President Green Deserves a Medal

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor is a cool-headed, patriotic, American citizen. In all things pertaining to the good and welfare of this country, we have always found him in his place to defend what is right and to denounce what is wrong.

Now, the bill which has reached the President for his signature is the one, which if it becomes a law, will take away all rights contained in one of the "four freedoms" so proudly boasted of by the President and Winston Churchill the same being framed after their celebrated conference at Casa Blanca. The bill takes away the right of anyone promoting or in anyway taking part in a strike during war times, but has a tie-in to the effect that it covers everything during and after the war.

Whether we believe in strikes or not does not change the nature of the bill, which, if it becomes a law with the President's signature, will do away with the Bill of Rights, of which we have so long boasted. Mr. Green saw the un-American nature of the Smith-Connally bill, which has already gone to the President and if he signs it, it will correspond to the very thing which took the workers of Germany into serfdom.

If we talk about depriving people of the right to strike, what about the meat packers strike, when the very government itself set the meat prices into such a mess that the packers could no longer endure the strain and so what? They struck, closed their plants and thereby caused the people to be without meat and it so remains right now. We repeat; what about the meat packers' strike, you don't hear anything about that and when you talk about strikes, should not the packer's association be subject to the law as well as the workers?

When we make a law, let's be as fair to one as to another. Mr. Green should have a medal for his courage in denouncing the Smith-Connally bill. It is Communist and fascist in its nature and if enacted into law will destroy one of the main "four freedoms" of the Roosevelt-Churchill parley. At every point, our freedom is rapidly slipping away from us, but thank God, for men like Mr. Green who have the nerve to denounce such proceedings. This a changing world, but unless we exercise vigilance, our heretofore freedom will be changed to communism, fascism and anarchy.

Mrs. Era Smith has returned from a visit to Kentucky.

A. J. Bivens of Ocuira was a business visitor in town Wednesday.

Phil Bright and son Lewis left for Tucumanari Saturday, after spending a few days visiting Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Burke and son Lewis.

19 ARMY MEN KILLED ON MANEUVER FLIGHT

On a maneuvering trial flight from the Alamogordo Air Field Tuesday morning, eight 4-engine bombers left Alamogordo early in the morning. They worked in formation all right until they flew over the region of Bitter Creek, east of Angus, when eyewitnesses, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Ferguson and Virgil Jones who were witnessing the flight, saw one plane rise above another and crash down on it for a second time.

The lower plane went down and crashed into flames, but the upper one sailed around for a short time and also fell to the ground, bursting into flames. Each plane had 10 army men and out of the total of twenty, only one man was saved, by bailing out. Another did likewise, but not being fastened to his parachute, the opening was so violent that it broke his hold loose and he fell a long distance and was a mangled corpse.

Virgil Jones was the first man to get to the wreck, living but one-half mile from where the doomed men fell, but he could do nothing, so intense was the heat from the burning planes. He described the scene as beggering description. Parts of the bodies were found scattered over a vast area and bits of metal from the burning planes were seen in every direction. There were many officers among the dead and only the official register from the Army base at Alamogordo can reveal the names, which may never reach the public, only relatives of the deceased being notified of the disaster. Eyewitnesses said that the bodies were burned beyond recognition.

3rd-Class Petty Officer Charles Snow of the Navy, who was here on a furlough visiting his parents Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Snow, left last Friday for Camp Terry, Virginia, where he is stationed.

C. H. Murray came down Tuesday from the J. R. Blackshere ranch at Red Lake, where he finished a water well, the flow of which yielded 80 gallons per minute at a depth of 53 ft. on a fine sand bottom.

Frankfurter's Decision Threaten's Free Speech

Washington.—Asserting that the Supreme Court decision in the recent Federal Communications Commission (FCC) case seriously threatens freedom of speech, Representative Hebert (D) of Louisiana urged that Congress rewrite the Radio Act to define the commission's powers definitely.

In a speech to the House, Mr. Hebert said that the majority opinion written by Justice Frankfurter "gave the FCC absolute authority to tell any radio station in the United States what it may and may not put on the air." "From now on the FCC holds a power over the broadcasting stations of the United States equal to that of any totalitarian government," he said.

Suit Reviewed
Reviewing the suit, Mr. Hebert explained it was brought by two radio networks seeking an injunction to set aside rules known as "chain broadcasting regulations" adopted by the FCC.

The Supreme Court decision, he continues, "not only upheld the right of the commission to put rules into effect but went so much further in outlining the commission's power that the question of the entire right of freedom of speech is threatened on every radio station in this country, whether or not it is affiliated with any network."

Under the opinion, Mr. Hebert continued, the Administration through the Commission can tell any radio station what its programs shall or shall not be. "I leave it to you, gentlemen, if this is not the most startling, shocking definition of the rights of our Government to dictate to private industry and private life that has ever been granted in the history of this nation?" he asked.

Sgt. Gene Dow, Jr. of Biggs Field, Texas, is here visiting the Gene Dow, Sr. family.

THE STORY SO FAR: After a swift courtship with McPhail starts for a summer job at Moose Bay, leaving Robin Dale to wonder how a career girl could be so completely swept off her feet, the known title of Wm. except that he is an engineer and that he has a brother named Angus, a poor Scot who hates women. Robin decides to follow Wm. to Moose Bay. But she doesn't see him. Shortly after the White Queen docks, Robin goes swimming. As she stands on the dock Wm. McPhail sees her. In that moment he loses his balance and the crane in which he is riding falls into the water. Angus McPhail blames Robin for Wm's death.

New continue with the story.

CHAPTER V

The purser found a car; and he was putting her bags in it before she saw that Mr. Jenkins was driving. Mr. Jenkins said, in a pleased tone:

"Decided to stay, have you? Say, you change your mind, don't you? You're right, though! It's a great place. I'll take you to the hotel."

Mr. Lewis helped her into the car. She thanked him, and Mr. Jenkins started toward shore. She looked straight ahead, not as a defense against him but because she did not want to see what the workmen were doing; but almost at once he pulled over to the side of the dock and stopped and pointed. "That's my boat down there." She saw a gray motor cruiser, long and low with a high deck forward, moored beside the dock. "Care to go aboard her?" he asked. "She's comfortable, neat as a pin."

"I'm rather anxious to get settled. Do you mind?"

"I have to stop a minute, myself. You'd better come see what she's like."

"I'll wait here." So Mr. Jenkins dropped down to the deck of the cruiser and disappeared into her cabin. A man came purposefully across the dock to look down at the boat, and then at Robin; and Robin closed her eyes and was very tired. When Mr. Jenkins got in beside her again, and she opened her eyes, the man had disappeared.

"We're pulling out Monday," Mr. Jenkins told her, driving on. "Say, I'm glad you're staying. I'll show you the town tonight. You'll get a kick out of it." They were approaching the landward end of the dock. "Tough about young McPhail. The kid got fancy with that crane and it killed him. You can't monkey with those babies." The car jolted over the rough road, and suddenly he used the brake and stopped and spoke to a man walking toward the dock. The man was dressed like a workman, but he looked at Robin in a way she felt. He said to Mr. Jenkins: "I was looking for you."

Mr. Jenkins asked the man a curious question. He asked: "Got the tickets?"

The man grinned faintly, and looked at Robin again. "All collected, yeah," he said.

Mr. Jenkins nodded. "Then we'll let 'em in tomorrow." He added: "I'll be taking a walk tonight. I might see you."

"Okay," the man assented. "I'll be around."

The road, with a railway along one side to carry freight from the pier head to the town, rounded a rocky point where the whole face of the precipice had been blasted away to let it pass. Robin began to be interested, to ask questions. Wherever a trickle of water came down the steep slopes, there were signs warning passers not to drink the water; and she spoke of them. He nodded. "That's all bog water," he explained. "I'll make you sick. They cut a tunnel six feet square through that mountain up there and they bring water down from Bear Lake now." They approached the first buildings; and he pointed to one. "There's the police station. Five cops. They'll stay indoors and have a poker game tonight."

"Why?"

"Saturday night. Three thousand men out for a good time can use up five cops pretty quick."

"Oh! What do they do for a good time? Movies?"

He laughed. "Liquor up, mostly. No women here. Drink and gamble and fight."

She remembered a passage in Wm's letter which had puzzled her. "What's 'alky'? Alcohol?"

"Sure."

"But why don't they drink whiskey, or beer, or something?"

"Can't get it. Alky means smaller or bulk, so it's easier to run it in, and the men get quicker action when they drink it. Here's the mill. They set up the machinery first and then build the mill around it. Here's the warehouse where they'll store the paper. You could play football in it. It's big enough."

"Imagine enough paper to fill it! Where will it all come from?"

"They've a tract of spruce here two hundred miles square. It'll take fifty years to cut it, and by that time a fifth of it will be big enough to cut again." He spoke of a personal achievement. "This is a big business, sister. They've spent a million dollars a month here now for over a year: building churches, freezing plants, schools, houses. There's the bank." The car bounced and bounced over bumps in the raw mud of the road, waving among trees and workmen and saws and beams, to turn at last into a grayeled drive before the hotel. "Here you are, sister. I'll carry your bags."

She followed him indoors. At the desk Mr. Jenkins said to the clerk: "Give her a good room, Dave. That corner room, second floor, is empty, isn't it?" He winked, but Robin was registering, did not see him. The clerk named Dave looked admiringly at her bowed head and pursed his lips in a soundless whistle. He called a boy, and Robin turned to thank Mr. Jenkins; but he went with her toward the stairs, the boy with her bag and pack sack preceding them. At her room, she thought for an alarmed moment that Mr. Jenkins was coming in; but he put a key into a door opposite hers.

"I'm just across the hall," he said. "If you get lonesome, sing out. Want to take a walk before dinner?"

"I think not."

"I'll see you at dinner, then."

She locked her door and told herself that he was just friendly. She heard a steamer whistle, and went to her window and saw the White Queen departing, and that made her feel lost and alone, and she lay down, and for a while she cried, lying on her face across the bed. She cried, very quietly, for a long time.

Then she began to think about Angus McPhail. It was to find him and try to comfort him that she had come ashore. He would undoubtedly be staying at the hotel, so after a while she went down to the office to enquire for him.

"Is Mr. Angus McPhail staying here?" she asked.

"Mr. McPhail?" He seemed surprised, as though his preconceptions were somehow shaken. He repeated stupidly: "Mr. McPhail, the fisheries man? Why—no, ma'am."

"Oh! But—where would he be likely to be?"

"I don't know. He has stayed here, before."

This clerk named Dave, she decided, was a little stupid. She asked: "How soon are you serving dinner?"

"Ready now," he said. Then he asked: "Want to wait for Mr. Jenkins?"

"Oh, no!" Why should she resent that question? It was natural enough, since she and Mr. Jenkins had arrived together; but the clerk's tone annoyed her. She went into the dining room; but before she could order, Mr. Jenkins appeared and without invitation sat down at her table.

"Well, everything all right?" he asked.

She hesitated. "I want to see Mr. McPhail. The one who was on the White Queen. Do you know him?"

"Met him today. I'll find him for you. He might be on his boat. It's tied up, out by mine. We'll take a look after dinner."

She could discover no good reason for refusing his insistent help; and—she needed help. After dinner, the clear twilight soft and beautiful, the sunset's afterglow bright across the water below them, she and Mr. Jenkins began their search. They went in the car, and Robin was a little startled to see so many men everywhere, milling to and fro, shouting now and then for no apparent reason, staring at her in the dusk. Angus McPhail proved hard to find. They enquired first at the barber shop.

"Freel hasn't seen him," he said. "We'll try the bunkhouse." While he was inside, a fight started not far off, and men raced to form a shouting circle around the combatants. Mr. Jenkins, returning, had news at last. "They say he went for a walk," he reported. He looked toward the yelling crowd. "Want to see that fight?"

She shook her head. "I'm really awfully anxious to find Mr. McPhail."

"We'll catch him at his boat when he comes to bed."

"Mightn't he be there now, please?"

"Well, it's easy to find out." They drove out the long dock. Under floodlights, men were busy at the spot where the barge and crane had sunk. Mr. Jenkins went down a ladder nailed against piles to the deck of what he said was McPhail's boat; but the cabin scuttle was padlocked, and he climbed the ladder again.

"Nobody home," he reported. "But he'll be along. See here, if you don't want to mix with that crowd of drunks in town, let's wait on my boat till he comes."

"Do you think he'll come here?"

"He's bound to. Either here or the hotel."

"We might find him quicker, if we—kept hunting, mightn't we?"

A group of men, singing as they came out along the dock from town, approached and saw Robin. Mr. Jenkins was on the other side of the car, hidden from them. They stopped beside the car and pressed near, and one of them demanded cheerfully of his companions: "Say, do you see what I see?" He spoke to Robin. "Kid, you've come to the right place. You're going to have lots of friends here."

Mr. Jenkins moved around in front of the car so that the headlights struck him fair. He said to this man: "Do I know you, buddy?"

His tone was quiet enough, but the man stared at him and mumbled sudden apologies; and he and his companions went hurriedly away. Robin said in some surprise: "Why, they were afraid of you?"

"I told you I'd take care of you," said Mr. Jenkins. "You're pretty enough to start a riot, you know. But you don't want to do that. We'll keep you out of sight. Come aboard my boat while we wait for him."

In the end she consented. His boat proved to be almost luxurious. He began to talk about the trip toward Labrador upon which he was about to start; said it was a pity she could not go along. "You'd be mighty interested, and you'd see a lot to paint, up that way."

"I'm sure I would."

"I wish there was some way we could manage it." He seemed to have a sudden inspiration. "See here, Marm Freel has been after me for a year, wanting to go up there. I go once a month, selling my line. She's Dad Freel's wife, sixty-odd, a good sport. Suppose she came along? You and she could have the cabin here to yourselves. There's room for me forward." He said he was leaving Monday night. "You don't have to decide now," he added, before she could speak.

"We'll see Mrs. Freel tomorrow and talk it over, and if you like her, you might decide to come."

"There's no harm in talking it over," she admitted, smiling a little. "But I'm afraid I can't take the time. Who is Mrs. Freel?"

"Dad Freel's the barber," he told her, and laughed. "Quite a character."

"Do you suppose Mr. McPhail has come?"

They climbed to the dock level again; and she stayed by the car while he descended and went aboard McPhail's boat. The companion scuttle was open now; and Mr. Jenkins called, got no answer, looked up at her, and then descended into the cabin. As he did so, someone spoke at her elbow.

"What's wanted here?"

She turned and looked up into the ugliest countenance she had ever ter."

She said hurriedly: "We want to see Mr. McPhail! We're just trying to find him."

The affrighting man peered at her. "Did ye ever dive off the White Queen's bow?" he asked thickly. "Eh, bad cess to ye!" He gripped her arm with one hand, jerked a thumb over his shoulder toward the men busy above the wreck of barge and crane. "If it's Will McPhail ye're wanting to see—ye'll not want to see him. The diver's just got him loose yonder. They'll be bringing him up now."

Mr. Jenkins appeared beside them; he spoke quietly. "Hello, Pat."

The big man turned. "Eh, Mr. Jenkins." He touched his forehead; but Robin saw that it was with respect, not fear.

"Where's McPhail?" Mr. Jenkins asked.

"Yon?"

"No, his brother."

There was a wall of woe in the big man's tone. "Eh, the poor man has gone to walk the black hurt out of him."

"Back tonight?"

"Back Monday noon," he said. Mr. Jenkins looked at Robin. "Miss Dale here wanted to see him."

The ugly man looked down at Robin again; and he shook his head. "Let her not," he said grimly. "Let her keep herself hid from the eye of him. Let her keep herself away."

He turned and stalked off along the pier; and Robin watched him, strangely shaken. There was something mystic and uncanny about the man; an enigma in his tones, and a eerie wall of grief when he spoke of Angus McPhail. Mr. Jenkins, beside her, said: "Well, we're wasting time, then. Who is that man?"

Mr. Jenkins said, "Give her a good room, Dave."

The World of Tomorrow—Action in the Air, in Construction and in Industry

Draw Plans to Lick Depression After War Is Won; Predict Demand for Goods Will Keep Nation Busy for Many Years

Chemurgy Provides Broad Uses for Many Farm Crops; Need for Building Will Be Great; Expansion in Aviation Transportation Is Foreseen.

By A. F. JEDLICKA

While the war rages and war production takes up the interest of the country, there doesn't seem to be time for anything else.

But as unsuspected as it might be, there is a great amount of study being made about solutions to the vast problems that will arise after the peace has been won.

Millions of soldiers and sailors will be returning from the far flung fronts; munitions and armament no longer will be needed in mass quantities, and millions of workers will have to be switched back to normal industry; and, pending the final disposition of lend-lease, and full development of our own domestic market, the huge production program of the farmer will have its complications.

With all these things bound to come up, it is obvious that any studies leading toward the formulation of plans to solve these problems, will be of service in averting any hardships and confusion that might grow from them. Memories of the economic disorganization that followed the last war, both in the cities and on the farms, still are live enough to spur the present planners, such as the department of agriculture, the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and the National Foreign Trade Council.

All told, more than 137 important government and private agencies are engaged in post-war economic studies. This number does not include many state and local groups.

New discoveries and methods developed from war production; the tremendous demand for all kinds of consumers' goods upon which manufacture has been stopped, and the new crops and many uses for old staples that have been found—all of these things are on the asset side for a promising post-war prosperity.

Surely, we will suffer from no lack of labor; in fact, profitable employment of all of our labor will be the big problem. From present indications, we will be the most fortunate of all of the nations of the world, since most of our factories and equipment will emerge unscathed from the war. No matter what kind of a monetary system we adopt, our credit facilities should be limited by a need for money, and not by any scarcity of it.

As the president of the United States Chamber of Commerce so optimistically declared, we are facing new horizons, in which the guarantee of economic as well as political freedom will open vast productive fields.

Chemurgy Should Aid Farmer. Of all the farmer stands to profit the most after the war as a result of the advancement of science, Chemurgy is the new miracle which has taken the old crops apart to discover their essential substance, and then applied the specific properties to the manufacture of many items.

Chemurgy has been active in developing plastics. According to a survey, a composite 1942 automobile has more than 125 plastic parts, and airplanes have anywhere from scores to hundreds of plastic applications.

Plastics on the automobile include upholstery buttons, steering wheels, accelerator pedals and interlayers of laminated safety glass. Plastics in the airplane range from grease and oil resistant tubing to handles, knobs, sight gauges, lenses and radio antennae.

Besides chemurgic uses which have been found for the old crops, the scientist has gone into the fields to find useful properties in such former waste growth as cattails, milkweed and dandelions. These amazing discoveries have opened possibilities for putting formerly unproductive submarginal lands to good work.

The loss of many of our former sources of supply for medicinal crops, vegetable oils and fibers has stimulated their cultivation in this country, where, indeed, they grew successfully many years ago before being produced in Asia at much less cost. Continuation of the growth here of belladonna, castor beans and hemp, for instance, is a question which eventually will fall completely within the political realm.

Expect Building Boom. Next to agriculture, building holds the greatest immediate promise. In fact, much of our post-war planning seems to be revolving around the construction industry. As a part of it, the timber trade figures prominently on new mass-production processes for fabricating sections of buildings and shipping them to a site for assembly.

It has been estimated that the United States needs 900,000 new buildings every year—500,000 for new families, and the rest to replace old structures.

Considering the fact that practically all residential building has been stopped by the war, the construction industry will be faced with a gigantic job of meeting the accumulated demands when peace comes.

Because of circumstances arising from the war, the timber industry has received an important push that will stand it in good stead later. Since most shipyards, arms and munitions factories demanded all of the steel that was being produced, it was necessary to revert to the use of wood in constructing many new factories, etc.

Because the wood had to meet specifications in strength and safety, lumbermen developed processes for treating the timber against loads, decay and fire. As a result, wood is expected to be used in increasing quantities in ordinary building.

Besides the tremendous demand expected for private construction after the war, it is reported that the government has been studying plans for an extensive public works building program. Such a program, as old as Caesar, would take up any slack in employment, particularly in the passage from a war to a peace economy.

In connection with the anticipated post-war building activity, the American Institute of Architects, the American Planning and Civic Association and the Conference Committee on Urban Problems have been particularly concerned with the reconstruction of many of the run-down districts of the big cities. Within recent years, many private corporations have been seeking charters from legislatures for rights to re-visit many slum areas with huge housing projects.

May Expand Air Travel. Of course, the tremendous expansion of aviation because of the war has led to the popular belief that the impetus it is receiving now will carry it into the post-war period as the biggest industrial development.

If we are to consider the opinion of many aviation executives themselves, the airplane will pay a prominent, but hardly a predominating role after the war. Costs of shipping freight by both train and boat still will remain much cheaper than air rates, and as a result the plane may be used on an increasing scale, but for special purposes. It should carry most of the mail.

It is in the field of transportation that the airplane promises to enjoy its greatest expansion. Already, there has been substantial talk about the creation of branch lines to hook up with main trunks, thus establishing direct connections with all points. Larger, more comfortable and faster planes should come out of the busy research laboratories now concentrating on production of the best bombing, transport and cargo airships in the world.

Automobile executives already have warned the people not to expect drastic revisions in models after the war. Cars of the immediate future will not be much different than those that were being manufactured at the time all of the plants shifted over completely to war production. The reason styles will not change much, automobile executives say, is because factories are stocked with tools for production along recent lines.

With money in their pockets, people will raise a clamor for many items whose manufacture has been discontinued because of the war. Wash machines, vacuum cleaners, refrigerators, stokers and oil burners, buggies, etc., all will be in demand, and if sufficient purchasing power is available, the problem will be one of production.

New Products. Among the more colorful products predicted for the future, are gasoline for automobiles yielding 40 miles to the gallon; and nylon cord tires of unparalleled strength.

Eye dropper quantities of lead tetraethyl added to a gallon of gasoline will convert it into high-octane fuel necessary for airplanes. It is this new and more powerful fuel which heralds performances of 400 miles an hour for civilian transport planes, and promises 40 miles per gallon for automobiles after the war.

Due in large part to chemical products developed for use in processing and vulcanizing rubber, tires of the future are expected to possess longer life. Cords of rayon and nylon, along with special carbon blacks for increasing toughness and anti-oxidants for retarding the deterioration of rubber, are among the new developments.

So much for the U.S.A. Looking around us, we see numerous changes in the world, many of which are bound to have their economic effects after the war.

As an example, we need not go any further than South America. First of all, many of our good neighbors to the south are accumulating large amounts of dollar exchange, that is, American money, which will be spent or invested here or abroad when conditions permit.

Further, many of these countries have substantially reduced their debt to foreign countries.

Pollination Still Is Bees' Biggest Job

The greatest contribution of honey bees to our wartime production is still in pollination of agricultural crops for production of seed and fruit, though the importance of both honey and beeswax has also increased.

Domestic honeybees pollinate most fruits, as the wild insects are seldom numerous enough to accomplish this early spring job. In areas where most of the land is cultivated, wild insects have few places left for nesting and breeding, and the pollination of most other crop plants also depends on the domestic bees.

With the present urgent need for greater production of legume and other seeds, honey bees may have to be brought into the seed producing areas for assurance of good crops. Beekeeping fits in well with seed production, as the fields of clover, alfalfa, and other crops furnish bees with food and with nectar for making honey.

Extension Service Recruit Laborers

Public Law 45 approved by Congress April 29, 1948 provides that the Extension Service will be responsible for the recruitment and placement of all local agricultural laborers within the state and counties. The Service realizes that this assignment will be difficult due to the critical shortage of laborers at the present time. The services of various agencies and organizations will be requested in sponsoring the program. Plans are now being made to conduct a county-wide volunteer program known as the Victory Farm Volunteers and The Women's Land Army Program.

A County Labor Committee will be appointed in the near future. This committee will be appointed in the near future. This committee will consist of farmers and ranchers who will represent various districts of the county, and will assist the County Agent (1) in determining the anticipated needs for both full-time and seasonal farm laborers; (2) to make a complete survey of available local laborers, (3) to determine to what extent the county can solve its labor needs; and (4) to determine the number of outside workers that must be recruited, if outside labor is found to be essential.

In accordance with regulations the U. S. Employment Service, who has formerly handled the placement of farm laborers, transferred its responsibilities to the Extension Service June 1.

As a means of recruiting and placing laborers, a register of requests for laborers and a list of available workers will be maintained in the County Agent's office. If you are in need of laborers at the present time, or will need laborers for harvesting a particular crop in the future, you should make your request at an early date. If you are a laborer in need of work, you should also report to the office for assistance in obtaining a job. Boys and girls over 14 years of age, as well as women who would be willing to assist with the harvesting of fruit, beans, and other crops, should also register at the office in order that they may be referred to employers seeking laborers of this type. Carl P. Radcliff, County Extension Agent.

Looks Like Lewis Wins

(Roswell Record)
News reports of the last few days indicate that John L. Lewis is winning his fight for more money for the miners. He had the operators over a barrel and all the WLB did, or the Administration did, was to talk "big" and do nothing. The wage situation is bad. It might have been far better to have let the employers and the employees figure out their problems for themselves. Certainly it could not have been worse than the present situation, which seems to be that we are headed straight for some form of inflation, with little federal help to prevent it.

Figure It Out Yourself. How can you effectively join in saving all the little children of the world from human slavery, death and injury from the Nazis and Japanese? Put more and more of your pay into war bonds every payday. Your savings will go to war in the form of war equipment and other munitions. How much more should you put into war bonds? The only ones who can answer that are—you and your family. It's up to you to decide just how much more you'll do to win the war.

If you were fighting in the Solomons or in Africa or forcing a landing in Europe you'd like to feel that the folks at home were back of you—all the way—you'd be proud of your family and your friends if you knew they were buying war bonds not at 10 per cent or 15 per cent, but with every cent beyond that which they need for necessities.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Battle of the Atlantic
A sinking smokestack, a great air bubble, an empty lifeboat, all that is visible of a torpedoed tanker, all that is evident of the hard work, the savings we put into War Bonds to build this tanker, to load it with 50,000 gallons of high octane gas.

Our money is still safe but the tanker is lost forever. Another and another and another must be built to take its place. The men who sail the seas are giving their lives to win the Battle of the Atlantic. We are asked only to lend our money.

THE MEAT SITUATION

(Roswell Record)
The meat situation is not a complex situation as some would have us believe and as misunderstanding officials would try to make it seem to be.

There is plenty of meat available. There is plenty for actual needs but none for waste. More can be produced by letting the producers have the freedom necessary to produce it.

What has happened so far is that red tape, rules and regulations compiled by people who know nothing about meat production or meat merchandizing, have all combined to restrict production, hamper transportation and tie up merchandizing, with the result that scarcity has occurred where there should be no scarcity, that waste that is unnecessary has taken place and, above all, production has been hampered and even prevented, that ranges have been overcrowded, feeding has been prevented and thus a program of scarcity entirely unnecessary has been promoted.

A few simple regulations and the untieing of a whole bundle of red tape would simplify the meat situation and would remove the bugaboo of meat scarcity.

The Bureau of Internal Revenue

June 10, 1948.—S. P. Vidal, Collector of Internal Revenue for the District of New Mexico has announced that his office is in the midst of preparing letters to all the employers in the State of New Mexico in connection with the "current Tax Payment Act of 1948" which provides, among other things, that Income Taxes shall be withheld from salaries and wages paid with respect to payroll periods beginning on or after July, 1948. Employers are being instructed to withhold tax at the rate of 20 percent on the amount by which the employee's wage payment exceeds his or her family status withholding exemption. The New Mexico Collector pointed out that the exemption will depend upon the employee's family status.

Enclosed with these employer letters will be a supply of blank Forms W-4, "Employee's Withholding Exemption Certificate." The Internal Revenue office is making an effort to send each employer enough of these certificates for the use of their employees, since it will be necessary for each employee to complete his exemption certificate in order that his employer will be able to arrive at the proper deduction from his wage payment.

Mr. Vidal pointed out further that it is a joint responsibility of employers and employees to see that the "Employee's Withholding Exemption Certificate" is made out by each employee and filed with his employer sufficiently in advance of the date on which the payroll is prepared for the first payroll period which commences on or after July 1, 1948.

The Collector stated that these forms, together with the letters to all employers, will be sent out over New Mexico just as soon as they arrive at the Albuquerque office. Later on, further instructions relating to the "Current Tax Payment Act of 1948" regarding the withholding and reporting of Income Taxes, and other required forms, will be made available to the public as soon as available in New Mexico.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

French Unity Speeds Victory Plans; Mediterranean Under Heavy Attack by Allied Naval and Air Concentrations; Chinese Crush Jap Yangtze Offensive

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper. Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the U. S. army air force, delivers a diploma to his son, Cadet William Bruce Arnold, a member of the 1943 graduating class at the United States Military academy at West Point.

FRENCH UNITY: Worth Waiting for

Although General Giraud and General DeGaulle at first could not agree any better at close range in Algiers than they had at long range between Africa and London, Allied leaders were confident that factional gulfs would be hurdled and long-hoped-for French unity would be consummated.

This optimistic view was justified when a "French committee of national liberation," headed jointly by Generals De Gaulle and Giraud, was formally established to "pursue the war at the side of the Allies until total victory over the enemy powers."

Comprising a seven-man group which eventually will be expanded to nine, the new liberation committee will direct the French war effort until France is freed and able to elect its own government. In addition to the co-presidents, Giraud and DeGaulle, the committee includes Gen. Alphonse George and Jean Monnet, named by Giraud; Rene Massigli and Andre Phillip, appointed by DeGaulle; and Gen. Georges Catroux, designated by both presidents.

COAL: WLB Sustained

When President Roosevelt, acting as commander-in-chief, tersely ordered the 500,000 striking mine workers back to work after a 30-day truce had been ended by another walkout, he had left the next move squarely up to mine union chief John L. Lewis.

In his brief statement the President did not consider the possibility that his order might be ignored. But measures of a stern and effective nature were open to him and the force of public opinion was marshaled overwhelmingly behind him in the event of continued mine work stoppage.

The President's order had completely supported the War Labor board which Mr. Lewis and his United Mine Workers had defied, setting forth plainly that "Just as soon as the miners return to work, the disposition of the dispute . . . will forthwith proceed under the jurisdiction of the War Labor board."

ARGENTINA: Neutrality at Stake?

While close censorship had veiled early reports of the "military movement" in Argentina, observers were confident that it concerned the course of the nation's future international policy—whether the government would pursue its trend of benevolent neutrality toward the Axis, or would follow the rest of South America in breaking with the Axis.

The military reaction gained added significance, coming as it did on the eve of the Conservative party's national convention preceding the Presidential elections. For this convention had been scheduled to proclaim Senate President Robustiano Patron Costa as its candidate. Costa had been endorsed by "neutrality-minded" President Ramon Castillo.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

BONDS: The average American family should invest 25 cents of every dollar of income in war bonds, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau declared.

COAL: Stocks of all anthracite coal in Canada were ordered frozen according to an order issued by J. McG. Stewart, coal controller of the war production department.

CHINA: Japs Lose 30,000

As Chinese forces had continued to press back the Jap invaders in the middle Yangtze valley, a report from Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's headquarters disclosed that the drive in Central China toward Chungking had cost the enemy more than 30,000 casualties in a two-week period.

The Tokyo radio admitted the reverses in a report announcing that the Jap invasion forces had retired to previously prepared positions. Principal theater of Chinese gains was the Yangtze river in southern Hupeh province and northern Hunan. Here General Chiang's forces wiped out encircled enemy units and seized huge stocks of supplies and equipment, a communique said. As a first step in the recapture of strategic Ichang, the Chinese had regained possession of all points around Changyang, strongly held "doorway" to Ichang.

MEDITERRANEAN: Mussolini at Bay

Mussolini's defenses at sea had been no more impressive than in the air when Allied forces struck at the island approaches to the "soft underbelly" of Italy.

Target of the first assaults was the island of Pantelleria, closest of Italy's Mediterranean outposts to Africa. Here Allied warships made heavy bombardments that were unopposed. The Italian fleet that had been reported on the alert had made no effort to come out and fight for Pantelleria which already had been shaken by Allied bombers. In none of the attacks did the Allied fleet units suffer casualties. The only resistance offered was from the ineffective Italian shore batteries.

Only 45 miles from the tip of Tunisia's Cap Bon peninsula, Pantelleria was an easily reached target for Allied air forces. As wave after wave of bombers swept over the island blowing up port facilities, other Allied planes kept up a damaging series of forays against Sicily and Sardinia.

The extent to which the Mediterranean was becoming an Allied lake was indicated by a report announcing that the Allied destroyers had sunk two merchant vessels and an escorting torpedo boat and driven a burning Italian destroyer ashore.

TRADE PACTS: Two Years More

Final approval by the senate of President Roosevelt's reciprocal trade agreements program came after administration supporters, aided by some Republicans, defeated five amendments that would have restricted the President's authority. The house had previously voted favorably.

The President had originally asked for a three-year extension. But because this would throw the policy into the next presidential administration for more than a year, both house and senate measures cut it to two years. The senate's action, however, meant that members of the United Nations could be assured that this government's present trade policy would be continued until June 30, 1945, or nearly five months after the next presidential inauguration.

DRAFT CROP: The draft called Sherman Jenkins' sons one at a time until it took all 12, the Clarkdale, Miss., farmer disclosed. The boys range in age from 18 to 30.

PRIVATE: Seventy-two oil industry executives donned fatigue outfits and spent a day living with soldiers at Fort Belvoir, Va., who are fighting a war powered by oil.

RUSSIA: Nazis Try Air

The question, "Where is the German air force?" received at least a partial answer when Moscow announced that 500 Nazi planes had raided the important Russian position of Kursk, 120 miles above Kharkov. The Soviet communique reported that 124 of the raiders had been shot down, as against a loss of 30 Red planes.

Termining the battle as one of the greatest air actions of the war, the Russians disclosed that the effectiveness of their anti-aircraft defenses caused the Germans to jettison their bombs, thus missing military objectives but causing civilian casualties. Meanwhile, a German report announced further Russian offensives in the Kuban valley of the Caucasus. The Nazis said that five Red tank brigades and several infantry divisions had launched a "new drive northeast of Novorossiisk, last remaining German stronghold in the Caucasus."

The struggle in the Kuban valley, however, was but one phase of operations from the Caucasus to the Arctic sea that might well determine the war's outcome this summer.

PAY-AS-YOU-GO: July 1 Deadline

After five months of congressional wrangling the pay-as-you-go income tax bill sped through the senate after passage by the house.

Meanwhile treasury officials had organized the machinery to start the collection-at-the-source system that will take 20 per cent above personal exemptions of each paycheck of $40,000,000 American workers beginning July 1.

Representing a compromise between Democrats and Republicans, the legislation promises an increase in individual income tax revenue to about $16,000,000,000 in the new fiscal year beginning July 1. Under the bill's provisions, all of 1942 taxes of $50 are forgiven and a reduction of 75 per cent on the remainder over $50 is allowed.

AIR POWER: U. S. Pounds Japs

On widely separated fronts from the Aleutians to Burma, the Japs felt the increasing force of Allied air power.

With the campaign for Attu now a matter of history, American airmen concentrated their attention on Kiska, the main Japanese base in the Aleutians. The navy department reported that planes continued to bomb and strafe the hard-pressed Jap positions.

In New Guinea Flying Fortress and Liberator bombers gave the key Jap air base located at WeWak, a series of heavy raids, dropping incendiaries and explosives on four fields which form part of the WeWak system of airbases. The Japs retaliated by sending bombers to raid targets in the upper Lakekamu river, 35 miles southwest of Allied-held Wau.

In Burma, American airmen struck at enemy supply lines between Burma and China, dropping 12,000 pounds of bombs on the important Shweli suspension bridge northeast of Mandalay and attacking railroad installations.

POSTWAR PLENTY: Food Parley Pledge

Collaboration of 44 United Nations countries in building a post-war world of plenty was pledged by delegates attending the United Nations food conference in Hot Springs, Virginia.

The machinery for achieving this goal of plenty would be an international organization, the delegates indicated at the conference's closing sessions. This organization would take the form of a permanent world agricultural authority.

Agreement of the delegates to promote the creation of this international agency was hailed as the conference's most significant accomplishment. Undersecretary of Agriculture Paul H. Appleby, vice chairman of the United States delegation declared the conference had been "highly successful."

BEEF: Point Values Upped

Dwindling supplies of beef were cited by the Office of Price Administration as the reason for a boost in ration point values.

Beef-eaters found that point values on steak cuts such as porterhouse, sirloin or T-bone were up three points. Roasts were up an average of two points, while the largest single increase was on dried beef, which soared four points, or from 12 to 16 points a pound.

Housewives were given consolation in the announcement that decreases in many cuts of veal, lamb and mutton, pork and variety meats would make it possible for them to substitute these items.

WAR BONDS: Machinery Overhauled

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau announced the merger of the victory fund committee and the war savings staff into a single organization to be called "the war finance committee."

The new group will handle all future war financing drives, Mr. Morgenthau said. The war finance committee will be set up on state lines and operate under state chairmen who will report directly to the treasury, he added.

Victory Inevitable Despite Deadly, Undefeated Foe

Optimistic Americans Fail to Realize Enemy's Strength in Experienced Men, Naval Forces and Air Power.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

"But, General . . . The other day I said that after a long and enlightening talk by a high army officer who was patiently and painfully trying to show us why, despite the recent victories of the Allies, we still had a formidable enemy to meet, a dangerous, deadly and undefeated enemy. Victory, of course, is certain (eventually) but serious reverses, setbacks and sacrifices are still before us, he had said.

I believe my own exclamation, "but, general" is typical of some of those "buts" which have arisen in your minds.

America is the super-duper land of inventive genius, business genius, organizing genius, mass production, high standard of living, assembly line, giant industry, efficiency, wealth, central heating, apple pie and unlimited opportunity. True, we got our first real drubbing at Pearl Harbor but we came back; the British were licked at Singapore, too, but they won the battle of Britain. Latterly, we collaborated in the smashing victory of Tunisia . . . the Russians beat 'em at Stalingrad, the Chinese have held 'em off for what seems a lifetime. Why, then . . . ?

The general looked a little weary but he went on politely—I can't quote all he said but will give you the parts the OWI says is "ok."

"The enemy has the biggest, most effective fighting force in history."

"Biggest? But America and Russia . . . and Australia?"

Armed Strength

Figures (U. S. Army official): The enemy still has 17 million men under arms. The German soldiers and their satellites, some a little ragged, still total 17 million trained men. The Japs have at least three million in uniform. These (the good and the bad) combine to make "the biggest, most effective fighting mass ever assembled in history." Remember, the enemy has been years building this force, and the civilians in these militaristic countries have sacrificed all the things necessary—things we wouldn't even think of rationing, including liberty and decency.

In cold numbers, the enemy still outnumber us in land forces.

And even today, after Midway, Guadalcanal, Attu, Tunisia, Stalingrad, and the bombings, the enemy is still well equipped, well trained, well co-ordinated, can operate under adverse conditions and in the face of terrific hardships which our troops are just now beginning to master.

That is a brief sum up of the enemy land forces from a military man's point of view.

The Germans have, though you may not have realized from recent news, a small but highly specialized navy still afloat, plus the sub!

The submarine is still the biggest Allied problem. Submarines are tough animals now. Our own are tough enough and these animals are the German specialty. Depth bombs have to go deep to do any more than break the glass in the shaving mirrors and instrument faces. Even in the last war, it took a lot of depth bombs to get one sub. Now the subs can crash dive, shiver and rise to fight back . . . and fight back they can! They are mounted with guns, they can stand up to an escort ship, at least a corvette, and it takes a destroyer or a fast cruiser to catch them even when they stay on the surface where they can return fire. The small stuff (30 caliber) bounces off their scales.

Japan's Navy

The surface ships which Germany has are not so much of a factor. But Japan's navy is still to be reckoned with. It is not destroyed but it has to be before we can achieve victory in the Pacific. Just taking islands won't do the job—and see how long it took to take an island, first Guadalcanal; now (almost at this writing) Attu.

Airforce: America now leads the world. But remember Germany was the first to build a supreme "luftwaffe" and that luftwaffe and the men who made it are not all dead.

yet. Japan's vaunted Zeros which could outmaneuver us because of their lightness, it is true, exploded at one shot. They have been improved. Germany has improved a number of her models, too. She is holding back many for defense.

The enemy army, as a whole, is better trained by experience than our men. But those of our men who have had equal training and experience are as good or better, man for man, although not yet perhaps, officer for officer. Remember, Germany and Japan bred an officer class. We trained a few professional officers, limited their prestige, resources and opportunity. The majority of our officers in wartime come from civilian life. They are good, when they get the training and the experience.

As to the fighting man. Well, we've stood up to Hitler's finest in Africa at bayonet's length—we've beaten the crawling Jap at his own game, jungle fighting.

Long Range View

But still we have those odds which I (or rather the general) mentioned when we look at the long range vista. They are the things which the general brought up in answer to the "buts"—I'll name the "buts" in a second. The point is he showed me why it can't be done tomorrow—why we civilians have to be patient. He showed me what we have to do before we get over that "ridge."

After tomorrow, we can consider: The enemy hasn't the initiative the Americans and British have. When things don't go according to plan, they are likely to "bust." We won't.

The enemy has had its best men in the army a long time—its replacements are not as good as ours will be.

Much of the enemy-held territory has a hostile population which will work with the Allies against the enemy when we move in.

Japan and Germany will fall on critical materials before we will—we can beat them at their own game of "ersatz," too; witness synthetic rubber.

We can manufacture and build faster because we have more to do it with than they have. Our home front is farther away from the battle front—and it is more in sympathy with the government, despite political difficulties.

But remember the "buts."

War Stimulates Changes in Education

One of the many changes which the war has stimulated is the change in education. Education is going to count more after the war. Many boys will come back partially trained in trades and professions which they can follow if they have the additional theoretical and practical instruction necessary to arm them for the stiff competition which is expected.

As a result, college entrance examination requirements will be greatly altered for many of these men will lack the traditional prerequisites. Reform in this field is one of the 11 major objectives, discussed in a report of the commission on liberal education of the Association of American Colleges.

"If an educational program is to be of genuine service to the men and women of the post-war world," the report of the college committee says, "it must perform two functions simultaneously. It must take them as they are and appeal to their immediate desires and special needs, and it must provide for their common and enduring needs in a post-war society."

It will be recalled that the boom after the last war created the co-ed collegian and the flapper coed. The word "collegiate" had a meaning then which took it far afield from the cloister of learning. The crop of students—veterans—will be more serious. They must be taken more seriously. They must have aptitude and achievement tests rather than book-learning examinations; there must be more individualized instruction, more tutorial and seminar methods, special attention must be given to co-ordinated instruction that will aid in the transition from army or industrial life to peacetime community and family relations and the responsibilities of citizenship.

Foods are "home canned" says OPA if: (1) they have been canned in a kitchen primarily used for the preparation of meals or to demonstrate the preparation of meals; (2) they have been canned in a separate building or shed which a farm house has equipped for canning purposes, if the owner has obtained permission from his local ration board to use such facilities.

Swedish Foreign Minister Christian E. Guenther, declaring that "no neutral power can maintain an absolute balance between warring camps" told an audience at Eskilstuna that Sweden was making "concessions" to Germany "in a higher degree than to the western powers," the Swedish Hoorby radio said in a domestic broadcast reported to the Office of War Information.

One Whole Chicken Can Be Made Into Two Meals

You're the clever homemaker who saves on chicken by using only half a chicken for roasting.

Most families are so reduced that few homemakers find it necessary to stew or roast a whole chicken for their meals.

for roasting, or perhaps in making numerous and delicious dishes using out up chicken.

Chicken is a good source of protein and we can use it in place of meat dishes regularly.

Consider, for example, many of the chicken salads which can be made up with fruits or vegetables, and for sandwich fillings.

Cut the fowl in half, lengthwise, and cook one half with several carrots, celery, parsley, onion, and seasonings in enough water to cover until tender.

For roast chicken, cook stewing hen split in half lengthwise until tender.

A few leftover pieces of chicken either from the roast or from stewing can go into a salad.

Chicken and Fruit Salad Bowl (Serves 4 to 6)

1 cup diced chicken 1/2 teaspoon salt 1 1/2 cups seedless grapes 2 oranges, peeled and sectioned 1/2 cup blanched almonds

French dressing Add salt to chicken. Cover salad bowl with shredded lettuce.

Still another way of stretching your meat, or chicken, if there is absolutely enough to serve it with potato salad.

Lynn Says: The Score Card: Ceiling prices have been announced on many rationed foods.

Most of the times we're concerned with buying foods in season, but it's more important to buy in season now when you're preparing to put up foods for the fall and winter.

In case you don't have your own garden, you might be of help in picking vegetables and fruits to some farmer who does not have enough help.

Those of you city dwellers who can neither have your own Victory garden or help pick produce should get to the market early to get as fresh produce as possible.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D., Of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for June 20

JOHN DESCRIBES TRUE CHRISTIANS

LESSON TEXT—1 John 2:1-6; 3:13-18; 4:19-21. GOLDEN TEXT—But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin.—1 John 1:7.

Religion and life go together. To hold the tenets of Christian truth in one's head and not to have them move the heart is to deny the very faith one professes.

John was not content with such a weak imitation, and in his writings he set up the true standard of a forgiven and transformed life.

The true Christian life must have I. Sin forgiven and life transformed (1 John 2:1-6).

Not only at the beginning of the Christian life is sin dealt with and put away, but day by day—yes, moment by moment—we have the cleansing power of the blood of our Divine Advocate.

This is of the utmost importance, for God can only use clean channels for the outflowing of His power and grace to the world.

The transformation of life which thus comes to the believer is shown in obedience to the commandments of God.

Real Christianity will cause us to be II. Hated by the World and Loved by the Brethren (1 John 3:13-18).

The world, that is, unregenerate mankind, hates a genuine Christian no matter how kind and loving he may be.

The presence of a clean, godly life in a community makes every sinner look that much blacker, and the world, the flesh, and the devil will do everything possible to break down and destroy such a testimony.

We, as Christians, should not be surprised that the world hates us. In fact, we should be troubled if it does not hate us.

In the midst of enmity the Christian is not afraid, for he is III. Indwelt by God and Unafraid in the World (1 John 4:15-17).

A sincere confession of Christ as Saviour brings a man into that close relationship to God which is expressed in the words, "God abideth in him, and he in God" (v. 15).

Such love casts out fear. Fellowship is impossible in an atmosphere of fear, but love rules it out.

Not only does the Christian no longer fear the day of judgment, but he is unafraid in the present evil world.

"The main purpose of the women's military services is to free men for fighting," she explained.

"I'm releasing you from home duty for combat," I told him.

"In a general way," he replies. "But I thought they was just being drilled to learn how to live in one hat and like it."

"You're behind in your education," I explain. "Our main purpose is to relieve men like you."

"I ask him: 'Don't you want to be free for combat?'"

"The more I try to explain the tougher he gets.

"He is all upset about it. You girls are getting yourselves in wrong with this yen to free the office help for front-line battling," he argues.

"What did you do?" we asked Arlene.

"Oh, he was just kidding," she explained.

"Do you really mean to tell me that you got the $200 that I asked?" he inquired.

"Well, not exactly," said the shopkeeper. "You see, I exchanged it for two $100 cats."

Subsidizing Mistakes of Government

(Industrial News Review)

Steps taken by government agencies to reduce food prices threaten the life of the retail food distribution industry. The agencies hesitate to tackle the inflation problem at its roots where it would affect one and all alike. Failure to establish an adequate tax and war financing program temporizing with pressure groups, appeasement of labor racketeers, political aspirations that take precedence over the welfare of the nation—all of these things contribute to the rising cost of living. And it is the merchant who must pass the accumulated costs on to the ultimate consumer, as those costs are beyond his control.

Irrationally the politicians, as they witness their mistaken adventures in the price tags of necessities, are seeking to force food distributors to cover up for them by establishing prices which cut of line with costs.

tration in the war emergency cannot be kept from the public by a "cover-up" policy which attempts to make retailers the goat. Retail distributors have done a magnificent job of carrying out price and rationing controls, just as they have in maintaining an efficient distribution system in the face of overwhelming handicaps. But they cannot and should not be expected to subsidize the mistakes of government.

Attempting to "roll back" or "freeze" retail prices before the cost of production is controlled, is like trying to hold back the tide by an edict that it shall not rise.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"Our men in the service in this war have pretty definite ideas about what they're fighting for and the way they want to find our country when they come back...don't you think so, Judge?"

"I certainly do, George. Just a week or so ago I was reading in a national magazine the results of a poll taken among our soldiers. Each man was given a questionnaire containing twenty-five 'assignments' for the folks at home. He was asked to check the first five in order of importance to him.

"Out of thousands of replies the first 'assignment' to the folks back home was 'Make sure I'll have a job in my chosen field of work when I get back'. Number 5 was 'Make sure that Prohibition isn't put over on us again.'

"When the men in the last war came home and found prohibition had been put over on them behind their backs they were sore as boils. You can see from what I just told you how they feel about it this time, too."
