A. L. Burke Henry Grannis And The Big 50 Minstrels It was 65 years ago in old St. Joe, Mo., that Walsh & Barrett, cigar manufacturers and Henry Grannis, sweet singer of the old town, planned to produce what they called the Big 50 Minstrels. They gathered all the local talent into one massive organization and began rehearsals. Three weeks of rehearsals (two each week) placed the coming event in readiness for the two shows which were billed to be staged at Tootle's Opera House. The staging of that local effort was claimed by the two daily papers, Gazette and Herald, as the best performance ever given by local talent west of the Mississippi river. So well pleased was the audience at the first show, that on the second and last night, the box office was compelled to close, after the aisles were blocked and a 'no standing room' sign was put in the window. There was an opening chorus of 30 voices led by Mr. Grannis and aside from 20 song & dance teams, two 3-act plantation plays, intermingled with songs, dances and witticisms, all of which kept the big crowds in an uproar of delight throughout the programs. The feature of the singing was the solos by Henry Grannis, both in the mammoth first part and at different intervals in the program. Those were the days of clog, sand-jig and soft-shoe dancing, which if reproduced today, would create more fun and entertainment than all the tap and jazz dancing modern artists can put out. Before the first show, a big parade was staged, led by Prof. Sam Pryor's Band--and as we remember--for the writer had his place in the parade and on the program, the Mayor of the city had a platoon of police to head the parade, as crowds of people thronged the thoroughfares, principally on Francis, Felix and Edmund streets. These were two gala days for the old town, as the dust-covered files of the papers of that day and time could produce, if one had the time to investigate. Those were what they now call the 'horse and buggy days,' but they of times furnish food for pleasant recollections. Notice! IN LINE with the Defense Program, beginning Monday, Jan. 19th, we will make only Two Deliveries a day--one at 10 a. m. and the other at 4 p. m. Your co-operation will be appreciated. -Petty's Gen'l Merchandise. Mr. and Mrs. Ted Collier of Phoenix, Ariz., held an 'Open House' on New Year's day. Guests included Mr. and Mrs. Paul Wright, Billy Joe Wright, Mrs. J. R. Stanley, Joseph Stanley, Gladys Miles, Myrtle Miles. Guests for turkey dinner were Miss June Jones and Mr. Ted Hubbard. -Contributed.

Spotlight

of GRANTLAND RICE

THE army, the navy, the air force and the marines are looking in one main direction for their recruits. This direction is toward the athlete who is supposed to be—who ought to be—in physical condition, plus the alertness he has drawn from competitive sport. This means above all, the football players. After this comes baseball players, basketball players, fighters and track men.

We have received some complaint that too many sports writers are trying to place the main burden on athletes, especially well-known athletes.

This is where the main burden belongs. It is only natural that a country should look to its young men trained in sport, above any other class, when war arrives. These young men make—or should make—the best service material, with something to spare. They should be much more physically fit than others who have had no such chance to get in such fine shape.

Competition is supposed to develop the form of alertness needed in war—especially football competition, where one has to think and act in a hurry.

Most of these now in sport—and not yet in the service—have received unusual recognition from their country in the way of headline and radio tribute. Also, in the way of financial rewards.

More will be expected from our athletes than from any other class. These happen to be better equipped to serve, and only the most vital reasons should keep them from remembering this line—"But when the bugles sounded war—they put their games away."

'Don't Wait Too Long'

I recall the sound advice that Maj. Swede Larson, late excellent navy football coach, gave a prominent gridiron star before we were in the war—as we are now.

"Please don't wait too long before enlisting," Swede said. "I don't believe the country at large is going to like famous athletes, still young."

MAJOR SWEDE LARSON

cleaning up in other lines. Some form of the service needs men like you—needs them badly. We need what you can give us in a personal way. We need your example even more. So I'm asking you again not to make the mistake of waiting too long."

Again the final verse of Winfred Lett's war poem came back to us—"God bless you happy gentlemen, who laid your good lives down—

Who took the khaki and the gun, in place of cap and gown.
God bring you to a fairer place than even Oxford town."

Big Time Over

Once again big-time sport for spectators is all through until the war is over—and won.

When men like Colin Kelly are diving at Japanese warships and dying—when a few marines proved what marines are at Wake island, the broken-field runner and the blocking back and the charging tackle are badly overshadowed.

The nation expects football players to put their games away—as far as all available for service are concerned. It is up to these men in sport—the younger men—to prove that competitive sport—that big-time sport—has a purpose, to serve beyond publicity and gate receipts.

This doesn't mean just a small percentage. It means an overwhelming majority. It doesn't mean exemption through flat feet or some minor physical detail. It doesn't mean dependencies, unless it is a matter of dire need.

Another Problem

"I have tried to get in both army and navy," a certain well-known athlete writes, "but have been turned down on account of defective eyesight. I have done my best. Yet I can see people looking at me queerly, wondering why I am not in some service. I am not alone in this respect. There are many, many others. Isn't there some way the war or navy department could give us a button that will show we have at least tried to get in? It is too much to keep explaining."

SPEAKING OF SPORTS

By ROBERT McSHANE

Released by Western Newspaper Union

ALTHOUGH the Golden Age of sport may have ended quite a few years ago, 1941 left more than its share of thrills as it passed into history under the grim shadows of a world-wide war.

It is customary to under-evaluate current performers—and performances. We remember Jack Dempsey, Bobby Jones, Bill Tilden, Babe Ruth and all the rest. We then sigh for the good old days. But those sighs are misleading—they're evidence of nothing more than nostalgia. A handful of outstanding records proves the point.

1. The New York Yankees—world baseball champions for the fifth time in six years. Joe McCarthy's men were seven games back in May and 20 games ahead when the race was over.

2. The Golden Gophers—Few football teams faced competition as tough as Minnesota's. Upsets were the rule in 1941 and unbeaten teams were scarce. Yet Bernie Bierman's squad made it 17 in a row to win the mythical national championship.

3. Joe Louis—The perpetual heavyweight champion of the world met—and whipped—all comers. He still is the best in sight, proving it month after month. A bit stale at times, due to overwork and over-training, he came through the year with an untarnished crown.

4. Billy Conn—The youngster who supposedly didn't have a chance against Joe Louis. He had the champ licked for 12 rounds although he was outweighed by 25 pounds and outclassed in experience. His cockiness cost him the title.

5. The Brooklyn Dodgers—No other baseball team has had the national support given the Dodgers. The country went mildly insane when Brooklyn won the National league pennant, grieved when the series went to the Yankees.

6. Ben Hogan—The 133-pound Texan didn't get the credit he deserved for his amazing record in finishing in the money through 58 consecutive golf tournaments.

7. Joe DiMaggio—A champion on a championship team. The Yankee artist put on the show of the year when he hit safely in 56 consecutive games, thus shattering all past records.

8. Frank Leahy—In his first year as coach at Notre Dame, Leahy gave the Irish their first unbeaten team since Knute Rockne's last season in 1939.

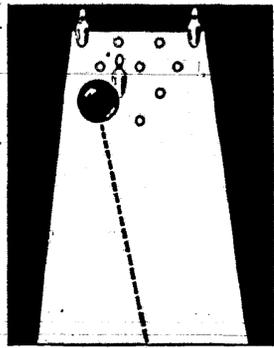

9. The Chicago Bears—Probably the greatest football team the world has ever known. Beaten once—by the Green Bay Packers—the Bears came on to win the world's title.

10. Craig Wood—After a 20-year kicking by an unkind fate, Wood won the Masters and the U. S. Open golf championships.

Bowling—the Right Way

By LOWELL JACKSON

"This is one of a series of lessons in bowling by Lowell Jackson, one of the country's outstanding bowlers. Mr. Jackson has eighteen 300 games to his credit and has a 12-year league average of 210."

"Make sure of most pins."

ROLLING FOR SPLITS. It is impossible to make every split on the bowling alley, but there are definitely a number of splits which are so near the "impossible" that when confronted with them, the smart bowler will make sure of the most pins.

The toughest splits are the 7-10, the 7-9, 8-10, 4-6, 4-10 and 6-7. Common splits such as the 3-10, 2-7, 4-5, 5-6, 4-7-10 and 5-10 are usually tried for, as there is a fair chance for a spare.

The more difficult splits such as the 4-10, 6-7, 4-7-9-10, and 6-7-10 find circumstances governing the situation. In open play, when there is nothing other than a little fun involved, try for these difficult splits. They offer good practice, and if nothing else they will show you the difficulties involved in making them.

SPORT SHORTS

It is estimated that more than $1,000,000 worth of mutual tickets on American race tracks this year went uncashed. Bettors didn't realize they had won.

Alexis Thompson dropped $80,000 on the Philadelphia Eagles this year but thinks that in two years his National Football league club will be on a paying basis.

The Notre Dame baseball team was the only unit representing the school to lose more games than it won during the past year.

HITLER AND THE DOCTOR
"I'm feeling very funny,"
Said Adolf in disgust;
"You'd better fetch a doctor—
And get one I can trust!"

A doctor came a-running,
And cried, "You sick! Ah, me!
This news is most amazing—
I thought YOU couldn't be!"

"No small talk," barked Der Fuehrer,
"Just get to work, and quick!
I'm just as dazed as you are
To find I CAN'T be sick!"

"What seems to be the matter?"
The doctor did inquire;
"You're asking me!" snapped
Adolf—
"That's what you're summoned for!"

"Stick out your tongue," the doctor
Requested (and we quote);
Der Fuehrer sadly did so—
And, boy, was that a COAT!

It plainly showed a fever,
And stomach all upset;
"It was that Russian dressing,
And other things he 'et."

It showed grave indigestion,
And bile disturbance, too;
It showed amazing symptoms
Of ailments far from few.

It showed clear indications
Of major gluttony—
Of ulcerous ambitions
And chronic treachery.

It showed some bladder trouble—
(No blight could that tongue hide);
"Your spleen's bad," said the doctor,
"Your trouble's deep inside!"

"Your arches are falling,
Your kidneys aren't good
I don't think you've been doing
Exactly as you should!"

Der Fuehrer's eyes were bulging—
His nerves seem torn apart,
And now the doctor whispers,
"I'll listen to your heart."

He listened and he listened,
He listened everywhere,
He listened most intently—
But heard no ticking there!

The doctor said: "Your heart, sir...
I hear no beat, alas!"—
And Adolf answered, sneering,
"I have no heart, you ass!"

The doctor was befuddled,
He took another look
At Adolf's tongue deep coated
And wrote this for the book:

"His uniform this patient
Once said he'd never doff,
But one thing I can tell him—
THAT COAT HE MUST TAKE OFF!"

The Russians captured a carload of iron crosses marked "For presentation to" or the capture of Moscow" the other day. Maybe the Nazis would now like to mark the whole Russian campaign "Opened by mistake."

OF ALL THINGS!
"The speaker told the audience that America should develop a cheerful-sounding air raid warning. Victory chimes were suggested.—News Item.

This seems eligible for the Baloney of the Year Award. Americans are complacent and cocky enough without trying to provide an air raid signal with an entertainment motif.

It is the most cockeyed suggestion so far made. Any minute now we await word from the man who has invented an air raid signal that will combine the music of Irving Berlin with the soothing qualities of another aspirin tablet. Not to mention the fellow who will come forward with an idea for tying up the signals with a system of radio crooning.

Employees of Yale university have joined the C.I.O. by a vote of 462 to 143, which must be quite a shock to conservatives under the elms. We can now understand why the Blues put so much more feeling, when they sing the Boala-Boala song, into the line "Break through the Crimson line, its strength to defy."

This labor movement at our universities suggests interesting possibilities. Perhaps ultimately the whole jurisdictional issue will be settled by having the C.I.O. play the A.F. of L. in the Yale Bowl.

Planning Ahead

He who every morning plans the transactions of the day, and follows out that plan, carries a thread that will guide him through the labyrinth of the most busy life. The orderly arrangement of his time is like a ray of light which darts itself through all his occupations.

But where no plan is laid, where the disposal of time is surrendered merely to the chance of incidents, all things lie huddled together in one chaos, which admits of neither distribution nor review.—Hugo.

Greatest Sabotage

The most gigantic sacrificial sabotage in world history was the destruction of Russia's Dnieper river dam by the Red army last August, says Collier's. This great hydroelectric project, which was completed in 1932, required five years to build and cost $500,000,000.

The contest is so arranged that the first increase from each animal will be returned to the Sears Roebuck Co. to be given 8 other contestants the following year.

In a period of 5 or 6 years, this will mean that there will be a number of registered animals in Lincoln County as the foundation stock for 4-H Club projects.

"Life" is subject for Sunday. Golden Text: "How excellent is thy loving-kindness, O God! For with thee is the fountain of life." Passage from Christian Science-textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Let us feel the divine energy of Spirit, bringing us into newness of life and recognizing no mortal nor material power as able to destroy. Let us rejoice that we are subject to the divine 'powers that be.' Such is the true Science of being. Any other theory of Life, or God, is delusive and mythological."

KNOW YOUR BANK

How Can I Prepare For The Post-War Period?

Two obvious suggestions come to mind: One is to pay off as many of your debts and obligations as you can now, while you are able. The other is to build a cushion of cash in a bank account which you can draw on, if the occasion arises, in the period of readjustment after the war. There is bound to be some hardship when we swing from defense back to normal peace-time activities, and a little foresight now will repay you well later.

U. S. Forces Will Go to British Isles; Unified High Command in Pacific, Headed by British Veteran, Wavell, Plans Strategy of War Against Axis

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Here is a group of Jap fishing boats seized by the United States in Honolulu after the outbreak of the war. These fishing boats may be converted for use by the U. S. navy as many of them are large Diesel boats well equipped. Diamond Head shows in the picture's background.

BATTLE STATIONS: In Britain

As the new session of congress opened President Roosevelt in delivering his message on the state of the nation outlined extensive plans for the prosecution of the war and declared that U. S. "land, air and sea" forces would take up battle stations in the British Isles.

In addition, said the President, "Powerful and offensive actions must and will be taken at many points in the Far East on all the oceans."

In the coming fiscal year the war against Hitlerism would cost the United States $50,000,000,000, according to the President.

UNIFIED: High Command

Of primary importance, far overshadowing the loss of Manila or the Philippines, was the fact (1) that Churchill and Roosevelt had pledged a first-class effort in the southwest Pacific area, and (2) the formation of a group of 20 nations to prosecute the war to a successful conclusion and (3) the selection of a high command comprising British, Americans, Dutch and Chinese to carry on the southwest Pacific war against the Japs.

Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell was put in supreme command of the armies, navies and air forces. Admiral Thomas C. Hart was subcommander of the navies; Gen. George H. Brett of the air forces, and Gen. Sir Henry Pownall of the land armies.

This was the high command. Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's ability was recognized and part of the strategy revealed when he was asked to command an army that might at some time be placed in the field at the rear of the Japanese in Burma, Siam or Indo-China.

A glance at the map of the area showed one "life-line" well open to the Allied forces, and this included a line from Darwin in North Australia, along the coast of Sumatra and Java to the Strait of Malacca and thence to Singapore.

This left a fleet action the wide South Pacific on one flank, and not the island-dotted and treacherous waters of the China sea to navigate

PHILIPPINES: Battle

General MacArthur's army of close to 100,000, mostly Filipinos and ill-equipped with air protection or striking force, finally had been forced back along prearranged lines to make their last stand in the hills and to fall back slowly on their best defensive fortresses to the north of Manila bay.

Few believed that it would produce anything but a delaying action, but many hoped that the final and apparently inevitable surrender might be delayed until the completion of the war in the Far East might take a more favorable turn for the Allies.

It was conceded by most authorities, including the British, the Dutch, and observers in Washington, "armchair" generals for the most part, that there was scarcely a hope of the American-Filipino army triumphing.

But if the Japanese should find a heavy naval engagement on their hands, or if the battle in Malaya should turn against them, or if they found their supply lines cut by an attack on their rear in Thailand or Indo-China, it was at least conceivable that the Philippine battle would turn the other way.

Sen. Connally of Texas had said, when Manila fell, "this is what military men have been telling us for 15 years would happen if we went to war with Japan. We don't like it, but it was bound to happen."

If there was any expedition for the relief or reinforcement of the Philippines, it was a closely guarded secret. That there was activity was certain. That the navy was busy and hard at work also was certain. But by the rules of wartime necessity the nature of that activity had not been revealed.

SINGAPORE: Delaying Action

The British forces in Malaya, though hurled back a long distance from the opening of the Japanese onslaught, were slowing down the enemy advance, and were fighting a delaying action of growing severity.

Though the general movement was southward toward Singapore, though Penang had been lost and Kuantan was tottering, there were certain hopeful indications that the tide might shortly be turned.

One of these was the increasing severity of Royal Air force attacks on the Japanese lines, especially on several southerly landing attempts that had been made. Another was the fact that the British artillery, as their positions began to draw closer to Singapore, began to find something to shoot at. Weird descriptive stories had been told of Japanese swinging from tree to tree like undersized apes, getting behind the British lines and causing the fighting to become confused at times. There was less of this as the battle lines became better marked.

Late reports had told of one Japanese landing effort being balked by artillery fire alone, with one transport and four barges sunk and the others withdrawing.

Many felt that the arrival of a sizeable Allied fleet, and perhaps 100,000 first-class troops, together with a few hundred planes could easily turn the tide of battle in Malaya.

RUSSIANS: New Objective

The Russians, perhaps flushed with repeated victories after long defeats, perhaps in the calm realization that they had the Germans on the run, were setting a new and seemingly grandiose objective for the rest of the winter.

They would not be satisfied, they said, until the fighting was taking place on German soil before spring.

They had a long way to go, but even with Hitler reported in personal command at Smolensk, only 90 miles from the nearest Russian troops, there were many evidences that large portions of the German army were in extremely precarious positions.

The recapture of Maloyaroslavets, a key point, the loss of which had been keenly felt by the Russians in the first place, was reported by them to have trapped in giant pincers 150,000 of the first-class Nazi fighters.

"Surrender or die" was the grim command of the Russians.

So much of an impression were the Russians making on England that many sources in London expressed the sober belief that a "third front" would be created on the continent in the spring if the Germans attempted a new offensive against Russia.

London had been studying the Russian technique of using to the fullest extent the disgruntled peoples in the conquered territories through which the Germans had been passing in their far flung drive toward Moscow and through the Crimea.

Back of the Germans were millions of murderously angry Russians, Poles, Czechs, Greeks. Every one of them, half-starved, beaten down, were only too ready to conduct guerrilla tactics against communication lines.

The British now pointed out that this same formula existed in much of western Europe. And they were planning to use it soon.

LIBYA:

Although delayed from time to time by bad weather, the British forces in Libya, under command of General Auchinleck, were keeping well abreast of the enemy, constantly in contact with him.

Prisoners piled up after the final completion of the conquest of Bardia, coastal town close to the Egyptian border, which had promised to become a "pocket of resistance" of as much trouble to the British as their Tobruk garrison had been to the German-Italian forces.

Aids Wavell

This is Maj. Gen. George H. Brett of the United States, chief of the U. S. army air corps, who was named deputy supreme commander of the unified allied high command in the southwest Pacific. He will serve directly under Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, British army leader, appointed commander of the allies in that area.

A Couple of Good Cracks at Herr Hitler

HOME FRONT: All-Out Effort

From the announcement by OPM that there was not a single work stoppage in any war factory to the report that all new-car production and sale had been halted, it was evident that we were really at war.

The ban on tire sales and the subsequent rationing had been simply ascribed to the closing of Pacific raw rubber supplies, and people shrugged their shoulders.

But the halting of new car production, and the announcement by the United States that the entire output of 650,000 units would not be enough for essential needs such as cars for physicians, fire departments, ambulances, etc., and that it would all be needed for such persons, began to show the population what war really meant.

Car owners began driving less and less, to preserve their cars for longer periods, not knowing when they would be able to buy another. Factories and assembly lines were being revamped for tank and armored truck production.

The "recapping" of a tire, which had been a mystery to most auto owners now became a necessity and places equipped to do this work were doing a landoffice business.

Followed the announcement by a senate group considering price controls that wages also would be controlled. The wage control proposal, however, was not to be thrown into the hands of the same agency which would have charge of price maintenance.

Taxes up to half of the national income were expected for next year, and the $72,000,000 Vanderbilt estate, which passed to the heirs, was "touched" for $42,000,000.

Sundays (said the OPM) were to be the same as weekdays in all war-essential industry.

CIVILIAN: Defense Plans

A recent blackout in San Francisco, when unidentified planes were heard approximately 80 miles west of the Golden Gate, and a 44-minute alert was sounded, served to stress the strident civilian defense was making.

The city had been well blacked out in fifteen minutes, fire engines moved to fires without headlights burning, there was no panic, little disorder.

At the same time it was announced that a civil air patrol would be formed from among the 90,000 qualified air pilots in the nation, of whom about 7,000 were women.

These would be given priorities on planes and parts, and the patrol would be made an adjunct to the army air force.

The patrol, by watching for enemy raiders, would free many American army planes and pilots for actual combat in the war areas, it was pointed out.

MISCELLANY:

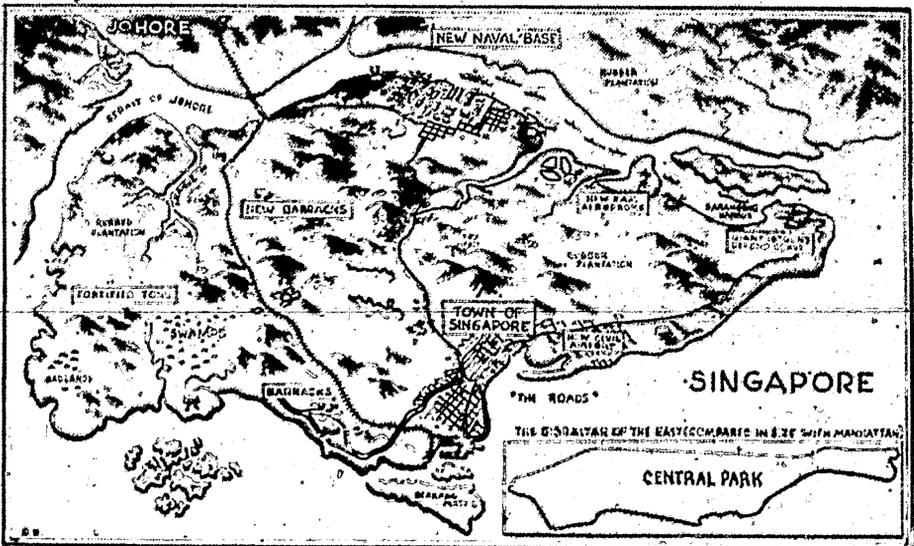

Vichy: The Paris-press, controlled by the Nazis, had sailed into Vichy for failure to live up to collaboration promises, and blamed the presence in the government of American Ambassador Leahy.

Hollywood: Shots rang out on the estate of Irene Dunne, awakening the actress. She investigated. One of her armed guards had an argument with another, shot him through the arm.

Fert Steeum, N. Y.: The commanding officer got a letter from a private at a southern camp saying: "Sir, I wish to volunteer in a suicide squad. I am now in a laundry unit which is non-combat. Just a chance is all I ask."

Washington: Newsreel cameramen had 30 minutes in which to photograph Winston Churchill. They had planned to ask him to feed the White House squirrels. Instead he put on and took off his "siren suit," a coverall with zippered seams which he can do in two minutes. They asked for no more.

Singapore, Gibraltar of East, Is Rich Prize

The defenses of Singapore, the Gibraltar of the East, are, naturally, military secrets, but this map of the British island fortress gives some idea of the city's size, its resources and harbor facilities. Raid-free in the first days of the Pacific war, Singapore was attacked repeatedly by Jap bombers but valiantly defended. Martial law was declared in the Singapore area shortly after the first attack by Japanese invaders.

Putting Extra Stretch in Rubber

We will all have to do without new automobile tires for the present. Next best thing is a re-treading job on your old ones, if they are too smooth for safety. At left you see a re-treading operation in progress. A "camel back," or new rubber top, is vulcanized to the old casing to give a new gripping tread. At the right is shown how a worn-out tire compares with one that has just been given a face lift, or a new tread. The recapped tire is at left; the old "smoothy" beside it.

Hotel Gets War Wraps

Completing the job of placing sandbags outside the office windows of Hotel Bossert in Brooklyn. The barriers were installed as the hotel organization could keep functioning in case of an air raid.

As Gas Goes on Ration in Hawaii

This censor-approved photo which was received from Honolulu shows Honolulu automobile owners lined up over two blocks on the first day, waiting at the city hall to get their gasoline ration tickets. Note the sand bag barricade on each side of the entrance. This is for the protection of the armed guards.

Guards Singapore

DEEP WATER ISLAND

by ALAN LEMAY

W-N-U-RELEASE

INSTALLMENT SEVEN
THE STORY SO FAR: Karen Waterson, courted by her lawyer, John Colt, that she has a claim to the island estate of her grandfather, General Waterson, has come to Honolulu to attempt getting the property. In an effort to find out something about the Wayne family, now in control of Alaska, the island, she accepts a date to go sailing with Richard Wayne at Tonga Dick as he is known throughout the South Pacific. Against her wishes to take her to Alaska and there they find that James Wayne, Dick's uncle and manager of the property, is very ill. Dick attempts to work out a compromise settlement with Karen but she refuses. The first night of their visit James Wayne is found dead. Next day Karen and Dick start back for Honolulu. On the way Dick attempts to explain to Karen the Wayne's interest in the island.
Now continue with the story.

Karen's next words were faintly contemptuous. "If you think that your brothers are capable of standing against such a man as John Colt."

He shrugged impatiently. "Karen," he said, "I am the one that you are against now. Don't you know that?"

Karen faltered and her eyes dropped. But she said, "Yes; yes, of course. I suppose it always did have to come to that, in the end, didn't it?"

Suddenly Dick reached across the table and caught both her hands. "I don't want to go to war with you," he said. "I don't think you want to go to war with me. Do you?"

"It doesn't have to be war," Dick said. His voice had neither pride nor distance. "It can be anything you want to make it."

Suddenly he came to his feet, stepped around the little table; and though she sprang up he caught her in his arms. Her face pressed hard against his blue jacket, so that she smelled tobacco smoke, and salt spray. He spoke to her almost inaudibly through the sudden tumble of her hair.

"I don't want your island. I don't want anything on the face of the sea, except one thing. You know what that is. I want you."

Her arms went around him then, and she clung to him. "I don't want the island either, Dick."

"If it brought you into the Pacific, I guess Alaska served its turn."

"You—you'll have to see John Colt," Karen said. "Somehow you have to fix it all with him."

She felt the breath go out of him. "Colt?" he repeated. "In God's name, why Colt?"

"Everything he has left has gone into backing me. He's the only reason I'm here."

His arms loosened, then, so that she swayed away from him; and he held her shoulders between his two hands.

"You feel so definitely tied to John Colt as that?"

"I have to stand by him, now—even now," Karen said. "I couldn't possibly do anything else."

She saw his eyes harden, and disengaged herself from his hands.

"You hate John Colt so much?"

"My uncle would never have yielded one inch of Alaska to John Colt," Tonga Dick said. He spoke slowly, but to Karen it must have seemed that his words carried an implacable finality. "Neither will I; and neither will my—brothers, while I live."

"I'm sorry," Karen said.

"You mean?"

"There's nothing more to be said."

"It's war, then?"

"There—there doesn't seem to be any other way."

"Karen—if there's anything I can say—"

She was in possession of herself again. "You might say," Karen told him, "you might say to the Chinese boy that I would like a cup of black coffee."

He turned away from her, shouting to the mess boy in a furious below that shook the lamps in their gymbals.

As he did so a great lift of the sea swung a porpoise of the Holoaki high above the water; and through the thick streaming glass Karen saw distant lights.

Honolulu was rising, coming to them across the black water.

Karen Waterson, deeply fatigued, did not talk to John Colt that night; and the brilliant but peculiarly soft sunlight of the Islands was flooding the lanai of her suite when she next awoke.

Looking at the sunlight on the clean rainbow water, it was hard to remember a lightless and uneasy sea with its long miles whispering under a black rain. Her memory of Tonga Dick Wayne, though, remained distinct, as sharply detailed as if he had been with her in the sunlight. She could almost see him standing there, tall and balanced, his sea cap slapping jauntily any old place on his head—grinning, of course, but with a glint of blue steel in his eyes narrowed against the brightness of the sea.

Later, eating breakfast on her own lanai, she was only half finished when John Colt tapped at the door, and was let in.

Colt paced morosely back and forth along the railing of the lanai while Karen sat down to finish her breakfast. "You look as if the sailing did you good," he complained.

"You've worried me half to death," he told her now. Unim-

"It's war then?"
"There—there doesn't seem to be any other way."

pressed, Karen buttered a roll; and at this John Colt looked annoyed. "I should think," he said, "that you'd have enough consideration."

"John," Karen said, "James Wayne is dead."

"Well—I know it. It's in the papers. And this is going to—"

"I," Karen said, "was on Alaska when he died."

"You must have had a very lovely time."

"Interesting," Karen put in.

"Did you talk to James Wayne before he died?"

"For a fraction of a moment Karen Waterson hesitated."

"No," she answered.

There was a long silence then, and Karen had a curious sense that time was rushing over them in long swells, as the green seas swept over the coral rocks.

"What is it," John Colt said, "that this man has?"

Karen couldn't answer him.

"Compromise," John Colt said queerly. "How could there be any compromise? If you weren't in the right—if you did not rightfully possess all this island—do you think I would have fooled with you?"

"What do you want me to do?"

"As far as I have anything to do with this," Colt said, "I'll never yield any Wayne one cent."

There was a finality in that; but instinctively Karen knew that it was not a finality that had anything to do with money. What had been a contest for an island had turned into a contest between two men for a girl. Neither one of them would be satisfied now with any settlement that would not be a complete shut-out for the other.

When she had comprehended that, Karen knew that she was in a trap. Perhaps already an unalterable obligation had committed her to something she had not foreseen.

Colt was like a mountain; he was like the sea. Perhaps it was a terrible thing that a slender girl, weighing not more than one hundred and twenty pounds, could break up John Colt.

Suddenly Karen knew the reason. This man had never made love to her, not by a word, not by so much as the pressure of a hand. But now—nothing could have told Karen more definitely than this moment told her that Colt would rather lose Alaska than lose her. John Colt was in love with her, completely and utterly, without recourse and without doubt.

JOHN THE BAPTIST AND JESUS

LESSON TEXT—Luke 3:1-6, 15-17, 21, 22. GOLDEN TEXT—"Thou art my beloved Son; in thee I am well pleased."—Luke 3:22.

"A reed shaken with the wind?" No. "A man clothed in soft raiment?" No. "A prophet? Yes, I say unto you, and more than a prophet. For this is he, of whom it is written, Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, . . . Verily I say unto you, Among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist." Such was the testimony of Jesus (Matt. 11:7-11) about the man who in our lesson of today bears his testimony concerning Jesus.

I. John: the Preacher of Repentance (vv. 1-3).

The times in which a man lives will often make or break him. If times are dark and difficult most men submit to the burden of the day without protest or effort. But not so with John. The period in which he lived is graphically brought before us as we consider the names of civil and religious leaders mentioned in verses 1 and 2. Tiberius Caesar, the emperor, was virtual dictator, "talented, ambitious, cruel, licentious, infamous, inhuman" (Van Doren). Pilate was the governor of Judea, who later condemned Jesus to the cross. Herod was a seducer and murderer. Annas and Calphas shared the infamy into which the priesthood had fallen.

God needed a man with a flaming message of judgment, and He had him ready out in the wilderness, far from decadent Rome and spiritually dead Jerusalem. Upon this man John came the message, a word from God—"Repent"—which stirred the whole countryside. But he had even a greater mission.

II. John—the Forerunner of Jesus (vv. 4-6).

He humbly identifies himself as the voice in the wilderness prophesied by Isaiah. His was the important duty of preparing the way for the coming of the Lord Jesus.

The picture is that of the preparation for the coming of an oriental monarch. When he "was about to make a journey, a servant was sent before him to prepare the highway. Valleys needed to be filled, hills lowered, crooked places made straight, rough ways made smooth. Thus, before men would be ready to receive Christ, moral obstacles must be removed, men must repent of their sins and turn from them" (Erdman).

Isaiah says that "all flesh shall see the salvation of God," something which God has made possible, but which we have not even yet fully carried out. The gospel is universal in its character—for all mankind. This prophetic word will, of course, have its complete fulfillment when the King comes to reign. Then "they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for they shall all know me, from the least of them to the greatest of them" (Jer. 31:34).

III. John—the Follower of Jesus (vv. 15-17).

The humility of the man, his recognition of true greatness in Christ, his willingness to efface self, is seen in the words of these verses and in such other passages as John 1:29-30, where he directed his disciples to Jesus, whom they followed, and John 3:26-30, where in response to the effort to make him jealous of Jesus because his (John's) disciples followed him, John replied, "He must increase, but I must decrease." He was glad to be the friend of the bridegroom who rejoiced when the bridegroom came (John 3:29). He declared himself unworthy to loose the latchet of Christ's shoe (Luke 3:16).

The Christian virtue of humility is evil spoken of by a world of force and hatred, but it is still precious in the sight of God, and the ornament par excellence of Christian character. "Be clothed with humility: for God resisteth the proud and giveth grace to the humble" (1 Pet. 5:5).

As he put himself in the background, John put Christ forward as the one whose baptism would not be a material element, water, indicating the inward change of repentance, but would be with Holy Ghost fire, cleansing and transforming life. However, the Christ who comes as a Saviour to the repentant one, comes also as the flaming fire of judgment upon the impenitent. There is wheat and chaff in the world of men, and the fan of Christ will soon separate the wheat which goes into His eternal garner from the chaff which He will burn with unquenchable fire.

Our God is a God of unfathomable grace, but He is also a God of severest judgment upon those "that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ." Read the solemn words of II Thessalonians 1:7-9. It is an awful thing to reject the Saviour, and thus to make Him our Judge.

Ambrosio Chavez

Last Saturday morning at the home of his foster daughter, Mrs. Louis Montoya, the above named gentleman, old resident and pioneer of Lincoln County, passed away after a short illness.

Mr. Chavez and family came here from Capitan about seven years ago, at which place he resided for many years, being in the employ of the Titsworth Co. Mr. Chavez was a good, honest, trustworthy citizen and had many friends who will miss him.

He leaves to mourn his loss, two foster daughters, one foster son and other relatives, to all of whom sympathy is tendered. Funeral services were conducted by Fr. Salvatore at the St. Rita Church Tuesday afternoon and interment made in the local cemetery.

Elzy Perry and son George were in town Wednesday in the interest of the well drilling business. They have drilled some of the best wells in this section and have just finished a good water well for E D Bond. This well yielded a good flow of water at the depth of 390 feet, where usually water could not be reached in less than from 600 to 800 feet. They are at present drilling for W R Lovelace.
