CARRIZOZO, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, JUNE 21, 1929

NUMBER 25

Corona News

Mrs. Cora Prestidge is back from Hotel Dieu where she has been seriously ill. She is somewhat better now.

Mr. Swan Shelton is here visiting his brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Shelton.

Mrs. Ed Williams one of the popular clerks at the Corona Trading Company is away on her vacation. She has gone to see her mother in Texas.

Mr. Wyatt of Roswell, has been visiting here with his sister, Mrs. Dan Simpson.

Frances Sloan, of Alamogordo, is spending the summer here with Elaine Simpson.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Simpson are in Roswell this week.

Congratulations to Will King! He has surprised us all by getting married. His pretty bride is the former Miss Glenneth Osburn, of Albuquerque. They will make their home in Corona. We certainly wish them all the happiness there is.

Rev. R. C. Baker, of Albuquerque, will hold services in the Church next Sunday June 23.

Mr. and Mrs. Downing's granddaughter, Verdine, arrived Tuesday to spend a visit with them.

Mr. George Roberts and Bythal Jolly have gone on a fishing trip in the northern part of this state.

Watch Your Mail

The government and the press of the country are constantly urging the public to exercise more care in addressing mail. It is not only essential that accurate and specific addresses be placed on every letter and package, but it is scarcely less important that they also contain a return address. Annually, somewhere between four and five million dollars are lost to the people of this country because they won't heed the admonitions of the government nor profit by the warning of the press concerning the careful addressing of mail. During the past fiscal year, 23,600,000 letters and 460,000 parcels went to the dead letter divisions of the Post Office Department.

Moisture Shortage

May gave us abundant moisture, starting off crops in fine shape and giving the stockman a range unexcelled. Stock got fat and still are, for the grass, now withering from heat and lack of moisture, is succulent. Farmers have run up against about the same proposition and their stuff is just holding on awaiting the summer rains. June, as usual, has been a dry month, and the seasonal drought is depressing but not necessarily fatal.

Ft. Stanton News

Two ball games were played on the local ball diamond with the 82nd Field Artillery, of Ft. Bliss, Texas, the 82nd winning the first and the Fort taking the 2nd.

The local ball team goes to Ft. Bliss this week on Friday, the 21, there to cross bats with the soldiers on Saturday and Sunday, and expect to win both games. Several people from the Fort will accompany the ball team, and spend some time in El Paso.

Dr. J. W. Tappan, the commanding officer, returned after a visit through the East.

The nurses gave a complimentary picnic to their chief Miss Salina Kane, and from all reports they had an enjoyable time, and the eats were real good.

Mrs. Sellars, Mrs. Cavanaugh, Sr., are having a nice time at their camp, and are expected back for the week end.

All the officers of the Seaman's Social Club were unanimously renominated for the coming year.

A fried chicken party was given by the License Row, and everyone enjoyed the eats, which were prepared by Mr. Major and a large staff of assistants—hope to have several more parties in the near future, as the chicken was cooked fit for a king to eat.

Twelve-Mile Limit

Among the first ordinances enacted by the city fathers of Carrizozo was the twelve mile speed limit for autos. Signs were duly posted and they were still in evidence until about a year ago, when the Mayor ordered their removal. They didn't hurt anything particularly, except, to a tourist, they left the impression that Carrizozo was a slow town. Locally they gave no offense as all car drivers went too fast to read them. In fact, our own people violated the ordinance as often as bootleggers do the Volstead Act. But what produced the above reminiscence was a little squib that encountered our eye, which reads:

The most ridiculous thing one meets in a days drive is a 12 mile speed limit. Did you try to drive a car twelve miles an hour? Did you ever see any one drive a car twelve miles an hour? It has gotten so that even the chickens that cross the road move faster than that. If they don't they don't get across.

Safety First

"It aint sanitary," protested the traveler, "to have the house built over the hog pen that way."
"Well, I dunno," replied the native. "We aint lost a hog in fifteen years."

Troubling the President

(National Industries News Service)

Washington is watching with keen interest the happenings in congress to see what effect they will have on the destiny of the two great political parties that have for so long contended for mastery in this republic. Six months ago it looked as if the Democratic party was crushed to the ground, and that the triumphant Republican party was so strongly entrenched that nothing could shake its control of the Government. Party boats are rocking in seas of troubles.

There is a strained condition between the President and some of the Republican Senators over Patronage. President Hoover thinks the judiciary should not be made the spoils of partisan politics. In accord with high ideals he has refused to follow the dictates of the Pennsylvania machine in naming Federal judges in that State, with the result that some of the Keystone politicians are watching and waiting, while rubbing the rust off of the swords they had sheathed.

But it is the tariff that is raising hob right now. The House is accused of turning out a bill that raises the cost of living a billion dollars a year. $150,000,000 on sugar alone. This, President Hoover is said to think, is too much of a raise. Yet some industrialists want still higher duties. The Progressive Republican Senators stand for lower rates, and the Old Guard is beginning once more to read them out of the party. Even a cabinet minister, Secretary Adams, has joined in the attack on them, which does not ease Mr. Hoover's troubles one bit.

A long hot summer is ahead and it may make tempers hot and hasty, which always upsets the plans of the politicians. Which is one reason why Washington looks on at the doings on Capitol Hill with interest and concern.

Methodist Church Notes

The Missionary Society met last week at the home of Mrs. Ira Greer. Mrs. Carl and Mrs. Greer were hostesses. All had a delightful time. Delicious refreshments of ice cream, cake and tea were served.

On June 14, Mrs. Freeman invited the Missionary Society to her home for a farewell party, given in honor of two of our members, Mrs. Greer and Mrs. Grumbles, who are soon to leave our midst. A pleasant afternoon was spent. The hostess invited all guests to the dining room where delicious refreshments were served. The honored guests received a number of little tokens of our love.

The Missionary Society will meet on June 27 at the home of Mrs. Lucky. All are cordially invited. If you are not provided with a conveyance, phone 111, and a way will be provided for all desiring to go.

A New Variety

There is a new brand of asparagus on the market and it is designated as Scotch Asparagus. It is tipless.

According to market reports, the price of corn dropped ten cents a bushel the day the Jones law became effective—Yet the farmer votes for prohibition and howls to congress for help.

New Dormitory for College

State College, N. M.—Work on the $60,000 dormitory for men at the New Mexico College of Agriculture and Mechanical Arts will begin next month. The building will probably be ready for occupancy by January 1, 1930.

The building is the first of three which will be built on the State College campus following a $200,000 bond issue which was authorized at the recent session of the New Mexico legislature.

The building, which will accommodate eighty men, will be of Spanish architecture with red tile roof and either stucco or brick walls. It will be U shaped, inclosing a patio which will be open to the rear or campus side of the building.

The building is being planned so that four men, occupying two separate rooms, will have what is virtually a private apartment with common bathroom and lavatory in each room. Each room will open directly upon a porch extending around the inside of the "U," and opening on the patio.

In addition to the rooms for men there will be a large living-room adjoining the Proctor's quarters, so that the Proctor and wife may have general supervision of the room.

The other two buildings to be erected on the State College campus in the near future will provide new quarters for the School of Agriculture and the Department of Home Economics.

Render your County Bills

The Fiscal Year ending June 30, 1929, it will be much appreciated if anyone having a claim against Lincoln county will render a bill to the County Clerk on or before said date.

Board of County Commissioners, S. E. Greisen, Clerk,

Need No "Breaking In"

Precision manufacturing and an unusual degree of importance which the Ford Motor Company attaches to the inspection of Model A cars has gone far to eliminate that tedious process known as the "breaking in" of a new automobile.

On the windshields of the new Model A are directions which suggest a driving speed limit for the first 500 miles of 35 miles per hour. This is in marked contrast to the old line of instruction which cautioned against a speed of more than 20 or 25 miles an hour for at least 1000 miles.

Excess heat is the most destructive agency which may affect an automobile, particularly in the first several hundred miles it is driven. Friction is mainly responsible for overheating, and a piston that is fitted too tightly may seize and in turn score the cylinder wall. This means an extensive repair job.

Careful machining of engine parts, such as cylinder blocks, pistons, camshafts, crankshafts, etc., the proper fitting of bearings, accuracy in the cutting of gears; multitudinous checks during the process of assembling the Model A and rigid inspections combine to produce an automobile which is ready for the road when delivered. For this reason, it may at once be operated to the limit of speed prescribed by the motor codes of a great many states, without going through the customary "breaking in" period.

The Livestock Situation

Standardization of meats as to quality, size and even price may be one of the outstanding results and benefits of the growth of so-called "chain store" markets all over the country. Chain stores have built up their great volume of business largely as a result of standardization of products they distribute, quite important as to uniformity of price and quality. Apparently, chain store merchandising is on the increase, so the producer of meat animals may well give consideration to their demands.

The chain store men says that it is good business to carry meats of uniform quality and weight. Thus, when the housewife buys four small pork chops for 40 cents one day, she does not expect to buy four pork chops for 60 cents the next time, merely because the dealer doesn't have any small pork loins in his cooler. Neither does she understand why a round steak should cost 40 cents one time and twice that much the next time—a natural result, however, where the dealer buys different sized carcasses from time to time.

The chain store has had a great deal to do with increasing the consumer demand for baby beef, because of the good average quality, lack of waste, small cuts and fairly uniform scale of prices. There is no doubt but that producers must continue their efforts towards better breeding so that the production of choice young cattle, lambs and hogs may be possible.

The retailer is just as anxious to see a stabilized market as any one. He sells his food products for about the same price week in and week out, from year to year. It is difficult to explain to the consumer why there should be great variation in retail meat prices from week to week. Chain stores and retailers are giving serious thought to stabilization of market values and manifestly, in order to have stable retail values, it is necessary to have stable values on the live animal at the stock yards.

Cattle producers generally agree that the greatest profit lies in producing young cattle and developing them to marketable quality and age in the shortest time possible, thus effecting quick turnover and the least possible overhead in taxes, wages interest, etc. The same thing may be said of producing 180 to 200-lb. hogs in six or seven months. The lamb producer has pretty well solved his production problem, probably the only real danger in that field being the desire often to carry more ewes and lambs on a given amount of land than can well be carried without serious danger of shortage of feed.

Boy Scouts in Camp

85 Boy Scouts and leaders are now in camp at the Boy Scout Camp in the Sacramento mountains. An excellent group of instructors are assisting Sgt. Duthie. The program of activities includes Scoutcraft, camping, Nature study, Leathercraft, woodcraft, Indian Lore, swimming and horsemanship.

James Love, head cook at the New Mexico Institute, has charge of the dining room. He makes a big success in camp keeping the space behind the belt buckle filled. A trained nurse has charge of the health and sanitation of the camp.

SPANISH CADETS, ON ROYAL TRAINING SHIP, VISIT NEW YORK

Seeing New York's skyline through slants of a gun, Spanish cadets got an eyeful, to say the least. They were there aboard the four-masted royal training ship, Juan Sebastian Elcano, after a 90,000-mile voyage.

Returning From Cities to the Farms

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

DURING the past decade over one and one-half million persons moved from the farms to the cities. The reasons for this movement were various; but chiefly it was due to high taxes, operating expenses and difficulty in making a profit, and in some cases the impossibility of meeting expenses. Only a small minority were attracted to the cities by the "white lights" and the opportunities offered for social life. This movement to the cities by so large a number of persons left many vacant farms in almost every state; but the farms abandoned were mostly small in size and located in obscure places.

During this same period, however, there had been a movement in the opposite direction—from city back to the farm. Numerically this movement was not so large as that which moved from the farms to the cities, but it did represent a certain type of thoughtful persons who, profiting by their experience, sought again the advantages of rural life.

The farm population division of the United States Department of Agriculture recently made a survey of this latter movement and discovered that out of ten thousand families, representing nearly thirty-five thousand persons who moved back to the farm, about one-sixth were impelled to do so because of the high cost of city life. Another sixth testified that city work was too exacting and unsteady, that it could not be depended upon; and another large number, about one-fifth, became weary of the monotony of city life. The remainder of the ten thousand families were agreed in their frank declaration that the city was no suitable place in which to bring up children.

According to the last United States census the wealth of every farmer was placed at $1,970, and of every non-farmer at $3,175. The difference between these two amounts would not argue in favor of city over rural life. The movement from farm to city had been actuated by the desire to better family conditions. The experiences of city life did not meet these expectations and the result in many cases was disillusionment.

Perhaps the smaller groups now returning to the farms from the cities are choosing in favor of a condition of life which guarantees the highest possible privileges.

Makes Life Sweeter

Children's stomachs sour, and need an anti-acid. Keep their systems sweet with Phillips Milk of Magnesia! When tongue or breath tells of acid condition—correct it with a spoonful of Phillips. Most men and women have been comforted by this universal sweetener—more mothers should invoke its aid for their children. It is a pleasant thing to take, yet neutralizes more acid than the harsher things too often employed for the purpose. No household should be without it. Phillips is the genuine, prescription product physicians endorse for general use; the name is important. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. registered trade mark of the Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

Forestation Gains

Reforestation is gradually coming into its own, and during the last three years 1,000,000 acres have been added to the state and community preserves. The state of Washington led in the increase, with Pennsylvania second. Three states which had not had state forests prior to 1925—Delaware, Georgia and South Carolina—have fallen in line. The total of public owned forests now is in excess of 12,000,000 acres.

Oil Tanks of Aluminum

Oil tanks of aluminum are being used in the effort to obtain a container for the storage of oil which will resist the corrosion caused by the sulphur contained in the oil when taken from the ground. This corrosion is a serious matter to the industry, for it is necessary to rework the tanks constantly in some of the fields.

Children's Evening Fairy Tale

THE smoke curled up above the train's engine. Up and up into the air the smoke curled, and more and more kept coming from the stack. Great clouds of smoke seemed to be shot out—oh, how much smoke there was! And it almost seemed to stop in the air for a bit and wait for the clouds of smoke from below to join it all before it disappeared into the air. "We belong to the train family, too," the clouds of smoke were saying. "Whirring, curdling, cutting, wa, too, being to the train family." "The engine and the coal cart, the baggage car, the passenger train—all belong to the train family, but so do the clouds of smoke." "The whistle belongs to the train family, all the different parts do, but so, also, the clouds of smoke belong." "We are sent up into the air by the engine's smokestack. We go when we are told and we sit the countryside around, know that a train is passing." "Some of us do this work at one place and some at another, and so it is all along the line." "And as we go up into the air we stop and rest for awhile—sometimes for only an hour or so, sometimes for but a few moments. "Sometimes, though, they stop for awhile in the car yards and in the car barns and have a rest rest. "But there is no mistake in saying they're a family of travelers. "Trains are such travelers—such a family for going and going and going that they had to fix sleeping cars for passengers. "True, the passengers who go on trains are travelers, too. "But if trains, in the first place, hadn't wanted to go on all night people wouldn't have needed the sleeping cars. "The real travelers are the members of the train family. "And though some of the smoke stops here and some does its curdling act a little further along the line, we all feel like travelers because of the family to which we belong. "This is our curdling song, which now we'll sing before we disappear to the air:

Curling, curdling, curdling, Up to the air with a flick. Curling, curdling, curdling, To show that a train's nearby. Curling, curdling, curdling, Leaving no trace and no sign. Curling, curdling, curdling, Over the railway line. Curling, curdling, curdling, Before we disappear. Curling, curdling, curdling, As long as we are here. Curling, curdling, curdling, Up to the air with a flick. Curling, curdling, curdling, It is to us no bother. Curling, curdling, curdling, We belong to the train family. Curling, curdling, curdling, To you can surely see.

That was the end of their song. They had disappeared, but following along the train, down out of the smokestack of the engine, came more and more members of the Train Smoke Family.

Why We Have Queer Impulses

BY M. K. THOMSON, Ph. D.
DID you ever have a queer impulse to scribble on or to avoid stepping on the cracks in the cement sidewalks to make faces at some one, to tell a person just what you think of him, to do any one or several of a thousand "queer" things? It is natural for all of us to have queer impulses at times. The normal person creates the nature of the impulse and checks himself in time to avoid making a fool of himself. But now and then we slip up, and the impulse gets the better of us. This happens when the impulse stays at the focus of consciousness and dominates our motor reactions which control muscular action. It is a wild form of obsession.

to touch the poor offender without in any way realizing the cause of his offense. We can understand conduct of this sort only as we bear in mind that they are merely the exaggeration of the very sensations we find in normal people. We all have queer impulses but we are able to control them whereas the so-called mad is one who cannot control his impulses. It is the force of an obsession with him that is really trouble more than he is a criminal or a fool. It is insanity, and sometimes, vice.

There is something so frank, open, straightforward in the innocent one's gaze that even in the old world when the child of discretion will point to his tongue with truth and with the very best quality. We are conscious of a trait of character that once was in the little child's eyes which he has lost from him when he first began to deal with a tricky world. We tried sincerely, but found that honesty is not always the best policy. # ARTIE

His Adventures in Love, Life and the Pursuit of Happiness
By GEORGE ADE

Romance Again for Artie

ON Saturday afternoon Artie Blanchard was enjoying his half holiday in a manner peculiar to himself. He was battling with the crowd in State street. He had his muffer high on his neck and his hat was pulled rakishly forward so that it threatened to produce friction with his eyebrows every time he changed the expression of his face. He was whistling a classical composition that had lately taken possession of his thoughtful moments. It was entitled "Oh-oh-oh"—and then some words that meant nothing. Artie did not know the tune or the words, so he merely whistled it on speculation and when he came to the doubtful parts he hurried. When he grew tired of whistling he smoked a black cigar. Artie was apparently at peace with the world and any one to have seen him shift his cigar from the right pocket of his mouth to the left merely by the play of facial muscles would have said, "Here's a young man content." But Artie, like many other young persons, never whistled more cheerfully, smoked more hungrily and looked into show windows with more seeming interest than when he was keeping company with a great sorrow.

"What Was You Piping Off—the Bracelets," Asked Artie.

It could have been nothing less than the guiding hand of Fate that shoved him around a bevy of women who were carrying bundles and looking at show windows at the same time, thus contriving to mow down anything and anybody that happened in their way. For Artie immediately got a view of the cause of his sorrow. He would have known her by her rich black coat alone, but the saucy tilt of a new spring hat left no doubt in his mind as to the wearer's identity.

Your ordinary lover would have retreated, palpitating. Considering that when Artie had last seen her she was all tears and that his parting words had been "There are others," it would have been proper for him to drop back into the moving crowd before she turned from the display of precious jewelry and saw him there looking at her.

But Artie did nothing of the kind. He walked up to her, brushed some imaginary dust from her sleeve, and said, "Hello, Cholly! How's everything stackin'?"

Mamie turned around and there was a leap of color to her face.

She said: "Why, Mr. Blanchard!"

"What was you pipin' off—the bracelets?" asked Artie.

"Yes," with her face half turned from him.

"Do you see the diamond one there? I was lookin' at it the other day. I'm thinkin' o' buyin' it for a girl friend of mine."

"Indeed!"

By this time she had recovered somewhat and she spoke with an evident attempt to be coldly sarcastic.

"You heard me, didn't you? I went in and asked the top side guy how much the bracelet meant to him, and he said I could have it for four hundred simoleans. Well, I says, 'that's a mere bagatelle to me. Get ready to wrap it up. That wouldn't keep me in neckties for a month!'"

Artie paused for a moment or two, watching her all the time, and then he said: "But maybe you'd rather have that other one up there. You know what you'd like."

Mamie did not look at him and she did not answer. Artie's attempted playfulness was too blatant for her, and Artie seemed suddenly to realize this. He changed his tactics.

Mamie, he said, putting his forefinger softly against her arm.

"Well?"

"Is it fixed up?"

"Is what fixed up?"

"You know."

"No, I don't."

They were standing side by side, both looking intently into the show window and talking to it. Their conduct was sufficiently strange to have attracted the attention of the people who brushed against them. But in State street the pedestrians will not give their serious attention to a man unless he does something worthy—such as falling off an elevated platform or colliding with a yellow cab.

"How, about my little old picture? Is it turned to the wall?"

"I—guess not."

"Oh, you're guessin', are you? Well, I s'pose the other boy's dillin' all my dates?"

"That silly thing!"

Artie chirruped as if skeptical, "He's a nice boy," said he, and he added, after a deep sigh, "I love him like Johnny loves the meables!"

Mamie turned to him, and, in a quick flame of earnestness, said:

"Artie, you know I can't bear that old thing, and I'll never speak to him again as long as I live." She had tears in her eyes.

"You won't be loser at that."

"I'm goin' to write to him and let him know something."

"Why, no; not at all. Give me his address and I'll go round and fix it all up with him."

"If it hadn't been for him we wouldn't have—"

"Wouldn't have put on the gloves, eh? Well, come on. Let's be movin'!"

"I have to meet the Connelly girls in a few minutes," she said. "I promised them."

"Shake 'em. You've got somethin' better than the Connelly girls."

Mamie laughed and the war was then and there over, before the tears had dried.

"How about Tuesday night, Mamie?"

"Yes, or Monday."

"Good enough! An' now you come right in here and get into line with a bunch o' violets. There's nothin' too rich for the Sunshine o' the North Side."

It was not the same Mamie who came out of the florist's wearing violets, and it was not the same Artie who was grinning at her delight over the little present.

"Now, I must go for the Connelly girls," said she.

"All right. Say, Mamie—"

"Yes."

"I'll just make that tomorrow night."

Japanese Put Faith in Many Gods of Chance

While occidentals have but one god of chance to whom to appeal for aid when good luck is needed in any situation, the Japanese have many gods of good fortune, each one assigned, as it were, to his own particular field. There is no religious sense of awe or dignity connected with these deities; in fact, the Japanese rather enjoy poking fun at them. Their pictures or statues may be seen in almost every home in Japan. They come from four sources: Shintoism, Buddhism, Brahmanism and Taoism.

Perhaps the most popular is Dakoku, "Great Black One," the god of wealth. He is usually seen holding a ceremonial arrangement of rice puddings, rice being a symbol of wealth.

The merriest god is Hotel, the friend of children and loved by all the people. He is very fat, his head is shaven, and he usually carries a large Chinese fan. He bears a huge bag of treasures, which hangs over his shoulder or is used for his pillow. His name means "cloth bag," and he is of Chinese origin.

The patron of fishermen is Ebisu, usually pictured as gay and vigorous, dressed in Japanese costume and carrying a fish of a fishing rod. He is generally identified with Himeko, the Shinto god, who at three years of age was so weak that he was abandoned and set adrift in a boat made of reeds.—New York Herald Tribune.

Twain Astonished London

Mark Twain might have been expected to be amazed at London when he visited the British metropolis in 1867, but instead, London was amazed at him. For he appeared on Dover street, clad in blue bathrobe and slippers. Noting the astonishment of the townspeople, the humorist explained:

"I simply wanted to take a bath at the club across the street, and did the same thing I'd often done at the seaside. London is a sort of a seaside town, isn't it?"—Detroit News.

LIVE STOCK

POTATOES RIGHT FOR LIVE STOCK

Rations Are Generally Comparable to Corn Silage.

Potatoes make a good succulent feed for all classes of live stock when fed as a part of the ration, declares E. J. Maynard, associate animal husbandman for the Colorado Agricultural college experiment station in a new bulletin just issued on "Potatoes For Live Stock."

Copies of this bulletin may be obtained free of charge by writing the extension service of the college.

Subjects discussed in the booklet include preparation for feeding, potato ensilage, potatoes and potato silage for sheep, potatoes for dairy cows, swine and horses.

The bulletin is summarized as follows:

Potatoes fed in live stock rations are generally comparable to good corn silage.

Potatoes may be fed raw to cattle, sheep, horses and swine, but are best cooked for swine. Raw potatoes have only 2.3 the value of cooked potatoes fed to pigs. Raw potatoes proved to be as good as cooked potatoes fed to dairy cows.

Raw potatoes may safely constitute one-half the dry matter in rations for cattle and sheep and one-fourth the dry matter in rations for horses. Cooked or raw potatoes should not replace more than one-half the grain allowance in fattening pigs.

Raw potatoes fed to dairy cows at the rate of from 25 to 35 pounds daily have actually increased milk production, but larger amounts will taint the milk, cause a salty butter and may cause indigestion and bloating.

The dry matter in potatoes is composed largely of starch, a carbohydrate valuable in both fattening and milk-producing operations.

Potatoes are low in protein or growth-producing material and some protein concentrate or roughage should be fed with them.

Raw potatoes are best fed sliced through a root cutter. Frozen, rotted, or decayed potatoes may cause trouble if fed to live stock.

Raw potatoes have an acrid taste and tend to increase the flow of digestive juices. They should not be fed with other feeds that tend to irritate the digestive system and they should always be fed with caution.

Efficiency Is Key to Beef Feeder's Profit

Efficiency in feeding methods—not a wide margin between the prices paid for feeder cattle and the prices obtained for them on the market—are likely to determine the profit of the beef cattle feeder for the next few years, in the opinion of C. H. Arnold of the rural economics department of the Ohio State university.

However, Arnold believes the beef cattle outlook is at present favorable for the man who produces feeder cattle. It is also favorable for the man who can purchase calves and carry them through a large portion of their growing period, and then feed them out, providing he has an abundance of cheap pasture.

The market outlook for fat cattle does not appear favorable for the next three months, but may strengthen in the late summer, Arnold concludes after a study of figures on receipts of cattle thus far this year, and on the number of cattle now on farms in this and other states.

Best Hog Pasture

Some farmers are short of suitable land or believe that they cannot afford to use good crop land for hog pasture. Anyone who has efficiently used pasture and kept close check on the financial end of his business would testify that the average acre of farm land devoted to hog pasture will yield a return far in excess of that secured from crops of wheat, oats, corn, or hay. Where failures have been noted in the use of pasture, the evident cause was that of an attempt to make some rocky, barren, out-of-the-way piece of land grow the crop.

Before Sow Farrows

A day or so before each sow farrow she should be washed with warm water and a good laundry soap. After washing the belly and udders should be rubbed with lard to keep the skin from cracking and becoming sore. She should be kept in a properly cleaned pen and left there until the pigs are farrowed. Clean straw, and not old, litter scraped up around the pens, should be used for bedding.

Water for Ewes

Ewes with twins, getting a little extra grain feed, drink a good deal more than ewes with single lambs getting no grain. The excessive call on the ewe by their lambs causes all the more drouth on the system, and thence more thirst, naturally because there is not so much sap in that dietary as there is in green feed. Indeed, when the lambs get strong, they begin to drink even before they are weaned. If milk runs short and the herbage is dry through a spell of dry weather.

For hot weather breakfasts try the Wake-up Food—quick new energy

IDEAL BREAKFAST for warm weather—the Wake-up Food, Post Toasties! So rich in the energy you need, yet so light and tempting to appetite. And so easily digested that it releases its rich store of energy quickly for either work or play! That's why it is called the Wake-up Food.

During these warm days serve it for breakfast or luncheon or supper. That family of yours can't help but like it—tender hearts of choice white corn, delicately flaked and deliciously flavored and toasted crisp. And how they'll benefit by its quick energy!

Remember, there's just one way to get the Wake-up Food—ask for Post Toasties in the red and yellow wax-wrapped package.

Britain Renounces Oak as Too Slow of Growth

Reforestation plans in Great Britain call for very few oak saplings. Oak grows so slowly that it does not pay and, it is being superseded by larch. An oak at fifteen years is worth nothing, but a larch of that age will make good fence posts which will last in the open for at least twelve years. Oak is the best for heavy gate posts but larch is almost as good. Elm is best known for the making of coffins, but it is useful for all inside work and makes fine rafters. Unfortunately it rots when exposed to the weather. Beech, poplar and sycamore are all quite useless for fence making, for they rot quickly in the open. Spruce and silver fir are not much better. Both will decay within five years. Oddly enough horse chestnut, though quite a soft wood, withstands bad weather better than a number of other trees.

A Cruel Thing

Paul Polret, the Paris dressmaker, said one day to a reporter in New York:

"Cruel things happen sometimes in dressmakers' shops. In my shop a mannequin was once displaying dinner gowns to a middle-aged couple. The mannequin was about nineteen, tall and supple, with gorgeous eyes. She put on dinner gown after dinner gown, and she certainly was beautiful in them."

"As she posed in her eighth or ninth gown, a rather daring creation, the middle-aged wife nudged her husband and hissed:

"George, you never look at me like that."

"Well," mumbled George, "you never look like that!"

Not Guilty

Robert, five years old, came into the house with the seat of his play overalls torn away. His mother had forbidden him to climb trees, fences, or anything else.

"Now Robert!" she scolded. "You have been climbing again! You've torn your pants while climbing!"

"No, mamma, I didn't," said Robert.

"Robert! You certainly tore these pants climbing somewhere."

"Indeed and indeed I didn't, mamma," pleaded Robert.

"How did you tear them then?"

"I tore 'em coming down!" sobbed Robert.

Hoovercrats Howl

A furor swept over the South when it learned that the wife of President Hoover had for one of her guests at a social function a Mrs. DePriest, wife of a negro congressman, from Chicago. We decline to become exercised over the incident, and fail to see the consistency in the Hoovercrats in condemning such action. They knew Hoover's position on race equality when they voted for him—and he has a perfect right to exercise that opinion, differ as we may on the question—and our only regret at this first opportunity the White House has had to exemplify that feeling is that some of these southern Hoovercrats were not present to break bread with the Hoovers on that auspicious occasion. The South made a fool of itself over religion last fall; it fails to arouse any sympathy by its present attitude. Hoover is no worse now than he was then, when the South fell over itself to support him—preferring a fetish to a principle. So far as we are concerned, the Hoovercrats may have all the satisfaction they can get out of the denunciation of the blending of colors in the National Capital, inasmuch as their fanaticism made such actions possible.

It isn't the age of a town that makes it grow, its the spirit of the people in it. A town grows or stands still as the people in it wish. Most of the towns that are known as live and enterprising are not so because nature or chance have especially favored them. They are progressive because there was at one time enough people in them who wanted them to be progressive enough to join together and work for the things that made them good towns.

A better town makes a better market place for the farmer and artisan who are parts of the community. A better town means better property values, more comforts, better schools, better streets and more attractive living conditions. In fact any effort to build a better town repays the community many fold. It always brings its reward.

A man who is serving two masters will bear watching—to see which pays him the most.

Road Across the Mal Pais

From the Santa Fe New Mexican we take the following article concerning the publicity given New Mexico highways, and particularly the road across the mal pais, just west of our town:

The current issue of Construction Methods, McGraw-Hill magazine, reaching thousands of engineers, contractors, builders and architects all over the North American continent, carries a story liberally illustrated of the new road over the lava flow west of Carrizozo.

The story tells of the difficulties New Mexico highway engineers encounter in their work and of the fine roads they succeed in building for the benefit of the tourist traffic as well as local residents. Two full pages of illustrations enliven the article.

The article was written by Ladd Maystead, director of the highway service bureau, who states that this month there will be over 40 articles, short and long, many of them illustrated, appearing in magazines over the country, all of which advertise New Mexico.

Victim of Explosion

Ansel, son of Mr and Mrs. A. V. Swearingen, was badly burned about the face and one arm by a powder explosion, Monday of this week. The explosion occurred near the Helen Rae Mine, to which point Ansel and Paul Ludlow had gone. They discovered a can of powder and decided to have a premature 4th of July celebration. A string of powder was strung from the cap, and a match applied to the runner. Ansel apparently, was too close to the can; anyhow, he received the charge as stated, and painful as the injury was, still he is quite fortunate that his sight was not affected—neither eye having been injured.

Used Car Sale Brisk

What is believed to be a new record for the sale of used cars in the United States was established in May when the nation-wide Chevrolet dealers organization sold 157,624 used cars. This was in addition to the record volume of new car business which also soared to a new level during the month.

In commenting on this achievement, Chevrolet factory officials point out that it was made possible through the tremendous amount of public confidence that has been built up by Chevrolet dealers through the general policy of offering for sale only dependable merchandise. They explain that through the widespread use of the red tag "with an O. K. that counts", prospective used car buyers can be assured that every vital part of the car has been properly reconditioned and put in shape to offer thousands of miles of unused transportation.

Compared with corresponding month of a year ago, when 118,195 used cars were sold, the May 1929 total showed a gain of more than 33 per cent. It also outstripped the April 1929 record of 133,897 used cars.

In accomplishing this feat, the Chevrolet dealer organization sold an average of 6,063 used cars a day during the 26 business days of the month. This was at the rate of more than 600 cars an hour and more than ten cars a minute. The May record demonstrates that it pays to sell only dependable merchandise, officials point out.

Taking A Vacation?

Reduced Vacation Rate for Your Telephone

If you are going to be away from home for a month or more this summer you can save money on your telephone bill.

With our vacation rate plan you can have your telephone service suspended, just as you stop your newspaper, ice or milk service while you are out of town. This plan for residence telephone service is available for any period of more than one month and less than three months.

The rate during the suspended period will be just half your regular monthly rate. Your telephone remains connected, you retain your number and directory listing, outgoing calls can be placed but no incoming calls received. Service will be restored as soon as you return.

During your absence you will be billed for the regular amount, then when you return you will be credited with the amount due you on the reduced rate.

Send us a card a few days before your vacation is over and your telephone will be restored to regular service when you arrive home.

The Adams store building, now owned by Shirley Phipps, has been remodeled, walls brightened up and decorations installed, and will be used by Mrs. Phipps as a Millinery and ready-to-wear store. Mrs. Phipps has already received a part of her stock, dresses for ladies and children, hose, etc., and additional stock is on the road and will be placed on exhibition upon arrival. Mrs. Phipps invites the general public to visit her store, examine her goods and see what attractive prices she offers to the trade.

What the Gray House Hid

THE STORY

Hilton Hanby has purchased a country place—the Gray house, near Pine Plains, Miss Selenos, a former tenant, warns him that the house is under a curse. Further alarming details are impressed upon Adolf Smucker, Hanby's secretary, by a man who claims to have been chauffeur for Sir Stanford Seymour, former occupant of the place. The Hanbys laugh off the warnings. But they are shocked when they hear that the caretaker of the Gray house, a man named Kerr, has been mysteriously murdered. Hanby consults his friend Pelham. The family starts for the new home. Appleton, a clerk of Douglas and Smith, the agents from whom Hanby bought the Gray house, urges Hanby to discontinue Hanby from occupying the Gray house. Pelham becomes a member of the household. A phone call from a man who declares he is an old acquaintance of Hanby's, urges him to preserve a part of the grounds as a bird sanctuary. The Hanbys take possession of the Gray house. A stranger introducing himself as Frederick Appleton, calls at the Gray house and is welcomed because of his interest in bird life. Hanby engages Appleton as his agent. The Selenos mystery is explained. Smucker, out of a job after the loss of his position with Hanby, becomes embittered against him as the author of his misfortunes, and plans revenge.

CHAPTER VII—Continued

He turned away and made for the bird sanctuary. The wire netting about it he climbed nimbly, and then, unheeding thorns and brambles, he crept like the hunted thing he was to its black center. Suddenly he stepped into nothingness. He felt himself falling. Then came a blow, and he was no more aware of time and space.

When Tim Hanby, intent on adding a white owl to his collection, had carefully alighted his twenty-two at the creature as it sat on an elm branch, he had not been prepared for the extraordinary intervention that saved his life. As his finger creased the trigger, there came a bloodcurdling scream, and some large animal had sprung from the base of the tree. Tim felt that it was no disgrace to flee immediately.

Hanby had not been near his office for two months. An hour's dictation cleared up his correspondence, and he went to the Hardware club for luncheon.

"Hello, Douglas!" he said, stopping at the table where an elderly, gray-haired man was sitting. "I called you up this morning, but you were busy."

"Glad to see you," Douglas replied heartily. "I've missed you. What's it like to be a landed proprietor?"

"The best life in the world," Hanby declared. "but a damned sight more to do than I thought. Why did you recommend me to buy these farms?"

"A sound investment. They'll be wanted for a country club some day. How are your improvements coming along?"

"They are finished, thanks to your admirable Appleton. Douglas, how could you let a jewel of a man like that go?"

"There was a curious smile on the heavily-lined face of the real estate man.

"So Appleton has been up there again, has he?" inquired Douglas. "Again? What do you mean?"

"The Gray house holds some singular fascination for him—that's what I mean. You ask why I let him go. You call him a jewel. I did that for more than thirty years."

"And yet you refused to raise his pay, and stuck some jackanapes over him. I thought you were a better business man than that."

"Tell me just what he said," Douglas returned.

He listened to Hanby in silence. "Now hear me," he resumed. "I fired Appleton. I didn't refuse to raise his pay, and I put nobody over him."

"You fired Appleton? Douglas, you must have been crazy! What for?"

"Obviously because he was drunk and impertinent."

"Appleton? Why, he never drinks!"

"Another reason was because he had deliberately misled me as to his family life. Yet a third was because he had manipulated accounts. I don't mean that he took money from me. I mean that he had robbed Peter to pay Paul. I mean specifically that for years he had been charging other clients for the money he used to effect repairs on the Gray house."

"On my house?"

were dead, so that he could marry the younger woman, he runs around with."

Hanby put his hands to his head. "This is too much!" he murmured. "Remember, I had him in my house for a month."

"I had him for more than thirty years. Up to the time he met this musical comedy person—she must be forty now—he was a good husband. Now he takes the woman out to dance halls. He has money saved, but he's spending it. I have never been so utterly deceived in any one else's wife, who is religious, thinks she's possessed of a devil, and maybe she's right. She says he has any amount of money. I had his books examined, and he hadn't embezzled one cent. All he has done is to divert money from other houses to the upkeep and repair of the one you're in. You've no kick coming. He saved you money. What was he doing for you?"

Hanby explained. He told Douglas what his improvements had been, their cost, and the time in which they were executed. The real-estate man made calculations on the back of a menu card. Fortunately Hanby had exact particulars as to dimensions. "Here's another puzzle!" said Douglas. "To complete the work in that time he must have worked many more men than you paid for. I know prices and labor scales in New York state. It amounts to this—he went up to you to get the very job you pressed on him. Why? Search me! Hanby—search me! Another thing—he must have paid for extra workmen out of his own pocket, so that he could get the work done by a certain time. Again you may search me!"

Hanby frowned. "He may have wanted the workmen off the premises for some purpose of his own."

"What purpose?" Douglas asked. "How should I know? By the way did you ever deny permission to a former tenant, a Miss Selenos, to go back and dig something up from the garden?"

"I denied her right to do some excavation. Appleton told me she was a maniac who wanted to bomb the place. I turned it over to him. Anything in what he said?"

Hanby told him of the affair of Miss Selenos and her pet.

"I don't mind admitting that Appleton has destroyed a lot of my faith in mankind," Douglas said presently. "He was the one man I would have wagered my soul on as being square and white."

"Ever see the woman?"

"That was how it all came out. I ran out of gas near Lincoln, and had to go to a very third-rate roadhouse. There was Appleton, in a neat tuxedo, doing fancy steps with a good looking ex-actress. I looked at him very hard. I couldn't believe it was he."

"Douglas laughed a little. "He had the d-d insolence to say that if I annoyed his lady friend by making baby eyes at her, he'd knock my block off. Next morning he didn't try to make excuses. He had a hangover, and he told me much of what he had concealed since 1900 or thereabouts. It appeared that he had always hated me and envied me my good luck." Douglas grew almost irritable. "No more about Appleton, or I'll change my table!"

Hanby did not get back to the Gray house until late. He said a few words to the younger people and then asked Dina and Bill to come to the library.

"I've had a great day," he announced. "Incidentally I have discovered that my judgment of character is no better, let's say, than Bill's."

"And me a house detective!" Bill cried. "Your reason totters!"

"We've all been deceived but Lee," "Lee?" cried Dina. "Oh, Bill, you're joking! That boy?"

"Dina, light of my life," said Hanby. "If there is a more thoroughgoing old hound than Mr. Frederick Darby Pickwick Appleton, let me learn his dishonored name. I've seen his Joan this afternoon, and I know what I'm talking about. Listen! I'll begin with what Douglas told me and then come to my interview with that poor crippled old woman."

Great Queen of Song Attempted Too Much

The failure of many artists who remain unknown comes from the fact that they do not know in what direction their power lies. The failure of great artists seems always to come from their lack of knowledge of their own limitations. Few can, indeed, go on for long years with a record like that of Madame Adeline Patti, of whom it is said that she had but one real failure in her artistic life. She was over fifty years old and had been a leading opera singer for over thirty years when, attracted by the opportunities which the role of Carmen gives, she undertook to sing it at Covent Garden, London. With her voice still beautiful, her stage technique at its strongest and her in-

"It seems impossible!" commented Dina, at the end of her husband's narrative.

"I begin to suspect myself," Bill murmured. "Appleton!"

"It took me that way when I first heard it, but it cannot be doubted. He came here to get the opportunity to be in and near this house, and to see what was going on. He has always been coming and going. I've heard something that may bear on it a little. I got it from Mrs. Appleton. Her brother was a very rich man, but he speculated and died in poverty. There were a few years when it looked as if she was going to be his heiress; and Appleton was going to use the legacy to buy the Gray house and make it a fashionable roadhouse. He said there was a fortune in it. Fishing, golf, swimming—everything that was needed for a residential hotel. Perhaps 'roadhouse' isn't just what he meant, but that was Mrs. Appleton's term."

"But if her brother died in poverty, where would he get the money to buy this place?" Bill asked.

"I don't know. I admit that it doesn't solve the question why he should still be interested in it. There is no solution, as far as I see, and yet we know that something is going on here, or something is planned to go on, and that we stand in the way and they want to remove us. I wonder if we ought to consult the police!"

"And get all kinds of notoriety! Oh, Bill, don't think of it! Nothing has happened—not even a tramp."

"D—n it," said Hanby, "I'm a simple type. If I like people, I love them absolutely. I go the limit for them, and they can have everything I've got. This gives me pause—whatever that means." He put his hand on his wife's arm. "Come and dance with me, Deline, ere I challenge Bill to mortal combat!"

"Not a care in the world!" said Celia, a little later, watching her parents and talking intermittently to Lee.

"Why should they have?" he answered. "Come to that, why should you have any cares?"

"Life bores me," the girl yawned. "I talked like that in the beginning of my sophomore year. It used to make quite a hit. You've forgotten to ask what is life. I always did that."

"Lee," she snapped, "I hate you! Your apprehensions are nebulous." "That's a new one, I admit," he said. "I'll see it."

"To others girls?"

"Why not? If you won't have me, I must try my luck somewhere else."

"You have an attenuated soul substance, Lee."

"Feed it with affection. It will expand."

"The main trouble with you is that you couldn't surprise me in any way. I know all your mental reactions. You never jump off the road. I could surprise you, Lee, and I've a good mind to." Celia paused. "Perhaps I ought to tell you the whole romantic affair."

Leslie Barron looked at her, frowning. The word "romantic" spelled danger.

"Let the clutch in," he commanded. "You are not the only man here."

She said, "Last night, when you were playing pool with Bill, I went out to the swimming pool. It was midnight. I went out to pick some asphodel."

"What's that?"

"A romantic blossom to be found in moist gardens of verse. Lee, I met a most adorable, godlike man. He looked at me like a wild fawn and then disappeared in a cloud of star dust."

There was something harder and more resolute about Leslie than Celia had ever seen before. She had an uneasy impression that there were depths in his nature as yet unexplored by her; but she would not tell him so.

"Don't be rough," she said, and took her hand away from his. "Don't scowl at me so."

"Godlike strangers who disappear in star dust interest me," he said slowly. "I'd like to break his d-d neck!"

"But you couldn't," she answered. "He is much more splendid than you are."

"You admit talking to him?"

"The young man's tone annoyed Celia. "I admit nothing."

"I accuse you of talking to him," persisted Lee, whose voice was husky. "Of course, if you listened," she said adroitly, "why should I deny it?" (TO BE CONTINUED.)

Dame Fashion Smiles

By Grace Jewett Austin

Dame Fashion heard a graphic account lately of how a "movie" star can order herself a hand-made peasant-embroidered coat. She enters the shop, gazes, takes a fancy, says "Make me one, a trifle longer, and do not take measurements, for I will send down a perfectly fitting coat."

So her maid appears with a coat, the new one is completed and dispatched to its owner, the bill is paid, and the transaction is over.

Here is the drama that takes place for most of the millions of the rest of us, who are not "movie" stars: We ponder our wardrobe to decide if a garment of a certain kind is really a necessity at this time, we do quite a bit of window-shopping, we study advertisements and fashion magazines, we try on different models and possibly dislocate our necks trying to see if back seams go right and the whole thing is becoming.

But what a lot of comfort we do take with a garment when we at last have it in our possession! And we can imagine that the "movie" star may say, months later, "What is that garment in wardrobe trunk 17? Oh, yes—that coat which I ordered one day." So there are certainly compensations in being just regulation bread-and-butter people.

Isn't it fun to watch for the straws that float along on the river of fashions? Dame Fashion thought she saw a straw the other day. The little close-fitting cap hats, with a clipped bob, sometimes seem to have a luck which one does not know precisely how to fill, at the back lower edge. Paris had the ingenious suggestion in the spring that one might sew in a row of little curls of false hair, but it is doubtful whether that plan has gained many to follow it. But one such hat was seen with a row of dainty little roses at the lower edge of the back—and presto, such an air of completeness was gained at once.

"Ensemble"—that word is on every woman's tongue this season—and sometimes mispronounced, according to Mr. Webster, who says it should be "an-san-blé." He says, moreover, that it means "the whole, all parts taken together," adding, "specifically, of a group of musicians." So a true "ensemble" is a harmony, not only of color and dress, to represent (the body) of stringed instruments, but combining, as the further definition says, "all the instruments." It will bring in pretty shoes for "base," just-right hat for oboe, which you know sets the keynote for the whole orchestra, with beads and jewels for the high notes of the flute and cornet. But what, oh, what will represent the drum?

Speaking of jewels reminds that Paris lately sent out a suggestion that in picking out a velvet evening wrap, a flower or jewel shade should be chosen. But since a black velvet coat is so universally becoming, Dame Fashion would remind that sometimes coal is called "black diamond."

How Border Is Utilized in Making Vest Dress

Paris puts the edit to flare, says the Women's Home Companion. Straight edges of the border go elsewhere. It is the mode and it is economical. Sixty 40 inches wide and bordered on one side gets smartly and to advantage with upper straight and skirt circular. The front constructed with the extra length of border for a bow. The gray and white blue stripes of the striped silk have an effect that is pleasing. The border, a blue ribbon-like band printed with yellow flowers, makes a bold contrast that goes with the yellow lining of the dress.

Table Mat Covers Made From Discarded Flour Bags

one on hand your baker can let you have one for a few cents. Remove the stamping by covering it with kerosene or lard for a few hours and then wash out in warm water.

Cut out two pieces of cloth half an inch larger than the pad which it is to contain. Baste the two pieces together, allowing a sufficient opening. Trim the lower free edge so that it will not show, and hem it. The case is then scalloped all around with mercerized thread. If less work is desirable, but equally effective as will binding with white or beige bias tape to match the material.

A luncheon set to match can be made from two or three more flour bags, and it can easily be dyed some pleasing tint according to the popular vogue for colored linens.

Blouse Very Important Part of Chic Ensemble

Blouses this season are considered less as a separate item than a part—and an important part—of the ensemble. The collections contain a large assortment, using every shade of the new colors, some quite plain, others elaborate enough to complete a handsome costume. Some engaging models of printed goods are shown, which are to be matched by the scarf and hat trimming.

Among the simpler blouses of plain goods are some made with intricate diagonal seaming, fagotting, stitching, or other needlework, and in some the neckline is much softened by means of a scarf, tie, jabot or frill of the material, which in crepe blouses is fringed along the edge and made to cascade down the front.

In a colorful ensemble in naturalistic yellows, with a hat of light Milan straw of medium-size brim, trimmed with a double strip of crepe in two shades of yellow, there is a soft blouse made of the deepest shade, of diagonal sections joined with fine single stitching. It has a plain V-neck, and of one side a scarf of the crepe fringed all along the edges, which is to be worn about the throat and which is long enough to extend over the opposite shoulder and down the back. This little ensemble includes a skirt of light brown plaid crepe, and gloves, hosiery and shoes to harmonize, and make a chic, becoming and practical costume, suitable for almost any informal daytime occasion other than active sports.

The same idea, carried out with many variants of colors and fabrics in models that are both simple and elaborate, has met with immediate success. Lace, chiffon, figured and plain voile, metallic Rodier studs and beaded nets are worn with separate skirt in the same color scheme, making a dressy outfit that will answer for formal luncheon, restaurant dinner and the play.

Some new Parisian models are made of net in blue, beige or rose, the hat, scarf and blouse being solidly covered with sequins, while the skirt is softly draped and of chiffon, georgette or net of matching color. For each of these ensembles the accompanying hat is a turban model.

Afternoon Net

Aluminum gray net, made double and tailored admirably, fashions a smart afternoon frock with full, long sleeves and an uneven full skirt. A matching horsehair hat tops the ensemble, with a single big lavender flower under one side.

Covers for Table Mats Made From Flour Bags

Good tables must be protected from hot dishes or they will quickly become scarred and unsightly. The extended use of luncheon sets and dollies has banished the old-fashioned, cumbersome asbestos or dannel pad that covered the whole table and in its place have come small asbestos mats put at each place and under the serving dishes.

A smart and practical set of covers for them can be made from a single empty flour bag. If you do not have

SCHOOL GIRL KILLS PAL TO GET THRILL

Uses Flatiron to Beat Out Chum's Brains,

Moscow.—A pretty and precociously clever girl of sixteen, Zoe Pavlova, who murdered her best friend for the "thrill" of it, was the protagonist of a strange tragedy of twisted emotion played out to a tragic finish in a Leningrad high school.

The gruesome story was spread on record at a trial recently, at the conclusion of which Zoe was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment and her accomplice, Zinaida Ivanova, to three years. In view of their youthfulness and their apparently sincere repentance, the court reduced these terms to five and two years, respectively.

"My life was gray and tedious," Zoe explained at the trial in recounting the origin of the crime. "I thirsted for strong experiences, for deep emotions."

Signed in Blood.

She decided to draw Anna Zhukova, her best friend and an exceptionally attractive girl, into her schemes for making life more stimulating. Together they induced a boy one year their senior, George Lensky, to join them. They banded themselves into a trio of "avengers," pledged to stop at nothing in their quest of joy and thrill. The pledge was embodied in a formal oath which all three signed with their own blood. To prove their earnestness they agreed that they must commit at least one murder by October, 1923.

To Anna and George all of it was exciting play-acting, a new game. But not for Zoe. Her diary, read into the records, reveals how she was stirred by the idea of taking human life. Incidentally, that diary stood as proof of the girl's unusual literary talents.

A boy by the name of Smirnov was picked as the first victim. He was well dressed, "with rings on his fingers," and, therefore, to the childish conspirators a fit subject for murder and loot. In accordance with Zoe's instructions, Smirnov was lured to a schoolroom. He was elaborately flattered and entertained and made a little drunk. Then Zoe brought in the ax with which he was to be decapitated.

At this point Anna and George quit the game. Possibly they lost nerve; possibly they had never seriously intended to go through with it. Zoe was furious. Little did her friend-dream that in saving Smirnov she was sealing her own doom. In that moment of frustration Zoe decided that Anna must pay with her own life for such cowardice and treachery. George, she felt, was unduly under Anna's influence and therefore not culpable. Perhaps, too, jealousy on account of this power of Anna over George entered into her feelings, though she denied it at the trial.

Finds an Accomplice.

In search of an accomplice, Zoe discovered Zinaida, a classmate whose face had been disfigured by an accident as a child. Zinaida was flattered by the sudden attentions of the brilliant Zoe and became passionately attached to her. In the meantime Zoe continued her friendship with Anna as though no murderous plans were in her mind.

Skillfully, week after week, Zoe stirred her new friend to a fury of jealousy and hatred against her old friend. The ugly, disfigured Zinaida began to look upon pretty and vivacious Anna as a kind of symbol of all her own misery. She was a fit lieutenant to Zoe when the fatal evening arrived.

Zoe's parents were away, and the three girls gathered to chat. Inevitably a quarrel developed between Anna and Zinaida. This was the signal for a combined attack on Anna. They beat her skull in with a marble candlestick, and when life persisted tried to finish by stabbing her in the throat with a pair of scissors. When this did not suffice, they used a pressing iron. The demonic job took them an hour.

"When it was over," Zoe told the court, "I felt relieved—as if a weight had been lifted from my spirit. My unastirred craving for human blood had been satisfied."

The two girls carried the body to the attic and agreed to meet next day with knives and axes to cut it into tiny bits. Anna's absence from home had been covered up by a clever alibi in which it was made to appear that she had run away from Leningrad.

But when Zinaida reached home she could not restrain her excitement. She confessed to her elder sister, who immediately told the police. The two girls were arrested and with them also George Lensky.

Lioness and Cubs Cause Panic in French Town

Paris.—When residents of Provencheres, France, saw a lioness stalking through the village, followed by its three cubs, they all rushed to their homes and barricaded doors and windows. The animals, apparently so frightened as the people, made for the open country.

Not until word reached the village that the beasts had been captured at a nearby farm did the villagers venture out. Then came word that three wolves had taken refuge in a neighboring woods, and gendarmes and peasants joined in the hunt that ended in their capture.

The animals had escaped from a circus on its way to St. Didier.

Daily airplane service from Phoenix to Holbrook, with stops at Prescott, Ash Fork, Williams, Flagstaff and Winslow, will be started soon, following the granting of a permit to the Arizona Flying service by the Corporation Commission.

The Bank of Roy, N. M., which failed in September, 1926, and which has been in the hands of a receiver since that time, paid a 10 per cent dividend. This new payment to depositors made a total of 65 per cent paid in three dividends.

Working out a $10 fine by placing traffic buttons on a newly-paved street in Prescott, Robert Brown dug out two gold nuggets, and thereby started a gold rush into Granite creek, near Prescott. Authorities said sand from the creek had been used in paving the street.

Only five counties out of the thirty-one in New Mexico, escaped special road levies during the session of the ninth Legislature, according to a bulletin issued by the New Mexico Taxpayers' Association. These counties were Eddy, Chavez, Lincoln, Luna and Hidalgo.

Charles Foster of Clayville, Pa., was sentenced in Tombstone, Ariz., to hang at the Arizona penitentiary next August 3 for the murder of Martin Parko, alias Mike Baker, of St. Louis, Mo. Baker was slain near Bisbee after he had picked young Foster up to give him a ride east.

The Chamber of Commerce rooms in Tucson were recently destroyed by fire. The records of the chamber, from the time it was founded twenty years ago, valuable data that had been collected and completed at a great expense, and all equipment, were burned with an estimated loss of $5,000.

Preparations are under way at the various resorts in the Lincoln National forest in New Mexico for a record number of visitors during the summer season. Many new buildings are under construction at Buldoso and at Pine Lodge, Roswell's municipal recreation grounds in the Capitan mountains.

A controversy of long standing is expected to be settled in Winslow, with announcement that the general land office at Washington has ordered a survey of a part of the Navajo-Apache county line, near McNary, to determine which of the two counties will receive thousands of dollars in taxes.

Middle Rio Grande conservancy district bonds, totaling $2,000,000, were sold by the board of commissioners in Albuquerque, N. M., at 5 1/2 per cent interest, to a bond syndicate composed of Caldwell and Company of Nashville, Tenn.; Stifel, Nicholas and Company of St. Louis; W. C. McNear and Company of Chicago; Slide, Day and Company of Denver and the Fidelity National Company of Kansas City.

Charred timbers, felled more than 1,200 years ago to erect some of America's first "apartment" houses, will be sought this summer in New Mexico to complete the life-story of pre-Spanish Indians in the southwest. From the tree rings of the wood, four scientists hope to develop a natural calendar, which will exactly date the erection of Pueblo Bonito, a huge structure in northwestern New Mexico, which housed under one roof a little city of 2,500 people.

The overland drive of cattle, already fast disappearing, is to be rooted from one of its last strongholds in the southwest. Both the Santa Fe and Texas Pacific railroads want to connect Lovington, N. M., with the outside world. For years cattle and sheep from New Mexico ranches have been driven seventy miles to shipping points in Roswell, N. M., or Seagraves, Texas. Which ever railroad wins its application, no more cattle will be driven overland.

The control of the First National Bank of Nogales, Ariz., has been purchased by Wirt G. Bowman, president of the Agua Caliente Co., of Tijuana, a gambling concern.

Fred Lee, honor graduate of Roswell High school this spring, was awarded the University of New Mexico scholarship, which is awarded annually by the Roswell Rotary Club. He also won the medal of honor, awarded by the university. Lee's average for the four years of high school work was 92.54. He will enter the university this fall.

PICTORIAL GOLF INSTRUCTION

By H. B. MARTIN

Pivot Impossible When the Feet Are Too Far Apart

A VERY exaggerated drive is the one resembling a baseball swing. It is usually the result of spreading the feet too far apart in the stance. When this is done there is little chance to pivot correctly, that is, throw the body forward, or transfer the weight on the left foot at the finish.

Some fairly good golfers are guilty of this fault and with it all they get fair results, but in the long run their game falls far short of that of the player with the perfect style. Long hitting is not always necessary. At least it is not necessary to throw one's self out of position to make any kind of a golf shot. The best players do not overexert themselves.

Mrs. Pressler Uses Long Swing With Results

MRS. HARRY PRESSLER, one of California's best, has cultivated a remarkably long swing which stands her in good stead. Most women golfers overawing. It is a fault hard to overcome with the fair sex who, lacking the strength of a man, believe that only a long swing will give them the desired results.

Mrs. Pressler is one who can control this swing and keep it in a groove and she gets the most out of her pivoting, too. This is one of the difficult things to do in golf. But this California player, somewhat imitating Bobby Jones, can keep her drives so well timed that she fears no evil consequences.

IF THE SWING IS RIGHT ONE NEED NOT WORRY ABOUT HOW THE BALL IS HIT

Concentrate on Correct Swing

EVERY golfer should make sure that his swing is well timed and well grooved. If this is done one can almost close his eyes while hitting the ball.

Every part of the swing should be just right even to the finish with the club behind the back. It must be remembered that this is not the follow through but the finish. The follow through is immediately after hitting the ball. The club stays with the ball from 5 to 8 inches, depending on how it is hit. Too long a follow through prevents a finish behind the back. ## LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Mrs. F. H. Johnson and Mrs. Bryan Cazier went to El Paso on No. 1 Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Thornton were here from their Oscuro home Tuesday.

Ira Boydston and Tom Shields were here yesterday from the Coyote country.

Matt Gilmore and R. D. Hiller were here from Tularosa Tuesday, attending to some business affairs.

The hot days of the past week caused many to reduce temperatures by taking a dip in the Swimming Pool.

"Flag Day," June 14, was observed in Carrizozo with the display of the National Emblem at a number of places.

Little Alice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. R. Phillips, Angus, is spending the week with Margie and Dorothy Nickels.

Mrs. Mary Forsyth (Walters) is employed at the Ziegler store. Mary is at home behind the counter and is a splendid saleslady.

Miss Evelyn French is clerk in the County Superintendent's office during the absence of Miss Hilda Key, at the State Normal University, Las Vegas.

L. B. Crawford and Iks Morris enjoyed an outing on South Fork the first of the week. They laid a few speckled beauties on the bank, but spent most of the time in the shade of the big trees.

The new City Hall begins to look like a building. It is ready for the roof, the interior finish will be applied and the pebble dashing will follow, all of which Contractor Pittman expects to have completed soon after July 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Lumpkins were over from Capitan Monday and were pleasant callers at our office. Mr. Lumpkins had just returned from the Boy Scout Camp in the Sacramento, where he had been putting fireplaces in the Lodge.

Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Hughes and children left Tuesday night for El Paso. They shipped all their household effects and will make El Paso their home, as Rufus now runs out of El Paso. It is with regret that the News chronicles the departure of this additional family.

Mrs. A. A. Thomason and little daughter were here from Alamogordo Tuesday. Mrs. Thomason taught a very successful school at Hondo the past year, but does not expect to teach the coming year, as her abstract and title business in Alamogordo demands her attention.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Rolland were in the National Capital on the 13th, according to a card mailed there on that date and in due time received at this office. They were delighted with the beautiful country over which they passed and with the still more beautiful city of Washington.

Harry Comrey was down from his ranch home near Ancho Monday. Harry says that he and Mrs. Comrey are temporarily located in their garage since the loss of their residence, with all its contents, by fire, some weeks ago. They were temporarily absent when the fire occurred and lost all personal effects.

They Started East

Calvin Carl and family left yesterday morning for an extended trip east, with Herndon, Pennsylvania, Shorty's birthplace, as the objective. Enroute east they will stop at Muscatine, Iowa, to visit a nephew and niece. Then they will go to Chicago, pass on to Detroit and then cross over into Canada, and swing down to Niagara Falls. Entering the U. S. at Buffalo, they will drop south to the old home at Herndon. Before returning which will be in about five weeks, they'll take in Atlantic City, and visit the National Capital. It will be a fine trip and carry them over some of the most beautiful country in America.

The Gloom Chasers To Present Vaudeville Act

The Gloom Chasers Orchestra will put on a vaudeville act at the Crystal Theatre on Monday night. These boys gave a short musical program last Monday night at the theatre and received many compliments on their playing. The act for Monday night will be entirely different and will include new snappy popular music by the orchestra; also jokes, singing, and dancing. The picture in connection will be Reginald Denny in "The Night Bird," a delightful feature comedy. This picture will be shown on Monday night only, the admission being 20 & 40 cents.

Is Now Captain

The Elk City (Kansas) Sun has a good likeness of Frank Gurney, Jr., who recently graduated from Kemper Military School, Boonville, Missouri. Frank has completed a two years' collegiate course and was granted the associate in art degree. Among the other complimentary things the Sun notes about our Frank are that during his four years at Kemper College he had distinguished himself in several lines of endeavor, among which is noted his proficiency in Military work which won for him the rank of Captain, and membership in the Military Honor Society, an honor greatly coveted. Frank was also a member of Kemper's crack drill platoon, that won great honors at the annual R. O. T. C. Circus in Convention Hall, Kansas City.

Mrs. S. E. Barber Injured

Mrs. S. E. Barber, White Oaks met with quite a painful injury last Sunday. She stepped on a nail and in the attempt to shield that injury fell and bruised her hip. It was first reported that the hip had been broken, but in a talk with Dr. Paden, who was called in to administer relief, it was learned that this was not the fact, although the ligaments were badly injured by the fall. She is getting along quite well.

Girl Scouts

The Girl Scouts will have a meeting Tuesday evening, June 25, at the home of the Ludlow girls, to make their arrangements for the summer months.

STEEL ECLIPSE

Starts sooner—pumps longer

Two windmills stood but across the road from each other. With the first sign of a breeze the first started smoothly and quietly. When the breeze became a wind, the other started with a groan and lumbered away as fast as the wind would blow it in the city. Then it stopped as abruptly as it had started, while the other continued pumping for some time—then it finally came smoothly to rest with the last trace of the dying breeze.

That is the difference between a superior windmill and just a windmill. It is the difference between accurately machined and fitted gears and ordinary cast gears; the difference between ground and polished shafts and ordinary steel shafts; the difference between machined and polished bearings and ordinary bearings; the difference between running in oil and running with dry gears.
