No Substitute for Experience;
Treasurer's Job Important

The Treasurer of Lincoln County occupies a position of major importance. Mr. John E. Wright, nominee for Treasurer, will bring to this important office a train of experience in this particular type of work the job calls for. And in public business, as well as private business, there is no substitute for experience.

Mr. Wright has been a New Mexico tax payer for over twenty-five years, during that time he was connected with the Public Service business, as an administrator, auditor and accountant.

For over a quarter of a century he has shown his fairness to labor as an established policy of democracy with equal consideration of his men regardless of race, politics or creed. He has taken a constructive interest in religious, civic and educational affairs in the county.

It is his firm belief that a public office represents a public trust and that a public official must be responsible to the people. As a business man, he knows the value of a dollar. Then—Vote Right and Vote for John E. Wright, on November 3rd for Treasurer of Lincoln County.

To the Voters of Lincoln County

The Republican party of New Mexico has honored me with the nomination for the United States Senate. My record as District Attorney for twelve years should enable you to judge whether you will vote for or against me. If you are not acquainted with my record ask any Democratic friend of yours who does know.

It is but proper that you should know my position upon vital questions of the day; briefly I advocate the following—

The conduct of the war must be left to our military machine without political interference.

War contract profiteering be stopped.

Strikes in war industries should be outlawed and violators subjected to immediate induction into the armed forces at soldier's pay.

Work on all public projects should be open to all American citizens without payment of tribute to racketeers

Unessential non-defense spending must be stopped for the duration of the war.

New Deal domestic policies have stifled thrift, industry and initiative; they must be revised.

The Hatch Act should be enforced or repealed.

We must have more business in Government and less Government in business.

Governmental agencies should cease payment of unnecessary high wages, because private industry can not compete, result is crippling all kinds of business.

Retire Senators and Representatives who did not oppose pensions for Congress.

Armed forces must be given due representation in framing all peace treaties.

Deportation of all enemy Japs from the United States. Universal draft of all man power is imperative to the successful prosecution of war, thereby insuring employees for farmer, rancher and industries.

With but few exceptions my opponent is a New Deal Rubber Stamp Senator and he advocated repeal state primary law for state offices.—I oppose his position on both issues.

In the State we need a larger Penitentiary for all corrupt public officials and a Governor who will let them stay there.

We need laws preventing payroll padding and false expense accounts; Joe Tondre for Governor promises these changes, his opponent has not, REMEMBER, YOU ELECT A SENATOR FOR SIX YEARS.

A large number of troops can be hid from the enemy by the smoke screen set down by a plane. Right: White Corp. Hamilton Moody of Northfield, N. New Anti-Sub Weapon—the Sea Skimmer Newest weapon to combat the submarine menace is the sea-skimmer sub-chaser, which hops the waves at 50 miles per hour. It is armed with four depth charges, which can be replaced by torpedoes. Except for the engine and propeller, it is built entirely with non-strategic material—plywood plastic—and can be molded out by the thousands in a short time. As it is not driven by a water propeller it cannot be detected by submarines. Top photo shows the two-man crew at the guns. Bottom photo shows the sub-chaser skimming over the water.

Rubber Director Speaks for Rayon

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ON MEAT RATIONING

Q.—I see that my 2 1/2 pound weekly meat ration includes the bone. Does it include my butcher's hand?
A.—There may be some way to keep your butcher's fat out of it, but it will take more than a global war.

Q.—The government says that if I have dinner in a restaurant and order a steak I should deduct its weight from my home quota. How can I weigh a steak in a restaurant?
A.—This is a complicated matter. In some restaurants the average weight of a steak is about two ounces including the plate, knife and fork. If you are lucky enough to know a restaurant that serves a real steak the waiter will give you the weight. Or you can use this formula: Let "X" equal the appetite; let "B" equal the steak and let "W" equal the price quoted on the menu. You then get the number of square feet in each room and divide by the storm windows.

Q.—Suppose some friends invite me to their home for dinner and serve roast beef. I take a second helping. Do I have to deduct this from my home ration of meat or just write it off under the heading of good neighbors?
A.—You're going to cause trouble if you try to weigh the portions served by any host.

Q.—Mr. Wickard says that there are plenty of meat products that are not rationed. He lists these as kidneys, brains and hearts. How can I learn to eat those things?
A.—Dark glasses and plenty of mustard will help.

Q.—Sausages and frankfurters are not to be rationed. Why?
A.—It would seem to prove what we have always contended: Whatever is in them, it isn't meat.

Q.—Why is it all right to eat plenty of chicken?
A.—There is plenty of chicken because it is seldom served in the army, due to the fact that the officers take everything but the neck. It is rarely offered in the navy because of a belief that it is just as well not to let sailors know there is a food other than beans.

Q.—What is the situation about eggs?
A.—There is or will be a ceiling on eggs, which, after all, is preferable to eggs on the ceiling. The hens have had a pretty good year. They were late learning about the war and didn't worry.

Q.—What about Tootsy? That's my airdale. I've had him eight years and he has developed a habit of getting at the meat before I can reach it myself. He is very intelligent and there is no use trying to kid him by saying: "Sit up and beg and mummy will give you a herring." Last Tuesday he bit the letter carrier. Today he bit the milkman and two neighbors. The next thing you know he may cause a national calamity by biting a Gallop Poll taker.

A.—It would seem up to all callers to wear leggings.
Elmer Twitchell says he favors an immediate second front but questions whether Willkie is in shape for it yet.

A New York woman turned her automobile over in the old metal collection. Elmer Twitchell says he could have done it with his jalopy long ago, as ever so many people told him it was just junk.

The meat shortage is going to be a little tough on the lunch-room men who have for years been substituting veal for chicken in chicken pie.

Rogers' Rangers, 1942 Model

WHEN a party of United States Rangers went on a British Commando raid in German-occupied France recently, the ghost of doughty old Robert Rogers must have smiled grimly and appreciatively to his fellows in that Valhalla where wander the shades of mighty warriors. For these American soldiers, trained like the British Commandos to climb mountains and jump down high cliffs, speed noiselessly through dense forests and kill silently with knives rather than with guns, gave such a good account of themselves against the Nazis as to prove their right to be named for Rogers' Rangers and thus perpetuate, with their deeds, the fame of those rough-and-ready bushfighters of long ago.

MAJ. ROBERT ROGERS

Rogers was born in 1727 at Dunbarton in the English colony of New Hampshire. His youth was spent as a hunter and trapper in the forests of New England and Canada and there he learned the lessons in Indian warfare which were to make him invaluable in the French and the Indian war.

At the opening of that conflict in 1755 Rogers led a force of hardy woodsmen from New Hampshire to Albany, N. Y., where the British and Colonial forces were being assembled to attack the French forts at Crown Point and Ticonderoga. Sir William Johnson, the great Colonial leader, knowing of Rogers' reputation, used him and his men as scouts. Making his headquarters at Fort William Henry, a new post at the south end of Lake Champlain, Rogers began a series of forays against the French and their Indian allies.

So valuable did these New Hampshiremen prove to be as scouts and fighters that at the opening of the spring campaign in 1756, their leader was given a special commission by the Earl of Loudon, British commander-in-chief, to raise a picked corps of bush fighters who were to receive the same pay as the regulars but who were to carry on their operations in their own way. Thus came into existence that splendid body of military irregulars, known as Rogers' Rangers, who were to become the terror of their enemies and set the pattern for fighting methods of American frontiersmen for the next century.

Some of their adventures and their exploits make those of the dime novel heroes seem tame by comparison. When Kenneth Roberts came to write an historical novel about Rogers' Rangers, it wasn't necessary for him to draw upon his imagination to make it thrilling. All he had to do was tell the facts—as anybody who saw the movie "Northwest Passage" can testify.

Rogers' reward for his service was small. He visited England and suffered from poverty until he borrowed money with which to print his Journal. He presented this to the king and in 1765 was appointed commandant at Michillimackinac. Accused of dishonesty he was sent in irons to Montreal and court-martialed. He went to England again but was soon imprisoned for debt.

Later he returned to America and at the outbreak of the Revolution found himself suspected by both the Patriots and Tories. Arrested by orders of Washington, he was later placed on parole but he was so embittered by this treatment that he broke his parole and openly joined the British.

Banished from America in 1778, he went to England where his later career was described as "wild, imprudent and extravagant." He died some time after 1800, "a victim to his evil habits." Thus ended in anti-climax the life of this "first-class fightin' man."

Among those who served as Rogers' Rangers were two who were destined for future fame as leaders in the Continental army during the Revolution. One was another New Hampshireman, John Stark, later the victor at the Battle of Bennington, a "curtain-raiser" to the decisive battle of the Revolution—Saratoga. The other was from Connecticut and he was associated with Rogers in some of his most daring exploits against the French and Indians. His name was Israel Putnam—"Old Put" of Bunker Hill and Long Island battle fame.

SADDLE and RIDE

By ERNEST HAYCOX WNU-Release

THE STORY SO FAR: Clay Morgan has decided to play a lone hand against Ben Herendeen, a rancher bent on running the cattle country his own way. The two men have been enemies for years, having first fought over Clay's wife, Lila, who died hating him and believing she should have married Herendeen. Morgan is a solitary figure, devoted to his nine-year-old daughter, Janet. Although two women, Catherine Grant and Ann McGarrak, are in love with him, they know he cannot forget Lila. Of his former friends, only Hack Breathitt has not gone over to Herendeen's side. Gurd Grant, Catherine's brother, hesitated about joining Herendeen, but became Morgan's sworn enemy when he discovered that Catherine had been to his ranch. Learning at the last minute that Government Valley is to be auctioned at Sage City 194 miles away, Clay rides all night and arrives in time to outbid Charley Hillhouse, Herendeen's foreman. When he learns that Herendeen has sent a party out to find Hack Breathitt and kill him, Clay starts out to find him first. He goes to Freeport, to Kern Case's store, where he thinks he will find Hack. As he is talking to Case, Herendeen appears in the doorway.

"Next time you go over to Morgan's, don't bother to come back."

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER X

On the same day Morgan returned from Sage City, Charley Hillhouse had pulled into Three Pines and reported his failure to Herendeen. Both of them had been thoroughly certain of success and now Herendeen sat in astonished silence, the back of his neck flushing and his hazel eyes freezing on Hillhouse. Charley felt this had luck keenly; it was a personal loss to him, so complete was his loyalty to the ranch, so partisan a man he was. He rolled a cigarette, laying his shoulders against a porch post. There was no sweetness in the smoke.

"If we'd kept that damned notice down another twenty-four hours—" Herendeen said. "He was at the dance Friday night. He couldn't see it. That's why Harry Jump came to town in such a lather. What'd he pay?"

"Eleven thousand."

"Why didn't you keep on?" said Herendeen, irritably. "Why didn't you know him under? My God, Charley, I send you two hundred miles for something we had to have, and you buckle up."

"You set the limit," pointed out Hillhouse. "I went to the limit and that's all I could do."

"You should have figured the limit didn't mean a thing against Morgan."

Hillhouse defended himself with blunt warmth. "I'm no mind reader. I can't guess what's in your head, Ben. When you lay out something for me to do, either give me free rein or else be damned sure how you tell me to do it." He threw the cigarette away. "Well, we've lost it."

"Charley," said Herendeen, "the country ain't big enough for both Morgan and me."

"So it's fight," said Hillhouse, and let the long silence fall while he soberly considered the answer. He sighed a little and at last shrugged his shoulders. "Been a long time coming."

Herendeen said: "Stay clear of it, Charley, if you feel like that."

Hillhouse shook his head. "No," he mused, "a man can't be half of one thing and half of another. He'd be a mighty poor man. I'll do what I got to do. If it means I lift a gun against Clay Morgan I'll do it—and God take pity on me for it." He gave Herendeen a searching glance. "But don't make no mistakes about Clay. When you call his hand you better be ready to go right on with it. What do I say to him when he asks me to move those cows?"

"Let him worry about that."

Hillhouse didn't like the answer and was on the point of saying as much when Herendeen broke in. "Right now we've got Hack Breathitt to find. Take out three-four men and beat up the country around Dell Lake."

Hillhouse hadn't heard about that. He said, "What's he done?" When Herendeen told him, he considered it over a long interval. Afterwards his shoulders rose and fell, expressively shaking away a good many memories. "I guess the wild bunch finally got him. Been taeterin' on the edge of crookedness a long while. Well, I'll find him."

Long as he had known Charley Hillhouse, it astonished Herendeen now that his foreman should so calmly accept the dismal chore of hunting down a man who had been one of his deep friends. Long after Hillhouse had lined out across the flats, Herendeen puzzled it around his head. As for himself, Herendeen had no scruples to explain away. He was a cattleman protecting his range by whatever means necessary, with an ambition to extend that range by whatever means necessary. A man in this land had rights; if he wasn't big enough to hold them; if he wasn't big enough then he had no rights. This was Herendeen's philosophy entirely.

But Hillhouse had in his long cool head a strange standard of right and wrong; and a zeal as passionate as that of a fanatic. This kind of man could do terrible things and feel terrible emotions. He was, Herendeen thought, like a fellow packing a stick of dynamite in his pocket—uncomfortable at times to have around.

This was the extent of Herendeen's thoughts on the matter. Turning to his horse, he lined out through the Haycreek Hills, reaching Crowfoot at supertime. He stopped here for his meal and later made a little talk on the porch with Gurd and Catherine.

"Charley pulled out this afternoon to round up a few men and scout the west side of the Moguls. We're after Breathitt. I've got Bones McGee up on the high trail, near Ketchell's."

Gurd said, "Believe I'll go sit in with Charley. Where you going?"

"Toward Freeport."

Gurd said: "Better be careful. That's a tough district."

Herendeen let out a huge laugh as he went to his horse. "Gurd," he said, "I never saw the man I was afraid of or the piece of brush I couldn't ride through." Late fall's twilight began to deepen around the yard; it turned the porch gray. From his horse Herendeen watched Catherine, who had said nothing at all. These shadows quenched the shining of her copper-red hair. But she was strong and shapely, the roundness of her upper body having its effect on him. Her face was a pale oval against the dark background; her eyes were very black. When she stirred, arms slowly rising behind her head and changing the shape of her silhouette, Herendeen had his moment's intense desire to get down from the horse. Had Gurd not been there he would have done so. He only said, "See you later," and fell into the Freeport road, never forgetting how she had looked.

As soon as he had gone Catherine said to her brother: "You don't mean that, Gurd. Stay out of it. Hack has done nothing to us."

Gurd walked down the steps. "Never mind. We've got to stick together."

She said: "Do you realize it is Clay's friend you're trying to kill?"

"Then he had better pick better friends."

"You've changed," she said. "What's happened?"

He came back up the steps and stopped before her. "Sure, I've changed. His voice was monotonous and odd. 'Morgan had his choice to stick with us and didn't do it. Then let him go to the devil. He's not my friend now.'

"Listen," she said, "you'd better understand me. There will never be a rider on the Crowfoot outfit sent after Hack, or used to run errands for Herendeen."

He said, "Who's running this outfit?"

"You are, as long as you stick to business. What's the matter with you lately?"

He seized her arm then, his face drawing near enough for her to see distrust on it.

"Next time you go over to Morgan's, don't bother to come back."

She pulled free of his arm and hit him across the face with her hand. She said, "You're a small little boy, Gurd. Why don't you try to be a man?"

He shouted, "We'll see!" and jumped off the porch. A moment later he raced out of the yard, bound over the Haycreek Hills toward the west flank of the Moguls.

The clay dust of the road was a ghostly glowing ribbon unrolling between the shadowy timber banks, and as Herendeen traveled he made a perfect target for the rustlers and the fugitives and dispossessed nesters who made camp in the lost hide-outs of this section. They hated all cattlemen. He knew this perfectly well and watched the black margins of the road with a sharper attention than usual, but it never occurred to him to turn back. In this man was a belief, strong as a shield of steel, that no bullet would ever reach him. This belief completely governed Ben Herendeen's life.

The road, rising from the timber, reached a small burn on which the black and gray snags of once living timber showed a striped gaunt pattern against the swelling moonlight. Entering this barren spot, Ben Herendeen caught the smell of dust, and at once squared his heavy body on the saddle, meanwhile dropping a hand to the butt of his gun. Over by the far margin of the burn he saw a horseman drift into the pearly, diffused light and halt by the road. Herendeen let his horse singlefoot the waiting shape. Then he slowed down.

The man said: "Ben?"

Herendeen halted in. "Nothing wrong with your eyes, Pete."

Pete/Borders chuckled. "How could a man miss? You throw a shape big as the side of a barn."

Herendeen said: "Late for you. Or maybe a little early."

Pete Borders said in his easy, amused way: "Just enjoyin' a pretty night."

"I want to talk to you."

"Fire away, I guess we have done some talkin' before."

Herendeen said: "I wouldn't trust you out of sight, Pete, and if I ever caught you with one of my cows I'd hang you higher than a kite."

"Ain't ever caught me, Ben."

"Remember what I'd do if I did," retorted Herendeen. "Do your sneakin' in other places and we'll get along. I propose to run every hay-wire rider out of this country in short order but if you stay clear of me nothin's going to trouble you at all. I can use a fellow like you once in a while." He thought about it, letting the silence settle gently between them. Then he said: "Go up to Government Valley and work over Morgan's stuff. He's too short-handed to watch that end of his range."

"Ben," said Borders indulgently, "you sure make me ashamed for bein' a piker. You're a bigger crook than I ever thought of bein'."

"You grind your coffee in one mill and I'll grind mine in another," said Herendeen, taking no offense. "I can make it hard for you, or I can let you alone. Just work along like I said."

"Sure," said Borders. "But keep your riders away from that district at night so I won't be bumpin' into 'em. I got to cross your range."

Morgan stood with his back to the stove, gently rubbing his hands along the seat of his pants. Kern Case, grave and unmoved, murmured: "Evenin', Ben."

For the moment nothing else was said. Herendeen ignored Case, studying Morgan with his round hazel eyes half-shut. He filled the doorway with his heavy legs and high, huge shoulders.

Morgan brought his hands forward, reaching for his tobacco to make up a cigarette. This was the length of the silence. When he struck a match and cupped it to his face he stared over the rim of his fingers, reading Herendeen with a steady interest. The man had swung into the room quickly, as though to surprise somebody; and he stood now with his thoughts pretty much on his face, his glance rummaging all the dark corners of the room. Morgan thought he knew the answer to that. Herendeen had expected to find Breathitt here.

Herendeen abruptly crossed the room, his weight squealing against the worn floorboards, and walked to a rear door. He turned the door's knob gently, he kicked the door open.

Kern Case's voice echoed his dislike. "Get out of there, Ben. That's my room."

Herendeen was in it, moving around slowly; he came out again. Somewhere above them a board snapped, throwing Herendeen's head instantly upward. Herendeen stared at the ceiling and back at Morgan.

"If you're here, he's here."

Herendeen stared at Morgan, his lips pressed together. He was faintly smiling, hard and certain and slowly keyed-up by his temper. "He's here," he grunted. He walked on to the front door. He put his back to Morgan, watching the street.

Morgan said: "Keep your eyes open, Ben."

Herendeen didn't turn. He said: "I see nothin' to be afraid of, Clay. As far as you're concerned, I never did." He stepped to the porch and wheeled around, looking upward at the second-story windows of the store. He held the hard-creased smile on his lips; he teetered on the balls of his feet and drew his gun. He fired at the window, breaking the glass, and walked into the doorway again, swinging around to watch the street.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

THE CHRISTIAN VIEW OF MARRIAGE

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 2:18-24; Matthew 19:3-6; John 2:1-5. GOLDEN TEXT—Marriage is honorable in all.—Hebrews 13:4.

The home is not just one of the institutions of our social order. It is a part of God's plan for man. It thus holds a position of greater importance than institutions of society, and should take first place in our thinking.

Home and the life which centers in it has lost much of its meaning and value in recent decades. It is appropriate and timely to study for four weeks in our Sunday schools the foundation principles of the home, and to learn how we may hinder or help it in its influence. Teachers will wish to make much of this vital series.

We begin right where we inquire what the Bible teaches about marriage, and we find the instruction plentiful and to the point. Concerning marriage we learn of

I. Its Origin—Ordained by God (Gen. 2:18-24).

Nations and states have marriage laws, and certain civil requirements must be met. But true marriage from the Christian viewpoint is far more than a civil contract. It is an ordinance which God Himself ordained from the beginning for the welfare of man.

As Adam gave names to the animals (which, incidentally, tells of his intelligence and ability) they passed before him. It became evident to him that there was no true fellowship between man and beast, that there must be a "help meet" for man, one of his own kind, with his capacities of personal being.

God quickly and adequately meets every real need of man, so He created out of Adam's own flesh one who was to be his true companion. "If man is the head, she is the crown," said Matthew Henry. "The man was dust refined, but the woman was dust doubly refined, one move further from the earth. She was not taken out of his head to top him, not out of his feet to be trampled upon by him, but out of his side to be equal with him, under his arm to be protected, and near his heart to be beloved."

So God ordained marriage, but down through the ages man has seen fit to tamper with God's holy arrangements, adjusting them to suit himself, so we need to be reminded of the truth.

II. Its Control—Not Subject to Man (Matt. 19:3-6).

Because of the hardness of man's heart Moses permitted divorce (Mark 10:4, 5), but God did not intend it from the beginning. The Jewish rabbis had so stretched the interpretation of that age of Moses that a wife could be divorced for almost any reason. The same was true among heathen nations.

Our Lord makes it very clear that man has no authority to determine such matters at all, that the union of life in true marriage is by the act of God, and that no man has power to sunder such a relationship.

The whole trend of thought on marriage has been away from its sacredness as a divine institution, and we need to return to a proper appreciation of it as such. All too often, marriages are mere civil agreements, hastily made before a justice of peace. We need to encourage our young people to recognize

III. Its Dignity—Sanctioned by Christ (John 2:1-5).

The wedding ceremony tells us that marriage "is an honorable estate, instituted by God in the time of man's innocence, confirmed by the teaching and hallowed by the presence of our blessed Lord, and likened by St. Paul to the holy union that exists between Christ and the Church; and therefore is not by any to be entered into unadvisedly, but reverently, discreetly and in the fear of God."

At the very beginning of His public ministry Jesus performed His first miracle as His share of a wedding feast. It is true that He does share every occasion of joy and sorrow of His people, but it seems to be significant that this first occasion for His miraculous power was a wedding.

He was there to rejoice with and to bless those who had exchanged their vows in marriage. Should He not be the unseen guest at every wedding? Whether in the home or in the church; whether the occasion be a simple or an elaborate one; whether a host of friends attend or only the witnesses—always and everywhere Jesus Christ should be recognized as the One who stands by to bless, and to unite the two lives for His own glory.

This means that the ceremony should be a Christian one, with prayer a vital part of it, and the will of God paramount. Then indeed, God may and will join together that which no man can put asunder.

Nitrogen Fertilizer Supply Below Normal

Supply of Phosphorus, Potash Found Sufficient

The increasing use of synthetic nitrogen for war munitions plus the shortage of ships limiting the amount that can be imported has caused supplies of nitrogen fertilizers to be far below normal. Fortunately, phosphorus and potash supplies are fully sufficient for all farm needs, according to Earle Jones, extension agronomist, college of agriculture, Ohio State university.

Not roundup time in Texas, just sheep returning from feeding in the valley in San Benito county, California.

As a result of the current situation, the War Production board requested producers "not to manufacture, sell, offer for sale or distribute any fertilizer containing chemical nitrogen for use on fall-grown grains this year."

Fewer grades of fertilizer were available in areas where fall-sown grains were planted, but there were enough to meet the requirements of all kinds of crops. These fertilizers were of high analysis, which means that the farmer received a bigger percentage of plant food per ton. Important savings were made in the use of bags and in the cost of transportation.

For fall-sown grains this year, seven grades of mixed fertilizer were recommended by the college of agriculture of Ohio State university. While these were specified for Ohio, similar soil and crop conditions in other states would make their use satisfactory elsewhere. These grades were: 0-14-7; 0-10-8; 0-20-10; 0-12-12; 0-14-14; 0-20-20; and 0-10-20; as well as superphosphate.

Tests and practical experience have indicated that the quantity and analysis of fertilizer to use depends largely on the type of soil and the crop to be grown. On light colored or dark colored silt and clay loams, an 0-12-2 analysis is recommended. The quantity may vary from 300 to 400 pounds per acre on light colored loam and 200 to 350 pounds on dark loam, depending on whether the grain is to be seeded to a meadow or to a green manure crop, or to be held one year, or two years or more. In the event such soils have been manured with an average of 8 tons per acre during the preceding year or on the immediate crop, a lower analysis such as 0-18-0, 0-20-0 or 0-14-7 is recommended.

On muck soils, peats and sands, an 0-10-20 analysis is recommended. Where such soils have been manured, an 0-12-12 is indicated.

Farm Notes

The 1942 lamb crop was about 2 per cent smaller than the record 1941 production, but the crop, estimated at 32,280,000 head, was the second largest on record.

Material to expand production of facilities for dehydrated foods has been given a high priority rating by the WPB upon the recommendation of the Foods Requirement committee.

In classical days the Romans called the first day of the month the Kalends. On those days interest on debts became due, and proclamations were made. The Greeks had no such term, so a promise to pay at the "Greek Kalends" meant "never."

Benton W. McGinnis' Platform

To the REPUBLICAN and DEMOCRATIC VOTERS of LINCOLN COUNTY:

In co-operation with the Office of Defense Transportation, to conserve rubber and equipment, I am using this newspaper to let you know my conception with respect to State Government.

As a Life Insurance Representative, I have spent over 12 years traveling in all corners of the State of New Mexico, soliciting business, and have had an excellent opportunity to observe the operations of seemingly unnecessary Bureaus and Departments, at the cost of the Taxpayers. Those that appear to be public nuisances, are the Bureau of Courtesy and the Information Division, better known as the Port of Entry, and supplemental bureaus in the Revenue Department.

Should the Voters elect me as their Representative, I shall attempt to abolish superfluous bureaus and departments, and advocate use of the money instead, for increased wages of our public school teachers.

After this War is won, our children will need every educational facility available, to carry on the economic burdens with which they will be confronted. Our teachers need more adequate wages. I also advocate the doing away with jobs, created for political mischief at the expense of the Tax Payer. I am against political boondoggling of our State Resources of timber to friends by political office holders. It is my belief that the State Mining Laws should have an overhauling. The metal mines of this State produced $23,691,214.00 in the year of 1940. That was considerable more than Cattle, Sheep and wool combined, and mining is the chief industry of this State. Our State mining should be encouraged. The respective State Land leases should be modified, to encourage a bigger and better Mining Program throughout the entire State of New Mexico.

Like many other citizens of the rank and file, I have a son across the seas fighting for Uncle Sam, and for our Victory. If I am the people's choice, I will respect the command as their public servant, and not work to appease the Politicians. Your support and Vote shall be highly appreciated.

"Section 3. The Senate shall consist of one Senator from each county of the State, and in the event the number of counties is hereafter increased or decreased, the number of Senators shall be increased or decreased accordingly at the next ensuing election of Senators after such change.
Until changed by law as herein after provided the House of Representatives shall consist of one Representative for each eleven thousand, or major fraction thereof, of the inhabitants within each county as shown by the census of the United States next preceding the election of such Representatives; provided, however, that each county of the State shall, regardless of population, be entitled to at least one Representative. Immediately after the adoption of this Amendment, and immediately after the publication of each census of the United States hereafter, taken, the Secretary of State shall certify to the governing authority of each County the number of inhabitants within such county as shown by said census, and the officials proclaiming the election shall designate the number of representatives to be elected from such county. Provided, however, no county shall at any time be allotted more than 5 members of the House of Representatives.
At its first session after the publication of any United States census, hereafter taken, the Legislature may change the number of inhabitants required in a county for each Representative from eleven thousand, as hereinbefore provided, to such greater number as the Legislature shall deem proper, provided, that each county shall have at least one Representative as hereinbefore provided.

1943 Record Breaking Tax Measure Clears Final Congressional Hurdle; United Nations Hunt Subs Off Africa; U. S. Objective: a 'Young Man's Army'

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.) Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Left: William Jeffers, rubber administrator, visiting a synthetic rubber plant in Akron, Ohio. Jeffers appears to be taking a bite of the coagulated rubber, sinking his teeth into an extremely complex problem. Center: Wendell L. Willkie as he entered the White House to report to President Roosevelt the results of a 31,000-mile aerial trip of 17 countries. Willkie is emphatic in favoring a second front. Right: Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson as he testified before the house military affairs committee in connection with the lowering of the draft age from 20 to 18.

TAXES: Set a Record

Everybody agreed that it was coming but when the record breaking 1943 tax bill cleared the final congressional hurdle the public hesitated for a moment to look it over and then pushed on with their jobs in the nation's war effort. Analyzing the provisions of the bill as agreed upon by senate and house conferees in speedy action this is what the public learned:

The treasury estimated that federal revenues would be increased by just under seven billion dollars—$7,001,030,000, to be exact.

Normal income tax rates were stepped up from 4 to 6 per cent.

Surtaxes which formerly ranged from 0 to 77 per cent have now been set at from 13 to 62 per cent.

A new tax—called the 'Victory tax'—was imposed on all income larger than $24 per year. (This meant a gross tax on all wages over $12 a week, although a portion of the tax will be rebatable at the end of the war, the amount of rebate would vary.)

Personal income tax exemptions were reduced from $1,500 to $1,200 for married persons and from $750 to $500 for single persons. Credit for dependents at the same time was reduced from $400 to $350.

There are many other provisions to the bill but these were the ones which John Q. Citizen was going to feel most directly. He would notice, too, however, that there were increased excise taxes on such items as liquor, beer, wine, cigarettes, cigars, lubricating oil, slot machines, photographic apparatus, train, bus, and plane fares. He would also notice increased corporation taxes but to the average citizen these would hurt less, for they would be indirect taxes.

Financial experts reasoned that direct taxes would not be raised any higher even though the U. S. war needs become more urgent. Other means of increasing the government income would have to be found. Many plans, including compulsory savings, have already been given careful study by the treasury department.

PROMPT ACTION: On 18-19 Draft Bill

Prompt senate and house action keyed legislative moves to draft 18 and 19-year-old men, thus adding approximately 1,500,000 teenage youths to the ever growing army, which is expected to reach 7,500,000 by the end of 1943.

Principal difference in the house and senate bill evolved around the "draft priority" system. This system, approved by the house and rejected by the senate committee, would prohibit the induction of married men in any given state until all supplies of single men were exhausted, and would prevent the induction of men with children until all childless married men were called.

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, selective service director, opposed the measure. He stated that it would upset schedules until December 1, when the 18-19 draft group will be "processed" and ready for induction. Senator Taft took the lead in the drive for the system. He long has been an advocate of national uniformity in draft quotas.

A second difference in the bills involved the deferment of youths to complete educational courses. The senate bill provided special deferments for high school students called during the second half of the current school year. The house bill extended the deferment clause to colleges as well.

The two measures agreed in making liable for the draft men formerly deferred in class 4-F because of convictions for "dry law" violations during the prohibition era. Senator Barkley expressed the belief that priority should be stipulated.

PACIFIC: Showdown

There was a new lull in the dispatches and official communiques reporting the results of the showdown battle for control of the Solomon Islands and ultimate supremacy in the whole South Pacific battle zone. The name was Buin—a strong Japanese base in the northern Solomons. It was here that the United Nations learned the Jap had concentrated a good share of his striking power.

Buin is located on the southern end of an island (Bougainville) and is less than two hours away from Guadalcanal by bomber and only one day's run for Jap ships. Yet to reach this point, U. S. planes based at Port Moresby, New Guinea had to fly over 700 miles of mountains and then over miles of Jap-controlled sea. This was the same problem that U. S. land-based planes at Port Moresby, and on the Australian mainland had to face in helping the marines, army and navy units at Guadalcanal.

Early in the final struggle for both points—Buin and Guadalcanal—U. S. scout planes determined how much strength the Jap had actually gathered at Buin. They learned there were large numbers of cruisers, destroyers, transports, seaplane tenders, cargo vessels and a swarm of flying boats. This meant that the Jap really wanted to recapture his lost positions around Guadalcanal. This came as no surprise to the U. S. forces for even last August when the first marine detachments dislodged the Japs from that area, military experts predicted that they would be back and would fight hard to regain their losses. And as the battle for Guadalcanal and the Solomons reached its climax both the Japs and the Allies admitted the truth of such prediction. The results spoke for themselves.

Northern Front

On the opposite (northern) end of the Pacific front U. S. army bombers continued their almost daily raids on Kiska, last Jap stronghold in the Aleutians. These raids were important because earlier reports indicated that the Japs had reinforced their garrison there and had also been building new installations at Gertrude Cove on the south side of the island. It was believed that when the Japs were chased out of Attu and Agattu, two other Aleutian bases, they took many of their supplies with them, preparing for a last ditch stand at Kiska.

NEW BASE: For Fighting Subs

That a good number of the Nazi U-boats had been shifted from the U. S. Atlantic coastal area to the Africa sea lanes was indicated by the announcement that U. S. troops had arrived in the Negro republic of Liberia and RAF planes were using that country as a base for hunting Nazi submarines.

Only 750 miles from Dakar, important base in French West Africa, and just across the Atlantic from the "bulge of Brazil," Liberia could serve as a vital point in protection of any threatened raid there by Axis forces.

The fact that U. S. troops and the RAF were dispatched to Africa added to the growing speculation that Africa was leaning large as a theater of war.

FRENCH WORKERS: 'Hired' by Gestapo?

The day of judgment drew closer to Pierre Laval, chief of the Vichy government, when he acceded to a Nazi demand for an increased number of French specialists to work in German war plants.

In a brutal move to meet Hitler's demands, the Vichy government was reported to have naturalized 500 agents of the Gestapo to help round up unwilling workers in unoccupied France.

RUSSIA:

Desperate Nazis

Hitler seemed to have forgotten his pre-winter policy of consolidation and defense as he continued his smashing drive along the banks of the Volga. Battling desperately to achieve its goal before winter, the Nazi war machine threw everything possible into the battle for Stalingrad and into the Mzodok area of the Caucasus.

The Soviet army announced that 6,000 German troops had been killed in one day's action on the Stalingrad front. "Our troops repelled furious attacks by enemy infantry and tanks," the Red communique said.

Battles of local significance were reported northwest of Stalingrad, where a Soviet relief army was moving toward the city. Fighting was restricted largely to reconnaissance operations, the communique said.

Major battles also continued in the Black sea area southeast of Novorossisk, where the enemy broke through to a highway. Soviet troops put up a stubborn resistance, counterattacking at several points.

FARM WAGES: Wickard Gets Control

Acting upon an order from James F. Byrnes, director of the Office of Economic Stabilization, the agricultural department has assumed full jurisdiction for "stabilization of farm wages. Secretary of Agriculture Wickard was directed to establish machinery to handle the problem."

Officials were reported to be considering a plan under which government subsidies would be paid to farm operators in order that they might increase farm laborers' wages.

Meanwhile, the house committee on agriculture issued a report warning that a serious shortage of farm labor may result in a shortage of many necessities within 12 months. The report, released by Chairman P. Fulmer of South Carolina, said that "before long, a few million hungry stomachs are going to awaken the people and the programmers to a better understanding and appreciation of those who till the soil."

EXPECT NAZI BOMBS: Churchill Tells People

The British people have been warned by Prime Minister Winston Churchill that Nazi air action against their homes this winter "may be heavy and menacing enough to call for everything that civil defense can produce to defeat it."

His warning was considered pessimistic—though true—when compared with his statement of early October that the Germans possibly would attempt "a very small return" in retaliation for smashing RAF raids over the Reich.

Because of successful daylight raids over the continent by British and American bombing planes, Nazi Reichsmarshal Goering has regrouping might also increase the effectiveness of the Nazi air force over England.

Smashed

"I have never seen one man take such a beating." That is what a comrade said of Marine Private Eugene Moore, one of a tank crew attacked by a horde of Japs on Gavutu Island in the Solomons. After a hand grenade had been thrown down the tank turret where it exploded, Moore attempted to escape. The howling Japs kicked him, knifed him, bonaced him against the tank. Left for dead, the marines picked him up. Navy doctors saved his life.

MISCELLANY:

RAIDS: Cologne remained a broken city as hundreds of Royal Air force four-motored planes bombed the Rhine-land capital with two-ton "block busters" for the first time since May 30, when 1,130 British planes blasted huge sections of the city.

STATUS QUO: President Roosevelt has announced that no change is contemplated in the governorship of Puerto Rico, now held by Rexford G. Tugwell. Tugwell's removal had been asked by the American Federation of Labor.

CASUALTIES: From Tokyo broadcasts came word of death in action of a Japanese vice admiral, two rear admirals and two major generals. The deaths were revealed at the annual fall festival at the Yasukuni shrine.

SPEAKING OF SPORTS

by Bob McShane Released by Western Newspaper Union.

THE only two things Bernie Bierman didn't have to worry about this season were: (1) paying off the mortgage on a football stadium; (2) the wrath of the old grads if he should coach a losing team.

Beyond that, observers at the Iowa Pre-Flight school agreed, the former Minnesota grid coach had plenty of trouble ahead. His string of 17 consecutive victories with Minnesota, national champions, became little more than memories as he plunged into work with the Seahawks—a squad which he termed "greener, in respect to organization, than any third team squad I ever had at Minnesota."

That fact seemed unimportant as the Hawks defeated Michigan 20-14. Bierman's players, assembled from dozens of different colleges, are used to as many different coaching systems, their collegiate training varying by degrees from a single wing back formation to a "T." Using his thorough training methods, Bierman welded these players into a unit that the leading teams in the nation have found hard to stop.

That's only the beginning of Colonel Bierman's trouble. About the time a player starts getting acquainted with the Seahawk system he finishes his three-month pre-flight course and moves on for primary flight training. Every three months there is a complete turnover in cadet personnel, many times resulting in the loss of valuable players on the eve of important games.

Tough Schedule

No special consideration is given football players—or any other varsity athletes—at the Iowa Pre-Flight school. Cadets who are members of the Seahawk grid squad must discharge their regular daily training program before reporting to Bierman at 4 p. m. Often an 18-mile hike is the forenoon diet with swimming, boxing, wrestling, hand-to-hand, exercises and football facing them in the afternoon.

In playing away - from - home games the Seahawks are given just enough time to get to their destination, play the game and get back. The navy has a 48-hour time limit on athletic trips. Two games, with the St. Mary's and Georgia Cadets, had to be cancelled this fall because of the time limit.

One of the toughest schedules ever arranged by a football team faced the Seahawks at the season's opening. Six of the most powerful eleven in the Big Ten; Nebraska, Missouri and Kansas in the Big Six, and Ft. Knox and North Carolina's Cadets among the service teams, are ominous enough to give any coach the jitters.

While the Seahawk coaches fretted over this schedule, other coaches lost sleep over the supply of grid talent at Bierman's disposal. Enemy coaches saw names like Evashevski of Michigan; Svendsen, Filck and Schultz of Minnesota; Gage and Paskvan of Wisconsin; Langhurst and Fisher of Ohio State; Haman and Swisher of Northwestern. The boys definitely did not add up to a "breather."

But while they were worrying about the big names, a relatively unknown halfback broke loose and caused the most havoc in the Seahawks' first two wins over Kansas and Northwestern. It was Billy Schatzler, a cadet who had been named to the Little All-American team in 1941 while playing football for tiny North Central college in Naperville, Ill.

Dark Horse

Sportswriters hailed the 187-pound Detroit boy as "another ace from the sleeve of the wily Bierman." In reality, Bierman had been fully conscious of Schatzler's ball-toting ability. While the press was memorizing the numbers of the big names in the Seahawk lineup, they were passing up the snaky-hipped cadet who scored twice in the 61-0 pasting of Kansas and crossed the goal once in the 20-12 Northwestern victory.

Schatzler gained 233 yards from scrimmage in the first two games, averaging 7.7 yards per try. He completed four out of nine passes for 73 yards and one touchdown, and averaged 40 yards on his punts.

Other stars who have sparked in games so far are: Judd Ringer, former Minnesota end; Bus Mertes, mercury - heeled Iowa halfback; John Biola and Bill Kolens, linemen who graduated after the Minnesota All-Star end from Texas. George Benson scored two touchdowns against Michigan, Evashevski scored another, and Fisher tallied one.

When this season draws to a close quite a few other Seahawks will have made navy football history. That's in the cards.

The Real Check Back

SINCE the final day of the last World Series you could hear them asking what had happened to the Yankees—and to Joe McCarthy. Here is proof again how short man's memory is in the whirl of busy events.

They had overlooked the fact that Joe McCarthy and his Yankees had the greatest World Series record of all time—above John McGraw and his Giants, above Frank Chance and his Cubs, above Connie Mack and his famous Athletics.

All Joe McCarthy and his Yankees had done was to make it six out of seven in the World Series against 25 victories against eight defeats. How much more can they ask of a manager and a team?

What other manager or what other team has turned in such a job? They forget the check back.

About Connie Mack

It was something more than a pleasure to have a visit with 80-year-old Connie Mack during this last series. We turned the clock back 40 years and I found Connie as keen and alert as ever, looking forward to whatever next year might bring.

During the last series game I turned the clock back even further. I ran into Arlie Latham, now working at the Yankee Stadium. Arlie was one of the star ball players of an era that goes back some 65 or 60 years. He was the crack third baseman of Chris Von der Ahe's old St. Louis Browns.

"I remember Connie Mack around 1885," Arlie said. "He was then catching for Pittsburgh as I remember it. What kind of a catcher was Connie? He was something on the Bill Dickey type. He knew how to handle pitchers. He saw everything that was going on. He was never in a hurry. Connie couldn't hit with Dickey, but as I remember it he was a great bat tipper. He knew how to bother you at the plate. He was smart even then. Things were different in those days. Anything you could get by with was legal and okay. But what a great fellow that Connie Mack has been for 60 years. You've got to have something extra to be better than good for 60 years."

Another 80-Year Old

This brought to mind another active sporting star who goes back 60 years. His name is Amos Alonzo Stagg, now coaching the College of the Pacific. Lonnie Stagg was a member of Walter Camp's first All-American team, picked in 1893. Lonnie was no kid then. After all, that was only 53 years ago.

"You ought to see this kid Stagg," a friend writes me from California. "He is up early in the morning for a set of tennis. And don't think he coaches this team from the bench. He leads the squad in the field at a gallop. He works as hard as any man on the squad. He is out there showing them how to block and tackle. He is all over the place. Not so bad for a young fellow of 80."

Stagg is the only coach I've heard about who has been active on the field of play for 53 years. He went to Chicago university around 1931, and was coach and player.

The Iron Horse

Much has been said and written about Whirlaway's famous long tail, his speed and his stout heart. But his most remarkable assets are iron legs and an iron constitution.

Where most thoroughbreds are about as brittle as a pretzel, here is a horse which has been ready to run fast, far and often for the greater part of three years. And in all that time he always has been ready to run his race.

He gets beaten, but in spite of all the racing he handles, he never runs a bad race and inevitably he is in there driving at the finish.

"He's never seen the day when he wasn't ready to run," Trainer Ben Jones says. "They say I overwork him. I don't. He likes to run. He has never shown any sign of staleness, which is the main answer. And I don't care how hard the race is, he is always fresh on his way back to the barn."

"Once the rider lets him start running, he is hard to hold back. I suppose that's one reason they don't want to turn him loose too soon."

Horse Ages

The 40-year-old Tom Mix horse, was scheduled for execution recently.

Several readers want to know the oldest horse on record. Tony must have been close. I asked a few veteran trainers and found none who knew of any other horse that had passed 33.

The two greatest, Man O' War and Exterminator, are still shy of 30. Exterminator is as frisky as a colt these nippy autumn days. Few horses, however, pass 25.

BUD ABBOTT figures that the three-year-old son, Bud Abbott Jr., whom he and his wife have just adopted, is a direct present from Uncle Sam. It was through an official who accompanied Abbott and Costello on their recent bond-selling tour that the comic entertainer first heard of the availability of the youngster and subsequently arranged for the adoption. Universal recently announced the purchase of the farce, "See My Lawyer," as a vehicle for the two comedians; Milton Berle and Paddy Hart starred in it on Broadway.

Pat O'Brien, who recently filmed "The Navy Comes Through" at RKO, believes that he and Spencer Tracy can boast the longest enduring friendship in Hollywood. It's lasted more than 35 years; they were childhood playmates, went to school together, served together in the navy during World War I, and launched their professional careers together.

Bob Hope is taking no chances on having readers of his autobiography, "They Got Me Covered," think that the Samuel Goldwyn picture of the same name is his life story. A foreword to the film, which stars Bob and Dorothy Lamour, declares that "Any resemblance between the characters in this photoplay and me is entirely fictional," and it's signed, "Bob Hope."

Metro's hoping that it has another Greer Garson in Valerie Hobson, another young English actress, who's playing the lead opposite Robert Donat in "Sabotage Agent," being filmed in London. America has seen her in "U-Boat" and "Blackout."

When Joan Crawford stepped into the role intended for Carole Lombard in the picture, "They All Kissed the Bride," she donated her entire salary for the job to war charities. Recently Paulette Goddard was engaged to do the radio version of the picture on the CBS Playhouse, and announced that her salary for the performance would buy war bonds to be put in trust for five children of war heroes who do not come home at the war's end—which probably means quite a lot of bonds!

Rumors that Cary Grant would enlist in the army air forces were confirmed for moviedom when it was announced by RKO that "Bundles for Freedom," starring Grant, had been moved up on the production schedule so that he'd finish before his enlistment.

The shortage of leading men may precipitate a cycle of man-less films; looks as if Metro is getting ready by buying "Cry Havoc," a little theater play dealing with volunteer nurses during the siege of Bataan.

Jack Durant and Shirley Temple made their screen debut in the same picture, "Stand Up and Cheer"; he was part of a slapstick act in that musical extravaganza. In "Journey Into Fear" he appears as the male half of an adagio dancing team, opposite Dolores Del Rio.

PREPAREDNESS

by the AMERICAN RED CROSS

SO THAT America will be well prepared on the home front, the American Red Cross has set a goal of one person in every home to be trained in home nursing.

Red Cross home nursing courses teach simple methods of keeping the family well, and how to care for its members in sickness. The students—mostly women, many men and large numbers of young people—are also taught to recognize symptoms in the early stages. This is expected to help prevent the usual wartime epidemics.

So far in this war, more than 90 per cent of the civilian casualties have not been hospitalized. Instead they have been given first aid and whatever emergency treatment was necessary and then sent home.

A large portion of such civilian war casualties have required home nursing care which, due to shortage of nurses, had to be provided by members of the family.

To enable every family to provide home care for the sick, whether due to enemy action or natural causes, immediately after the attack on Pearl Harbor, the Red Cross started a plan to teach home nursing to every family.

Since our entry into the war, more than 500,000 men and women in nearly every county in the United States have completed their home nursing course. Another quarter of a million are now taking the course in more than 3,000 Red Cross chapters.

Any group of 20 or more can form a home nursing class by agreeing on a time and place of meeting. After being notified, the county Red Cross chapter will then appoint a graduate nurse instructor.

"It's that boy of yours," she snorted. "He's just thrown this brick through my window. It came within an inch of hitting me."

"Really? How interesting!" she exclaimed. "I wonder if you will let me have the brick? We're trying to keep all the little mementoes of his youthful pranks; they'll be so interesting when he grows up."

Grass and Hay

Grass and hay produce such beef and brawn as horses and bullocks possess and yet are unsuitable for humans because the digestive apparatus of the herbivorous animals has become specially adjusted to deal with the coarse fibers of grass, and specially enlarged to cope with the great bulk that must be taken daily in order to secure adequate nourishment. Humans can eat young, tender shoots of some kinds of grass without ill effects, but the hard stalks that cause no inconvenience to a horse would be as damaging to us as the grit a chicken swallows.

Many grass-eating animals like cows and camels have multiple stomachs to help them.

ON THE HOME FRONT

with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

HERE is a sketch of a corner in a smart living room. Over the desk hangs a piece of applique work that any woman who can sew a seam can make with a piece of natural colored linen, a few scraps of gingham and odds and ends of embroidery thread. The design is of poppies, cornflowers and wheat, with graceful green leaves. The poppy petals and leaves are of gingham applied on the linen. The bright blue cornflowers, the yellow wheat and stems are embroidered in simple stitches.

This quickly-made piece of hand work was framed by stretching it over cardboard, and it set the color scheme for the entire room. No one would ever guess that the desk is a transformation of the fancy oak one shown at the left. The top was sawed off and a plain board added. The bookcases were then added at the sides and the plywood door was hinged to them. The sketch shows how the coloring of the applique picture was repeated in the desk, blotter and stool.

NOTE: A hot iron transfer has been made of this applique design with extra patterns of cornflowers and poppies for a luncheon set or guest towels. You will love working with these fascinating colors and the quick results are just the thing for Christmas gifts. Send your order to:

The Guillotine

The machine the French use for beheading murderers, called the guillotine, was not invented by Dr. Guillotine, nor was he himself executed by it, as tradition states.

As long ago as the Middle Ages there were mechanical devices for beheading criminals. During the French Revolution, when opponents of the new regime were executed in large numbers, Dr. Guillotine, in 1789, suggested that something of the kind should be adopted, for humanitarian reasons.
