David Stouffer, chief forest ranger of the Gallinas district, was here on business several days the first of the week.

Erastus Lacey was here Monday from Ancho and took back an order for the Outlook and the New Mexico Magazine for his brother, Enjah. Thanks to both of you, Lacey.

Our neighbors from Ancho, Cap, Harry and George Straley, were business visitors here last Saturday, returning home in the afternoon. Also Mr. and Mrs. Erastus Lacey were here from their ranch home near Ancho.

Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Trudeau of Oscura, left last Saturday night for Kansas City and returned Wednesday with an adopted son, which the Trudeaus have named Richard Patrick Trudeau. He is an exceptionally bright boy, just six months old and we might add to this, that Richard Patrick will have a good home and as young as he is, we congratulate him on his connection with good neighbors like the Trudeaus.

National War Fund Drive Nears Quota

The American Legion Auxiliary of Ruidoso under the direction of the War Activity Committee reached their quota for the National War Fund. Mrs. Stewart F. Oliver and Mrs. J. V. Hobbie, Ruidoso, reported that $204.60 had been raised.

While Carrizozo has not yet reached the estimated quota, the amount has already reached a high three figure mark. The anticipated amount should be realized at an early date.

Jeff Herron, our Amigo, sent us his check this week for the Outlook - New Mexico magazine subscription. The Herrons are located in Terrell, Texas and send best regards to their many friends here and throughout the county.

Pvt. Robbie Crenshaw, was here on a furlough from Oglethorpe, Ga., visiting the Crenshaw families at White Oaks and friends at Carrizozo. Robbie is head cook at the WAC camp at Oglethorpe and likes the WACS very well. She returned Wednesday night.

In a nice letter from Mrs. Selma Degitz, Anaheim, Calif. she describes the wonderful fall weather she is enjoying there, speaks of feeling fine and sends her kindest regards to all Carrizozo friends. Thanks, Mrs. Degitz, your New Mexico Magazine will be coming, 'pronto'.

George Wandell was here Monday from his home in Nogal. George has a nice residence on the hillside west of Nogal, which gives the Wandells a clear view of the surrounding country for miles around the former mining town. George took us up on the Outlook - New Mexico magazine premium offer.

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Huffmyer, sons Milton, Tom, Bobby and John, daughter Frances Betty, of Duncan, Arizona, came in Wednesday for a deer hunt. They paid their respects to this office, after which they went on to the White Oaks country, where they are well acquainted and where let us hope, they will find deer. If Red and Milton are as good at deer hunting as they are at baseball, they will be successful.

The Entrenched Democrats Work Every Trick in The Bag

The entrenched Democrats worked every trick in the bag to stem the Republican tide on election day. They advanced a different brand of candidate in each contest. But everywhere President Roosevelt's proxies were knocked down.

In New York the New Deal faction named a military figure, Lieutenant General William N. Haskell, retired. He was defeated badly by Joe R. Hanley, an Albany hack politician.

In New Jersey the Democrats picked as their leader an American Federation of Labor official. He was whipped in the gubernatorial race by wealthy Walter E. Edge, Herbert Hoover's ambassador to France and an extreme reactionary. In Philadelphia the Roosevelt crowd put up William C. Bullitt, F. D. R.'s first emissary to Russia after World War I and subsequently ambassador to France. Bill thought he deserved well of the populace but he came in a poor second in the mayoralty race.

In Kentucky the Democrats got down to bread-and-butter politics. For governor they nominated J. Lyter Donaldson, state roads commissioner, an official who can dole out jobs and contracts to the right kind of partisans. He may win out in a recount but such a photo finish amounts to a GOP triumph in this border state.—Exchange.

War Housing

A year or so ago, one Federal agency built 300 houses for "war" workers who would move to Arlington, Va., a Washington suburb.

At the same time, the Army started an airport nearby. Just the other day, the Army decided it needed another "access road" to the airport.

So, what do you think? Yes, it ordered the houses all moved. The houses—costing from $1,000 to $2,000 each—were torn down, for the folks who could buy them were not able to find any way to move them.

Mrs. Robert Grantham of Arizona is here visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Petty.

Born—Saturday, Oct. 30, to Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Vigil, a boy. He has been given the name of John Albert.

Vernon Petty, SP Detective of Tucumcari, spent Wednesday in town visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Petty.

Mrs. R. M. Clayton, of Ancho, and daughter, Mrs. Vern "Speck" Stewart visited Mr. and Mrs. George Goodson Wednesday of this week. "Speck" as he is better known is an Ensign in the navy, and is the champion golfer of New Mexico. The ladies and Claytons left Wednesday for a visit with relatives and friends at Dallas and Ft. Worth.

Odd Fellows' Meeting

Hungry Children Need National War Fund

We are now over halfway through the National War Fund campaign, and it seems an appropriate moment to remind ourselves that the claims upon the conscience and generosity of the American people are not half liquidated. We must, of course, continue to support the USO, which is doing such a good job providing entertainment and relaxation for our soldiers and sailors everywhere. This is the biggest single item in the National War Fund budget, except for a contingent fund which is set up to meet expanded needs which are certain to arise as new countries are occupied by American troops. Relief for the Chinese, the Russians and such of the peoples of the enemy-occupied countries as can be reached is another large item which will touch the hearts of all Americans.

The total which the people of the United States of America is asked to raise for this assortment of appealing and urgent causes is $125,000,000, less than a dollar for every American. That the full amount will be pledged, we have no doubt.

American newspapers are credited with the already success of the Community Chest and War Fund drive for the free space liberally contributed in the interest of this essential activity. The Lincoln County Committees and Solicitors express their gratitude to this newspaper that you for the valuable free space given for the promotion of this National War Fund campaign.

We had a nice letter this week from our old friends and former Carrizozo residents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Todd, now of Franklinton, La., where they are engaged in the livestock business and as Frank puts it, they have been trying to satisfy the appetites of cattle, hogs and everything along that line. They are located on high ground which insures them against floods and the climate is of the very best. The Todds send best regards to Carrizozo friends.

Chaves County Singing Convention

In view of the well-known fact that it is impossible to get candy of that fine grade until the war is over, we are going to do the next best thing. In other words, we are going to make our readers a gift. We will, until January 1, 1944, give the New Mexico Magazine, the regular subscription of which is $1.00, to all old subscribers and new ones alike, this magazine FREE of charge with every paid subscription of $2, which is the regular subscription of the Carrizozo Outlook. To make this more plain, we will give the Carrizozo Outlook and the New Mexico Magazine, both publications for the sum of $2.00. Cash must accompany each order. Here is your chance to get the two publications for the one price, $2.00.

Star Dust

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO
By VIRGINIA VALE
Released by Western Newspaper Union

TIME was when an actor was likely to lose his public if he stayed off the screen for even a short time. Some can't risk it now. Alan Ladd doesn't belong in that class—a large part of the public is remaining faithful to him while he's off serving his country, and refusing to put anyone else in his idol's place. He worked hard for his success—had years of encouragement but few good roles, and put in time working in radio before he got a good role in "Joan of Paris." Then he tested for "This Gun for Hire," and when Paramount executives saw his test they didn't bother about testing anyone else. His success in that role was like Marlene Dietrich's in "Morocco" instantaneous.

Gary Moore, who co-stars with Jimmy Durante over both CBS and NBC, will make his picture debut under David Selznick's sponsorship, and will be developed as "a sort of combination of Fred Allen and Bob Hope"—which should be something. It'll be Allen on words and Hope on the slant of his delivery.

Howard Petrie, announcer of the Moore Durante show, had both Paramount and RKO after him with a long term acting contract. He stands six feet four and weighs 240 pounds—right up with Paramount's Bill Edwards, of "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay."

Hobegarde, the new radio star who has the "Beat the Band" show on Wednesday evenings, introduced a song called "She a Got Barn on Her Shoulders and Stars in Her Eyes." The WAC couldn't resist the title so adopted the ditty for their official recruiting song.

Pompey's emergence into front-page importance because of the fighting around Naples inspired RKO to release its spectacular "The Last Days of Pompeii," originally released in 1935. It cast in Helen Hanft, Basil Rathbone, and Louis Calhern.

Dick Haymes' first tests at 20th Century Fox turned out so well that his part in "Four Jills and a Jeep," with Carole Landis, was made bigger and bigger. Meanwhile, his radio sponsor pays for the lad's popularity. Half the program comes from New York, with a full orchestra, chorus, and Jim Ameche featured—another orchestra and chorus goes on in Hollywood, accompanying Haymes' songs.

Florence Flynn, head of Lucw's Telephone Information Service in New York, says that recently her office has been swamped by inquiries about Metro's two reel short, "Heavenly Music." A tale of a five muses who can't get into heaven until he convinces a jury of famous composers that saving in real music says the gets more calls asking where it's playing than she does on feature productions.

It's taken 14 years for Hollywood to get around to remaking "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," done in 1929 as a silent. Benedict Boguesau, a business man who bought Hollywood's General Service Studios a year and a half ago, bought the screen rights and put Rowland V. Lee in a director—and now the picture's timed right to coincide with the work of the Committee on Inter-American Affairs.

The Ellery Queen cast likes to be heard above the incidental music of the organ, except when guest detectives turn up early, during the dress rehearsal—then, when the crime's solution is given, the organ fairly roars, drowning out all voices.

ODDS AND ENDS—Tennor Bill Dey, discovered by Groucho Marx in his radio program's chorus, and then given the solo singing part, has been signed to a 26-week contract. . . Looks as if "Blondie"—Penny Singleton—would soon be kicking her pretty legs again in music comedy films—she was originally brought to Hollywood because of her success in musicals on the Broadway stage. . . Maureen O'Hara, last seen in RKO's "The Fallen Sparrow," and Paul Henreid will co-star in that studio's "The Spanish Main." . . Ray Atoff, a star on radio's "Grand Ole Opry," may be a candidate for governor in Tennessee's elections next year.

American Battle Planes Must Be World's Best, Is Pledge of Designers and Manufacturers

U. S. Air Superiority Result of Constantly Improved Machines

The test of battle—the only valid test of the performance of combat aircraft—has by now resulted in a number of box scores which reveal the pattern of accomplishment of American combat planes.

"In every theater of operations, American airmen and American planes have met the challenge of our enemies and outfought them by scores never worse than two to one in our favor," said Gen. Henry H. Arnold, commanding general of the army air forces. "All types of American fighter planes have shot out of the skies the best interceptors both Germany and Japan have put against them." This has been true since January, 1942, when our planes were outnumbered on practically all fronts.

While much of this favorable fighting ratio is attributable to the excellent training, versatility and courage of our pilots, a good part is traceable to the mechanical superiority of our planes. Constant improvement is the watchword. Even though production schedules must be delayed, our aircraft must be the best possible, say army and navy air corps officers.

Here is a summary of the chief combat planes which have run up the high scores in our favor from a report just released by the Office of War Information:

Fighters.
V-type liquid-cooled engines are found in most fighter models because the long, slender shape of a liquid-cooled engine is more adaptable to streamlined fighter design. It allows better vision, and has a smaller frontal area for the same horsepower. But it will be noted that in the P-47, where 2,000 horsepower was desired, an air-cooled engine was used. The same is true of the navy's Vought F4U (Corsair) and the new Grumman F6F Hellcat. The new Grumman F6F Hellcat. The new Grumman F6F Hellcat.

The navy's fighter program is large. An airplane carrier carries torpedo planes, bombers and fighters, and of these the fighters are needed to protect the other planes and the carrier itself. Fighters also protect land bases. In the South Pacific, army P-39's are doing this latter job along with navy fighters.

In the opinion of the materiel command, the Curtiss P-40, or Warhawk, has reached the limit of its developmental possibilities. It has gone through numerous type changes, the most basic being the P-40F when the engine was changed from Allison to Merlin.

Although the latest model P-39 ceiling and general performance have been improved, the P-39 has shared the climb-deficiency of the P-40. It is being supplanted by a new model now under construction, with a low drag wing and a two-stage Allison supercharged engine which will make it an efficient plane at any altitude up to 30,000 or 40,000 feet. The greatest efficiency of the P-39 models has been below 15,000 feet. Like the P-39, the new plane will be equipped with cannon.

Low Altitude Fighter.
Although superior to the P-40 and P-39, the original P-51 or Mustang is also only a low and medium-altitude fighter. Now in production is a new P-51 with a highly supercharged, Packard built, Rolls-Royce Merlin engine, similar to the Merlin 61 engine in the newest Spitfires. Its performance is reported as even better than that famous ship's. The new engine gives the plane the highest ceiling (up to 40,000 feet) and the highest speed (well over 400 miles an hour) of any fighter in existence.

The A-36 (Invader), the fighter-bomber version of the P-51, has seen heavy service in the Mediterranean theater, and its best features are being incorporated in the new P-51, which will replace both the A-36 and the old P-51.

The latest model of the Lockheed P-38 or Lightning is a fast, powerful fighter that has been given greatly increased horsepower in its Allison engine, improved pilot's vision, and improved intercooling for better high-altitude performance. It outperforms the Zero and later Jap fighters at all altitudes.

The P-38 has always possessed the versatility that is coming increasingly to characterize all combat aircraft. It has excelled at low-altitude strafing, high-altitude fighting, and as a particularly long-range bomber escort. Its distinctive silhouette, with its twin tail booms, has been seen over four major fighting fronts. The newest fighter at present in combat, the P-47 or Thunderbolt, has been currently rolling up a score of approximately four to one in its contests with Messerschmitts and high-flying Focke-Wulfs over England, France and the Low Countries. Armed with eight .50 caliber machine-guns, and heavily armor-plated, it is capable of flying over 400 miles an hour and of reaching an altitude of 40,000 feet.

High Scorer for Navy.
The Grumman Wildcat or F4F, a navy fighter, with Pratt & Whitney Twin Wasp air-cooled engine and with folding wings for compact stowage on aircraft carriers, has run up many high scores in Mediterranean. Although the F4F will continue to be manufactured for use on auxiliary carriers and for training, it is now being supplemented by a new plane, the Grumman F6F (Hellcat).

This newest member of the navy's fighter family is described by the navy as "an answer to the prayers of our pilots!"

A big brother of the famous Grumman Wildcat, the Hellcat has better range, speed, climb, maneuverability and altitude. It has a 2,000 horsepower engine as compared with the Wildcat's 1,200. It has a low wing, improved armor, and a new flexible type gasoline tank which is an improvement over the ordinary puncture-proof type. It carries .50 caliber machine guns.

The Corsair or F4U also has a 2,000 horsepower Pratt & Whitney engine and is easily distinguishable by its inverted gull wing. The Corsair has until recently been the chief navy fighter in the South Pacific. Now Hellcats are beginning to join it in large numbers.

Heavy, Four-Engine Bombers.
The newest models of both the Boeing B-17 (Flying Fortress) and the Consolidated B-24 (Liberator) bombers are equipped with new defensive armament in the form of turret gun installations. External bomb-racks can increase the potential bomb capacity of the B-17 to 17,000 pounds. Nevertheless, this plane has a smaller bomb capacity at long range than the B-24. The most accurate comparison, perhaps, is to say that load-

HELLCAT—Successor to the famous Grumman "Wildcat" is the new "Hellcat." It has folding wings, as shown in the picture below, so that it will take up a minimum of space on the deck of a carrier. The Hellcat is a standard fighter now in both the U. S. and British navies. It has more power and climbs faster than the Wildcat.

ed with 2,600 gallons of gasoline the B-17 can carry 6,000 pounds of bombs (the usual load carried over targets in western Europe), whereas the B-24, with 2,000 gallons, can carry 8,000 pounds of bombs. Consequently the B-17 is being concentrated in the western European theater and the B-24 is being used chiefly elsewhere—in the Middle East, in India, China and Australia—for longer range operations. B-24's have made round-trip flights up to 2,600 miles; the raid on the Ploesti oil fields in Rumania from bases in Egypt, the raid on the Messerschmitt works at Wiener-Neustadt, and raids in the Pacific on Wake, Paramushiru and Surabaya. The B-24 is used by the navy under the designation PB4Y-1. Medium, Light and Dive Bombers.

New models of the two-engine Tokyo raider, the North American B-25 (Mitchell), are equipped with heavier armament and possess increased speed and range. The B-25 is the chief medium bomber in the present program, production of the Martin B-26 (Marauder) being tapered off. B-25's, powered with Wright Cyclone engines, are flying on 11 fronts, are used by both army and navy for anti-submarine patrol service, and have scored particular successes with skip-bombing.

The Douglas A-20 (Havoc) is the principal light army bomber in the program until the totally new, advanced light bomber mentioned above comes into production. The newest Havoc, used by the army for low-level bombing, is fitted with a power turret and with armament for ground strafing.

The A-24, army version of the Douglas SBD (Dauntless) dive-bomber, is now being produced in decreasing numbers, chiefly for training purposes.

Grumman Avenger.
The Grumman Avenger, the navy's carrier-based torpedo-bomber, has completely supplanted the Douglas TBD (Devastator). It carries machine gun as well as torpedo or bombs, and has destroyed many Japanese vessels in the Pacific. Chief among the navy's patrol bombers are three flying boats and two land planes. The land planes are the Consolidated PB4Y-1 and the Vega PV-1. The flying boats are the Consolidated PBY (Catalina), Consolidated PB2Y (Coronado), and Martin PBM (Mariner). All three flying boats are used for transport purposes as well as for patrol and bombing operations. The two-engine PBY, the oldest, slowest and smallest, the ship which first spotted the Jap forces on the Aleutians, is still being built, still dive-bombing and strafing enemy shipping and receiving pilots who have been downed at sea. The four-engine PB2Y has double the horsepower of the PBY. The PBM does good work in anti-submarine coastal patrol and long-range reconnaissance. Not even the newest navy flying boats have speeds much above 200 miles an hour, but all are required to be able to land in a choppy sea.

The Vega PV-1 (a navy adaptation of the twin-engine Vega B-34 "Ventura" bomber) is the navy's chief land-based anti-submarine patrol plane. It carries depth charges or a torpedo, is heavily armored, and is now often used in preference to flying boats in anti-submarine operations because of its greater speed.

The Consolidated PB4Y-1 is a four-engine land-based bomber and, as previously mentioned, is used for long-range bombing missions and for anti-submarine patrol work.

Design and Technical Improvements.
Aeronautical engineering demands experimentation with numerous designs in order to obtain several high-performance aircraft of the required types.

But on the other hand, the constant improvements being made on models already in use, and the continuing addition of totally new airplanes to our forces, slow down the rate of production.

Nevertheless, even at this stage in the war, when clear-cut air superiority over the enemy has been achieved, there is no assurance that the planes which have achieved it are superior to planes which the enemy may produce tomorrow. Changes in strategic and tactical problems, too, and changes of terrain over which fighting takes place, bring with them new demands for aircraft design and equipment. Even planes which have run up high box-scores must be constantly improved and replaced. The make-up of our air fleet has never been static, and is not to become so.

LITTLE ELBERT—A DRAMA OF ANY HOME

"I want you to see Elbert; he's a dear. Just five years old next week," said Mrs. Twitchell, as her old friend, Grace Tooker, called. "Elbert!" yelled Mrs. Twitchell. "Oh, Elbert-t-t!"

There was no answer, beyond something strangely like Choctaw screams among the shrubs. Mrs. Twitchell called again, and after a while Elbert appeared. He was immediately preceded by a crash of glass, as an old tin can full of stones came through the window and landed at Miss Tooker's feet.

"Hand grenade!" exclaimed Little Elbert, as he rushed in, grinning triumphantly.

"Elbert, this is Miss Tooker," began Mrs. Twitchell.

"You're dead!" declared the child, addressing that lady and pointing to what he had explained was a deadly weapon.

"Isn't he cute?" said the visitor. "Bang! Bang!" barked Elbert. "I got you right between the eyes."

"Now, Elbert, where are your manners?" asked Mrs. Twitchell.

"Boom!" yelled the child, pointing some curious contraption at his mother. "Watch out! It's a bazooka! You're both dead now. Boom! Boom!"

"Stop it, child! Miss Tooker isn't dead and neither am I."

"You'd better get back into those foxholes," insisted Elbert. "Err-rr-z-z-z-whr-rr-rr! Bombers away!"

"Elbert Twitchell, stop that nonsense this minute!" ordered Mrs. Twitchell sternly. "You're in the house now."

"Wham-m-m! Bam-m! House is gone. Direct hit," said Elbert.

Mrs. Twitchell finally got him by an ear and made the child shake hands with Miss Tooker.

"Isn't he a fine little man!" said Miss Tooker, unconvincedly.

"Whish-ss-sh!" hissed the child, pulling a piece of hose from his belt and pointing it at both women.

"Fall down! It's liquid fish-h! You'll all burn up. Whish-ss-sh!"

"He goes on like that all the time," sighed Mrs. Twitchell.

"I know how it is," said Miss Tooker, who felt somewhat battle worn. "There are three little boys next door to our house, and they took Napier 40 hours ahead of the army. One of them broke a leg last week jumping off the barn with a tablecloth for a parachute."

"All they think of is Commando stuff," said Mrs. Twitchell. "Elbert tells us he isn't Elbert Twitchell, he's Elbert Mountbatten."

"Just five years old this week, eh?" mused Miss Tooker.

"On Tuesday."

"I must send him a birthday present."

"I bought him two lovely children's books, 'Triumph Through Fire Power' and 'Skill With the Bayonet.'"

"I saw one in the bookstore window he'll love," said Miss Tooker. "What was it?"

"How to Cripple an Adversary at Close Range," said Miss Tooker.

"Ack-ack-ack! Bang! Bang!" came echoing from the back yard.

"Ack-ack-ack!"

LINES ON AN OVERWORKED TEAM

"We're working on it" used to be an explanation put:

And "we are looking into it" Was simple, straight and flat; But now a new word's all the rage

And swivel chairers purr, To any sort of inquiry, "It's being PROCESSED, sir."

You ask about your fuel-oil book, And seek a "yes" or "no"; "That's being processed" is the gag That ever seems to flow;

You cannot get the bare facts on Your milk, gas, coal or meat; "The office is processing it," Comes through the summer heat.

"Hey, what about my two boiled eggs?"

You ask a waiter, and "They're being processed," he replies,

"I trust you understand,"

A phone call takes a half a day— "I'm waiting," you complain;

"It's being processed," is the way That central will explain.

One day you kick the bucket and You reach St. Peter's gate;

But no one knows about you and You have to stand and wait;

But finally it's all explained, As all the angels sing, "We have your application, but We're processing the thing!"

ON THE HOME FRONT

With RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THIS bag was planned as a gift for someone who was finding days in bed difficult enough without having books, magazines and writing materials scattered about. The bag shown here was made of a remnant of heavy cotton upholstery materials in tones of green with a touch of red in the pattern. The red was repeated in the sateen lining. The sketch gives all the dimensions and shows how the lining and the outside part were made. A coat hanger was cut down to measure 12 inches from end to end and was placed between the lining and the outside; these being stitched together around the top, as illustrated.

NOTE—This bedside bag is but one of thirty-two useful things to make for the home, that are illustrated with detailed directions in BOOK 8 of the series prepared for readers. The price of BOOK 8 is 15 cents. Send your order to:

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Ceylon, Africa and tropical America are expected to provide the U. S. with 54,000 long tons of crude rubber during 1943. In 1939, it is estimated, 499,473 long tons of crude were imported by this country.

Para, Brazil, was the first great rubber center. Founded in 1612, it became an important port for foreign trade about 1775. A hundred years later it was the rubber capital of the world.

Rubber obtained from a native wild vine in the Belgian Congo made Leopold II of Belgium wealthy during the 1890-1910 period. Plantation rubber development killed the Congo vine boom.

degree) oven about 10 minutes or until a delicate brown.

A nice type of cookie to have on hand during these times, is this one for old-fashioned gingersnaps. The recipe makes 10 to 12 dozen "snaps" and the dough keeps indefinitely in the refrigerator so that it can be used and made up into cookies as needed.

- Gingersnaps.
(Makes 10 to 12 dozen)
- 1 cup molasses
 - 1/2 cup shortening
 - 3/4 cups sifted flour
 - 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
 - 1/2 teaspoon soda
 - 1 tablespoon ginger

Heat the molasses over low heat to the boiling point. Put the shortening in a large mixing bowl, pour the hot molasses over the shortening. Stir until shortening is melted. Sift the flour, ginger, soda and salt together and add to molasses mixture. Mix thoroughly. Form into rolls on slightly floured waxed paper and chill in refrigerator. Slice very thin and bake on a greased cookie sheet in a hot (425-degree) oven 8 to 10 minutes.

Having friends over for dinner? They'll enjoy this light soufflé put together quickly and easily with mushroom soup and chicken.

- *Chocolate Pinwheels.
(Makes 3 1/2 dozen)
- 1 1/4 cups sifted flour
 - 1/2 teaspoon double-acting baking powder
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - 1/2 cup butter or margarine
 - 1/2 cup sugar
 - 1 egg yolk, unbeaten
 - 3 tablespoons milk
 - 1 square unsweetened chocolate, melted

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift again. Cream butter until light, add sugar gradually and cream together until light and fluffy. Add egg yolk and beat well. Add flour alternately with milk, mixing well after each addition. Divide dough into two parts. To one part, add chocolate and blend. Chill dough until firm enough to roll. Roll each half into a rectangular sheet, 1/2 inch thick, and place chocolate sheet on top. Then roll as for jelly roll. Chill overnight or until firm enough to slice. Cut into eight-inch slices. Bake on an ungreased baking sheet in hot oven (400 degrees) 5 minutes or until done.

A delicious soufflé with a few piping hot biscuits and honey makes a lovely dinner for a chilly night. Simple though it is, it will satisfy your company well.

- *Thrifty Souffles.
(Serves 6)
- 3 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - 1 can mushroom soup
 - 1 cup chopped chicken
 - 3 egg yolks, beaten until thick and lemon-colored
 - 3 egg whites, beaten stiff

Combine tapioca, salt and mushroom soup, of consistency to serve, in top of double boiler. Place over rapidly boiling water and cook 8 to 10 minutes after water boils again, stirring frequently. Add chicken and stir until mixed. Cool slightly while beating eggs. Add egg yolks and mix well. Fold into egg whites. Turn into greased baking dish. Place in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate (250-degree) oven 50 minutes or until soufflé is formed.

THE SANCTITY OF THE HOME

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:14; Matthew 5:27-30; Mark 10:2-12. GOLDEN TEXT—Blessed are the pure in heart; for they shall see God.—Matthew 5:8.

As the divinely appointed center of man's life, the home holds a place of such importance that it is the special target of Satan's offensive. That has always been true, but it seems that in recent years the onslaught against the home has been intensified.

Books, plays, movies, magazines, all contribute their filthy efforts to break down all sense of moral responsibility. Sex is magnified, and not in any useful or normal sense, but rather for the stimulating of unholy desires and purposes, the breaking down of Christian standards of living, and the ultimate prostitution of the most sacred of all human relationships to the lowest level of which animals might well be ashamed.

All this means that this lesson should be taught with a holy boldness and plainness which will make it effective for God in our homes.

We do not like to talk about adultery and related sins. We must speak with care and tact, but perhaps the time has come for some straightforward dealing with an unpleasant situation.

I. Protect the Purity of the Home (Exod. 20:14; Matt. 5:27-30).

Any violation of the divine plan for the marriage of one man and one woman, in loving communion for the founding and maintenance of the home, is a direct violation of the law of God.

It is also a violation of the law of man. It brings serious results in the destruction of the home, and in the ruin of individual life—physical, moral and spiritual.

The words of Jesus broaden the interpretation of the commandment to cover all sexual impurity in thought, word, or deed.

We are to be firm and definite in our dealing with this temptation to moral uncleanness even though it be as painful as tearing out an eye or losing a hand. The command here is not necessarily to be interpreted literally. Tearing out an eye will not help if there is lust in the heart. The point is, go to the root of the matter, and get rid of it even if it hurts. Most of us are far too easy on our sinful impulses. We daily with them when we should destroy them.

II. Recognize Marriage as a Divine Institution (Mark 10:2-8).

The Pharisees, who had devised some ingenious schemes for getting rid of an undesired wife, wanted to get Jesus involved in the question. They put him up against Moses who had allowed divorce.

Jesus made it clear that this was not in accord with God's plan and only took place because of their sinful hardness of heart.

As a proper background for the discussion of divorce He set up the divine origin of marriage. He made it clear that marriage was ordained by God, and that it involves a holy union of two individuals which makes them one.

All those who look forward to marriage should realize that it is not a casual thing, or a merely temporary legal contract. It is a union for life—be it for better or worse, in sickness or health, in prosperity or adversity. All who are married should highly regard their sacred vows.

The high place of marriage in Christian teaching dignifies that relationship and denies the misleading and destructive theories of men.

III. Follow God's Law on Divorce (Mark 10:9-12).

Failure to observe God's law in these matters may involve a person in the guilt of gross sin. This passage and others teach that divorce is to be permitted on the one ground of adultery (Matt. 5:32).

Divorce and remarriage other than on grounds permitted by God involves the parties in the sin of adultery. Men may make laws based on the civil contract of marriage which provide differently, but man cannot remove marriage from its place as a divine institution, nor can he add to or take away from God's law concerning it.

Aware, as we are, of the laxness of some branches of the church in such matters, and the almost entire lack of standards in the world, we cannot but present the plain teachings of our Lord and urge every reader to follow the commandment of God's Word.

There can be no question that divorce is a major evil in our day. Statistics are positively shocking, but they are cold and quickly forgotten. But who can fail to see, and who can forget, the awful woe brought into American home life by divorce.

Bad as it is, the awful effect on parents is nothing compared to the nervous, moral and spiritual shock which comes to children in broken homes. And that problem is everywhere.

Where Help Counts Most

"Many families today are in trouble brought on or heightened by the absence of a father, a son, a husband. Many service-men need a link with home to know the heartwarming assurance that someone is interested, will do for his family what needs to be done in his absence.

The Army and Navy have asked the Red Cross to be that link, and to that end the Red Cross maintains a worldwide two-way system of communication between field directors on the war fronts and Home Service on the home front.

The organization which makes messages immediately effective is a triumph of planning, but the spirit which acts on those messages is a triumph of humanitarianism, channeled through Home Service to reach every serviceman's family."

Should any family of servicemen have need of assistance from the Red Cross, they are requested to contact the following individuals who represent the Red Cross in the several communities:

Mrs. Edith Crawford, Carrizozo; Mrs. W. E. Knott, Three Rivers; Mrs. W. R. Belden, Corona; Mrs. Wm. Hart, Ruidoso; Mrs. Kivas Tully, Picacho; Mrs. Sarah Fisher, Capitan; Mr. R. S. Fagan, Ft. Stanton, R. S. Fagan, Chairman.

5 WARTIME HINTS ON CARING FOR Your TELEPHONE

REPAIR PARTS are scarce and materials for new equipment have gone to war. So we ask that you guard your present telephone with extra care. Listed below are five most common causes of damage:

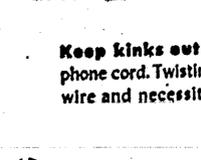

1 A telephone on a narrow shelf or stand is in danger. Keep it on a wide, firm table or desk.

2 When painting, protect your telephone with cloth or paper. When washing floors or woodwork protect the cord and wire from getting wet.

3 Do not let the cord loop over drawer handles or knobs - opening may pull telephone over - closing may damage cord.

4 Keep kinks out of your telephone cord. Twisting may injure the wire and necessitate replacement.

5 Replace the receiver carefully - banging it down may injure delicate mechanism. Be sure it is placed on support carefully to avoid causing busy signal.

Allies Prepare Heavy Blows in Italy; Jugo-Slav Guerrillas Threaten Nazis Despite Outbreaks of Factional War; New Cattle Subsidy Plan Is Announced

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.) Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Riding in jeep, Gen. Dwight Eisenhower (left) and Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark pause during front line tour to chat with British soldiers on Bren gun carrier.

EUROPE

Prepare Attack in Italy

Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark's Fifth Army edged into position for a grand assault upon the Germans' new defenses along the 2,500-foot high Maseco ridge in southern Italy, while the Nazis prepared to meet the charge by massing artillery and mortars on the front.

On the Adriatic side of the battle-line to the east, Gen. Bernard Montgomery's Eighth Army also drew up into position for the next big blow by crossing the short Trigno river at several points.

Meanwhile there were indications that the Germans might be planning a strong counter-offensive of their own somewhere in central Italy. Allied reconnaissance reported the steady flow of Nazi troops and materiel from the north toward the battle zone. No such counter-offensive was expected, however, unless the Germans' defenses weakened Allied attackers and drew them into open country where Tank Specialist Erwin Rommel could maneuver armor.

Nazis Fight Guerrillas

Peaky guerrilla activity in Jugo-Slavia commanded the attention of the Germans, with Marshal Rommel dispatching strong mechanized forces to quell the armed bands disrupting communications and destroying industrial plants.

But the effectiveness of Jugo-Slav guerrillas was threatened by another outbreak of factional discussion between the forces of King Peter's government and the new so-called "freedom army" of Tito Broz, which fought independently.

While the two political organizations reportedly have been harassing the Germans from one end of Jugoslavia to the other, they also have been accusing one another of collaborating with the Nazis. Broz' faction sentenced 17 persons to death for such collaboration, including a former Jugo-Slav general.

In attempting to wipe out the two guerrilla armies, the German armored columns drove into the hilly country to which Jugo-Slav riflemen retire for cover.

TAXES

Plan 2 Billion More

Opposed to any form of sales tax, the House ways and means committee was prepared to report a new tax bill for congressional approval, yielding only two billion dollars of revenue instead of the 10 1/2 billion dollars asked by the treasury.

Of the two billion dollars, 630 million would be raised by new liquor taxes. Levies on spirits would be boosted to $10 a gallon, on beer to $3 per barrel, and on wine from five cents to $1 a gallon.

Other revenue would be obtained by increasing postal rates to three cents on local mail, air-mail to 10 cents an ounce, money orders 10 to 37 cents, insured mail 10 to 70 cents, and COD mail 24 cents to $2.40. General admissions would be raised to three cents for every 10 cents; electric light bulbs and tubes would be taxed to 15 per cent of the retail price, and there would be a levy of 20 per cent of the charge on bowling, and $20 per billiard table.

If a sales tax were enacted, the CIO had warned that it would demand wage increases to cover additional purchase costs.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

ORE: Low-grade mines producing metals other than iron and copper were ordered closed down by the War Production Board. Officials explain that production of several vital metals has outstripped the need. Prerogative prices to some mine owners were withdrawn, and imports of some ores banned. Hardest hit are "war baby" mines yielding bauxite, lead, chrome and molybdenum.

CATTLE

New Subsidy

To stabilize livestock prices at present market levels, the government announced a new subsidy plan for processors and slaughterers.

Under the program, subsidies of 50 cents will be paid on common cattle selling between $10 and $11 per hundredweight, and for cutter and canner classes ranging from $7.45 to $8.45 per hundredweight.

For good grade cattle selling between $14.25 to $15.25 per hundredweight, a $1.45 subsidy will be paid, while for medium class stock bringing from $12 to $13, a 90 per cent grant will be made. To discourage production of choice to prime beef, a subsidy of $1 will be paid on grades from $15 to $10 per hundredweight.

To slaughterers who do not process by-products, a new subsidy of 60 cents per hundredweight was established. Slaughterers buying cattle below or above the stated prices will have their subsidies reduced by a similar amount.

PACIFIC

New Blows

While Lieut. Gen. George C. Kenney's air force continued pounding Japanese outposts in the Southwest Pacific, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz promised the seizure of islands which would give the U. S. fleet control of the enemy's home waters.

No sooner had Admiral Nimitz, as commander in chief of the Pacific fleet, made his statement than it was reported that U. S. forces opened a drive on the Japs' last important stronghold of Bougainville in the Solomons by landing—on Mono Island to the south of the big base.

Aiming at feeder points which have been supplying Jap positions in the Southwest Pacific, Lieutenant General Kenney's airmen have pulverized such strategic shipping centers as Raboul on New Britain island, on which 600 tons of bombs were dumped in a five-day period.

The WLB's proposal differed from the contract drawn between the Illinois Coal Operators and the UMW under which the miners would receive a $1.50 daily pay increase, with compensation for underground travel time.

Acceptance of the WLB proposal would result in wage increases of as much as $10 per week for 4 1/2 hours, it was said, while it was feared rejection would lead to a general mine strike with presidential intervention.

FRUIT: The air lines will haul fresh fruit in quantity after the war, predicts Sigmund Janas, president of Colonial Airlines. He believes that this swift transportation will eliminate the need of heavy packing and icing.

NORMANDIE: The former French luxury liner, the Normandie, has been completely refitted and turned over to the navy.

VETS:

Schooling Asked

Following recommendations of a committee of educators, President Roosevelt asked congress to appropriate one billion dollars for schooling of vets with six months service after the war.

Any qualified man or woman would be eligible for one year of study in a college or other educational institution, with the government paying the tuition and $50 living expenses for every single person. A married man would receive $75, with $10 extra for each child.

For persons with special aptitudes, it was proposed, that the government finance their education up to three years. States would be in control of the program, certifying vets for assistance. About 8 per cent of the personnel of the armed services would take advantage of the educational opportunity, it was said.

RUSSIA:

Reds Tighten Noose

German armies fought desperately to draw themselves from the noose Russia's surging forces were attempting to pull tight in the great bend of the Dnieper river.

To the south, the Reds spilled over the flat steppes west of fallen Melitopol, and raced to thwart Germany's withdrawal of its forces from the Crimea.

Action along the whole southern front centered around the Russians' attempts to surround and smash the German armies threatened with encirclement from the rear, and the Nazis' desperate efforts to hold off the Reds with heavy counter-attacks while the bulk of their troops dropped back to the west, on the edge of the 1941 European border.

FOOD:

Margarine Tax

Because of growing opposition from the dairy bloc, a stiff fight loomed in congress over the proposal to eliminate federal taxes and restrictions on margarine.

While more consumption of whole milk was advocated, with "good" margarine substituted for butter, Representative August Andresen (Minn.) declared additional feed would supply sufficient milk for all purposes.

Consultant to the food and drug administration, Dr. A. J. Carlson of the University of Chicago, stated that present "good" margarine has nutritional values equal to butter, and tax laws strike at the poorer classes in most need of adequate nutrition. When the margarine tax was first enacted, he said, there was occasional fraud in the sale of the product and there was less information on nutrition.

Because cottonseed oil is an ingredient of margarine, there were charges that the congressional cotton bloc was interested in repealing the tax and restrictions.

INSURANCE:

Monopoly Question

With the controversy of whether or not the insurance business constitutes a monopoly brought up again with the Supreme court scheduled to pass on the question, Attorney General Francis Biddle urged congress to defeat a bill designed to exempt insurance companies from provisions of the anti-trust laws.

Under terms of the bill, the anti-trust laws would not be construed as regulating insurance, or as impairing state regulation of that business.

"It would establish a dangerous precedent," Biddle said, "under which other groups of special interests might apply for and receive immunity from the anti-trust laws; thus by a process of attrition, whittling away the gains made toward preserving and strengthening the system of free enterprise."

LIFT BLACKOUT:

Coasts Affected

Coastal cities can turn their lights on again. The war and navy departments have withdrawn the order requiring a partial blackout along the waterfronts, to prevent our ships being silhouetted against the sky. Such clearly outlined ships were an easy target for prowling submarines.

Because the submarine peril is much reduced, the military officials believe the blackout no longer necessary, it was announced. The order was effective November 1.

Politics Seen as Key in Farm Subsidy Problem

Acceptable Compromise Lacking; Presidential Veto Forecast for Any Bill Banning Use Of 'Economic Stimulant.'

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

The administration is in the midst of one of its fiercest contests to "hold the line" against stabilization. It is the old question of subsidies for farm products and it looks like a fight to the death. The house agriculture committee, with Representative Steagall and others swinging over to the Republican side, is backing the bill which would renew the appropriations for the Commodity Credit Corporation and cut out the subsidies to processors, distributors and some direct cash aid to farmers. The present legislation expires in January. A presidential veto is taken for granted for any bill banning the use of subsidies. Administration supporters believe that such a veto can be sustained—but they see a tough, bitter fight ahead.

The key to the whole difficulty is violent partisanship. Successful politics is like successful living—in the family, in the community, in the world—it depends on the ability to compromise. In this fight, there seems to be no one able to work out an acceptable compromise. Already the feeling is bitter.

Cost of Living

Complicating the problem is, as usual, labor's insistence that the cost of living has gone up higher than statistics show, that the Little Steel formula is no longer a fair yardstick for wage increases since decisions of the War Labor board, plus insistence of the director of stabilization, hold down wages while the administration has not carried out its promises to roll back the living costs.

The farm organizations and the processors and the distributors oppose the roll-back. They don't put it that way. They say they oppose subsidies for rolling back consumer prices. They argue that subsidies to increase production and support prices in a free market are all right—and are horses of another color. The President sees no difference. Subsidies which permit the government to buy up commodities or make loans at a minimum price when the market price dips below that figure are all right, say the farm bloc, but they claim, the "new" subsidies go further than that in that they mean payments direct to the processor and distributor and also buying and selling by the government. This, they claim, is in itself inflationary because it means payments out of the treasury. They say they don't believe that the money will get back to the farmer, that it means "grocery bills paid by the government," with very little real saving to the consumer, and finally, which is the real rub, it means too much government control.

But to the President, it is subsidies or inflation. At a recent press and radio conference, the President said that he got the head of the Farm Bureau federation, Edward O'Neil, to admit that letting prices go up in a free market, which the government says would have to be the alternative of the subsidy if the farmer was to get the incentive for increased production, would mean a little inflation. The President then told the story about the man who took just a "little" cocaine. He soon became an addict.

It was then that a woman reporter, known for her spicy questions, asked if the President didn't think that if his measure was carried we might become subsidy addicts. The President didn't seem to think so. He pointed out that agriculture has been getting subsidies since 1933.

Whether or not there is danger in any of this mild economic stimulant which the administration feels is a wartime necessity, everybody admits that runaway inflation must be avoided if possible. The whole complicated machinery of stabilization was created to prevent it.

The proponents of the subsidy plan say that the fight against them is purely political. They say the Republicans naturally take the side opposite to the administration because they can win some farm votes as champions of higher prices to farmers if they take this stand. On the other hand, they believe that the anti-subsidy bill will be vetoed eventually and the Democrats say the veto will be sustained. If so, the Republicans will not be criticized for supporting a measure which is defeated. And the Democratic support in the house agriculture committee, subsidy supporters say, was "bought" by allowing the present subsidies for the products grown in districts of the congressmen who supported the bill, to stand.

The administration followers say that it seems strange for the Republicans to raise a cry against subsidies when tariffs are subsidies. They mention the sugar "subsidy."

As for complaint that the subsidy on agricultural products would not reach the farmer, they call attention to the milk subsidies at present in operation where the man who milks the cow gets the subsidy direct.

Meanwhile, we know that the cost of living has already gone up. We know that we need full production of foodstuffs. We know that many farmers can't get the feed required to raise the stock or to fatten it to its most efficient weight for slaughter.

Payment of any money out by the treasury does mean more money in circulation but the subsidy proponents point to the kind of inflation we get when prices aren't controlled. The administration says it is better to control a few processors and distributors, even if Uncle Sam has to stoop into their books to see he isn't cheated, than to let that vicious spiral of prices and living costs start to mount.

In the next weeks you will hear a lot more of these arguments.

Food Contribution

The other day when I stepped into the broadcasting studio just as the Farm and Home Hour had ended, I found some cookies, some Brown Betty and a meat loaf sandwich waiting. These samples had been saved from a more elaborate layout of good things made with soy beans which had been the subject of the F & H broadcast.

I ate them with pleasure. Although the meat loaf was 25 per cent soy grits, it tasted exactly like meat to me. The cookies and the Brown Betty were excellent.

Soy flour and soy grits—the bread had some soy flour in it—are both on the market ready to contribute vitamins, mineral, protein, vim and vigor to our food, reducing the consumption of scarcer and more expensive products. A saving of from 20 to 25 per cent in meat and still having almost identical food values is nothing to be sneezed at.

Soy, it is pointed out, is not a substitute but a supplement to other foods and you would be surprised how many tasty dishes can be produced with it. The Bureau of Human Nutrition and Home Economics has a handy little pamphlet containing recipes, and you can get one by writing to the bureau, care of the department of agriculture, Washington, D. C.

There are recipes for mint loaf, chile con carne, suggestions for use of soy with vegetables when they are served as a main dish; soy in sauces and mixed with cereals to give a richer protein diet—many suggestions for making what you have go further and accomplish more.

A Letter

Frankly, when I get a letter that makes me real mad, I sometimes mention it on the air. I shouldn't ever do it, I suppose, because I usually get a flood of sympathy which perhaps I don't deserve but one of the best replies I ever had was from a man in Spearfish, S. D., who wrote to me as follows:

"Each morning at 11 a. m. MWT, I tune you in. Now, I may be mistaken, yet it seems to me that at times you think some of the letters you receive are 'hitting below the belt' which has always been considered cowardly and unjustified. But in a great many cases, if we don't hit below the belt, we just make a total miss as it seems that some of the stuff that is put out for us to follow shows that there is NOTHING above the belt to hit at."

Nazi occupation authorities in Holland have even cut the Dutch horsemeat ration one-third. The weekly meat ration coupons, which used to be good for 150 grams of horsemeat, now are good for only 100 grams, or about two ounces, according to a report published in a German language daily in Holland. The cut means a great deal to the Dutch, whose living standards have lowered.

When the soldier talks about "the skipper" he means his captain, the head of his company. And that's just what the title "captain" means. It comes from the Latin word "caput" meaning "head." Another leader high in the Army map's favor is Camel cigarettes—they're first choice with men in the Army. (Based on actual sales records from service men's own stores.) When you're sending gifts from home, keep in mind that a carton of cigarettes is always most welcome. And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S. A., and to men in the Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard wherever they are.—Adv.

See Here, Private Hargrove!

by Marion Hargrove

THE STORY SO FAR: Private Marion Hargrove, former editorial employee of a North Carolina newspaper, has been inducted into the army and is receiving his basic training at Fort Bragg. He has been classified as a cook. This classification together with a more than usual amount of KP duty have caused him to become pretty well acquainted with the Company kitchen. Private Hargrove has become rather well versed in the many angles of "goldbricking" and other army pastimes. He claims, however, that "shooting the breeze" or the "bull session" is the soldier's favorite recreation. At this stage of training some of the boys are experts in the art. As we pick up the story he is discussing this.

CHAPTER IX

By this time, the evening bull sessions have worn themselves into a very definite routine. If Corporal Ussery is there, he lectures on how he'd run the Army; if it's Private Terrence Clarkin, he tells how he used to direct the intricate traffic affairs of Radio City Music Hall when he was assistant chief doorman there. Unless Private Henri Gelders is stopped, he'll start a violent argument among the butchers over how to cut a steak.

McGlauffin will talk for hours about the beauties of the lakes in Minnesota. Grafenstein will deliver discourses on how he would run the Wisconsin football team; Pappas, about Alabama's Crimson Tide. Maciejewski will sermonize on the utter baseness and treachery of womanhood.

Lately, however, the sessions have come more and more under the sway of Private Merton Hulce, a mad Irish lad from Muskegon, Michigan. Private Hulce apparently didn't stop at kissing the Blarney Stone. He must have stolen half of it to carry with him.

Hulce's chief topic of conversation is his mother's fabulous family, the Smiths, all of whom seem to get emmeshed in every war that comes along. His grandfather, who was a captain in the Coast Guard at the outbreak of the last war, was transferred to duty at guarding munitions dumps and such for the duration of the war.

According to Hulce, one of the munitions guards with his grandfather's detail was approached late one night by an officer of the guard. "Halt!" shouted the sentry, and the officer halted. "Advance to be recognized!" said the sentry, and the officer advanced. The sentry forgot to order "halt" again and the officer came within a foot of him. Suddenly the officer reached out and snatched the rifle from the guard's hand.

This was an exceedingly uncomfortable position for the guard, especially in that time of war. He might even have been sentenced to death. The officer stood there just looking at the guard for fully a minute. "What would you have done," he asked in a terrible voice, "if an enemy had got your gun like that?"

The guard trembled for a moment and recovered. "I would have snatched it back, sir," he said, "like THAT!" And the officer stood there, empty-handed.

Hulce's grandfather, who told that story, is now about sixty-five, his grandson says. He was asked to come back into the Navy three months ago as a captain. Being a Smith, he's back. With him in the armed forces today are two of his sons and two of his grandsons.

Merton had two uncles in the last war, both of whom fared exceedingly well when you take a practical view of it. Neither tired himself out. The first crossed the ocean nine times playing the clarinet in a troop ship's band. The Germans torpedoed the boat once and the holes in the side were stuffed with mattresses. Hulce's uncle Tode back into port, still playing his clarinet. That was the goldbricking uncle.

The other uncle served as a kay-pee on the trip across. Carrying a tray around the deck, he was heckled several times by a person he soon grew to loathe. Eventually the Irish wrath of the Smiths rose to boiling point. Uncle Smith lifted the tray high overhead and wrapped it around the heckler's neck. He spent the rest of the war in confinement.

Then there was the cousin, grand-ma's sister's boy. Serving in the front-line trenches, he grew suddenly hungry one morning. Looking out of the trench, he saw a peach tree growing there in the midst of the fiery hell, and there were still peaches on it. He tried to sneak into the tree, but the enemy's bullets found him. He was carried behind the lines. Just as the stretcher bearers laid him down, an enemy shell exploded in the center of their little group and none of them were ever seen again.

This happened at exactly ten o'clock on the morning of November 11, 1918—one hour before the Armistice was signed.

Next to the Bugler, I suppose the battery clerk has the goldbrickingest job in the battery. You could cut his pay to ten dollars a month and he'd still be defrauding the government.

Just watch the battery clerk for a while and you start wondering why he's in the Army, when he's so evidently cut out to fit the leaning end of a WPA shovel. While the rest of the battery is earning its daily bread with sweat, the battery clerk sits in the orderly room hob-nobbing with the powers that be, typing the daily worklist with original spellings for all the names and wondering how long it is until lunchtime.

Our battery clerk is a beardless youth named Howard Miller. I tripped over him yesterday evening on my way back from a hard day's work and stopped to chew the conversational fat.

"Junior," I asked him, "how does your conscience feel about this six-day goldbricking schedule every week? Don't you feel a twinge on payday?"

Corporal Miller made a move to draw himself up indignantly, but decided it wasn't worth the effort. "If you're insinuating that I don't have to work you're off your bean, sonny. I do two or three times as much work as you happiness boys."

I yawned and sat down. "After listening to Ussery shooting off his mouth fifteen hours a day, I can take yours. Go on with your fantastic story."

"Boy," said Miller, "the responsibility is enough to kill an ordinary man. I'm a one-man information bureau for the whole battery. I have to know who everybody is, where everybody is, where everybody's going and how long he's going to be there.

"I have to know the answer to every dumb question you guys come popping up with. Where's my mail? When do I get my furlough? Where are we going to be sent when we get shipped out of here? Why didn't I get a weekend pass? Why was I on KP again today? Every sort of question you could imagine!"

"Quit popping your guns, laddie," I told him. "That's no grind for you. You use the same answer on all the questions: 'How the hell would I know?'"

He was quiet for a while and I thought he had gone to sleep again. I was all primed to hum "Chow Call" to wake him up, when he stirred and sighed heavily.

"All right," I prompted him, "so you're the one-man information bureau. So what do you do in the line of actual work?"

"Work!" he shouted. "That's what I do—work! Why, I have to write all the letters and keep all the files and keep duty rosters up to date! I have to make thousands of rosters of the battery every month—"

"That," I suggested, "should take at least two or three hours every day. What do you do to while away the other tedious hours of the day?"

He was quiet again for about a minute. Then he arose. "I've got a pretty hard day ahead of me tomorrow, Hargrove," he said. "I hope you won't mind if you excuse myself. You have to get plenty of sleep when you have a job like mine."

"When you have a job like yours," I growled, "you can sleep night and day."

The top sergeant stuck his head out of the supply room and beckoned with his arm. "Come 'ere, you!"

I dropped my stable broom in the battery street and hastened toward him, as one always does when summoned by the top kick.

"Well, Private Hargrove," he said, "this is a red-letter day for you."

"You mean you're going to let me go out and drill like the other fellows?"

"Njoo, Private Hargrove," he said. "I mean I'm going to let you turn in all your equipment. You are no longer to be a rookie, Private Hargrove. You are going to be an important working cog in the great wheel of national defense. You are leaving us."

"What's the deal?" I asked.

"Where do I go and what do I do?" The sergeant chuckled and leaned back in his chair. He sighed ecstatically twice. "Would you really like to know, son, or would you rather put it off as long as you can?"

"Well," I said thankfully, "you can't be sending me out as a cook, because I don't know anything about cooking."

The sergeant sat back and drummed happily on the table.

"Great gods!" I shouted. "I'm not going to be a cannoneer, am I?"

"No, Private Hargrove," he said after another long pause, "you're not going to be a cannoneer. We're going to give you a job where you can use your natural talents."

There was a distinctly sadistic tone in his voice. I waited.

"You're going to be a first cook, Hargrove," he said fondly. "Not just a plain cook. A head cook! A king in your own kitchen, a man of responsibility. Ain't that lovely?"

"You can't do this to me!" I roared, when my breath returned. "It's against every decent human law! I don't know anything about cooking! I want to be a cannoneer!"

Sergeant Goldsmith's eyes wandered guiltlessly to the ceiling. "You don't know anything about cooking, huh? That's bad, boy, that's bad! Why, you're supposed to be on shift right now."

"Sergeant," I said, "I couldn't fry an egg right now if it had directions on the package."

"You're in the cooks' battery, ain't you? You've been going to cooking school and you've been sent to a kitchen for all these weeks. You're supposed to be graduated any day now. What have you been doing in the kitchen I put you in?"

"Making jerk-ade," I explained, "chopping celery, peeling onions. They say I get in their way. They say I keep spirits too high and production too low."

"I feel for you," the sergeant said. "I deeply sympathize. You're going to be a mighty unpopular little boy in your new home. If that supper tonight don't melt in them boys' mouths and send them clamoring for more, they'll either massacre you or run you over the hill. That's one thing the boys won't allow—burn cooking!"

"Sergeant Goldsmith, sir," I implored him. "Can't somebody else go in my stead? Somebody who can cook? Look at me—a digger of ditches, a mopper of floors, a scrubber of kitchens, a ministering angel to undernourished grass plots, but a cook never! You don't know what you're doing to me!"

"Son," he said, "you're going to make a perfectly breathtaking Horrible Example!"

Then he rose and walked back into the supply room. "Thomas," he said, "check in this yardbird's equipment."

Sergeant Israel looked up from his Form Thirty-Two records. "Don't he like his equipment?"

"Check in everything but his clothing," the top kick said. "Get a truck to take him to Headquarters Battery, FARC."

Sergeant Thomas W. Israel looked up in faint amazement. I looked in sheer bewilderment.

"They had to figure some way to stop his cooking career and save the morale of some battery as would get him as a cook," said Sergeant Goldsmith. "So he's being palmed off to Center-Headquarters as a public relations man."

The word "buddy" hasn't come into popularity yet in the new army. I suppose that if there were such things, Maury Sher would be mine. Sher and I occupied adjoining bunks when I was in Battery A.

Private Sher is a smart and likable Jewish boy from Columbus, Ohio. He went to school at Southern California, until he learned that all the world's knowledge doesn't come from the intellectual invalids who usually teach the 8:30 class. Then he went back to Columbus, had an idea patented, and built himself a restaurant shaped like a champagne glass.

Came the fateful Sixteenth of October and Sher enrolled for the Selective Service System. His application was accepted last July and, since he had been the successful proprietor of a restaurant, he was classified as a promising student for the Army cooking course.

The two of us got together when he was sent to the Replacement Center here. We started an acquaintance when I topped all his Jewish jokes, and began teaching him how to speak Yiddish. I was attracted by his native intelligence, his pleasant personality, his sense of humor, the similarity of his likes and dislikes to mine, his subscription to PM, his well-stocked supply of cigarettes (my brand), and the cookies he constantly received from home.

So we became more or less constant companions. We made the rounds here together, went to Charlotte together, made goo-goo eyes at the same waitress in Fayetteville, and swapped valuable trade secrets in goldbricking.

FIRST-AID to the AILING HOUSE

By ROGER B. WHITMAN

Roger B. Whitman—WNU Features.

You may not be able to replace worn or broken household equipment. This is war. Government priorities come first. So take care of what you have... as well as you possibly can. This column by the housewife's friend tells you how.

FAULTY FLUES

Question: When a strong southwest wind blows, my furnace backs up and fills the house with coal gas, so that I can hardly keep up the fire. The furnace faces north. I had an extension put on the chimney, but the trouble still persists. Can you suggest anything?

Answer: There are several reasons for poor draft. To be satisfactory, a chimney flue should be of sufficient area to provide ample draft; boiler manufacturer's directions should be followed. The flue should be tight for its entire length, and preferably lined with a fire-clay flue lining. The following are conditions that will interfere with a free chimney draft and prevent the proper operation of the fire: (1) Obstructions in the chimney; (2) a projection into the chimney; (3) a break in the chimney lining, or a defect in the masonry that permits leakage of air; (4) projection of the smoke pipe part way across the flue; (5) an air leak around the cleanout door at the base; (6) the smoke pipe entering the chimney on a down slant; (7) two or more pipe openings into one flue; (8) size of the flue contracted at the top or a small-sized pipe extension; (9) top of the chimney below the high point of the roof—the top should be at least two feet above the peak—or the top may be blanketed by a nearby tall tree or building; (10) flue clogged with soot or dust, especially at a point where it makes a bend.

Recreation Room

Question: During hot, humid weather moisture condenses on the concrete walls and floor in the basement. My theory of eliminating this trouble is to prevent the air from coming into direct contact with the concrete. One portion of the basement is to be a recreation room, with knotty pine walls, the remainder may be painted. Is the concrete too new for the work planned? House, was completed last January. Is air circulation between the walls and concrete desirable? What is the effect of insulation between walls?

Answer: The concrete is now hard enough for the work you contemplate. Air should not circulate between the concrete wall and the paneling; if it does, the hot, humid air will condense again on the cold concrete. Of course, I take for granted that the walls are dry at all other times of the year; if not, they should be made dampproof. Insulation on between the paneling and the cellar walls is not necessary.

LOOSE PIANO KEY

Question: The top has come off one of my piano keys. What kind of glue should be used to replace it so that it will stay white? Some were replaced previously and have darkened.

Answer: Scrape the old glue off both key and the ivory, and stick the ivory back with shellac or with casein glue, which can be had at a hardware store.

Coal in a Fireplace

Question: Will you give me instructions on the use of a coal grate in a fireplace? The fireplace is three feet wide by two feet deep. The grate measures 12 inches by 21 inches.

Answer: Where the coal grate is narrower than the width of the fireplace opening, block off the spaces on the sides of the grate with brick. This can be built very easily with loosely cemented bricks. The idea is to confine the draft through the bed of coals in the grate and not allow it to escape around the sides.

Insulated Roof

Question: Our house has been insulated with rock wool to the top of the roof, including the roof itself, which is completely blanketed. Our attic floor, however, is not insulated. My husband says it should be, and I claim that it is unnecessary. What is your opinion?

Answer: You are right; the additional insulation would be a waste of money and would not add to the comfort of the house.

Large-Sized Vestee

The older woman sometimes has difficulty in finding instructions to make a smart crocheted sleeveless vestee. This one was especially designed for sizes 38-40 and 42. It is comfortable, well-fitted and can be worn in the house in our winter heat-ratoned rooms and is equally comfortable for out-of-door wear under a heavy coat. Make it of wool sport yarn in American Beauty, navy blue, brown or dark green.

For complete crocheting instructions for the Larger Woman's Vestee (Pattern No. 6019) sizes include 38-40 and 42, send 16 cents in coins, your name and address and the pattern number.

Due to an unusually large demand and current war conditions, slightly more time is required in filling orders for a few of the most popular pattern numbers.

Since May 6, 1942, America's official visitors who could not be accommodated at the White House have stayed at the near-by Blair House, now the government's guest mansion.

Among the score of foreign dignitaries and their parties who have occupied the residence are King George of Greece and King Peter of Yugoslavia.

Services

On Sunday morning as you sit in church and see the vacant places in the choir and wonder where the war has taken the young people from your community you may feel certain that they are attending divine services if circumstance permits.

Chaplains and choral leaders are found on the larger ships and even abroad in the Army centers. Millions of hymns have been distributed to the men and women of all services and you may rest assured that a portion of the savings you are placing into War Bonds is used for their spiritual welfare.
