PARKER'S NERVE TONIC

Sleeplessness Cured. IV

I am glad to certify that I used Parker Koenig's Nerve Tonic with the best success for sleeplessness, and believe that it is really a great relief for suffering humanity. S. KRAUS, Pastor, St. Severin, Keyleton P. O., Pa.

A Cure Minister's Experience.

St. Paul's P. O., Ohio, Aug. 10, 1891.

I am happy to give this testimonial as to the excellence of "Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic." Suffering for a long period of nervous debility due to dyspepsia, I ascertain that since I made use of this remedy a radical change was operated on me; not only on the nerves, but even dyspepsia disappears promptly. Similar experiences have been made by many of my confreres with this remedy. I consider it entirely efficacious and proper to cure all nervous diseases and other ones depending from it. Same.

OVERREACHED HIMSELF.

When men of brains and conceded attainments act childish at times how reprehensible it is to hold these not so gifted to a fixed standard. Years ago, Roscoe Conkling, one of the ablest men this country ever produced, got in a pet with President Garfield and vacated his seat in the U. S. Senate, one he prized as he did his fame and honor. He thought at the time that the representatives of his party in his State and the country would applaud him, condemn the President and return the Senator to his seat. His anticipations went agley—and her man not hear his match, caught the pique and Conkling was relegated to private life.

Ingalls, of Kansas, has few peers as a statesman, yet he acted the child when he should have been most manly. A year ago the alliance party of the grass-hopper State got in the saddle and rode over Ingalls, who sought to succeed himself in the U. S. Senate. His defeat grieved his political friends, but they didn't hear Ingalls, however, went to his tent, and took to quilting. A political battle was on the tapis between his old adherents and the party which had defeated him. Old soldiers of the party went into the field and administered a notable thrashing to the enemy but he was in sunshine toasted as the "irrepressible statesman" would not go to the front. Providence, through its inscrutable wisdom, called Senator Plumb home. Had Ingalls been consistent and aggressive after his defeat the death of his colleague would have restored him to public life.

How great the difference between the two men. Plumb was a strong beacon of his sterling, stalwart honesty. He lacked the brilliancy of Ingalls but he out weighed him in integrity and usefulness. Plumb's dead is more honored than Ingalls living. Possibly ventures he may yet shine, but if so it will be as John Randolph said of a colleague, "like a rotten mackerel by moonlight."

Frightful Shipwrecks.

Bismarck ships strike and founder, the fierce winds and mountainous waves sweep noble mariners "hearts of oak" to shipwreck and to death, yet that does not prevent the intrepid landsman from risking his life on the stormy Atlantic in the role of tourist or commercial traveler. But if he shall reach his destination safely he will scarcely have escaped some of the qualms of sea sickness, which he might with a little foresight have avoided. Those [illegible] on long trips are a threat to [illegible], but this may be deprived in a [illegible] of its disagreeing effects upon [illegible], bowels and liver by the Bitters, [illegible] the beneficial effects of malaria, and [illegible] will empower it in such effectual [illegible], moreover, rheumatism and [illegible]. Don't travel on sea or [illegible] without it.

A. C. Kleppinger, who has been doing assessment work on his mining claims in the Gallinas for several weeks past, came to town on [illegible], replenished his grub-[illegible] and returned.

THE WHITE OAKS ROAD.

The Santa Fe New Mexican, under the above caption, says—Morris R. Locke, interested in the El Paso-White Oaks road is quoted as saying:

"I have sold the bonds and stock of the company for the building of the White Oaks line, and a party is in London to close the deal, and if closed will be in El Paso to take the company out of the hands of the receiver and pay up all claims and proceed with the construction of the railroad to White Oaks, and possibly to the State of Kansas. I have been east all summer and fall, on this and other business and am hopeful of complete success in this matter."

* * *

We were in hopes that never again would the name of Morris R. Locke, above all others, be associated with the White Oaks R. R. Under his leadership our people were woefully deceived some three years ago. Representations were made that arrangements looking to the speedy building and equipping of the road had been consummated. To demonstrate this declaration work was commenced on the El Paso end and several miles of iron were covered but the rails were not paid for and debts against the management flowed in from all sides.—Property at El Paso, which had appreciated in value on the representations of this man sank below original holdings and several enterprising men involved themselves in erecting buildings to meet the promised exigency. Editors gave credence to this man's pretensions and currency to his fictions leaving themselves under the ban of suspicion that they had willfully and for a money consideration deceived their readers.—We want no more such experience.

But we opine that Locke cannot help or injure the prospects of the White Oaks R. R. A. man may, by virtue of gall or venality impose upon an individual or community once but a repetition requires superior strategy on the part of the conspirator and superlative assininity on the side of the victims.

HIS SWEETHEART.

"His Sweetheart" is such a striking title that you expect to find it on the back of some bright and entertaining novel rather than the title of Judge's Library, or Monthly Magazine of Fun. However, no novel is as interesting as this little publication. Everyone wants to be a sweetheart sometime or other, and the best book of points to store up on this subject is this issue of Library. When we say that we have right to climb with it, and the sole right for our entire county, we feel that every subscriber who does not already see it should at once send in the price of the Library and the Leader which is remarkably low when offered at $2.50.

OUR CALIFORNIA LETTER.

MRS. LANE REMEMBERS HER OLD FRIENDS.

Santa Monica, Cal.,
January 2, 1892.

EDITOR LEADER—

And now, the Christmas carols have all been sung; the presents which cost so much time and thought have all been given; Santa Claus has wrapped himself in his furry coat and hidden himself until next December comes 'round again; the bells are ringing in the New Year and Nature is in her most charming mood as if to welcome it.

Our young people have enjoyed their vacation and again we see them in the morning trooping by on their way to school. We have an excellent school here with Mr. Brown as Principal and five other teachers. The rooms are well filled—the school building itself a very fine and would be an ornament to any town.

Our public library here leaves nothing to be desired in the way of reading—daily papers, monthlies and pictorials, also foreign papers. They have the newest books, finely bound. One can there find Ruskin, Carlyle, with all the novelists of the present day—Howells, Craddock, Eggleston, Stockton, etc., and all the books one could wish.

As I look out to-day I see some of the hills round about turning green, suggestive of spring lamb and green peas. In some of the fields I see the plows and harrows and men toiling harrowing up old mother earth's feelings; but I suppose it has been so since Adam delved—but what Eve spun is not so clear.

Out over the sea I see a tiny boat and as the men lift their oars out of the water the wet blades catch the sunlight and shine like silver; so distance lends enchantment to the view for if you were close to them you would no doubt find a common fishing boat, not overly clean nor perfumed with "crab apple blossom." How nice it would be if we could travel through life with all those illusions undispelled. Some people have a mania for finding out what the dolls are made of, they cannot seem to be content to take pleasure in admiring their lovely appearance but they must find out if they are stuffed with saw-dust, and when they do are wretched in consequence as they well deserve to be. How often we lose the grandeur and value of a good action by stopping to analyze the motives which prompted it. Why not take it on trust; in that way we are the gainers. This is getting to be too much of a critical age. We sit quite too often in the "seat of the scornful." For myself I hope to be able to preserve a [illegible] that will be as high as I shall aspire to this coming new year.

We had the pleasure of seeing some whales spouting lately.—Three very large ones visited this bay last week and staid several days. They sent up immense volumes of water and would all blow at once. It was a very pretty sight to see but about as vapory as some of the speeches our politicians make now-a-days. But then I must stop for I know you think women must not meddle in politics—they must be keepers at home, stocking menders, household geniuses—they have this work cut out for them and must stay put.

Santa Monica is getting ready for the season. Carpenters are repairing the cottages and new cottages are receiving finishing touches. I hope some of our White Oaks friends will visit Santa Monica this summer. I need hardly say we would gladly welcome them. The memory of kind deeds and of pleasant friendships formed by us in New Mexico will ever be among the many cherished treasures of our memory.—May the new year bring all prosperity and contentment to our friends in White Oaks and to the deserving editor of the LEADER in particular, I remain,

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing, with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, N. Y.

To state that "Stonewall" Jackson would never travel or fight on Sunday, the Oxford, Me., Advertiser replies; "We think the surviving members of the old Tenth Maine regiment can recall to memory Sunday, the 25th day of May, 1862, almost three decades, when old Stonewall traveled and fought on Sunday and had our fearless and stalwart band on the run from Winchester to Williamsport. How that rebel battery got the drop on us when a few miles from Winchester, and what terrifying sound those scorching shells gave they came whizzing through the air so near, and what a shower of knapsack followed about that time, and with sad hearts we parted with photographs letters and clothing from home as we flung them away and pressed on! That forced march was a trying ordeal to the men and some of them carry the effects to this day.

Jos. CHURCH, late of the Florilles, who recently went on a visit to his old New York home, is dead. We are without further particulars.

JAS. O. HARDMAN, who has been in Kansas for over a year, has returned home.

—Henry Russell's song, "A Life on the Ocean Wave," has been adopted as the royal march of Britain's marines. Mr. Russell resides in London and is now a very old man. He is the father of W. Clark Russell, author of "The Frozen Pirate," first published in the Detroit Free Press, and other sea stories.

—John Bright, who was a lover of poetry, said that he always selected American poets as more clear, intelligible and unconventional. Whittier, Longfellow and Lowell he classed as always clear as a running brook, as bright as sunshine, and refreshing as breezes, while the English poets aim at bubbles.

—Miss Helen Gladstone has taken to journalism. Miss Gladstone's experience of women will warrant her writing with authority on their affairs. She has for nearly ten years been closely connected with Newnham College, Cambridge, first as a student, then as secretary to Mrs. Sedgwick, whom she succeeded as vice-principal of the college.

—Some one writing of Miss Mary L. Booth, late editress of Harper's Bazar, tells how she supported herself by sewing while she wrote for the press gratis. She was "learning her profession," as she herself expressed it, and she certainly learned it to some purpose. The New York World says her success may be an encouragement to a certain brave little woman in New York, who, while supporting herself by writing ten hours a day in a "title insurance office," attends art classes in the evening, where she is busily striving to attain sufficient proficiency in her chosen profession to live by it and give up her less congenial occupation.

—Sir Edwin Arnold, lecturing upon the "Mahabharata," said: "This is the great epic poem of India. It contains over 250,000 lines, besides a supplement of about 16,000 lines, enough to make eight times as much as the 'Iliad' and 'Odyssey' combined, with several 'Virgils' thrown in. Some philologists have derived its name from words meaning 'book of weight,' indicating that the gods preferred it above all others; but this is fanciful, and its real origin is from words meaning 'great war of Bharats.' The poem is highly valued—it might almost be said worshiped—throughout India. The natives consider that even to have heard it is sanctifying, and to have read it through frees one from sin."

A DANGEROUS BEAST.

The Big-Bear Described by a Student of Unnatural History.

This animal, like several others, originated and grows in imagination. It also varies according to the locality and the demand for it. If the case is urgent, then a large bug-bear is best; but if it is unimportant, and only necessary to have one on hand but not for actual use, then a little bug-bear will answer.

The bug-bear is always equal to the occasion—that is, if the person handling it is equal to the emergency. It must be acknowledged that the bug-bear, like the cinnamon bear, is apt to turn on its trainer or handler and bug all the fun out of him; but such risks must be taken in the managerie business. What think you would have been the sale of Barnum's great show had he been afraid of a bug-bear?

The object of the bug-bear is to add to the fright of those who would be frightened at their own shadow, any way. When they stroll quietly around with a bug-bear, and away they go, taking fences, hedges and ditches at a bound, metaphorically speaking. It is strange, but nevertheless true, that all people are liable to be frightened by a bug-bear. Even the wooden, heavily faced stuffed bear and valiantly knock the heavy coat of it, turn pale, and it would be impossible to throw a sheet of paper between it and them when they meet a bug-bear.

The nurse, to keep her charges orderly, has a bug-bear; the stock-broker uses a bug-bear to influence the market in his favor; the tradesman, the man of leisure, the lawyer, man and the footholder, all have a bug-bear. The policeman is an exception—he has a handcuff.

The very best thing can be said of it is that from the fact that, although the bug-bear has done a great deal of harm, it has never yet been known to bite.—E. R. Collins, in Texas Siftings.

Louis the Fourteenth's Jest.

Louis the Fourteenth of France, had in his court a nobleman known to be intolerably cautious and circumspect. One day the king asked him if he could converse in the Spanish language. "Sire, sire," was the answer. "That is unfortunate," said the King. The nobleman at once conceived that the King wished to make him Ambassador to Madrid, and, employing a teacher, he forthwith applied himself day and night to acquiring the language. At last, pale and exhausted, yet with a satisfied, expectant look upon his face, he came to the King with the announcement: "Sire, I can now speak Spanish." "Do you understand Spanish?" "Yes, sire." "Can you converse intelligently with a Spaniard?" "Yes, sire." the man answered, his heart beating high in anticipation. "I wish you joy," said the King; "now you can read 'Don Quixote' in the original."—San Francisco Argonaut.

—The number of female students at Vassar College, according to recent returns, is longer than usual, and every room is occupied. The new gymnasium has therefore rendered the students' fees unnecessary. The gymnasium building cost $60,000, and is one of the finest in the country.

A POPULAR FAMILY.

James: "How is it, Kate, that you always seem to insist on the last new thing? No matter what I may, you always want to get ahead of me."

Kate: "I don't know! I certainly do not make any motion in that direction."

James: "Well, during the last few months, for example, you have taken up painting, without any knowledge I you came to the room when Miss Lalarge sketched her helmet. Then you suddenly, and certainly we are just getting in range under your instruction I learn you telling Tommy Eames last evening how you made mistakes in playing Lucknell. You seem to be up on all the latest fads, and know just what to do under all circumstances to entertain beautiful ladies; and in the last month you have taken lessons in health, dancing, physical culture exercises. Where do you get all of your information from in this line? out of the way places—for you never go to the city."

Kate: "Why, James, you will make me rude. I have only one source of information, but it is surprising how it posts all topics. Every fellow hear of anything new that will take next few days turns up full information on the subject. Magic! Not Hypnotism! And a great treasure it is to us all, for it really furnishes the reading for the whole household; father has given up his magazine that he has taken for years, as he says the one I get more real latest information on the subjects of the day; and mother says that since that takes her such a famous housekeeper. In fact, we all agree that it is the only paper we have subscribed for, and that one is all for each member of the family, and another all for women, and another for children only, while there is still every one of us to say we need it more than any other paper, and that is where the economy comes in, for it is only $2.00 a year. Perhaps you think I am too lavish in my praise, but I will bet you any amount, dollars with pennies, that the Publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th Street, New York, will send a sample copy, and I shall always consider that I have done you a great favor, especially as I am sure that as soon as you see it you will be convinced that it is one of the best informed family in town. Now, that is to say, it is Demorest's Family Magazine that does it."

THE CHILDREN'S BOOKS.

How to Select Reading Matter for the Young Folks.

A very grave matter indeed has become the quality of the reading furnished to our young people. In families where newspapers are entered freely, even the casual reader who takes them up and glances them over carelessly can not fail to get a knowledge of the world that if it does us harm does no good either. There are families, indeed, where the children are allowed certain columns of a single paper only, but such prohibition is often as dangerous as its opposite. A notion prevails in many minds that the young must have reading furnished to them while the subject has been written down to their comprehension, forgetting that all our growth comes from struggle upward, and that it is really a great deal better after the taste for reading has been once formed to have the book or the subject just one degree above, almost beyond, the moment's taste or fancy. Much of the formation of taste in this matter devolves upon the mother, the aunt, the elder sister, and if they see to it that models of purity and wholesomeness are presented and observed, rather than those which are debilitating to the mental fiber, and thus noxious, a habit will be formed that in time will instinctively reject all that is not distinctively ennobling, and does not feed the better portion of the mind and nature. Facilities are much in vogue to-day, but their influence is vicious because it is weakening, and in so much degrading. Children can be trained to care as much for one of Parkman's histories, with all its tale of daring and doing, as for any paper-covered story of a cowboy's adventures; as much for the Midsummer Night's Dream, with its wit and poetry and pathos and music, as for any tawdry story in which boy and girl love-making parts as much for the sounding sentences of the Old Testament and of Ossian as for any schoolboy jingle and while they will derive now as much pleasure from one as from the other, and constantly more, the better kind will give pleasure on to loftier plane, and will cause the mind to reach up instead of down. It is high time that the heads of families looked into this subject in some measure, especially since the eager mind of childhood must be fed, and will devour whatever comes in its way if nothing is furnished it with design. Such oversight is not so easy a task that it can be despised as too trivial to be undertaken, for in the myriad of publications for children and those just escaping childhood it is a serious effort to keep one's head, and good will is the chance of many of them. If not as to intention, yet as injurious quality will not intention, that is the supervision one has to become acquainted with a mass of rubbish in order to eliminate it, and finds it a work of time and thought not always pleasurable.—Harper's Bazar.

SIMPLIFIED BURGLARY.

The New Apparatus Made by an Ingenious Cincinnati Safe-Breaker.

"Human ingenuity is more devilish than angelic, and is more effort to destroy than to create. It is a general proposition true that one man may do another can make, it being a reasonable what is reasonable to do. For years locksmiths and safe-builders have racked their brains and employed their cunning to devise a safe that should be absolutely burglar as well as fireproof. As this is true, have improved upon locking and combinations, until now it is the burglar and not the safe that has been forced to equality, if it has not been forced to a fair chance. The burglar's tools are only adapted to the old-fashioned locks. In order to get at the contents of a safe they must be destroyed, and the thermal and mechanical force is found to yield, and invariably it is the combination lock and its fastenings.

A Precocious Little Girl.

A little girl, who made very frequent use of the word "guess," was one day reproved for it by her teacher.

"Don't say 'guess,' Mary," said Miss Jones; "say 'presume.'"

Presently one of Mary's little playmates, coming up to her, remarked:

"I think your cape is very pretty, and my mamma wants your mamma to lend her the pattern, because she is going to make me one like it."

"My mamma has no pattern," was the prompt reply; "she cut it by presume."—Texas Siftings.

A Unique Time-Piece.

A Western jeweler has invented a novel time-piece. When it reaches the latter figure it glides across the window to 1 again. There is no mechanism that can be seen, all the works being concealed inside the bird.—Jewelers' Weekly.

SIMPLIFIED BURGLARY.

The New Departure Made by an Ingenious Cincinnati Safe-Breaker.

"Human ingenuity is more devilish than angelic, and is more alert to destroy than to create. It is a general proposition that what one man may do another can undo, making allowance somewhat for muscular strength and the like. The years luck-smiths and safe-makers have racked their brains and employed their cunning to devise a safe that should be absolutely burglar proof and fireproof. As the skill to have improved the safe, burglars and combinations, implements, etc., have kept pace with it. This is well illustrated by the position of affairs to-day. The latest formal step given a fire chief the burglar of a safe is any safe that can be opened by combination. To meet this a number of professors in the mysteries of safes have invented, as they claim, a machine that will open any safe that can be made in a year's time, giving them a key to any of the largest safes manufactured anywhere in the world. The machine is about the size of a small sewing machine, and is operated by electricity. It is attached to the safe by means of a wire, and in a few minutes the combination is worked out. The machine is the invention of a Cincinnati man, and is now in the hands of a gang of burglars in that city. It is said that the machine will work on any safe made, and that it will open a safe in a few minutes. The machine is about the size of a small sewing machine, and is operated by electricity. The World Famous.

The facilities of the present day for the production of everything that will contribute to the material welfare and comfort of mankind are almost unlimited and when Syrup of Figs was first produced the world was crowded with the very best laxatives known, as it is to-day, ready with its truly pleasing and refreshing to the taste and prompt and effectual to cleanse the system gently when Biliousness or Constipation is present, or when a laxative is required.

Last Tuesday night Rev. Hurd pronounced Fred. Mayer and Miss Louisa Schultz husband and wife. While our congratulations go forth to Fred, our sympathies reach out toward Paul. He must feel very much like an orphan.—But there are fish yet left, and Paul could hook a good one if he'd only go a'fishing.

T. B. McCOURT has moved into the Keeley building, where, with his daughters and sons he will in future keep house.

It is noted in Washington that while congressmen from the North and East wear silk hats or black or brown derbys, the members from the South and far West perfer soft felt hats. But the soft felt hats are all black, and the typical Southerner's broad brimmed white felt of a generation ago is conspicuous by its absence. The high hat grows more in vogue every year, even the rustic population acquiring a liking for it after a brief residence at the national capital.

A Western minister, who is not always as careful as he ought to be in mixing his preaching and practice go together, was interesting a few friends a story of adventure.

It was a large story, and the minister's 10 year old little girl was listening to it very intently. When he had finished, she fastened her eyes upon her father's face, and said, very gravely,

"Is that true, or are you preaching now, pa, all"

WHEREAS, Felipe Miranda and Dorotea Miranda his wife, One of the owners of Lincoln, and Territory of New Mexico, by their certain mortgage deed, dated the 10th day of May, A. D. 1886, and recorded in the Probate Clerk's office of Lincoln County, in Book "A" of the record of mortgage deeds and conveyances, pages 186, 187 and 188, did convey to M. Brunswick, his heirs and assigns, as mortgagee, the following described parcel of land and real estate situate in the county of Lincoln, and Territory of New Mexico, as follows, to-wit:

The east half of the north-west quarter of section (10) twenty nine in township (9) nine south of range (19) nineteen east of the New Mexico principal meridian, and containing 80 acres.

$500 Reward for Ore Thieves

The combined experience of this camp shows that much is lost by the mine operators by the stealing of gold in specimens, if not in amalgam and bullion. Therefore, the "Old Abe" Company offers a standing reward of Three Hundred Dollars for the arrest and conviction, or for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person guilty of stealing any of the property of the Old Abe Co., even the smallest specimen of ore. The rule of this company is to kill all specimens. Therefore none of the ore from this mine can be legally held as specimens. And as the receiver, with guilty knowledge, is as guilty in law as the thief, this offer applies to the holder of Old Abe specimens.
