More Blue Jackets

Dan Conley, Jr. and Herman Kelt, Jr. have just returned from Denver, where they were inducted into the U. S. Naval Service. These young men have joined the already long list of Soldiers, Sailors and Marines from Lincoln County, now serving with our armed forces all over the world. We are proud of our boys from Lincoln County as the whole world has come to know that the fighting blood from the Southwestern United States will make history for themselves as they did in the first World War, and are now doing with MacArthur's forces in the Philippines.

Be sure and send in the addresses of our soldier boys, who have not appeared in this column.

Le Nelle Marie Haskins

Funeral services for the above young lady, beloved daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Sparkman, who died here Feb. 1, was held yesterday at the M. E. Church, with Rev. Sherman conducting the same. The pastor paid a beautiful tribute to her life and offered Christian consolation to the bereaved relatives.

Mrs. Don English, Miss Ruth Petty, Messrs. Clyde Brawster and Colonel Jones sang two selections, "Going Home" and "In the Sweet Bye and Bye." After services, the funeral cortege wended its way to the White Oaks cemetery, where the remains were interred. Relatives and friends from Jicarilla, Ancho and Carrizozo followed the remains to the last resting place. Beautiful flowers attested to the love and esteem in which she was held by all who knew her.

Unrestrained, the American Boy is Naturally Patriotic

We are advised that complaints have been sent in to our recruiting stations that there seems to be backward steps taken in some localities by the boys who are eligible to service. Different excuses have been offered to keep the boys at home instead of allowing them to exercise their own minds in that all-important matter.

These excuses are not coming from the boys, but from close relatives, who, perhaps unconsciously, are leading or are seeking to lead their boys in the wrong direction. Parents who through their natural love for their boys, are given as among those who are pleading for the exemptions. They offer all kinds of pleadings, such as "only support," "needed in different lines of businesses," etc.; all of which they seem to think, will justify their claim in keeping the boys at home. Pleadings from a devoted mother, arguments from the father, mothers weeping on the shoulders of her boy without a thought for his future welfare among his associates, which would cause him many heartaches—should these pleadings be successful in keeping him out of the service of his country?

With all the above influences brought to bear on the American youth, he is, in a certain sense to be pitied. Pleadings of mother, tears from the sister and sweetheart and arguments from the father, offer a strong temptation to the great American boy, who left alone to his own thought, might otherwise go his own way and avoid the embarrassment of being pointed out as a slacker after the war is over.

As we said in the head of this article, unrestrained by the above named influences, the American boy is naturally patriotic. We all dread to have our boys go to war, but we are in it and each should do his share. Let the great American boy exercise his own judgment and there is but one thing to expect—he will gladly do his part. The purpose of this article is to defend our young men from these influences and who in after years will not be afraid nor ashamed to read the following lines:

"Breathes there a man With soul so dead— Who never to himself bath said— 'This is My Own; My Native Land!'"

Star Dust STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO By VIRGINIA VALE

CARY GRANT, just finishing "Arsenic and Old Lace" on the Warner lot at Burbank, Calif., is expected to apply for his final American citizenship papers any day now. He was preparing to complete his Americanization when England declared war on Germany, and stopped, figuring it as a slacker act. When he informed the British authorities that he was ready for any task they might assign him to, they told him to remain in Hollywood. So he began dividing his earnings between the needy here and in England; they got the $100,000 which he received for "The Philadelphia Story," and he's donating $100,000 of his "Arsenic" earnings; all the money must be spent here.

Loretta Young finally revenged her screen sisters who have had to take slaps in the face and well-aimed blows in the name of their art. She caught Frederic March bent over with laughter during a scene in Columbia's "Bedtime Story."

ry" and launched a kick which not only deposited March in the gutter but also left him with his face in a mud puddle. To make matters worse, they had to make four takes before the scene was right—which meant four kicks, four descents into the mud for March.

George Brent had his first kissing scene with Olivia de Havilland in the forthcoming "In This Our Life." While they were making it, Ann Sheridan, who works for the same studio, was on the set watching, and Brent seemed a bit bashful. "Go ahead, George, and give her a real kiss," urged Ann. "Just pretend that Annie doesn't live here any more." A week later, Ann and George were married.

For two musical misfits who couldn't get a break in New York a few years ago because they couldn't carry a tune, comedians Bud Abbott and Lou Costello are doing all right. They got their first good break by promising to learn to sing, and succeeded as comedians while they were learning. They've just made their first record, and are preparing for their next picture, "Rio Rita."

Gary Cooper probably wishes with all his heart that Lou Gehrig hadn't been a left-hander. Preparing for "Pride of the Yankees," the story of Gehrig's life, Gary is studying slow-motion pictures of Babe Herman and working like mad with Lefty O'Doul, trying to learn to use that left hand as if it came natural.

We'll be seeing a new patriotic picture before the year is over. It's "American Cavalcade," and will tell the story of Mr. and Mrs. America through dramatic historic incidents and music. It is intended for Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn.

BKO Radle is going to film the story of General Billy Mitchell, the flying general who was court-martialed because he believed so implicitly that planes were important to an army. It should be one of the year's important films.

It looks as if radio has another "God Bless America" in "They Can't Black out the Stars and Stripes," a new song written by Elliott Jacoby, musical director of the air's "Meet Mr. Meek," in collaboration with Private Jacob Goldstein of Mitchel Field.

Jimmy Durante, rated as a star by Warner Bros. since he made "You're in the Army Now" and "The Man Who Came to Dinner," says he will revive the famous comedy team of Clayton, Jackson and Durante to entertain the boys in army camps.

ODDS AND ENDS—Betty Grable and Victor Mature are not so very good in Fox's "I Wake Up Screaming," but they're trying again in "White Collar Girl." The bombing scenes of "Captains of the Clouds" were hard on Brenda Marshall, whose father is manager of a large sugar plantation in the Philippines. Robert Taylor and Norma Shearer, last seen together in "Escape," will be teamed romantically in "Love Me Not." Speech reports declare that Spencer Tracy can pick up any scene and speak like a native in several hours. 26th Century-Fox has a story for Pat O'Brien that he'll like—"Calling Manhattan."

A BUSY SABBATH IN CAPERNAUM

LESSON TEXT—Mark 1:21-34. GOLDEN TEXT—"I was in the Spirit on the Lord's day."—Revelation 1:10.

The Sabbath of the Jew and the Lord's Day (Sunday) of the Christian were both intended to be days of rest. The ordinary activities of life were to cease and one was to be free to worship and to rest. The manner in which a man uses this God-given day of rest is a remarkably accurate indicator of his spiritual condition.

We have before us the account of a very busy Sabbath day which our Lord spent in Capernaum, the city in which most of His mighty works were done, but which ignored Him and His teaching to its own destruction (see Matt. 11:23, 24). As we look at our Lord's activity on that day, we learn what we may do with our Sundays to make them bear fruit for eternity. We find Him in three places.

I. In the Church (vv. 21-28). The Sabbath day found our Lord with His people in the synagogue, their place of worship. The service of worship was probably formal and lacking in spiritual vitality, but none-the-less He was there. What have we to say if we miss the opportunity for fellowship and service which church attendance brings us?

Observe that because He was there He (as a distinguished religious teacher) was called upon to teach the people. He taught them in the serene consciousness of His divine authority, and the people were delighted and astonished at His message. We may not serve exactly as He did, but if we present ourselves in God's house on His day we will find the way opening for us to share in the worship.

Jesus not only spoke, but He performed a miracle. Certain it is that we could not do what He did, but we can be ready to give ourselves in service as well as in worship, or in speaking. There is much work to be done in the church, and God's people should be ready and willing to do it.

II. In the Home (vv. 29-31). From the synagogue Christ went into the home. How appropriate! We too should go from the church to the home, always bringing with us the strength and blessing of the worship service.

The daughter of a great preacher and Bible teacher said the thing she most loved in her father was that he did not give out the "cream" of his Christianity in his meetings and bring home the "skim milk." Too often we fail to bring into the home the power and beauty of the service in the church. We who have been very sweet and spiritual in the church should not come home to be sour and crabbed.

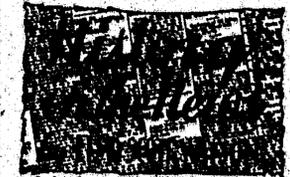

Jesus brought a blessing into Peter's home, miraculously healing his mother-in-law of a great fever, setting her free to serve. Here again we cannot do what He did, but we can, in His name, bring power and blessing into our homes.

III. In the City (vv. 32-34). From the home the ministry of Jesus reached out to the entire city. As the strict laws forbidding travel on the Jewish Sabbath were set aside by the coming of sundown, not only the city but the entire countryside brought their sick and needy to Him.

The scene staggers the imagination as one attempts to conceive of this coming together of troubled humanity for the Master's touch. Mark tells us that He healed many; Matthew, that He healed all, and Luke, the physician, is emphatic in saying that He healed every one of them.

We may learn from this incident that our Christian faith, which has been developed and strengthened by our time of worship and service in the church, should not only reflect itself in the home, but should reach out into the life of the community in which we live. The primary interest of the Christian in his city or the place of his residence should be spiritual, a desire to bring to bear upon the people of the community the power of the gospel.

There is, however, a secondary responsibility which is of much importance and that is the extending of Christian influence into every phase of school, social, political, and business life. It is said that when D. L. Moody came into a barber shop the entire course of the conversation changed. The Christian should have an influence on problems of social welfare, the work of the public schools, the proper conduct of business in the community, and surely upon its political life. It is said that if every Christian in America would vote according to his professed convictions we could put the saloons out of business in a single election. Why not do it?

He'd Bow to No Jap!

ON FEBRUARY 1, 1824, a little boy was born at Fort George (formerly John Jacob Astor's post of Astoria) on the lower Columbia river in the Pacific Northwest. His father was Archibald McDonald, a young Scotch clerk in the employ of the Hudson's Bay company, and his mother was the former Koale Koo, or Raven, daughter of Chief Comcomley of the Chinook Indians.

February 1, 1942, finds the United States and Japan engaged in a life-and-death struggle. Although, on the face of it, there is no connection between these two events on dates 118 years apart, the fact is that such a connection exists. For this little boy, to whom his parents gave the name of Ranald, grew up to be a great adventurer, went to Japan and became the first teacher of English in that "Hermit Kingdom." "Indeed, it may be said that Ranald MacDonald, half-breed son of Oregon, owns a place among those who introduced Japan to the ways of the western world, a world of ideas Japan has never fully understood and with which she is now at war."

Those are the words of a Portland, Ore., historical writer, M. Leona Nichols, whose book, "Ranald MacDonald, Adventurer," published by the Caxton Printers, Ltd. of Caldwell, Idaho, is the first full-length biography of this little-known but significant American.

In 1848, he was a sailor on a whaler, the Plymouth, commanded by Capt. L. B. Edwards. When the

RANALD MACDONALD (From a woodcut by William Klam in "Ranald MacDonald, Adventurer" by M. Leona Nichols.)

Plymouth reached Asiatic waters near Japan, he determined to visit the "Hermit Kingdom." Although Captain Edwards warned him that he might never get out of the country alive, MacDonald persuaded the captain to give him his discharge and supply him with a small boat and enough supplies to reach land.

Nearing the shore, the daring young American capsize his boat and allowed himself to be rescued by some Japanese fishermen. Taken before the governor and other court dignitaries, MacDonald was ordered to bow low before them. He refused, saying "I kow-tow to no man!" Then, according to MacDonald, "I looked the governor full in the face, so did he me; man to man . . . say for 20 or 30 seconds, in dead silence, at length, rising slowly, from a sitting position, to his knee, leaning toward me, he addressed me in a few words I did not understand." Later the American learned that the governor had said "You must have a big heart."

Instead of being punished for his boldness, MacDonald was treated respectfully and given a house in which to live, although he was still looked upon as a prisoner and closely guarded. The Japanese authorities realized that he could be useful to them so they sent some of their most intelligent and promising men to him to learn to speak English. For seven months he served as their teacher. Then he was set free.

"The seeds sown by this first teacher of English in the Land of the Rising Sun were planted in soil that was fertile," writes Mrs. Nichols. "The harvest came during Commodore Perry's visit to the island empire, when he made his memorable treaty between Japan and the outside world in 1854, when Ranald's pupils acted as important links between the Americans and the Japanese, serving as interpreters and liaison officers."

At Macao MacDonald left the ship which had rescued him and went to Singapore. He became a sailor on a ship bound for Madras and, although it was wrecked he managed to reach land in safety. Eventually he went to Australia, made his fortune there and, once more, succumbing to the wanderlust, took ship for Italy. From there he went to Paris and London, then decided to return to America. Arriving in Canada, he learned that his father had retired from the service of the Hudson's Bay company in 1844, settled near Montreal and died there in 1862.

Do YOU like to sew? Then here is a grand new pattern to try your talents on—an apron which is as simple to make as ABC! Pattern No. 1518-B shows too, an apron which is different, slenderizing, unusually becoming and as efficient as a modern kitchen! The shoulder straps continue as side panels and end as good sized, properly placed pockets—and the side panels are so shaped that they give a wonderfully slenderizing effect right where you want it most—at the waistline! Side slashes hold the apron firm across the front, tie smartly in back. The straps stay up because they are fastened directly in back.

Household Hints. Oven-burned dishes can be cleaned by soaking them in a solution of borax and water.

White enamel can be cleaned with turpentine. Rub with a cloth moistened in the turp; then with a dry cloth.

Wash sweaters on a windy day, then put in a pillowcase or twine bag and hang out to dry. Shake often until dry. All knit or crocheted articles should be dried in this way if you want them to keep their shape.

A teaspoon of flour mixed with the hot grease in which you fry eggs will keep them from popping.

Use a clean sheet of wrapping paper to roll pies and pastry on. It saves a lot of cleaning up later.

Looking Toward The Days Ahead

WITH THE ADVENT of war, we are facing new problems in every state we serve. These become more complex as the arming of the nation gains impetus. Directly or indirectly, every one of us will play a more important part in this unprecedented endeavor as momentous days roll along in 1942.

Naturally, in this emergency, the country turns to the telephone for quick communication. Not only are more calls being made from each telephone, but the average length of calls has increased. We are adding new facilities as fast as obtainable where the need exists, but shortage of materials has already curtailed some of those planned additions. First things must be kept first!

We offer these suggestions with an appreciation of your past cooperation:

1. Don't trust to memory or old lists for telephone numbers. A wrong number is a wasted call.
2. Answering your telephone promptly saves time and facilities.
3. Give persons you call enough time to answer.
4. If there are delays on your calls, we hope that you will realize we are exerting every effort to keep them to a minimum.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

By Edward C. Wayne

A.E.F. Takes Over Northern Ireland Base As U. S. and British Form Supply Pool; Jap Convoy Blasted in Macassar Strait; Hawaii Report Blames U. S. Commanders

EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Justice Owen J. Roberts is shown (left) talking to newsmen after laying before President Roosevelt the report on the Pearl Harbor attack. Made public in its entirety by the President, the report fixed responsibility on Adm. Husband E. Kimmel and Lieut. Gen. Walter C. Short for "dereliction of duty." Justice Roberts was chairman of the commission of six that visited Hawaii.

OVER THERE:

New A.E.F. in Erin

When Uncle Sam landed an infantry force of several thousand men at an undisclosed port in Northern Ireland, it marked the first arrival of American troops in a European port since World War No. 1. Commanded by Maj. Gen. Russell P. Hartle, the Yank army of brawny, clean-limbed farm lads from the Middle West proceeded to camps prepared months before.

Few doubted that this detachment was but the advance guard of many more to come. It was believed, too, that the base they occupied might be the springboard from which an invasion of Hitler's Europe would be made.

This view was voiced in the address of welcome by Sir Archibald Sinclair, British air secretary, who said:

"This is a coming portent for Mr. Hitler, nor will its significance be lost on General Tojo.

"From here, assuredly you will rally forth with us to carry the war to the enemy's territory and free oppressed peoples of Europe. You are the vanguard of American arms."

SUPPLY COMMAND:

U. S.-British Pool

The creation of a supreme allied supply command that will speed and co-ordinate the production and flow of vital munitions and supplies to the fighting fronts was seen in the announcement by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill that the United States and Great Britain will pool all munitions, shipping and war materials to "further co-ordination of the United Nation's war effort."

Three joint boards have been set up to merge the combined war resources of the two nations and make them partners in vital fields of supply in addition to joint military and naval commands. These new agencies will include a combined war materials board, munitions assignment board and combined shipping adjustment board.

Board members, it was announced, will confer with representatives of the Soviet Union, China and such others of the 26 United Nations as necessary "to attain common purposes."

SHIPS:

Japan Losing Them

The British, Dutch and American bombers and ships of war were not formally coming to grips with large bodies of Japanese naval ships, but they were whittling away at them, and Japan's losses were assuming important proportions.

A count of Japanese ships reported sent to the bottom in the first seven weeks of the war totaled 100, not counting those damaged and probably sunk.

This, it was pointed out, has been an average of better than two a day, despite the fact that when the war started Japan had the jump on the other nations by virtue of the surprise, and that opening successes had weakened the allied hitting power.

A continuation of this rate, observers said, would cost Japan more than 700 vessels of all types, and that no navy in the world, except the United States, could stand replacing such losses.

Latest reports were an attack by air and sea forces of the United Nations against Jap war ships and troop convoys in the Straits of Macassar. Reported as the greatest demonstration of combined Allied might since the war's beginning, this force was revealed to have sunk or damaged at least 26 Japanese ships in a running battle.

Aid for Aussies

Australian Minister Richard G. Casey, arriving at the White House to confer with President Roosevelt on plans to aid Australia in its battle against Japan. Japanese advance troops have already occupied key island outposts of the Commonwealth.

PAN-AMERICA:

Half-Loaf Won?

What had first looked like a half-loaf victory for American diplomacy at the Pan-American conference at Rio de Janeiro, was gradually assuming the proportions of a larger loaf.

Most of the South American and Central American countries had gone to Rio intent on a solid-front breach with the Axis. Some already had broken relations, some had declared a state of war.

But Argentina and Chile had remained adamant. Whether that meant simply long coastlines to worry about, or Axis leanings, or economic hopings made little difference.

Enormous pressure was brought to bear, but they would not go "whole hog" along with the rest. Finally, in true diplomatic management, our conferees managed to pull out the plum of a resolution which committed all nations to a breach of relations, but allowed any individual to do so at a time he might select.

Uruguay and Peru were the first to sever relations, followed by Paraguay and Bolivia. The lineup following the breakup of the conference was "At War": United States, Canada, Costa Rica, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Nicaragua, Panama and Salvador.

"Broken Relation": Colombia, Mexico, Peru, Uruguay, Venezuela, Paraguay and Bolivia. Only four maintained any form of normal intercourse, namely, Chile, Ecuador, Brazil and Argentina. It was regarded as certain that the first three would soon sever relations and that the fourth, Argentina, would eventually take this step.

AUSTRALIA:

Readies for Defense

Despite the heroic fight on land before Singapore, and the strenuous efforts being made to gain air supremacy and control of the long Malayan coasts, most commentators and observers actually believed the "island city of spath" would eventually be besieged from the mainland, and might well be lost.

This intensified the belief in Australia and in many American quarters that the real battle of the South Pacific would center on the east coast of Australia.

Some trained observers, among them W. W. Chaplin, who had made a year's close study of the East Indies and Australia, including Singapore, publicly expressed the belief that Java and Sumatra constituted a "Magnet line" of defense in the East Indies, and that Japan was intent in taking the Philippines, Singapore and Borneo on so surrounding and going behind that line that they might attempt to duplicate Germany's similar feat against France.

SQUADRON:

Wiped Out

Despite the attacks by Japanese and Thallanders in the rear of the main Malaya battle for Singapore upon the British-American-Chinese defenders of Burma "the modern roads to Mandalay" had reported a two-day "bag" of 33 Japanese bombers, believed to be an entire squadron.

While military secrecy covered the development of the land action, thousands of Burmese, wild with delight, watched the American and British fighters in mad dog-fights overhead at mid-day.

MISCELLANY:

New York: A Berlin worker's slogan, smuggled out of the Reich, was broadcast: "We're winning ourselves to death."

Batavia: The Dutch army airman, in an attack on a convoy in Macassar strait claimed that they struck a large transport carrying troops, which turned completely over and rolled about, head upward.

SPEAKING OF SPORTS

By ROBERT McSHANE

Released by Western Newspaper Union

IT IS reasonable to assume that football—both professional and collegiate—will be one of the hardest hit sports during the next few years.

Players under consideration by pro teams will be seniors, near the end of their college careers. Those same players will be among the most useful men the army and navy have at their disposal. It is elaborating on the obvious to point out that the pro football draft is a very weak second to the military draft.

Next fall's professional football teams will be manned by married men. The teams won't have the power and speed of the past. They will depend on veterans to see them through uncertain times. Club owners are capable of reading the handwriting on the wall. They know that the few younger stars who do join the pro ranks will not be popular. The country needs them in uniform—and that uniform isn't the one supplied by a professional football team.

As a nation we have looked upon competitive sport as one of the main factors in developing character and building strong bodies. Whether or not we have been right continues to depend on the willingness of our athletes to serve in the country's armed forces. If we have been wrong, competitive sport will never recover from the blow.

It is gratifying to note that many athletes, including some of the greatest of the present era, have volunteered their services. In times like these there always is the feeling that men physically able to engage in strenuous sports should be in some branch of the armed services. They should not wait to be dragged in. Others have set the example. Stragglers will not find it profitable to disregard that example.

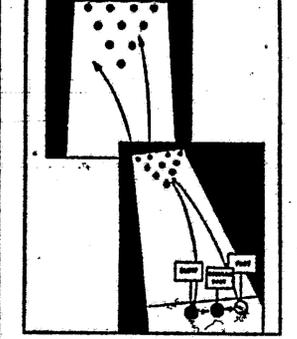

College football is expected to take a considerable drop until the war is settled. The huge crowds of the past will be forbidden to gather in many sections of the country—particularly along our coast lines. Coaches will be free from high pressure. They won't be condemned for losing an occasional game. The coach who loses a handful of his star players to the army or navy need not fear the wolves. They'll be ashamed to howl.

Professional athletes and professional sports promoters will find themselves increasingly open to criticism. Public opinion will continue to grow as a guiding force. This men interested in professional sports, if they intend to stay in business, cannot afford any serious errors. The mistakes which were made in the last war should not be repeated.

Bowling—the Right Way

By LOWELL JACKSON

(This is one of a series of lessons in bowling by Lowell Jackson, one of the country's outstanding bowlers. Mr. Jackson has won 300 games to his credit and has a 12-year league average of 210.)

Combating a "slow" alley.

ALLEY SURFACES.—Although all regulation A.B.C. alleys must comply with rigid specifications, the care and treatment of the alley surface makes a difference. As a result, we have "slow" and "fast" alleys. A slow alley is one that seems to grip the ball and causes it to run to the left.

Here are five ways of combatting slow alleys:

1. Move your stance about two inches to the left of where you normally stand on the approach.
2. Use a trifle more speed than ordinarily.
3. Loft your ball approximately six inches farther out on the alley.
4. Hold your ball higher, starting from your stance, and raise your back arcing a few inches higher.
5. If you still have "headpin" trouble, you must reduce your "turn-over"—that is the action of your fingers and wrist which applies the hook motion to your ball.

SPORT SHORTS

The Pittsburgh Pirates will go to El Centro, Calif., February 24, for the opening of spring training.

In the first World War, the American league was represented by 144 players, the National by 193.

Of the St. Louis Browns' 1941 revenue was $43,001 less than for the previous year, according to President Donald L. Barriss.

LOS ANGELES.—For some time ahead, outside of two such physical and mental conditioning games as football and boxing, where body contact is vital, the main demand on the country will be for playing games above spectator games.

The two leaders here are golf and bowling. Basketball is also a playing game on the major side, but it also carries a major spectator following, which neither golf nor bowling needs.

The bowling call on the playing side now runs away with all the others. Experts tell me we have 20,000,000 bowlers of one degree or another now actively engaged at target work down the alleys. This far overshadows golf in numbers. But golf still has the call in the matter of open country and five miles of hiking for some 3,000,000 club swingers between the ages of 8 and 80.

Bowling today is by all odds the most popular sport in the United States. It is a game that costs far less than golf, that requires as much skill, but which still misses the sun and wind and rain and the longer leg hike. We are not trying to compare the two, since they are totally different. They are both great games.

Neither has the toughening, fiber-making aspect of football and boxing, in which you have to take and give a physical beating to get anywhere. But not everybody can play football or box. And almost everybody can play golf or bowl.

About Bowling

The astonishing feature about bowling popularity is that it happens to be a difficult game to write about. It lacks the thrills of football, boxing, tennis and other sports. I mean for the reader. It lacks the diagnostic qualities of golf.

But it is one of the simplest of all games for the player, especially on the equipment side. And it happens to carry just as much entertainment as any game one can think about in a hurry.

A game must have amazing qualities to round up from 15,000,000 to 20,000,000 players without the ball—see so many other games get. If you have never bowled or if you haven't bowled for many years, give it a try and you'll be converted.

About Golf

Golf has always been—and always must be—a game for the player. Many have asked me why golf championships don't draw with other sports. In golf it is the spectator who takes the beating, not the player. Although, in a big tournament, the player takes his share.

How often would you draw big crowds in football, racing, baseball or any other game if the spectator had to gallop five or six miles over cross-country territory, jump ditches, climb fences, wade through a morass, fight through briar patches, be a broken-field runner and a blocking back to see every other shot played?

A golf spectator has to be an athlete, in training, willing to take a hard beating, to see most of the shots played in a championship by some leading star who is drawing the crowds.

If golf had the same accommodations for the spectator that other games have, it would be on a par with any game played in the way of admissions. It is the only game I know where the spectator gets a harder workout than the player draws.

The Range of Games

This happens to be the greatest sporting country in the history of a cock-eyed world. But with war conditions as they are there must be certain readjustments.

For the youth of the country I still insist there must be a maximum of body contact games—especially football and boxing. Baseball is also a great game. So are track and field and basketball. Also tennis. Also golf. They help to make legs. They add to physical stamina. They are strictly worth while. This is especially true of golf and bowling for those who have bumped into the march of the years.

But for high school and college play there should be a big increase on the side of football and boxing.

I am not referring to championships, to big spectacles, to money-making enterprises. I am taking into consideration the major values of give and take in the way of discipline, punishment, hardhood, stamina—ragged qualities of manhood.

This doesn't mean there should be any falling off, aside from all the needs of war, on the part of the older men participating in sport. To help win an all-out war an entire country must be physically ready. This means participation in the sport or game that is best suited for the individual.

Pomp and Ceremony Nearly Floored Schwab

At a meeting of the British Iron and Steel Institute, Charles M. Schwab was presented with the Bessemer medal. It was a solemn affair, marked by much formality. Before introducing each speaker, the toastmaster intoned: "Mr. President, your Excellencies, my noble Lords and gentlemen—"

The guest of honor was accustomed to American business methods, but not to such ceremony. When called upon to speak, Mr. Schwab repeated: "Mr. President, your Excellencies, my noble Lords and gentlemen—" Then mopping his brow, he exclaimed: "Whew, I'm glad that's over. Back home I would just say, 'Well, boys—'"

THE STORY SO FAR: Karen Water-son, convinced by her lawyer, John Colt, that she has a claim to the island estate of her grandfather, Garrett Water-son, has come to Honolulu to attempt getting the property. In an effort to find out something about the Wayne family, now in control of Alaska, the island, she accepts a date to go sailing with Richard (Tonga Dick) Wayne. Against her wishes he takes her to Alakoa. While there, James Wayne, Dick's uncle and manager of the property, is found dead from overwork. While taking Karen back to Honolulu, next day, Dick tells her he loves her but they later quarrel. Dick then sees John Colt and when a com- promise offer to him fails he tells Colt that their Pacific venture will fail. He goes back to Alaska and tells his half- brothers that he leaves Garrett Water-son to be alive. They question his word. Now continue with the story.

The swift twilight of the latitude was closing sharply, but the glasses were still able to bring out every detail aboard the Diesel boat.

"Granting that an ordinary man might drop out of sight that way," Willard said, "it still would have been impossible for Garrett Water-son. He was too big, too impor- tant."

Dick was getting disgusted again. "No, he wasn't—he only imagined he was. Once he was broke, he wasn't of any importance or inter- est to anybody—except to you, and to you only because you thought he was a skeleton in the closet. Doubtless this will surprise you, but the fact is that Alakoa is a small, obscure, and unimportant speck on the map, suitable for supporting a few hundred people, and of no other significance whatever. The fact that Garrett Water-son once had hold of it for a while would not distinguish him in the eyes of anybody, except yourselves."

Both brothers looked scandalized. "If all this can be proved," Ernest began, "I mean, if his actual identity can be proved—"

"Of course it can be proved! It's a plain, demonstrable fact—can't you understand that?"

"If Dick is to be believed," Willard said, "our worries are over, Ernest. They can go ahead and in- vestigate their heads off and it won't get 'em a thing. And Karen Water-son's case against us falls flat as—"

"As a bird in the hand," Dick suggested.

Suddenly a new angle occurred to Willard Wayne. "I suppose," he said, "since you are working for Water-son, as you say, this boat of yours isn't yours at all, but his—is that right?"

"Certainly!"

"Then," said Willard, "whatever business he's in now, he must be enjoying a considerable success. That alone ought to furnish proof that he's competent."

"Unfortunately, there's a catch in that, too," said Dick, "and it's a big one."

"Just what business is he in?" Ernest demanded. "Where does his money come from? Or is that some- thing else that isn't supposed to concern us?"

"It concerns you very much," Dick said.

"Well?"

Dick Wayne grinned sardonically, even maliciously, and stood up, preparatory to walking out. "Ask Garrett Water-son," he suggested. "If he doesn't feel like telling you, it won't do you any good to know."

John Colt, aboard a Diesel boat hardly better than the sampans the Japanese fishermen used, arrived at Alakoa at sunset.

By the time it was coughing along- side, he had made up his mind that if his brothers had sent for him he was not going to go ashore until he very well felt like it. But it was Charles Wong, who, with an unexpected, lank agility, pulled himself over the Holokai's rail.

"What do they want up there now?" Dick asked wearily.

"Nothing, Mr. Dick, that I know." Wong was nervous; there was a flutter in his long-boned hands as he produced a twisted slip of paper. "I came to you of my own thought. Up at our receiving station they keep hearing some ship calling the Holokai—they can't tell what ship. Its call letters aren't listed—no one ever heard them before. We think it may be some outlaw station. At any rate, the call comes in very per- sistent; and we didn't hear you answer, so I came to tell you."

"What were the call letters?"

"I have them written here."

Tonga Dick took the paper Wong offered him and unfolded it. Even before he made out its typewritten characters in the falling light, he knew what ship it would be.

"They were still calling when you left the house?"

"Yes, sir."

"Come here, Wong."

Tonga Dick ran back along the deck and dived into the little ken- nel, about the galley, which served as a radio shack, and Charles Wong came pattering after him. He clamped on his earphones and care- fully with micrometer delicacy, be- gan to turn the big dial of the short wave receiver; but for minutes there was no result.

"He must have shut down," Dick said at last. "If you catch it again at the Alakoa station, you'd better answer and take the—"

Just then the hunted signal came in, so powerfully that the effect was blasting. Somewhere, unexpectedly close at hand, Garrett Water-son was calling Dick Wayne from the sea.

Dick quieted the blocked and clat- tering receiver. "Good Lord He's right on top of us! Yes, he's calling us, all right."

Dick's earphones were beginning to zing with the measured letters of a message that was something more than news.

coming in across the still water from a day's fishing beyond the reefs. Dick sent a low whistle across the water, and the outrigger sheered in close to the side of the Holokai.

"Take me over to that stranger boat," Tonga Dick swung over the rail and dropped into the moving canoe.

"Okay, Captain Dick."

Karen Water-son was still stand- ing by the rail, quiet and alone, as the silent outrigger sliced close. Tonga Dick stood up, reached the boat's low rail, and swung aboard.

"Stand on and off," Dick told the Kanaka fisherman, "and wait for me."

CHAPTER X

The outrigger moved off a little, drifting idly. It was the girl who spoke first, her voice hushed in the quiet.

"I thought you might come over here."

Dick Wayne leaned close to her so that their shoulders touched, and held his voice low, hoping that Cap- tain Ramey would not be brought out of his galley.

"I have something to tell you," he said. "Something's happened—the whole situation is changed. John Colt can't accomplish anything here. The fight is off, and if it starts again it will be on an entirely new basis."

She waited, and in the rapidly thickening dark he could not see what was in her eyes.

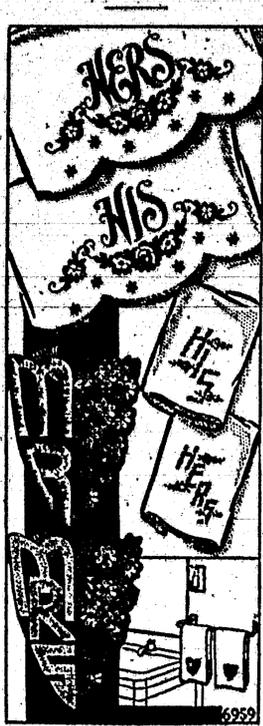

"Karen," Dick said, "you are not an heiress; and you have no claim upon Alakoa. You see, Karen—your grandfather is alive."

There was a long minute of un- easy silence. He didn't expect her to believe him, at least not at first. Shock, incredulity, refusal to accept the truth—he supposed he would have to contend against all of these before he could go on.

Karen's answer astonished him when it came. She spoke in a low drawl.

"You know, I rather thought so, Dick."
