUSSIAN FRONT: 'Greatest Weight'

Russian reports that the spearhead of the Nazi drive through the Grozny oil-fields in the Caucasus had been checked tended to offset the more ominous news from Stalingrad. There, 1,500 German dive bombers led the final attack on that city. It was at Stalingrad that the Russians had admitted that they battled the greatest weight of armament ever hurled against a single objective.

Before the final assault came this was typical of the Moscow communique on the fighting in this sector: "West of Stalingrad our troops engaged in heavy fighting. One Soviet unit repulsed four attacks, one after another, but then was forced to retreat to new positions." How the Russians stood up under the pounding was baffling to many military experts.

Nazi assault forces had aimed their heaviest blows at Soviet anti-air and anti-tank batteries, thus striving to level these anchors of the centers of resistance. East of the Volga, said German reports, their fliers had raided important Russian airfields.

Russian attacks on the northwest front, near Leningrad, rolled on, stalled, rolled on again. Conflicting reports from Moscow and Berlin dimmed the picture of this front.

Germany claimed the fall of Novorossiisk, strategic Black sea naval base, and military sources saw its capture as a terrific blow to Russian naval action. Since the Soviet navy had been driven from its strongest base at Sevastopol fleet operations had been badly curtailed and the loss of Novorossiisk would even more hamper these operations.

DOUBLE OFFENSIVE:

In China

Strong Chinese offensives in central and southern China have succeeded in recapturing a number of important points, the Chinese high command has announced.

The drive in the central province of Anhwei liberated 25 villages in 20 days, while the thrust in the south resulted in the recapture of a number of places near Samsui, terminus of the Canton-Samsui railway 25 miles west of Canton.

The Chinese have recaptured the three most important air bases taken by the Japanese in their summer offensive. They are Chuhsien and Lishui in the coastal Chekiang province, and Yushan in Kiangsi. In addition, they have recaptured approximately 350 miles of the Chekiang-Kiangsi railway and more than 10,000 square miles of territory.

Chinese sources acknowledge that advances have been due in part to voluntary Japanese withdrawals. These withdrawals are looked upon as the prelude to a major attack against either India or Siberia.

The successful Chinese advances have largely nullified the effects of the Jap drive, which has been described as the greatest since the beginning of the "China incident."

JAPS ON KISKA: 'Must Be Thrown Out'

A stern warning that the Japanese must be thrown off the Aleutian island of Kiska was delivered by Sen. A. B. Chandler (Ky.), chairman of a senate military affairs subcommittee which recently investigated Alaskan and West coast defenses.

"The continued presence of the Japanese in the island of Kiska constitutes a continued menace and threat to the safety of the people of the United States, and they must be removed at the earliest possible moment," Chandler declared. He expressed the hope that the "high command" has been "awakened to the necessity of holding Alaska at all costs."

Chandler and his committee, upon its return from the 8,000-mile investigational trip, recommended immediate improvement of the Alaskan military establishments, including airplane ferry routes to Asia. He pointed out that a Jap offensive would be much more likely to succeed "if we failed to recognize the possibility of their coming up through the Aleutians to the American mainland."

SPAIN:

Complications

Many reliable foreign sources viewed the shake-up in Spain's political set-up as pretty much a domestic matter and forecast no general change in the pro-Axis leanings of Gen. Francisco Franco's government. Though one of Hitler's best friends in Spain, Foreign Minister Serrano Suner, had been ousted, it appeared that the main point of difficulty was discord between the Spanish army and the Falange political organization.

However, there was an international complication as well as the domestic dissension which had some effect on the change. Suner was reported to have lost diplomatic "face" because of the swing to the side of United Nations by many of the Latin-American countries.

GEN. FRANCISCO FRANCO

He was replaced by Count Gen. Francisco Gomez de Jordana and it was expected that both this new official and Franco would now be less inclined to issue anti-United Nations declarations even though their sympathies must continue to lean toward the Axis.

This point of view appeared to be rather well based on logic for Franco's power in great part is dependent upon help given him by Hitler and Mussolini. Yet as Latin-America tended to draw away from the Axis, he would be forced to take account of this attitude for the tie between his country and Central and South America is close.

SCRAP:

"Every home has scrap. We need it."

That was the message delivered to the nation by Donald Nelson, chairman of the War Production board as he discussed the critical scrap iron situation with newspaper publishers at a conference in Washington. Nelson had called the meeting to show these newspaper men how serious this problem really was. Scrap iron is urgently needed if the country's steel mills are to be kept running.

Jiggers, Japs! Here Come the Marines!

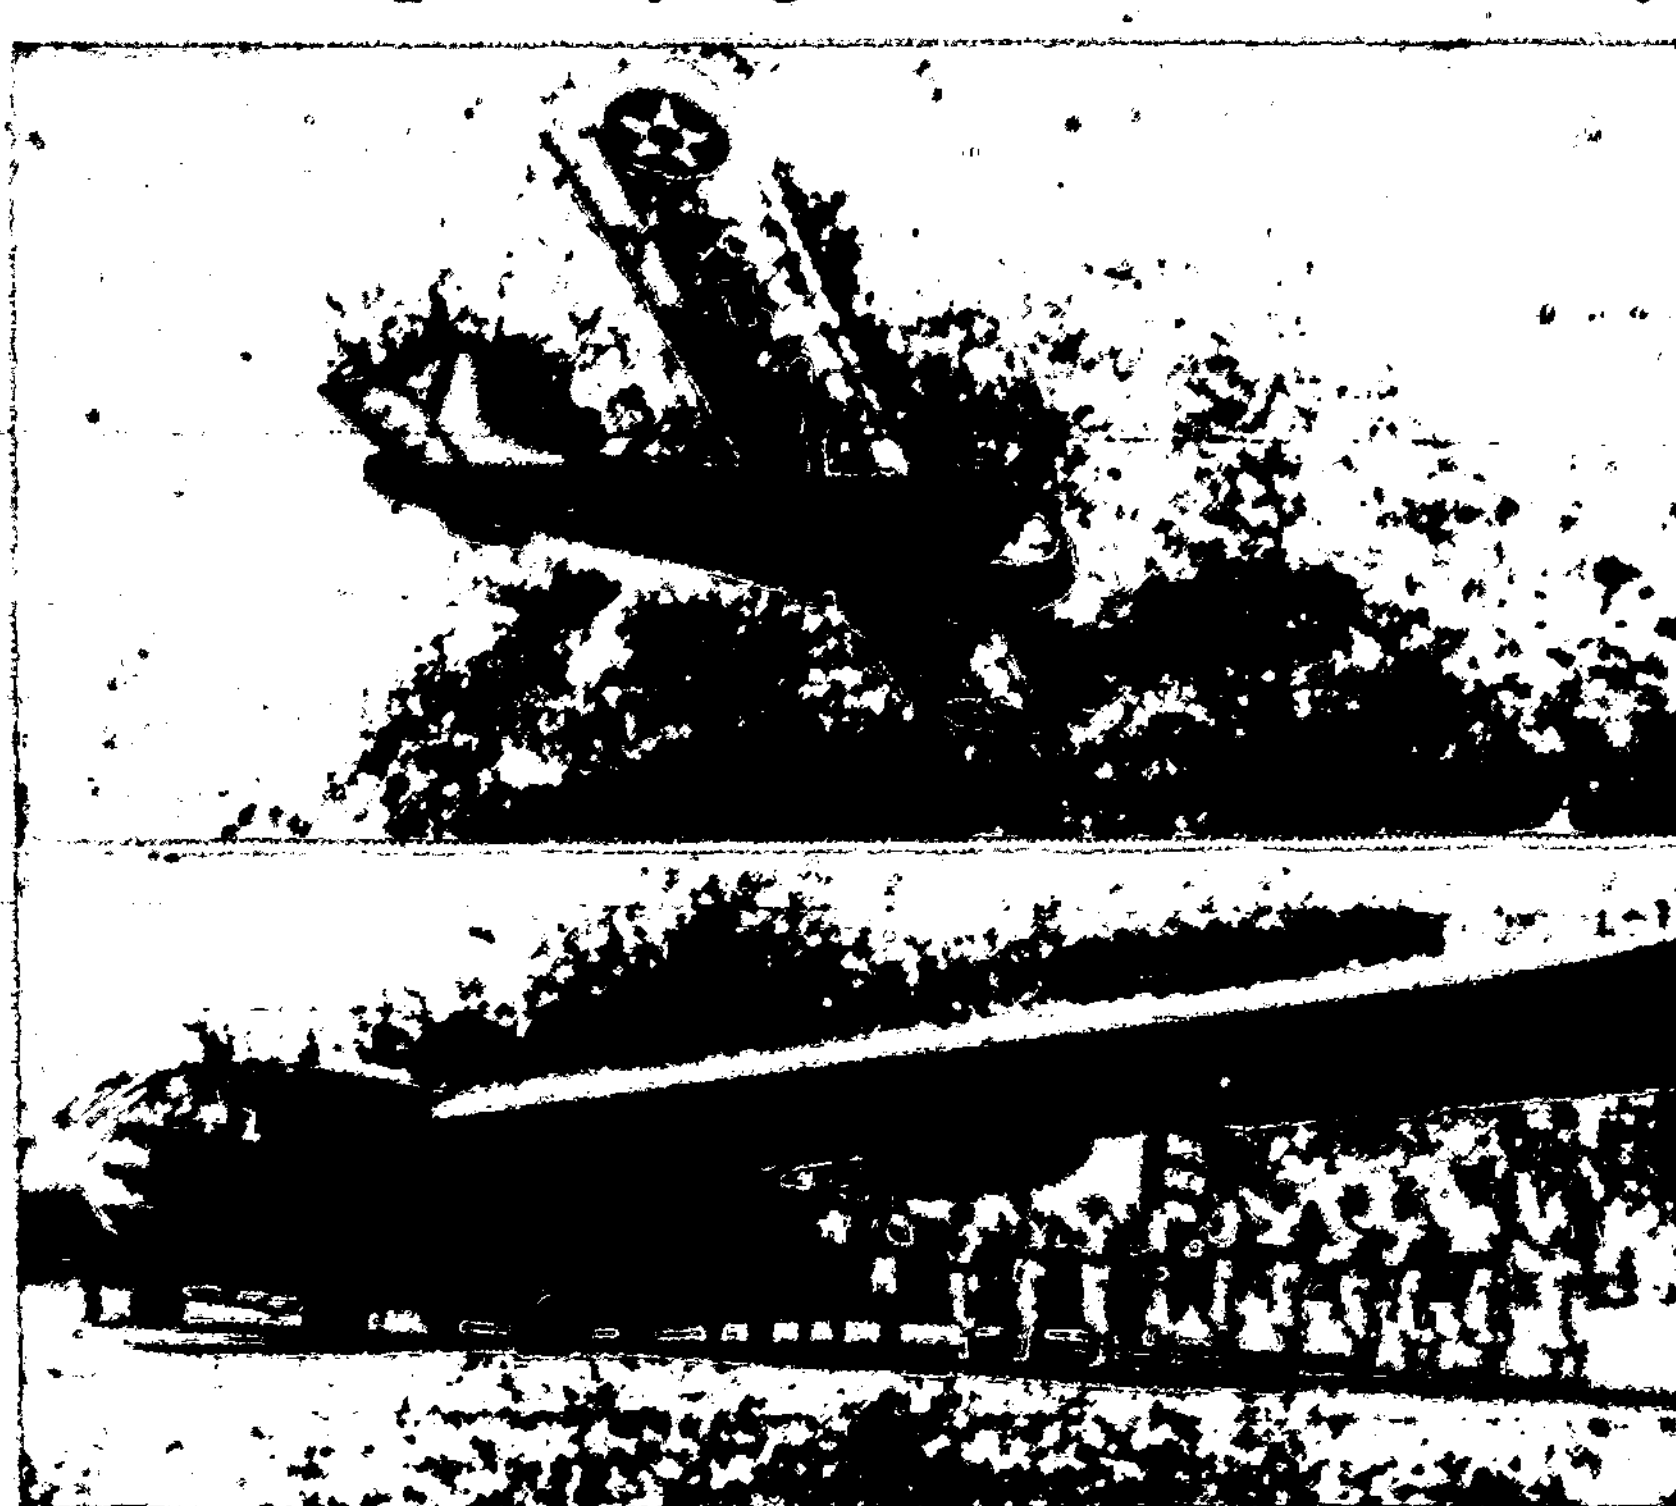

Above photos were taken immediately before and after the U. S. marines blasted the Japs from at least six of the Solomon islands. The amphibious tractor at top carries marines approaching the entrance to the first Jap army camp on Guadalcanal islands. Lower left: A deserted Jap machine gun emplacement is inspected by marines. The U. S. invaders tossed dynamite sticks down the holes to quiet the defenders. Right: Yanks set up emergency radio outfits for communication with advancing patrol forces of Leathernecks and ships of the fleet.

The Well-Dressed Commando—From Stem to Stern

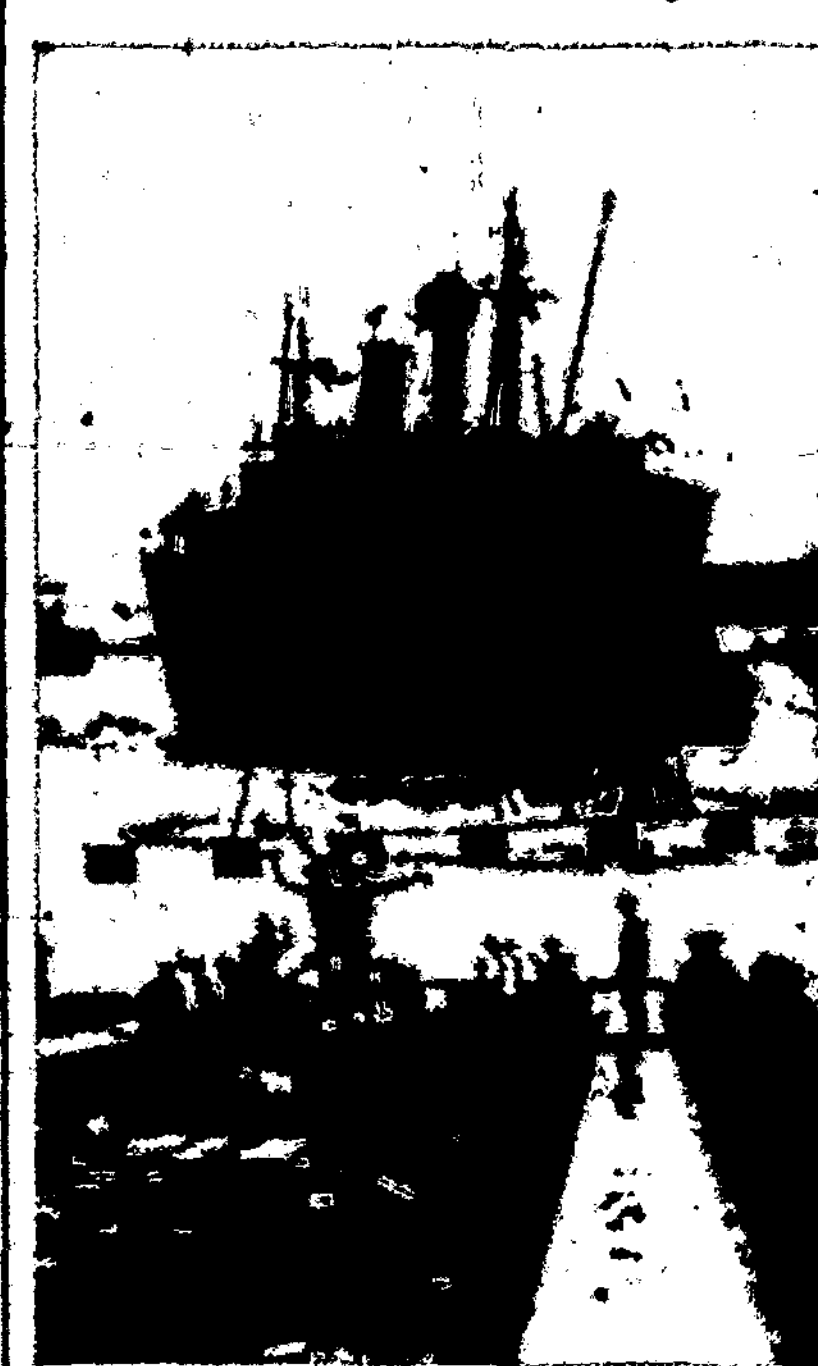

The camera got real close to this hard-bitten Commando trooper as he and his buddies returned from the raid on Dieppe, and succeeded in getting the lowdown on what the well-dressed Commando wears. And it's plenty! At left is a rear view, showing the pack and tools. (Center, front view.) Notice the brass knuckles and dagger in belt. The tube across the man's chest is attached to a life preserver. Tube is used to inflate the preserver if the Commando goes into the water. Right: An extra dagger carried in the scabbard in the Commando's gaiter. Note boots, armored for cliff climbing or high jumping.

New Troop-Carrying Glider for U. S. Army

Shown above in the air and on the ground is the army's 15-place troop-carrying glider, the CG-4A, now in quantity production at Wichita, Kans. In the hands of a skilled pilot the glider can be landed in almost any small field or pasture. The glider has a wing span of 83 feet and 8 inches, and weighs only 3,000 pounds. Note troops boarding glider in lower picture. Gliders of this type may be used against Axis when invasion time comes.

Built in 24 Days

Henry J. Kaiser handed to his government a 10,000-ton Liberty ship, the John Fitch, shown above, which was built in only 24 days. This shattered all records. By assembling the engine that went into the ship in just 30 hours another record was broken. Photo shows the launching from the Richmond, Calif., yards.

Milk Delivery on Pacific Isle Base

Here you see USAF officers sampling local coconut milk delivery on a South Pacific island airbase. The coconuts are a far cry from the containers in which their milk once was delivered "back in the states."

Pudding Bomb!

The "pudding bomb," used with good effect in the Egyptian desert, is said to be more potent than the "Meleev cocktail" for rendering German tanks hors de combat. Thrown at a tank, the "pudding" sticks to the side until it explodes.

HIGHLIGHTS

in the week's news

PEACEFUL: Because the law-abiding city of Old Ripley, Ill., (Pop. 115) had recourse for its fall, six tons of scrap metal from the cells have gone to the scrap-metal drive.

LIMIT: Because the volume is exceeding facilities for distributing it, air mail addressed for points outside the continental U. S. has been limited by weight to two ounces per piece.

COMMANDOS: It was announced in Ottawa that 170 Canadian soldiers lost their lives in the Commando raid on Dieppe, France.

FINGERPRINTS: Fingerprinting of every man, woman and child in the United States as a war measure is being urged by Rep. Sam Hobbs (Ala.), who is drafting legislation to that effect. It would also be a boon to law enforcement agencies.

EVER since she chalked up that amazing success in "Mrs. Miniver" Greer Garson has been pursued by producers who want her to do a play on Broadway this fall. She's read a dozen scripts and turned them down. Now she's been asked to do one called "Queen Elizabeth"; the asker is Margaret Webster, director-daughter of Dame May Whitty; she directed Miss Garson in her last London stage hit, "Old Music." If "Random Harvest," which the red-haired actress is making with Ronald Colman, is done in time, she may consent.

Frances Gifford, the new "Mrs. Tarzan," really owes her new assignment to the impersonation of Dorothy Lamour that she gave in the recently released "Henry, Heirrich Gets Glamour." William Thiele, who directed "The Jungle Princess," the first Lamour triumph, and is also directing "Tarzan Triumphs," caught the picture at a neighborhood theater, and asked to have "Miss Gifford tested for the role.

FRANCES GIFFORD

Clark Gable certainly made his departure from movie-making in a blaze of glory. His latest, "Somebody I'll Find You," which he did with Lana Turner, has outgrossed every one of the M-G-M pictures he has appeared in over the past seven years, with the exception of "Boom Town," and that doesn't count because it played at advanced admission prices.

Jean Arthur spent most of a day autographing 500 of her own photographs with kisses not long ago. It was just after she returned from a tour of army camps, following completion of "The Talk of the Town." Whenever she met a boy from New York city, where she was born, she promised to send him a photograph autographed with a kiss. She used two lipsticks before she'd finished.

Ever hear of processed parchment? Loretta Young encountered it the other day; found she'd been wearing it, in fact, in her new picture, "The Frightened Girl." It's a new substitute material, and was used in an evening gown.

So far as is known, Veronica Lake received the first request from an imprisoned American in Japan for a photograph. It came from marines taken prisoner at Wake island, and was forwarded by the International Red Cross.

A few months ago Ruth Hussey's bridegroom, Robert Longenecker, saw a newspaper picture of the actress. He clipped it and wrote under it, "Here's the girl I'd like to marry." Not long ago he could add "Here's the girl I did marry!" The photographer who took the original photograph, Eric Carpenter, also photographed the young couple's wedding!

Nelson Eddy and Announcer Bob Garred were so busy trying to outwit each other with amateur magic a while ago that the "on the air" signal for their radio show almost caught them off base. Nadine Connor looks upon their efforts with suspicion; she has sworn that the minute the pair shows an interest in the "sawing a woman in half" stunt she'll leave Eddy without a partner.

Kay Harris, feminine lead in Columbia's western feature, "The Fighting Buckaroo," was started in the first picture in which she appeared. It was "Tillie, the Toller."

ODDS AND ENDS—"Duff's Tavern," billed last season as one of the outstanding new program developments of the year, returns to the air October 6. Just for fun, Lou Nova and Lucille Charrier, member of the "Saint" mystery, went on an excursion in some of the Miami Beach scenes of "The Big Street" . . . Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins and George Brent will have the leads in Warner Brothers' picture of the successful stage play, "Old Acquaintance" . . . Marjorie Reynolds and Barbara Britton will be leading women for Bing Crosby in "Dixie," the story of Don Emmet, minstrel man.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

JUDAH: AN EXAMPLE OF SELF-SACRIFICE

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 44:18-34. GOLDEN TEXT—Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren.—1 John 3:16.

The family is still the fundamental unit of society, and is therefore of more importance than the church, the state, or the social order of which it is a vital part. Every force which encourages the breakdown of the sacred relationships of the home and family is for the destruction of society itself.

Men have too often chosen to go the way of the flesh, and therefore they have disregarded God's plan and purpose. But marriage is just as sacred as ever in His sight; the home is to be kept for Him; and brotherly love still finds a high place among the virtues of real men.

Today's lesson is a continuation of the story of Joseph's life. As we study it we must bear in mind Joseph's dealings with his brethren, who as yet did not recognize him as the one they had sold into captivity. He was bringing them kindly but definitely to the point of real repentance, so that he could show himself gracious to them.

To do so he had brought disaster upon them. Being happy on their way homeward with a new supply of food, they were overtaken and proved to be thieves, and Benjamin, the beloved of their father Jacob, stood condemned by their own words, to death.

In that crisis the mouths of the others seemed closed, but Judah, who had really saved Joseph's life (Gen. 37:25, 27) and who had apparently come to himself as a man of essential goodness, pleaded for Benjamin's life. That plea presented a truly sacrificial brotherly love, as he manifested

I. Courage (v. 18). Easy rests the yoke of family life as long as all is joyful and prosperous. But when adversity strikes, when sorrow comes, or sickness, or sin, then the true test of devotion is at hand.

It was a brave and manly thing for Judah to stand before the one whom he knew only as the man who was "even as Pharaoh." The circumstances were all against him. He expected the flaming anger of the offended ruler. His brethren had collapsed in despair. It was one of those dark hours which come to every family when someone must demonstrate true love by being strong-hearted and steady.

II. Intelligence (vv. 19-29). Crises call for more than a cheerful smile or an encouraging word, much as they may mean in such an hour. We must be prepared by our close contact with our loved ones to speak and act with vigor and assurance.

Judah's plea is a masterpiece of argumentation and appeal, demonstrating that he was not only well-informed about his family and its problems, but ready to use his knowledge skillfully and effectively.

III. Self-Denial (vv. 30-33). One step deeper goes the devotion of this man to his father and his brother. He had done no wrong that merited punishment, but evidently his brother Benjamin had been guilty. Had he been of the spirit of Cain he would have said, "Am I my brother's keeper?" and let him answer for himself. Why should Judah suffer for another? Why should he allow himself to be imprisoned in a strange land to save his father from sorrow and his brother from what seemed to be the just reward for his deeds?

Thus reasons the man of the world, but such is not the language of the true brother, who says, "Let thy servant abide instead of the lad as a bondman."

IV. Love (v. 34). Love for father and brother underlies all of the courage, conviction and self-sacrifice of a man like Judah. In his younger years, and possibly under the influence of his brothers, he had failed in that respect, but now his real devotion to his brother was evident.

That affection was a real, powerful, and beautiful thing, and yet it is but a faint prefiguring of the affection of the One who "sticketh closer than a brother," who "though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich" (Prov. 18:24; II Cor. 8:9).

Let us improve the opportunity to review our relations with our own family, to determine whether there is aught that we in intelligent and courageous self-sacrifice should do for our own.

Know Your Neighbors—Know your neighbors. Call on them to meet together, in your home to exchange information. This friendly association, this neighborliness, will create courage and confidence—the morale so necessary for victory.

Forgotten 'Savior'

THE 200th anniversary of an important event in American history passed almost unnoticed recently—at least, so far as any national observance of it was concerned. It was the Battle of Bloody Marsh, fought near St. Simon's, Ga., on July 7, 1732, and this fight was, according to historians, "one of the small number of decisive battles of all time."

When it ended in victory for the English colonists of Georgia it meant that the English, instead of the Spanish, should rule over what is now the southern part of the United States. For, had the Spaniards won that battle, English colonization in North America might have stopped at Virginia and our Southern states might now be a part of Mexico.

Not only is Bloody Marsh a "forgotten victory," but the man who won it is also something of a "forgotten hero." True, most Americans remember Gen. James Oglethorpe as the founder of the colony which became the state of Georgia. But few, if any of them, know of all his rights to fame, including the military genius which won that decisive victory 200 years ago.

His colony served as a buffer state between the Carolinas, the southernmost English colonies, and the Spanish settlement at St. Augustine in Florida. Among the Georgia colonists was a party of Scottish Highlanders who settled on St. Simon's island in 1735, established the town of Frederica and built a fort which was the British outpost nearest New Spain. Its strategic value was apparent to Gen. Oglethorpe, whose career as a soldier had begun at the age of 18 when he served under Prince Eugene against the Turks. At 19, upon the recommendation of the great Marlborough, he had been appointed aide-de-camp to the prince and had served brilliantly during the siege and capture of Belgrade. Then he gave up his military career to become a member of parliament and to begin his philanthropic labors which led to the founding of the colony of Georgia in 1733.

However, he had learned his military lessons well and when England and Spain went to war in 1739, he immediately led an expedition against Florida. He succeeded in capturing several Spanish outposts but failed to take St. Augustine. The Spaniards retaliated by attacking St. Simon's island but under Oglethorpe's leadership the tough Highlanders beat off the attack.

The next year Oglethorpe again descended upon Florida and drove the Spaniards within the defenses of St. Augustine, but did not have a force strong enough to capture the city. There was a lull in hostilities for the next two years. Then Oglethorpe attacked St. Augustine again but after a brief siege withdrew in such a manner as to trick the Spaniards into counterattacking.

They assembled an armada of 50 ships and set out for another assault on the English stronghold on St. Simon's island. Landing there, they were confronted by Oglethorpe's little army which fought a delaying action until the thistles which covered the island were at their prickliest stage, thus slowing down the barefoot Spanish soldiers who outnumbered the English seven to one. Oglethorpe maneuvered the enemy into fighting on ground of his own choosing, allowing them to push forward toward the fort along the edge of a marsh over a trail that was so narrow that the Spaniards had to advance in single file.

Then Oglethorpe launched his attack and cut the attackers to pieces. When the Spanish leader brought up reinforcements to cover his retreat, Oglethorpe ambushed these forces and the Spanish invasion ended in a complete rout.

This campaign proved that Oglethorpe was a great soldier. But he was also, according to one historian, "a great administrator, a great philanthropist, who instituted and supervised a colony for poor debtors, taking no salary, profits, perquisites or land; a great reformer; a great artist and a great Christian gentleman. As administrator, he founded the 12th street and ruled with justice and humanity the diverse elements which composed it; English debtors, Austrian religious refugees, Scottish Highlanders, Indians and Negroes.

Small 'Big' Men

It is a strange but true fact that we are living in an age of big men who are under medium height. Hitler is below average height, and so is Stalin. Churchill is by no means tall, although he is taller than little Franco. Mussolini is well below average, and he has always been rather ashamed of it. Until the Munich crisis very few people in this country had seen a photograph of Mussolini standing near any medium-built men. He was always photographed against the skyline, with the camera at a low angle, to give him height and that imposing jaw line.

The great Napoleon was only an inch over five feet, and his two most implacable enemies, Horatio Nelson and the duke of Wellington, were very little taller than he was. Wellington could never mount his horse without help or without a stone to stand on.

Serviceman Took Words Out of Burrough's Mouth

While Firestone, Edison, Ford, and Burroughs were touring, a light bulb and a tire on the car went wrong. Mr. Ford went into a store and said to the proprietor: "What kind of lights do you have?" "Edison," was the reply. "And tires?" "Firestone." "You may be interested to know that Mr. Edison and Mr. Firestone are in my car, and that I am Henry Ford." As the man was putting on the tire, Mr. Burroughs, with long white whiskers, leaned out of the car, and the man, looking at him, said: "Yeah, I know, you're Santa Claus."

FSA FARM LOANS

Returning this week from Las Cruces where he attended a district meeting of the Farm Security Administration, John R. Curry, rural rehabilitation supervisor of the Federal agency, said the FSA's program has been placed on a wartime footing.

"The Secretary of Agriculture as chairman of the National Food Requirements Committee has charged the Farm Security Administration, within the limits of available funds, the responsibility for bringing into full production the manpower and resources of all farm operators who are unable to achieve their full output through existing normal channels of assistance," he said. "This means that every activity of the Farm Security program will be considered on the basis of its contribution to the nation's war needs; that food production comes first; and that we will do nothing which does not contribute directly to the Food For Freedom Program."

Of interest to Lincoln County farmers was the announcement that loan funds are immediately available for food and feed preservation needs this fall and for food and feed production operation next spring.

The office is expected to make many more loans this year to farmers in this county than ever before because our program has been put on a full wartime basis. Mr. Curry said that "Farm Security" has the responsibility of giving the needy, low income farmer a chance to participate effectively in the national war effort.

Lincoln County farmers may obtain complete details about the FSA's wartime lending program by contacting Mr. Curry at his office in the courthouse at Carrizozo.

FARMERS AND RANCHERS AIDED IN MARKETING PRODUCE

A recent survey made by the Extension Service reveals that approximately 125 truckers will operate in Lincoln and other counties of New Mexico in buying produce which farmers and ranchers have for sale this year. Taking into consideration that the average trucker will operate two or three trucks, this means that prospects are good for marketing fruit, vegetables and livestock in Lincoln County.

The Extension Service is aiding with the marketing problem by sending semi-monthly reports to approximately 300 truckers in adjoining states, keeping them informed as to the time, the amount, and the type of produce that is available in Lincoln County. A recent survey revealed that at the beginning of the marketing season Lincoln County listed for sale 10,905 sheep, 3,006 cattle, 179,717 bushels of apples, 3,297 bushels of pears, 2,348 bushels of plums, and 4,000 lbs. of grapes, besides the miscellaneous truck crops composed of cabbage, beans, sweet corn, peas and carrots.
