CARRIZOZO, LINCOLN COUNTY, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1942

PRICE $2.00 THE YEAR

Mrs. J. M. Shelton

On August 19, 1894 in Steyenville, Texas was born a babe to whom a most appropriate name, Louise, meaning "fortress or defense of people" was given. She grew up, prepared herself to teach school, became accomplished in music. Then one of cupid arrows pierced her heart and she became Mrs. J. M. Shelton. In 1917 she and Mr. Shelton came to New Mexico and they have made their home in Corona, Santa Rosa and Carrizozo for the past twenty-seven years. All three high schools in the towns mentioned were privileged to have her as a teacher for a time.

She was a member of Order of Eastern Star and also active in Rainbow for Girls in Carrizozo. On giving up teaching school, she threw her boundless energy and initiative into many worthwhile projects. She was never too busy or too tired to serve in any worthy cause, whether it was assuming the care of a sick neighbor or directing the local Dramatic Club.

On August 20, 1942, at Hendriks Memorial Hospital in Abilene, Texas, her unquenchable spirit found the clay in which it abided too slowly for the Great Journey, and so it took flight to wing its way alone to the Great White Throne. On Aug. 23rd 1942 her body was laid to rest in her childhood home of Steyenville, Texas among her life long friends. Beautiful flowers and expressions of sympathy from friends everywhere bore ample testimony to the esteem in which this great lady was held.

Her husband, Mr. J. M. Shelton of Corona, a son Frank W. Shelton, 1st Lieutenant, Coast Field Artillery, Seattle, Wash., (who was unable to attend the funeral rites), a daughter Mrs. Louise Shelton Hughes, and son-in-law David Hughes of Forest Hill, California and a host of friends are left to mourn her loss. She is gone, but memories of her life of service will linger in the hearts of many, always, forever.

She lived to give to others, Above petty power and pelf, Of worldly things she gave many But mostly she gave of herself, To help some fellow traveler Along Life's weary road, And ease the weight of his burden With a shoulder under the load,

She didn't know the word failure It crumpled before the will That only gained strength by pushing Some timid soul up the hill; And so till the moment of leaving Her body, that bright vital spark Glowed warmly, without a flicker Till death angel left it dark.

She lived her life to the fullest; She hadn't a single regret From days of happy childhood Till the hour her Sun of Life set Although she has gone to her Maker

And her days here on earth were too few, Her footprints remain, a symbol Of all things good and true.

First Lieut. Leon Van Sordam Sheehy, 40, husband of Suzanne K. Sheehy of Glencoe, New Mex., has been promoted to the rank of captain. It was announced here this week. Captain Sheehy for the past eight months has been field commissary officer for Camp Wolters, Texas.

Emerson-Sinclair

Mrs. Ruth Emerson and John L. Sinclair, Curator of the Lincoln County Museum, a branch of the Museum of New Mexico, were married at the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Fierlein at 6:30 p. m. August 31st, in Santa Fe. The Rev. Joe B. Scrimshire, pastor of St. John's Methodist church officiated.

The bride was born in British Columbia and came to the United States at the age of eight years. Her home was in Antrim, New Hampshire, and she attended eastern schools, receiving her bachelor of arts degree at Radcliffe College, Cambridge, Mass., in 1936. She came to New Mexico in 1939 as a graduate fellow in psychology at the University of New Mexico. She has resided in Santa Fe for the past year and a half.

Mr. Sinclair was born in New York City of Scottish parentage and was taken to Scotland at an early age. He was educated in England attending Cambridge University for three years and taking agricultural courses in Scotland. He returned to the United States in 1923, making his home in New Mexico that year. With the intention of taking up writing as a career he made a thorough study of the rural life of New Mexico for ten years, most of which was done in Lincoln County, and went to Santa Fe in 1933, when he started contributing stories and articles to various magazines in the United States and Canada. He is the author of two novels with settings in Lincoln and Torrance counties. In 1938 he was given the position of research writer for the Museum of New Mexico, Santa Fe, and in 1940 was appointed curator of the museum in Lincoln, which office he holds at the present time.

Zumwalt-Murray

George S. Murray, sheriff of Grant County, and Mrs. Bonnie L. Zumwalt were married this morning at 9 o'clock at the Morrill apartments. Rev. H. L. McAlester, pastor of the Methodist church officiated and the ring ceremony was used. Only Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Morrill and a few members of the household witnessed the wedding, which was held in the living room.

Mrs. Owen C. Mathews was matron of honor and Mr. Mathews was best man. The bride was attired in a navy blue traveling suit, and Mr. Mathews wore a gray and blue suit.

Mrs. Ada Brewer played the wedding march as the couple entered the room.

Mrs. Murray is the daughter of Mrs. H. W. McMillan of Carrizozo. She resided in Silver City a number of years ago, and returned here early this year from El Paso. She had been employed there as a bookkeeper at the El Paso National Bank. Since her return to Silver City she has been the night operator at the local exchange of the Mountain States Telephone and Telegraph Co.

Mr. Murry was elected sheriff of Grant county four years ago, his second term expiring at the end of the present year. He has been employed continuously in the sheriff's office of this county since 1931. The numerous friends of the newlyweds wish them happiness and prosperity.

KILLING AND SUICIDE

For the past 16 years Julius Kose 56 lived at Fort Stanton as a patient. In his leisure time he was engaged in basket making and selling baskets and other articles of that nature. Tuesday for some unknown reason, another patient, George F. Sheenan 57, was placed in the cabin with Kose, who had been the lone occupant for the above named time.

Kose did not object to his coming and Tuesday night, went to the picture show. On his return he found that Sheenan had destroyed all of his baskets and other belongings. That so enraged Kose that he shot Sheenan in the pit of the stomach, causing death in a short time. Realizing what he had done, Kose ran out into the road and fired a shot into the pit of his stomach in the same manner as he had done with Sheenan. Both men died within an hour after the shooting.

The American Red Cross has developed a "hopeful" plan for dispatching messages from relatives and friends to members of the armed forces missing in action but not yet reported by the Japanese as prisoners of war. Persons in this area who have received notification that their relatives are missing in action but have not been notified that they are prisoners of war may go to the Chapter headquarters, at Carrizozo and be assisted in the preparation of the messages. All messages received by the Carrizozo Chapter will be sent immediately to Red Cross Inquiry Service, in Washington and should be presented to the Chapter in the next few days.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

United Nations Rout Japanese Forces To Score Major Milne Bay Victory; Soviet Bombers Blast German Cities; Offensive Nets Air Bases for Chinese

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.) Released by Western Newspaper Union.

These Italian prisoners were captured on the North African front by New Zealand and Indian forces. Almost all prisoners taken were from Pavia and Brescia footslogger divisions. Reports from the front indicate a mutual feeling of dislike between the Italian and German troops and officers. German troops are said to have refused to salute Italian officers.

TRAPPED JAPS:

Outguessed, Outfought "Milne bay area is rapidly being cleared of the enemy... His losses have been heavy... All his heavy supplies and equipment, including tanks, were lost." This happy communique from General MacArthur's headquarters in Australia made it clear that the Japanese were smashed in their Milne bay thrust and that Port Moresby was saved for the fourth time. The Japs were outnumbered and were caught in a carefully prepared trap. The communique said, in part: "The operation represents another phase in the pattern of the enemy's plans to capture Port Moresby. His latest effort was to turn the right flank by a surprise attack at Milne bay. The move was anticipated, however, and prepared for with great care. With complete secrecy the position was occupied by our forces and converted into a strong point."

Solomons

American forces in the Solomons continued to consolidate their positions in the newly won outpost in preparation for their next move, which may be a blow at Jap bases in the northwest Solomons, or, if the enemy reneges land and sea attacks, defensive action.

Two waves of Jap planes attacked U S troops and installations on Guadalcanal island, where a large enemy airport fell to invading American marines. The position of the marines has grown strong enough for the navy to announce that only "mopping up" operations were in progress. The navy also announced further strengthening of positions on six Solomon Islands in American hands: Guadalcanal, Tulagi, Florida, Tanambogo, Makambo, and Gavutu.

THE GOOD EARTH:

Recaptured by China The recapture of Chienchen and Lichui, the two most important airport cities in eastern China, marked one of the greatest victories of the war for Chinese soldiers. In a few weeks of fighting the Chinese counterattack virtually wiped out Japanese gains of the May and June campaign in the Chekiang and Kiangsi sector. Best news to America is the fact that both towns are within 700 miles of the Japanese mainland, and may soon base United States bombers for attacks on the enemy at home. Among Chinese officials there was little tendency to look upon recent gains as a clear cut victory resulting from superior offensive power. Belief was expressed that the Japs had overextended themselves.

HIGHLIGHTS in the week's news

TRAINING: Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell, commanding general of the Services of Supply, U. S. Army, called upon schools and colleges to become pre-induction training centers for the armed services. His prediction was that some colleges may be required to devote all facilities for such purpose. OMBUDRATE: Despite British broadcasts to the contrary, the German high command in a recent communique claimed that an Allied operational order seized during the raid on Sicily showed the raid was intended to be the opening of a second front in Europe. ACTION: Back to Washington came Brig. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley, former secretary of war. He had been wounded three times in Pacific naval action. He had been assigned to get supplies through the Jap blockade when Gen. Douglas MacArthur was in the Philippines.

ESCAPE: Of the more than 1,000 officers and men interned when the German pocket battleship Graf Spee was scuttled in Montevideo, more than 100 have escaped internment in Argentina. Juan Antonio Solari, chairman of a senate committee investigating anti-Argentine activities, said. DEATH: Dr. Belsario Porras, 85, three times president of the Republic of Panama, is dead of a chronic respiratory ailment. He was a one-time minister to the United States and represented his country at The Hague conference and in the League of Nations. POTATOES: Germany's 1942 potato crop, according to Nazi spokesmen, is a record one. Admitting that there were no potatoes to be had in Berlin last winter, authorities are promising the population nine pounds of potatoes per person, per week.

U. S. BOMBERS: In Desert Action

As a prelude to the actual reopening of the Egyptian desert offensive, British and Axis forces sparred daily by raiding each other's supply and patrol lines via the air route. U. S. bombers were aiding the British in these attacks.

While German Marshal Erwin Rommel was still "digging in" around El Alamein and consolidating his position before the Nazi drive toward Alexandria and Cairo, the British navy was striving desperately to cut his supply lines in the Mediterranean. RAF and U. S. planes, meanwhile, were striking hard at Nazi bases at Tobruk and El Daba. Both cities have vital Axis-held airports.

As the tempo of this new desert battle increased British and American planes also attacked enemy encampments, tank concentrations and armored units, behind Rommel's front lines.

RAF bombers and torpedo-carrying planes set two Axis ships afire and hit at least one other in an attack off the coast of Libya, and set fire to an oil tanker in the Mediterranean.

CRUSH JAPAN: Crew Warns

A "crushing defeat" of the Japanese militarists is the only thing that will assure future peace in the Pacific area, Joseph C. Grew, former American ambassador to Japan, told the nation upon his return to Washington.

Grew, who returned from Japan on the exchange ship Gripsholm, said: "We shall crush the Japanese machine and caste system in due course, but if we Americans think that, collectively and individually, we can continue to lead our normal lives, leaving the spirit of self-sacrifice to our soldiers and sailors, letting the intensification of our production program take care of itself, we shall unquestionably risk the danger of a stalemate in this war of ours with Japan."

He pointed out that Japanese can surmount economic hardship and that force alone will defeat them. "Let's put it in a nutshell," he said. "There is not sufficient room in the area of the Pacific ocean for a peaceful America, for any and all of the peace-loving United Nations and swashbuckling Japan."

KAISER: Record-Breaker

Ten-thousand freighters launched within 10 days after their keels are laid. That was the goal announced by Henry J. Kaiser, master shipbuilder of the Pacific coast, when he spoke just before the record-breaking Liberty freighter, John Fitch was launched only 24 days after keel laying. This launching broke by two days the record established in one of Kaiser's Oregon yards when construction time was reduced from 35 to 28 days.

It was at the John Fitch launching ceremonies that Kaiser disclosed he would again present to the government plans for building huge cargo planes. A few weeks previously he had made his first proposal to Washington and obtained authority to present specific plans for the plane construction program.

V-MAIL: Saves Space

Throughout the nation, some 45,000 postoffices and rural letter carriers are equipped to furnish free forms on which to write soldiers overseas by V-mail. By this process, V-mail letters written on special forms, are photographed, reduced to micro-film and sent overseas by air. Upon arrival the letter on the film is developed and full-sized letters are printed and delivered to the soldiers. Army officials are urging friends and parents of the boys overseas to increase their use of V-mail, thus saving valuable cargo space on supply ships.

AIR OFFENSIVE: Hits Nazi War Plants

The Allied air offensive against German war factories and airports continued in strength as British long-range bombers, probably numbering at least 600, lashed out at southern and southwestern Germany for two consecutive nights.

From London came word of a successful raid on Rotterdam, during which tons of bombs were dropped in the Dutch port and dockyards by Flying Fortresses of the United States army air force.

SPEAKING OF SPORTS

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

ONE of the most famous and colorful coaches in football history bowed out of the game recently when the College All-Stars met Chicago's pennant-winning Bears for the Army-Navy Relief fund.

For Robert C. ("Bob") Zupke, the All-Star tilt was the final game of his career as a coach. Zupke, already approaching legendary proportions at the University of Illinois, where he coached for 29 years, resigned last fall to accept a pension from the school. His last game, as mentor of the All-Stars, was a fitting climax to a thrill-studded lifetime in harness.

Zupke carries his memories of seven Big Ten conference championships plus many an upset that brightens the pages of Illinois athletic history.

There was the day when his often-beaten Orange and Blue moved to seemingly insurmountable odds against one of Minnesota's greatest teams. The conferees were at the top of the conference, Illinois at the opposite extremity. But Zupke had been pointing for this one and his gallant squad were responsible for one of the biggest football upsets of all time.

Games against Michigan supplied Zup with a pair of his greatest coaching thrills.

Greatest Thrills

The first of these was back in 1924—October 17, to be exact. Michigan was the visiting team at the dedication of Illinois' huge new stadium. The schools hadn't met the previous year and had tied for the Western conference crown. Illinois never will forget the famous Redhead who almost single-handedly shattered Michigan defenses.

In that memorable tilt Harold ("Red") Grange, the greatest football player ever molded by Zupke, scored four touchdowns in the first nine minutes of his first Big Ten game.

Fifteen years later Fritz Crisler, Michigan's capable leader, made a slight error in judgment when he remarked that Tom Harmon was a better back than Grange ever was. The Wolverines were favored to win by as much as 40 to 0. But Zupke had his theme for a pre-game talk to his squad. He had his team steamed up to fever pitch. When the smoke had cleared away the Illinois had won 16 to 7 for one of the most astonishing football results of the decade.

When Commander Gene Tunney of the United States naval reserve declared that football is practically useless to the war effort as a man-conditional, Zup was the first to take up cudgels for the game. It was quite a while ago that Zupke said: "These who want to abolish football never played it," but his feelings are as strong as ever.

On Cooperation

In questioning Tunney's knowledge of the subject, Zup pointed out that army and navy personnel must learn to co-operate in groups. Prize fighters fight for themselves. "Football," he said, "develops initiative and leadership qualities. Ten men subordinate themselves in a plan they have learned so that one man can advance. They develop and follow a leader."

The football profession hasn't always dealt too kindly with Zupke, but he always has been one of the most enthusiastic exponents of the game. No doubt he had a wistful look in his eyes as he watched the material at his disposal for the All-Star classic. Given a few of those backs his latter-day teams at Illinois would have been battling it out on even ground with such teams as Minnesota and Notre Dame.

SPORT SHORTS

Track architects design racing strips to allow four feet running room for each horse. When Hank Anderson, Bears' line coach, was a Notre Dame lineman under Rockne, he was known as "rockers" to his teammates because of his exceedingly flat feet. Bill Norman, Milwaukee outfielder, recalls a night game he played for Oklahoma City against Fort Worth. It lasted 21 innings and Fort Worth finally won, 43— at two o'clock the next morning.

THIS seems to be a good spot in which to pay additional tribute to a fellow by the name of Carl Owen Hubbell, a pitcher for Mel Ott's New York Giants.

After taking in all the testimony available from Mel Ott, his fellow Giants and his opponents for the National and American league, Carl Hubbell comes closer to being: "The perfect ball player" than any one we've ever known.

There is, of course, no such word as "perfection" in the human layout. It is the closest approach to perfection that one must consider.

"Here is what Carl Hubbell has," Mel Ott told me. "Just check against it—" "Skill, courage, brains, modesty, humility, loyalty, stamina, the will to win, concentration, physical fitness—100 per cent of which qualities he has at every start."

This happens to be a fair collection of worthwhile ingredients in an age where such features as "modesty," "humility," "loyalty," "stamina" and "concentration" are often well below par.

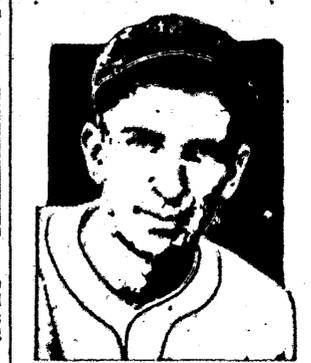

Skill, courage and brains combined in one system are rare enough.

But these qualities are usually accompanied by arrogance, over-confidence, physical unfitness and spotty concentration.

About Carl Hubbell

Lon Warneke, the tobacco chewer from Mt. Ida, Ark., one of the best pitchers in the game, said recently that Hubbell was the greatest pitcher he had ever seen.

"That tells only half the story," Mel Ott said. "Carl Hubbell is the most remarkable man I've ever known in baseball.

"When he started this season with the Giants back in April he was 39 years old. He had been a star pitcher for 20 years. We kicked away one game after another back of him. He never had a complaint. He had lost six of his first seven starts. He took all the blame. But in place of losing heart he kept working just as hard and then won his next six straight starts."

"It doesn't make any difference how many errors you make back of Carl. He takes the blame. He never has an alibi or an excuse. It took him five years through seven different towns to reach the Giants in 1928, but this never slowed him down. He has been their star ever since he arrived."

"Carl has won 19 games in a row. He fanned five of the greatest hitters the American league ever knew in succession. He has won four of his six World Series starts. He won 116 games in five years for the Giants, a remarkable record with only a fair hitting ball club. But that's only a small part of the real Carl Hubbell."

Still Learning

"Hubbell, after 20 years, is still learning. When he sits on the bench he watches every batter that comes to the plate. He watches every pitcher to see just what he has. He works just as hard when he isn't pitching as he does in the box. The greatest pitcher of them all, he takes nothing for granted. During a game, even when he is on the bench, he overlooks nothing. He rarely says a word.

"His whole heart and soul are in that ball game—and that's after 20 years of competition. He is just as keen to win now—I think even keener—than he was at his prime.

"And through it all he is the most modest man I ever knew. If Carl won 40 consecutive games, if he broke every pitching record, he would still be the same quiet, loyal, modest fellow trying to learn—and giving all the credit to the team."

I talked with several of the Giants about Hubbell. "He is under one tough hand-cup," a Giant veteran said. "When Carl pitches we all are so keen to win for him that we tighten up. We know there's no one like him. We'd break a leg and an arm to win for him. So at times we get over anxious, try too hard, and lose games he should have won. But you can make six errors back of Hub and you'll never hear a squawk. When he loses he is the one who takes the blame. When he wins—it's the team that did it."

NEW EFFECTIVE HAY FEVER RELIEF

Hay fever, which annually causes more sneezes, more inflamed noses and more red, streaming eyes than any other scourge, may have its final big fling this September, all because a Pennsylvania electrical engineer was served a dish of corn meal mush which was entirely too salty. The engineer, sneezing, and with all other hay fever manifestations, stopped at a hotel where he was served a dish of mush which he considered sending back as it was much too salty. Finally he ate it, however; the hay fever attack lessened; ultimately ceased. Next day he had three meals, all over-salted, and experienced his most comfortable time in years in the "hay fever season."

His analytical mind quickly grasped the possibility that the saline substance in his food was responsible for his relief.

About this time, Dr. E. E. Selleck, a graduate of Columbia University, met the engineer, made notes, and when he returned to his home, began experiments. Today Dr. Selleck declares he has found a certain means of relief for hay fever and is supported in his contention by other medical experts, and a nationally known chemical manufacturing concern, the Hollings-Smith Company, at Orangeburg, New York, has taken over making the remedy, which is called Nakamo-Bell.

Describing the experiments, Dr. Selleck said, "After I was sure I had found a means of quickly relieving hay fever through the chloride remedy, I tested it in the most practical way I knew. I held a three day clinic, to which many hay fever sufferers responded, from ages ranging from 10 to 60 years. Each person was given two tablets with a little water. Some relief came to all within ten minutes. Reports on these cases during the ensuing weeks showed practically a complete cessation of symptoms."

Star Dust

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO
By VIRGINIA VALE
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

THAT'S quite something in murder mysteries that 20th Century-Fox is cooking up, with Bryan Fox in charge. Instead of having only one famous sleuth, it's going to have practically all of them! Philo Vance leads off, but when he gets stuck he's aided by Michael Shane, the Falcon, Bulldog Drummond and various others. They can't borrow William Powell to be the Thin Man, so they'll just use his voice. George Sanders will play the Falcon. And Mr. Moto, the Japanese sleuth, will participate from an internment camp.

"The Show Boat" is returning to stage, screen and probably radio. It is to be revived on Broadway this fall, and Metro has purchased the screen rights from Universal, so for the third time movie-goers will have an opportunity to see it and hear its lovely music.

Katharine Cornell, one of the first ladies of the stage, has at last agreed to appear in a motion picture. Producers have been imploring her to do so for years; now she's consented. You'll see her in "Stage Door Canteen," the profits of which will go to service organizations. It will be produced in co-operation with the American Theater Wing. Katharine Hepburn, Gertrude Lawrence, Helen Hayes, Ray Bolger, Kay Kyser and Edgar Bergen will also participate; all will appear as themselves, working as they do at the Canteen.

Harry Sherman's "Lost Canyon," a Bill Boyd picture, ran into a snag the other day. There are scenes requiring cowboys to spend some time in a barn, amid about 100 bales of alfalfa. All was set, when the sneezing ruined the dialogue; seems some of the cowboys were allergic to alfalfa, and it was a case of abandoning either it or the cowboys. So a hurry call for non-hayfeverish cowboys was sent out.

It's a new wife for "Tarzan" in "Tarzan Triumphs," namely Frances Gifford. Maureen O'Sullivan, who has co-starred with Johnny Weismuller in the Tarzan series for eight years, relinquishes the role in favor of family duties.

If you have formed the habit of tuning your radio to the adventures of the Goldberg family, you know that "Sammy's" going into the army. But did you know that Alfred Ryder, who has been portraying "Sammy" for 13 years, is also being inducted? The radio character is merely following Ryder's career. Ryder stepped into the role when the show first went on the air.

Martin Block says that laziness pays, since it makes you look for short cuts. Eight years ago he was an announcer on a small station, writing his own scripts, and making $30 a week. He learned that he could avoid typing the commercials by ad libbing them. That style was more convincing than the first one, and today he's drawing down $4,000 weekly, thanks to it. He's now master of ceremonies on "The Hit Parade."

The largest stampede scenes to be photographed in technicolor have been completed by Columbia Studios in Utah for the new super-western, "The Desperados." More than 1,000 unbroken horses were used. Such famous scenes as Robinson's canyon, home of the cliff dwellers, and Johnson's canyon, noted for its beauty of color, were used as backgrounds.

ODDS AND ENDS—The Harry Aldrich cast needs a ninth member, so that they'll have a baseball team. The sheik's tent from which Bing Crosby and Bob Hope rescue Dorothy Lamour and Dana Drake in "Road to Morocco" is the one Damille used back in 1923 in "The Ten Commandments." Nan Gray, star of comedies "These We Love," is the wife of Jackie Westrate, a jockey, so her friends are at ways saying her to fondle their horses—and she's scared to death of horses. The boys in the North Carolina camp who named their jeep after Kate Smith claim that it can almost sing "God Bless America."

Producing Own Home Beef Aids War Plan

500-Pound Calf at Ten Month Age Is Suggestion

Producing beef for home use is a real contribution to the wartime program. If some families are to have meat they must produce it, says Roy W. Snyder, animal industries specialist of the Texas A. and M. College Extension service.

Even the nondescript, pot-bellied, small, rough-haired Jersey type calf can be made into satisfactory beef for family use. It needs to be fed a fattening ration for four to six months before being killed. Feeding not only makes more beef, but improves the quality to an almost unbelievable degree.

If a milk-pee calf is available it should be started on feed at once. Use the feeds grown on the farm. It may take 1,200 pounds of corn or milo, 1,200 pounds of hay and two sacks of cottonseed meal for the average inexperienced feeder to develop a calf into good edible beef, but the feed will be used to good advantage.

Feeding the calf until it weighs at least 500 pounds when it is ten months old, is a good mark to shoot at. Feed it all it will eat so that it will put on fat as it grows.

From the way the picture looks, little Amy Fry, Montgomery county, Maryland, has figuratively and actually taken this young calf under her protective wing. It seems that Amy is going to make an excellent 4-H'er when she gets a little bigger.

A good practice is to feed grain as soon as the calf will eat it. Oats is best to get a young calf on feed, but if it is not available, feed corn, milo or some other grains.

When the calf receives less milk later in the feeding period, add cottonseed meal or cake to the grain at the rate of one pound of meal to five pounds of grain.

Drug Plants

Defense experts say that this country would be able to raise its own supply of drugs if the 60 medicinal plants now imported were planted here. All of the plants will grow here and the only drawback is the large amount of hand labor required.

Anise is grown commercially in Rhode Island. Its aromatic seeds are used for medicine, in baking and for flavoring confectionery. Oil is distilled from the seed which is used medicinally, in cordials and for flavoring in various beverages.

Belladonna has been cultivated in California, Michigan, Indiana, Pennsylvania and New Jersey. When the leaves and roots are dried, they yield a drug which commanded high prices during the World War, but interest in this crop recently has declined.

In certain localities in New England and the West, Lovage is grown. Its roots are used in the drug trade, while the seeds are used for flavoring confectionery.

Muck lands of southern Michigan and northern Indiana are used for growing peppermint. About 500,000 pounds are produced annually in this country.

Stigmas of the saffron flowers are used in cookery, for coloring confectionery and to some extent in medicine. It is grown as a small garden crop in Pennsylvania.

Bark Valuable

Bark from certain trees is valuable and can be sold.

Two companies in the Buffalo, N. Y., area buy the bark from hemlock and rock oak, while one firm in Fulton county, New York, buys alder bark.

White ash logs are bringing top prices now for use in the army, navy, and agriculture. The buyers want logs free from crooks and knots, and may take lengths as short as four feet.

IMPROVED SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

JOSEPH SOLD INTO SLAVERY

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 37:23-36. GOLDEN TEXT—Love envieth not.—I Corinthians 13:4, R.V.

Does it pay to trust God? Is He really concerned about the affairs of men? Does He know the trials and the heartaches of His children? These are the crying questions of today, and they find their answer in God's dealings with men of the past. The story of Joseph has many, interesting and instructive phases, but perhaps the most important just now is the truth of our lesson, "The Lord saith . . . them that honor me I will honor."

We first find Joseph as he learns that

I. Jealousy Bears Bitter Fruit (vv. 23-30).

Joseph was his father's favorite and was shown that favoritism in many ways, but it was perhaps most fully expressed in the coat of many colors. This was a luxurious long robe with sleeves, indicating that he was a gentleman and not to do ordinary work of one who wore the sleeveless, knee-length tunic. His brothers deeply resented this evidence of the father's favor.

The dreams which Joseph rather innocently yet perhaps unwisely told to his brothers and his honest report of their wicked behavior fanned the flame of jealousy into a consuming fire which threatened his life. But God, through Joseph's brother Judah and through the opportunity they had to make money out of selling him into slavery, kept him for His own purposes.

May we not learn that the darkest hour may be the time of God's deep interest and directing power. The only way strong men can be developed is by suffering hardness and trial. "God wants iron saints, and since there is no way of imparting iron to the moral nature than by letting His people suffer, He lets them suffer (Heb. 12:11)" (Meyer).

Parents should also learn here the dangers of favoritism among children. It is one of the most destructive of evil influences that can enter a home. It hurts the child who is favored, alienates the other children, and it destroys confidence in parents and respect for their authority. Let's have none of it!

II. Deceit Attempts to Conceal Sin (vv. 31-35).

One of the tragic things about sin is that a wicked act does not stand alone but leads into another sin to cover the first. In the case of Joseph's brethren, their sin against him was covered by deceit. They lied to the father and maintained that lie for years, even though they saw that their aged father was brokenhearted. How callous sin makes the heart of a man! Yet the very fact that they lied to cover their sin indicates that they were ashamed to admit that they had fallen so low. James Strahan well says: "Evil never dares to be sincere. It always borrows the colors and wears the garb of innocence. It has a whole lifetime of hard labor in keeping up appearances. Hypocrisy is the tribute which all bad men have to pay to the ideal of goodness."

III. God Overrules Evil for Good (v. 36).

It was God's plan that Joseph should come to his greatest usefulness in his place of authority in Egypt, so He directed the sale of the young slave into the home of Potiphar, a leading officer of Pharaoh.

The story of Joseph's life in Potiphar's house is one of unusual interest. Faithfulness to duty, loyalty to God and truth led to shifting experiences of imprisonment and of favor, but ultimately he came out into the place of leadership in the government of Egypt. In this place God marvelously blessed and used him.

Since the matter of the relation of men to government is so much before us these days, it will be well to note that Scripture holds a very exalted view of the public servant. Paul says we are to "be subject unto the higher powers. For there is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God" (Rom. 13:1). The Bible clearly teaches that every governmental agency and every public servant, from the policeman on the beat to the President in the White House, is only permitted to exercise authority over his fellowmen because God has ordained that there should be such government. Clear it is that every right-thinking official of state and nation should be humble, teachable, discreet, and wise in the exercise of his power, and God-fearing in the discharge of his responsibility.

Our lesson provides unusual opportunity for the teaching of proper family relationships, the right attitude toward government, as well as the blessed assurance and confidence which we may have who have intrusted our lives into the hands of God.

Our National Anthem

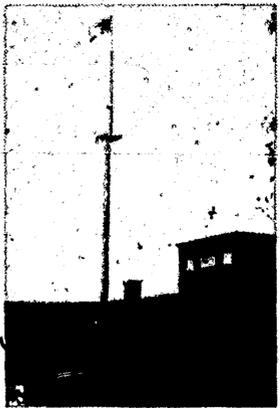

(It was written 132 years ago this month. For more than a century and a quarter Americans have been singing it. But how many of them know the OTHER THREE HANNAH?)

HE WROTE IT

Francis Scott Key watched the British bombard Fort M'Henry throughout the night of September 13, 1814. Then "by the dawn's early light" he saw that "our flag was still there."

THIS INSPIRED HIM . . .

This flagstaff stands on the same spot where stood the flagstaff from which was flown the banner that inspired Francis Scott Key to write

THE STAR SPANGLED BANNER

O, say can you see, by the dawn's early light,
What so proudly we hail'd at the twilight's last gleaming,
Whose broad stripes and bright stars, through the perilous fight,
O'er the ramparts we watch'd, were so gallantly streaming?
And the rockets' red glare, the bombs bursting in air,
Gave proof through the night that our flag was still there,
O, say, does that star-spangled banner yet wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave?

On that shore, dimly seen through the mists of the deep,
Where the foe's haughty host in dread silence reposes;
What is that which the breeze, o'er the towering steep,
As it fitfully blows, half conceals,
Now it catches the gleam of the morning's first beam,
In full glory reflected now shines in the stream
'Tis the star-spangled banner, O, long may it wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.

And where is that band who so vauntingly swore
That the havoc of war and the battle's confusion,
A home and a country should leave us no more?
Their blood has wash'd out their foul footsteps' pollution.
No refuge could save the hireling and slave
From the terrors of flight or the gloom of the grave;
And the star-spangled banner in triumph doth wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.

O, thus be it ever, when freemen shall stand
Between their loved homes and the war's desolation;
Blest with vict'ry and peace, may the heaven-rescued land
Praise the Power that hath made and preserved us a nation.
Then conquer we must, when our cause is just,
And this be our motto—"In God is our Trust!"

And the star-spangled banner in triumph shall wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.

Key's poem was first printed in the Baltimore American on September 21. Later it was distributed in handbill form and set to the music of an old English drinking song, "To Anacreon in Heaven," composed by John Stafford Smith. The man who joined the words of "The Star Spangled Banner" and the tune of "To Anacreon in Heaven" was Ferdinand Durang, an actor then serving in the American forces near Baltimore, and he and his brother first sang it in public in the old Holiday Street theater in Baltimore late in September, 1814.

Porter Knew Where To Get Quicker Service

The young lovers were trying to find some quiet, secluded spot for a long embrace. But everywhere they went there were people, people, people. And the girl was shy. Suddenly the man had a bright idea. Triumphantly he led her to the railway station and, standing beside the door of a railway carriage as though seeing her off, kissed her fondly.
After the couple had repeated the experiment at four or five different platforms, a sympathetic porter strolled up and whispered to the young man:
"Take 'er rahnd to the bus stop, mate. They goes ev'ry three minutes from there."

THE POWER OF THE PRESS

Manufacturers and merchants sense the power of the press. Early they began using it to carry their advertising facts and ideas into homes. And they found it a most profitable way in which to tell their story to buyers. And the buyers in turn found it profitable to deal with those who were willing to state in print the values and services they offered.

BANKS AND THE WAR

The Ordeal of the Family Budget

Pity the poor budget! Even under peace-time conditions he leads a strenuous life, but now he's really under fire. Ten percent for War Bonds, a big slice for taxes, ever-growing pressure from the rising cost of living—and on top of it all provision must be made for regular bank deposits. Impossible? No it isn't, if you face the grim facts that this is war, and that you must make sacrifice and give up things you thought essential. Organize your budget for victory without delay.

... And Now It's the 'WAGS'

"WAGCS," "WAVES"—and now the "WAGS." For your information, the "WAGS" are the dogs inducted for duty in the U. S. army, where they will be trained as sentries, messengers, airplane spotters and light pack carriers. The course lasts four weeks. At the left you see Col. T. B. Appar, commanding officer, quartermaster depot, Front Royal, Va., inspecting a lineup of new arrivals. At the right dogs are being weighed in as they are given their "physical."

'The Wings of West Point' Is Opened

Planes roar over the heads of cadets from West Point Military academy after Stewart Field was officially opened as "The Wings of West Point." West Point cadets who will enter the air service will receive their flying instruction at Stewart Field, but will live in the barracks at West Point with their non-flying classmates. At right, instructor Lieut. J. Rogers is surrounded by cadet students as he gives a few tips on cockpit procedure.

This photo, obtained from an enemy source, shows German soldiers taking part in Von Beck's offensive aimed at the Caucasian oil fields, crossing the Don river on rubber boats. In the foreground soldiers who have previously crossed the stream await their comrades. PRIVATE-PURVEY INTERVIEWS A 'WAVE'

(Home on a short furlough, Oscar, unknown to Harriet, who is in the WAACs, saw his girl friend Minerva, who has signed up in the women's naval auxiliary.)

Oscar—So you're a WAVE! What's the idea? Minerva—I didn't want to be just a ripple or a backwash, like your friend Harriet. Oscar—I heard you joined the navy to get smarter uniforms than they have in the women's army. The WAVES can profit by mistakes made by the WAACs.

Minerva—Do you think this war is a style show? Oscar—You make me wonder.

Oscar—Can you splice a rope? Minerva—What do you think I'm joining, a rodeo?

Oscar—Can you box a compass? Minerva—No, but I can wrap up a clock.

Oscar—Did you ever port your helm? Minerva—No profanity please!

Oscar—Did you ever stow a skiff? Minerva—Stop lipping!

Oscar—I'm serious, Min. What is a starboard tack? Minerva—You've got me there; I'm no carpenter.

Oscar—Geo, Min, you're awful ignorant.

Minerva—Otherwise why would I be standing here talking to you?

Oscar—Say, listen, why are you girls going to train for the navy at Smith college away up in Northampton?

Minerva—Because we thought it would sound funny to train sailors at Vassar.

Oscar—I see your uniforms are to be by Mainbocher of Paris. Minerva—Isn't that wonderful?

Oscar—It's better than by Mike Todd of Star and Garter. What will the regular navy think of that after all these years in the original John Paul Jones sailor suits?

Minerva—A woman sailor is expected to look better than a man.

Oscar—What difference does it make when she falls overboard?

Minerva—Listen, is this a date or a quiz program?

Oscar—Okay, admiral. I'll stow the question.

Minerva—Thanks, Colonel!

'BALLADE ON FEASTS AND FORAGINGS'

When gourmets to the board propel Their paunchy selves for tasty fare, Most nostrils quiver at the smell Of food that master chefs prepare;

But if you wish that you were there, Hold on—Lucullan tables lack The virtues found when you prepare The pleasures of a midnight snack.

Into the cook's own citadel, To gather morsels extra rare And strip unguarded cupboard bare;

Then try, for liberty from care, The pleasures of a midnight snack.

Negative 'Maiden'

The word "maiden" is applied to many subjects besides an unmarried woman, points out Collier's. The adjective is used to designate a city that has never been taken, a plant that has never been pruned, a field that has never been plowed, a sword that has never been used, a male or female race horse that has never won an event and, in England, a session of a criminal court at which there are no prisoners for trial.

Surveys among the men themselves show that, Prince Albert Smoking Show tobacco has long been known as the National Joy Smoke—it is the largest-selling smoking tobacco in the world. Local dealers are now featuring Prince Albert in the pound can as an ideal gift for service men who smoke a pipe or roll-their-own.—Adv.

Constipation! Why Not Get and Keep Regular?

One of the commonest causes of constipation is simply this: Modern diets, superrefined, too often give us too little "bulk food." In such cases, dosing with cathartics and purges gives only temporary relief—the trouble comes back again and again. The way to more lasting relief is to get at the underlying cause and correct it.

You can do this by eating KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN daily. This delicious, toasty cereal supplies the needed "bulk." It acts pleasantly, works principally on the contents of the colon, helping you to have easy and normal elimination. In many cases, eating ALL-BRAN regularly and drinking plenty of water brings lasting freedom from constipation. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is not benefited by this simple treatment, see your doctor.

SADDLE and RIDE

By ERNEST HAYCOX

THE STORY SO FAR: As a rancher, Clay Morgan knows he must fight rustlers. But he doesn't like the methods used against them by his ranchers like Ben Herendeen. Determined to play a lone hand rather than a crooked one, he is freed after his trial for stealing Herendeen's cattle. Herendeen promises to leave Jacks alone as long as he doesn't try to leave town. Morgan and his nine-year-old daughter, Janet, go to the cemetery where his wife is buried. Although two women, Catherine Grant and Ann McGarrak, are in love with him, Morgan cannot forget his wife, who died hating him and believing she should have married Herendeen. On their way back to town they see Olla Jacks ride away. So it is no surprise when Morgan learns a little later that Jacks has been killed. Herendeen had kept his word and no more.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER III

Clay Morgan ate breakfast by lamplight and was in the saddle before day crossed the eastern hills. Harry Jump and Cap Vermilee were at roundup in the Haycreek Hills, leaving only Mose, too old for such riding, and the Mexican cook, Panchito, on the ranch. Morgan said to Mose: "I'll probably be back after dark. Put some new crosspieces on the front gate—it's coming apart," and set forth southward across his range. At this elevation the night air was sharp enough to bite through his vest and cotton shirt. The big bay horse shot away on a run. Morgan let him have his run.

Mogul's rim lay two miles north, behind him. The ranch house and its corrals and barns sat at the foot of the rising Mogul Hills, which ran straight south; along the base of these hills, following the ruts of a casual road, Clay Morgan took his way. To his left, a half mile, another string of hills lifted up, so creating the long and narrow valley he followed. This was his range, emerging slowly from the ink-gray twilight. When first sunlight burst across the eastern peaks Morgan was six miles down the valley and at the end of his own range. A small ridge lay in front of him; at the summit he reined in to have his look at the round bowl of Government Valley.

Ducking in and out of the small ravines of the land he came upon cattle and young stuff occasionally grazing, herding these before him and throwing them back toward the roundup crew. Three men were working this section—Charley Hillhouse and two other Three Pines hands. He drove his small collection of beef into the held bunch and started on another circle, Hillhouse accompanying him. Around ten o'clock, having dragged the north end of the range, all of them started the held bunch back for the main roundup.

The sun was a copper-red flare in the middle sky and the dust began to thicken behind the herd. Morgan dropped back to the drag, throwing his neckpiece over his nose. Charley Hillhouse motioned one of the other men to take his place and joined Morgan and made his first speech in two hours.

"I been thinkin' over last night, Clay. Hard to figure."

"Let it slide, Charley."

Charley Hillhouse retorted, "It won't slide," and stared before him. He was a compact, capable man, not given to much talk; the type to worry a lot of things around in his head, to reach his own answers and hold his own conclusions.

Herendeen and his men cleared the Haycreek Hills of the last straggling stock; Gurd Grant cleaned up the edge of the Potholes and came in. Running W had scoured Fanolango Pass, and at twilight this day the job was done, the brands segregated and held in separate herds. After supper Morgan started Harry Jump back to the Mogul range with the Long Seven beef, and the Crofoot and Running W cuts went away, lumbering shadows in the moonlight, the scrape of feet and the creak of those long horns and the plaintive "Baw" of the last calf riding back through the night-still air. Dust and heat were gone and the campfire's flame, so still was this air, tapered upward to blue-yellow, almost stationary point. Charley Hillhouse, who was wagon boss, said: "We'll move over and work the Antelope Plains tomorrow."

The cook swore around the shadows, harnessing his team. Afterwards the mess wagon went bumping away on its four-hour ride, to be ready on the Antelope Plains by daybreak. Lying on his blanket, head athwart the seat of his saddle, Clay Morgan listened to the dry groaning of the wagon wheels fade into this enormous night. He rolled a cigarette and savored its keen smell. Stars crowded the sky; they washed that limitless sweep of black with a diamond-glitter, all down to the black horizon's edge, until they seemed to fall below the rim of a fat world. Here and there in the pine summits coyotes began to hark up their mourning plaint. Hillhouse and Clay Morgan and Lige White sat by the fire, their cheeks sharply, taciturnly grazed by light and shadows; and men lay blanketed in the background, weary and relaxed and cradled by their inward thinking. Herendeen walked forward from the shadows to stand high above this sprawled group. He leaned a sage stem into the fire and watched the pale and heatless flame rise. He was across from Clay Morgan; his eyes searched the crowd. The edges of his vest fell away from the rounds of his shoulders and the deep stretch of his chest; his bigness was all in proportion, legs and arms and torso; it was a muscular bigness, a bigness of thick bones.

"Lige," he said, "I hear there's a new homesteader come to the spring Jim Spackman used to squat on."

"I heard so," said Lige White. "We'll warn him out of there tomorrow," said Herendeen. But when he stopped talking Clay Morgan knew he wasn't finished. Herendeen's thoughts were on his face, for everybody to see. "Of maybe we've got some great big soul in this crowd whose heart bleeds for people like that. Seems to be a hell of a lot of charity around here lately."

Morgan swayed forward to lift a burning sage stem from the fire; its oil-bright glow flickered against his cheeks, against his eyes. This silence held its waiting and its reserve. Morgan tossed the sage stem back into the fire, drawing a sharp glance from Charley Hillhouse. Lige White uncomfortably crossed his feet. Gurd Grant crouched by the blaze and revealed nothing on his scrupulously neutral face. Morgan relaxed gently on his shoulder blades and pillowed his head against the saddle. He said nothing but he saw the changing expression on Herendeen's cheeks. Herendeen had braced himself for trouble, he had maneuvered this talk around to make a break; but nothing happened and he stood a moment, uncertain and displeased, and afterwards walked away.

Instead of turning west to his own ranch, Herendeen traveled due south toward a low range of hills which separated Running W from Three Pines. An hour's ride brought him within sight of a far-shining light, which was the mark of a homesteader's cabin against the hills; but when he came upon the homesteader's cabin, drifting into the heavy shadows at the base of these hills, a dog began to bark and suddenly the light died. He reined in before the cabin, feeling his contempt for the evident fear which had caused the homesteader to kill the light. They were all alike, these homesteaders, little men crawling as near the range as they dared, sticking their plows into the unplowed soil and slowly starving while the sun burnt up their crops and ruiped the land ever afterward for graze. He could not tolerate this breed, or their sun-blackened wives, or their tow-headed children.

They were talking, inside. A boy's voice said, "Pa, don't go." A woman was talking, quickly and with suppressed excitement. The door squealed open and somebody stood in its black square, speechless.

"What you doing here?" demanded Herendeen. "This place is on Lige White's range. We drove Jim Spackman away from it last year."

"You Lige White?" said a man in a dim, drawn tone.

"What the hell is that to you? My name's Herendeen and I asked you a question."

"Oh," said the man. "I'm Jack Gale. I bought Jim Spackman's rights to this place."

"He never had any rights to sell."

"He built the house, Mr. Herendeen." Then the man added, quietly: "It's free land, ain't it? I understood it was. I also understood Mr. White wouldn't mind."

Herendeen was nettled by the argument. "You damned nesters are all alike, trying to stand on this free-land business. You stick your plow into it and ruin it, and starve to death, and steal cattle to keep your kids alive, and move away. We're not in the game of providin' meat to nesters."

Gale's wife called from the interior of the house. "Jack, come in here. Come in." Herendeen heard her run over the floor. She caught hold of her husband and these two were gently wrestling around the doorway with Gale saying, "Now, Alie, stop it—stop it." But she pulled him inside and slammed the door. A child, very young, began to cry in a thin, startled rhythm.

Herendeen pushed his horse over the yard, bound away for his ranch.

As he followed the net of trails leading upward to the Mogul, Hack Breathitt had no cares and no serious thoughts. This was a fine, warm day. Ahead of him on the pine-shadowed trail occasional golden shafts of sunlight slanted through the tree tops. Here and there a swirl of dust showed where an antelope had been a moment before. The silence was thick and held its rank scent of resin; and at intervals Hack sang incomplete bits of such songs as he knew, the sound of that going out around him in widening waves. Dusk caught him in this rough land, still without any thought of direction; at full dark he turned a bend of the trail and saw firelight pulse against the side of a near-by ravine.

The fire, he found, was at the base of a bare rock wall running up the side of Mogul. There wasn't anybody within the range of firelight, but Hack reined in and held his seat, knowing that somebody had stepped into the shadows and was watching him. A moment later Pete Borders came forward.

"You make enough racket to raise the dead, Hack. Pull off your saddle if you ain't goin' any place."

"Now where would I be goin'?" He stepped to the ground and relieved the horse of its gear. He watered it, put it out on picket; he had his own frying pan and coffeepot and presently was crouched at the fire with Borders.

Borders said: "Nothin' new?"

"A man," reflected Breathitt, "that never goes any place never hears anything."

He tossed a fresh stick into the fire, the flare of it heightening the rusty shine of his hair. He had a dry, smart face; double wrinkles crossed his forehead. His eyes, on the edge of being green, were narrow-bright. He had been watching the livid heart of the flame, but his head rose and his eyes stared into the surrounding darkness. He was a light, close-listening shape; and presently he rose and stepped into the shadows.

Somebody rode along the near-by trail slowly, and stopped. Hack Breathitt held his position, too clear of conscience to move. He poised the cigarette between his fingers, hearing the rider poke up the ravine. The rider said, "Just me—just old Farr Gentry lookin' for horses."

He came to the fire, this owner of the livery stable in War Pass. He rolled in the saddle, staring down at Hack Breathitt a long moment before recognizing him. "Why, hello, Hack. Didn't know I'd find you on this side of the Mogul. Thought you liked the other side best."

"Any side's all right," drawled Breathitt, Farr Gentry shifted his weight again, a little heavy to find comfort in his saddle. His face, by firelight, was round and solid-fleshed and darkly dull. His eyes rummaged this little clearing and saw Pete Borders' saddle and blanket on the far edge of the fire—and the two horses picketed near the spring. Breathitt realized Gentry knew Borders' horse. He held his silence, he took a long drag on the cigarette. "Late for you, ain't it, Farr?"

"Been draggin' this section all day lookin' for horses. You seen a band around here?"

"Wild ones? They'd be clear to the top of Mogul in this weather."

"Lookin' for tracks," murmured Gentry. "Thought they might come down for water. Well, I'll be goin'. Long way to War Pass." He wheeled about, groaning softly as he went away.

Pete Borders stepped into the light. His face showed his smart disbelief. "He's been chasin' horses long enough to know they ain't down here. And he wasn't pointed for War Pass when he left, either." Afterwards he added: "Didn't want to show myself. Won't do you any good to be seen campin' with me, old boy."

"He saw your horse."

Borders shook his head. He settled in his blanket, just beyond the light; the fire died away and a small breeze rolled down the face of Mogul.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS

As most cases of poliomyelitis occur toward the end of the summer or the beginning of the autumn weather, many theories as to why it occurs at this time of year are brought forward.

Some parents are apt to blame an attack on the summer camps, the public swimming pools, on swimming beaches near industrial plants. There is apparently plenty of evidence pointing toward camps and swimming places as causes.

However, many physicians believe that it is because children are tired from summer play that they are attacked by infantile paralysis as many of them are too young for camps or swimming beaches.

Dr. W. J. McCormick, Toronto, points out in the Medical Record that in all cases investigated it was found that the child ate too much starch food and did not get enough vitamin B1 in his food. In addition to improper diet, it was pointed out that these children had a history of overexertion, or tiredness, previous to the attack.

As there was an epidemic of infantile paralysis in Winnipeg, Canada, in September, 1941, Dr. McCormick was given the opportunity of making a study of the diet and physical exertion in 24 cases in the Isolation hospital.

In the Winnipeg cases investigated, the diet habits showed that the children did not get enough vitamin B1 in their diet, which diet was made up almost entirely of white flour bakery goods, white sugar candy, boiled potatoes, and corn syrup, all of which contain no vitamin B1.

Further, in 22 of the 24 cases investigated there was a definite history of overexertion in the summer activities of youth—swimming, bicycling, dancing, rowing.

Infantile paralysis has been believed due to a tiny invisible organism although it was recently stated that a large organism—streptococcus—may be the cause.

Whatever the cause, in view of Dr. McCormick's investigations reported in Medical World, it would be good sense for parents, as they may not be able to cut down on their children's play, to at least see that they get plenty of rest.

Operations and Complete Relief

When an ailment becomes so serious that an operation is necessary, naturally the patient and his family may feel that after the operation he should be free of symptoms. And this is true in most cases.

There are some ailments in which operation saves life, but because the patient inherits or has acquired certain tendencies, some of the symptoms remain even after the operation. This is particularly true of ulcer of the stomach and of the duodenum (the first part of the small intestine into which the stomach empties). It is called peptic ulcer and these patients are advised to follow the peptic ulcer diet.

Similarly with the removal of the gall bladder. While the great majority of these patients obtain almost complete relief from symptoms there are a certain number who do not and they must follow certain habits of diet and living to keep free of symptoms.

In the American Journal of Digestive Diseases, Fort Wayne, Ind., Drs. R. H. Moser, B. D. Rosenak and R. J. Hasterlik, Indianapolis, report their investigation of 49 patients who returned to the clinic because of the persistence of dyspepsia symptoms following the removal of the gall bladder containing stones. Strange to relate, these physicians found that the symptoms before operation or the condition of the gall bladder found at operation, did not show which patients would have symptoms after the operation and which patients would get complete relief from symptoms.

There was one striking fact observed and this was that when the patient had dyspepsia only during an attack, then relief was likely to follow from the operation.

There are two lessons to be learned from the above investigations. First, even when gall stones are present they may not be entirely to blame for the symptoms, though the gall bladder is better removed. Second, the patient should be told that complete relief is not always obtained by removing gall bladder.

QUESTION BOX

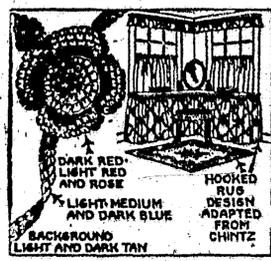

Q. What causes my face to become flushed after eating?
 A. May be due to sensitiveness—allergy—to the food eaten. You could have tests made for allergy.
 Q. My skin, on both my face and legs, is very dry and gets flaky after bathing. Creams do not help. Is this due to something I eat and what can I do to overcome it?
 A. Eating may be a cause, as you suggest, but consult a skin specialist.
