What Jefferson Wrote

The Virginia Statute for Religious Freedom, written by Jefferson and considered by him as one of his greatest achievements, was the first legal enactment guaranteeing religious freedom in the world. Edwin A. Alderman of the University says this concerning this statute, which its author, the founder of the Democratic party had inscribed upon his tomb:

"It is a thrilling thing to see it and read it upon the yellowed pages of Henning's Statutes of Virginia, and to reflect that it was placed there not only to cure existing ills and evils in the young state about to embrace the theory of Democracy but to lift up the hearts and minds of brave men if, in after ages, this central faith of the Democratic idea should be assailed, and stand as a rebuke and a stumbling block to those who would assail it. I believe it would be a patriotic service to the nation as a whole to republish it in striking form so that he who runs may read."

Preamble.

I. "Whereas, Almighty God has created the mind free; That all attempts to influence it by temporal punishments or burdens, or by civic incapacitations, tend only to beget habits of hypocrisy and meanness, and are a departure from the plan of the holy author of our religion, who being Lord of both body and mind, yet choose not to propagate it by coercions or either, as was in his Almighty's power to do; that our civil rights have no dependence on our religious opinions any more than our opinions in physics and geometry; that therefore the proscribing any citizen as unworthy of the public confidence by laying upon him an incapacity of being called to office of trust and emolument, unless he profess or renounce this or that religious opinion, is depriving him injuriously of those privileges and advantages to which, in common with his fellow-citizens, he has a natural right; that it tends only to corrupt the principles of that religion it is meant to encourage, by bribing with a monopoly of worldly honors and emoluments, those who will externally profess and conform to it—

II. "Be it enacted by the General Assembly, that all men shall be free to profess, and by argument to maintain, their opinion in matters of religion, and that the same shall in no wise diminish, enlarge, or affect their civil capacities.

III. We are free to declare, and do declare, that the rights hereby asserted are of the natural rights of mankind...."

A Woman's View

W. C. T. U. VETERAN WORKER APPEALED AT LAWLESSNESS
Mrs. Amanda Gilchrist of Stansberry, Missouri, in a statement recently published in the Kansas City Star says:

"I came from a line of Methodist preachers on both sides. My husband, now 76 years old; my father, my grandfather, great-grandfather and two of my sons were Methodist preachers. My husband's father and two of his sons Baptist clergymen. All of them were (and the ones living still are) ardent, tireless workers in the cause of temperance. Much of our energy has been used up in the pursuit of the demon rum. I devoted the best years of an active life despite the time it took to rear twelve children in the old-fashioned way, to earnest, self-sacrificing labor against liquor.

"Prohibition and the terrible far-reaching train of devastating evils, which, like malevolent cancer, are rapidly consuming the body politic of our great country, have forced me to change my mind completely and to reverse the training and convictions of a long, active life. I am an American woman, native through five generations, and have forty living grand-children and half as many great-grandchildren.

"As an active W. C. T. U. worker—a 'white ribbon' veteran and a tireless church worker, a dyed-in-the-wool Missouri 'Puritan'—I confess that modern 'Prohibition' is a damnable curse to this country. I see the destructive results on all sides. Now almost every home is a saloon. Now the school children I observe are drinkers and lawbreakers. Bootlegging is the main industry of the land!

"This is the evidence before me as I review the shocking results of my tracks for the past eight years through the highways and byways of thirty states. It is universal. All my ancestors were Republicans. I am a Republican, but I am for Governor Smith because he is against this horrible demon."

AFTERWORD

1. The published statement of the 1927 Fair showed net $798.68. Bills for labor, $3.85; Soda, $27.00; Printing, $1.30; Lumber, $3.77, subsequently presented reduced this to $762.76

2. This statement for the 1928 Fair will be changed very little by the payment of any bills out or sales made of stuff on hand. The financial statement will be audited by the Chamber of Commerce.

3. Reports of the Track events and the exhibits will be published in another issue of this paper.

4. Considering the condition of the roads, this Fair has surpassed all expectations. The net receipts will be applied on the expense of the expense now going on at the Community Hall.

5. The management desires to thank all who assisted to handle the various departments so efficiently and carefully.

6. To our out of town visitors, we can only say that we greatly enjoyed your stay and cordially invite you back next year.

We desire also to express our appreciation to H. E. Keller, of Nogal, who donated his prize watermelon and portions of his exhibit to the fair. These were sold and the proceeds turned into the general fund.

Management, Lincoln County Fair.
TO THE PUBLIC

The success of the 1927 and 1928 Fairs has been largely due to the participation of the students of the Carrizozo Schools, especially the athletic department and the orchestra. The basketball games of the Carrizozo School have not been surpassed in Carrizozo. All receipts were covered into the fair fund. It is now planned to give an entertainment or dance in the next two weeks and donate to the athletic fund of the local schools the entire proceeds, as they at this time face the opening season with an empty treasury.

In due time announcements will be made as to definite plans. In the meantime get ready to assist, to show the appreciation of the Chamber of Commerce and the town generally for the hard work and unselfish loyalty of those who held the line for Carrizozo.

Attorney George B. Barber, who has been ill the past two months, died Wednesday afternoon at his home in this city. The funeral will be conducted from the home this afternoon; and interment will be made in the local cemetery.

Mr. Barber was a native of Virginia and was over eighty years of age at the time of his death. In early youth he went with his parents to Milwaukee and received his education in that city. After reaching manhood, he went to Dakota, where he devoted a period to surveying, and later came to New Mexico, landing in Colfax county in 1875, and to Lincoln county the following year, and had made this his home since, with the exception of a few years on the Gulf coast. He was probably the oldest citizen in the county, from the states, in point of residence. He was a resident of the county during the "Lincoln County War," and possessed a fund of information concerning that stirring period.

Mr. Barber was admitted to the bar in 1882, and practiced his profession in Lincoln county and the territory and state of New Mexico since his admission. In 1892-3-4 he served Lincoln, Chaves and Eddy counties as District Attorney. He was faithful in the discharge of his public duties, and throughout his long residence in this county met every responsibility with courage, sincerity and determination. He was one of our most loyal and upright citizens and leaves as a heritage to his family a service of integrity and usefulness which will be a lasting monument to his memory.

A wife, son and three grand-children, to whom he was ever kind, loving and considerate, survive him, and to whom the entire county extends deepest sympathy.

Democrats Saturday Nite

Democratic candidates, pursuant to announcement, reached here Saturday and addressed a good gathering at the court house that night.

In the party were; J. S. Vaught, for United States Senator; Jennie Fortune, Secretary of State; Frank H. Patton, for Attorney General, and Louise H. Coe for State Senator for this district. Ex-Senator Brickley presided, and first introduced Mrs. Coe who made a short pleasant talk on legislative matters. Miss Fortune was then presented and merely announced her candidacy and solicited support for reelection on her record.

Mr. Patton spoke at length on state matters and showed what extravagance had been practiced by the state administration, enough of it so useless and excessive that it is sufficient to have furnished free text books to the children of New Mexico.

Jim Vaught was then introduced and spoke at length on National issues, but did not entirely overlook state affairs, and referred to the present governor as "One Quart Dillon," because the governor had signed a prohibition law passed by the last legislature, which legalized the possession of a quart of whiskey. He also attacked the National Administration on the same question and showed that it was just as hypocritical as the state administration. He declared that there was only one question in the National Campaign and that was Al Smith.

Everybody is either for him or against him, said the speaker; and as the campaign draws to a close the opposing forces are "Smith and Anti-Smith." Jim Vaught is a most interesting speaker and one of those kind who never equivocates nor dodges an issue. Most of those present seemed to agree with him, and those who did not must have respected him for the straightforward manner he handled all public question.

Charlie Siringo Dies

Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Mayer are in receipt of a letter from their daughter, Mrs. Bertha Hunter, who resides in Oakland, California, to which they were informed of the death of Charlie Siringo, which recently occurred at Pasadena, California. His age was given at 73.

The deceased was well known in Lincoln county and throughout the state of New Mexico. He was an old-time cowboy, later a detective and the later years of his life were devoted to writing detective and cowboy stories.

THE COST OF VANITY

By F. A. WALKER

WHEN at last the scales fall from the eyes of thoughtful, earnest aspirants to the high places, they see that vanity is not only a jester but one of the most troublesome and tricky lumps with which they have continually to contend.

The pages of history replete with failures of brilliant world leaders who have stubbed their toes against egotism and fallen so desperately hurt and humiliated that their usefulness ended in dismal oblivion.

The want of substance to satisfy his inflated mind brought Napoleon to ignominious defeat and banish ment.

And what was true in the Nineteenth century is true today, and will always be true.

The same elements of peril crouch ready to spring upon and overwhelm individuals who have an empty pride inspired by an overwhelming conceit of personal attainments.

The young men who, prate over dinner tables, boast without blush of their wonderful abilities and ostentatiously tell one another what the "old man" at the head of the house should do to whip his competitors, are as pal-ably vain and absurd as their empty vapors.

They are piling up debts which vanity sooner or later will proceed to collect with compound interest.

And so it is with puffed-up young women who volunteer pretentious advice to their tired-out mothers, with out lifting a jeweled hand to lighten household burdens, or cheer hearts craving sympathy and love.

The world is overcrowded with these priggish people, who through some caprice of fortune have risen a step or two and foolishly imagine that they are in a position to instruct their elders and pull them about by the nose.

In their conceit they know more about the intricate arts and sciences than do the tutors in universities, more about finance than do the bankers who have spent a lifetime in the

A Crazy Quilt

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THEY do not make them any more. For quilts are cheaper at the store than woman's labor, though a wife men think the cheapest thing in life. But now and then a quilt is spread upon a quilted, old, walnut bed. A crazy quilt of those old days that I am old enough to praise.

Some woman sowed these points and squares into a pattern like life's ches. Here is a flannel that was strong. The poplin that she wore so long. A fragment from a daughter's dress. Like her, a vanished loveliness. Odd patches of such things as these. Old garments and old memories.

And what is life? A crazy quilt; sorrow and joy, and grace and guilt. With here and there a square of blue for some old happiness we knew. For so the hand of time will take the fragments of our lives and make, out of life's remnants as they fall, a thing of beauty, after all.

harness, pulling and tugging to overcome difficulties.

Instead of being courted and followed by over-fool parents, they should be pitied, for they are bound straight to failure.

Each knows more than can be uttered; each lives not by faith, but by pomp, bulled on a crumbling foundation.

They can speak no language under heaven save that of the boastful; give no encouragement to others, nor do any work of value.

Among the Front Runners

By JOHN BLAKE

THERE is a type of race horse that is known as a front runner. While he is out in front he is unbeatable. But let another horse pass him and he immediately becomes discouraged.

He lacks the pluck and persistence to pull victory out of apparent defeat. When conditions are not favorable to himself he just gives up and quits.

Race horses are not the only front runners. Men may be front runners, too.

We see the occasional exhibitions of front running in athletic contests. A prize fighter, for instance, who is outpunching his opponent by a wide margin, may suddenly receive a heavy punch in the body. From then on he becomes discouraged and remains on the defensive, intent only on staying the limit.

A tennis player who is winning his match is the victim of a poor decision by the referee. He immediately abandons all interest in the match and eventually loses it.

Such an athlete is often called a quitter. Those who know him say he is yellow, because he is skillful and capable only when things are going his way.

But all front runners are not athletes, either. We can see any number of them in everyday life.

A man may be an excellent salesman, for instance, as long as his product sells itself. But let him come up against a tough, skeptical cus-

Tasty Salads and Vegetable Dishes

By NELLIE MAXWELL

A MOST appetizing salad when one has no idea what to make for the family, is Peanut and Lettuce Salad.

Crush with a rolling pin one-half cupful of fresh peanuts. Arrange tender lettuce on salad plates, sprinkle the nuts over it with a bit of minced onion and serve with a French dressing.

To keep in touch with new ways of serving foods, one needs to take occasional outings into various restaurants. One may usually come home with enough new ideas to last for some time. Common foods served in an uncommon way, make much difference in the appetite of the family.

Before the frost takes all the good mushrooms, serve a few meals of the delectable vegetable.

Celery With Pig in Blanket.

Cook the coarser stalks of celery until tender, adding a rich white sauce. Around the celery arrange oysters cooked in bacon and serve very hot. Vent birds are also good served this way instead of oysters.

Cauliflower With Mushrooms.

Break into powerettes one head of cauliflower and cook in boiling salted water until tender. Prepare rounds of toast, butter and heap with the cauliflower. Pour over them the following sauce: Chop one cupful of fresh mushrooms, add two tablespoonfuls of butter and some of the caulflower liquor. Simmer until the mushrooms are tender then add one cupful of cream; boil, add one tablespoonful each of flour and butter cooked together, season with salt and pepper and serve poured over the toast and cauliflower.

Creamed Mushrooms.

Clean, peel and slice a pound or two of fresh field mushrooms, add two to three tablespoonfuls of butter and place over the heat, cook five minutes, stirring frequently. Add thin cream, thickened very lightly with a bit of flour and butter cooked together and pour over well-buttered rounds of toast and serve.

Combine sweetbreads with mushrooms and serve cooked as above, in patty shells.

Hollandaise sauce is delicious served with young tender turnips, cut into cubes or latticed.

Cream Prune Pie.

Put through a sieve one cupful of stewed prunes, add one cupful of milk, or half-cupful each of the prune liquor and cream, the yolks of two eggs well beaten, a pinch of salt and enough sugar to make palatable, which is mixed with a teaspoonful of cornstarch. Pour into a pastry-lined plate, cover with a meringue and bake. The meringue may be lightly stirred in, or the filling may be cooked, the shell baked and then the meringue browned lightly.

WHAT DR. CALDWELL LEARNED IN 47 YEARS PRACTICE

A physician watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the system and is not habit forming. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physios and purges. He did not believe they were good for anybody's system. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly.

Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to the nearest druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. B, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

Representative Homer Lyon of North Carolina was talking in Whiteville about an Old World complication.

"When America stepped in," he said, "a very plausible yarn was told us, but this plausible yarn didn't alter a pretty horrid state of affairs.

"A minister was calling on a lady when her young son galloped into the room. High over his head he held a rat by the tail.

"We got him in the cellar, mamma," the little fellow piped. "Don't be afraid. He's dead all right. We lammed him and beat him and jumped on him—tilt!"

"Here the boy noticed the minister for the first time—'until,' he wound up in a low, pious voice, 'God called him home.'"—Los Angeles Times.

Children's Halloween Story

FOR five years young Janet had taken part in the Halloween festivities and had never known just why there was a Halloween, what Halloween meant, nor why they always played so strange, weird, funny games and pranks on this one evening of the year.

But she was almost ashamed to ask anyone. It seemed so absurd, so utterly absurd not to know what Halloween meant.

Yet did everyone know? Weren't there perhaps some others, just as she was thinking, who wished they knew but who hated to ask?

She felt it she would say: "Just what is Halloween?" she would be told:

"Why Halloween—you don't know what Halloween is—" and then there would be a laugh.

Once she had ventured to ask the question, and she had been told that Halloween was a night when children had parties and went about and pretended they were witches and strange folk.

Well, she knew that much! That was what she did know.

What she wondered was why there was a party on a night given such a name—the same itself was somehow difficult.

And now the time had come around again. And there was going to be a party. Oh, it was going to be a gorgeous party.

First of all they were going to dress up in very old and funny clothes.

Janet and her sisters and brothers and all their friends were going to gather at Janet's that evening of the thirty-first of October.

First of all, they were going to have supper, and such a supper it would be, Janet had heard her mother talk about it.

They were going to have the table decorated with an enormous Jack o' Lantern, in the center of Jack a great candle would burn brightly, and from his cut-out eyes and mouth and nose and ears would come the flickering light.

Then there were going to be tiny Jack o' Lanterns at either end of the table with smaller candles in them. And all about the table there would be autumn leaves, and under every autumn leaf a nut would be hidden, for they were going to have nuts at dessert time.

And they were going to have a special supper of chicken and stewed potatoes with plenty of brown gravy which would look like the autumn time, and which would taste ever so good, too.

Ice cream, too, had been promised. Oh, there were the greatest preparations for the party. Janet didn't know just all there would be at the party.

And yet she was sad, for she did so wish she knew what Halloween meant.

And yet again she was ashamed to ask.

It was so horrid to be made fun of. She wished people didn't make fun of others when they didn't know anything.

It would be so much more fun to find out, and then one wouldn't stay ignorant for any length of time, as one was very apt to do if one kept from asking because of the fear of being made fun of.

But Janet knew her mother would not make fun of her. That wasn't the reason she didn't ask her mother. She hated to let her mother think she didn't know. At last, though, she asked, and then her mother told her. Her mother explained that October thirty-first was the night before All Saints' day, or, as it was called, Halloween.

Hallow, her mother told her, meant a holy time, and een was short for evening.

So that the evening before the religious day known as All Saints' day was called always Halloween.

And custom had made Halloween into a time for children, for in many, many countries there were different celebrations and games for children on this evening of the year.

And how happy Janet was that at last she knew what the word meant. And also that Halloween was a time which custom had given to children for fun making!

Between You and Me

Common sense is the most uncommon kind of sense.

By HAROLD BELL WRIGHT

Best People

I ain't never seen a whale myself, but just the same there ain't no loy-down, enery, old sartin' gosh to pass himself off on me as a whale so long as I'm sober. —Brechin' Bill.

THINK it over. I say, it is a good thing for all of us that most of us are a lot better than the rest of us.

A person without a saving sense of superiority would be a poor sort of human being.

If I were not very certain that I am a better man than some I would simply quit trying. I admit I am not much to be proud of. I never took any prizes for anything. I don't even claim to be one of the Best People.

Between you and me I suspect that coroner's juries might more often than we know render the verdict: "Suicide in self-defense."

I wonder who started this equality thing, anyhow. I tell you, it is dangerous.

Professor Drummond rang the bell when he said: "The immediate need of the world is not more of us but, if I may use the expression, a better brand of us."

The trouble is, our ideas about this better brand of us are so hazy. The most popular brand of Best People are distinguished from the vulgar herd by their money. I am not speaking of small change.

No I do not say that we all look upon any person with money as one of our Best People.

You and I know very well that a person may possess great wealth and be not one of the Best People but one of the worst.

The test should be not how much have you, but where did you get it and what use are you making of that which you have?

The test should be not who were your ancestors, or who are your relatives, but what good are you?

Even though I am not educated I know enough not to accept every graduate at his own valuation.

I would rather receive a great, vital, living truth from an illiterate back-woodsman, who violates every rule of grammar, than to have a university president lie to me in perfect English.

It is the usefulness of the graduate, not the graduation, which counts.

It is not enough to be good; one must be good for something.

our Best People. I say that money is quite commonly held to set one apart from the common crowd. You know exactly what I mean.

Why, certainly! To possess money for which one has rendered a real service is good. But you will notice that it is not the service-rendered which brands certain people of wealth, in their own eyes, and in the eyes of those who look up to them, as superior to the rest of us—it is the mere fact that they do actually possess the coin.

How they got it or what they do with it seems to have nothing to do with the case.

Some wealthy people are, in truth, selt of the earth. They spend millions to make life more endurable for the rest of us. But still, the brand which distinguishes them is not that they do good with their money but that they have the millions to spend.

Indeed, the strangest, most ridiculous, most humiliating phenomenon about the possession of much money is this: The less one does to gain it, and the less one does with it or others, the higher one seems to rank among this brand of Best People.

Witness how those who have come into possession of their fortunes with no more personal effort than they expended in acquiring the color of their eyes, look down from those topmost heights of gilded uselessness with sneers of superiority upon those, who by the magnitude of the service they have rendered, by years of grilling labor and personal sacrifice, or by the sheer power of their genius and industry, have earned their fortunes.

You and I know very well that a person may possess great wealth and be not one of the Best People but one of the worst. Judas, for instance, made more money out of a certain transaction than all the other disciples together.

If you were a carlaway on a desert island, in the last stages of starvation, and found an oyster containing a pearl of great value—which would you throw aside, the ornament or the edible?

Huge Monument for Flyers. Huge likenesses in stone of Nungesser and Gull, who were lost in an attempt to fly the Atlantic, are to be erected on the Cliffs at Etretat, near Le Havre, France. Back of them will be a tall shaft of stone in an unusual design, and in the foreground steps and seats for the public.

Oh, no indeed, money is not the only brand which is supposed to mark the Best People. The Family Tree brand is quite distinguishing—oh, quite!

Why, of course, it is a good thing to have ancestors. As you may have noticed most of us do have them—of one sort or another. One may even say that to have ancestors is more or less necessary—if one wishes to get on. But a walk in the woods will convince even the most indifferent observer that there are many of these old family trees whose withered and fruitless branches are so nearly dead that they have barely life enough to keep their hold on the ancient and sapless trunk. And they are poor timber, these so nearly dead limbs—good for neither the hearth nor the shop.

You are right, no one of common sense will discount breeding. A grand old family is a grand old thing. It is a very real and tangible asset. That is, it is an asset if the strength and glory which made it great in the past are real and tangible in the present.

But what about these useless tag-ends of grand old families that have petered out? What of these well-bred imbeciles and noble idiots—these social parasites who cling so precariously to the edges of what, to them, is the best society? Is a pitiful Mr. or Mrs. Lazarus, hanging around the doorstep of a certain house, hoping against hope for an entrée, while feeding on the social crumbs which fall from the table of some society Diva—is such a person, in fact, one of our Best People?

Again, it would seem that the test should be not who were your ancestors, or who are your relatives, but what good are you?

Then consider the brand Education. I mean the idea that one's rating in life is determined by the school or schools which one attended.

To pronounce words correctly, with the proper accent, and everything, is of importance. I wish I could. But even though I am not educated I know enough not to accept every graduate at his own valuation.

To hold that people who have been to certain schools are therefore our Best People, regardless of how they do, or do not use their education, is to keep the shell and throw the milk and meat of the coconut to the monkeys.

As I have said before, I would rather receive a great, vital, living truth from an illiterate back-woodsman, who violates every rule of grammar, than to have a university president lie to me in perfect English.

It is the usefulness of the graduate, not the graduation, which counts.

Oh, yes, and there is the brand of Goodness.

Are not religious people, church people—those who make it their business to be good—are not these our Best People?

Well, not necessarily. Religion, you see, is not primarily something to "get" or something to "be." It is something to use. If one makes no use of religion one simply has no religion to use.

"You ought to see my boy, John," said a fond parent. "He doesn't smoke, he doesn't chew, he doesn't swear, he doesn't drink, he doesn't do anything."

It is not enough to be good; one must be good for something. By all of which I am merely trying to say that to the Certified Accountant of Life it is not what we have—financially, socially, intellectually, or religiously—but what we do with it that determines our rating.

When one's balance sheet shows a gain of 99 per cent in service rendered, against 1 per cent in service rendered, that one is headed straight toward bankruptcy. That deplorable leadies and social bums make much of such insolvent individuals does not alter their credit with those who know.

After all, it really matters very little that comparatively small groups of people, for one reason or another, consider themselves our Best People.

A gentlemanly stranger says to me: "This brick is solid gold, eighteen karats." Then he explains carefully why he is giving me an opportunity to purchase this gold brick at less than half its value. For all I know, the man may honestly believe that the brick is gold. If honestly believing things to be of value actually made them of value we would all be rich.

Well, all that the gentlemanly stranger believes and says about his gold brick is very interesting and, harmlessly amusing to me so long as I know the brick is not gold. But the moment I accept his estimate of the brick and purchase it at his valuation, that moment I am hooked.

It does matter greatly that so many of the rest of us are ready to accept these gold brick Best-People at their own valuation.

We always have had our Gaius and Judases, and I suppose we shall always have our moneyed degenerates, our social freaks, our educated incompetents, our religious defectives. But is there any reason why the rest of us should brand them our Best People?

There is only one standard by which Life measures a life; usefulness.

If you were a carlaway on a desert island, in the last stages of starvation, and found an oyster containing a pearl of great value—which would you throw aside, the ornament or the edible?

Talismans

SOME of the strange and absurd credulities respecting amulets and talismans are accredited to past times; but superstitious as ridiculous still prevail at the present time.

Every burglar who carries in his pocket a bit of charmed coal may defy the authorities. How the charmed coal is obtained is not known. Professional burglars often carry in their pockets a small lump of coal "for luck."

During an epidemic of the plague in London amulets composed of arsenic were very commonly worn in the region of the heart, upon the principle that one poison would drive out or prevent the entry of another. Large quantities of arsenic were imported into London for this purpose. Quills of quicksilver were also worn about the neck as a precaution against the plague. The powder of a toad was employed in a similar way.

Bats flying late in the evening indicate fair weather.

Until a newly born child is baptized, it must never be left alone in the dark lest the devil come and steal away its soul. (Portugal.)

If a child swallows a coin and lives, it is a sign that it will become rich.

Sea Superstitions

IN THE TIME of Sir Francis Drake, people supposed the world to be composed of two parallel planes, the one at a certain distance from the other. In reference to this space, it was commonly said that Sir Francis had "shot the gulf," meaning that his ship had turned over the edge of the upper plane so as to pass on the waters of the under. There is an old print showing Drake holding a pistol in one hand, which was supposed to be the pistol with which Sir Francis shot the gulf.

It is believed that sea gulls retiring to land foretell a storm.

Dolphins and porpoises, when they play about, are said to foretell a storm. Sea-wrchins thrusting themselves in the road, or striving to cover their bodies with sand, foretell a storm.

Many fishes possess the power of keeping themselves secure amidst the turmoil of a storm by affixing themselves to a rock. Among these is the remora or sucking fish, which the ancients believed had the power to impede the course of a ship.

Monarch in the Plural

That kings speak of themselves as "we" is a survival from the Roman empire when there were two emperors, one in Italy and one in Constantinople. They issued identical decrees under their joint authority; hence the custom of the plural "we."

Vice Presidential Deaths

The men who died while holding the office of vice-president of the United States were George Clinton, Elbridge Gerry, William R. King, Henry Wilson, T. A. Hendricks, Garrett A. Hobart and James S. Sherman.

Clean Kidneys By Drinking Lots of Water

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers or Back Hurts

Eating too much rich food may produce kidney trouble in some form, says a well-known authority, because the acids created excite the kidneys. Then they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, begin drinking lots of good water and also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to neutralize the acids in the system so that they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus often avoiding serious kidney disorders.

The Worst Yet

Sacha Guitry, the French playwright and actor, hates the movies, and on his American visit he said one day to a critic in New York:

"The movies have done the legitimate drama a lot of harm, but just night I heard the worst thing yet."

"Yes?" said the critic.

"Yes," said M. Guitry. "I met at a supper party last night a movie star who kept talking the drama the speaker."

Youth and Age in Legion

The oldest and youngest members of the American Legion live at Miami, Fla. They are John W. Boucher, eighty-four, and George E. Mackenzie, twenty-three. Boucher served in the construction forces of the A. E. F. in France, getting into the Pershing army when he was seventy-three years old. Mackenzie ran away from home to enlist when scarcely thirteen.

Immense Monolith

The largest marble monolith in the world, standing sixty-five feet high, measuring eighteen feet across and weighing forty tons, has been extracted from the famous marble quarries at Carrara, and will be presented to Mussolini for the new Fascist stadium to be erected at the Farnesina outside of Rome.

Science Notes Changes in Position of Pole

Although the inhabitants of the earth are not perceptibly affected by the wandering motion of the North pole, yet it is a phenomenon of increasing interest to scientists, particularly astronomers.

This motion, which is suggestive of the "wobbling" of a top, is extremely slight when the vast size of the earth is taken in account. For about 30 years the North pole has never, it is claimed, been more than 95 feet away from the place. It should occupy if the earth's axis of revolution never varied in direction. The amount of variation has been learned by the International Geodetic association through observations and four observing stations, all close to the thirty-ninth degree of North latitude, and all within 500 feet of the same parallel. These are at Midzusawa, Japan; Carlsfortie, Sardinia; Galthersburg, Md., and Ukiah, Calif. Precisely similar observations with exactly the same kind of zenith telescopes are made at each station on carefully selected stars. In this way, any change in the direction of the pole reveals itself by a shift of the stars.

Talleyrand's Fame as Diplomat Well Won

Madame De Staël, talking to Talleyrand, suddenly snapped at him, with pointed coquetterie:

"If Madame Grant and I had the misfortune simultaneously to fall into the river before your eyes, which of us two would you attempt to save first?"

Talleyrand, old fox, answered smilingly:

"But, madame, you are a perfect swimmer."

At dinner Talleyrand was once asked what was the difference between a diplomat and a woman of the world. Instantly he replied:

"If a diplomat says 'Yes' he means 'Perhaps'; if he says 'Perhaps' he means 'No'; if he says 'No,' he is not a diplomat. But if a lady says 'No,' she most likely means 'Perhaps'; if she says 'Perhaps' she means 'Yes'; but if she says 'Yes,' she is not a woman of the world."—Kansas City Star.

Hours of Slumber

Sleep becomes a vicious habit when carried to excess, says Dr. H. M. Johnson, "sleep expert" at the University of Pittsburgh. Most people, Johnson believes, get sufficient rest in the course of six and a half to nine hours to carry them through the day and make their work enjoyable. Sleep is vicious, he said, when it interferes with more interesting activities. Women are less restless than men as a rule, he finds, and spend more time in bed. Persons engaged in mental activity during the day, sleep less than persons engaged in work that only feebly stimulates.

Makes Life Sweeter

Children's stomachs sour, and need an anti-acid. Keep their systems sweet with Phillips Milk of Magnesia!

When tongue or breath tells of acid condition—correct it with a spoonful of Phillips. Most men and women have been comforted by this universal sweetener—more mothers should invoke its aid for their children. It is a pleasant thing to take, yet neutralizes more acid than the harsher things too often employed for the purpose. No household should be without it.

Phillips is the genuine, prescription product physicians endorse for general use; the name is important. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. registered trade mark of the Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

The Interruption

Ruth Elder, the daring airwoman, is the heroine of a little story.

It was at a dinner party in Birmingham, and an aged anti-feminist banker was laying down the law about woman's place.

"Woman's place is the home," he said. "That is all she's fit for. Women have never produced a Shakespeare or a Homer, an Edison or Ford, a Raphael or Michelangelo or Lincoln or—"

But here Miss Elder interrupted. "Dear me!" she said. "I thought women produced them all!"

Roman Relics in England

Remarkable Roman relics are being revealed on Pruss field, Caerleon, near Newport, England, where the most important Roman fortress site in Britain is situated. Great walls, ramparts, look-out turrets, a massive stone water tank, centurions' quarters, and even those of the legion commander are now visible. A quantity of bronze sword trappings, pottery, catapults, and sling stones have been recovered.

The state of North Carolina has adopted a practical way of protecting its future pedestrians from automobiles. Once a month school teachers are required to discuss before their pupils a digest of the state traffic laws.

Lincoln on Equality

In 1855, writing to his friend Speed, as quoted in the late Senator Albert J. Beveridge's book on Abraham Lincoln, that great American said on the subject of tolerance, referring to the declaration that: "All men are created equal" We now practically read it "All men are created equal except negroes."

Testing Ford Radiators

In the Highland Park plant of the Ford Motor Company at Detroit, there is a machine which tries with all the efficient fierceness of an engine of destruction, to shake the life out of a Ford automobile radiator in the shortest possible time.

Ten hours is the time allotted to this machine, known as an "agitator", to do all within its power to ruin a water-filled Ford radiator. At the end of that period the much abused radiator is taken off the machine and examined by experts for any signs of damage and a brand new Ford radiator, also filled with water, is put on for another ten hours of torment.

This agitator device is part of the testing equipment for radiators that are being built for new Model "A" Ford car. When you watch it jolting and shaking the gurgling radiator, you have a feeling that no automobile driver could drive a car over roads and at a speed which would give, it such a severe shaking up and still hold on to his wheel and his seat. Then the factory foreman tells you that within the period of ten hours this agitator gives the new radiator more and severer jars and jolts than the average Ford car will get in its whole lifetime of service.

And he tells you also that the great majority of radiators tested on this agitator come through the ordeal without a sign of injury. Those that spring even the smallest leaks are rare indeed.

To make sure that the finished radiator is free from leaks or potential leaks, as soon as it comes off the assembly line it is given a severe compressed air test. Filled with air under high pressure and sealed, the radiator is submerged in a tank of water. If there is the slightest sign of bubbles, due to escaping air the radiator is thrown out as faulty.

The foreman points out to you also the features of this new Ford radiator which make it an unusually efficient unit of the cooling system. The upper and lower tanks are large. The openings through which the water flows from the tanks into the radiator tubes are bell-shaped, thus providing faster circulation of the water. The tubes of copper and the fins of brass permit very rapid radiation of the heat and therefore quicker cooling.

Throughout the radiator of the new Ford car has been built in keeping with the greater power, speed and durability of the Model "A" Ford

Announcement

I regret that I have been unable so far to visit every precinct in the county, meet the voters and solicit their support in my candidacy for reelection to the office of commissioner of district No. 1, on the Democratic ticket. It is my purpose, before the campaign closes, however, to get in touch with every voter and personally request such support, but in the meantime, through these columns, I respectfully request from all voters a consideration of my candidacy.

and dairy business in addition to keeping up his law practice. He is a member of the bar of three states—New Mexico, Texas and Kansas, and admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States. He is also a member of the New Mexico, El Paso, Texas and American Bar Association. In Attorney Winter the people have a candidate for District Attorney thoroughly versed in the law and behind him long years of training and experience. Add to these accomplishments, honesty and energy and this district, by his election, would be assured of a full measure of service.

Political announcement

Having been nominated by the Republican party for the office of County School Superintendent, I earnestly solicit the support of all voters of Lincoln County regardless of past party affiliations.

As to my qualifications for this office: I was graduated from the Knoxville Tenn. High School, and from Georgetown College with a B. S. degree; I have had two years Summer School work at the University of Tenn.; a course of correspondence work from Silver City Normal and the past summer had a Summer school term in the New Mexico State Normal at Las Vegas.

I have had ten years teaching experience, the last five being in the Carrizozo schools, and hold a Teacher's Life Certificate in the State of New Mexico.

Commercial Car Fits Demand of Business

Making the motor truck fit the transportation requirements of modern business is insured by unique surveys and research constantly carried on by the Graham Brothers Truck division of Dodge Brothers. So completely has the field been covered that the recent addition of a three ton truck to the line brings the total coverage to more than 96 percent of all commercial hauling. Six capacities are now available in hundreds of combination types made possible by interchanging the bodies and chassis.

An engineering survey which involved first hand investigation of vocational transportation problems in major cities throughout the country was recently completed by the company. Composite information obtained was used as a basis for the design of units that efficiently solved the owner's individual delivery problems.

The motor coach division has carried surveys so far as to find out the average shoulder and lip-width of school children of various ages in order to announce correct carrying capacities based on actual measurements, and insuring adequate room for children at any designated bus capacity.

"Coupled with this adaptability to practically every transportation field, the motor truck's dependability and flexibility are constantly enlarging its scope of operation," said Howard E. Suetten, Director of Commercial Car and Truck Sales for Dodge Brothers. "The future development rest on the public's realization of the speed and economy that shipments can be made by truck. Four wheel brake, improved six cylinder engines, and four-speed transmissions have brought the performance of commercial vehicles to high standards reached by passenger cars."

100 per cent Pure or Half and Half

How will you take your Democrats--100 per cent pure or Half and half?

ON THE DEMOCRATIC TICKET? OR THE REPUBLICAN

There is no alternative. More Democrats are running this year than ever before.

First there's Bronson Cutting, who was a Democrat until his political perfidy was rewarded a few months ago. He wants the long term senate—the top of the ticket and the highest state office to which a member of any party can aspire.

Next, there is O. A. Larrazolo of race prejudice fame—the price the Republicans paid to return A. B. Fall to the United States Senate. He ran on the Democratic ticket more times than Bryan. Now he asks the Republicans for the short term senate.

Then Albert Simms, elected as a Democrat to the County Commission of Bernalillo County in 1920, who changed his politics like a chameleon changes color—in the middle of his term of office. He asks for a seat in congress.

And One-Quart Dillon, appointed by Jim Hinkle to the Sheep Sanitary Board as a Democrat in 1923, elected as Governor on a Republican ticket, and now asking re-election.

This is what the Froglegs want, the long and short term Senate, the Congressman, the plums that will go to Charlie Roehl and Harry Wilson and the jumping boys—plus more!

Plus Atanacia Montoya who sought the nomination for State Superintendent of Schools on the Democratic ticket in 1924 and landed it with the Republicans in 1928. Plus Jose S. Baca, elected Treasurer of Socorro County on the Democratic ticket as recently as 1922 and now the Republican candidate for corporation commissioner, a six year job for a frogleg. Plus whatever Lorenzo Delgado wants for hopping back again after cutting throats two years ago. Plus the hangar-on of every one of these men. Plus Harry the Highwayman and Two-Bit Charlie—make your own list when you have leisure.

Will we turn over the administration to these boys who want to take everything and give nothing in the way of a record of service? Will we reinstate the promise-breakers, with these sweet additions we have mentioned? NO! Let us put in Bob Dow and J. S. Vaught and John Morrow and the other men who are ready to say NO to the hangers-on and who will give us an administration we can be proud we voted for. Let's vote the Democratic ticket from top to bottom and send the froglegs back to their puddles!

Announcement

I hereby announce my candidacy for Representative of the 16th District, as the Democratic nominee, and respectfully solicit the support of the voters of Lincoln county. Marie Cavanaugh.

Elimination of the specialty or "one crop" type of farming is one way to bring about the much desired farm relief. One-crop farming is the root of evil in most of the troubles which have come to the farmers of the Pacific Coast. They have been prone to put "all of the eggs into one basket" and when an over supply or poor crop comes, it generally means ruin, not only for the one-crop farmer but for the one-crop community as well.

As a result many communities are interested in aiding the agriculturists in diversifying their farms. Some form of live stock raising and feeding seems to be the most logical solution. The advantage of live stock production lies in the fact that live stock is readily convertible into cash, especially on the West Coast where local production is far short of the demand for all classes of meat food animals. A few head of live stock on the farm not only provides a cash income but a highly desirable diversification.

In most parts of the West, the country is young and the soil has not yet been drained of its priceless crop producing qualities. Yet here and there, especially in cotton districts, a falling off in production already is noticeable.

Development of a program calling for some live stock on every farm and ranch has been given added impetus through the activities of farm bureau organizations in forming local cooperative shipping organizations. Through this plan, the man with only one or two head of cattle, hogs and sheep is enabled to pool his stock with that of his neighbors, making up full carload shipments. This means that the man with only a few head of stock has the same marketing advantages as the man with the big herd or flock, as he gets the full advantage of showing his stock in carload lots. In all such associations, the cost of marketing, including, freight and other charges, is prorated among the owners of the stock, according to the weight and number of head sold by each individual.

Albuquerque, Oct. 24. The T. J. Tobin Construction Company, road contractors who were the successful bidders on both the Tijeras Canyon and the Carrizozo-Socorro jobs, left here the first of this week with one of the finest complements of road building equipment in the state to take up the work on the Carrizozo job. They intend to build the two jobs, Tijeras and Carrizozo, simultaneously.

Power equipment will be used almost exclusively in the building of the latter job, although there will be a few teams of horses on the job work which have not yet given up to the invasion of modern machinery. A Tractor-elevating grader unit division will be used to do the major part of the dirt work on the Carrizozo work.

Camp will be pitched on the job and the lava flow section of the work started first. It is expected to throw the first shovel of dirt Friday of this week. Because of the size of the organization and the kind and amount of equipment on the road it is predicted by the road-wise that this job will establish a construction record for the state. Engineers and others interested in highway building will watch the job with interest for this result.

Brush Duco Demonstration

A Demonstration of the use of Brush Duco will be given at the store of Hedrick & Company in Carrizozo on October 27th by Mr. F. L. Collier, a du Pont expert. Mr. Collier is prepared to show the customers of Hedrick & Co. not only the ordinary use of Brush Duco, but also how to make artistic finishes in line with the new movement of home decoration which is sweeping over the country. In preparation for the demonstration all the latest colors in Brush Duco have been obtained by Hedrick & Co. Among other things there will be a showing of the famous new "pour" method which has awakened such interest among women who use it for decorative purposes. Hedrick & Company is notifying its customers of this demonstration which will be one of the most important ever held here. Mr. Collier will also be prepared to answer any questions as to the application of Brush Duco or paint and varnish.

Woman's Club Notes

The Carrizozo Woman's Club met at the Brickley home, Friday, October 19 at 3 p. m. First Vice President Mrs. R. E. Lemmon presided over the meeting in the absence of the President, Mrs. C. A. McCammon.

Plans of Mrs. R. E. Lemon and Mrs. Nellie Braum for equipping the kitchen at the Community Hall were outlined and approved by the club. Mrs. Spencer generously donated $50 to the club to be applied on the $500 pledged to the improvement of the Community Hall. Former Citizen Dies

A letter was received the past week by Mrs. W. C. McDonald from her daughter, Mrs. M. F. Parker, at Hollywood, California, on which it stated that Ed M. Pherson had died recently in that section, from an attack of paralysis.

Mr. McPherson came to White Oaks in the early eighties and is remembered by the remaining old timers who lived there then. He was associated with an eastern company that invested heavily in miners and milling machinery in that camp in its early period.

1929 Market Trend

Detroit, Mich., Automobile leaders here at this time are paying special heed, in their surveys of 1929 market trends, to the export aspects of the industry, conscious of the fact that overseas trade has been growing consistently until it stands today third in the list of American exports with a valuation of four hundred and six millions of dollars.

This is regarded as significant, coming as it does with the industry entered upon the final quarter of what promises to be the greatest year in the history of the domestic market with no decrease in home demand expected during 1929.

Far from viewing complacency in foreign markets since 1921, the consensus of expert opinion adheres to the view that the export business is still an infant which promises to achieve a mighty growth. Rehabilitation of Europe, the betterment of road conditions all over the world, the establishment of American manufacturing methods are among the reasons assigned for a view of the foreign market that is decidedly optimistic.

Last week, H. J. Klugger, general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Company, world leader in domestic and foreign sales, issued a statement in which he predicted that America will be exporting 1,000,000 cars annually within the next few years.

Explaining his forecast, he said: "One million American made cars will be shipped overseas and sold in the next few years. Today there are upwards of 29,505,475 motor vehicles in the world, and of this number 23 million are in use in the United States. The United States has only about 1-20th of the world's greatest period of its history.

population and only a fraction of its habitable land. Yet it owns 89 per cent of all the motor vehicles in the world.

"General Motors Export, applying American methods of manufacture, distribution and credit, has gone a long way in the last few years to make the world motor minded. For instance, Chevrolet cars and trucks are now being sold in 104 countries from Iceland in the North to New Zealand in the South, and each one of these cars is serving as an individual ambassador of the superiority of the American product.

"During the first six months of this year General Motors Exports the sale of 57,808 Chevrolet passenger cars and 50,542 trucks as compared with 38,594 passenger cars and 32,799 trucks for the first six months of 1927. Figures for the first eight months covering the same American export field show a increase of 36 per cent over 1927.

"The home market will always remain the backbone of the industry. The prospect of a rapidly expanding volume of foreign trade supporting the excellent outlook for domestic business seems to indicate that the automobile industry is entering the only about 1-20th of the world's greatest period of its history.

There came a flare of light through the loopholes that lit up her pale face vividly, and then a tremendous crash and the cabin seemed to rock under the vibrations. Afraid it was too good to be true, I stepped to the small window, set high under the eaves, and looked up to the heavens. I could have shouted aloud in joy as I beheld the mighty wall of black and slate towering almost to the zenith with its lead-colored draperies dragging on the horizon.

While we had talked and watched for danger the storm had swept down the river and was upon us. The opening grew dusky and it would have been an easy task for the savages to have crawled close in the uncertain light. Again the Thunder-god buffed a spear at the water-serpent and the noise of the contest transcended all earth sounds. A strange moaning ran through the forest-crown and lofty tops bowed and swayed although as yet there was no air moving in the opening.

"I'm thinking it's going to rain," remarked the girl in a faint voice. "Thank God, yes! Stay back there to see they try no tricks," I cautioned as she came toward me.

The lightning ripped across the face of the clouds, and the girl gave a little squeal. I went to her to learn what was the matter.

"Not Indians," she whispered. "I'm thinking I'm scared of these sort of storms."

It seemed impossible that one who had shown such absolute control of nerves could be frightened by a flash of lightning and the rumble of thunder. And yet she was clinging to me like a child, striving to conquer herself, yet keeping her face pressed against my fringed sleeve so as not to see the glare of the bolts. I endeavored to soothe away her fears by telling her the storm was our best friend; that it would make the cabin fire-proof, that it would compel the Indians to keep their guns covered and their bow-strings protected from the rain. But as I talked I could feel her vince convulsively each time the god renewed the ancient strife.

With a deafening roar the rain came battering against the cabin. It was impossible to distinguish an object fifty feet from the door. Now was the time for the enemy to attack and cut their way into us and finish us with their belt weapons. Raising my voice above the terrific drumming of the rain, I told the girl:

"We'll go. The rain will wash out our trail. Find something to wrap around the rifle."

She found some oiled skins and we wrapped them about our rifles. I opened the door. The water was falling in torrents and the wind was blowing with great velocity. Closing the door, we were plastered against the walls for a moment by the force of the wind. I sought to shelter her by holding her close to my side; and leaning against the storm, we made for the woods. We could not talk and we scarcely could see because of the rain filling our faces. We both realized that such a downpour could not last long. Our progress was slow, but finally I was waist-deep in some cherry bushes. We fought through these and came to dripping trees and entered among them.

The uproar of the storm suddenly lessened now that we were walking on ancient forest mold and were sheltered from the wind. Rivulets of water ran under our feet and there was no need to hide our trail until we were two miles in the woods. We were as wet as two river-rats.

It became strangely quiet in the dripping woods and we no longer shouted to make ourselves heard. Now the storm was raging outside we could only guess. I feared it was abating.

"They'll lose some time, mister, in making sure we're not in the cabin," the girl philosophically remarked. "And it's getting so dark they can't find our tracks even if we do leave some."

"We must find a place under a rock where we can make a fire and get our feet dry."

She laughed at me, and her voice was most musical because it was natural.

"Hard work to dress a witch," she said. "I've fared hard before this and didn't mind it."

I remembered those days when the House of the Open Hand entertained and when beauty must be gaily wrapped in water-proof coverings and best home in coaches. This wild young creature at my side had seen a man's work and more. She was made up of the outdoors.

It grew very dark, and without stars to guide us we would have wandered blindly if not for a little rain that we stumbled upon and which I remembered fared parallel to Turle creek. We took to the water, knee-deep because of the rain, and worked our way upstream by clutching at the overhanging boughs. We finally left the stream where a windfall had smothered it. By the sense of touch alone I found a spot clear of brush and undergrowth and informed my companion we must wait for daylight before proceeding. I could find no dry log, even had I dared to build a fire.

"We have water, but no fire nor food," I told her.

"You're wrong, mister, about food. I fetched this along," she answered; and her hands found mine with a small package wrapped in deerskin.

It was some of Frazier's smoked meat which she had had the forethought to bring along. It was tough, but it was food, and we chewed it vigorously and felt the better for having eaten it.

"Lean against me," I commanded. "It'll be dreary waiting."

"Not so dreary as when we was in the cabin, waiting," she replied. And her head rested against my shoulder and very soon I rejoiced to find she was asleep.

When she was entirely oblivious to our discomforts, I shifted her into my lap, and thus we passed the night; she sleeping the sleep of utter exhaustion and I afraid to move lest I disturb her. Near morning I dined off and was aroused by her hand pressing lightly on my shoulder. I came to my feet and rubbed my legs and arms to drive out the lumps and cramps. She whispered for me to make no noise, and I noted she had removed the coverings from the guns.

"What is it?" I murmured, a terrible rage sweeping over me as I glared about to discover the relentless foe. She shook her head and said:

"I thought I heard something moving toward us." Footsteps would fall softly on the wet ground, and, after listening without hearing anything, I told her:

"Some animal got the scent of us and turned tail."

Her small hand gripped my arm for silence. Men were coming. I heard a voice say something in the Delaware tongue. She pulled her Highland pistol from her blouse and noiselessly removed its wrapping. Then her hand found mine and gave it a convulsive squeeze, and her soft voice was saying:

"Mister, you've been powerful good to me. We've made a good fight for it. It won't be awful hard this way. Don't let 'em catch you alive. If I go first, I'll be waiting for you."

CHAPTER IX

The Fatal Errand

This meeting with Gist and his two Indians was most pleasing to us, although the Delawares did not care enough for our company to slacken their pace. They ranged ahead while Gist traveled with us. He gave us such news. On July third the Indians had refused to go on a scout, but on the following day two had been induced to accompany him. The three of them had advanced to within half a mile of the fort and had been deterred from approaching closer because of the excitement occasioned by the escape of the girl, the Onondaga and myself. They did not know what had happened, but with so much yelling and howling and running into the woods the Delawares had taken fright and declared the entire red force was starting to attack the army. Two Indians had sighted Gist and had chased him for some distance. The Delawares surprised and scalped the Frenchman the Dinawold girl had stumbled upon among the bramble bushes.

Gist said he and his companions had attempted to follow Turtle creek to its head, where they had expected to find the army, but had been turned back by a large band of savages coming down the creek. They had taken refuge in a windfall and had remained in hiding through the violent storm. This delay permitted the girl and me to get in advance of them. In scouting to the neighborhood of the fort they had found the fords open and without any signs of an ambush being prepared. Nor had they discovered any trace of the enemy's savages being outside the immediate vicinity of the fort until the night of our escape.

I gently pushed her behind me and she sank at the foot of a tree. I drew my ax and knife and placed them beside me as I sank to one knee and gathered up the two rifles. Over my shoulder I whispered:

"Don't use the pistol on any Indian. Remember!"

"We must go faster," said a voice in Delaware, only I knew it was a white man speaking. "They'll follow us very fast."

I shivered with a thrill of hope, but dared not give any encouragement to the girl. I glanced back at her. Her face showed none of the anger I had witnessed at the Witch's Head when she was menaced by the mob. It was placid of expression, and she met my gaze with a little smile of encouragement. We could hear them making their way along the windfall. Suddenly they burst into view: two Indians and a white man. One of the Indians was carrying a fresh scalp fastened to the end of a short rod.

I reached back, and snatched the pistol from the girl's hand and cried out:

"If that be Christopher Gist, we are friends."

The three vanished as if by magic. After a few moments the white man replied:

"I am Gist. Who are you? Speak sharp. My Indians are nervous."

"Black Bronck, returning from a scout to Duquesne. I have a young friend with me." In Delaware I added, "Tell your friends we are your friends; and that there is a large band of Pontiac's men chasing us."

This meeting with Gist and his two Indians was most pleasing to us, although the Delawares did not care enough for our company to slacken their pace. They ranged ahead while Gist traveled with us. When Gist set out from the array camp, Braddock was about to march to Thickety Run, a small branch of Sawlicky creek. Time had been lost at Jacobs' creek in waiting for Colonel Dunbar's provision train to come up. Many of St. Clair's road-builders were on the sick list, and quite a number of them had died. The wagon horses were in miserable condition. Colonel Washington was too ill to travel and had not rejoined the army up to July fourth.

"You have nothing but bad talk in your bag," I remarked.

"We have one French scalp," he grimly replied. "And since June twenty-fifth Braddock has been paying five pounds apiece for scalps. But some of our scouts are getting rich on the bounties. If we could only get ahead faster, and reach the fort before all our soldiers are dead, or too sick to fight, we'd win just by showing ourselves. Mr. William Shirley, the general's secretary, is very much disgusted and discouraged at the way things are being managed. He says he doubts our success. But talk like that is all foolishness, of course. If we can only hold out till we reach Duquesne, we'll whip the French easy enough."

Sample of Tact That Made Blaine Famous

One year James G. Blaine visited Homburg and the prince of Wales at once invited him to luncheon. Blaine's retort to a question delighted every American in the place. One of the guests was the then duke of Manchester, an old man and a great Tory. When the duke grasped that Blaine was a candidate for the Presidency of the United States all his old torisms were aroused and he was back in the days of George III. To the horror of the prince the duke said to Mr. Blaine: "The most outrageous thing in all history was your rebellion and separation from the best government on earth." He said much more before the prince could stop him.

Blaine, with that grace and tact for which he was so famous, promptly said: "Well, your grace, if George III had had the sense, tact and winning qualities of his great-grandson, our best, it is just possible that we might now be a self-governing colony in the British empire."

The answer relieved the situation and immediately pleased the host. From "My Memories of Eighty Years," by Chassey M. Dewey.

Dame Fashion Smiles

By Grace Jewett Austin

There curled up in front of Dame Fashion sat a little Brownie. Palmer Cox drew so many pictures of those funny little folk, a half generation ago, that everybody knows what a Brownie looks like. He piped up in quite a loud tone:

"I just guess I'm the ruler this season. You take a walk around the Grace J. Austin, shops, and if you don't see more brown, right from my domain, and by my orders, than any other color, I'll give in that I was mistaken."

"Now fur is going to be one of the leading objects on the horizon in the coming months, and good old Mother Nature made almost every bit of fur in the universe in some shade of brown—unless it is black or white! Queer, too, about that, because the fur was made brown so it wouldn't be conspicuous to enemies of the furry folk. And black for a match to tree trunks and deep black caves—with the white fur on snow beasts. Well, maybe people put on fur so to be inconspicuous, but I have my doubts."

"That's rather unpleasant of you, Brownie—folks put on fur because it is warm and comfortable, and not just because it looks interesting."

"Caught you!" Brownie shouted. "Didn't you admit you were willing to take-off your fox scarf last fall if the temperature rose to 107?" "Go back to brown-talk," commanded Dame Fashion sternly.

"Well, take this matter of pumps; can you find any that are prettier than these soft brown suede ones? If you were a man, you might call them 'to-bacco brown,' but being a lady, you can say 'chocolate' if you wish. And some of the handsomest silk hose on the market are of this same rich brown."

"But Brownie, that's such a dark shade! Can't we have our nice light beige hose all winter?" Brownie shook his head violently.

"You can't help yourself. It would be common sense you would be fighting against. With chill in the air, fashionable folk choose darker shades for street wear. But think a little of the many wonderful brown velvet and calico-print brown velvet dresses that will be worn this winter. It suits me especially when ecru lace is combined with the velvet, and ruffling lace jabots, scarfs or yokes are worn."

"And about these brown hats," meditated Brownie. "I hope you have a nice shape to the back of your head, because that will be much in evidence this winter. Those who can stand it will push the hat back from the forehead, and what a nice intellectual look that will give!"

"Once upon a time there was a man—oh, a very wise man, and his name was Ralph Waldo Emerson. And one of the wisest things he said was 'Hitch your wagon to a star.' He didn't suppose he was giving a fashion note, but it seems to me he was, at least for this year. Your gown is your wagon, to take you where you wish to go—and if it is an astonishingly beautiful one, it may give you a great set-forward on your life journey. But be sure to 'hitch it to a star'—some gleaming buckle, some crystal Chanel 'frock pin' or some memorable bit of costume adornment in the way of semi-precious stone."

And with that, the Brownie concluded his little discourse.

Vogue for Wool Challis; Among Modish Fabrics

The vogue for lightweight woollens has brought back wool challis into the list of fashionable fabrics. The new challis prints are most intriguing and for the informal afternoon wear, there is nothing prettier. The challis frock in the picture adopts a very interesting color scheme in that it is patterned in red, white and blue.

Flowered Taffeta

Strongly reminiscent of the days of 1900 is a frock of black taffeta covered with a flowered design in rather subdued color. The waist is cut V-shaped both back and front and the skirt has a great deal of extra fabric, which is arranged in the back and hangs from heavy cord.

Leather Bag Is Smartest for Any Type of Costume

The leather bag is still the smartest bag for every type of costume. For town-wear with the new-tweed suits, and ensembles of smooth-surface woollens there are new pouch and envelope shapes in plain, calf and suede. The perfection of their tailored lines is enhanced by the intrinsic beauty of fine leather materials which may be in black or the unusual "mixed" browns as well as high shades like autumn blue, green or red. Novel fastenings, sponsored by such eminent designers as Paton, Lanvin, Chanel and Lelong, lend fashion interest to these tailored bags. They then are small bags of black or brown antique suede, for more formal costumes and new evening bags in beautiful shades of antique suede so subtly match the subtle tones of ivory frocks in lace, translucent velvet, chiffon, satin and moire.

Set of Vegetable Bags Made of Used Flour Bag

Salad materials such as lettuce, celery, parsley and radishes should be prepared for use as soon as they are received and then put in the ice box until ready for use. In this way, not only will they keep better, but they are crisp, but not dripping wet when needed for the table.

After they have been allowed to freshen in cold water, cut away any withered leaves and imperfections and then place them in refrigerator bags on ice.

A complete set of these bags can be made from a single used flour bag, costing only a few cents at the local bakery. It makes an excellent gift for a bride's shower or a quick-selling item at a church or charity bazaar. In these instances, the bags may be decorated with some simple design or the name of the articles for which they are intended worked in cross-stitch.

First remove the stamping by larding the inked places or soaking them in kerosene overnight. Then wash the bag out in lukewarm water.

The lettuce bag measures 10 by 13 when completed, the celery bag 7 by 15, and the parsley or radish bag 7 by 10. Make the hem at the top deep enough to provide a casing for the tape.

The bags should be thoroughly washed after each time they are used but no ironing is necessary.

New Tweed Serviceable; It Is Soft and Pliable

Do you realize just how good looking the new tweed is? Many of us have memories of tweeds in days gone by as fabrics all very well for cold weather wear if you wanted something durable and substantial.

The new tweed is ideal. It is serviceable, because it is tweed, but it is soft and pliable and can be made—has been made—into frocks and coats and suits of the utmost charm.

Another thing about it—it is made in beautiful colors. Grays that are slightly softened with brown, blues that are cooled a little with gray, greens that suggest green, and greens that have an overtone of blue.

So between the two characteristics—lovely colors and soft, flexible texture—the new tweed is quite desirable. Very often the tweed coat is bound or bordered with a darker, plain color. Brown on one of the brownish gray coats, dark green on one of the greenish blue coats.

Vegetables in Bags Are Crisp, Not Dripping Wet

Salad materials such as lettuce, celery, parsley and radishes should be prepared for use as soon as they are received and then put in the ice box until ready for use. In this way, not only will they keep better, but they are crisp, but not dripping wet when needed for the table.

Lace Is Popular for Frocks and Trimmings

Lace is a notable fabric in the fashion not only for evening but also for formal afternoon frocks. In the latter case it takes on a tailored look. Worth showing in his collection ensembles consisting of short jacket and skirt of lace with georgette blouse. Both thread laces and silk laces are in favor and in addition to black, white and natural there is a vogue for the colored laces. Besides being used for the entire frock, lace recurs frequently as trimming.

There are few of us who can believe that lace could be spoken of in terms of jersey yet some of the smartest jerseys for sports and daytime wear are very light and show in patterns that resemble tatted wheels, spiderwebs, fans and other fancy designs. There is even a jersey in a real macramé pattern. Rodier is responsible for a group of particularly lovely lace jerseys.—Woman's Home Companion.

For town-wear with the new-tweed suits, and ensembles of smooth-surface woollens there are new pouch and envelope shapes in plain, calf and suede. The perfection of their tailored lines is enhanced by the intrinsic beauty of fine leather materials which may be in black or the unusual "mixed" browns as well as high shades like autumn blue, green or red. Novel fastenings, sponsored by such eminent designers as Paton, Lanvin, Chanel and Lelong, lend fashion interest to these tailored bags. They then are small bags of black or brown antique suede, for more formal costumes and new evening bags in beautiful shades of antique suede so subtly match the subtle tones of ivory frocks in lace, translucent velvet, chiffon, satin and moire.

Wool Challis; Among Modish Fabrics

The vogue for lightweight woollens has brought back wool challis into the list of fashionable fabrics. The new challis prints are most intriguing and for the informal afternoon wear, there is nothing prettier. The challis frock in the picture adopts a very interesting color scheme in that it is patterned in red, white and blue.

Flowered Taffeta

Strongly reminiscent of the days of 1900 is a frock of black taffeta covered with a flowered design in rather subdued color. The waist is cut V-shaped both back and front and the skirt has a great deal of extra fabric, which is arranged in the back and hangs from heavy cord.

Set of Vegetable Bags Made of Used Flour Bag

Salad materials such as lettuce, celery, parsley and radishes should be prepared for use as soon as they are received and then put in the ice box until ready for use. In this way, not only will they keep better, but they are crisp, but not dripping wet when needed for the table.

After they have been allowed to freshen in cold water, cut away any withered leaves and imperfections and then place them in refrigerator bags on ice.

A complete set of these bags can be made from a single used flour bag, costing only a few cents at the local bakery. It makes an excellent gift for a bride's shower or a quick-selling item at a church or charity bazaar. In these instances, the bags may be decorated with some simple design or the name of the articles for which they are intended worked in cross-stitch.

First remove the stamping by larding the inked places or soaking them in kerosene overnight. Then wash the bag out in lukewarm water.

The lettuce bag measures 10 by 13 when completed, the celery bag 7 by 15, and the parsley or radish bag 7 by 10. Make the hem at the top deep enough to provide a casing for the tape.

The bags should be thoroughly washed after each time they are used but no ironing is necessary.

A widely experienced educator, Dr. D. E. Thomas, has been chosen to succeed the late Clark E. Persinger as head of the social science department at the New Mexico Normal University at Las Vegas.

Clayton's municipal airport will soon be completed and equipped for the convenience of aviators. The field, recently purchased by the board of two trustees, will be 1,320-feet-wide by 1,980 feet long.

A survey for the proposed new road between Carlsbad and the Carlsbad cavern has been ordered by B. F. Kelly, district highway engineer, following a conference with R. E. Horne, engineer. Travel to the cavern, which has increased from 11,741 visitors in 1922, to more than 41,000 for the current year, has rendered the present highway entirely inadequate for the motor traffic.

More than 2,300,000 trout fry, including brook, rainbow and black speckled species, were placed in Arizona lakes and streams during 1922, according to the report of F. A. Bengard, superintendent of hatcheries, made to the State Game Department in Phoenix. The report shows an increase of 750,000 fish distributed over last year, from the hatcheries at South Fork and Squirrel Springs, near Springville.

The industrial employment survey report, recently issued by the U. S. Department of Labor at Denver, states that a stable condition and upward tendency is noted in practically all lines of industry in Arizona, particularly evidenced in agriculture, horticulture and general construction lines. Harvesting of the cotton crop (acreage materially increased over that of 1921) in the Salt River, Yuma, Casa Grande, Tucson and Duncan Valley districts, was well under way during September, for a duration of three or four months. Metal mining continues active. Metal mining development work continues active in the Kingman, Wickenburg, Patagonia, Ajo, Tombstone, Jerome, Globe-Miami-Superior and Clifton metal mining districts. Supply of unskilled metal mine labor is ample; supply of skilled metal mine labor barely equals the demand. Building and general construction continues exceptionally active. Construction under way or authorized to commence soon, includes numerous public school buildings and church edifices, and several large hotel structures in many of the cities and towns: a $350,000 hotel structure and numerous camp cottages at Douglas; an alfalfa mill and a church edifice at Chandler; a $250,000 paving brick manufacturing plant at Globe; a 300-ton ore mill at Jerome; a nineteen-mile railroad line near the Coolidge dam (approximately 400 workers employed); extensive additions and improvements to a concentrator plant at Morenci; a mineral hot springs bath house, a tourist camp and a filling station at Clifton; two high school buildings at Glendale; a commercial building at Casa Grande; a bank building at Mesa and a $100,000 hotel structure at Holbrook. Dedication of the new highway bridge, across the Colorado river at Leo's Ferry, near Grand Canyon, will be held on or about Nov. 10. Strong demand exists for miscellaneous construction workers. Lumbering continues normally active in the Flagstaff and McNary districts. A large program of highway construction is under way in many sections of state. A moderate increase in railroad freight transportation forces will likely be noted during October and November. The report for New Mexico states that resident and migratory labor in most all sections of state is well employed. Opportunity for employment is sufficient to afford all available migratory and part time workers with employment during October, in connection with the cotton harvest campaign in southern and southeastern sections of state. Harvesting of miscellaneous fall crops and fall plowing is affording general farm labor with steady employment. Metal mining continues active. Metal mine labor supply and demand well balanced. While the coal mining operations are seasonally increasing, the local supply of coal mine labor has been ample so far to meet requirements. Oil field prospecting activities, which continue on an extensive scale, particularly noted in southeastern sections of state. Industrial plants are operating steadily. Cotton gins have commenced their seasonal runs. Lumbering—both wood and mill operations, particularly in the Bernalillo district, is normally active. Building and general construction continues active. The building labor supply and demand is reported well balanced, except at Roswell, where a moderate number of first-class building mechanics are needed. An extensive program of highway construction is under way.

Range conditions throughout the state of New Mexico are spotted, but all livestock are going into the winter in fine shape, according to the monthly report of E. F. Hare, agricultural statistician. Cattle shipments from the state, the report said, were 234,425 head up to September 1, as compared with 204,342 head for the same period of 1921. The sheep movement shows an increase of 6 per cent over last year, or 22,526 head shipped this season to Sept. 1, against 20,725 in 1921.

WORMY PIGS ARE EASY TO CURE

Wormy pigs are unthrifty, unhappy and unprofitable. They consume tremendous amounts of feed on which little return is secured and yet they may be made entirely healthy by a single treatment of a vermifuge and laxative.

"But," says W. W. Shay, swine extension specialist at the North Carolina State college, "do the job of administering the drug correctly or save time by not doing it at all. The method we have found best in our tests is to diet the wormy animals on a rather thin slop for two days, then withhold all food on the night of the second day. Allow no food at all on the third day and administer the vermifuge on the night of this day. On the morning of the fourth day, give a laxative and about one hour later follow this with a light feed, semiliquid in character. On the morning of the fifth day, take the pigs from the worm infested lot into a clean pasture or lot and full feed them as rapidly as possible with safety."

If these directions are followed, states Mr. Shay, worms in pigs will be eliminated. The vermifuge used is a drug called Santonin, and is very effective when administered on an empty stomach and followed twelve hours later with the purgative. This drug is taken voluntarily by the pig and the danger of forcible feeding is thus eliminated.

Mr. Shay advised never to give over 8 grains of the Santonin to a hog. This is the maximum dose for a large animal. A pig weighing 25 pounds should have two grains; 50 pounds, three grains; 75 pounds, four grains; 100 pounds, 5 grains and a pig weighing 125 pounds should have six grains. The drug is bought in powder form and is first dissolved in a small quantity of warm water. This is then thoroughly mixed with the thin slop, and no more slop should be fed than the pigs will clean up. The slop needs to be fed in a trough long enough for all the pigs to be dosed. Invariably follow this dosage 12 hours later with the Epsom salts at the rate of one ounce to one gallon of warm water or milk with sufficient wheat shorts added to disguise the taste.

Easy to Raise Lambs by Feeding in Creep

Just as the beef calf makes the largest number of pounds of gain from a given amount of feed when it is full fed from birth to block, so also does the lamb. The calf that is fed grain in a creep while still nursing its dam not only makes excellent use of its feed, but it can also be put into the feed lot after weaning without the slightest loss in weight. The same is true of the lamb when it is given a grain ration in a creep while it is still drawing nourishment from its dam. Such a lamb can easily be made to reach a weight of 50 to 90 pounds at four months of age, and thus be sold before there is likely to be any loss from the stomach worm.

A good grain ration for such feeding consists of five parts by weight of corn, four of oats and one of a protein concentrate to balance the ration and provide plenty of protein. In connection with such feeding plenty of fresh drinking water as well as salt should be provided. Shade also helps the lamb to make good gains. Creep feeding of lambs not only brings about a maximum of feed, but it also gets them ready for the early market when, on the average, prices are higher than later in the season. The cheapest possible gains should be the aim of every live stock producer.

Show Animals Rendered Immune to Hog Cholera

Show hogs usually are rendered immune to cholera before they enter the circuit. However, when they are brought back home between fairs or after the show season is over they should be isolated, not because there is a danger of their having cholera, but because there is a possibility that they may carry infection in their bodies to the hogs at home. In some territories occasionally a farmer borrows or lends hogs for breeding purposes or sows may be brought to the farm to be bred. Utmost precautions are necessary in cases of this kind. No strange hogs should be brought on the place nor should any breeding animals be permitted to leave if there are any sick hogs in the neighborhood. Even though there is no apparent sickness in the community it is safest to isolate all breeding animals that have come in contact with hogs from neighboring farms.

Pasture for Lambs

Pasture should not be grazed continuously by lambs. At least two lots should be provided as continuous pasturing is conducive to the development of stomach worms and other parasites. Thousands of lambs become infested with parasites yearly due in the main to the continued use of the same pasture. To do well, lambs should be changed from pasture to pasture at least every two or three weeks throughout the summer and until early autumn.

This Little Girl Got Well Quick

"Just after her third birthday, my little daughter, Connie, had a serious attack of infantile flu," says Mrs. H. W. Turnage, 217 Cadwalder St., San Antonio, Texas. "It left her very weak and pale. Her bowels wouldn't act right, she had no appetite and nothing agreed with her. Our physician told us to give her some California Fig Syrup. It made her pick up right away, and now she is as robust and happy as any child in our neighborhood. I give California Fig Syrup full credit for her wonderful condition. It is a great thing for children."

Children like the rich, fruity taste of California Fig Syrup, and you can give it to them as often as they need it, because it is purely vegetable. For over 50 years leading physicians have recommended it, and its overwhelming sales record of over four million bottles a year shows it gives satisfaction. Nothing compares with it as a gentle but certain laxative, and it goes further than this. It regulates the stomach and bowels and gives tone and strength to these organs so they continue to act normally, of their own accord.

There are many imitations of California Fig Syrup, so look for the name "California" on the carton to be sure you get the genuine.

You Cannot Have Health If Constipated

"I am writing you in regard to Milks Emulsion. About two years ago I became constipated and suffered with piles. I tried all kinds of advertised medicines and didn't get any results. I would have to take a cathartic every night. I fell off in weight from 185 to 165 pounds. I got so skinny I didn't look like myself. A friend advised me to try Milks Emulsion. After taking one or two bottles it did me so much good I wrote you for advice in the treatment of my case. I followed the instructions you gave me and used twelve bottles of Milks Emulsion and I am now in perfect health. I have gained 25 pounds. I recommend Milks Emulsion to every sufferer of constipation."

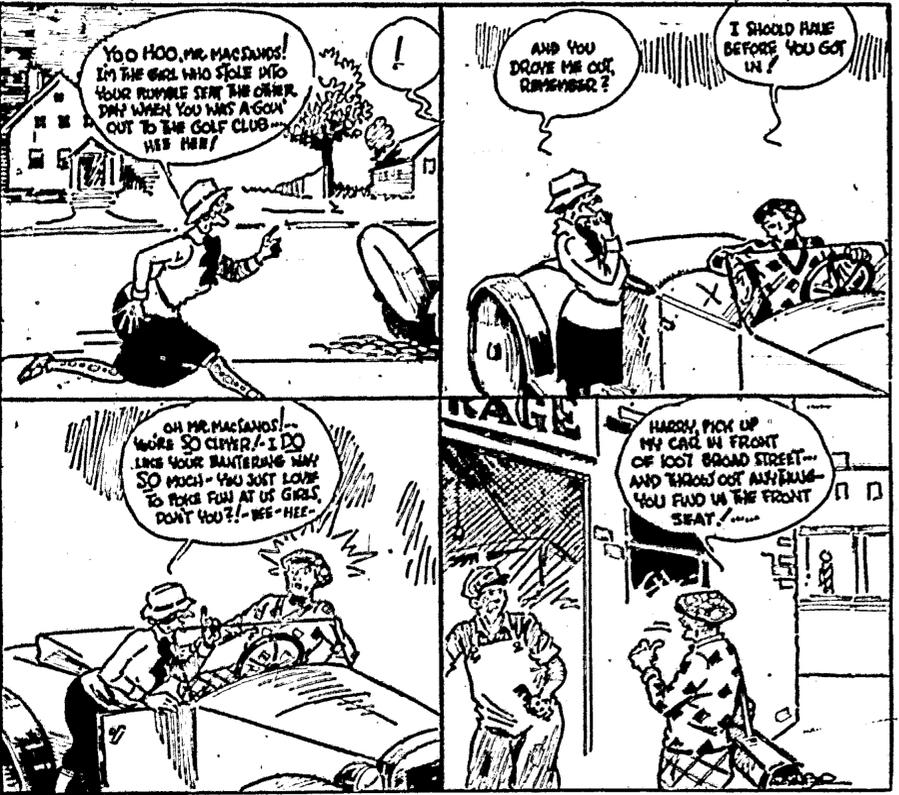

"I want to thank you for your advice." Yours truly, W. L. JONES, Greensboro, Ala., R. F. D. No. 5, Box 84.

One of the most interesting precinct meetings held in Lincoln county took place at Lincoln Monday night. There were 100 people present who enjoyed the political speech making and social hour following.

Addresses were made by Mrs. Marie Cavanaugh, Mrs. Louise H. Coe and Hon. Felipe Chacon, of Albuquerque, in Spanish.

Refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed. A feeling of neighborliness and good fellowship prevailed. "The Side Walks of New York" was sung many times and Al Smith came in for his share of the applause.

STEEL ECLIPSE

Windmill

Starts sooner— pumps longer

Two windmills stood just across the road from each other. With the first sign of a breeze one started up smoothly and quietly. When the breeze became a wind, the other started with a groan and lumbered away at a snail's pace as the wind raised a dust in the road. Then it stopped as abruptly as it had started, while the other continued pumping for some time—then it finally came smoothly to rest with the last trace of the dying breeze.

The difference between machined and polished bearings and ordinary bearings; the difference between ironing in oil and running with dry gears. In other words, it is the difference between the Fairbanks-Morse Self-Oiling Steel Eclipse Windmill and just a plain windmill. Come in and see this great advance in windmill construction. See the self-oiling feature—the center lift feature—the mechanism that enables the Eclipse to actually pump water during two-thirds of every revolution of the wind wheel. You will form a new idea of how good a windmill can be.
