

U. S. Transport 'Wakefield' Burns at Sea

The former luxury liner, Manhattan, now a naval transport ship and renamed the Wakefield, caught fire and was severely damaged at sea. More than 1,000 passengers and crew members were removed without loss of life by U. S. warships in the convoy. In the upper left the Wakefield is shown at sea, and at right is its commander, H. G. Bradbury. In lower left, passengers and crewmen are shown jammed on rear decks awaiting rescue. Notice the rope nets which were used to climb to the deck of rescue vessel. (Navy photos.)

Unsung Heroes of Medical Corps Play Important Role

One of the most ticklish jobs which men of the U. S. army medical corps are called upon to undertake is the removal of wounded men from the inside of tanks. The method of this removal may mean life or death to the casualty. At the left you see trainees from the medical corps field service school at Carlisle, Pa., engaged in the task. The man has been successfully removed through the tank turret and is being placed on a stretcher atop the tank. At right you see a demonstration of a method of transferring a pair of skis into a smooth-running litter for transporting a wounded man over the snow.

Commando Tactics at Harding Field, La.

Soldiers are undergoing a special training course in Commando tactics at Harding Field, La. Here we see a soldier about to leave the jumping tower and dive into a blazing pool of water. The soldiers are taught to swim with a modified breast stroke, splashing water in front of them to protect them from the flames. The tower from which they leap is 20 feet high, the approximate distance of a transport's deck from the water. In case of a torpedoing, the soldiers would have to dive into the flaming water with their full packs and swim for shore.

Mexico's President Makes Wartime Report

Gen. Manuel Avila Camacho, president of the United States of Mexico, makes his annual report before the congress of Mexico. This report—his first wartime capitulation of the situation—was particularly important and was addressed to the rest of the American continent as well as to Mexico. Thousands of distinguished guests heard him in person.

Laugh Is on Axis

The Axis boasted that a floating drydock they had sunk at an Egyptian port would never be raised. Capt. Edward Ellisburg, U.S.N., confounded them by raising the drydock in record time. He is shown here in an official ante in Egypt.

Find Dogs Still Big Help in War

Used as Draft Animals, Aids in Sentry Duty and as Messengers.

VICHY.—Pity the poor dogs and cats of Europe, those that do not starve to death in these days of famine or finish their days in a casserole as "rabbit," are likely to be mobilized and sent to the front as "auxiliary troops."

The canine and feline casualties in this war can be counted in millions. Even the exodus of millions of civilians from Holland, Belgium and northern France cost more than 10,000 animal lives. Pets either were abandoned along the way or left behind to forage for themselves or starve.

The Paris SPCA has begun a campaign to prevent the slaughter of dogs and cats as food.

Carry Aid to Wounded. "You see almost no cats in the streets of Paris now," an official of the SPCA said. "Three-fourths of them already have gone into the casseroles. The situation is so tragic that we are counseling all animal lovers not to give away their cats, unless they have confidence the persons who adopt them will not eat them. We already have chloroformed more than 5,000 strays to prevent them being eaten."

"As for the dogs, even though they are less menaced as a source of food, they are suffering greatly from hunger. There are many in the service of their country—with the armies, the police, the frontier custom guards. The police ceaselessly round them up by the hundreds to have dogs to train to help guard warehouses, railroads and to ride freight trains to guard against thieves."

Despite the modernization of armies with tanks, motorized artillery, and all other types of mechanical death-dealing, all European armies use dogs. They are being used as draft animals in Russia, as "eyes and ears" for soldiers on sentry duty, as liaison agents carrying messages, and to hunt out wounded in open terrain and either carry them first-aid material or guide ambulance men to them.

Police Dogs Best in Raids. Bulldogs and Alsatian police dogs make the best liaison runners; terriers are too inclined to stop and fight along the way. Boxers, and Doberman types, with short hair, make excellent sanitary dogs. The police dogs are the best auxiliaries of troops engaged in commando service. They are trained to crawl along the ground always at the shoulder of their crawling master, never in front or behind him. They are trained to stand up or lie down under all sorts of fire, shrapnel, machine gun or flame-throwers, until a message is slipped into their collars and with a snap on their flanks they are sent on their errand to GHQ.

Mountain troops of all European armies have dog corps, specially trained to hunt out and carry aid to troops caught under avalanches. They tunnel into the snow and smell out the trapped troops, then lie on them or lick their hands and faces until they instill some warmth in the bodies.

The mortality of fighting dogs is high, so it is necessary for all armies to have special schools where thousands of dogs are at all times undergoing instruction. They have been mentioned in dispatches and some have been awarded medals for bravery.

Fort on Rock Greatest

PEST TO GREAT BRITAIN LONDON.—Pantellaria, volcanic rock between Sicily and the mainland of Africa, has become perhaps the greatest thorn in the side of the British in the Mediterranean.

Each successive month sees the heavily fortified, Italian-held island becoming an increasingly vital factor in the strategy of the war in the Mediterranean.

All British convoys sent through the Mediterranean have to pass it. It is only 70 miles from Sicily and 50 from the African coast.

From it the Italians are able to send out airplanes which incessantly patrol the narrow seas between Sicily and Africa. Only rarely does a British or Allied vessel get through without being subject to aerial attack.

Pantellaria is eight miles long and about five miles wide, a mere dot on the map. It is fortified with siege guns of 11-inch caliber, has a mine to give some sort of protection to shipping using the bad anchorage there, and an airfield blasted out of the rock by an army of workmen a year before the war.

Wooden Beds to Replace Steel Cots for Soldiers

WASHINGTON.—A specially designed wooden bed will replace the present steel folding cot in all future army purchases by the United States Quartermaster corps, it was announced recently.

The initial purchase of wooden beds will divert some 31,500 tons of steel to other war needs. Their adoption will release an equivalent of scrap steel, approximating a double track of 100 miles of rail.

We Lost This 'War'

IF WE Americans are given to boasting that "we have never yet lost a war," we'd better not look too closely into the records of one which Uncle Sam was fighting just 75 years ago. For the fact is that we actually did lose this one in the sense that we failed to whip the enemy and, having thus failed, were forced to resort to peace negotiations to end it. Moreover, it was probably one of the costliest wars we ever waged—in terms of the total cost in relation to the forces engaged and the "per capita cost of killing an enemy."

This all-but-forgotten conflict was the campaign waged against the Sioux, Cheyennes, Arapahoes, Kiowas, and Comanches in Kansas and Nebraska by Generals Winfield S. Hancock and George A. Custer in 1867. Its causes are not easy to state, involving as they do the usual elements of treaties broken by land-hungry white men and raids against the settlements by ambitious young warriors whom their chiefs could not control.

When Hancock set out from Fort Leavenworth in April, 1867, he had a force of 1,400 men—infantry, cavalry, artillery and a pontoon train—the largest army that had yet been sent against the Indians of this region. With this necessarily slow-moving force, he started out to fight the most mobile type of light cavalry in the world—the Plains Indians who had been mounted warriors and buffalo-hunters for generations.

Even the fact that four troops of the Seventh cavalry under Lieut. Col. George A. Custer was a part of his army offered little encouragement for the belief that it could campaign successfully against the wild riders of the Plains. As one of the "boy generals" in the Civil war, Custer had been an outstanding cavalry leader, but he was new to Indian warfare. His troops—most of them raw recruits from the East—were poor stuff to send against such adversaries as the Indians soon proved to be.

By his heroic conduct during the Civil war, the commander of the expedition had justified his right to the title of "Hancock the Superb." But he was considerably less than that in dealing with the Indians and the net result of his blundering methods was to bring about a war instead of preventing one. At a council with the Kiowas at Fort Dodge he blustered and threatened but failed to frighten their chiefs into promising to make their warriors behave. He was equally un diplomatic in a council with the Sioux and Cheyennes near Fort Harker and when the Cheyennes abandoned their village as his army approached, he returned it to the ground.

Naturally the Cheyennes went on the warpath, killing settlers and employees of the stage line while Hancock's army slowly crawled over the hot prairies in futile pursuit of an enemy that couldn't be caught. Nor did Custer's cavalry fare any better. For, no matter how hard they tried, they could never catch up with their elusive foe.

By July the charge was made in the United States senate that "the war is now costing daily at least $150,000 and if it lasts through the summer (and at the present rate will certainly do that) it will cost us $100,000,000 without having accomplished anything." The war did last through the summer and, according to George Bird Grinnell in his book "The Fighting Cheyennes," Hancock's command, "while he was in the field and later, in four months of active campaigning, had killed just four Indians." If the senate estimate and Grinnell's statement are correct that meant that it cost the United States more than $4,000,000 to kill each of those four warriors! That is why it was one of the most expensive wars Uncle Sam ever waged, and by no stretch of the imagination can it be said that he won it. It was not until the Medicine Lodge treaty was signed the following October that peace returned to the Plains.

One little-known fact in connection with this little-known war is that it almost resulted fatally for the military reputation of one of its leaders. For Custer, driven almost frantic by the frustration of his efforts to win a victory over the Indians, was led into a series of rash acts that ended in a court-martial and his suspension from rank and command for a year. However, his victory at the battle of the Washita in 1868 restored him to favor of the authorities and started him on his successful career as an Indian fighter.

THESE orange crate bedside tables are useful and easy to make; they are very decorative, too, when fitted out as illustrated. These were lined with green oil cloth cut, fitted and pasted as shown. The full skirt pieces were lapped a few inches around the back. A top cover with a three-inch frill all around was then added. The bedspread is trimmed with five-inch frills of the muslin and one-inch straight bands over seams and for the monograms.

NOTE: These bedside tables are from BOOK 7 of the series of 24-page booklets that Mrs. Spears has prepared for readers. BOOK 2 contains a complete alphabet for making monograms similar to the one on the bedspread. Books are 10 cents each. Concerts—No Audiences

Are You Needlessly Suffering Constipation?

Many people think that constipation is "one of those things" you must put up with. That the only thing you can do is take a purge or cathartic—and hope it doesn't come soon again. How foolish that is if you, like millions of others, have the ordinary kind of constipation that's due to lack of "bulk" in the diet. Kellogg's All-Bran is probably just what you need. This crisp, delicious cereal has the "bulk"-forming properties your intestines need to function "regularly." It gets at the cause of your trouble and corrects it—helps you get back to normal, easy elimination. Eat All-Bran regularly, drink plenty of water, and help free yourself from constipation. All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is not helped by this simple treatment, it's wise to see a doctor.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Hitler found out that his high powered mechanized and motorized army bogged down in the snow and mud of the Russian Winter. Although our Army is largely mechanized the cavalry horse is still a highly essential factor in this mounted division and in the Field Artillery. The Army also insinuates remount farms where many cavalry horses are bred and raised.

These select horses cost from $100 to $1000 and our crack cavalrymen are expert riders and carry on the traditions which have followed the cavalry from the earliest days of the Army. Purchase of War Savings Bonds will insure good mounts for the Cavalry. You and your neighbors buying War Bonds and Stamps regularly every pay day can help buy these horses for the U. S. Cavalry. Invest at least 10 percent of your income in War Bonds.

The 31-year-old Luning was seized early this month by Cuban police who described him as one of the most important spies yet captured in America.

Among other things, he was said to have confessed sending by short wave radio and by code letters information on the arrival and departure of Allied and Neutral ships, in Cuban harbors.

Air Radio—World War I

August, 1917. Army observers and Western Electric technicians stand by at ground station as the "flying radio" goes aloft for the first test of two-way plane-to-ground radiotelephone communications.

Flying Radio in Two World Wars

August, 1942, marks the completion of 25 years of development in the field of aviation radio. The Western Electric Company, which demonstrated two-way radio communication between plane and ground a quarter-century ago and which is now turning out aviation radio for the armed forces, last week observed the anniversary during ceremonies celebrating the award of the Army-Navy "E" award for production.

A look into the files of Western Electric's engineering department reveals that America had been at war with the Kaiser's Germany for barely a month when the Signal Corps handed the company the task of developing radio voices and ears for the fighting planes of World War I.

Three months later a sputtering Jenny (Curtis-JN-4D Training Plane) bounced off Langley Field, Virginia, and began to circle the airfield. Pilot and passenger were equipped with devices new to the air—microphones connected to the first "flying radio." On the ground, company engineers and Army technicians huddled over the equipment that made up history's first aviation radio ground station. One of the technicians spoke into a hand "mike." There was a moment of tense expectancy and then the atmosphere eased as the technician's earphones crackled. Through the roar of the Jenny's motor he could hear the pilot talking.

The words that passed between plane and ground and vice-versa were probably work-a-day technical talk. But though there was no "What hath God wrought?" or "Mr. Watson, come here; I want you" to go down in the history books in connection with radio's first flight, the far-reaching effects of the history-making demonstration were immediately plain to Army air chiefs. Western Electric promptly mobilized for mass production of aviation radio sets on Army orders. In 1918 President Wilson directed the maneuvers of a squadron of Army planes from a radio ground station set up on the White House lawn.

Today, in World War II, the same company is once again mass-producing aviation radio sets—this time in numbers which dwarf to insignificance the output of World War I. Today the company's aviation radio lines are matching the output of America's aircraft factories. In 1942 every U.S. Army plane is equipped with versatile, compact, rugged radio sets, direct descendants of that first 1917 flying radio. Through them, units of America's fighter and bomber squadrons keep in constant touch with each other and with ground stations.

HE TALKS THROUGH HIS THROAT

It looks like Mary Boland's choker. It's really a new type of microphone for the men of the Armored Force. Easier to slip on than his necktie, the new mike snags about the tank man's throat, leaving his hands free for action on the controls or machine gun button. Two small "mike buttons" press gently against the column of the throat, pick up the tank commander's words directly from vocal cord vibrations, cutting out all extraneous noises, the roar of motors, the chatter of machine guns, and thus eliminating one of the handicaps to intelligibility in combat communications. Microphones like this, as well as rugged tank radios, are coming off Western Electric assembly lines. On the fighting front they will provide the clear communication between armored units so vital to successful mechanized attack.

Some small dams on the Rio Ruidoso and the Hondo have been damaged by recent rains however the larger dams in general are in good shape.

Recent hailstorms in the Hollywood area did considerable damage to truck crops and for a time it appeared that some fields of cabbage might be a total loss but growers are now of the opinion that a fair crop of cabbage will be harvested unless there is an early freeze.

Apple growers of the Rio Ruidoso and Hondo area report that they are not encountering any particular difficulty in obtaining labor to harvest the crop this year and that the demand for trucks available for transportation.

How to make your car last a lot longer

Five neighbors, with only 6,000 miles left on their tires, can, by taking turns driving, each ride 30,000 miles before any re-treading is necessary. Start or join a driving club today and save precious tires.

Don't bump into or scrape curbs. Check pressures weekly. Thirty per cent under-inflation reduces tire mileage 50 per cent. Drive "50 or less." Avoid "squeaking" on turns and save extra tire miles will result.

Visit a Pontiac dealer at least once a month for a wheel alignment check. A wheel one-half inch out of line will drag a tire sideways 87 feet in every mile. Have him switch tires every 4,000 miles, too.

Pontiac's FREE "Motor Doctor" inspection prevents little troubles from becoming costly repairs. Regular inspection by your Pontiac dealer is the cheapest way to preserve something you can't replace until the war is won.
