Obregon is Assassinated

Mexico City, July 17—General Alvaro Obregon, president-elect of Mexico, was shot down by an assassin known as Juan Escapulario, as he sat at a banquet in his honor at La Bombilla restaurant at San Angel, near Mexico City, Tuesday. Obregon headquarters announced that the general died almost instantly. The assassin was captured and taken to jail.

Eye witnesses to the shooting, which took place shortly after 2 o'clock, said that the slayer approached the table at which the president-elect was sitting and asked Governor Aron Saenz of the state of Nuevo Leon, if he might show some pictures to General Obregon. He pretended to show the pictures, under which he had concealed a pistol, and fired several times into the general's body. The band was playing at the time and many of those present failed to hear the shots and did not realize what had happened until the general slumped down in his chair. He died while being carried out to his automobile.

In the best informed circles, it is thought that President Calles will retain strong control over whatever situation may arise as a result of the murder of the man who was to have succeeded him as president. In the same circles, it is believed that a revolution or an armed uprising is not improbable.

No one will venture to predict what may occur in the future, although it is generally believed that President Calles can be named by congress to continue in office. It is possible, however, that other elections may be called.

Refrigeration System

Dependability of automatic refrigeration even under the most adverse circumstances was brought to public attention by the wonderful manner in which Frigidaires equipped water coolers functioned during the Democratic national convention at Houston, Texas, according to Frigidaire Frank, local Frigidaires dealer.

"During the sessions long lines of visitors were frequently waiting their turn to drink from the coolers," said Mr. English. "The city water was very warm when it entered the coolers, close to 85 degrees, in fact. The temperature inside Sam Houston hall was even higher. Despite these handicaps the convention drinking water was cold all the time."

"There were eighteen Frigidaires equipped coolers on the convention floor and two on the platform. The two on the platform were for the use of speakers and broadcasters only. As a result eighteen coolers had the tremendous task of supplying 30,000 hot and thirsty people with cold water under the most adverse conditions."

"It was probably the severest test ever given this type of equipment, but the coolers did the job in fine style and won the praise of almost everyone who attended the convention."

According to Mr. English the refrigerating equipment used in the water coolers is of the same general type as that used in Frigidaire household refrigerators. He says that the woman with a Frigidaire in her kitchen can be assured of the same dependability and positive refrigeration as that which characterized the faultless operation of the convention water coolers.

School Fund Shrinks

Santa Fe, N. M., July 14.—There was a balance of $1,017,792.47 available in his hands June 30 for the annual apportionment among the common schools of the state, state treasurer Warren R. Graham today informed state school auditor Carl Comstock and Miss Lois Randolph, state school superintendent. The amount is approximately $13,000 less than the sum available for apportionment last year.

The registration books will be open from July 29th to August 15th, and every voter should hold these dates in mind. If you don't vote you will fail to exercise your privilege and duty as an American citizen, as well, but if you are not registered you cannot fulfill these obligations. New Canadian Plant To Assemble Pontiacs

Pontiac, Mich. July: Concrete evidence of the growing importance of the American automobile outside the domestic market was seen here by officials of the Oakland Motor Car Company upon receipt of advice that construction is now under way for a new Canadian factory in which Pontiac Sixes will be assembled.

Located at Regina, Saskatchewan, where 38 acres of city property have been taken over by General Motors of Canada for the project, the new unit will meet the increasing demand for Pontiac cars in the Western part of the Dominion. Construction is being rushed so that production may get under way by December 1.

Thoroughly modern equipment and mass production methods comparable to the arrangement in the new Oakland and Pontiac factories will be incorporated in the new unit—it was stated. Daily production will reach 150 cars and employment is estimated at 800 workers, according to information received here.

The Regina factory will be more comprehensive than the average assembly plant. In addition to assembling cars it also will be used for body building, trimming and painting operations.

Construction of the plant at Regina is in accordance with the policy of General Motors to locate factories in the center of distribution areas and to employ practically all local labor so that payrolls and local purchases may be shared by the territories that provide volume of sales.

The new unit will be Regina's largest industrial development in point of output, floor space and number of workers employed. Architect's plans allow for expansion in the event still larger sales gains make further increase in volume necessary.

That the growing favor of the Pontiac Six should necessitate building the new unit was interpreted here as a tribute to the stamina of the car in view of the severe driving conditions obtaining in Western Canada.

TREATING ON MATTERS PERTAINING TO THE TOWN AND OTHERWISE

BY M. DOBRING

The American husband is a "love duffer." That's the conclusion reached by Dr. Joseph Collins of New York, neurologist and author, who addressed a meeting of 500 women at Cleveland, O. recently. "Men have the most abysmal ignorance of the nature of woman," said the doctor. "If they would spend a quarter as much time studying a woman's mental make-up that they do playing golf, we might have fewer unhappy marriages. "Matrimony is the best game in the world. Some can't play it. Some play it indifferently. But there is no reason why experts shouldn't continue to play it and duffers try to learn." Dr. Collins is a bachelor, which may or may not explain his attitude.

The national committee on calendar simplification at its first meeting at Washington, D. C. last week tentatively fixed 1933 as the logical date for universal adoption of thirteen-month calendar. The committee appointed ten sub-committee to learn the public reaction toward calendar reform. Chairman George Eastman said as far as he had studied the situation, no objections had been raised against the reform, but that it would take at least five years to make the idea effective.

In the jungle wild animals take their own photographs, but don't know what a flashlight means. Patrolmen placed a camera in St. Joseph's Catholic church, in Cincinnati, near the poor box, arranged so that Charles Callan, when he stole $12.88 from the box, took his own photograph, rang the bell that brought the police, and generally caused his undoing. After seeing the photograph he confessed.

In discussing with a citizen the practice by some boys in riding bicycles on sidewalks, we found he held ideas similar to ours, and condemned the practice as a dangerous one not only to the rider but to pedestrians as well. There is danger of striking someone walking on the sidewalk, and the rider may be thrown through a show window, if the accident happened in the business part of town. Bicycles are classed as vehicles and the riders should be compelled to take the street. An accident while riding on the sidewalk would result in the rider drawing a heavy fine in addition to any injury he may receive. Riding a bicycle at night without a lantern is also a dangerous practice—yet indulged in by a number of boys.

Highways are to be oiled in several parts of the state where moisture is light and conditions productive of much dust. The work will be done by Federal and State Highway Departments. Roads near Deming, Las Cruces, Roswell, Dexter, Springer and Laguna are to be oiled. These sections of roads are said to be difficult to maintain in dry periods owing to the heavy traffic passing over them. A little oil on almost any road in Lincoln county would be beneficial also.

Serious Accident

Mrs. Victor Flores and son, Juan Chavez, met with a very serious accident Monday morning at the railroad crossing at the south end of town. The unfortunate pair were driving a car, and had a collision with a yard engine that was shunting a caboose down the side track. Just how the accident happened has been difficult to determine, as the injured persons have been unable to give a coherent statement as to how they failed to see the advancing engine, and the switch crew, while seeing the approaching car, took it for granted the autoists would stop before reaching the track. This, however, they did not do, and when the engineer saw that a collision was inevitable he applied the air and stopped within a few feet, but not until the auto was crushed and its occupants thrown under it. The victims were drawn from the Johnson Hospital and their injuries attended to. It seems almost a miracle that either could survive, but both appear to be on the road to recovery. Nominate 2 for Senate

Assistant Attorney General Patton has issued an opinion that each political party should name two candidates for United States Senator in the coming election. One candidate would be for the six-year term beginning March 4, next year; the other to fill out the unexpired term of the late A. A. Jones. Senator Cutting was appointed, says the opinion only to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Jones "until the people shall fill said vacancy by election." The 1927 election law also provides that no candidate's name shall appear on the ballot more than once.

After the business session, a program was rendered by the girls, followed by delightful refreshments of ice cream and cake. The girls then played games, and adjourned to meet with Gladys and Dorothy Dwyer, next Tuesday. The girls are very enthusiastic over their new captain and are eager to get down to business again. We plan to start work on our cabin soon, as the lot has already been selected.

POETRY

By Douglas Malloch

GOD writes such rivers ev'rywhere,
And prints such mountains on the sky.

I would not weep; I would not care.
If you should never read what I
Attempt to say. Why fool with rimes
Amid our slinging summertimes?

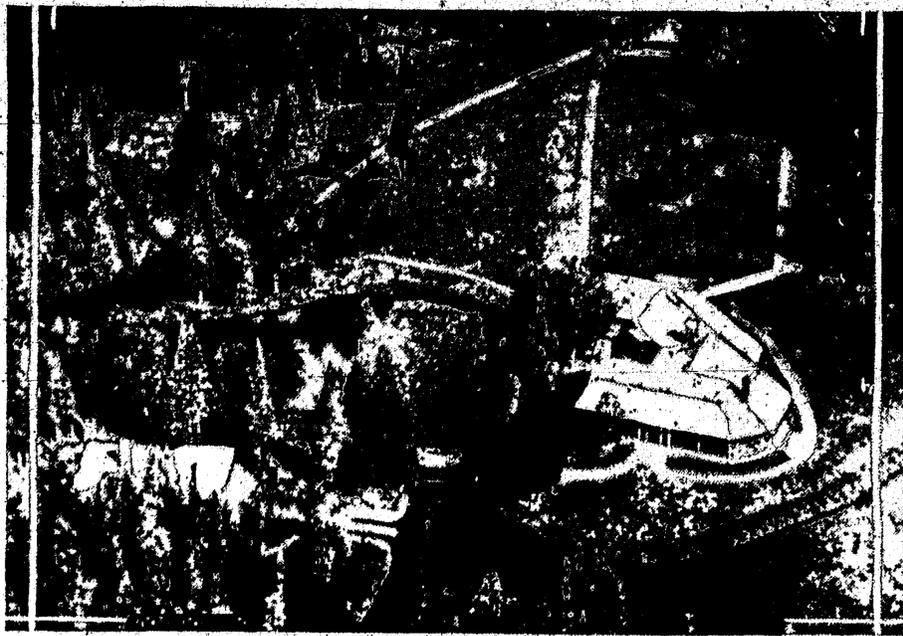

I bid you put the book away
And walk outdoors, and see the world.
There is more truth in one bright day
Than all the truth that man has hurled
Down all the ages, more of hope.
In one green blade on one gray slope.

And if I ask you, friend, to read,
'T is but to ask that you will look
Above, beyond, this simple creed
And read the lines in God's great book
Yes, thrill with it, the poetry
Of hill and sky and wood and sea.

Giving Credit Where Credit Is Due

By John Blake

THIS other day I listened to a very excellent sermon by a celebrated cycymon—a man whose ability is unquestioned, and who is a power for good in his community.

He was discussing the question of religion and science and showing very effectively how they can be reconciled, and slide side by side, each doing its share for the betterment of the world and the freeing of men's souls from evil and superstition.

His wife, in support of his commentation of religion he quoted many religious writers—beside those whose words are immortalized in the Bible—
he borrowed liberally, in talking about science, from a recent book, and neglected to mention either the book or its author.

This, perhaps, would not have been so subject to criticism had he not unwittingly or doubt—conveyed the idea that the many facts, which he employed had been gathered by himself through his wide reading. An matter of truth he spoke of little of the science side of his argument that was not contained in that particular book.

Its author did not pretend to any erudition or research—he gave all his authorities—and told his story without asking any credit for himself. But the clergyman, lifting glory after story from the volume, went on and on and on, citing case after case—and all of them, as was plain to one who had read the book, came directly out of that one volume.

Now this is not theft, of course, or a clergyman would not have used it.
It is more thoughtless.

Yet it got for him, in the eyes of some of his readers, a reputation for wide learning which he did not possess, and this was hardly fair. The clergyman occupies a peculiar position before his congregation and before the world.

If he is eloquent and able, he is greatly admired—and what he says
has a real authority.

He must read widely, and think deeply to be convincing, and he must above all maintain his intellectual integrity at a high standing.

He cannot give page versa and line
an authority for everything he says, but when he dips whole handfuls of material from one book, it would be more generous for him to name the author of the book, and thank him
for having written it.

Scientists must depend on writing men to make their work known. Few writing men are qualified for this job.
This man was so qualified. He did an excellent work. He rendered the achievements of modern investigation better than the investigators could have rendered it.

Yet if I had not read his work, I would have given this pastor the credit for this achievement—and he did not deserve it at all.

The Study of Self

By F. A. WALKER

INSTEAD of going ahead, wasting precious time and energy in re-voluting the short-comings of others, suppose you sit down in your favorite chair some evening for at least half an hour and soberly catechize yourself.

Without some such attention to your own faults, accompanied with a real desire to overcome them, there will be but a small likelihood indeed, of your rising above those you frequently condemn.

Go at the distasteful task with an open mind, resolved to dig to the unexplored depths of your soul and lay bare its innermost faults.

Do not despair at what you find,
for your infirmities are similar in almost every particular to those of your acquaintance upon whom you have gazed with an Argus eye for months
and years.

There is within you the same lack of virtue, the same streaks of carelessness, the same disposition to err, the same inclination in hasty outbursts of passion to soil your lips and soul with ugly words and deeds.

These human beings who lack the moral courage to study self; must during their lives become reconciled to sit in dusty seats in the back row.

They can never hope for anything better, without being disappointed. A thick veil of misconception hangs continually before their hard drawn faces and darkens their vision.

They blunder along till the sunset of their days hides them in its number shadows, wondering all the while as they hold to their shambling gait, why the good angels fail to favor and prosper them.

They never learned that success is built upon a knowledge of self, a knowledge available to all.

Let this knowledge once illuminate your mind, you will emerge a new man or woman, equipped to do battle, to face incontestable facts, and to accept with unflinching strength and assurance the ennobling duties that crown men and women with victory.

"Know thyself," says an ancient proverb. Know that to study and to master self is your paramount obligation.

Know that by your own power of
will, by your own honorable effort, assisted by fair-eyed faith, you can ride over "impossible" while those ignorant of self continue blindly to chase chimeric hopes and perilous illusions.

Taking Unnecessary Risks

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

A GENTLEMAN desiring to employ a chauffeur suggested to each applicant that the side of a particular drive was very perilous and should be passed with great caution. All applicants failed to prove satisfactory,
although each negotiated the dangerous curve with ease and safety. The last applicant for the position, however,
remarked, that while he was reasonably sure he could steer the car safely around the dangerous curve he did not wish to take the risk unless it was absolutely necessary. "You are the man I am looking for," replied the gentleman, and he landed the job.

minimum. It is scarcely fair to ask a friend to help us out of a mess into which a foolish risk has plunged us.
The wise man refused to take the risk
and he got the job.

A person may risk his friendship reputation and money in a foolish adventure. All three are dangerous adventures for it is difficult to regain either one of them when once lost. A man of affairs, who had recently lost all three, was told by a friend that if he would have stopped and seriously thought about it and had he counted twenty he would not have taken the risk at all. A large number of risks are taken because people are in a hurry. Speed, the crime of our age, plays havoc with the venture

some spirit.

The only thing which justifies the element of risk is whether or not the goal to be attained is worth it. If the goal expresses a moral value or is of scientific and humanitarian value the venturesome spirit may well be applauded even though its price might be martyrdom.

Discriminating judgment is a wise
man's caution.

Billie Brownie Bird Story

BILLIE BROWNIE was given permission, as he so often is, by Mother Nature to visit the different birds.

You know Mother Nature has given Billie Brownie the power to understand the language of the different creatures and they tell him their stories so he can let others know of their interesting ways.

Billie Brownie was eager to call on the birds. He hadn't chatted with them for ever and ever so long.

First he had a talk with the Tree Sparrows.

"We don't mind the winter weather.
We eat seeds from old weeds while they stick up above the snow," they told Billie Brownie. "And it is very seldom that we beg for food around houses. We can provide for ourselves.

"Now we've heard a description of sparrows as told by some one who knows all about birds," the Tree Sparrows talking explained to Billie Brownie,
"and I shall give you that description
for it is quite true and it was told well in human words.

"We were described as belonging to the same family as the Field Sparrows and Chipping Sparrows belong to though the others do not stay around so much in the winter.

"Now and again we have a Field Sparrow for a companion as you have much the same likes and dislikes but we do feel different, about the weather.

"These are the words used to describe about us and our family.

"Chipping Sparrow has a black bill and Field Sparrow a red one during the summer but when the fall comes their bills are dull in color and lose their summer attractiveness.

"Field Sparrow wears a reddish coat

while Chipping Sparrow wears handsome white touches above his eyes.

"Now, I'm bigger in size than these other two.

"I have white touches to the wings and a dark spot in the center of my wings which I call my pet spot!"

"I dearly love that spot.

"Sometimes we can sing quite sweetly but I suppose we're not famous

First He Had a Talk with the Tree Sparrows.

for our voices. Anyway they say it is nice to see us about in the winter time.

"I should say so," Billie Brownie answered, "and I thank you so much for having told me your story. It was so interestingly good of you."

"Delighted to tell you it," said the Tree Sparrow, with a pretty little trill in his voice.

Then Billie Brownie went to call on the Red-Breasted Nuthatch and those he heard of how these birds loved the great forest though at times they wandered off to see other places, too, and often they went for a trip with the Chickadee family of the White-Breasted Nuthatch.

They told Billie Brownie of the lady who always put sweet on a lilac bush so that her bird friends could have nice meals all through the winter.

"We have blunt little bills and point bills," said the Nuthatch, "and that is really quite easy to remember. For one part of us is pointed and one is not, and that to us seems very simple.

"We don't think anyone would forget and say, 'Let us be on the lookout for the birds with blunt bills and pointed bills.'"

"No, surely they will be on the lookout for the birds with the pointed bills and the blunt bills. For these belong to the Nuthatch family.

"We of the Red-Breasted family
are not so well known as the ones of the White-Breasted family. The latter are the ones about the lady's house where the sweet hangs on the nearby lilac bush.

"But we have paid for a visit, too.
The White-Breasted comes are bigger than we are. They, of course, there is more reddish brown to us and more white to the crowns as you'd imagine by their names.

"Then, too, the White-Breasted come has white faces. And our voices are higher in pitch. These are some of the differences.

"We hope we've told enough, Billie Brownie."

And Billie Brownie thanked them and said that now he thought he would always be able to tell the difference between the two families of Nuthatches.

Cute in a Baby—Awful at Three—and it's Dangerous

by Ruth Brittain

Thumb sucking does look sweet in a baby, but it is disgusting in the three-year-old and sometimes it hangs on until fifteen or sixteen! The habit may cause an ill-formed mouth or induce adenoids; and it always interferes with digestion. Binding the sleeve over the hand; attaching mittens, or putting on cardboard cuffs, which prevent bending the arms at the elbows, are some of the ways to stop the habit.

Another bad habit—irregularity in bowel action—is responsible for weak bowels and constipation in babies.
Give the tiny bowels an opportunity to act at regular periods each day. If they don't get at first, a little Fletcher's Castoria will soon regulate them.
Every mother should keep a bottle of it handy to use in case of colic, cholera, diarrhea, gas on stomach and bowels, constipation, loss of sleep, or when baby is cross and feverish. Its gentle influence over baby's system enables him to get full nourishment
from his food, helps him gain, strengthens his bowels.

Castoria is purely vegetable and harmless—the recipe is on the wrapper. Physicians have prescribed it for over 50 years. With each package, you get a valuable book on Motherhood. Look for "Chas. H. Fletcher's in the last five years, according to the city gone a year without a single death from diphtheria. The previous diphtheria record breaker was Duluth, Minn., in 1925. Seven cities with more than 100,000 inhabitants, had no typhoid deaths last year, the medical

Yonkers, N. Y.; Paterson, N. J.; Richmond, Va.; Canton, Ohio; Kan-

since studies of typhoid death were started in 1915.

Dame Fashion took a great fancy the other day to the modern fish-globe. You know the most attractive things in the world are said to be "something to eat and something in motion."

Then, of course, Dame Fashion had to look at some fish, and what a marvelous time she had! She was right among 400 or 500 of them, and learning something new every minute...

But after Dame Fashion had looked at golden fish; large, small and medium, both of the common variety and of those with elaborately divided tails—like any good fashion person, she turned her attention to the trimmings...

Collarless dresses are worn with coats ornamented with collars of the most complicated design—the collars square collars, and collars that button under the chin.

By their baggage you shall know them! It is a modern version of an ancient aphorism. And it is very true, especially when traveling abroad.

Is THIRTY the Love Deadline?

George Jean Nathan is well known as an editor, author and critic. He was born in Fort Wayne, Ind., in 1885, entered Cornell University, and was graduated in 1904.

By GEORGE JEAN NATHAN The result of years in browsing in the philosophical pastures of Plato, Socrates, Hegel, Schopenhauer, Kant and Simon and Schuster is plainly evident in the case of Will Durant.

Fondling his beard, Professor Will has generated a profound veneration to the effect that no man, and by inference no woman, is capable of falling in love after the age of thirty.

As a philosopher, he may be said to have his weak points. In the first place, to argue that a man or a woman is incapable after thirty of succumbing to what is called love is to argue that only a man or a woman under thirty is capable of self-devotion.

True devotion, to revert to Professor Durant's phrase, is hardly a gift at which youth excels. Surely the professor would not have us believe that the love of boys and girls is either founded upon or inspired by any such phenomenon.

It is a platitude, grounded in statistics, that marriages after thirty are generally more successful than marriages contracted before thirty.

It is a platitude, grounded in statistics, that marriages after thirty are generally more successful than marriages contracted before thirty. While no Pollyanna, I have a feeling that devotion, if not love, must have something to do with the prosperity and endurance of the post-thirty hitch.

"AS NECESSARY AS BREAD"

Mrs. Skahan's Opinion of Pinkham's Compound

Saugus Centre, Mass.—"I have taken 10 bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and would no more be without a bottle in the house than I would be without bread. It has made a new woman of me. I used to be so cross with my husband when I was suffering that I don't know how he stood me. Now I am cheerful and strong and feel younger than I did ten years ago when my troubles began."

Great Lakes to the Sea

(National Industries News Service)

Nature created a great natural highway to serve the United States and Canada. The largest system of connecting lakes in the world exists, ready to take care of transportation for a considerable part of the North American Continent.

As an engineering proposition the deep-waterways from the head of Lake Superior through the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence River to the Atlantic Ocean does not present obstacles comparable to those encountered and conquered when the Continent was cut in twain by the building of the Panama Canal.

With such illustrations of successful engineering it appears unfair to keep the Great Lakes waiting any longer with excuses that the bombing of Nature's great highways is either too hard to do, or too expensive.

SYNOPSIS

Webster Bronz is serving as a scout and spy for the army under General Braddock preparing for the advance on Fort Duquesne. He has just returned to Alexandria from a visit to the fort, where, posing as a Frenchman, he has secured valuable information. Braddock, bred to European warfare, fails to realize the importance of the news. Bronz is sent back to Fort Duquesne, also bearing a message to George Croghan, English emissary among the Indians. Bronz joins his friend and fellow scout, Round Paw, Indian chief, and they set out. On the way they fall in with a typical backwoodsman, Balsar Cromit, who joins them. The party encounters a group of settlers threatening a young girl, Elsie Dinwiddie, whom they accuse of witchcraft. Bronz saves her from them. The girl disappears. Webster delivers his message to Croghan. Young Col. George Washington rescues Bronz from bullying English soldiers. He wounds a bully in a fight, and finds Elsie Dinwiddie. Bronz is sent on a scouting expedition to Fort Duquesne.

He had been the officer; now he was the friend. Lowering his voice and smiling gently he said: "I know how you dislike discipline, Webster. Forest-running makes a man that way. I have presented the matter to General Braddock and it's his wish you go at once. But, as soon as he gets a grasp on all conditions here, he will insist all scouts be under military discipline. So it's well you go now."

"Immediately. There is a young woman in camp, who has been masquerading as a man. Her sex has been discovered by the wagoners. They may say she is a French spy. She is Elsie Dinwiddie, of Great Cove. She was driven from the valley the day I left there on the charge she is a witch. I vouch for her as a poor unfortunate young woman and thoroughly loyal to the colonies."

"She shall not be molested. But there are too many women in camp already. I wish you good luck. I would like to go with you, only I'd never pass as a Frenchman."

"I hastened to the Iroquois camp and found Round Paw smoking and talking with George Croghan. The Onondaga was quick to respond when I promised action. We secured a small bag of meat and some extra arrowheads for flints, for I ever considered them better than the imported article. As we traveled the ancient path, the Onondaga informed me Major Chapman had taken his road builders over Will's mountain, a most foolish choice and one that would cause great waste of time and much hardship. Colonel Washington could have designated a much better road, as could any of Braddock's scouts had their advice been sought."

It was near sunset by the time we had covered five miles, and as my haste to depart had been to avoid being called back and interrupted by any military instructions, we were free to camp and take it leisurely. I built a fire while Round Paw was perching on a Turkey. While we were broiling our supper a tall lanky figure blundered into the light. It was Balsar Cromit. "Been chasing you fellows," he informed us.

"How is this, Balsar?" I sternly demanded. "You're a wasp, and your place is back in camp. We are out on a scout."

"If I ain't wanted, I can scout alone," he replied, displaying his mean, inglorious grin. "Wild timber enough for all of us to scout in. But I'll be mortally stung if I'll stick on the creek and eat salt meat while the thief who stole my rifle is loose to hunt for fresh meat."

"Some one stole your rifle?" "If we lick the French as certain as that there rifle has been stole, then the French are everlastingly walloped this very minute. The thief lit out ahead of you fellows. Come round the mountain by this path."

The Onondaga caught only fragments of Cromit's talk and asked me to repeat it. After I did so, he advised:

"Let the blue-breaking man come with us, if we meet a bear he shall show how strong his hands are against claws."

"All right, Balsar; you're one of us, but I'll not be responsible for the consequences once you get back to the army. But this is a spy you haven't a spy."

"I'll have a mighty hard one when I overhaul that dog thief. I knew he'd look me young when I dreamed of that witch-girl, Conners' heart!"

CHAPTER IV

The Cabin

The Onondaga arrived as shortly after twilight had whispered to me: "Man come. Man."

and bailed on beholding the ashes of our campfire. He leaned on his rifle and after a bit of glancing about sounded a low whistle. This was a signal that brought others to his side. At first glance I thought them to be Indians, but as we observed their unkempt hair, the manner of their walk, their long rifles and fur hats, we knew them to be white men. There were ten of them and their leader was as dark as a negro. All were dressed like Indians. Besides a rifle each carried an ax as well as a knife at his belt. My second thought was that they must be Frenchmen, who always imitated their red companions in dress, and thus endeared themselves to the Indian. I was lining the leader with my rifle and was about to order him to drop his gun when the first man to break through the timber knelt by the fire-stones, thrust his hands into the ashes, quickly withdrew them, and announced:

"Still not. Balsar! not more's two hours ago."

"Look about," harshly commanded the leader. Before they could move I called out: "Who are you men?"

None of them appeared to move a muscle until the leader slowly turned his head in our direction and tersely answered: "White men."

"But this was scarcely sufficient, for the times were ticklish. So I said: 'If you're the right kind of white men, we're glad to see you. If you are the wrong kind, you will go to Will's creek with us.'

"Will's creek is where we're bound for, to help General Braddock whip the French and Injuns. So show yourselves."

There were along every border certain small bands of white men who had reverted to savagery, and who waged war on all decent people. Mentioning for my companions to remain in hiding I stepped into the small opening, and said: "We're scouts for Braddock's army. Now talk to me with bells."

The last speaker again spoke, saying, and civilly enough: "Our cap'n here is 'Black Jack' of the Juniata. We go to help General Braddock."

There was none on the frontier who had not heard of Black Jack, the Indian killer. His family had been murdered by the red men while he was away on a hunting trip. On returning to the ruins of his little cabin he had vowed to devote the remainder of his life to exterminating the race. From Florida to New York province his name was known, and many the story was related about him and his never-ending quest for revenge. The Indians attributed much sorcery to him and no longer considered him a mere human being. Too many dead red men had been found on trail and mountainside, in lonely valley and on

Dog Formally Tried for Stealing Chicken

Today the patriots have plenty to wear themselves out on, but one thing that does not annoy them is the trial of dogs for committing the crime of stealing chickens. Racine, the great French poet and dramatist, whom we loosely think of today as a placid old living in a placid age, satirized such a trial in his day.

He portrayed the case of a dog accused of stealing and eating a cup of which had been scheduled to adorn somebody's dinner table. Racine painted a ludicrous picture in his play, "Les Plaidiers," which means the attorneys. Horribly "pleaded," of the dog before the court. The lawyers are so windy an error they should be in such a room, the judge so completely lost in impartiality. The dog is condemned to the banks of unnamed creeks, to permit of an ordinary human status.

As guides, scouts and riflemen, these ten men were worth a thousand plundering regulars when it came to sleep forest fighting. They would find their own food and be incapacitated neither by cold nor heat. I congratulated General Braddock for having such woodmen serving him. I was worried over one problem their coming had created, however. For the Onondaga's benefit I called out:

"Keep back."

"Who be you telling Iroquois to 'keep back'?" rumbled Captain Jack, his dark eyes seeking to search out the thicket behind me.

"An Indian friend of mine who hates the French," I told him. "You stand no chance of harming him if you should be so minded. General Braddock needs your help sorely, but he has many Iroquois in his camp."

"His Injuns are safe. So's yours," was the slow response.

"Cromit, come forward," I called. The red-head crawled through the bushes, all his teeth showing. Standing behind me he drawled:

"The Onondaga is a quarter-mile away by this time."

"Your Injun is safe so long as he scouts against the French," growled Captain Jack.

Cromit eyed him with kindling interest and said: "You look mighty snaky, mister. Do you ever rassle?"

The swarty killer turned a gloomy glance upon my friend, then said to me:

"Your Injun's safe when with you or in Braddock's camp. We knew Croghan had some Iroquois there. But when we meet a redskin alone in the woods we never ask to see his road-belt. We shoot. How is this Braddock? He can't know anything about Injuns and their natur'."

"General Braddock is a drill-master. I came away from the camp so's not to be under military rule."

"He puts folks under orders, eh? And Captain Jack thrugged his big shoulders in disgust. 'We don't want any pay or rations. We're going to Will's creek because Croghan's there. All we ask of Braddock is to be let alone. We live and fight in our own way. We'll have our own way if we help him.'"

He jerked his head toward the valley path and his men fell in behind him and the ten of them passed from our sight. Invaluable as they would be to Braddock in guarding against surprise attacks, I doubted if the martinet would accept them on their own terms. As they vanished through the green wall I turned back to the fire. Round Paw was there.

Cromit chuckled: "The Injun never budged a inch. I lied like Topset when I said he'd run away."

We made our breakfast of broiled squirrels and then pushed on. We crossed Savage run, scarcely more than a rivulet, and camped on Little meadow with the rugged slope of Meadow mountain behind us. So far we had found no fresh signs of Indians, but during the morning of the 22nd day we came upon the scalped remains of a warrior. I pronounced him to be a Twilightee, but Round Paw fastidiously:

"Jomontady Hagsal!" (meaning the dead man was a Huron).

The Onondaga said death had been caused by a small bullet, and he accepted my theory that the Black Hunter and his men had bagged the fellow.

Scouting farther on we came to the remains of a fresh campfire. It was not more than a night old and it was too large for an Indian to have lighted. Nor could I attribute it to the Black Hunter's band, for Captain Jack and his men would make a blaze after the Indian fashion.

The Onondaga was puzzled, for it placed a third party near the scene of the killing. My friend requested Cromit and me to stay by the charred sticks while he investigated more closely. Before setting forth he examined the spot most patiently and finally announced:

"One man. Long gun."

the gallery. Although what he would do in the gallery is a subject of wonder. Perhaps he was supposed to be a mascot. But the lawyer for the dog sits upon the idea of hanging before the court the dog's sons and daughters, a litter of puppies, "poor children that would be rendered orphaned." The judge is touched by this story, for he also has children. They come of the race is not related. Finally the dog was "shockingly executed of the head."—Kansas City Star.

Gordon Merrick has arrived from the University of Chicago to take up his duties as assistant to R. B. Campbell, acting director of the Jornada range reserve in New Mexico. The reserve, twenty-five miles northeast of Las Cruces, consists of 193,486 acres and came under forest service control in 1914.

H. F. Sigworth of Glendale, Ariz., was elected state commander of the Arizona Veterans of Foreign Wars at their eighth annual convention at Phoenix. Sigworth succeeds John A. Harps of Phoenix. J. L. Hubbs of Miami was chosen senior vice-commander and Walter Raghetti named junior vice-commander.

The new highway between Gallup and Hogback, N. Earl Nelson, bank bandit who was captured following the robbery of the Clarkdale branch of the Bank of Arizona and after his companion, Willard Forrester had been slain, was taken to Clemenceau for arraignment, and was held to the Superior Court in default of $100,000 bond. Nelson waived a preliminary hearing of bank robbery and refused to make any statement, other than he had retained an attorney in Prescott who would represent him at any further hearings.

Actual work on a new aviation landing field at Safford, Ariz., was started recently and a 2,800 foot runway 100 feet wide is now nearly complete. Another runway will be constructed in the near future, crossing the present one at a twenty-five degree angle and forming a huge letter X. A large white circle will be placed where the two runways cross in order that aircraft may locate the center of the field from the air. The field will also be fenced.

Arrangements were entered into between Fort Worth parties and the Arizona, N. M., Chamber of Commerce regarding the building of a sixty-five room hotel.

The season's first shipment of cantaloupes from the Moon, Ariz., district—two carloads—was made recently from the shipping sheds of the E. A. Gerrard Company. The shipment marks the opening of what growers expect to be one of the most successful seasons in the history of the cantaloupe growing industry in the Moon district.

FAMOUS BELL BACK IN SAN FRANCISCO

Used in Early Days to Call Out Citizens.

San Francisco.—Priceless relic of early days in San Francisco, the Vigilante bell that used to summon the people to council and war at Fort Gunnybags, here in the '50s, has been hung in the marine department of the chamber of commerce, a gift to the chamber from the First Baptist church of Petaluma.

Stirring memories of those times which tried the hearts of San Francisco's best men and the pecks of her worst were recalled when Robert Newton Lynch, vice president and general manager of the chamber, announced the presentation. It was through his efforts that the bell was brought back here.

The bell was purchased in 1856 by the Vigilante committee, of which W. T. Coleman was then president. It was bought from a Boston firm of metal workers, Conroy & Connor, weighed 1,100 pounds, and cost $1,500. It is bronze.

Hung in the steeple of old Fort Gunnybags, it sounded the death knell of many a reckless villain, proclaimed peace and victory to the upright and struck terror to the hearts of the vicious when the Vigilantes found it necessary to take the law into their own hands.

In 1858, when the bell no longer was required, the residents of Petaluma bought it from the Vigilantes for $550 and hung it in their first Baptist church. There it was used both for religious services and as a time bell, sounding the hour at 6 a. m., noon, and 6 p. m.

When the Civil war started, Union sympathizers rang it to announce Northern victories and those friendly to the Southern cause became angry. To prevent discord among members of the community, the bell was taken down and hauled away one dark night to a warehouse. A few hours later Northern sympathizers returned it to the steeple, hoisting the Stars and Stripes above it.

The next night a Southerner made his way unobserved into the belfry, and with a hammer sought to silence the bell forever. He made a big crack in it, but unlike that in the famous Liberty bell, this had no silencing effect. The bell remained in use until 1907, and its chimes could be heard through the countryside within a ten-mile radius.

Future Seaplanes to Be Less Cumbersome

Langley Field, Va.—Seaplanes of the future need not be so cumbersome as those of the past.

This has been established by experts of the national advisory committee for aeronautics in a minute examination of the work actually done by a seaplane's pontoons, which enable it to alight on water, but cut down its speed in the air.

Present specifications for navy seaplanes call for pontoons having a structure sufficiently strong to withstand a shock on landing of 15 pounds to the square inch. Measurements made here with delicate instruments attached to various points on the floating surface of pontoons in operation, however, show that only seven pounds of pressure is exerted to the square inch, suggesting that their strength can easily be reduced with a material saving in weight and a corresponding improvement in performance and endurance in the air.

Wants Typist Job, But Has Only One Hand

Detroit, Mich.—Mrs. Flora Parker is looking for a job as typist or stenographer and she has only one arm.

When she was two and one-half years old in London she was the victim of an accident. After she grew up she taught school in London and then there was a young chap who had "gone out," as they say over there, to Canada. He sent for her. They were married. Two years later there was a baby and then, suddenly, Mrs. Parker was the Widow Parker. Little Flora is three.

"I intend to make my own living," she said. "It is going to be difficult to make any prospective employer believe that I can be efficient. I can be. I am fast on the typewriter and my missing arm has never been a missing one to me. You see, I lost it so young that I never knew its use, and what we never have, we do not miss."

Kill Sacred Cow

Sims, Ind.—Six persons were killed and nine wounded near here when a party of pilgrims attempted to prevent the slaughter of a cow held sacred by them. The cow was killed, and a riot ensued.

Canned Music Stirrs Ire of Paris Critics

Paris.—Something must be done to head off canned music, say the terribly shocked musical critics who contemplate the speedy abolition of the gramophone in protest. It is the recent sentiment over machine played music, the perfection of phonographs, and the construction of mechanical orchestras for motion picture houses that has stirred the classic ire of the judges of the press.

Scraps of Humor

SUBTLETY

An Oxford undergraduate, a son of the vicarage, discovered he was uncomfortably short of money, so he spent some time concocting a letter that would have the right effect upon a somewhat severe parent.

When finally completed, the letter read as follows: "My dear father, I wonder if you will oblige me very greatly by sending me a copy of this month's parish magazine, and a five-pound note?" P. S.—Don't forget the parish magazine.

"Bride—Boo, hoo! Walter doesn't like my cooking. Her Mother—How do you know? Does he say so? Bride—He didn't come right out and say so, but he told me he liked fruit cake to be at least six months old—and we've only been married five weeks!

WHAT FLAVOR?

"I shor got in a jam yeastddy, Jimmy." "What kinda jam, Bill?" "Think it was strawberry."

Not Responsible

Husband, (anxiously)—My wife seems not to have the slightest interest in life. Doctor—What makes you think that? "Well, I've tried her with golf, billiards, football and racing, and it's just like talking to a stone!"

Wonderful

"You know Boothby—great fellow for detail." "He is, that! He's the sort of chap who would go and get married and be able afterward to tell you whether it was Mendelssohn, Lohengrin or Tannhauser they played during the ceremony."

THE BEST

Sims Kid—What d'you like best about school? Fat Kid—Goin' home from it.

Business View

"You seem to have a good deal of faith in doctors," said Barratt to his invalid friend. "I have," was the reply. "A doctor would be foolish to let a good customer like me die."

Telegation

Housewife—I should think you would be ashamed to beg in this neighborhood. Tramp—Don't apologize for it, ma'am; I've seen worse.—Montreal Star.

Easily Named

Very Friendly Visitor—Did you have any difficulty in choosing a name for baby? Fond Mother—Not the slightest. You see, dear, we've only one rich relative.

What Does It Matter?

"Did you really understand the learned lecture you heard last night?" "No, but that didn't matter. I had a free ticket."—OK with the Sacred (Lelping).

Magistrate—It seems strange to me that you could keep on robbing that enormous corporation for so long without being caught. The Prisoner (brightly)—Well, the corporation was pretty busy itself.

Making Them Work

"How nice for the husband." "What rent?" "Some of them are teaching their littlest children what to say when they're talking."

FARM STOCK

SHADE FOR SHEEP IN HOT WEATHER

Lying in the sun under a heavy woolen blanket is no more pleasant for sheep than for humans. If pastures do not have the necessary shade, therefore, some cheaply built shelter from the sun makes sheep growling more profitable.

Prof. R. S. Curtis, animal husbandman at the North Carolina State college, states that shade for sheep is just as essential as for hogs. While the hogs suffer from heat because of fat bodies and physical construction, sheep also suffer because of the heavy wool with which they are covered. It is easy to build a combined corral and shade structure where the sheep may be protected at night from prowling dogs and from the heat of the no-day sun.

Such a structure is usually about 16 feet square with a projecting roof, higher through the center and sloping to the sides. The four corner posts are usually 3 1/2 feet high and the two center posts about 5 1/2 or 6 feet from the ground. This is not so unimportant, but the shed must not be too low. Free circulation of air as well as protection from the sun is desired.

Professor Curtis suggests that each side end be boarded tightly and in winter the northern end might be closed with a removable door. The shelter should be so placed that it will obstruct the morning and afternoon sunlight. Heavy woven wire about the shelter, buried 6 or 8 inches in the ground will make this shelter ideal for use as a corral.

Another suggestion Professor Curtis makes is to bed down the shelter if the soil is of a heavy clay. Otherwise the sheep may get badly soiled. Such a shelter is also a good place in which to keep the salt box. The cost of such a building is negligible, since the roofing is the most expensive part, but they are essential for pastures where there is not sufficient natural shade.

Self-Feeders Save Time and Labor for Farmers

Self-feeders for hogs not only save time and labor, but increase gains and conserve feed. Hogs usually eat less kankage from a self-feeder than they do if the supplement is hand fed, while self-feeders are ideal for feeding miserais. The free choice system of feeding which allows each hog to balance its own ration of corn, kankage and minerals is very successful and is made most practical by the use of self-feeders.

Another profitable practice is to give little pigs grain in addition to their mother's milk after they are three weeks old, and that can best be done by self-feeders in a pig creep. Shelled corn is best for them at first, and later middlings or shorts, ground oats or hulled oats can be added, each in a separate compartment of the self-feeder. It is very important to keep feed for little pigs fresh and clean to prevent scours.

Heavy Losses Recorded Annually in Marketing

Records show from 85,000 to 105,000 hogs die annually in transit from loading points to terminal markets in this country and the number of hogs crippled approximates 140,000 to 170,000 head annually. Losses from these two sources average around $5 for every carload of 70 hogs shipped to market, when spring dead hogs at $25 per head and crippled at $6. This would give a total annual loss on the country's hog crop of about $3,500,000.

Live Stock Hints

Fermented feed isn't good for pigs.

Bran isn't a safe feed for young pigs. It irritates the bowels and may cause trouble.

Pork production, if it be profitable, demands good pastures. Alfalfa is the best hog pasture.

Alfalfa or clover hay should be supplied to pigs being fattened in the dry lot. Good quality fealy hay is the best substitute for pasture during the winter season.

Lambs need frequent changes of pasture. When shearing the sheep do it on a warm, dry day. Wet fleeces do not store well. Dip the sheep or spray them for ticks within ten days after shearing.

The farmer who boozes his alfalfa storage is raising one of the best hay crops and furnishing his hogs with excellent pasture.

Usually the in-and-outer goes in heavy when hogs are high, and by the time they are ready for market he may be on the loss side.

The simplest remedy for roundworm is omeprazole suspension. Dose: the animals 1/2 oz. or 15 cc. three times a day for 10 days, then give an 80-pound pig a suspension, repeating for three days in succession.

IRATE FATHER HALTS ROMANCE OF GYPSIES

Chief Is Nabbed on Charge of Kidnaping.

Albany, N. Y.—A modern-day gypsy trail, followed none the less skillfully or relentlessly because it led over paved roads through cities and towns instead of over woodland paths, ended near here in East Greenbush recently when John Demitro, gypsy chief, was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Horton, charged with kidnaping thirteen-year-old Rose Thompson, vivacious dark-eyed daughter of Wanda Thompson, gypsy tribal leader of Bridgeport, Conn.

Demitro was arrested at his camp by four state troopers from G troop barracks in Troy and taken to the Rensselaer county jail while a hundred trilateral men, their eyes blazing with wrath, looked on, hesitating to make any openly hostile gesture toward the four troopers.

Rose, who was found in Demitro's roadside camp, was turned over to her father, who had been following the trail of Demitro's band ever since March 1 in the search for his daughter. He took her back with him to the house in which he is temporarily staying here and a few moments later two truckloads of gypsies from Demitro's camp disembarked menacingly in front of the house.

Detectives Avert Violence. Before anything could happen, however, four Albany detectives appeared and ordered the Demitro faction to move on. Their order was reluctantly obeyed and the Thompson followers breathed an evident sigh of relief. Two private detectives guarded them the rest of the night.

The story of the events that preceded the arrest, being concerned entirely with gypsy jealousies and customs, is characteristically confused. From statements made here by Thompson and advices received from Bridgeport, however, it appears that Thompson is the leader of a gypsy band that was quartered in a house in South Main street in Bridgeport last winter while Demitro's band lived in a house on State street.

According to the story received from Bridgeport, Demitro's wife became ill in February and Thompson consented to let his daughter go to Demitro's house to nurse her. Thompson then went to New York to arrange for opening some concessions he owns in Starlight Amusement park, the Bronx. When he returned March 1 Demitro's band was gone and so was Rose. Thompson traced them to North Adams, Mass., over the Lebanon mountains into New York and finally came to Albany and enlisted the aid of Assistant District Attorney David A. Wanger.

Asserts He Bought Girl. Demitro asserted here, however, that in accordance with gypsy custom he had paid Thompson $1,500 for Rose to make her the bride of his fourteen-year-old son, John, Jr., and it was noticed that as she left the Demitro camp Rose cast a lingering look back at a young boy who remained behind in the camp.

"What would you do?" Thompson exclaimed, when asked about the transaction. "I good American citizen. No want gypsy marriage for my girl. Want good American marriage. Take out third papers for citizen. I fight John Demitro but it was not because $1,500 was too little for my Rose. I want the Rose to have good American law marriage."

Demitro is held without bail pending extradition proceedings which are being started in Bridgeport.

Norway's Idle Ships May Get an Indemnity

Copenhagen.—One of the greatest problems in the Scandinavian countries is the ever increasing number of idle ships.

Admittedly, says the Scandinavian Shipping Gazette, is Norway worse off in this respect. Proportionately she has more ships laid up than any other nation in the world. Denmark and Sweden also are hard hit and every week brings sorry tidings of further laying up of tonnage.

The latest relief theory is an organized laying up scheme in connection with a mutual insurance system paying indemnity on a fixed scale to owners of idle ships. It is of Norwegian origin and has won recognition among Norwegian owners, but must have international co-operation. From a Scandinavian point of view all such theoretical projects, even if carried through, are mere makeshifts, providing no sound basis for existence or growth of a national merchant marine.

Shipping men say world tonnage is much bigger than the demand, and that it is idle to dream of better conditions for a long time.

Phosphate Taken From Caves to Enrich Farms

Vienna.—Phosphate deposits in mountain caves, the product of long centuries of habitation by swallows, bats and other animals, have been opened to exploitation for use in Europe's grain fields. Three notable caves have lately been explored, according to Franz Kirbasser, an engineer resident in Romania. These are the Dragon's cave and the Choklevian cave in Austria and Minerva cave in France.

The first two have already yielded 25,000 tons of phosphate earth. The latter, estimated to contain 120,000 tons, has not yet been exploited.

SELLERS OF BLOOD SEEK TO UNIONIZE

"Bleeders" Want to Raise Scale of Rates.

Berlin.—Competition in the sale of human blood has become so keen in Vienna that the price has dropped to 50 Austrian shillings a liter.

This blood is used in blood transfusions. These have become so common in medical practice in that city that a regular trade has developed and quite a number of people live solely from the sale of their blood.

Many of them have been bled 12 to 14 times; the record is 16 times. The Eisberg clinic is the distribution center of the "bleeders"; from there they are sent to the various hospitals as needed.

The "bleeding" trade is, of course, the last refuge of the impoverished. After about 14 bleedings, however, they find themselves "without blood" and without money, and the constant bleeding has made them incapable of heavy manual labor for life. The names of the patients whose lives are often saved by the blood transfusions are kept secret from the "bleeders" in order to prevent later money requests. Personal gratitude is therefore unable to help them.

Recently the "bleeders" tried to organize a union in order to raise the price of their blood, but the effort failed and the "bleeders" trade is therefore still run on the open shop principle.

Sunlight Baths Aid English Mine Workers

London.—By taking a holiday in Switzerland and sitting in the sun five pit-boys from the mines of Mansfield have demonstrated the value of light baths for men and boys who work underground. A report of the committee which has been testing the usefulness of light in industrial hygiene has just been published.

Following the Swiss experiment with sunlight baths, a clinic was opened and 50 volunteers from the mines, fourteen to seventeen years old, have been given ultraviolet light baths several times a week for three months. At the end of the time the boys had gained in weight an average of more than four pounds. Boys of the same ages who did not get the light baths gained a little over two and a half pounds during the same three months. The boys who had the light baths gained in height more than the boys who did not.

The clinic will be continued, and the committee report recommends that wherever pithead baths are installed light baths should be established with them. The report warns, however, that artificial light baths should be given only under medical supervision.

How to Measure Fish! Who'll Say; Who'll Say?

Olympia, Wash.—How to find the length of fish is now one of the world's puzzles, so after University of Washington sages failed to agree over the method Judge Chester A. Bachelor was left to decide.

Prof. E. Victor Smith declared that since the state game law does not specify the proper way to measure them from tip of head to tip of tail. Now comes Dean John Cobb of the college of fisheries: "The proper measurement of a fish is from the point of 'V' in the tail to the end of lower lip." Judge Bachelor in his decision will decide if Roy Jensen was justly accused of selling fish under the legal length.

Oldest House in Paris Is Occupied by Laundry

Paris.—Seven centuries have passed and kings, emperors, wars and revolutions have come and gone, but the oldest house in Paris is doing business at the old stand.

It is a laundry, now in the center of the city, close to the Cathedral of Notre Dame. The laundry isn't that old, but the owner says the pedigree of the building goes back to Louis IX. The date of the house, 1230, is proudly displayed on a stone set in the street wall, and the laundry's sign is "At the oldest house in Paris."

Open Mosque to Public

Jerusalem.—Sightseers are now admitted to the Great Mosque of Hebron, built over a cave said to contain the bodies of Abraham and Sarah, Isaac and Rebecca and Jacob and Leah.

Tunnel Tolls in Seven Months, $2,401,980

New York.—Exceeding even the most optimistic expectations, the Holland tunnel in the first seven months of its operation has produced toll receipts of $2,401,980.75. Total expenses including amortization of $48,000,000 in bonds, has been estimated at $10,500 a day. The average daily return as far has been $11,905.50.

The New York-New Jersey Tunnel commission believes the tunnel will have paid for itself in ten years. At the time it was projected, engineers estimated not more than 1,572,000 vehicles would use the tube the first year. In the first seven months, ending June 11, 1,925, 305 vehicles passed through the tunnel.
