GARRIZO, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, MAY 24, 1929

NUMBER 21

Ft. Stanton News

We have had the finest rains this past week, assuring grass and early crops.

Dr. J. W. Tappan, our commanding officer, departed for the National Medical meet to be held at Atlantic City, New Jersey. He has been very much honored of which we are all proud, as he heads the programme on tuberculosis. This will be a meeting of international note, as the study of tuberculosis is one of great concern and interest.

Mr. Wm. Farrell, one of our most popular Hill patients, departed Friday for his home in New York. The boys all sent their regards to "Al."

The Hon. Mrs. Marie Cavanaugh has been quite sick at St. Mary's Hospital in Roswell. Her condition was found to necessitate a major operation. She is recovering nicely and will return to Fort Stanton next week.

Mrs. Ellen C. Sellars and mother Mrs. Cavanaugh attended the Glencoe Woman's Club, at the home of Mrs. Werner, last Saturday, and, incidentally, witnessed a very destructive hail storm.

The baseball game with Roswell was called off on account of rain.

A telegram was received by Mr. Hendren, manager of our ball team, that the 32nd field artillery team would arrive here Friday night for a game on Saturday and Sunday. If you want an afternoon of real sport, something to take away that tired feeling, get out and see a good ball game such as these two will be.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Cox departed for Decatur, Wise county, Texas for a visit with Sam's parents. Sam desired to show the Texans the kind of girls we grow out here in New Mexico, and we are all proud and glad to have Mrs. Cox as our representative.

The ladies of the Post are busy this week baking cakes and helping the baseball boys get ready for the big dance Saturday night, May 25. Gus Lemp's Night Owls will play, and all sorts of good things to eat will be served at reasonable prices. All money over the music expense will go to the baseball fund.

Miss Mary Jane Harris, our popular teacher, presented her pupils in two one-act plays at the Amusement Hall, Friday evening. The first included all the children of the first five grades and one of the sixth. As the curtain rose, Mary Ellen Sellars was seen with a huge family of dolls; Velma Burleson as the fairy brought the dolls to life at the wish of the little girl. Then each doll, or group of dolls, sang or danced the folk songs of whatever country they represented. The Norwegians were: Catherine

Nogal Nuggets

May 20, 1929.

In the past four days and nights there has been 1 1/2 in. of rainfall, in and around Nogal vicinity. Crops and gardens coming fine; everybody busy.

The fruit crop is good—plenty of apples, peaches, pears, cherries and apricots.

In three or four weeks from date visit Nogal and vicinity and see one of the most beautiful spots in New Mexico.

Tourists are going through causing a pick-up in business of 25 to 50 per cent to merchants and service station men.

Near the top of Nogal Hill, on the highway, looking north and west, down in the valleys below, is one of nature's most beautiful sights.

I have been over several states in the United States—Arizona, Colorado, Nevada, Utah, Idaho, Oregon, California and Texas—and I find our opportunities here equally as good as anywhere.

We have the land as productive as other states, with abundance of water at a very shallow depth; plenty for irrigation purposes; besides a nice stream continually flowing down Nogal Canyon, enough to irrigate, if properly handled, a number of acres of land. Very likely, in the near future, some foresighted person—not afraid to spend a few $$$—will see the opportunities and start the ball to rolling.

There have been a few mining men in and around Nogal lately, looking into mining conditions and doing a little development work in different places:

The Old Maid: "Has the sanny had its bath yet?"
Hired Girl: "Yes, he has, ma'am. You can come in now."

and Elsie Hale and Bob Hobbs; the English, Scott Houson; the Scotch, Alvin Patterson; the Welsh, David Tappan; the Negro, Ignacia Miller and Billie Cavanaugh; the Italian, Tito Miller; the Japanese, Bennie Chavez, Hasita Chavez and Rita Miller; the Cossack, Gene Merrel and Ben Chavez. Frank Faget as the Jack in the Box, singing a song of France, was quite a bit. Then the primary class of eight little boys sang nursery rhymes. Following this came a very artistic play, composed of Virginia Fagen as Pierrot, Dorothy Parker as Pierrette and Marian Tappan as Harlequin. Their acting would have been a credit to girls much older and their singing was lovely. When we see a finished performance like this, we are indeed proud of our teacher, and welcome her back next year.

Attends Sales School

Completing a thorough course of training in sales methods as advocated by the Delco-Light Company, General Motors subsidiary, F. A. English of this city, local Delco-Light representative has returned from El Paso where he attended a sales school last week.

According to Mr. English the school he attended is one of several hundred being conducted by the Delco-Light Company throughout the country under direction of factory instructors and is a part of the big educational program being put on this year for the Delco-Light sales organization.

"Like other General Motors units, the Delco-Light Company has always made it a policy that its representatives, whether sales or service, must be thoroughly informed regarding their products, so that prospective users will be assured of receiving excellent service," says Mr. English.

All Delco-Light men are factory trained and their training course gives them a ground-work of practical experience that is of great benefit to the farm users of electricity with whom they deal.

Mr. English reports that not only did he receive general instruction, but individual problems with which he has to deal were given personal attention by the instructors. He also says that one of the most interesting features of the school was the making of an actual sale with allowance to see how he looks and acts when he is talking Delco-Light to some of his friends and prospects.

Baruch Predicts Prosperity Abroad

(National Industries News Service)

Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the War Industries Board under Woodrow Wilson, believes that with a new knowledge of debts and reparations, the remainder of the world is inevitably approaching the same standard of prosperity enjoyed by the United States.

In an interview with Bruce Barton in the American Magazine, he declares that the basis American prosperity is the great domestic market created after the war. "And don't think that this new spirit of wanting more things and being willing to work for them is confined to the United States," he adds. "Individuals all over the world are potential consumers to the physical capacity of individuals here. All they lack is equal financial capacity and that is not beyond their possibilities."

Baruch declares that in the ten years since the Peace Conference, the world has come into a much better position to judge what Germany can really afford to pay and what is both possible and profitable, from a broad point of view, in the matter of debt settlements. He declares that the settlement of debt and reparations problems would bring such a revival of industry in the whole world and the demand for things would be so great, that it would result in a great industrial rebirth abroad. The higher standards of living that Americans enjoy would be demanded abroad and that for the first time the people would be able to have them. Interest rates everywhere would lessen under a proper settlement, Baruch adds, because the demand for gold by the great central banks would lessen materially as they ceased to be dominated by fear, and a new period of world-wide production and distribution would naturally follow.

"GOLDEN STATE LIMITED" EXTRA FARE REMOVED

Effective June 9 the extra charge will be discontinued on "Golden State Limited" trains Nos. 2 and 11 running over the Rock Island and Southern Pacific lines between Chicago and California. There will be no change in schedule. This will give travelers the advantage of travel on these luxuriously equipped trains without extra cost. The "Golden State Limited" trains are without doubt the most modern equipped trains operating out of Chicago or California, and no such equipment or service is offered on other lines without the extra fare charge.

TEST MATERIAL FOR N. M. HIGHWAYS AT STATE COLLEGE

State College, May 17.—The New Mexico highway department's testing laboratory at N. M. A. & M. College replaced guess work and mistaken judgment with definite knowledge to insure that the materials which go into New Mexico highways are of quality. L. C. Campbell, materials engineer for A. & M., said here in discussing the laboratory.

The highway testing laboratory is one of the little known but most valuable branches of the highway department, Mr. Campbell said. It pays equally as important part in the development of the highway system as do the construction crews which lay the road.

"Primarily, New Mexico's state highway department is a testing laboratory although it also does much research work," Mr. Campbell said. "The quality of the various materials entering the highway construction work vitally affects the integrity of the finished product. It is therefore essential from the standpoint of economy and safety that the suitability of materials used be reliably determined."

"This is the laboratory's function. Daily materials are being tested for their fitness for use in projects all over the state which may have to endure under different climatic conditions."

Mr. Campbell said the laboratory has a "three-phase value" to the state. "First, by means of the testing service it insures the economy and safety consequent to the use of materials of known suitability; second, additional economies result from investigations carried out in connection with New Mexico material problems, and third it meets one of the essential conditions which makes it possible for New Mexico to receive many millions of dollars in revenue in addition to the benefits the people of the state derive from having more than 2000 miles of modern highways."

ENEMIES ONCE, COMRADES NOW

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
It is the eternal mystery. No one knows where he was born. It may have been among the rocky hills of New England or somewhere in sunny California. During his boyhood he may have played in the pine woods of Michigan or paddled a dug-out on some Louisiana bayou. But the name of the state which gave him birth doesn't matter, after all. For he was an American.

No one knows in what branch of the service he enlisted. He may have been a cavalryman or an engineer. Or he may have been a doughboy, slopping through the mud of France or one of those "cannoners" who have "hairly ears." And then again, he may have worn the silver wings of the aviator. But the name of his outfit doesn't matter. For he was a soldier, a fighting man.

No one knows where or how he died. It may have been in that fierce little fight at Cantigny, or it may have been in the gloomy fastnesses of Belleau Wood or somewhere on the historic Somme that death found him in a burst of shrapnel, a spray of machine gun fire or a bayonet thrust. But that doesn't matter, either. The thing that does count is that "he died fighting" under the Stars and Stripes.

No one knows his name. It may have been just plain Smith. Then again, it may have been Murphy or MacDonald or Cjarnowski or Miller or Isaacs. And then again it's possible that somewhere on a western Indian reservation his copper-skinned mother looked proudly upon her lusty first-born and said "His name shall be Big Brave." But his name and the nationality of his parents are not so important now. His fellow-Americans call him by the proudest name that any man can bear.

He is 'The Unknown Soldier.'

Seven years ago they brought his body back across the Atlantic and placed it in a white marble tomb in a famous cemetery near the nation's capital—a soldier home from the war. Since that November day in 1921 men and women of every station in life have bowed their heads reverently before his last resting place. To it have come the great of other countries—the guests of a European royal house, princes, field marshals, lord admirals, statesmen. None has been too great to pay him homage.

But all of this homage is at naught compared to that which is offered up in the hearts of all Americans on May 30, 1926. For the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington cemetery, near Washington, D. C., is a national shrine to which the thoughts of all Americans turn on Memorial day each year and the ceremonies which will take place there—ceremonies in which President Hoover, commander in chief of all American soldiers, will take part—will symbolize America's tribute to her soldier dead, her defenders in all of the wars which the United States has been called upon to wage.

FIELD MARCHAL ALLENBY'S TRIBUTE—Viscount Allenby, here of the British campaign in the Holy Land during the World war and now Great Britain's only living field marshal, is one of the notables from abroad who have placed a wreath on the tomb of America's Unknown Soldier.

"TAPS"—Staff Sergeant Frank Wichey, Third United States Cavalry of Fort Myer, Va., and the famous bugle he has used in sounding taps at the burial of America's Unknown Soldier and at the funerals of the late President Wilson, Lieutenant General Nelson A. Miles and S. M. B. Young, Major General Leonard Wood, and William Jennings Bryan. Sergeant Wichey has seen 20 years of continuous service with the Third Cavalry.

THE PRESIDENT AND THE FIRST LADY OF THE LAND—Following the custom of other years, President and Mrs. Coolidge led the nation in 1927 in paying tribute to the country's dead heroes at Arlington National cemetery. Mrs. Coolidge is shown placing a flower on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier while President Coolidge looks on.

ENEMIES ONCE, COMRADES NOW—Although they were enemies during the World war, members of the European Automotive commission who toured the United States in 1928 are comrades in commerce. While in Washington they journeyed to Arlington National cemetery where they placed a wreath on the tomb of America's Unknown Soldier. In the photograph, left to right: Capt. A. L. Westbrook of Alexandria, Egypt; Helger Dau of Copenhagen, Denmark; J. F. Smet of Antwerp, Belgium, and recipient of five war decorations; Johannes Stahlberg of Berlin and member of the kaiser's staff; Emmanuel Ricardo of France; and Harlan Wood, departmental commander of the American Legion.

he may have been a man whom any one of us knew. But whatever may be the reason why the symbolism of the Unknown Soldier has such a powerful hold on us, the fact remains that few Americans who visit the capital of their country fail to make a pilgrimage to this hallowed spot. There they find that Uncle Sam pays a tribute to this son of his, not alone on special occasions such as Memorial day and Armistice day, but upon every day in the year. For, standing guard over this spot, is a khaki-clad figure, a soldier in the United States army. The story of this vigil is one of the interesting parts of the romantic story of the Unknown Soldier. It was told in a recent dispatch from Washington as follows:

"The soldiers who stand guard ten hours every day at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington regard their selection as one of the most cherished military honors.

Unknown?
I have come back to my mother's land—
I was here, too long away.
She shades her eyes with a blue-veined hand
In the sunlight of the day
And looks at my saddle, my horse, my gun—
For my hands were not the strong,
My western mother had murmured "Son!"
So why am I called Unknown?

I have come back to my mother's land,
Where the yellow pine shades arc
The western fathers, by whom I was named,
And the rose scent from Mary
There's a splash of stars on velvet streams
And a light-hand bird has flown
Like those that colored my childhood dreams,
Are they called me the Great Unknown?

I have come back to my mother's land,
Where the west's blue distant dreams,
And the fading notes bring the sound
And a kindly mother come—
For such is the way of the village folk,
When a woman is left alone,
It's of me they talk, when she tells her folk,
So why am I called Unknown?

For I belong to them—mother and all—
From the hair that runs to the moonlight's fall
To the dim, gray-shaded hair on my eye,
And my tomb shall witness my message:
All touched in that mother land,
Which sits the heart. Ah, then, who says
That I have returned Unknown?
—Arthur Chapman, in the New York World Tribune.

"One who visits this hallowed spot in Arlington cemetery and watches the sentinel pace back and forth more than likely has thought: 'He must be tired of that—it must be monotonous.'"

"But to the soldier it is a different story. He is proud of his lot. He gets a tremendous kick in walking those 31 steps up and 31 steps back. And if a crowd is around the minutes fairly rush by. Eyes to the front, shoulders back, chin in, rifle on shoulder in precise position, he paces back and forth, hardly aware of the strain.

"The guard detail at the Unknown's tomb is supplied for 45 days at a time from the engineers of Ft. Humphreys, the infantry at Ft. Washington and the cavalry at Ft. Myer. Eight men are chosen from each of these posts. They are selected in competition for neatness in dress, drill, manners and discipline. Each detail guards the tomb for 15 days, and the sentinel walks up and down in front of the tomb three hours and twenty minutes each day. The remainder of the day he is free.

"Aside from the fact that selection for duty at the tomb is an honor, other factors make the assignment a popular one with the soldiers. During the 15 days they are free from all other duties.

"The primary purpose of having an honor guard is to make certain that nothing shall be done that will constitute disrespect to the Unknown Soldier. Formerly, visitors were in the habit of sitting on the tomb, eating lunch there and scattering litter about the grave. Attempts were even made to chip off bits of granite for souvenirs.

"The presence of military authority, of course, makes every one behave in a dignified manner. No one is permitted to touch the tomb now, and those who make the pilgrimage to Arlington pay their tribute in an atmosphere most impressive and one which should inspire reverence in the hearts of all true Americans.

"The presence of this military authority also serves another purpose. The visitor instinctively feels that he is on sacred ground. The impressive solemnity is entirely in accord with the whole idea of honoring an unknown hero.

"People of all classes daily visit the tomb. The first bus loads are there as soon as the gates of Arlington open at sunrise, and they continue to come until the cannon at Ft. Myer booms at sunset. While no count is kept, officials believe that more people come to Arlington every year than to any other point of historic interest in the national capital.

KAISER'S SISTER IS WRATHY AT CRITICS

Defends Her Marriage; Will Join Husband.

Paris.—Princess Victoria, the Kaiser's sister, is angry with her critics in the Hohenzollern family and in Germany itself.

Her husband, the first Baron Zoubkoff, cheerfully explained that his wife was entirely out of sympathy with those who have protested the marriage, and stated further that Princess Victoria still thinks the world of him.

Zoubkoff himself is still the happy adventurer that he was, and despite the number of contracts that he has had offered him recently he has let them all pass, preferring to contemplate the world from the viewpoint of an aristocrat.

May Work Together.

"I am going to bring the princess to Paris," Zoubkoff said, "and, if necessary, we will go to work together. We might even open up a night club. The princess says she will work as a bar maid rather than yield to her critics. This is entirely possible, as the princess will do anything I tell her."

The princess herself is still furious with the officials of Buckeburg, the capital of the German principality of Schaumburg-Lippe, who have protested so actively against the ex-kaiser's sister marrying Zoubkoff. The princess said in a recent interview:—

"The measure of brutalities and humiliations they have heaped upon me is full, and I shall defend myself to the last breath against the unchivalrous and malignant fighting methods of my antagonists. I do not believe there is anyone besides those nearest to me who realize what means my enemies have used to bring me to my knees. They may starve me to death, they may force me into the worst of calamities, but they can never break my will.

"I know the fight is directed not so much against my own person as against my husband. But my enemies at Buckeburg utterly fail to realize that their brutal tactics are driving me ever closer into the arms of those they so lovingly wish to liberate me from. I am alone. They have forcibly taken my husband from me. All the cares and problems of the last few months have fallen on me alone.

"What ridiculous nonsense it is to claim that my husband and my lawyer are exploiting me. One cannot rob where there is nothing to rob. The Buckeburgers have left me nothing, not one penny of annuity."

Princess Victoria admitted that her lawyers might conceivably have used strange methods to collect money for her, but she points out that, after all, money was necessary to keep up her modest household.

Had Tithes Annulled.

She said, further, that the officials at Buckeburg had her title annulled behind her back despite the fact that the title is properly registered in the palace at Bonn.

"Without warning I was told I must vacate the greater part of the palace and that certain parts would be walled in for use of the Buckeburgers. The walls were built in, excluding me from my drawing rooms and apartments. My house, thus arbitrarily rented out to others, brings in £450 yearly, which I do not get. This is only one example of my enemies' tactics.

"The worst of all is that I am no longer in touch with my husband, because I have no longer use of the postal facilities; but I will stick to him through thick and thin.

"I long to be with him in Paris."

Ceremony Takes Place After 300-Year Wait

Washington.—A ceremony has just taken place in the city of Mantua, Italy, which was planned for the year 1640. At that time, under the city's ruler, Duchess Maria, arrangements were made to put a golden crown studded with jewels on the head of a statue of the Blessed Virgin, under whose protection Mantua had officially been placed, says the Pathfinder Magazine. But because of disturbed times the ceremony did not take place.

A second attempt was made a couple of centuries later and everything was ready when Napoleon's army overran the town and his soldiers carried off the crown.

Finally another subscription was taken up for the crown, and it has at last been placed on the head of the statue, which waited nearly 300 years.

Too Many Bowlegs: Judge Rules on 'Em

Lexington, Ky.—The family of Jerry Miller, residing near Irvington, Ky., southwest of here, is the champion bowleg family of Kentucky, according to a revelation just made before Judge Holstead in county court. The family has seven children and scores 100 per cent in bowlegs.

The father was recently brought before County Judge Holstead by officials of the hospital bureau and an effort made to force him to have his younger children operated on to straighten their legs. After consideration of the problem Judge Holstead decided that an operation was not necessary as Mary Miller, aged fourteen, the oldest of the seven, who had bowlegs for several years of her earlier life but has now practically outgrown this imperfection.

ARTIE

The Adventures in Love, Life and the Pursuit of Happiness
By GEORGE ADE

The Girl Friend's Birthday Present

"It's hard to play this morning," remarked Artie, as he performed the juggling feat of tossing his hat on the top of a coat tree without looking. He unbuttoned his shirt collar, jerked off his three-fifty tie, and gapped noddily and said, "My old head is so big this morning it makes the hat squeak."

"Were you out?" asked Miller. "Now, I was settin' in an easy game o' poker. None of us stood to win taxi fare, but I went in, thinkin' I might get 'em loosened up and pull out the price of a birthday present for the one and only."

"Did you?" "Well, you can't get anything that ain't. I think I'll have to wash on that present or else go out with a little bag full o' sand. You never saw such a sure-thing crowd in all, your life."

"Where were you playing?" "Over at Kennedy's house. He got me to come over and meet a couple o' Scotch spendthrifts. Oh, but they was pikers! One of 'em, whenever he got better 'n jacks up, always lost his voice and couldn't keep count o' the chips. Then he'd stop the game every three minutes to see how he stood with himself. He'd stack up, you know, an' feel in his pockets and then he'd say: 'I'm forty-five cents loser.' He was a short sport but a bound for bookkeeping."

"Were you playing for money?" asked young Mr. Hall. "Playin' for—? Now, wouldn't that upper-cut you? Sure you didn't think this was a game o' checkers like you

"How did you come out?" persisted Miller. "Why, what chance did I have to get into 'em? Talk about safe playin'. They're like the stockyards man that wanted to fight Dempsey. 'I'll fight him,' he says, 'if you blindfolded Dempsey and gi' me an ax.' That was the way with those birds. They liked the color o' my money, but they wouldn't take no risk."

"After that first saucy crack I laid low three or four hands, and then I knocked 'em a horrible twister. It was a jack pot, and this cautious boy at the right o' me opened it. I stay, see? Why shouldn't I, when I had two, four, six, seven and nine, in three different colors?"

"I stands pat on the draw, and then the first crack out o' the box I whoops it a half-fifty kopecks. What does he do? He couldn't drop his hand too quick. Another case o' licked in a punch. He shows jacks up for opener and then starts to pick up my hand, but I says, 'Hands off, Elmer! There's something so good that it costs money to see 'em.' I told him that when he wanted to get wise to what was in my hand, all he had to do was to dig up his bit and come in. 'Well,' he says, 'I don't want to lose my dough.'"

"On the level, no kiddin', that's what he said—that he didn't want to lose his coin. I told him he was in the wrong kind of a game—that he ought to be playin' 'Heavy, heavy, hangs over your head.' "Well, I kept on layin' low, and then every fourth hand or so comin' in with a half-dollar raise and takin' the pot. Finally, after I'd sprung it on 'em about a dozen times and was gettin' quite a mess in front o' me, I stood pat on a hand and tried 'em again. 'Hold on,' says this cautious boy, shakin' all over, 'hold on, don't take that.' I told him I wouldn't take it till it come time."

"Then him and Kennedy had a long spiel to themselves. Kennedy was out, of course, not bein' able to show up better'n three. He advised the boy to see me. Both of 'em looked at the hand and sized me up, and finally this boy that was holdin' the hand said

VERY DESIRABLE RATION FOR EWES

Whole Oats and Wheat Bran, Two to One, Starts Milk.

Two or three weeks previous to lambing, begin giving the ewes grain at the rate of about one-half pound per head per day. A very desirable ration is whole oats and wheat bran, two to one. That will start the milk flow and ewes are not apt to disown their lambs.

As soon as a ewe shows symptoms of lambing she should be placed in a pen by herself so that she may not be disturbed. In case of twins, the first lamb dropped cannot wander away and perhaps perish before the shepherd can get there to set things right. After a day or two, when the lamb gets strong and becomes well accustomed to its mother, the ewe and lamb should be put with the part of the flock that has lambed.

It will not be necessary very often for the attendant to help delivery, but he should assist before much strength is exhausted in laboring. Faulty presentations and dead lambs within the ewe occur occasionally. In case of the former there are no set rules to be followed, but the shepherd should always aim to get the lamb in its natural position before attempting to take it out by force. A dead lamb within a ewe should be removed and the womb flushed out with a warm solution of carbolic acid and water, 1 to 100.

If the ewe is too weak to attend her lamb when born, the shepherd should remove the mucus from its nostrils, rub it dry and try to get it to nurse. A little warm milk will work wonders in the way of supplying warmth and strength to the new-born lamb.

When the lamb is weak and chilled at birth a handy device to have at hand is a half barrel with a jug of hot water placed in it. The lamb can be readily warmed by curling it around the jug and covering the barrel with a blanket. In case of twins one can be kept warm in this way until the other is delivered. When a lamb becomes severely chilled more energetic measures are necessary. Immerse the lamb in water as hot as the bare hand can stand, keeping the nose above the surface and adding more hot water when necessary to maintain the regulated temperature. When the body heat is restored rub it dry and allow the lamb to suckle. A teaspoonful of cream with a little hot water may be helpful. Sometimes constipation follows this treatment and an injection of warm soap suds is recommended.

Preventing Thumps Will Insure Little Porkers

Many cases of thumps in pigs are due to the presence in the young stage of the Ascaris worm in the lungs. These worms mature in the intestines. The young are taken in with water and feed in infected hog pens, lots, etc.; then they pass by blood vessels to the lungs and there irritate and sometimes infect the lungs, producing some type of inflammation. The young worm is coughed up into the throat; then it passes (by swallowing) down the esophagus to the stomach and intestine, where this Ascaris matures and thus completes the life cycle.

To prevent Ascaris infestation in pigs, wash and disinfect the brood sow just a few days before she is to farrow, and remove her to a place where no hogs have been or to a clean and disinfected farrowing pen. After the pigs are born keep them out of and away from all old pens and places where old hogs have been until the pigs are four months old. Then they will be safe for growing into pork hogs at eight to twelve months of age.

Live Stock Farming Is Sure to Pay Dividends

Diversified stock farming is conducive to regular dividends and better methods of operation, which include machine methods and proper labor distribution as well as remuneration. There is no doubt as to the frequent lack of working capital among farmers, but Short horns can be used by many as the nucleus of a live stock farming system that will attract assistance from financial circles at reasonable rates until they can accumulate surpluses from their earnings adequate to meet their normal requirements. Much of the labor in stock farming is provided by the animals themselves in that they gather the crop by grazing and fertilize the soil, thereby eliminating two handling charges.

Foot Rot in Sheep

Sores feet in sheep is an old disease and found in all countries. It is caused by a germ that usually gains entrance to the soft tissues of the foot. The skin and deeper tissues at the top border of the hoof and between the toes are most commonly involved. At first the skin around the coronary band is hot, swollen, red and sensitive. Sometimes there is a distinct abrasion, but vesicles and pustules may develop and erupt and leave raw ulcers.

On your toes with POST TOASTIES

-quick, rich energy

Busy day ahead? Begin it right with Post Toasties. There's an ample store of brisk new energy in each crisp, appetizing mouthful. Easily digested energy that turns quickly into zest for the day's work.

And it's so good to eat! Pour the crumbly, golden-brown flakes out of the handy package into the saucer. Then add cream and sugar if you like. We've found that rich, natural corn flavor and the toasted crispness make a perfect combination. Everyone likes it!

Ask your grocer for the genuine Post Toasties in the red and yellow package.

"Both of 'Em Looked at the Hand and Sized Me Up."

boys play 'up at your little old Y. M. C. A.'? This was the real army game. I guess I saw as much as three bones change hands."

Three Kings Thrown Over.

"How did you come out?" asked Miller.

"Walt and I'll tell you. We kind o' stalled along there for two or three hours or so with a four-bit limit, everybody playin' close to their vests, and bein' about the way the hands was runnin' and showin' up the cards when nobody come in, and tellin' what they might a' done if they'd done purty well, an' so on—real gambler talk—till I says to myself, 'I'll try it, an' if it don't go, it's a baby risk.'"

"I gets a pair of stenographers and stays in. All of 'em playin', see? Kennedy leads off. I think he tossed in ten white chips; anyway, he was strong. Then this bozo that was keepin' tab on his stack all the time—he had to brood for awhile and have another talk with himself and skin the mitt three or four times, and then he 'kicked in. Up to me—see? I gives a gentle push to a whole buck's worth, and says: 'Comrades, I'll cost you fifty rubles apiece more to linger in my society.' Say, you never seen people so busy. Kennedy has a long talk with himself and counts his chips, looked a few spots off his hand, and then says: 'Well, I lose eight thousand on wheat today.'"

"Did the other fellows stay?" asked Miller.

"Stay nothin'. They had heart failure when they seen that dollar. I pulled in the dough and threw my hand in the dock. 'What did you have?' says Kennedy. 'Oh, I says, 'I didn't have nothin' but five nines.' 'No,' he says, 'on the square, what did you have?' I told him it was against the rules for me to say, but it was a cinch I had him done. 'Well,' he says, 'I had three kings. That ain't no kid, neither. He was settin' there lookin' into three kings all the time.'"

"Why, he had you beat, didn't he," exclaimed young Mr. Hall.

"Not in a thousand years! Didn't I tell you I got the dough?—quite a bundle o' money, too. I think I cleared a dollar and thirty-five cents. Talk about your Monte Carlo boys! Those birds last night was the gamiest I ever met down with."

"Well, now, didn't you have to tell him what you had?" inquired young Mr. Hall.

"Not accordin' to the league rules for 1928! Did I have to tell? You're all right, boy."

he'd go halves with Kennedy and make 'em spread what I had. They had some more whisperm' and at last they put in a quarter apiece.

"I ain't got a thing but a flush," I says, and I lays down four hearts and a diamond."

"That wasn't a—" began young Mr. Hall.

"Sh," said Miller.

"You ought o' heard the roar," resumed Artie giving young Mr. Hall a reproving glance. "Kennedy hollered the worst of all. 'That ain't no flush,' he says. 'Of course it is! I come back: ain't they all one color? With that they both begin talkin' at once, showin' me how it was a flush had to be all hearts or all diamonds and that sort o' business. I waited till they got through, and then I said I was dead sore about not bein' wise."

"I says to 'em: 'I been playin' the old hag, see? They never tumbled, though. You never heard such betterin'. Those birds thought I'd been playin' red and black hands all the time.' This cautious boy figured he would 'a' won four bucks if he'd called me every time I stood pat. Say, you'd died if you'd heard him!"

"Well, who won that pot?" asked Miller.

"I think you're as bright on the game as they was. Why, that chump had a full house, nines or somethin'. Soon as he took the half I said I'd stop—wouldn't play no more till I learned to read the cards. We all cashed in, and what do you think? I was two-thirty-five to the good. There I set like a big stiff for five hours and pulled against them rummies for two-thirty-five. Kennedy lost a dollar twenty cents, an' I'll make a guess right now he ain't through bein' yet."

Weakness of Profanity

It was Carlyle's contention that a frequent resort to profanity was evidence, for one thing, of a weak vocabulary. There were plenty of good English words, he said, that could be used more effectively to express strong feeling than the trite, much-abused, "damn" or similar term. Maybe Carlyle illustrated the idea when he remarked that a certain man who had gained considerable public attention didn't have "the brains of a rabbit," or when he asserted that England had a population of 20,000,000, "mostly fools," or when he exclaimed on hearing that Margaret Fuller had "accepted the universe." "Gad, she'd better."

Phil May's Humorous Suggestion to Artist

The death of old Lord Iveagh, head of the Guinness family of Guinness stout fame—on the Iveagh estate of $33,000,000 no less than $22,000,000 goes to the government—led a prohibition officer to say:

"I'll tell you a story. You've heard of Phil May, the great black-and-white artist? Well, May had a red and bulbous nose; and Shannon once did portraits of him and of Lord Iveagh for the Royal academy.

"As May's red-nosed portrait was being finished he happened to see the great stout brewer's in an easel.

"I say, Shannon," he said, "you ought to hang Lord Iveagh and me side by side. Call him 'Cause' and me 'Effect.'"

That Kind of Fellow Altogether Too Slow

"Too much promiscuous kissing is bad for young people," declares Judge Ben Lindsey. "It robs juvenile life and gaiety of its wholesomeness and is a grave threat to high moral standards.

"Things that would have been shocking a few years ago are now regarded as virtues and lack of them is liable to make one a social outcast.

"Some college coeds were decorating their frat house for Christmas when one of the girls asked the head of the decorating committee:

"Aren't we going to have any mistletoe this year?"

"No," replied the other. "I've found that the fellows who need it aren't worth a hang."

Nation's Paint Bill

The paint bill of the United States during 1927 reached the tremendous total of $519,000,842, according to a census of manufacture taken by the Department of Commerce. More than 1,000 establishments were engaged in the manufacture of paints and varnishes, and a total of 28,061 wage earners, other than salaried employees, were engaged in turning out the product. New York state led, with 102 plants engaged in the business, and Illinois ran second with 109.

Included in the $700,000 which was bought in New Mexico was one debenture of $1,000 purchased by Andy West of Wagon Mound, and $7,000 purchased by the St. Louis Rocky Mountain and Pacific Coal company of Baton.

West was in the Farmers and Stockman bank at Wagon Mound at the time that institution took $20,000, and asked if he could get in on the New Mexico pool. He was told that no one was barred so he wrote out a check for the 2 per cent deposit necessary to purchase.

The New Mexico buyers likewise demanded no premium from the state which will float a further saving of Highway Department funds.

The first letting on the expanded road program will be held almost immediately, W. C. Davidson, chief Highway engineer said.

The remaining $200,000 was sold today to a combine of Boworth, Chasuta, Longbridge and company the United States National, and Stern Brothers at a bid which with premium makes a total interest rate of 5.9 per cent.

Dillon Present
Governor Dillon said the purchase of the debentures by New Mexico banks "proves that the state is enjoying prosperity, and I am highly gratified to find that New Mexico is united behind this public service move."

Small banks as well as large were represented in the New Mexico pool, and every section from Carlsbad to Arco was represented. The largest block sold was to the First National Bank of Santa Fe, which took $100,000 worth.

State Highway Engineer W. C. Davidson expressed the pleasure that the state banks bid in the first block of the new debentures.

It was estimated at the highway department today that at the lower rate of interest gained on this sale of debentures under the previous interest rates paid, that the highway department, if 5 1/2 per cent can be maintained for the full $3,000,000 issue will save enough money to build an additional 25 miles of finished highway.

Alto Citizen Dies

News reached this office last night of the death of W. I. Broocke, Wednesday night, at his home near Alto. Mr. Broocke had made Lincoln county his home for about 30 years, coming here from Texas. He had lived in the Capitan-Alto country practically all the years of his residence in the county, and had many friends who are sorrowed over his death. He leaves a wife and several children with whom our people deeply sympathize.

Farm Population Falling

The farm population of the United States is now said to be the lowest in twenty years. The Bureau of Economics of the Agricultural Department estimates our farm population January 1st last at 27,511,000 as compared with a peak of 32,000,000 in 1909. But for the fact that the birth rate on farms has been exceeding the death rate, the farm population would be much lower today than it is, since the trend has been from rural to urban communities for some years. The Bureau states that 1,960,000 persons left the farm last year for the cities, while but 1,362,000 went from cities to farms. Improved transportation facilities have enabled many actual farmers to reside in towns and cities, where they desire to take advantage of the educational facilities for their children, and still operate their farms, but in these cases persons so living are no longer counted in the official statistics as farm residents, although to all intent and purposes they are farmers.

A noted Berlin scientist declares that the ape is descended from man, but C. E. Mann of the Osborne Country Farmer thinks that the professor should have positive evidence on the matter before casting such a reflection on the ape. For instance he says no ape was ever known to stay out two-thirds of the night serenading the girls and attempting to sing "Sweet Adeline," or "Good Night Ladies." There is no evidence that any ape ever had his picture published in a cigarette advertisement or give a testimonial for a patent machine. Furthermore, there is nothing on record to prove that any ape ever dug up from $15 to $20 for a pint of vile liquor that might permanently blind him or burn a hole in his stomach. Common fairness to the long and honorable record of the ape should make the average human hesitate before trying to claim him as a relative.

More SALESMEN RIDE On Goodyear Tires than on any other kind

Salesmen usually drive their cars many times farther in a year than the average motorist. Salesmen travel all kinds of roads in all sorts of weather. They have found by experience that GOODYEAR Tires wear longest, cause least delay and are safest on slippery roads. For similar reasons, millions more people ride on Goodyear tires. Why don't you?—they cost no more.

What We Think

By FRANK DIXON

Making friends is an art, but keeping them is a science.

If nobody says anything against you there probably isn't very much to say for you.

There are two kinds of people—happy ones, and those who take themselves too seriously.

Also a bank account takes the "no" out of a "no account."

If you stick to the golden rule, you will never be measured for stripes.

Tune in with opportunity and you'll hear her knock.

According to a paper I was reading the other day, I noticed the waitline seems to be creeping back to its proper place. They will have to start singing now instead of "Throw Out the Life Line," "Draw in the Waist Line."

LEE'S FERRY BRIDGE CONNECTS TWO PICTURESQUE PORTIONS OF SOUTHWEST

Lee's Ferry, site of the spectacular new bridge across the Colorado river, seems remote from New Mexico. When the governor of New Mexico drives there to join the California and Arizona governors, and meet the Nevada, Utah and Colorado governors he will motor over half a thousand miles to reach the bridge.

But this bridge may prove a very real value for New Mexico. A look at the map shows clearly the significant thing about this structure, namely that in bridging the great gulf which abounded by wild deserts, divides what may be described as the Union Pacific transcontinental zone from the Santa Fe railroad region, it is the only north and south connecting link in many hundreds of miles between two great tourist routes, railroad and highway. The other nearest main cross-avenues are, one in California, and the other the Gallup-Farmington-Durango-Silverton mountain highway. A short cut from Lee's Ferry to Winslow and Gallup in an inevitable development, and the bridge is bound to tap the mid-mountain and northwestern tourist stream and send a considerable portion of it down thru New Mexico. Moreover, the bridge route will furnish a short cut into the famous Bryce and Zion Canyon country, and make it easier for motorists from the southern part of the United States to get to the Canyon and the terra incognita north of it.

The Kaibab forest has always been one of the most inaccessible and remote alluring corners of the West. The pull of the North Rim country is going to be a strong one. The Canyon-to-Cavern project is going to draw southward through New Mexico the thousands who come to the Canyon from the country north of it. The bridge will certainly prove a big accelerator to tourist travel both ways.

All this means of course a further step toward losing the last great wilderness of the Southwest. The smell of gas is going to permeate finally the furthest recesses of the bad lands, and all the mystery of the Canyon will be lost when the air above it is full of airplanes. But the population of America, like water it seeks its level, there is no possible way to stop it and somebody has to pay for our highways, develop our resources and bring down our tax rate.

The Lee's Ferry bridge is quite likely to bring a lot of money into New Mexico.

WILD-LIFE RESERVATIONS ATTRACT MANY VISITORS

Some of the wild-life reservations maintained by the Biological Survey of the United States Department of Agriculture afford unusual opportunities not only for scientific observation and study but also for recreational enjoyment by the public.

These reservations are, of course, primarily designed to prevent the extermination of valuable and interesting kinds of wild life or to extend to them needed protection. Many species are essentially shy and retiring, and to thrive they must be granted seclusion. This is especially true of bird colonies during the breeding season. Some of the big-game preserves, however, afford places where the public can enjoy the sight of wild animals at short range.

Public interest in the big-game preserves and their recreational advantages is shown by the increasing number of visitors. The Sullys Hill Game Preserve, near Devils Lake, N. Dak., reported last year that 23,325 persons and 4,938 automobiles were recorded, a number that taxed the available facilities for the safety and comfort of the visitors. The Upper Mississippi River Wild-Life and Fish Refuge will ultimately furnish opportunities for public recreational use at many points, in addition to affording protection to wild life. On certain areas camping and fishing are permitted.

What the Gray House Hid

The Mystery of a Haunted Mansion

THE STORY

Hilton Hanby had purchased a country place—the Gray house, near Pine Plains, Miss Heleno, a former tenant, warns him that the house is under a curse. Further alarming details are expressed upon Adolf Smucker, Hanby's secretary, by a man who claims to have been chauffeur for Sir Stanford Seymour, former occupant of the place. The Hanbys laugh off the warnings. But they are shocked when they hear that the caretaker of the Gray house, a man named Kerr, has been mysteriously murdered. Hanby consults his friend Pelham. The family starts for the new home. Appleton, a clerk of Douglas and Smith, the agents from whom Hanby bought the Gray house, explains to Pelham, that a dangerous pond near the house, in which several children have been drowned, has since been filled in, but he urges Pelham to dissuade Hanby from occupying the Gray house. Hanby and Junior learn that the caretaker was known to the police as "Red Chapin" and had a bad record. Hanby considers asking Leslie Barron, long an admirer of Celia, to join the house party. Mrs. Hanby declares she likes the house. Pelham becomes a member of the household, with the official title of "house detective." Over the telephone Hanby is warned by a woman not to subject his family to the dangers of the Gray house. Leslie Barron arrives making four able-bodied members of the Hanby household. A phone call from a man who declares he is an old acquaintance of Hanby's and interested in ornithology, but whom Hanby cannot identify, urges him to preserve a part of the grounds as a bird sanctuary. The idea appeals to Hanby and he makes the promise. The Hanbys take possession of the Gray house.

"Bill," she said, "you must be fond of the Hanby clan to do this. Poor old Bill!" she murmured softly.

"Why poor?" he demanded.

"I know," she said wisely. "You can't fool me."

"I'm not poor," he retorted. "I'm rich. I have a family without the labor of supporting it. I'm much more sensible than you imagine. I adore your mother. She married the man she loved. Three things might have happened to me—I might have married another woman, and made her unhappy; I might have become one of those sour, cynical old devils who poison this earth; I might have drunk myself to death. I thought of doing all three at various times. I did try drinking for a day, but Dina made me feel like a J—O coward. I am now going to use some of your modern terms. I sublimated my love into affection for everything that was dear to your mother. That's why I bear your superior airs with cheerfulness. That's why I talk baseball scores with Tim."

"You love baseball," said Celia.

"I love you," retorted Pelham.

"About four years ago—the summer we had a house at Allenhurst—I cherished a hopeless passion for you," Celia confided. "It began when you used to do those fancy back dives at the Allenhurst pool, and was fanned to fury when you reacted that man from the surf. Did you ever suspect it?"

"Not a bit," he said. "Mine is an open, modest nature, shrinking and simple. You interest me strangely, Celia. Why did you drop me?"

"I went back to school," she said, "and there was an adorable being who taught us music. I wanted to practice Beethoven ten hours a day."

"Why did you drop him?"

"He was sent away for kissing a teacher—or, rather, for being caught kissing a teacher. After that Les father amused me. I was then an emotionally old woman of seventeen."

"Are you really fond of Les?" asked Pelham.

"I wish I knew!"

"I thought one always knew."

"Not in these times," said Celia.

"One meets so many boys. Les is on probation this summer. What about a swim before breakfast? There's a gorgeous high dive into twenty feet of water. I want to beat Junior at back diving. Please, Bill, give me a lesson!"

"You'll have to make it right with Dina," he said. "I'm her man in chief, and I want to keep my job."

"Dina and dad will be there before you, if you don't make haste."

"What? Taking advantage of me like that? I'll be in my bathing suit before you are!"

The two raced toward the house. The swimming party was not ready for breakfast until half past nine. The meal was hardly begun when a package of mail was brought in.

"I'm going to send a postcard on horseback for it, when things are in running order," Hanby commented, sorting it out. "Trade-sans invitations, mainly. Here's one from a Peagheepste undertaker, with most attractive illustrations of the latest in caskets."

Next he held up a large square envelope, lavender-colored, and adorned with a black coat of arms.

"Burdleigh Salterton," he read. "I didn't tell you, Dina, that I wrote to Mr. Seymour weeks ago, asking if he had a chauffeur like the one Smucker described." Hanby frowned a little.

"It's odd that his reply should come on our first breakfast here!"

"What does he say?" Dina asked.

"In the matter of a crest, he said—"

English address. Listen! "Beymour Manor, Bovey-Tracey, Ottery St. Mary, Budleigh Salterton, Devonshire." That makes the Gray house fade into nothing! On the top left hand corner it says, "Telegraph, Otterton." On the top right-hand corner it says, "Great Western station, four miles."

This was the message that Hanby read aloud:

"HILTON HANBY, ESQ.,
"My Dear Sir:
"Owing to a fishing trip in Norway my answer to your letter has been unavoidably delayed."

"During my stay in your country my chauffeur was the one new in my service, Richard Battenston. He is five feet nine in height, weighs one hundred and forty pounds, is dark, pale of face, with an aquiline nose—in fact, as you see, in every respect differing from the impostor who claimed to have held this position."

"I am, my dear sir,
"Faithfully yours,
"STANFORD SEYMOUR."

"I resign as hoe man," Bill Pelham said. "I am now the house detective. I report for work here and

"If he's a salesman," Hanby reflected, "I'm gone. A man like that could sell me anything!"

"The stranger bowed politely.

"Mr. Hanby, I believe?"

"Yes," replied Hanby, wondering what it was he was about to buy.

"My name is Appleton—Frederick Appleton. You are probably unaware of my existence."

"On the contrary, you are expected when the bass season opens. You were kind enough to give my friend Mr. Pelham some information about this house."

"As I was in the neighborhood, I took the liberty of coming to see your improvements. I have always been much interested in the Gray house."

"I shall be glad to show you over it and ask your advice. I find every day that there are a lot of things about country estates that they don't teach boys on farms—these improvements, for instance."

Mr. Appleton's manner was almost eager.

"May I ask what they are?"

"A big swimming pool between the tennis courts and the house, a new garage for six cars, a Japanese tea house, and a dozen smaller jobs."

Nothing pleased the new owner more than the opportunity to exhibit his property. Mr. Appleton was bored by nothing. He begged to be shown everything. He had no criticisms. He congratulated Hilton Hanby warmly.

"You will make this," he declared, "one of the stately homes of America. You have a genius for this sort of thing."

Only in one matter was his view opposed to that of the owner. He thought that the ground given over to the bird sanctuary would do admirably for ornamental glass houses.

"My wife and I wouldn't think of such a thing," Hanby asserted firmly. "We are for the conservation of bird life. You may not know it, but our rarer species of songsters are in serious danger of extermination. That bird sanctuary is a hobby of ours, and it will not be disturbed while we live."

Mr. Appleton wrung his host's hand. Hanby was surprised at the emotion written on this cheery, smiling face.

"It does you credit, sir," he exclaimed. "In my ignorance I have given no thought to such matters. It was criminal negligence. I did not know."

"As a matter of fact," Hanby confessed, "I was just as heedless as you until a month ago. Mr. Bayless, whom I met at the Metropolitan club, told me all about it. I rather think he is president of the Ornithological society."

"The name seems familiar," said Appleton. "One of our national authorities. If I mistake not, I think I have read a notice of one of his books on the subject."

Appleton was sightseeing until luncheon. Hanby would not let him refuse to stay to the meal, despite the fact that he had a neat package of sandwiches and fruit.

The interior of the house charmed him greatly. He was filled with admiration at the rules of the Sanctuary club. The critical family circle approved of him.

shaw slumbers not nor sleeps. I'll tell you what I will do, Bill," he suggested briskly. "I'll beat you three sets out of four whenever you are ready. I've been reading a book on tennis tactics, and after committing it to memory I've burned it, so you can't read it. You haven't a chance!" Hanby's mood was more cheerful. "I wrote that book," he declared. "Want to bet?"

"Go and get into flannels," Pelham told him. "Bill's worried," he added, to Dina, when Hanby had left the room.

"I never saw him so before. Try and make him laugh at it, Bill," Hanby's mood of depression passed very quickly. New daily interests so crowded one upon the other that there was no room for gloom or in-trospection.

The Parkers did not come. Parker's stomach, after many unheeded warnings, had finally rebelled against its owner's habit of taking three meat meals a day. Julia Parker wrote that her husband was about to be operated upon.

One day, walking down the drive, Hanby met a small, florid, neatly dressed man approaching the house—the sort of man to inspire confidence even among the most suspicious.

"If he's a salesman," Hanby reflected, "I'm gone. A man like that could sell me anything!"

"The stranger bowed politely.

"Mr. Hanby, I believe?"

"Yes," replied Hanby, wondering what it was he was about to buy.

CHAPTER VI

There was a letter for Mrs. Hanby in the package of mail.

"Who's been writing to you, Dina?" her husband inquired.

"The Parkers. They've been wanting to come here, but I told them we weren't taking any one till we had got used to the place. It would spoil it to have any outsiders yet. I shall be finding new wonders every minute for a month. Besides, we have no saddle horses yet, and Julia is mad about riding. That reminds me that I must order a habit and a side saddle."

Hanby was still thinking of the mysterious warnings.

"It's funny," he remarked presently, "that any one should take the trouble to feed Smucker for nothing. There must be something behind it."

"Junior and I will find out," said Bill. "It's beneath the dignity of the lord of the manor to sleuth."

"The first letter I opened," continued Hanby, pursuing his train of thought, "was from an undertaker noted for the simplicity and dignity of his funerals. He includes flowers. That's thoughtful! The next was from Seymour. Perhaps I shall now be called to the telephone to talk with another unknown correspondent."

"My motto is eternal vigilance," said Pelham. "I carry on your best news as usual—your faithful hawk-

Odd Sounds Gave Rise to Belief in Demons

South America has a moaning mountain. At certain seasons a deep note comes from Mount El Bromador in the Chilean Andes. In former days the natives listened to it with superstitious fear, while even a white man, hearing it for the first time, is startled at the mountain's "power." Another curious mountain exists in Nevada, though this one usually gives out a note resembling at first the rattling of bells and ending with a deep organ-like swell. In both cases the sounds are due to a peculiar formation of the earth, which under certain conditions of weather allows the separate particles to rub against each other and so produce uncanny effects.

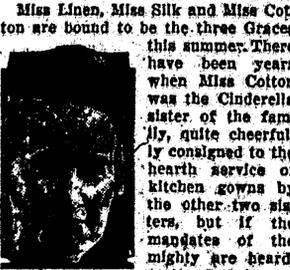

neighbor, the whole making a wailing noise. Similar sounds are found in China. In England is a mountain which howls in such a way that formerly it was supposed to be the breath of demons. This is Cross Fell, in Westmorland, where local conditions produce a note with several peculiarities, including an awe-inspiring scream that at times can be heard for miles.

Difficult for Street Sisters

A beauty expert says one should walk in such a way that one seems to float. Well, we saw one of the super-street old girls in our neighborhood trying to do it and she looked like a large walking board in a ground crew.—New Orleans States.

Dame Fashion Smiles

By Grace Jewett Austin

Miss Linen, Miss Silk and Miss Cotton are bound to be the three Graces this summer. There have been years when Miss Cotton was the Cinderella sister of the family, quite cheerfully consigned to the hearth service of kitchen gowns by the other two sisters, but if the magpies of the mighty are heard, pretty dotted muslin, and printed cotton material, to say nothing of many a sheer white cotton fabric will go to the country club festivities this summer and dance until the clock strikes twelve. (This hour is chosen for quilting not for fear of the fairy coach turning into pumpkin and mice, but most orchestras seem to have a preference for stopping their cheerful jazz at that hour.)

Mr. Wool-goods is the useful brother to all these graceful materials, and he will be greatly in evidence in the summer tweeds. More cape coats are used this year than for many a season past. Lord Velvet, who has been quite accustomed to retiring from view when summer months approach, has decided that he will stay right on hand and see people this year. When any material becomes transparent it loses its winter weight and the bulkiness which becomes wearisome in summer temperatures. Lord Velvet, in either chiffon or transparent types, is ideal for summer evening wraps this year, made up entirely without lining. Such a wrap will have only a feather's weight, so to speak. A touch of summer ermine will set off Lord Velvet until you could almost hail him with the title of king instead of lord.

Dame Fashion lately lamented to read that since the desire for red had become so universal the "Social Registerites" had begun to use red as illuminating touches for costumes, rather than as entire ones. But as there are only a few hundreds on the social register, compared with America's millions, most of us may still have good times in red dresses if we desire to have them.

One of the nice pleasures of being middle-aged is the joy of seeing fashions return. Here comes again the chains of bits of coral twigs, that southern heroines of before-the-Civil-war used to wear, with their many-petioleated white muslin dresses and big masses of blue ribbon. There always was an individuality about those coral chains which most beads cannot achieve, for the little coral animal, like other living things, as scientists say, never does the same thing in precisely the same way twice. Dame Fashion even wouldn't mind seeing a big blue sash on a white gown, but probably for that we shall have to wait awhile. If ever there was a combination in clothes that bore an innocent, unsophisticated look, it was that one, and the Twentieth century greatly prefers to look as if it knew everything beneath the sun and moon and stars.

Beige and Brown Frock With Vest and Collar

Prints and poplins seem to spell fashion for the season. Both are combined in this winsome beige and brown frock. The bodice terminates in a tiny circular pleat that is embellished with brown velvet ribbon. Extra lace forms the deep vest and collar. Note the puff sleeves—another fashion hit.

Knitted Costumes Are in Fashion for Spring

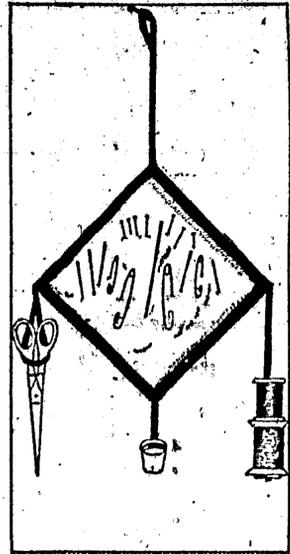

Do you wonder whether you may smartly wear a knitted costume this spring? Try it, if you aspire to chic, you'll probably make one a specific note in your new wardrobe. Smart women in New York and at the resorts are wearing brightly colored knitted costumes for all sorts of fashionable feminine occasions.

Use Flour Bag to Make This Handy "Housewife"

A "housewife" in case you don't know, is the way they pronounce housewife in certain parts of the English countryside, and it refers to the handy sewing outfit shown here. Originally the mistress wore it hanging from her waist, along with her reticule and bunch of keys, but for many years its exclusive home has been the kitchen.

The basis of the housewife is a small pincushion made out of a bit of flour bag material and filled with bran. Equip this with pins, safety pins and a few needles, including a heavy one for sewing poultry.

Sew a small ring at one corner. From the other three corners hang short ribbons or tapes, to which are attached scissors, celluloid thimble in a little case, and two spools of thread, kept on by a button sewn at the bottom.

The usefulness of this little kit in the kitchen will be proved many times over. Its simplicity makes it a good gift for children to make. This is only one of the many pretty and useful things that can be made from flour bags bought from the baker or which come into the home. Remove the stamping with javelle water or by covering it with lard or kerosene for a few hours and then washing in warm water. The material can be easily dyed if desired.

On Rearing Children from Crad to College

Compiled by the Editors of CHILDREN, The Magazine for PARENTS.

A fear-ridden personality is doomed to bafflement and failure. Don't make your child afraid. Daily, children are brought to psychiatrists, suffering from a fear or guilt born of parents' threats.

Economic security is among the most difficult things for persons of small and moderate income to achieve under the present industrial organization. But the family can at least take the first step towards it by applying the methods used by business corporations to achieve the same end. Planned spending makes savings more likely and more systematic, and less liable to cut into what are really desirable and essential expenditures.

A fallacy commonly believed is that a child must have certain infectious diseases, anyway, and the earlier the better. As a matter of fact, there is no such necessity and there is no communicable disease that a child is not much better off without. There is the possibility that the child will not recover and unfortunate consequences of contagious diseases may last a lifetime.

However great your children's ambition and enthusiasm (in anticipation) for garden work. It is urged you see that the child's first garden is small and to confine the planting to two or at most three kinds of plants. This is not because more than two or three kinds cannot be properly taken care of by children, but because it is important to keep effort much below the limits of capacity, both mental and physical. Remember that children tire easily and if their gardens are to be a success they must not overtax these young enthusiasts.

For the summer months the wise parents plan clothing that is cool, attractive and serviceable for the children. A change of scene in summer is good for any family. Clothes for such a season should be simple, washable and of sufficient quantity to insure neatness and comfort. They may be made at home at little expense and with a minimum of effort.

Whenever a house is being looked over for safety's sake, the stairs come to be foreground for consideration. They need to be well looked up on all other parts of the home. A switch at the head and foot of the stairways is an excellent investment. Children can be taught when quite young to make use of the lighting facilities. The buttons which control the lights should be placed low enough for children to reach.

Ben Spalding of Phoenix was elected president of the Arizona Scholastic Press Association, in annual convention in Phoenix, which was attended by six school newspapers of the state. John Knox Blazes, was elected vice president and Lewis Allison of Mesa was named treasurer.

Motor vehicle registrations, totaling 28,293 the first four months of 1929, brought license revenues amounting to $400,594.26 to the Arizona State Highway Department's motor vehicle division, according to a statement issued in Phoenix.

PICTORIAL GOLF INSTRUCTION

By H. B. MARTIN

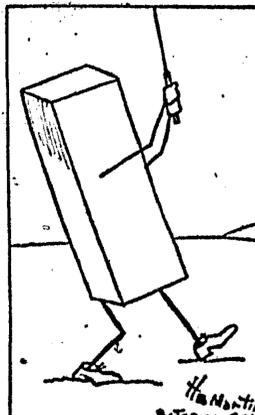

A VERY EXAGGERATED SWING - FEET TOO FAR APART - IT IS MORE OF A BASE BALL SWING THAN A GOLF STROKE

Intent Effort Sometimes Destroys Form

EVERY star golfer knows how to play well within himself. That is, he is not guilty of going after every drive as though it meant life or death. There are times when it is necessary to put that little extra effort into the swing to gain a few more yards. Some do it in a way that throws the body out of kilter, making a very awkward or exaggerated finish.

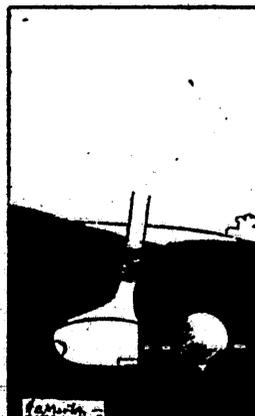

One must make sure to keep the head down in case he goes after a long ball and he must make sure that the body does not do its part of the work too quickly. Tremendous distance gaining is not desirable at the cost of direction.

Weight Should Be on Left Foot at Finish of Swing

THE finish of the golf swing can best be described by the wooden figure here shown. The body is shown as it has pulled away from the shot, either causing a slice or greatly checking the follow through, an important thing to remember in golf.

The weight of the body should be more than two-thirds on the left foot when the swing is completed. This proves that the club has gone through after the ball. Notice the picture of all the leading golfers and you will observe that they finish on the left foot. This is a very good form and sound fundamental golf.

Getting the Maximum Force

MOST golfers fail to time the shot so that they get the greatest amount of force into the blow. The average good player makes the mistake of hitting the ball just after the maximum amount of speed has been reached. It may only be an inch or so, but this makes a difference, as it takes off just that much from the follow through.

The hardest hitters time the ball so that there is the greatest amount of force expended just at the impact or an inch beyond, which would mean that the ball stays with the club for a longer period. The harder the blow the longer the follow through.

We need not less, but more moral sensitivity in a complex world. Any tendency of thought which inclines to destroy the "ought" in moral reasoning is dangerous. -Prof. Reinhold Niebuhr.

SAME PRESCRIPTION HE WROTE IN 1892

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as today. People lived normal lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air. But even that early there were drastic physical and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe bowel stimulant.

This prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative. It has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds, fevers. At your druggist, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

Senator Edwards is the subject of a story that they are telling in Trenton.

It appears that the senator made an anti-prohibition speech at a Trenton banquet, and was congratulated on his eloquence by a politician who had been changing from wet to dry and dry to wet every month or so for the last seven years.

"Splendid, senator!" said the politician. "I never heard a more brilliant and moving speech. And yet you don't look like an orator, either."

"Maybe not," said Senator Edwards. "And no more do you look like a weathercock."

The Widower's Grief

Senator Norbeck, discussing his bird bill, said in Washington:

"I hope there is no hypocrisy in the love for birds that is voiced everywhere. I hope there's nothing in it of the widower."

"This widower went on terribly, terribly, at the church services for his wife. A friend the next day consoled with him, saying he had never seen such awful grief."

"Ah, George," said the widower, "it's a pity you didn't get out to the cemetery. If you could have seen the way I cut up there!"

Are You Ready

When your Children Cry for It

Baby has little upsets at times. All your care cannot prevent them. But you can be prepared. Then you can do what any experienced nurse would do—what most physicians would tell you to do—give a few drops of plain Castoria. No sooner done than Baby is soothed; relief is just a matter of moments. Yet you have eased your child without use of a single doubtful drug; Castoria is vegetable. So it's safe to use as often as an infant has any little pain you cannot pat away. And it's always ready for the crueler pangs of colic, or constipation or diarrhea; effective, too, for older children. Twenty-five million bottles were bought last year.

A letter from Mrs. Jack Callahan states that they have located at Carlsbad and that Mr. Callahan has opened a curio shoppe, designated as the "Wig Wam," Indian goods and all kinds of curios will be handled. We wish them much success in their new undertaking.

Dr. J. W. Tappan Surgeon-in-charge at Fort Stanton, came over Wednesday and took that afternoon train for Atlantic City, to attend the National Tuberculosis Convention. Before returning, Dr. Tappan will visit the National Capital and attend to some matters before the Health Department.

Charles M. Cress, accompanied by his younger brother, Gerald E., arrived Tuesday morning from their old home, Tusculum, North Herwick, Scotland. Charlie is more or less a fixture here having spent over three years here before going back to Scotland last fall. This is the first trip of the brother, however, and he plans to return to the land of peat and heather in September. Both are quite welcome—his stayer and the visitor.

Death Visits Family

Last evening, at 7:45, Thomas J. West died at the home of his son, Joe West. The remains will be taken to Alamogordo today and interred beside the wife who five years ago was buried there. Mr. West is survived by a number of children, two of whom live here, Mrs. Jno. A. Haley and Joe West; two at Cloucroft, Mrs. Bernice Fite and Guy West; a daughter in Texas, two in Arizona, and a son, Henry, who once lived here, now in Oregon. Time will permit only this brief announcement this week.

Disastrous Hail Storm

One of the most disastrous hail storms in the history of Lincoln county struck the upper Ruidoso Valley last Saturday and left destruction and ruin in its path. Orchards suffered the worst, in the loss of fruit and damage to the trees, themselves. Gardens and farm crops were also seriously injured. In the grazing sections of the county it is reported that several hundred young lambs were killed.

John Gallacher Injured

John Gallacher met with a very serious accident, near his ranch in the north Ocasitas Tuesday afternoon. He and Mrs. Gallacher were out horseback riding, and during the ride John decided to dismount. He walked to a cliff of rock and while standing there a part of the cliff on which he was standing, broke off, precipitating him to the bottom of the gulch a fall of about 20 feet. The injured man was unable to extricate himself nor could he do so with his wife's aid, so she sought help and sometime elapsed before relief arrived.

A car was driven to the point and the sufferer brought to town for medical attention, and Dr. Paden made an examination of the injuries. It was found that the left kidney was crushed and the patient's condition is quite serious. Dr. Paden took Mr. Gallacher to El Paso yesterday morning on No. 1 for a more thorough examination and upon the disclosure made by such examination will depend the course to be pursued in the treatment of the injury.

Glencoe Woman's Club

The last meeting of the year was held at the home of Mrs. J. Werner, assisted as hostess by Mrs. George Coe.

In the business session the New Year Book, was enthusiastically adopted, as outlined by the Program Committee. The subjects were:

- September.... Americanization
- October.... A Parliamentary Dilemma
- November... Plans for a Consolidated High School
- December.... Modern Trend of Religion

- January..... Book Party
- February.... Featuring South-eastern N. M.
- March..... Better Homes
- April..... Music Day
- May..... Art Tea

A splendid report of the Fourth District Convention was read by Mrs. Roselle where mention was made in a special way of our newly elected president, Mrs. J. V. Tully.

The program subject was, Looking Forward, led by Mrs. J. V. Tully, and was responded to by talks.

Better Laws.... Mrs. W. F. Coe
 Better Churches... Mrs. George Coe

Better Schools... Mrs. Ola Jones
 Better Children.... Mrs. A. E. Roselle

An exciting feature of the afternoon was the big hail storm which halted the meeting for sometime.

The club adjourned, looking forward to a splendid time next Club Year.

Sylvestre Mireles Dies

Sylvestre Mireles died early Monday morning. Death was caused from a peptic tumor which produced hemorrhages and a resultant loss of blood. The funeral took place Monday afternoon and interment was made in the local cemetery.

The deceased was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Florencio Mireles, was about 24 years old, and had lived in Carrizozo since his early youth. He had been employed until his last illness at Ziegler Bros., and was held in high esteem by his employers and his associates. Besides his wife, to whom he was married about two years ago, he leaves a father, mother and a number of brothers and sisters. Sorrow is expressed on every hand over the demise of this bright, pleasant young man who gave every promise of the making of a useful and substantial citizen.

Why Did Baptist Pastor Kneel?

This question is being asked and will be answered by the pastor in a frank and kindly manner at the Sunday morning service, under subject "Three Adjustable Reasons." Our folks will be present at the Auditorium exercises at the High School Sunday evening.

STEEL ECLIPSE
 Windmill

Starts sooner—pumps longer

Two windmills stood just across the road from each other. When the first sign of a breeze started to blow, the other started with a green and hunched away only so long as the wind faded a foot in the road. Then it stopped as abruptly as it had started, while the other continued pumping for many times—then it finally came smoothly to rest with the last trace of the flying breeze.

That is the difference between a superior windmill and just a windmill. It is the difference between a superior windmill and just a windmill. It is the difference between a superior windmill and just a windmill. It is the difference between a superior windmill and just a windmill.
