THE MONSTER WE HAVE CREATED

(Roswell Dispatch)

Referring to the heavy burden of federal employees we have today, a "Frankenstein monster," said Senator Byrd of Virginia, in a recent address pointed out that the burden of federal employees, and the large number of such employees, is changing the type of government we have enjoyed. The situation in this country is becoming critical. The joint committee on reduction of non-essential federal expenditures, in a recent report disclosed that the federal government today employs more persons than do all the forty-eight states combined, plus all employees of county and municipal governments of the entire nation. That is exclusive of men and women in the armed services.

According to the committee report federal employment has been increasing at a rate of nearly fifty per cent semi-annually. This trend started long before we entered the war, and has increased our entry into the war made saving imperative. The new agencies have been even more active in recruiting held than the older ones. For example the office of price administration, with 22,981 employees on July 1, 1942, had jumped to 51,817 by April 1, 1943.

The lack of proper administration is amply shown by the same office, with some 2,000 attorneys on its payroll, some of whom are in Washington to outline the program, the rest in the field to enforce it. England has done the job with ten attorneys, and done it with less confusion than in this country.

The mess can be cleaned up, and we have made a step in the right direction with the joint committee's work.

The report disclosed comparative figures, showing for example, that one state with a total employment of 21,000 persons on its payroll, had 224,000 federal employees within its borders. That is difficult to realize.

Another alarming feature of the situation lies in the fact that practically all of these employees are under the executive branch of the government, tending to do away with our system of balances of power. For example, Byrd states, the total cost for salaries in the legislative and judicial branches of the government together did not reach the figure spent for publicity and promotion alone by the executive branch.

Whether Americans are ready to realize it or not, this is an alarming situation. We can't keep one person in about every forty-five on the government payroll and continue to enjoy the democratic form of government.

Some steps in the direction of non-essential expenditures have been taken. As a result over one billion dollars was cut from the last budget. But the executive branch bureaus, firmly entrenched, have fought such moves every step of the way.

Visiting Here

Perfects Shell Extractor

William H. Nickels, son of S. H. Nickels, has just perfected a broken shell extractor for the .50 caliber machine gun which makes it possible to quickly remove ruptured shells from the cartridge chamber of a machine gun while in battle. This should save the lives of many of our soldiers who would otherwise be left with a useless gun. Bill's invention has already received a thorough try-out, and it is understood is now in progress of adoption by the government for use by our armed forces. This invention is being donated to the government without charge, and S. H. Nickels has just received a letter of appreciation from his son which was sent him by John C. Garand, the builder of the famous Garand rifle, with which our fighting men are now armed. Below is part of Mr. Garand's friendly letter:

Springfield Armory, Springfield, Mass., May 11, 1943.

Mr. W. H. Nickels, 804 Central Ave., Wilmette, Ill. Dear Sir:

Receipt of the drawing of your design of a ruptured cartridge extractor for the Machine Gun, Caliber .50 is hereby acknowledged.

Your interest, spirit and sacrifice of time on this matter are very much appreciated. Your kind of cooperation by everybody will certainly win this war.

Very truly yours,
John C. Garand.

Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Withers of Oscura were shoppers in town this Wednesday.

Visitors from Ancho this week were Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Pruett, Mrs. Jackie Silvers, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Burnett, Bill Balow, Harry Straley, Mr. and Mrs. John Dale and son Elmo, and Mr. and Mrs. Bond.

COMMENTS

P. S.—Don't forget the Firemen's Dance at Capitan on July 3rd and the big celebration given by the Lincoln county Roper's Club at Capitan on July 3rd and 4th.

The treatment of Japs in internment camps in this country already has aroused a anger among Americans who want them to be treated as Japanese and not as privileged American guests.

There may be some loyal people among these Japs, but they seem to be rather few, and there is evidence to show that the Japs in these camps have plotted against our war program and even attempted acts of sabotage. And they even boast of it.

Prisoners of War Are Held in 17 States; Some Work on Farms and Public Projects

Defeated Men Happy About Hearty Food, Humane Treatment

Prisoners of war, principally from North Africa, are being shipped to the United States and placed in camps, there to remain until peace returns. Some 36,688 men have arrived, of whom 22,110 are Germans, 14,516 Italians and 62 Japanese, up to the first week of June, the war department announces. They are confined in 21 camps, located in 17 states.

These former enemy soldiers are being treated according to the humane requirements of the Geneva convention, of which both Germany and Italy are signatories, as is the United States. Japan has never accepted this agreement.

These men may be employed, within rigid provisions, on farms and public works construction, thereby possibly relieving the labor shortage in some regions. Another advantage of having these prisoners here, is that their presence here keeps their friends and relatives in the homelands anxious about their welfare. This anxiety may help to insure honorable treatment of American prisoners in Axis camps. On the other hand, the reports which prisoners write home about the good food and decent living and working conditions here, should have a favorable propaganda value.

This anxiety may help to insure honorable treatment of American prisoners in Axis camps. On the other hand, the reports which prisoners write home about the good food and decent living and working conditions here, should have a favorable propaganda value.

These are 10 camps for Italians. These are: Camp Atterbury, Ind.; Camp Carson, Colo.; Camp Clark, Mo.; Weingarten, Mo.; Crossville, Tenn. (separate from Germans); Florence, Ariz.; Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.; Ogden, Utah; Camp Phillips, Kan.; and Camp Wheeler, Ga. All these are permanent. The 63 Japanese are confined at Camp McCoy, Wis. (See map.)

Room for 55,000 in Camps. The present capacity of these camps is stated as approximately 55,000. Present camps will be expanded, and new ones established as needed, the war department says. Most prison camps are located within army camps.

The commanding officer of the army installation is also the commanding officer of the prison establishment. Where the prison camp is not within an army installation, the commanding officer of the prison camp is designated by the commanding general of the service command area.

The standard stockade at each of the prison camps is an enclosure within a double barbed wire fence, with guard towers covering a narrow alley between fences. This stockade is divided into three compounds, containing hutshelters, mess halls, toilet facilities and other installations to provide for 1,000 men. Within their respective compounds, the prisoners may circulate freely, but guarded gates restrict passage from one enclosure to another. Guards and administrative personnel are housed outside the stockade in nearby barracks and offices.

Will Work as Harvest Hands.

The office of the provost marshal general has found that many of the prisoners were tradesmen, including carpenters, stone masons, house painters, but the use to which their skills may be put is restricted.

Many others were farmers. Their use in farming will be confined to those operations which require a dozen or more men at one time, such as cotton picking and harvesting. Prisoners must be under guard at all times. Being soldiers, they cannot be placed in the custody of a civilian, and it is impracticable to send a guard out with small groups.

Other occupations which will employ large numbers of prisoners are road building, irrigation developments, dam construction and projects of a similar nature.

All of the enlisted prisoners, whether working or not, receive an allowance of 10 cents a day for the purchase of toilet goods or other articles from the stockade canteen. Their pay when working, 60 cents a day, is deposited in a credit account. The prisoner may withdraw, in the form of canteen coupons, one-half of each month's credit up to a maximum of $10 per month.

When working for a state or private contractor, the rate of pay is decided upon in advance between the employer and the camp commander. The rate, however, may not be less than that of 50 cents a day paid when the work is done for the federal government.

Officer prisoners are not compelled to work. If they choose to work, they are paid the same basis as the enlisted man. Regardless of whether or not the officers work, under the Geneva convention they are paid in accordance with their grade and in line with specific arrangements between the enemy powers. This pay for German and Italian officer prisoners is the equivalent of $20 per month for warrant officers and first and second lieutenants; $30 for captains, and $40 for those in the grade of major and above.

Sports and Reading Rooms.

Facilities for recreation are provided at all of the camps. Equipment supplied by the war department is supplemented in many cases by gifts from private organizations.

Because the prisoners naturally favor the sports of their own countries, standard army athletic equipment kits have not proved generally satisfactory.

National preferences and tastes are taken into account in planning the meals for the prisoners. These menus, covering meals for a month, are prepared in the office of the quartermaster general. Substitutions may be made from a list of foods indicated as approximately equivalent in food value to any item on the specified list. For instance, the Italians at Camp Atterbury, Ind., asked for more bread and spaghetti instead of their meat allowance. The camp now gets more flour and less meat. The menu for a typical day at that camp consists of spaghetti, pork, potatoes, cold slaw, canned pears, coffee and thick crusted Italian bread. It is mentioned that the men leave their plates clean.

The administration of each prison camp follows a well-established pattern. A typical prison camp, for example, housing 3,000 prisoners, requires the services of 500 officers and enlisted men of the United States army. This detachment is made up of three military police escort companies, 21 additional officers, and three attached officers. These companies usually are rotated, one being on actual guard, manning towers and gates, while another is in alert and another is engaged in tactical and other training exercises or in supervising and guarding work details.

The prisoners are organized into companies of 250 men each, with each company under an officer of the army of the United States. In turn, battalions are formed within the camp, all under the camp commander.

Although the company commander is assisted in administering his company by enlisted members of the army of the United States, including a first sergeant, a mess and supply sergeant, a clerk, an interpreter and cook, the prisoners themselves are permitted to organize and administer their own affairs as much as possible. From their own ranks they may choose leaders to serve as their spokesmen in making requests or complaints to the company or camp commander. Cooks, barbers, tailors, cobblers and other essential personnel also are chosen from among the prisoners.

AROUND THE HOUSE

Wood siding from which moisture has not been sufficiently removed may be finished with semi-transparent shingle stain instead of a solid film of paint.

Rub bacon fat over the skins of potatoes before they are put into the oven to bake. Then the skins will not crumble or break, and will have a delicious flavor. Eat the skins with the potatoes.

When pickling onions, if you are using white vinegar, a few drops of sweet oil of almonds added to each jar will help to keep them white.

When stubborn particles of meat and vegetables stick to the inside of the grinder, run a small piece of dry bread through the grinder. The bread acts as a chaser, and saves work in the dishpan.

Frozen meats should not be thawed before cooking. Soaking them to hasten defrosting impairs the flavor.

Airplanes and Pilots in World War I, and Now

Our army and navy had only 55 planes when the United States entered the first World war. And 51 of these had been pronounced obsolete by the advisory committee on aeronautics.

The Allies had, all told, about 700 planes at the start. At the close of the war, Great Britain had 14,000, France had 12,000 and the United States, 10,000. At the war's end, Germany had about 11,000.

In 1914, there were only about 1,000 trained pilots in the world. Four years later there were more than 100,000. Today there are more than a quarter of a million.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

A chain of rest stations is rising across northern Brazil along the route of workers trucking into the Amazon Basin gateway of Belem to increase collection of wild rubber. They provide medical aid and other human comforts to the 50,000 additional workers being recruited for the Amazon rubber forces.

The rubber normally used in one month's manufacture of baby pants can make 2800 rubber lifeboats for ocean-going planes.

Try Canning!

Many homemakers who have never done so before will be hard at work doing some old-fashioned "putting up" this summer. Not only will it be economical to put up your own Victory garden's surplus, but also it will be a vital step in stretching those vital points next winter.

Canning a simpler today and much of the spoilage that occurred formerly can be prevented if the home-maker checks the causes of spoilage. There is a reason for every type of spoilage, and what's more important, every one of them can be prevented if checked carefully.

First, do not start to use left over produce that you wouldn't eat at the table. Select only prime fruit and vegetables in perfect condition. Best quality goes into commercial canning, and so it should for home canning. Get out into the garden early in the morning to get vegetables and fruits and can immediately, or if you market, tie a bandanna on your hair and go out early in the morning to get your produce while it's still fresh.

Cleanliness is another important factor. Remember that food spoils for other reasons than that the jar is not air tight. More spoilage than you ever dreamed of can result from not washing the food properly and discarding bruised or imperfect vegetables and fruits. Be sure to peel the food, if it is to be peeled, so that no dirt and the bacteria that lurk in it get rubbed in the product as it is peeled.

Work as quickly as possible with the food once it's started on its way to the can. Flat sour, which occurs in vegetables, can often develop in vegetables, for example, if the jars in which the pre-cooked food is placed stand too long before processing. Too much delay in handling food from one step to the other may cause a great loss of vitamins and mineral.

Do as much preparation ahead of time as possible like checking equipment and getting together jars which are examined for imperfections and nicka. Wash all jars and caps in soapy suds (not in cool dish-water after the breakfast dishes) and scald or sterilize them.

Select Day for Canning. If there's a huge quantity of food to be canned, it would be a good idea to round up as many friends and neighbors to help, and to do the canning on a community basis. In many towns, pressure cookers which

Your Canning Shelf
*Beets	*Tomatoes	*Peas

*Spinach

are necessary for canning non-acid vegetables, are available at the canning center. Then, if all produce must be canned in a single day, it will be necessary to recruit as much help as possible from others in your community and give them your time when needed.

Canning day should be canning day only, not laundry day, general cleaning and baking day, too. It's better, too, not to be overly ambitious and try to do three bushels of tomatoes, all in one sweep, for you will do better with a small quantity, and feel less tired, even though it may take several days in which to finish.

Processing Foods. Fruits and vegetables need processing which means the application of heat to the product for a certain definite period of time. You just can't put fruit into jars, seal and store and expect them to stay in perfect condition.

Water-Bath Method. In some cases, when pressure cookers are not obtainable, a water-bath may be used for vegetables and meats. However, the water-bath is more preferable for tomatoes (which are acid, and technically a fruit) and fruits.

To make a water bath, use a large wash boiler or deep vessel fitted with a rack made of lath, perforated material or galvanized wire. Have a tight fitting cover.

Place prepared jars on the rack which must hold them at least 1/2 inch above bottom of the canner. The water bath should be filled with boiling water which comes at least an inch or two above the tops of the jars. Jars on the rack should not touch each other. Start counting processing time as soon as water around jars begins to bubble, and keep it boiling during entire processing period. If necessary, add boiling water, if it boils away, for the water must always be boiling at least an inch above the tops of the jars.

Here are some recipes for common fruits and vegetables:

*Tomatoes. Scald tomatoes in boiling water 1 minute. Soak in cold water 1 minute, peel, core, quarter and pack into clean, sterile jars. Add no water. Add a teaspoon of salt to each quart of tomatoes. Put on band and screw band firmly tight. Process in hot water bath for 35 minutes.

*Peas. Shell, grade peas, using only prime quality. Pre-cook 3 to 7 minutes depending on size. Pack loosely, adding hot water to within 1 inch of top. Adjust cap and process in pressure cooker, 60 minutes at 10 pounds, or 100 minutes in hot water bath.

*Beets. Use small, uniform beets. Wash carefully. Leave the roots and stems long. Boil 15 minutes. Plunge into cold water, remove the skins and pack into clean jars. Add 2 teaspoons of salt and sugar mixture to each quart jar if desired. Fill to within 1/2 inch of top, with boiling water. Put on cap, screwing band firmly tight. Process in hot-water bath 120 minutes or in pressure cooker 40 minutes at 10 pounds.

'Arctic Emergencies' Advises Fliers How to Survive Amid Snow and Cold

A guide to the Arctic Circle will now accompany every army air forces pilot required to fly across the top of the world, the war department announces. "Arctic Emergencies," a little orange-and-blue booklet, will be carried in each flier's emergency kit on future flights far north.

The booklet was prepared by the safety education division of the army air forces flight control command, and is a companion piece to "Jungle and Desert Emergencies," distributed early in May. Like its predecessor, it possesses an especially durable cover and water-resistant pages. Authorities on all phases of life in the Arctic were consulted in its preparation.

The guide tells how to make suitable goggles to ward off treacherous snow blindness, how to increase the warmth and protective qualities of regulation flying suits, what to eat and how to cook it.

Dietary tips for the flier forcefully grounded north of the tree line are plentiful and varied. They include the warning that polar bear livers are poisonous. Also, to the pilot who might be tempted to live on rabbits because they are abundant, the booklet points out that such a course will produce "rabbit starvation" and possible death.

A PEOPLE IN DISTRESS

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 1:8-14; 2:23-25. GOLDEN TEXT—They cried, and their cry came up unto God by reason of the bondage.—Exodus 2:23.

Today is Independence Day. Yet much of the world is in bondage, and the rest of it in a struggle to prevent freedom from perishing from the earth.

Our lesson too is about a nation in bondage, but we learn from it that there is a way to be free. Even so we declare the way of personal liberty which is open and free.

The Lord Jesus Christ opened it at Calvary's tree and anyone who is still the bond slave of Satan may make this a great and glorious Independence Day by now declaring his faith in the Deliverer of our souls.

We begin today a series of lessons in the book of Exodus which reveal the high and mighty hand of God working on behalf of His people.

The family of Jacob—or, as the Bible calls them, the children of Israel—prospered in Egypt particularly as long as Joseph and the rulers who remembered him were alive. But they soon learned one of life's bitter lessons, that—

I. Prosperity Is Not Always a Blessing (1:8-11).

The Hebrews were a peaceful, law-abiding people. They were God's chosen people, and as He blessed them they prospered, and thus innocently they brought upon themselves the hatred of the suspicious Egyptians.

Prosperity is never an unmixed blessing. We as a nation know that to be true. Not only does it lead to a certain softening of the sinews, but all too often it results in a weakening of the moral fiber, which makes man easy prey to the attack of the enemy of our souls.

Is it not strange, then, that we should—even in times of all-out warfare—be so eager to chase the dollar that we are willing to neglect our children, forget church, live unnatural lives, just that we may make more and more money?

The Egyptians had, humanly speaking, reason to fear this great nation which was growing up in their midst. The new rulers did not know Joseph and had forgotten the spirit in which he had brought his family into the land. The leaders of the Egyptians therefore made plans which appealed to their brilliant leaders as politic and wise. But they reckoned without God, and the burdens and afflictions they placed on the Israelites only served to bring further blessing.

So Israel learned a lesson which our present sorry world can profit by, that—

II. Persecution Is Not Always a Burden (vv. 12-14).

The people of Israel did not appreciate it, but the bitterness of their bondage was a blessing in disguise. Note that—

1. It Kept Them Separate as a People. Affliction often serves to keep God's people separated from the world. It is doing so today.

2. It Disciplined Them and Prepared Them for the Hardships of Their Wilderness Journey. We too do well to remember that "whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth," and that if we are properly "exercised" thereby, our sorrows may yield rich fruit in our lives.

3. It Threw Them Back upon God. Many are the saints of God who have found that the fiery trial, the burden so hard to understand, or some affliction of their body, has caused them to bring their burden to the Lord. We have traveled far on the road of faith when we have reached the place where we learn that "man's extremity is God's opportunity."

They had only one place to turn. They were hemmed in on every side, but, as ever, they found that the way up no man can close. They called on their God.

III. Prayer Always Brings Deliverance (2:23-25).

Does God really know when His people suffer? Does He really care? Yes, He does. "They cried," and "God heard" and "remembered." That's all we need to know. The groaning of His people had already stirred God's gracious and tender heart. But He waited to hear their cry before He answered. Such is the law of prayer. May we not forget it. Far too often we turn to everyone and everything else, and finally, in desperation, to God. Why not turn to Him first?

Does God hear and answer prayer? Yes, but remember that real prayer is the cry of faith coming from the heart of an obedient child. God may answer other prayers, but He always answers such a prayer.

His answer may not be in accord with our opinion of what it should be, for His wisdom is infinite. He knows better than we what the answer should be. Let us trust the Judge of all the earth to do right (Gen. 18:25).

A THREE-PIECE you'll be glad you own hundreds of times this summer. Well cut sports blouse, shorts and button-front skirt.

Women Dress to Please Selves, Incidentally Men

Do women dress to please the men? An old question that never loses its popularity. Obviously women take pleasure in dressing themselves with taste and discrimination, and they like to chime at the art in competition with other women. And they also like men—particularly those in whom they are interested—to be pleased.

Biologically, we must go back for an answer to prehistoric times when the human race was just emerging from the animal stage. In nature it is the usual rule for the male to be more resplendent than the female. No doubt when men and women began to acquire the power of thinking things out, women first adorned themselves in imitation of the male.

Note that, in what we call Western civilization, amongst people who could afford the expense men were usually more splendidly dressed than women until the days of the French revolution.

Admirals may be admirable, but that isn't where the word comes from. It comes from an old Arabic word "amir-al" meaning "commander of." That's what the Admiral is, the top-ranking officer in the Navy. Top-ranking cigarette with our Navy men is Camel—the favorite, too with men in the Army, Marines, and Coast Guard, according to actual sales records from their service stores. Camels are a top-ranking gift, too. And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to men in the Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard wherever they are.—Adv.

Pattern No. 8342 is in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20 and 40. Size 14 ensemble takes 4 1/2 yards 35-inch material. Due to an unusually large demand and current war conditions, slightly more time is required in filling orders for a few of the most popular pattern numbers. Send your order to:

'Twas Too Late Then for Stammerer to Take Time

As the train sped on its way, the shy-looking, little man leaned forward and tapped the big man opposite on the knee. "Your b-b-b—" he began, and it was obvious he was making a big effort to control his stammer. The other man smiled gently. "Now, take it slowly," he said. "Yes, b-b-but your b-b-b—" the little man gulped. "No hurry, old chap," said the big man, winking at the others in the coach; "just take a deep breath and—"

Crash! His words ended in a yelp of pain as his bag up in the rack overbalanced and struck him squarely on the head.

with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

MANY an American of pioneer background can remember when all the floors in the house except the parlor were covered with woven rag rugs and carpets. Today there is something about the vigor, simplicity and economy of these colorful old-time floor coverings that fits our mood. The local weaver with a rug loom is flourishing in many communities.

The modern weaver has an assortment of colors in warp and filler that may be used with the rags that you have prepared in the manner shown here. About one and three quarter pounds of sewn rags will be required for a square yard of carpet. Rugs may be either cotton or wool but do not use both in the same rug. The rags should be soft and clean and hems or uneven finishes should be removed. Dye white rags the colors you wish to predominate.

NOTE—It is possible to make a great variety of floor coverings from odds and ends of things on hand. Books 9 and 10 of the series offered with these articles contain fascinating new designs for hooked and braided rugs. In Book 7 there is a rug made from old felt hats and school pennants. Books are 15 cents each. Order booklets direct from:

 The Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association issued a statement this week that should cause serious consideration in Washington, but probably won't. It charged that under OPA restrictions the cattle ranges of the west are becoming overcrowded. That by the end of the year there will be a surplus of 15,400,000 head of cattle, over and above the number required to feed our armed forces and our civilians, half of which would feed an additional 74 million people. It declared that the use of this surplus would be a great public service, in that it would relieve overcrowded ranges and end any question of a meat shortage. Any food shortage we may have is due to rules and to regulations and not to lack of food supplies.—Roswell Record.

Government Allowances

Santa Fe, New Mexico, June 25, 1943.—Brigadier General Russell C. Charlton, State Selective Service Director, today announced that National Headquarters had issued a clarification regarding government allowances to Class B dependents of servicemen for the cases where there are more than one man in the Army from the same home.

He states that if it can be shown that a soldier prior to his entry into the Armed Forces had contributed a substantial portion of his earnings or services toward the family support, or if a relative through circumstances beyond his or her control has now become dependent upon the serviceman for support since his entry into the Armed Service, they are entitled to receive contribution from one or more servicemen.

For example, a parent having two sons in the Armed Forces may receive the government contribution for both of them, provided, (1) it can be shown that each son prior to his entry into the Armed Forces, had contributed a substantial portion of his earnings or services to such parents support, or (2) such parents, though circumstances beyond his or her control, became dependent upon the son for support after his entrance into the Armed Forces.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"Glad we ran into you, Judge. I was just tryin' to set Helen straight on this business about sugar. I wish you'd tell her what you told me last night down at lodge."
 "Glad to, Jim. I told him, Helen, that there's not a single bit of truth to the rumor that the distillers use sugar in making whiskey. They make it exclusively from grain. Only bootleggers use sugar to make whiskey. I read an article in the paper just last week that goes to prove it. It told how a confessed bootlegger in a Federal court testified to the fact that another bootlegger, also on trial, had bought a million pounds of sugar a few years ago."

 "As a matter of fact, Helen, no distiller is making whiskey today and hasn't for many months. All distillers are working night and day producing war alcohol for the government. And they make every drop of it exclusively from grain, too."

By BEN AMES WILLIAMS
W.N.U. FEATURES

THE STORY SO FAR: When Will McPhail leaves for Moose Bay, Robin Dale decides to follow him. On the way she meets Will's brother Angus, a dear Scot who hates women. He does not know that she is engaged to Will, and Robin realizes that she must not come between the two men. So instead of seeing Will, Robin stays on board when the White Queen docks. But Will, operating a crane, sees a girl on deck. As he turns to look he loses his balance and is killed. Learning that Angus blames her, Robin goes to his boat in the hope of making him understand. She falls asleep and awakes to find the boat at sea. Now she is talking to Angus.

CHAPTER VII

Robin said, as one explains to a child: "I didn't mean to stay away, to make trouble for you. I was taking the cruise boat back to Quebec tonight; but it was late, and I hoped to see you, so I waited by your boat for you to come. When it began to rain, there was no shelter on the dock. I thought I might as well wait in the cabin."

"So you came into my stateroom and made yourself at home!"

"Not quite like that," she said patiently. "Mr. Jenkins came aboard your boat just after I did. He was the man on the dock at Quai Rimouski; came down on the White Queen with us. I heard him on the dock, and when he started down the ladder, I hid in the stateroom. He and another man came into the cabin and started talking; and there was no place to sit in the stateroom, so I lay down. Before I knew it, I went to sleep."

McPhail looked at her with bleak eyes. "Jenkins came aboard my boat?"

"Yes. He'd been pretty friendly, and I didn't like him, so I hid, and lay down and slept till just now." She smiled in faint appeal. "I hadn't slept much last night, I'm afraid."

"What time was all this?"

"It must have been about half-past six."

Angus opened a door that led through engine room and galley into the forecastle; he left her in the cabin and went that way, and she heard the murmur of voices. Then he returned and closed the door and said simply: "Romeo was here from six o'clock on. He says Jenkins didn't come aboard."

She colored faintly; but if Romeo denied having seen Jenkins, then Romeo—whoever he might be—lied. She wondered why. She asked: "Who is Romeo?"

"Romeo Perrault. My cook."

"Did you tell him what I said?"

"No. They don't know yet that you're aboard."

"Who is Mr. Jenkins, Mr. McPhail? Do you know him?"

Angus hesitated before he answered her. "I never met him till this trip. He's a salesman, sells canned goods, dry groceries. This North Shore and the Labrador is his territory." She realized that he was sufficiently puzzled by what she had told him to forget his anger for a moment. She said, holding his attention:

"Once when I was with him in Moose Bay he asked a man whether he had collected the tickets, and the man said 'yes' and Mr. Jenkins said to let them in. What did that mean?"

His eyes narrowed. "I don't know."

"Why are people afraid of him?"

Without answering, he moved thoughtfully across the cabin, sat down at his desk, took off his battered old hat and pressed his hands for a moment against his eyes. She saw that he was desperately tired. Somewhere he had changed his clothes since Will's funeral; had ridged himself of those wet torn garments in which he had returned from his two days in the wilderness. He sat down and seemed to sag a little; and she said:

"I'm afraid of him. A little." She added: "You see, he wanted me to go with him down to Labrador, Mr. McPhail. With Mrs. Freel as chaperone. And after that, when he came aboard here, I didn't want to see him, so I hid."

He nodded in a weazy way. "So now you're on my hands. I suppose I've got to take you back to Moose Bay. If I don't, they'll turn out the police, planes, coast guard; waste a lot of Government money hunting for you."

"I'm not sure I'll be missed," she reflected. "I checked out of the hotel; so the clerk will think I took the cruise boat. But I had no cabin engaged; so the purser didn't expect me, won't wonder where I am. And I've no family to begin worrying. No one will need to take me back. No one will ask where I am."

He stared at her in a sort of wonder. "Are you a fool? To tell me that? Don't you realize that I've come as near as that"—he snapped his fingers—"to choking the rotten life out of you?"

She waited an instant to be sure of her voice, to steady her pounding pulse. She opened her hands with a simple gesture of surrender. "You're quite free to do as if you were a man, if you want. If you don't want to know I'm aboard, you could easily kill me and drop me over the stern." She tried to laugh. "But if you're going to—why?"

His cheek burned darkly; he made an ironic sound like laughter. "I'm not! If I did, someone would find your luggage. Where did you leave it?"

"On the pier at the head of your ladder. Just a bag and a pack-sack." There was a heap of dunnage against the bulkhead; and she looked toward it instinctively and then exclaimed: "Oh! There's my bag! They must have loaded it aboard with yours, thought it was all yours." She looked at him. "So there's really no reason you shouldn't do what you will like with me, you see. Only, I do wish, before you do anything, you'd tell me why you want to?"

His tone was dry with grief and weariness. "Because you killed my brother!"

Astonishment made her cold. "I?"

The man's face twisted with pain. He threw up his hand in a helpless fashion. "Yes," he said in a weary monotone, "curse your little soul!"

She cried: "Don't! Tell me quickly. Why do you say that? What do you mean?"

"Oh—I suppose it was nothing to you. Will was running the crane across the dock from the White Queen. You staged a private, personal bathing-suit parade on the steamer's bow so three or four hundred men could see your pretty little figure. Will saw you. Naturally he forgot to watch his job, forgot everything but you. While he was goggling at you instead of watching his job—he swung the crane too quickly, and the load pulled him overboard. You might as well have shot him."

Her heart was squeezed in a vise of pain. She whispered helplessly: "I didn't mean to! I didn't mean anything. I was just going swimming!"

Angus laughed, but there was no mirth in the sound. "I've spent these two days alone in the woods, in the rain, thinking what I'd do to you." His tones were flat, without inflection.

She watched him for a moment, forgetting herself. She said quietly: "Let's grow up, Mr. McPhail."

There was something like scorn in her tones and his cheek burned red. "I suppose you think you're safe. You think I'm a gentleman. You think I'll give up my cabin to you, defer to you, protect you?"

"Yes," she assented, "I'm sorry you're so hurt and so grieving; but after all, you're an adult. Now, how can you get rid of me most easily? You don't need to take me back to Moose Bay, do you? There must be places up here, towns, where you can land me."

"Fishing villages. Fishermen. Foolish, hospitable folk, not wise enough to tie a stone around your neck and throw you overboard. They'll take care of you."

"Please don't go on being silly."

He considered her for a moment as dispassionately as though she were under a microscope. "You're so sure of your charm, aren't you? Of your power to command men, to coquet with them, make them fall in love with you?"

Robin rose, touched his arm.

"I'm sorry, Mr. McPhail," she said. "I didn't mean to—speak lightly; to make a joke of this. You must know it isn't a joke to me—to be told I've caused a man to die." She held her voice steady. "I suppose I am a little scared, too. Probably any girl would be."

Her voice broke and she laughed like a sob, and then dropped on the bench again, her head in her arms, crying hard. It felt good. She cried till after some minutes his hand dropped on her shoulder; till he said angrily: "Don't do that! Stop! Stop! I'll take you back to Moose Bay. She did stop, after a moment.

I hid in the stateroom.

She lifted her head and wiped her eyes and sat very quietly, thinking. Back to Moose Bay? Angus, behind her, seemed to be waiting for her assent.

Robin said slowly: "You can drop me somewhere, surely?" She turned toward him; and she thought he seemed smaller, as though anger had gone out of him and left less of him; he seemed small and weary and sad.

He said hopelessly: "I suppose so. You take the stateroom. I'll sleep on the bench here tonight, and I can put you ashore at Beaver River tomorrow afternoon. You can get a boat there day after tomorrow."

"All right. Can I go to bed now? We're both so tired."

He lifted her bags, put them in the stateroom. He came out and she looked at him uncertainly. "Thank you," she said. Then she remembered something. "Mr. McPhail, one of your men did talk to Mr. Jenkins. I don't know whether it was the one you call Romeo or not; but I heard him. They talked French and I don't understand French; but his voice was clear, high, almost feminine."

He nodded. She saw that she was believed. "I know," he assented, his eyes clouding. "But—why the devil should he lie to me about it?"

"I don't know, but—I didn't—life about it. Good night, Mr. McPhail."

When she was half asleep, she remembered a question she must ask him; but it could wait till morning. She felt drained and empty; felt bruised and sore all over, as though his bludgeoned words had been actual blows. Her own grief for Will was forgotten in her pity for his brother. Thinking of Angus, she was suddenly deeply asleep, all perplexities forgotten.

Robin had elected to sleep in the upper of the two berths in the cabin, because there was more room above it than above the lower berth, so that she need not feel cramped and confined. The berth was almost as high as her shoulders; and she slept till someone spoke, near her. She opened her eyes to look up into the countenance of a man she had never seen before, leaning over her, saying something, smiling.

This man had twinkling eyes; and he wore a neat small mustache, and he was definitely a handsome fellow with a good nose and a fine brown cheek, and hair of a rich wavy brown which any girl might have envied. There was a scrubbed look about him, and he was fresh shaven and his hair was brushed. She saw open admiration in his eyes; and she was rather glad that her pajamas were sufficiently substantial so that they might have served as well on the beach as in bed.

Yet she was more amused than resentful. She forgave his bold, audacious eye, and she thought suddenly of Will, to whom it was so easy to forgive much. Will and this man standing beside her bunk with a breakfast tray in his hands were deeply alike. Women would always forgive them easily. Probably if Will had lived and they had married, she would have spent the rest of her life forgiving him his trespasses. The man beside her said something, and she said, "What?" And he spoke again, in French, and by that time she was sufficiently wide awake to smell the strong tea and the crisp toast on his tray. She said, "Oh, thank you." And then, pleased with herself for remembering, "Merci, m'sieu!" She wondered how to tell him to put the tray down somewhere. She preferred not to sit up till he was gone. She tried pointing, pointing at the foot of her bunk, and groping in her memory and said tentatively, "ce jette la!"

He laughed at that. He had excellent teeth. He laughed, and chattered something so fast she could get no word of it; and she decided "jette" was probably the wrong word. Jettison meant to throw something overboard, and a jette was something thrown out from shore into the water like a pier.

"Jette" must be wrong, and he was telling her so. She thought if he talked more slowly she might understand, so she said:

"Plus tard, s'il vous plait?"

But that left him bewildered. He put the tray on the foot of her bunk, bowed elaborately, backed out and closed the door. She wondered about running water and things. Certainly there was nothing of the sort in this small cabin. But she was hungry; too hungry to delay breakfast. Was it breakfast or lunch? Her watch, forgotten last night, had run down. Through the port she saw that the day was overcast, so she could not guess time by the sun.

But whatever the hour, she was hungry; so she ate first and dressed afterward. When she emerged into the cabin, it was deserted; but she opened the door that led through the engine room into the galley, and the handsome Frenchman saw her and came smilingly toward her. She realized he must be Romeo—what might be a friend of Mr. Jenkins. She asked, carefully:

"Ou est la?" She could remember no likely word; so she made a gesture of washing her hands; and he laughed audaciously, and opened the right door and showed her how to pump the water and brought her a towel. She said "Merci, m'sieu," and his eyes twinkled. She thought she and Romeo would get along.

AS BENITO SEES IT
("The war looks different to Italy than it did three years ago," the Rome commentator said.)—News Item.)

How different the picture is! How changed the war today! The more I look at it I ask, "How did it get that way?" The difference is so complete I wonder more and more, As I survey it, can it be? The very same old war?

It seemed to me so very good— Each prospect seemed to please That day in nineteen-forty when I said, "I'll take a piece." Then it was bright and shiny-new With all so very pink; I thought I had a guarantee The darned thing wouldn't shrink.

It looked like such a splendid war It snapped up then and there! There seemed to be no drawback when I said, "Cut me a share!" I didn't wait to have it wrapped, But took it on the fly— And now I'm getting lots of time To sit and wonder why.

It seemed to suit my tastes so well— It looked a perfect fit, But that was three long years ago— Now take a look at it! It went to pieces at the seams And stood no treatment rough; The seat fell out of it at once, It was such shoddy stuff!

No part as represented was; Behold the awful wreck! I guess I made an error when I failed to double-check; "The customer is always right," Ran Salesman Hitler's song . . . But now I've seen an instance when THE CUSTOMER WAS WRONG!

Ducks Grounded, Millions Die; Beavers to Rescue

Wild ducks are temporarily "grounded" in late summer of each year, usually in August. At this turn of the season the young have not yet learned to use their wings and, in molting, the mature birds have lost their propelling wing feathers.

Some years millions of ducks die during this period when nesting grounds suffer drought and birds are stranded away from water. Beavers often come to the rescue . . . save thousands of ducks by damming up outlets to lakes or streams.

Numerous Floating Isles; One Traveled 1,000 Miles

Two Brazilian airmen took down off the coast recently took refuge on a floating island from which they were rescued. Floating islands are frequent in the estuaries of big South American rivers such as the La Plata, Amazon and Orinoco. They were originally parts of low-lying jungle torn away by floods and held together by roots. Sometimes they carry animals and insects as well as vegetation.

Some years ago a floating island two acres in extent was seen drifting in the Gulf Stream off Key West, the southernmost point of Florida. It was thickly covered with bushes, and at one point rose to 30 feet above sea level. That was in May. By the end of August it had passed Cape Cod and was veering toward the Grand Banks of Newfoundland.

One month later it was in mid-ocean, northwest of the Azores, but now it was considerably smaller or than it had been earlier in the year, and after the end of September was not seen again. Gales, no doubt, had broken it up, yet before its destruction it had voyaged a distance of more than a thousand miles.
