Two-Minute Sermon

By REV. GEORGE HENRY
ARE YOU A CHRISTIAN?

I put this question to a man the other day and he said: "That is a hard question to answer. I am a church member—but—" After a long pause he continued: "I don't attend church very often and I suppose most people who know me have forgotten my name is on a church book. As a christian, I'm afraid I'm a pretty good slacker." I said to that chap: "You are a man after my own heart. No one would come across with an open confession like that if he was not sincere at heart. You are too good a man to lose. I am going to depend on you to get busy and help me put the church in our town on the map." Today everyone in town knows that man is a christian. He proves it daily by acts of kindness and words of cheer, and on Sunday he goes up to the House of the Lord and expresses himself in song. There are too many church members such as he was; too few such as he is.

Extra Session Knots

Santa Fe, March 23—The special session of the legislature to draw a new general appropriations bill and make a few corrections to legislation passed in the regular session is one week off, and conceptions of what the special session will do remain hazy, nebulous things which are quite unintelligible.

All statements which have been made since the call was announced have been so hedged about with "ifs and ands" that attempts to interpret in advance the legislative mind are quite futile.

The latest piece of conjecture to appear on the horizon relates to what will be done about special session officers. Ordinarily in special sessions the officers of the regular session are carried over and if that happens, the fears and hopes of those who fear and hope have no foundation.

Should the republican factions who warred in the regular session, however, decide that the special sitting should have new officers, things may be lively for a few days.

Senator George Remley, president pro tem of the senate, was a leader of anti-Cutting faction. There were twelve anti-Cutting senators, eleven Cutting senators and the lieutenant governor, and then there was Senator Frank Vesely, who might be classified as "all-American," so that if the regular session has not already become so ancient that it has faded from memory there might be an interesting

Concert and Dance

The State College Band will give a concert in the High School Auditorium tomorrow night. This band has visited us at different times in the past, has always been greeted with a good house on each occasion and furnished such entertaining programs that our people await their return with pleasurable anticipations. Advance sale of tickets indicate a large attendance for tomorrow night.

Following the concert at the Auditorium, a dance will be given at the Community Hall, for which a seven-piece jazz orchestra will furnish the music. This is a splendid orchestra and affords a most delightful evening's entertainment.

hurry over elections in the senate. The senate quit the regular session without a floor leader, but it did have a steering committee. Senator Oliver Lee was the floor leader who resigned, and then he became chairman of the steering committee, so there is another one to figure out.

Speaker Baca will, as a matter of usual procedure, head the house, the only friction which might occur there, would be if an argument should arise in the election of a new majority floor leader.

Control of the house passed frequently during the past session between A. E. Mitchell and J. M. McMath, and altho Mitchell held the title, McMath more than once held the votes.

File Protest

El Paso, Texas, March 26.—El Paso business firms will file petitions to intervene in the applications of the Texas, New Mexico and Santa Fe railroads for extension of their lines to Lovington, N. M., the El Paso Chamber of Commerce announced today. The applications, which are filed under docket No. 7284 will come up for hearing March 31 at Lubbock.

The Texas, New Mexico railway is asking for an extension of its line from Monahans, Texas, to Lovington. This would give a direct rail connection to El Paso. The Santa Fe wishes to extend its line from Seagraves, Texas, to Lovington, and then south to the New Mexico-Texas line, traffic thus being moved to the north and east away from El Paso.

It is assumed that the Interstate Commerce Commission, under the transportation act, will permit only one railroad to enter this territory.

This territory has been commercially and sentimentally linked with El Paso since the white man first crossed the "Llano Estacado," the staked plains of Texas, and the Chamber of Commerce feels that the extension of the railroad from Monahans to Lovington would be giving El Paso only the territory that has been hers since the beginning of commerce in the southwest. Extending the line from Seagraves to Lovington would in effect take this territory away and place it in the Amarillo-Kansas City trade territory.

El Paso business firms have been lined up by the Chamber of Commerce and the Traffic Bureau to defend their interests in this territory.

This Community Needs a Definite Program

The principal reason many communities do not show greater development and progress is a lack of a definite program.

The workers of the community club, or Chamber of Commerce, do not have a definite task set before them to do.

The result is, there is no concentration of effort or resource, no banner or standard behind which the forces of the community can be rallied and put to work, no goal ahead toward which the drive for a more prosperous community can be directed.

In some instances communities do not progress because of lack of leadership, but more often the reason is lack of objective and definite program.

If a definite program is presented the leadership of the community can be rallied about it as a standard and much accomplished.

This community should select a few, definite, worthwhile projects for this year and devote its entire energy to putting them over. Next year a few other projects should be taken and pushed to completion. In this way, and in this way only, is the community going to grow and develop a definite worthwhile program.

The Easter Parade

Easter Parade on Fifth Avenue

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THE annual "Easter dress parade" is staged in every city and town in the United States on March 31 (which is the date of Easter this year). It is estimated by experts in the United States Department of Commerce that an investment of somewhere between $1,500,000,000 and $2,000,000,000 in fine raiment will have been displayed by the "richest nation on earth" on the two "dress-up" days of Palm Sunday and Easter Sunday. What is the meaning of all this lavish showing of clothing and millinery?

The simplest answer is to point to the fundamental facts about Easter and see how those facts can be related to a development which often seems inconsistent with the real spirit of Easter. The essential idea of Easter is shared by Christian and pagan alike. It is the idea of "resurrection" of revived life after apparent death. It marks the climax of the year when all nature awakes from sleep, throws off the death-like chill of winter and begins to live anew. With all nature pointing the way by bedecking herself in new raiment, it is only natural that mankind should also celebrate the surge of renewed life by putting on new apparel.

So when mildy appears at church on Easter Sunday in a new frock and a new hat, it is not mere human vanity expressing itself. She puts them on because she must! She has responded to the fundamental instinct by responding thus to the call of spring, to the message of renewed life. There is an old British tradition that it is "good luck to wear something new on Easter day," but that is a mere outgrowth of the essential idea of the Easteride.

All of which is a simple and entirely logical reason for the feminine display of new clothes on Easter day. But it is by no means a complete explanation for it does not tell why there has developed in this country such an expensive method of satisfying the primal spring urge nor why such a colossal sum is spent on women's clothing at this season, despite the fact that their clothing is as ready if not scarcer than ever before. If the Easter dress parade was entirely in keeping with the traditional idea of "wearing something new on Easter day," it would be a parade of new clothes which might be inexpensive as well as new. But the fact is that it has become an exhibition of national opulence and as such apparently more emphasis is being laid upon the word "expensive" than upon the word "new."

In these days when the psychologists have an explanation for everything we do, think and feel, it may be well to go to those learned gentlemen for an explanation of the Easter dress parade. If you do that they will tell you that in order to arrive at an understanding of the psychological problem of clothing you must go back to the "origins" and take into account four important theories as to those origins. They are as follows:

First. The modesty theory. This theory, familiar from the legend of the Garden of Eden, holds that clothing was originally donned to conceal, from a sense of shame, modesty or embarrassment.

Second. The immodesty theory. This maintains that the purpose of clothing in the beginning was to make the wearer a greater object of interest to the opposite sex. This is the doctrine that familiarity breeds indifference and that concealment increases interest.

Third. The theory that clothing begins in the desire to attract attention or secure pre-eminence. The primitive clothing, on this theory, is conspicuous for ornamentation.

Fourth. The utility or protection theory. The suggestion that clothing had its origin in attempts to protect the body from injurious or unpleasant features of the environment would seem to be the most obvious one; but for various reasons has had little standing among the anthropological theorists.

It is easy to see that neither the first, second nor fourth theories in regard to clothing is an adequate explanation for the Easter parade. If anyone of the four can be logically applied it must be the third—the theory that the Easter parade is to "attract attention or secure pre-eminence, especially, since "the primitive clothing, on this theory, is conspicuous for ornamentation."

However, before assuming that this theory is the final explanation of why the desire for new raiment at Easter time, it may be well to hear a discussion of these theories by one of the eminent psychologists of the country—Dr. Knight

An Easter Parade in Holland

Above—The photograph was made on Easter Sunday, 1919. Fourteen years ago the world was steeped in the blood of war, but when Easteride came around, thoughts turned to dress and fashion, to the glory, not of the battlefield, but of the Easter parade. Fifth avenue, the mart of fashion, witnessed a queer procession that Easter Sunday. Motor cars were then first attaining real notice. True, the streamline body had not yet made its appearance, but horses no longer snorted and stamped when a car chugged past in the parade. These on the sidewalks no longer stared at the peculiar horseless contraptions. Dresses were long, very long, and petticoats were bulky. Hats were big, gaily decorated with feathers. Women wore high shoes, thin, and gaiters or spats were the fashion. Fur neckpieces were all sizes and women carried large and roomy muffs, a relic scarcely seen these days. . . . A brief span in the time of the world—fourteen years, but see the difference in the trend of fashion when society parades on Fifth avenue or in any other city this coming Easter Sunday. Then look at this picture. It was made only fourteen years ago, but one might well believe it was taken thirty years ago. The world does move fast. . . . Below—On this day the children carry little statues of birds made out of pastry. They go from house to house and collect coins.

son back of the adorning; that ornament is not a simple "inactive" product, requiring no explanation, but that it requires to be explained along with clothing.

The fourth theory, which maintains that clothing was introduced primarily for protection, has been in disfavor, because it has not been easy to see how the most typical primitive clothing really affords any protection. The costumes of the Eskimo protects from cold. Heavy skin cloaks or parkies or other peoples are worn to protect from rain and cold. Sandals, leggings, arm bandages and similar paraphernalia are undoubtedly developed as protection from thorns and brambles. But these are really minor details in the development of dress.

For most savages, and probably for primitive man, protection against cold is only an occasional matter, and many races make no effort to protect themselves by clothing, even though inhabiting climates where cold is encountered; and yet these races develop clothing of a character that is not sandals, leggings and arm protectors, too, are incidental, but on and discarded for conformity with the occupations of the savages. Costume exists quite aside from these forms of protection and apparently was developed before these.

The most characteristic types of costume of savage races, types which are believed to be truly primitive, are really represented by the fig leaves of the Babylonian legend. Hairs and aprons of grass and leaves, bunches of leaves, give no protection from cold, neither do they protect from the sun. Why, then, have these types of clothing been so widely and primitively developed, if not for concealment from the eyes of other people?

The fact that the peoples who wear these garments put no emphasis on concealment, but at times discard the garments completely, and the fact that where there is a costume which cannot be discarded in public it is not to be worn as a concealing article such as a string of beads around the waist, dispose of these explanations, and apparently leave nothing but the unsatisfactory adornment theory in the field.

Man has a group of adversaries from whom protection is an acute need, especially in the warmer climates in which man undoubtedly originated and in which large groups of savages live today.

The origin of clothing, properly so called, can then be ascribed to the human need for protection from unpleasant agencies, although other factors have entered into its further development.

So there you are! Judging from this psychologist's remarks on the third theory of the origin of clothing, yet even this one may be applied to the Easter fashion parade. At least, it can be done so "logically." Then how account for it?

Perhaps, after all the content way to account for it is to say that mankind has made the Easter parade a national institution "because she wants to." As for the logic of it—well, why doesn't have to be logical unless she "wants to" does she?

This Mother Had Problem

As a rule, milk is about the best food for children, but there are times when they are much better off without it. It should always be left off when children show by feverish, fretful or cross spells, by bad breath, coated tongue, sallow skin, indigestion, biliousness, etc., that their stomach and bowels are out of order.

In cases like this, California Fig Syrup never fails to work wonders, by the quick and gentle way it removes all the souring waste which is causing the trouble, regulates the stomach and bowels and gives these organs tone and strength so they continue to act normally of their own accord. Children love its rich, fruity flavor and it's purely vegetable and harmless, even for babies.

Millions of mothers have proved its merit and reliability in over 50 years of steadily increasing use. A Western mother, Mrs. May Snavey, Montrose, California, says: "My little girl, Edna's, tendency to constipation was a problem to me until I began giving her California Fig Syrup. It helped her right away and soon her stomach and bowels were acting perfectly. Since then I've never had to have any advice about her bowels. I have also used California Fig Syrup with my little boy, with equal success."

To be sure of getting the genuine, which physicians endorse, always ask for California Fig Syrup by the full name.

Vain Efforts

Senator King of Utah, at a dinner in Washington said of a political scandal:

"It gets worse and worse, and the efforts of these men to clear themselves only soil them more."

"It reminds me of the Munich butcher. An American lady said to him:

"And you can assure me, then that there is no horse meat in these sausages?"

"Lady," said the butcher earnestly, "I can assure you that there's no meat of any kind in them."

Gun Gave Fire Alarm

Returning from a hunt, Charles Maul, Milford, Del., hung up his gun on the kitchen wall thinking it wasn't loaded, but in this case it was lucky he was mistaken. That night the family was aroused when they heard the gun go off. A fire had broken out in the kitchen and reaching the gun, discharged it. The fire was put out before it spread farther.—Capper's Weekly.

No Mental Handicap in Defective Speech

Many educators have held that stuttering is an evidence of psychopathic traits in the mental make-up, and that the child who stutters is handicapped in his educational progress. But according to recent tests made by Dr. Elizabeth D. McDowell of Columbia University, the fault of stuttering in a pupil carries with it no lessening of ability.

Doctor McDowell experimented with 7,138 school children, making tests to indicate the comparative standing in intelligence of stutters and nonstutters, school achievement, emotional adjustment, physical fitness, and various speech defects.

She found that the stuttering pupil had as high intellectual capacities as the normal child, that his vocabulary is just as good, and that physically he is better off. It was even found that a stuttering child could rattle off as many words in a three-minute period as anyone else.

Engraved Laws of Athens

Fifteen acres of old Athens are to be uncovered and one of the interesting developments anticipated is the uncovering of the Royal Stoa, believed to contain the stone tablets on which were engraved the laws of Athens. It is also expected to uncover the Agora, which was the market place and which is said to have been surrounded with beautiful buildings of stone all richly carved. It is necessary to acquire a great deal of the property on the surface before this work can be started, but the machinery has already been set in motion and it will not be long before the work of excavation will be commenced.

Says Sleep Waste of Time

Sleep is a waste of time, according to seventy-year-old Michael McCarthy of Kinsale, Ireland. So he is giving up the "habit" and spends most of his time when not working as a baker in hunting on foot with his pack of foxhounds. "Sleeping is only a habit, and at the most I sleep only five or six hours a month," he says. "I never yawn and I forget when I was last tired. Life is too short to sleep. I have never been seriously ill in my life."

MY FAVORITE STORIES

By IRVIN S. COBB

Two With a Swedish Background

PERSONALLY, I do not know a great many persons of Swedish birth. But those Swedes I have met struck me, nearly always, as being unusually keen-witted. Nevertheless, it is customary among after-dinner speakers, when telling a yarn purporting to deal with slow thinking, to make the central character of it a Swede, and preferably a Swede farmer.

For instance, there is the classic of the Wisconsin politician who, in the presidential campaign of eleven years ago, toured the back districts of his native state to electioneer for his party. In a remote neighborhood he came upon a tall Scandinavian sitting on a log in a clearing. The stranger hailed up his team and greeted the politician, who replied with a nod. The politician explained that he was sounding out the sentiment in the district.

"What do you think about Wilson?" he asked.

"Aye don't know," drawled the other.

"Well, how about Roosevelt?"

"Aye don't know."

"Maybe you like Taft?"

The alien shook his tawny head, dumbly.

"Well, now, look here then, you must have some opinion," said the visitor.

"You and your neighbors must have talked things over among yourselves. Who do you think has the best show?"

The simple Swede gave this question lengthy consideration. Then, with a faint tinge of expression, he said:

"Aye tank Ringling Brothers got the best show."

Then there is the time-honored yarn of the Swede farmhand up in Minnesota who, on the witness stand, was called upon by the attorney for the railroad to furnish details touching on the tragic death of a companion.

"Aye tell you," he answered. "Me and Ole, we bane walkin' on railroad track. Train come by and eye yump off track. By and by, when train is gone, eye don't see Ole any more. So eye walk on and pretty soon eye see one of Ole's arms on one side of the track and both Ole's legs on other side of the track. And then pretty soon again eye see Ole's head, but Ole's body is not there. So eye stop and say to myself, 'By Jupiter, some thing must a' happened to Ole!'"

A Selected Batch for Golfers

ALL proper golf stories have, or should have, a Scotch background. I remember an experience of my own. I was having my first try at the ancient pastime on the links of a country club of which I was a member. Our professional, a lank Aberdeonian, strolled out and stood watching me for a moment in silence. After several efforts I finally succeeded in driving the ball off the tee. Filled with pride, I addressed the tone spectator.

"Well, Jock," I said, "what do you think of that for a beginner?"

"Well," he said slowly, and weighing his words carefully and evidently meaning to do exact justice as between me and his revered tribal sport, "Your form is incredibly bad and your stance is awful. You don't keep your eye on the ball and you lift your head and evidently you've never heard that following through is of any help. But you are correct in one particular—you are wearing regular golf stockings."

Somebody was telling me lately of an American who was playing on one of the Scotch courses with an old native for a caddy. He had a short shot for a certain hole.

"I think I'll use my midiron here," he said, measuring the distance with his eye.

"Ye'd do better w' your cleeck," said the caddy.

Despite this advice the visitor insisted on using the midiron. The ball struck the lower edge of the green, rolled straight and true for the cup, and dropped in. The player made a perfect one.

"There!" he cried triumphantly.

"What do you think of that?"

"Not so bad, sir," said the old Scot begrudgingly, "but I still think ye'd done better with yer cleeck."

Of course, though, the climax in this regard is reached when you find a Scotch golfer with an added background expressive of the proverbial Scotch traits of frugality and acquisitiveness. According to scandalous rumor prevalent on this side of the ocean, there is a ground rule on a links near Edinburgh which reads as follows:

"No ball is to be considered lost until it stops rolling."

The Easter Parade

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THE annual "Easter dress parade" is staged in every city and town in the United States on March 31 (which is the date of Easter this year). It is estimated by experts in the United States Department of Commerce that an investment of somewhere between $1,500,000,000 and $2,000,000,000 in fine raiment will have been displayed by the "richest nation on earth" on the two "dress-up" days of Palm Sunday and Easter Sunday. What is the meaning of all this lavish showing of clothing and millinery?

The simplest answer is to point to the fundamental facts about Easter and see how these facts can be related to a development which often seems inconsistent with the real spirit of Easter. The essential idea of Easter is shared by Christian and pagan alike. It is the idea of "resurrection," of revived life after apparent death. It marks the climax of the year when all nature awakes from sleep, throws off the death-like chill of winter and begins to live anew. With all nature pointing the way by bedecking herself in new raiment, it is only natural that mankind should also celebrate the surge of renewed life by putting on new apparel.

So when millady appears at church on Easter Sunday in a new frock and a new hat, it is not mere human vanity expressing itself. She puts them on because she must! She has responded to the fundamental instinct by responding thus to the call of spring, to the message of renewed life. There is an old British tradition that it is "good luck to wear something new on Easter day," but that is a mere outgrowth of the essential idea of the Easter tide.

All of which is a simple and entirely logical reason for the feminine display of new clothes on Easter day. But it is by no means a complete explanation for it does not tell why there has developed in this country such an expensive method of satisfying the primal spring urge nor why such a colossal sum is spent on women's clothing at this season, despite the fact that their clothing is as scanty if not scantier than ever before. If the Easter dress parade was entirely in keeping with the traditional idea of "wearing something new on Easter day," it would be a parade of new clothes which might be inexpensive as well as new. But the fact is that it has become an exhibition of national opulence and an such apparently more emphasis is being laid upon the word "expensive" than upon the word "new."

In these days when the psychologists have an explanation for everything we do, think and feel, it may be well to go to those learned gentlemen for an explanation of the Easter dress parade. If you do that they will tell you that in order to arrive at an understanding of the psychological problem of clothing you must go back to the "origins" and take into account four important theories as to those origins. They are as follows: First, The modesty theory. This theory, familiar from the legend of the Garden of Eden, holds that clothing was originally donned to conceal, from a sense of shame, modesty or embarrassment.

Second, The immodesty theory. This maintains that the purpose of clothing in the beginning was to make the wearer a greater object of interest to the opposite sex. This is the doctrine that familiarity breeds indifference and that concealment increases interest.

Third, The theory that clothing begins in the desire to attract attention or secure pre-eminence. The primitive clothing, on this theory, is conspicuous for ornamentation.

Fourth, The utility or protection theory. The supposition that clothing had its origin in attempts to protect the body from injurious or unpleasant features of the environment would seem to be the most obvious one, but for various reasons has had little standing among the anthropological theorists.

An Easter Parade in Holland

Above—The photograph was made on Easter Sunday, 1919. Fourteen years ago the world was steeped in the blood of war, but when Easter tide came around, thoughts turned to dress and fashion, to the glory, not of the battlefield, but of the Easter parade. Fifth avenue, the mart of fashion, witnessed a queer procession that Easter Sunday. Motor cars were then first attaining real notice. True, the streamlined body had not yet made its appearance, but horses no longer snorted and stamped when a car chugged past in the parade. Those on the sidewalks no longer stared at the peculiar horseless contraptions. Dresses were long, very long, and petticoats were bulky. Hats were big, gaily decorated with feathers. Women wore high shoes, then, and gaiters or spats were the fashion. Fur neckpieces were all sizes and women carried large and roomy muffs, a relic scarcely seen these days.

A brief span in the time of the world—fourteen years, but see the difference in the trend of fashion when society parades on Fifth avenue or in any other city this coming Easter Sunday. Then look at this picture. It was made only fourteen years ago, but one might well believe it was taken thirty years ago! The world does move fast.

Below—On this day the children carry little statues of birds made out of pastry. They go from house to house and collect coins.

Dunlap of Johns Hopkins university. He says:

The modesty theory has probably had the greatest vogue in modern civilization, through its having crept into popular religion and so having been connected with moral prejudices. Eve and her fig leaves still trouble popular moralists and bob up in police regulations.

It may sound merely facetious, but it is both metaphorically and literally true to say that every time women shorten her skirts the moralists shiver. This is not the only way in which she has frightened them with her clothes. Some years ago, shoulder puffs and baggy sleeves were denounced as indecent and ungodly.

The shudders over the one-piece bathing suit have not yet subsided. In spite of the valiant missionary work of Mack Bennett. That bobbing the hair haunted indecency, threatened the foundations of morality and endangered the sanctity of the home even the college freshman can remember. His probably does not know, however, that not many years ago putting up the hair on top of the head was also looked upon with fear and indignation.

The obvious failures of regulatory measures in the past, and the equally obvious certainty that if women decide to discard clothing entirely they will do so, in spite of selection's ordinances and the protests of clergy and press, seem to convey no lesson to the weaker brethren.

As a matter of observable fact, the connection between clothing and modesty is a simple one. Any degree of clothing, including complete nudity, is perfectly modest as soon as we become thoroughly accustomed to it. Conversely, any change in clothing, suddenly effected, may be immodest if it is of such a nature as to be conspicuous. It is merely the breaking of the established convention which makes it immodest.

The first and second theories go down together. There is today no reasonable doubt that clothing has nothing intrinsically to do with modesty or immodesty.

The third theory, the theory of adornment, is perplexing. It involves the curious assumption that man or less vague amplifications of the conception of adornment, in terms of "extension of personality," "aggrandizement" and so on, but when their parsimony is sifted down to matter-of-fact statements, they have really nothing to offer except the assumption that clothing is worn to make the wearer conspicuous.

We may grant the human tendency to seek the limelight and the desire for pre-eminence; and we may grant the influence of this in the development of clothing and adornment. But that conspicuousness is obtained by adornment when every member of the group wears the same attire or ornamentation cannot be granted.

If the simple desire for conspicuousness were conceded, the individual who should seek the limelight would be the most successful. She would, in fact, be the most conspicuous but she doesn't do it.

son back of the adorning; that ornament is not a simple "instinctive" product, requiring no explanation, but that it requires to be explained along with clothing.

The fourth theory, which maintains that clothing was introduced primarily for purposes of protection, has been in disfavor, because it has not been easy to see how the most typical primitive clothing really affords any protection. The costume of the Eskimo protects from cold. Heavy skin cloaks or harnesses of other peoples are worn to protect from rain and cold. Bandages, leggings, arm bandages and similar paraphernalia are undoubtedly developed as protection from stones, thorns and brambles. But these are really minor details in the development of dress.

For most savages, and probably for primitive man, protection against cold is only an occasional matter, and many races make no effort to protect themselves by clothing, even though inhabiting climates where cold is encountered and yet these races develop clothing of a characteristic sort. Bandages, leggings and arm protectors, too, are incidental, put on and discarded in conformity with the occupations of the savages. Costume exists quite aside from these forms of protection and apparently was developed before these.

The most characteristic types of costume of savage races, types which are believed to be truly primitive, are really represented by the fig leaves of the Babylonian legend. Skirts and aprons of grass and leaves, bunches of leaves, give us protection from cold, neither do they protect from thorns and brambles or to any great extent from the sun. Why, then, have these types of clothing been so widely and primitively developed, if not for concealment from the eyes of other people?

The fact that the peoples who wear these garments put no emphasis on concealment, but at times discard the garments completely, and the fact that where there is a costume which cannot be discarded in public it is apt to be some concealing article such as a string of beads around the waist, dispose of these explanations, and apparently leave nothing but the unsatisfactory adornment theory in the field.

Man has a group of adversaries from whom protection is an acute need, especially in the warmer climates in which man undoubtedly originated and in which large groups of savages live today.

The origin of clothing, properly so called, can then be ascribed to the human need for protection from unpleasant agencies, although other factors have entered into its further development.

So there you are! Judging from this psychologist's remarks on the third theory of the origin of clothing, not even this one may be applied to the Easter fashion parade. At least, it can't be done so "scientifically." Then how account for it?

This Mother Had Problem

As a rule, milk is about the best food for children. But there are times when they are much better off without it. It should always be left off when children show by feverish, fretful or cross spells, by bad breath, coated tongue, sallow skin, indigestion, biliousness, etc., that their stomach and bowels are out of order.

In cases like this, California Fig Syrup never fails to work wonders, by the quick and gentle way it removes all the souring waste which is causing the trouble, regulates the stomach and bowels and gives these organs tone and strength so they continue to act normally of their own accord. Children love its rich, fruity flavor and it's purely vegetable and harmless, even for babies.

Millions of mothers have proved its merit and reliability in over 60 years of steadily increasing use. A Western mother, Mrs. May Snively, Montrose, California, says: "My little girl, Edna's, tendency to constipation was a problem to me until I began giving her California Fig Syrup. It helped her right away and soon her stomach and bowels were acting perfectly. Since then I've never had to have any advice about her bowels. I have also used California Fig Syrup with my little boy, with equal success."

To be sure of getting the genuine, which physicians endorse, always ask for California Fig Syrup by the full name.

No Mental Handicap in Defective Speech

Many educators have held that stuttering is an evidence of psychopathic traits in the mental make-up, and that the child who stutters is handicapped in his educational progress. But according to recent tests made by Dr. Elizabeth D. McDowell of Columbia university, the fault of stuttering in a pupil carries with it no lessening of ability.

Doctor McDowell experimented with 7,138 school children, making tests to indicate the comparative standing in intelligence of stutters and nonstutters, school achievement, emotional adjustment, physical fitness, and various speech defects.

She found that the stuttering pupil had as high intellectual capacities as the normal child, that his vocabulary is just as good, and that physically he is better off. It was even found that a stuttering child could rattle off as many words in a three-minute period as anyone else.

Engraved Laws of Athens

Fifteen acres of old Athens are to be uncovered and one of the interesting developments anticipated is the uncovering of the Royal Stoa, believed to contain the stone tablets on which were engraved the laws of Athens. It is also expected to uncover the Agora, which was the market place and which is said to have been surrounded with beautiful buildings of stone all richly carved. It is necessary to acquire a great deal of the property on the surface before this work can be started, but the machinery has already been set in motion and it will not be long before the work of excavation will be commenced.

Says Sleep Waste of Time

Sleep is a waste of time, according to seventy-year-old Michael McCarthy of Kinsale, Ireland. So he is giving up the "habit" and spends most of his time when not working as a baker in hunting on foot with his pack of foxhounds. "Sleeping is only a habit, and at the most I sleep only five or six hours a month," he says. "I never yawn and I forget when I was last tired. Life is too short to sleep. I have never been seriously ill in my life."

By IRVIN S. COBB

Two With a Swedish Background

PERSONALLY, I do not know a great many persons of Swedish birth. But those Swedes I have met struck me, nearly always, as being unusually keen-witted. Nevertheless, it is customary among after-dinner speakers, when telling a yarn purporting to deal with slow thinking, to make the central character of it a Swede, and preferably a Swede farmer.

For instance, there is the classic of the Wisconsin politician who, in the Presidential campaign of eleven years ago, toured the back districts of his native state to electorship for his party. In a remote neighborhood he came upon a tall Scandinavian sitting on a log in a clearing. The stranger hailed up his team and greeted the resident, who replied with a nod.

The politician explained that he was sounding out the sentiment in the district.

"What do you think about Wilson?" he asked.

"Aye, don't know," drawled the other.

"Well, how about Roosevelt?"

"Aye, don't know."

"Maybe you like Taft?"

The alien shook his tawny head, dumbly.

"Well, now, look here then, you must have some opinion," said the visitor.

"You and your neighbors must have talked things over among yourselves. Who do you think has the best show?"

The simple Swede gave this question lengthy consideration. Then, with a faint tinge of expression, he said:

"Aye, tank Ringling Brothers got the best show."

Then there is the time-honored yarn of the Swede farmhand up in Minnesota who, on the witness stand, was called upon by the attorney for the railroad to furnish details touching on the tragic death of a companion.

"Aye, tell you," he answered. "Me and Ole, we bane walkin' on railroad track. Train come by and eye jump off track. By and by, when train is gone, eye don't see Ole any more. So eye walk on and pretty soon eye see one of Ole's arms on one side of the track and both Ole's legs on other side of the track. And then pretty soon again eye see Ole's head, but Ole's body is not there. So eye stop and say to myself, 'By Jupiter, something must a' happened to Ole!'"

A Selected Batch for Golfers

ALL proper golf stories have, or should have, a Scotch background. I remember an experience of my own. I was having my first try at the ancient pastime on the links of a country club of which I was a member. Our professional, a lank Aberdeenshire, strolled out and stood watching me for a moment in silence. After several efforts I finally succeeded in driving the ball off the tee. Filled with pride, I addressed the tons spectator.

"Well, Jock," I said, "what do you think of that for a beginner?"

"Well," he said slowly, and weighing his words carefully and evidently meaning to do exact justice as between me and his revered tribal spirit, "Your form is incredibly bad and your stance is awful. You don't keep your eye on the ball and you lift your head and evidently you've never heard that following through is of any help. But you are correct in one particular—you are wearing regular golf stockings."

Somebody was telling me lately of an American who was playing on one of the Scotch courses with an old native for a caddy. He had a short shot for a certain hole.

"I think I'll use my midiron here," he said, measuring the distance with his eye.

"Ye'd do better w' your cleeck," said the caddy.

Despite this advice the visitor insisted on using the midiron. The ball struck the lower edge of the green, rolled straight and true for the cup, and dropped in. The player made a perfect one.

"There!" he cried triumphantly. "What do you think of that?"

"Not so bad, sir," said the old Scot regretfully, "but I still think ye'd done better with yer cleeck."

Of course, though, the climax in this regard is reached when you find a Scotch golfer with an added background expressive of the proverbial Scotch traits of frankness and acquiescence. According to scandalous rumor prevalent on this side of the ocean, there is a ground rule on a links near Edinburgh which reads as follows:

"No ball is to be considered lost until it stops rolling."

How to Wipe out the Disgrace of Prohibition

By Leonard Hartmann

About three years ago a lady patient of mine asked me if I knew how she could cure her husband from his overfondness for alcoholic drinks. I told her what to do and did not hear from her again until recently when I received a letter containing a check, reminding me of above incident, stating to please accept the check as a partial appreciation and fee for my service to her at the time; then she stated in detail, that shortly after she had started to change his or rather their diet, he had lost all desire for alcoholic drinks of any kind, that he regained his health and former good position, which he had lost at the time she sought my advice.

Alcoholic drinks in the form of wine has been used for many thousands of years and has become therefore a part of our accustomed and natural food. We all know, that the more we deprive ourselves of any accustomed as well as partially essential food, the stronger will be the demand or hunger for same. The same remedy to overcome the habit of using strong alcoholic drinks, is not by enforcement of law, but by proper education and such food, that will give or produce within the system, the needed amount of alcohol to carry on the process of metabolism.

It is a well known fact, that those people whose diet consists mostly of meat, eggs, bread and cooked cereals, etc., and little or no raw fruit and vegetables, have always a craving for alcohol. Why?

We all know, that if we subject raw meat or eggs, etc., to a warm temperature, they will putrefy (not ferment) producing a dangerous toxin poison. Alcohol will retard or even stop the process of putrefaction of meat etc. On the other hand, if we subject raw fruits, berries and grain to a warm moist temperature, they will start to ferment and form alcohol. The remedy is therefore very simple, and every reader will do doubt see it before their attention is called to it.

The cooking of fruit and the baking of grain (bread) will evaporate the alcohol, and is therefore of little or no value as for retarding the process, of toxic poisoning through meat, etc.

What do you suppose is the reason, why nearly all sailors after a long voyage are so thirsty after alcohol? A daily ration of a few apples or lemons or some raisins, grapes, from candy would forever stop their longing for alcohol.

If a general education through the Government, schools, churches, magazines and newspapers, as shortly outlined above, would be carried on, the demand for alcoholic drink would vanish, also the bootleggers and Doctors who make their living by giving alcoholic prescriptions, besides it would empty the insane Asylums, Prisons, and a large part of our hospitals.

THE NEW MEXICO CATTLE GROWERS' ASSOCIATION

OFFERS A REWARD OF $250.00

For information leading up to the arrest and conviction of any one stealing cattle or horses from any member of the Association.

One of the most important agricultural activities is the work which is being done in organizing boys and girl calf, pig and lamb clubs. This work is of nationwide scope and is particularly important because in most cases, the youngsters are started right out with high class, pure bred live stock so that the fundamental idea of producing high quality products is inculcated into the young minds. Many of the most successful of the younger generations of live stock producers in practical business operation today are the graduates of these boy and girl clubs.

An idea of the fundamental facts which these students receive in their club work may be gained from the high honors won at the largest live stock exhibitions. An Iowa boy wins the grand championship on his club steer, in competition with veteran feeders and breeders at the Chicago International Live Stock Exposition. Another youngster from the same state won the same high honor in a steer carcass contest. At the recent Fort Worth, Texas, Exposition, there were more than seventy club steers entered by as many boys and girls.

Club work in schools and colleges is gaining in the western country. As an example, the students of California union high school have gained recognition as being the largest breeders of pure bred hogs of a certain breed in the entire state. Experienced instructors and breeders started these boys on the right track by supplying them with pure bred stock, adapted to west coast market demands. They won many blue ribbons at the state and county live stock shows; they have sold breeding stock from one end of the state to the other and have even sold breeding stock to South America.

Pig clubs are particularly good for the boys and girls in the Pacific Coast states. There is a great demand for more home-raised pork in the western states and more than this, the climatic and feed conditions are ideally suited for pork raising. Another attractive feature of the pig club is that in the mild climate in many of the western districts, the boys are enabled to reap two pig crops a year from each sow. The average number of pigs per litter saved should be around seven, or fourteen every twelve months. With six or eight months old pigs commanding around $20.00 per head on the market and much more if of choice breeding type, it may be seen that there is ample opportunity for profit.

An important consideration in encouraging such activity is to make certain that the correct type of breeding stock is obtained in the first place, and secondly, that the youngsters understand the type and weight of animal required by their nearest market. On the Pacific Coast, a bacon type pig is required as the demand is almost entirely for lean meat. In other words, the heavy lard type of hogs is not profitable to raise because of the narrow market demand for such a carcass, and the fact that the heavy hog is more costly to produce.

In the contests at the various western live stock shows, the market types should always be borne in mind, as the idea of such displays is, first, to permit the meat distributor to obtain something particularly choice for his trade, and second, to make such exhibits educational, so that the general run of producers may better understand market requirements. Any contest which attracts animals of excessive weights, whether of hogs, or cattle or lambs, is fundamentally wrong. For instance, prizes have been offered in the Corn Belt for the producer who could make a single litter of pigs weigh the most at six months. Such a contest is out of keeping with Pacific Coast market requirements, because the pigs under forced feed would weigh far too much for practical market purpose.

Lamb clubs are gaining in popularity due to the fact that so much of the western country is well adapted to sheep production. In one such club, the members reported a 175 per cent lamb crop or one and three quarters lambs for every ewe. These lambs were sold for an average of $12.50 per head and wool from the ewes probably was worth around $2.50 per head. In this case, also, the youngsters were given the best quality of sheep available so that the lambs were of ideal market type, thus commanding the highest market price.

Tariff is a Grab Bag

(National Industries News Service)

Whatever one may think about the historic differences of the Republican and Democratic parties regarding the tariff the visible evidences are that the rush for the grab bag is under way, with industrial and sectional interests claiming rewards for helping "farm relief" to materialize into something more tangible than a pair of words. American investors in the Cuban sugar industry are reminding Congress that they have three-fourths of a billion dollars invested in Cuba, and that most Cuban sugar is consumed in the United States so why, they ask, the smoke-screen to make it appear that Cuban sugar is a foreign agricultural product, when the statistics show that this tariff schedule is a direct tax levied against 120,000,000 consumers in the United States. Cuba, at our door step, is pleading with the United States Congress for a moderate reduction in tariff on sugar in return for which it pledges a free list for a long list of American manufacture, including electrical goods, automobiles, engines, pumps, agricultural machinery and aircraft, on which the duties now imposed varies from eight to twenty per cent of their value.

The tariff bill will be presented to the House of Representatives on April 20. The latest developments at the Capitol in Washington indicate that there will be a general tariff scramble, with a controversy over every feature including the flexible tariff and the Tariff Commission, as well as intricate questions relating to the administration of the new tariff law. Under such circumstances Congress will not likely finish its work in July as has been so often predicted since the special session was decided upon.

Trekking After Those Tricky Words

By E. Lillian Hutchinson

There are a great many tricky words in the English language and we are all, at times, just not sure as to how these words are spelled or used.

Alusion, Elusion, Elusion

Another provoking set of trip-lets, these. Before the day of chiffon and georgette frocks, our grandmothers used to soften the neck lines of their gowns, face their bonnets and otherwise veil or shadow apparel with a transparent material they called illusion. Will this picture help you to remember that an illusion is something deceptive in appearance?

Far removed from this little trick is the modern slang, "You know me Al—" but that bit of "slanguage" may help you to remember that an allusion is something hinted at, or an indirect reference.

It should be easy to remember that an elusion is an evasion by remembering the two "e's."

Thank God

During a railroad strike in England a volunteer engineer on the London-Liverpool express performed the remarkable feat of bringing the train into Liverpool 25 minutes ahead of time. The passengers went forward in a body to thank him. A pale face emerged from the cab. "Don't thank me," it gasped, "thank God—I only found out how to stop this thing ten minutes ago."

Capitan, March 22.—The Capitan Basket Ball Team won what seems to be the Girls State Championship in basket ball by defeating Floyd girls team at the Armory, in Roswell, Friday evening, March 22.

Both teams had been undefeated this season, and the Capitan girls also won the District Championship in a tournament at Corona March 16. Floyd girls have a record of having been defeated only twice within the last seven years.

The contest at Roswell was close and very exciting during the whole game. In the first few minutes of the first quarter the Capitan quintet rolled up a score of twelve points before Floyd realized a goal. The second quarter, the Floyd girls came back strong and played the Mountain team a tie of fourteen and. In the third quarter they played a very close game, with Capitan in the lead from one to four points. The last quarter furnished a lot of amusement for the spectators in so far as the Plains team walked off the floor being dissatisfied with the officials furnished by Roswell.

However, the matter was adjusted and the Floyd team once more walked into the arena, to take a beating by a score of 26 to 19, the result of which seems to declare the Capitan Tigers State Champions.

T. A. Hagee died Saturday, March 23, at Tularosa, aged 81 years. Mr. Hagee was a confederate veteran and following the conflict of the 60's spent many years on the frontier of Texas. He was a man of sterling character, and a most estimable citizen. An intimate association with the deceased over a long period of years bred a deep respect for the old veteran whose passing has brought sorrow to many friends.

The Chevrolet Motor Company anticipating the greatest sales volume in its history during 1929 has announced a building program for its parts and service department for the first six months of the year which will increase measurably the company's already adequate coverage for owner service.

This building program, as outlined in a letter to Vicent Reil, local dealer, will add eight new zone warehouses to the present number, all to be in operation before June 1. The departmental building program for this year has already brought about the opening at Flint, Mich., of a past model manufacturing building, where parts for the former four models will be turned out on a volume basis.

The cities where new zone warehouses are to be erected are Wichita, Kansas; Birmingham, Ala.; Knoxville, Tenn.; Richmond Va.; El Paso, Texas; Salt Lake City, Utah; Great Falls, Mont.; and Indianapolis, Ind. In all instances property has already been purchased and architects' plans approved. With the opening of these eight proposed warehouses the number owned and operated by Chevrolet throughout the country will have been increased to 36.

The building program which this department is to carry on this year, according to Mr. Reil, is in accord with Chevrolet's policy of constant progress. Last year found the parts and service department effecting a building program which added to its facilities 200,000 square feet of floor space. Eight new zone warehouses were erected and placed in

Children's Fairy Tale About the Woods

THE great trees of the woods were talking. It was dark and cool and still and only the moon shone through from time to time just to see that all was well and to hear a few words of what was going on.

The branches of the trees swayed a little for Mr. Wind was paying visits about and as he hurried along he was saying a how-do-you-do to all his friends and they were answering him.

"Before long the spring will be here," said one of the evergreen trees. "It will be beautiful then."

"Buds will appear and blossoms and soft delicate leaves and then love-

"May I Tell You a Story?"

strong green leaves will be the result.

"But I am glad we are of the great woods and of the evergreen family."

"Ah, yes, that is the best of all."

And then Mr. Moon peeped in and said:

"May I tell you a story?"

The deep woods were all flutter with excitement. Everyone of the big, magnificent trees, and the shorter, strong, splendid little green trees waved and swayed a little with the joy they were to have in a story told them by Mr. Moon.

"Yes," Mr. Moon continued, "and it is a true story."

"Won't you sit down, Mr. Moon?" they asked. And every tree moved to show Mr. Moon he would be welcome to settle down on their branches.

But Mr. Moon winked his eye.

"I'm to big, I thank you kindly, but I'll just look through while I stay on my sky perch."

"I speak as though I were a bird, don't I? But I'm not. I fancy you all know that."

The great trees laughed in their low, soft voices, and a murmuring, as of music was heard throughout the forest. It was the echo of the laughter in the great woods.

"Last Christmas," said Mr. Moon, "I was about in my usual way, looking at this and looking at that, and I particularly noticed the city streets."

"For some time around the Christmas holidays the streets in so many places were lined with Christmas trees for sale."

"They were everywhere. And they had been brought for miles so that the city could have some Christmas trees for decorations."

"Everyone looked so happy and of course I could see how they would admire the lovely dark green trees."

The trees of the great woods bowed politely at the compliment.

"But I found out what made the people even happier than looking at the trees."

"That was being able to have a real whiff of the deep woods."

Please Tell My Wife

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I WISH that you would see my wife
And tell her that I love her,
A thing, these later years of life,
I hope that she'd discover.

'Twas quite an easy thing to say,
The way that youth would view it,
But, now we both are getting gray,
I just can't seem to do it.

I wish that you would write a line,
Would send my wife a letter,
And kindly tell this wife of mine
I really love her better
Than in the days of twenty-one,
And thought, of course, she knew it,
I think it really should be done—
I wish that you would do it.

I wish you'd do that much for me;
It's really very easy:
Just write a line, or come to see,
Adopt a manner breezy,
Just say, "He loves you," just like that;
There's really nothing to it,
There's nothing to be frightened at—
But I can't seem to do it.

(© 1929, Douglas Malloch)

"They took long, deep breaths of it and they smiled."

"Yes, for just a little, little while the woods had gone to the cities and the people in the cities were happy with a great, great happiness."

"Some had lived near the woods when they were young. Others had never known anything save the cities and pavements and the lights of many stores, and they loved this beautiful fragrance of the woods, which is the loveliest fragrance in the world."

Once again the trees of the deep woods bowed and Mr. Moon added:

"I know, too. I know the world pretty well, you know."

That made the compliment even finer and the trees bowed and swayed again and then they sang a song:

We rejoice that we
Or our fam-ly
Gave joy this year
And also cheer,
When they went to the city,
For they said: "It's a pity
For town people to miss
The fragrance of this
Which we bring from afar."
So we rejoice that we
Or our fam-ly
Gave joy this year
And also cheer.

"Ah, yes, they gave great cheer and great joy," said Mr. Moon, "and they made the people so happy. And I knew you'd like to hear of their reception in the cities so I told you this story—which is a true story as I said."

And the trees of the deep woods were happy with a great happiness that their fragrance had been taken to the cities for a time.

Think About What You Read As You Read It

By F. A. WALKER

A READER sends us a question which is a source of pleasure for it proves that we have aroused in one mind at least an interest in reading. He writes as follows: "You refer very frequently to the value of reading. I wish that you would answer the question, 'What is the best to read?'"

That is a short question with a long answer. When a physician wishes to build up the frail body of a poorly nourished patient he prescribes foods which have two qualities—the furnishing of the greatest amount of nutrition and the smallest amount of waste and combinations which are easily digestible.

The badly nourished mind needs food of the same qualities, and that food is furnished by reading.

The three greatest books in the world are the Bible, Shakespeare and a good dictionary.

Abraham Lincoln, who laid a pretty good foundation of youthful reading, had only one of these—the Bible. His other books were "Aesop's Fables," "Robinson Crusoe," "The Pilgrim's Progress," "A History of the United States" and Weem's "Life of Washington." Not a very big library, but a good one.

A good many young people think that the Bible is a dull book. The reason they think so is because they have not read it. Entirely aside from being religiously valuable and the best code of life that has ever been written, it is remarkably interesting.

No better love story was ever written than the story of Ruth. No better story of adventure than that which leads up to the fight between David and Goliath. No better poetry than the Psalms or the Songs of Solomon. Read the story of the Israelites. No modern novelist has touched it in interest. Read the book of Job for first-class English and the Gospel of Mark for number-one reporting of what he saw and heard.

Don't think the Bible is uninteresting.

Shakespeare, the greatest individual writer of all time, should be read every day. A young man who reads all of Shakespeare has the basis for a liberal education. There is not a useless sentence in all that he wrote and he touched every passion, every science, every mood of the human mind. The world of literature owes more to Shakespeare than to any twenty other writers in all the languages of the earth.

And the dictionary. No man can use more words than he knows and ## Prosperity of the U. S.

By A. LEONARD BARRETT

THE annual report of the secretary of commerce for 1929 called attention to the unprecedented prosperity of the United States. The report directed special attention to both the volume and the financial value of industry in 1929 and stated that both exceeded the records of all previous years. Special attention was directed to the automobile industry which reached its highest peak of production last year. Also, to the operations of chain stores which are being established in many large cities. The report emphasized the increase in volume and value of farm products which advanced 8 per cent over the last decade. More new homes were built and larger investments made in staple securities. Taxes were perhaps higher, but not in proportion to value. Our exports were larger than at any time since the war.

Of special importance was the reference to the increase in the total saving deposits during the year. This fact clearly indicates that many persons have adopted a very definite policy, namely, not to spend all their income, but to "lay by in store."

Prosperity may result in greater ex-

GOLD WEATHER IN COLORADO AFFECTS EMPLOYMENT CONDITIONS

Denver.—The industrial employment survey report for Colorado just issued from the office of Quince Record, district director of the U. S. Employment Service of the U. S. Department of Labor here states that severe winter weather, which prevailed throughout the state during practically the entire month of February (an unusual condition at this period of the year) interfered considerably with outdoor activities and employment. Precipitation (chiefly snow) during the month was most favorable to both irrigated and non-irrigated agricultural districts. The existing surplus of labor (chiefly unskilled) will likely be reduced considerably as strong demands are indicated soon for workers in connection with agricultural, building, general construction, public improvement work and metal mining activities. Very little employment was afforded farm workers during February, other than in connection with extensive cattle and sheep feeding. Agricultural planted acreage will show an increase this season over 1928 acreage. Sugar-beet acreage in the northern Colorado, Arkansas valley, San Luis valley, and in the Grand Junction-Delta districts will likely be considerably in excess of the 1928 acreage. Several thousand additional hand workers for sugar-beet field work will be required this season over 1928 requirements; especially will the demand be noted in the northern Colorado sugar-beet districts. Sugar-beet field labor will not be needed to any appreciable extent, until on or about May 1.

Manufacturing plants, not affected by adverse weather maintained quite steady activity during February. Plants manufacturing rubber goods, steel products, automobile accessories, meat products, and mining machinery, are operating steadily. Construction equipment plants show a temporary seasonal reduction in production, and demand is fairly balanced, except for a slight shortage of machinists and machine operators, in the mining machinery plants at Denver.

Salida.—Plans are being made by the local post of the American Legion for the construction of an American Legion building in this city.

Television May Abolish War
Schenectady, N. Y.—So limitless are the possibilities of radio and television that they might even be considered as the means for the ultimate abolition of war, David Wark Griffith, veteran motion picture director, declared here, following an experiment that sent his face and voice over the waves to California. "I regard the development of television as one of the greatest steps in the history of science," Griffith said as he viewed the apparatus at the General Electric plant here.

"It isn't any wonder Solomon was a wise guy," says Rene Ritzl. "Just look how much a man learns from one wife."

What the Gray House Hid

CHAPTER I

"There's a lady asking for you, Mr. Hanby. She says she won't go away until she sees you."

Hanby looked at Smucker, and sighed. The secretary—he had chosen this designation himself—was a small, thin man with an active Adam's apple, who despised tact as something beneath him. Hanby had often set out for his office in Leonard street with the intention of letting Smucker go, and of replacing him with a neat, smiling, efficient girl; but invariably some sixth sense informed Smucker of his danger. Invariably he would speak of his vast responsibilities, of his large family, of his invalid father, of the house he was buying on the installment plan, and of the ravages of insects in his little garden.

A neat, smiling, and efficient girl would have known that her employer was busy, and would have found out what the visitor's errand was.

"What does she want?" inquired Hanby.

Smucker assumed his superior air. "She wouldn't say. Otherwise I should have informed you, Mr. Hanby."

"What do you think she wanted?" "I suspect she is desirous of selling you a dog."

Hanby brightened. "That's easy. Explain in well-chosen language that in another incarnation I was a priest of Bubastis. I cannot, therefore, as a one-time worshiper of the Sacred Cat, buy dogs from strange ladies."

Adolf Smucker sighed. His employer's frivolity always saddened him. He would have preferred to serve a sterner, more unbending, portlier, and older man, a man who never made jokes or saw them. Smucker often wondered why it was that Hanby had succeeded so well. A swift glance showed Smucker that his employer was looking at the photographs of the splendid estate he was about to buy.

Mr. Smucker passed to the outer office with slow step. The lady who would not go was the sort of person whom he always surveyed with hostile eyes. She wore too much jewelry and was enraptured lavishly in fur.

"It," said he coldly, "you wish to sell one or more of your dogs, Mr. Hanby says for me to say he's not in the market."

The stranger pressed her three tiny breasts so closely to her that they yelped.

"Not all his money could buy even one of them!" she snapped. "I must see him. Tell him I shall stay here all day until he comes through that door."

"Madam, I suggest telephoning from a pay station."

"My darlings will not enter a telephone booth, and I dare not trust them to anyone else. Tell him I do not want to buy or sell. I have something to say of vital importance, and he will be wise to see me at once."

Mr. Smucker, who had all the nastier little curiosities about life which dwell so frequently with his sort, wondered if here at last he was to learn some hidden details of his employer's past. Hanby was a handsome and generous man. Women liked him. Perhaps this singular creature had a daughter who had trusted too well.

"Something about his past?" Mr. Smucker suggested.

"Something about my past," flamed the caller.

Mr. Smucker turned on his heel and re-entered the private office.

"It isn't the dogs," said he. "What she wants is a private conversation about the past. I may be wrong, Mr. Hanby—I hope I am—but I think she knows something about your past which may not be creditable to you."

"Thank you, Smucker!" said Hanby. "I can always trust you to take the kindly view. You are quite right. My past was blacker than night. If I had my deserts, I should long ago have been electrocuted. Bring the lady in. I trust she is beautiful!"

Smucker went out, offended. As usual, Hanby had laughed at him. Well, the day was not so far distant when Adolf Smucker would have his turn! He wanted a lot of office time dreaming of what he would do when he was in power.

"Madam, I have persuaded the boss to see you," he said loftily. Then he jumped back. "That black dog nearly bit me!"

"I can rely on his instincts," she said. "You stand convicted as one whom no woman should trust. Do not attempt to deny it, and don't move your throat in that impudent manner!"

be a familiar name. There is the Selena river."

"And you were named after it? I was born near a big river, too, but I had a lucky escape. Think of me as going through life labeled Housatonic Hanby!"

"The river was named after me," she explained.

Mr. Hanby thought a moment. "Of course California came into the Union late, didn't it? In the forties, I think."

"The river was named after my family, not after me personally; but I did not come here to discuss my family affairs or to listen to yours. You are about to buy an estate near Pine Plains?"

"I am to complete the purchase this afternoon."

"You must not go there!" she cried dramatically. "I cannot allow it!"

Her manner began to antagonize Hanby.

"Why not?" he inquired coldly.

"It is sacred ground and you are not fit to dwell there. The idea of its being desecrated by a large family is intolerable!"

"I Suspect She is Desirous of Selling You a Dog."

"Really, Mrs. Selena—" he began.

"Miss," she said. "Above all else I despise and loathe men. Men have always oppressed me. How they have lied and perjured themselves to keep me from the Gray house! But at last I am in a position to buy their silence. What did you give for the place?"

"That, my dear lady," he said suavely, "is entirely my own affair."

"I expected you to lie," she said. "A man of your type would." Miss Selena took out her check book.

"Well, what profit do you decide to make? I wish to buy the place from you."

"It is not for sale."

"You dare to refuse to sell?" Her voice rose so that the dogs barked furiously. "After all my years of waiting, of persecution, of bitterness and exile, you dare to refuse?"

"It is not for sale. I am sorry, but my heart is set on the place as a home. You have had plenty of time. It has been empty for some years."

"I am only now able to buy it. If you will not sell, will you rent it?"

"I am going to live there as soon as it is ready."

"I despise and loathe men," she cried, "and of all men I loathe and despise you most! Of the innumerable houses in this country you deliberately choose this one because it will hurt me!" She raised her right hand to heaven. "Those who have tried to kill me in the past have perished. You and your family and all that is yours I put under a curse. You are going to a house of tragedy, a house wherein walk ghosts of those foully murdered!"

"I'm afraid that's the wrong tack," he said soothingly. "I am not to be frightened away like that. You are not fair to me. A house was for sale, and I bought it. Loathe and despise me as you will, but do not go away thinking I have wronged you."

"You have wronged me!" she shrieked, her black eyes flashing hate.

"Ah, ha!" muttered Adolf Smucker, who had hitherto listened unsuccessfully. Pausing a moment, he opened the door, as the signal bell had commanded him to. Apparently the strange woman was placing under a comprehensive curse Hanby and all that was his. Smucker gathered that his employer was one of a band of hardened men whose entire energies were expended in keeping Miss Selena from the Gray house.

"You go there at your peril!" she shouted.

"I accept the risk," said Hanby, quite unruffled.

"My vengeance will follow you," she added.

"Delightful!" Hanby told her. "I shall escape the monotony that my friends prophesy."

Smucker, who was always nervous in the presence of unusual violence, almost admired Hanby for his calm.

"This way, madam," said Smucker. He led her to the elevator. Mrs. Selena in her Weehawken home would enjoy this. When the grille of the elevator door had closed upon Miss Selena and her pet, Smucker went back to the office smiling. Mrs. Selena would certainly enjoy this. So would his old father, and the men he talked to on the ferry. As a rule they talked about taxing the rich. Taxing the rich was a passion with Smucker, and he pursued his hobby vigorously.

But Smucker did not catch his usual boat. It was late when he returned to his home. By that time the strange visitor and her pet had been driven from his mind by other things. Outside the office a big man, red-faced and jocund, slipped him on the back.

"Say," the stranger said, "ain't you Mr. Hanby's confidential clerk?"

Smucker looked about him. No member of the office staff was visible.

"Yes," he said with confidence. "I am, but you have the advantage of me."

"I want you to fix it so I can get a word in private with the boss. I want to see him right away."

"He goes home at half past four. I stay till six."

"I guess you have to, being his confidential man." The stranger was evidently pondering over something of importance.

"Do you happen to know if he's considering purchasing a big estate up in Dutchess county?"

"He completed the purchase this afternoon," said Smucker.

The news brought dismay to the red face of the stranger. Almost it seemed as if he suffered.

"My G—d!" he cried. "And him with a family!"

"Why shouldn't he buy it?" Smucker asked. "He's got the money, as I happen to know."

"I can't tell you here," the other replied; "but I'd like you to give him a message from me before it's too late. Had your dinner?"

"Not yet."

"How about a bite to eat now?" Smucker considered the matter with the deliberation that a confidential clerk might be expected to show. He was a heavy eater when another man footed the bill, but he was also prudent. He did not feel drawn to this big, coarse stranger. Furthermore, he wished to be sure that this was a genuine invitation. It would be of no advantage to pay for a meal while in fair Weehawken a pot roast stammered for him.

Perhaps the stranger sensed the economic struggle.

"This is on me," he explained.

"Why?" Smucker demanded.

"Because I guess you have your boss' interests at heart, and I want you to tell him something. I'm pulling out for Chicago tonight, or I'd tell him myself. It's a warning."

"Some reference to a disgraced past?" Smucker demanded eagerly.

"Some reference to a h—l of a future. There's a place down here run by a pal of mine—not much to look at, but the planked steaks, oh, baby! And there's some real beer that the sailors smuggle in."

"If it is really important, I suppose I must consider the welfare of my colleague before my own convenience."

"Planked steak and real beer! Out-d—d pot roast!"

Mr. Smucker ate with the peculiar ferocity that is sometimes seen in thin, undernourished men.

WORMY PIG WILL PAY NO PROFIT

Lack of Sanitation Is Expensive to Growers.

The common round worm which infests many swine herds is costing the growers more money than the combined losses from cholera, thumps, pneumonia and other common swine diseases.

"The reason why this is true is that most of us think any place is good enough to raise pigs in," says W. V. Hays, assistant swine specialist at the North Carolina State college. "Most growers overlook the need for sanitary measures in the hog lot, yet an infestation of worms may be prevented by a little care. When the sow is ready to farrow, put her in a place where hogs have not been kept. Give the under part of her body a good scrubbing, using soapy water and a fiber brush. Some mild disinfectant in the water would not hurt. This will remove the worm eggs attached to the mother's body. Now place her in the new quarters and the result will be a pleasant surprise to the one who has not tried this plan."

The next best thing to do, says Mr. Hays, is to worm the young pigs. There are specially prepared worm capsules that may be used. For best results in using these, the stomach and intestines of the pigs should be empty of feed. Give all the water the pigs want. In some cases it is wise to give a laxative dose of epsom salts in a thin slop before putting the animals on the fast. This fasting period should last 24 hours, after which the medicine is administered. One capsule for a weaning pig and two for the larger shoats will do. After eight or ten hours, give another dose of salts in a thin slop to wash out the worms.

Mr. Hays says this form of treatment is being followed by progressive hog growers in a number of North Carolina counties, and these men would not attempt to fatten pigs now before treating them, especially if there is any evidence of worms.

Confinement Not Good for the Sheep Flock

Sheep do not thrive in confinement. They need range and exercise. They do not require warm barns for shelter, as do dairy cows, except during the lambing season. A dry, open shed, or a barn with the doors wide open, is the most satisfactory shelter. Wet snows and rains are detrimental to the ewes in the fall and winter season, for their fleeces will sometimes remain wet for days, causing coughs and colds. However, light, dry snows that are easily shaken off do no harm.

Select for the ewes a lot or yard that is well drained. During muddy times, the sheep will stay in the shed most of the time, particularly so if the shed is kept well bedded, for sheep do not like the mud, particularly so a short time before lambing, sometimes lose their lambs prematurely, due to the strain caused by wading through the mud.

Excellent Bulletins for Raisers of Hogs

Some excellent bulletins for hog raisers are Bulletin 243—Equipment for Swine and Production, Kansas State Agricultural College, Manhattan, Kan., and Circular 60—Handy Equipment for Swine Raising, Iowa State college, Ames, Iowa.

These bulletins take up the proper construction of hog houses both of the permanent and the individual types, their proper lighting and ventilation, feeding floors, self-feeders, hot waterers, feed troughs, movable fences and creeps, breeding and castrating crates, loading chutes, shipping crates, and so on. In most cases, bills of materials as well as brief construction plans are given. Copies of these bulletins may be obtained by writing to the colleges.

Live Stock Notes

All animals need direct sunlight.

Long wool types of mutton sheep make good mothers.

Within the next few years there probably will be a shortage of young horses.

Better growth and development of young stock will result if they are given a ration which supplies more protein and mineral matter than is needed by the older animals.

Do not neglect the foot during the winter months, live stock specialists urge. For proper growth and development a ration of oats and bran or a mixture of corn, oats and bran, with a legume hay or a good mixed hay, is recommended.

Good clean corn silage is one of the best roughages that the stockmaster can use. The best shepherds use this grain mixture with corn silage and clover hay 300 pounds of oats, 100 pounds of shelled corn, 50 pounds of bran, and 25 pounds of oil meal.

Roberts of Miami was granted $1,046.76 by the state industrial commission at Phoenix in final settlement for the complete loss of the sight of his left eye, cut by a piece of flying steel while he was welding a sledge hammer in the boiler factory of the Inspiration Consolidated Copper Company, Miami, Oct. 10, 1923.

New Mexico took a step forward to make it a great deal more uncomfortable for criminals to enjoy the sunshine state, when Gov. R. C. Dillon affixed his signature to the Baume's habitual criminal law, and then signed the bill to substitute electrocution for hanging in the states. The habitual criminal law is patterned after the original New York law and makes the life sentence mandatory for the fourth conviction of a felony.

Exports of merchandise from New Mexico were valued at $170,059 during the second quarter of 1923, compared with $257,677 during the corresponding period of 1922, according to figures made public by the Department of Commerce. Coal, valued at $60,216, ranked first in order of value among the commodities sent from the state to foreign markets during the three-month period. Exports of metals and manufactures of metal were valued at $21,331, followed in order by wood and paper, $18,361; machinery, vehicles and parts, $13,875; animals and animal products (including), $3,431; and inedible vegetable products, $5,672.

The recently issued industrial employment survey report for Arizona released from the office of Quince Record, district director of the U. S. Employment Service of the U. S. Department of Labor at Denver states that the volume of business and employment is reported greater than at any period in Arizona's history. Expansion noted in all lines of industry is particularly evidenced in agriculture, horticulture, dairying, building, general construction and metal mining. Copper mining shows an outstanding expansion. The report states that the volume of employment in New Mexico, particularly in northern half of state, was less during February than for some months past—a condition usual at this period of the year. A readjustment of industrial activities and employment from a winter to a spring basis, indicated during March, will result in absorption of a majority of both resident and migratory workers unemployed during winter months; many of those unemployed will soon migrate to border states north, for employment in agricultural lines during the spring, summer and winter seasons. Plowing and other miscellaneous spring agricultural activities will resume during March, with resultant employment of many general farm workers.

The fifteenth annual convention of the New Mexico Cattle and Horse Growers' Association was held in the court room at Roswell on March 13 and 14.

A $25,000,000 building program for the next year has been announced in the Salt River Valley in Arizona during the first two months of 1923, according to a report made in Phoenix by E. W. Kramer, president of the Phoenix Chamber of Commerce. Agricultural and stock production will amount to approximately $45,000,000, the report said.

Marshall Beck and Jim Kelsey will be here tomorrow night from State College. They are members of that institution's musical organization, and will play in the concert and at the dance.

Study Club Program

One of the most delightful programs given by any organization in Carrizozo this season was the one presented by the Study Club, of which Mrs. Ziegler is the chairman and directed the presentation. The musical selections were the choicest and their reception by the audience proclaimed their excellence—an excellence that many declared had never been rivaled by anything of its nature heretofore attempted. It was, without question, superb—and the expression carries with it no idea of extravagance.

The play, while of a different order, was as clever as it could be, and the characters, in striking costumes, performed their respective parts in such an inimitable manner that the audience shouted its approval throughout. The director, Mrs. Shelton, and the performers in the "Wedding" must have been pleased with its reception.

Glencoe Woman's Club

The Club held its regular meeting at the home of Mrs. A. F. Roselle. Plans were made to attend the 4th District Convention in Carrizozo. Mrs. A. F. Roselle will be the Club delegate and Mrs. J. R. Werner, the alternate.

The project of a High School in the eastern part of the county was enthusiastically discussed and endorsed.

The date for the Club luncheon was set for April 20, at the "Bonnell Ranch." The Club will have guests for the luncheon from Carrizozo, Tularosa and Alamogordo Clubs.

Roll call was answered with things about New Mexico and brought some unusually good responses.

The lesson study—"Odd Corners of New Mexico," was led by Mrs. Geo. Coe, one of the early settlers of Lincoln county. It was an extremely interesting study. Pictures were shown of many noted places. Specimens of lava, white sand, soap weed and soap weed soap were exhibited. The booklet "New Mexico, Today and Tomorrow," gave splendid material for study and we recommend all clubs to obtain copies of the booklet for study. We wish to take this opportunity to thank the Roswell Chamber of Commerce for these booklets.

The suggestion for the Club to make a folio of New Mexico scenery for the schools was heartily approved. Those who responded with talks and papers were:

- "Carlsbad Cave"..... Mrs. Myrtle Davis
- "White Sands"..... Mrs. B. J. Bonnell
- "Yucca Palms"..... Mrs. J. R. Werner
- "Mal Pais"..... Mrs. A. F. Roselle
- "Gran Quivira"..... Mrs. Tom Jones
- "Santa Fe"..... Mrs. Louise Coe
- "National Forest"..... Mrs. Vance Thomas

The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Vance Thomas, at the Ranger Station, April 13th. The leader of the program will be Mrs. A. F. Roselle.

Mr. Joe Camp, better known as Montana Joe, has been elected president of the Seamen's Social Club, with Mr. B. Dixon, Recording Sect. and Mr. John Major, Financial Sect. The Seamen's Social Club is a self governing body and their election and activities are always interesting.

Elections seem to be the order of the day. April 2 we vote on a new school director for dist. No. 28 to succeed H. F. Dockery whose term expires.

Federal Employer Union had an open meeting Friday night. About twenty new members were admitted when the election of officers followed. Mr. W. S. Howson, our genial material officer, was elected president; W. C. Hendren, Sect-Treas. Some nice vice presidents were selected. Among those chosen we recall, Mr. C. H. Boyd, Miss Converse, Ed. White, J. M. Cavanaugh, Dr. King and others.

Announcements have been received announcing the arrival of Robert Milton weight 8 lbs, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Anderson of Alamogordo. 'Andy' was a former patient here and his wife was Miss Lulu Hightower.

A Pinocle party in the wards, Dr. King being ward surgeon. Light refreshments were served and enjoyed by all. The same day, March 26, was found to be Fr. De Bruey's birthday. On going into dinner he found a birthday cake with candles (we don't know how many) and several gifts awaiting him. There was also a small celebration at the Cavanaugh home, as on this day Jim Sr. demands chocolate cake with lots of icing and plenty of coffee. The Fort can be proud of these men whose birthday occur the same day as they all contribute in their different ways to the life of the place.

Dr. Paul Galligher, of El Paso, is expected over the week-end for two operations. Two of our boys are trying to beat old man T. B. by having a succession of operations on the diseased lung in order to collapse it giving the well lung a chance. These operations are very successful and Dr. Galligher one of the few physicians capable of performing them.

Rev. Milton Swift has been transferred to Las Cruces.

Mrs. Marie Cavanaugh and Mrs. Ellen Sellars attended the Glencoe Woman's Club at the home of Mrs. Roselle Saturday afternoon.

A number of Ft. Stanton folks banded together one night last week to charivari Mr. and Mrs. Sam Cox at the bride's home near Nogal. Refreshments were served the merry group by the bride's parents and a good time reported by all. The wedding occurred at arctecia during the high school tournament several weeks ago.

The bride is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Skinner of Nogal and one of the most beautiful and accomplished young ladies in the county. The groom is chief baker at Ft. Stanton and is one of our finest young men. After the close of school the popular young couple will occupy the quarters formerly held by the Chief Range Rider.

All the good things in life, is the wish of every one for Blythe and Sam.

STEEL ECLIPSE Windmill

Starts sooner—pumps longer

Two windmills stood just across the road from each other. With the first sign of a breeze one started up smoothly and quietly. When the breeze became a wind, the other started with a groan and lumbered away only as long as the wind raised a dust in the road. Then it stopped abruptly as it had started, while the other continued pumping for some time—then it finally came to rest with the last trace of the flying leaves.

That is the difference between a superior windmill and just a windmill. It is the difference between accurately machined steel gears and ordinary cast gear; the difference between turned, ground and polished shafts and ordinary steel shafts; the difference between machined and polished bearings and ordinary bearings; the difference between running in oil and running with dry gears.

In other words, it is the difference between the Fairbanks-Morse Self-Opening Steel Eclipse Windmill and just a plain windmill.

Come in and see this great advance in windmill construction. See the self-opening feature—the center lift feature—the mechanism that enables the Eclipse to actually pump water during two-thirds of every revolution of the wind wheel. You will form a new idea of how good a windmill can be.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

The Blaneys and Kelleys spent the week-end at Eagle Creek.

Mrs. Joe West and Joe, Jr., visited relatives in Cloudfrost Saturday to Monday.

Attorney A. H. Hudspeth went to Santa Fe the latter part of last week to look after some legal matters.

Mr. and Mrs. William Gallacher and little Jane were in from the ranch Tuesday evening and spent the night with the mother.

Mrs. J. H. Fulmer and the two boys, Walter and Bill, have gone to White Oaks for the summer. They will return in the fall at the reopening of school.

Mrs. A. E. Lesnet, Mrs. L. B. Crawford and Mrs. John A. Haley motored out to Eagle Creek Sunday and lunched with other members of the family who were there from El Paso.

Mrs. E. P. McCreary and children were here this week from Alamogordo for a few days, and were the guests of the Joe West family, and also visiting with old friends during their stay.

Mr. and Mrs. George J. Dingwall drove up to Eagle from El Paso last Saturday. George returned later to El Paso to take his run on the road, and Mrs. Dingwall will remain in the hills for a time.

The road up Nogal Canyon, above the Harvester mine, has been cleared of rocks and made passable for autos as far as Amos Gaylord's place. Those who appreciate a high-up view of nature's beauties may take advantage of this information.

Mrs. J. V. Tully, Glencoe, and Mrs. Felix Miller, Tularosa, sisters of Mrs. Paul Mayer, were here Thursday night of last week to greet the Grand Matron of the O. E. S., Mrs. James F. Hinkle, and remained over until Saturday.

Marcelo Herrera came in last week from Arizona, on his way to Roswell where his family lives, and visited here with his brother, Lino, and other members of the Herrera family. Marcelo and Lino served overseas in the same command, but this was their first meeting since returning to this country.

Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Grumbles came in Tuesday evening from Riverside, California, visited with relatives and met many old-time friends. They left later in the week, headed for Corpus Christi, Texas. From there they will go east, following the curve of the Gulf, to the southern point of Florida, there leave their car and take a boat for Havana. Rox's cowboy days in Lincoln county, when he viewed the world from the hurricane deck of a cayu, are way back yonder in the future, and now he sits behind the wheel in a big six, pointing to different parts of the country every summer.

Young Woman Dies

Rachel, the nineteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Saturnino Chaves, died at the home of her parents Sunday morning. The funeral was held Monday afternoon at the Baptist church, with Pastor F. C. Rowland in charge of the ceremonies. The services were very impressive and the floral offerings beautiful. Six young men, school mates of the deceased were the pall bearers, and a like number of young girls were the flower bearers. The church was filled with friends of this estimable family, and grief was evident on every face. The sermon and songs by a selected choir were fittingly appropriate and comforting. A large concourse followed the remains to their last resting place, and sympathy was extended the bereaved family from many friends. Rachel, as the officiating minister said, was a devoted Christian, and in all the trials of her short life found great solace in the words of her Maker. Deepest sympathy is felt for the stricken family.

Resignation Not Accepted

At both services last Sunday the Baptist church voted not to accept the resignation of their pastor, Rev. F. C. Rowland. A committee headed by the pastor will nominate officers for the church and Sunday school for another year.
