Auto Accidents Grow

Santa Fe, N. M., July 29—Figures have been compiled on the auto accidents in New Mexico and released today by the State Highway Service Bureau which shows that the accident rate has nearly doubled over 1928.

In the first six months of 1929 there were 83 accidents reported upon by state highway employees as happening on maintenance patrols. For the first six months of this year 170 accidents have been reported. These figures do not include accidents which happen in cities, towns or off maintenance patrols.

The figures on accident causes maintain approximately the same ratio as last year. Inattention, which includes recklessness, incompetence and like causes, still heads the list with 65 accidents charged against it. Speeding as a cause maintains the ratio as 1928 but intoxication is only about one half as much again, instead of double.

In the column physical causes defective vehicle is away out in front with 27 accidents resulting. Strong lights as a cause has increased six times as much as last year. Defective road has increased in ratio with the total increase to double last year.

The statement which is made nationally as well as locally that most auto accidents are preventable is borne out by the data on "place of accident" which shows that 120 of the 170 accidents happening so far this year were on stretches of good road and 17 on fair road. Nine were reported on new work, one on bad road, 23 unknown. Allowing for a goodly portion of the "unknown" happening on bad roads the ratio of accidents on good road, and presumably preventable accordingly, is so high as to point the finger of blame at the driver himself again.

In this 170 accidents, 180 cars damaged, many accidents being collisions. Of this bunch 21 were completely wrecked and 88 damaged over $75.

The only light in the darkness of the figures, which the highway employees find is that the death rate has been reduced over last year, which is a phenomenon noted in the national figures compiled by the National Safety Council. In New Mexico during the first half of last year 32 people met their deaths in auto accidents by Bureau of Public Health figures; while in the same period of this year the figure has dropped two units with 30 fatalities chalked up so far.

Injuries have increased along with the number of wrecks, however, with 62 marked up for first period of 1928 and 102 for the similar period this year. The three railroad crossing wrecks

Endurance Flight Exceeded Seventeen Days

St. Louis, July 30—The end of the record-smashing endurance flight of the St. Louis Robin came at 7:38 o'clock (C. S. T.) Thursday night when its pilots, Dale "Red" Jackson, and Forest O'Brine, descended from the sky which had been their home for 420 hours, 21 min., 30 sec. They exceeded the record of the Angelino by seven full days at 2:01 p. m., Tuesday.

The plane made a perfect landing in the middle of the field with about 15,000 spectators watching. The crowd rushed on the field, but a guard of employees from the Curtiss-Robertson company, sponsors of the flight, protected Jackson and O'Brine.

The St. Louis Robin was towed into a space beside the hangar.

The field was muddy from a rainstorm that began late in the day, where during the long flight in the air the dust was inches thick.

An increase in tourist travel through our town this season has been so evident that even the most casual visualize it, and the completion of the highway west will boost the number incalculably. Carrizozo should put forth every effort to accelerate the movement and to provide means of entertainment for those who are inclined to linger.

which have occurred so far this year may help to account for this last year during the same period none were reported.

"The semi-annual accident study shows as plainly as ever that no great reduction can be expected in numbers of accidents until the driver himself takes over the business of preventing accidents," says the highway bureau. "Neglecting to have regular inspections of the mechanical parts of the car, driving carelessly at places where it is obvious caution is needed, driving into a dust cloud at a high rate of speed, using alcohol before or during a drive, taking attention from the road ahead; these are but a few of the causes for the greater part of all our accidents."

"During the days of the saloon, a saying was common that providence provided for drunk men, fools and babies," the highway release concludes. It is obvious from the above figures and the vouchered for causes that providence does not include in this category the careless or incompetent auto driver. "It would likewise seem that drunk men of this day do not enjoy the same immunity as did their predecessors. Drive carefully and stop paying bills for car repairs and personal damage suits!"

Playing Hide and Seek With Tariff

More and more is the disposition manifest to attribute a degree of responsibility for the tariff, now incubating behind closed doors, at the hands of the Republican members of the Senate Finance Committee.

There has been a very general effort exercised indirectly to convey the impression that the President was opposed to exactions of the bill as it came from the House of Representatives, but nobody has yet been able to get a direct expression from the President about this.

"By the time the Senate reconvenes on August 19," said Senator LaFollette, Republican of Wisconsin, "we may expect to see the House bill, in a new dress, presented to the Senate with much talk of 'improvements' made over the original draft and with great emphasis placed upon the 'limited' character of the Senate's revision of existing rates."

"An effort will undoubtedly be made by the Old Guard sponsors of the bill to extract an endorsement from President Hoover, and in any event it is certain that every Senator elected as a Republican who refuses to accept this measure as it comes from the hands of the Finance Committee will be branded as a trouble-maker, an obstructionist and an enemy of the manufacturing and farming industries of the country."

Senator LaFollette, of course, had in mind the position of the Progressive wing of the Republican majority, which has been standing with the Democratic members of the Senate to compel a recession from such items as the sugar extortion, the boot and shoe iniquities, and the building materials graft. "Sooner or later," said Senator LaFollette, "President Hoover must decide whether he stands with Senators Smoot, Watson, Reed, Edge, and other members of the Senate Finance Committee on the tariff or against them. After dictating the terms of the farm bill and condemning the debenture plan in unmeasured terms, the President cannot with very good grace remain neutral and silent on the tariff."

Senator Connally, Texas Democrat, points out that the proposed tariff does not fit in at all with Herbert Hoover's campaign utterances regarding our foreign commerce. "President Hoover," said Senator Connally, "in a de his famous South American good-will tour to encourage cordial relations with the countries of South America and to build up our foreign trade. If the present tariff bill is to follow the tracks of the President through Central and South America it will destroy the good effects of the President's tour and arouse resentment instead of good will. If we are to sell American goods in South America we

Good Street Manners

(National Industries News Service)
It is natural to put the best foot forward when stepping out of doors. Mr. and Mrs. Grouch become all smiles and politeness when they leave the protection of their home behind. Our clothes, our speech, our manners must be at our best for strangers.

But how about our streets and public buildings? They are on parade every day; they are standards by which our private manners are judged. They speak to the visitor in louder tones than the town brass band, and what do they say? "Be careless, this is the land of the free, do as you please," they say only too often. And so the parks are littered with paper and banana peels. Halls of the public buildings are often dark and odorous. The streets cause returned travelers from abroad to exclaim, "But in Europe this wouldn't be permitted. In most towns there the streets are kept as neat as a pin."

Annual attempts to improve matters in the name of clean-up weeks are doing some good. Better yet is the year-round emphasis on cleanliness and order. In New York this takes the form of a Committee of Twenty, under the auspices of the Academy of Medicine, which thus puts into practice its belief that cleanliness and public health are intimately related. If the citizens of any community refuse to tolerate filth and disorder they need not have it. Children trained at home and school to habits of neatness and order, to a cleanly home and fresh linen, are unlikely to forget this training when they are out on the streets. Cleanliness is a matter not only of personal comfort and convenience but of consideration for others as well. Whether indoors or out, it is one trait of the good citizen. That carelessness which disfigures our public places is a definite sign that private standards are low. For cleanliness, like charity, begins at home.

The Town that Grows

Once in a while—say in a hundred years or so—a town can sit still and without an effort grow into a city, just by the location of some industries which drop in unasked. But the other ninety-nine years the town which grows into a city is the town whose people have vision, energy, courage and a go-getting spirit. There is too much competition now among cities for the town which only sits and waits to have much of a chance.—Iola Register.

There are those who fear that due to the general use of cars the gentle art of walking will become lost to the race. To us, however, the danger appears slight. The fellow who rides six blocks to his office is lucky if he finds a parking place closer than four blocks of the office door.

Bedtime Story for Children

IT WAS not terribly cold in the winter time where Lola lived, but still it was cold.

They did not have the severe winter storms, nor the heavy snowfalls, nor the ice, but it was sharp, cold weather just the same.

The wind blew hard at this time of the year, harder and colder than at other times just to show that it was winter time here, too.

Lola had gone canoeing. It was a cold, raw day, but she loved to go on the lake at all times.

A wind was blowing hard. It made the lake full of little squalls.

It was hard to manage a boat when the lake was like that.

But Lola was used to the lake and its winds.

Now and again one got the better of her, but not often. She was very strong and she was a very good swimmer, too.

It had looked today a little as though it might rain. For that reason Lola had worn her raincoat.

"I might as well be prepared," she had said wisely enough.

How Lola did enjoy the rough water and the wind and the wild look of the day.

Only it became harder to paddle the canoe than she had ever known it to be, and she had gone much further up the lake than she had intended.

It had been so easy going up the lake. The wind had been with her and she had gone further than she had intended before she realized it.

It was coming back that was so hard. Her arms began to ache. She felt she just couldn't keep on paddling, and yet she was so strong.

But this time the wind was getting the better of her.

If only she could stop and rest for just one second. But she had to watch out for the squalls—coming in all directions, making it so hard to manage as well as to work so hard.

Then came two breezes from opposite directions and the wind began to blow harder than ever.

How her arms ached. Just for a second's rest! Oh, just for a second's rest, she kept thinking over and over again.

She missed one stroke with her paddle. She couldn't help it, and a flurry of wind toppled the canoe right over.

Lola was in the lake. She was quite a long distance from shore and the water was very cold with little cold streams from the surrounding hills making it very, very cold in some parts.

But Lola was a good swimmer and she was not afraid. She almost liked the rest from paddling, too.

Of course she kept the canoe with her. She wouldn't have gone off swimming without that, for she knew that would be dangerous, and she didn't take foolish chances.

Her Arms Began to Ache.

She swam and she swam and she swam, one arm over the canoe, the other using the side-stroke.

She swam with all her clothes on and the raincoat as well.

She reached home safely. Oh, how relieved her family were when they knew she was safe, for they had worried about her on the lake in such a storm. They had not known until afterward that she had been in the lake.

But the raincoat shrunk. It was too small now for her in the sleeves, it looked quite absurd.

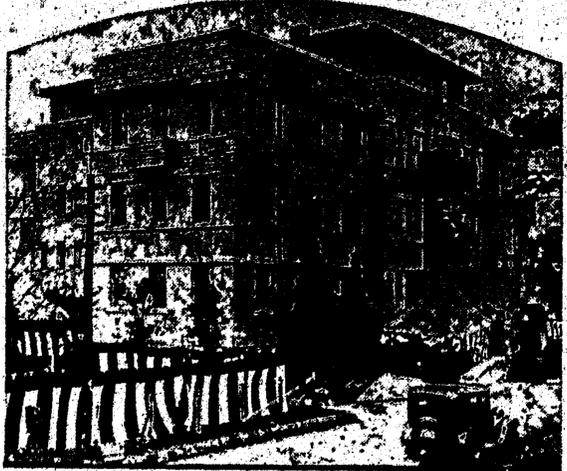

It was too short for her and it was too tight across the shoulders and did not fit at all.

But she had to wear it. How badly she did feel about it. If only she had taken it off, and let it go in the lake no one would have minded so long as she was safe and they would have realized how hard it would have been to swim with it on.

But she had kept it on and it had shrunk and she was safe anyway.

She still had to wear the raincoat. What a great, great pity it did seem! (Copyright.)

What Will you do

When your Children Cry for It

There is hardly a household that hasn't heard of Castoria! At least five million homes are never without it. If there are children in your family, there's almost daily need of its comfort. And any night may find you very thankful there's a bottle in the house. Just a few drops, and that colic or constipation is relieved; or diarrhea checked. A vegetable product; a baby remedy meant for young folks, Castoria is about the only thing you have ever heard doctors advise giving to infants. Stronger medicines are dangerous to a tiny baby, however harmless they may be to grown-ups. Good old Castoria! Remember the name, and remember to buy it. It may spare you a sleepless, anxious night. It is always ready, always safe to use; in emergencies, or for everyday ailments. Any hour of the day or night that Baby becomes fretful, or restless, Castoria was never more popular with mothers than it is today. Every druggist has it.

Makes Life Sweeter

Children's stomachs sour, and need an anti-acid. Keep their systems sweet with Phillips Milk of Magnesia. When tongue or breath tells of acid condition—correct it with a spoonful of Phillips. Most men and women have been comforted by this universal sweetener—more mothers should invoke its aid for their children. It is a pleasant thing to take, yet neutralizes more acid than the harsher things too often employed for the purpose. No household should be without it. Phillips is the genuine, prescriptive product physicians endorse for general use; the name is important. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. registered trade mark of the Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1876.

PASSING IN REVIEW

By F. A. WALKER

EVERY day you are passing before your intimates in review without your suspecting it. Your clothes, your morality and all your petty weaknesses are judged more or less austere, indexed and carefully put away for future use, should occasion demand it.

And in the same manner, you, too, are complacently reviewing the acts, the spoken words and behavior of those around you, in the home, in the office and in the streets.

As a cat watches a mouse, so do humans watch one another, eager to pounce, scratch and gulp at the first favorable opportunity.

Those who fatter, those who sit with you at the breakfast table are forming judgment and waiting a knife to make sure that its edge will be keen, when it shall be called into use.

You may be strong, but you must not offend; you may be a hero but pray do not let it be known, lest you be called to judgment and stood up before the populace in mockery and reviewed in conformity with the prevailing custom.

To keep honor bright in such an atmosphere, is indeed a most trying effort, requiring the meekness of Moses and the patience of Job.

Kings and peasants, captains and subalterns are passing each hour before the reviewing stand, so why should you quail under the gaze of sharp eyes and in the presence of curling lips, half smiling to hide their eagerness to pass around the latest bit of damaging gossip told in confidence only an hour ago by one of your avowed enemies.

Why be perturbed by these running accompaniments to the hapless songs of life, alas, too frequent in all grades of society, from the highest to the lowest; in the great cities, in the fashionable resorts and in the homely hamlets?

To avoid the grand review, do some self-reviewing on your own account. Under the spell of investigation, pull the scales from your eyes and go to your task like a man or a woman unwilling to admit defeat, but perfectly willing to be honest.

Do this regularly, ask no man's counsel, court the companionship of open-eyed faith, and in spite of the gossips and the stinging objurgations of your sharp-tongued opponents, you will sail safely into port with flying colors.

WHEN WE GROW OLD

By Douglas Malloch

I USED to think, when we grew old, we'd weep for joys we could not hold.

But now I know the young possess the joys of living even less.

Youth flits about from flower to flower

And sips the honey of the hour; But age has found a store more vast, The endless sweetness of the past.

I used to think, when we grew gray, The joys of life would slip away. Now I am old, and now I learn That it is then that joys return.

The memories of youth are few, When friends are near, and loves are new.

But age, with every step it goes, Meets some old memory it knows.

I used to think, when we grew bent, The heart would never know content. But he who follows every bird The ringing kettle never heard.

Many a palace youth designs, But God is wise and builds us shrines; And there we come, when we grow old, And find the joys we could not hold.

Superstitions About the Hazel

By H. IRVING KING

THE hazel in this country has not nearly the reputation it has in Europe for all-round magical properties. But it has not entirely lost its mystic character even if on this side of the Atlantic it is only a shrub and on the other side it grows into a small tree. In this country it is in high repute as material for divining rods and in some sections children play at conjuring with hazel wands. In Germany as in this country, it is thought that no wood is so good for divining rods as hazel and the German peasant cuts a twig of hazel in the spring for use as a lightning protector for the rest of the summer.

The reputation of the hazel comes from the fact that it is one of Thor's plants and is supposed to have sprung from the lightning itself. In many parts of Europe it is supposed to be a great aid to fruitfulness and, also is much used in love divinations.

Just why the hazel is a "lightning plant" is not apparent. It emerges in this condition from the far, dim clouds

Perils of Mass Production

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

Before a parked car, Johnny, with considerable pride, called his chum's attention to a particular rivet. "See that rivet, my father drove that." Johnny was right. It was very important that the rivet be made perfectly secure. But the other side of the picture never occurred to Johnny's youthful friend. The driving of that rivet was Johnny's father's only responsibility. Ever after that, through the whole day's work, for five days in the week, Johnny's father drove that rivet; and he will continue to do so until a mechanical service is invented which can do it as well, if not better than Johnny's father.

Three perils have developed from mass production. Human labor has become so mechanical that in many cases men have become mere machines, with the inevitable danger that monotonous labor may leave both mind and heart with little or no desire to take advantage of the leisure which the five-day week affords. Another peril is supplanting man-labor-machines—thus throwing out of employment many persons who must seek labor in less remunerative fields because their capacity had been limited to the performance of one particular act. An equally serious peril is the possibility of an oversupplied market.

The chairman of the Federal Trade Commission in a recent address, suggested that "government price control may be the quality of industry's failure to solve the problem of over-production." The man who labors in the shop, as well as the stockholder, must be given a fair return for service rendered, otherwise prosperity is in serious peril. Labor is no longer content with a mere living wage, but demands a reasonable share of the prosperity it helps to produce.

Slot Machines

(From Roswell Dispatch)

The rapid disappearance of the slot machines from the oil towns of Lea county was one of the interesting items of the news today, but there was nothing so very remarkable about it after all. If Governor Dillon had written directly to the sheriff of that division when the wild stories of their use were reported to him, they would have been ditched without any fuss at all, and it would not have been published to the world that Chaves and Rddy counties were in the crime belt, where mere children were feeding their come-money to the greedy maw of the devices that offer about one chance in a hundred for the pinfore squad to get their money back and then some.

The whole incident looks more and more like a scheme to get cheap advertising for the consumption of the ladies and the preachers preliminary to the next campaign. That it was in effect a libel upon the peace officers of these two counties does not seem to have been considered at all. However, the whole incident is nothing to what will happen if by some circumstances that valiant prohibitionist Judge Reed Holloman is nominated and elected governor.

In that event there will be sleuths around every golf course to see that there are no two bit hole bets, and anybody who even uses the words "craps" or "poker" may expect the limit of the law. Any judge who keeps a bottle of corn liquor while trying dry cases will be summarily removed, or who gets drunk when he has a quiet chance, will be promptly thrown off the bench. Wonderful, ain't it?

And the funniest thing of all in that state where lots of people in this state who fall for that sort of hokey!

'Smatter, Bill?

If the Republicans don't have a care, one Sam Bratton will be the next United States senator from New Mexico. We submit that Herb Holt is the best bet of the Republicans and the only one Republican so far mentioned who is as able as Bratton, who has made such a magnificent record. No mere jolly good fellow can hope to compete with him. The Republicans must have a care in order to keep the state Republican. No cutting on the ticket next year. And then, too, it will be an off year to boot.—Las Cruces Citizen.

Al Smith is no penny-a-lyner. If he didn't get to be president, he has a contract with the Saturday Evening Post for half a dozen articles at $2.00 a word. Mr. Coolidge, who, by the way, was once president of the United States, receives $1.00 a word, from another magazine for similar work. There's just about that difference between the two men—a statement with which something like 15,000,000 benighted and unreasonable Americans will take issue.

few years and to the enlarged financial support granted by the state legislature, which he took as a sign of increased confidence in the institution.

In speaking of the comparative size of the University with larger institutions in the country, Dr. Zimmerman pointed out that an educational institution existed to foster ideals, and that this work had no connection with size.

In summing up the aims and accomplishments of the University, Dr. Zimmerman stated that University intended to make the most use possible of the laboratories that nature had provided for research in biology and archaeology and in Spanish, and added, "More in the University of New Mexico with a standard College of Arts and Sciences, a good beginning in professional training in engineering and education, a phenomenal growth in work leading to the Master's degree, and with correspondence courses multiplying, we have all and more than we can do with funds now available."

NEXT WAR WILL BE FROM THE AIR

New Orleans.—If America ever enters another war, it will be won or lost in the air, said Earnest Lee Jabnick, assistant secretary of the navy, in a stop over at his home here on a continental air tour. "The recent maneuvers at the Panama Canal zone told the story," he asserted. "The enemy was able to bring his airplane carrier within one hundred and fifty miles of the Pacific side of the Panama Canal and launch his bombers—and combat planes into the air before daybreak."

"Take this as an accepted fact in the world's naval circles. When you can get an aircraft carrier even 250 miles of your enemy's coast the majority of your airplanes will reach their objective and drop their bombs with deadly effect."

AGRICULTURAL WORLD CENSUS TO BE TAKEN

The undertaking of a world census of agriculture in 1930 was approved by the General Assembly of the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome in 1924, and the preliminary work of organizing the census was made possible by the cooperation of the International Education Board, the U. S. Department of Agriculture, and the International Institute of Agriculture. The census program and standard form of census questionnaires have been approved by the permanent committee and two general assemblies of the Institute, by the Diplomatic Conference on Economic Statistics that met in Geneva in November, 1925.

The purpose of the world census of agriculture is to provide more complete, accurate and comparable international statistics relating to agriculture, to provide a secure basis for annual crop reports and statistics, and to improve the agricultural statistical organization of many countries. It will be the first census ever attempted in all countries of the world in the same year and according to the same general plan. The International Institute of Agriculture, the International Institute of Statistics, and the Diplomatic Conference on Economic Statistics have recommended that the agricultural census be repeated every 10 years.

Mr. Hestbrook reports that the Central and South American countries visited on his last tour provide a large part of the world supply of coffee, cocoa, ivory, nuts, coconuts, banana, sugar and some other tropical products. He says there are great possibilities for agricultural development in these areas, although limited by the broken character of the country, and that progress will be slow until better roads, steamship lines and other means of transportation and communication are provided. Need is expressed also for further development in the agricultural departments of these countries.

"Who was it telephoned me all that stuff about keeping it a bird sanctuary?"

"Fred did," she answered. "I suggested it, and got the data out of a magazine. Rather clever, wasn't it? We were dreadfully upset when you bought it. You wouldn't have done so if you hadn't known Douglas personally, because everything, as a rule, went through Fred's hands. We tried everything—threats or violence, attempts to prey on your superstition. Everything failed but the attempt to make you feel that you were doing a noble thing in protecting the birds." She had a musical laugh. "You don't mind my laughing, do you?" she asked of Hanby. "It really was so quaint!"

"Go ahead!" he said grimly. "The laugh was on me then, but there's a useful old proverb about those who laugh last."

"Oh, you're on top now," she said; "and I'm not even asking you to be generous or forgiving. I'm asking you not to be silly and get a dreadful lot of notoriety. Your wife and daughters would hate it. We have lived here without your permission. That was wrong, but it can be adjusted. As God is my witness, we saved you from that dreadful little anarchist Smucker. That's a pretty good score for us. If the case comes to trial—the murder, I mean—I will testify to the fact that Smucker taunted Professor Burton, and that the professor killed him in self-defense."

"I deny it absolutely!" cried Burton. "This thing must be cleared up. I have my career to think of."

"And a most useful one, no doubt," Appleton said politely. "I shall be glad to testify that on the whole you behaved well. I shall assure the court that had I believed you were really the celebrated Professor Burton, I should not have detained you. He turned to Hanby. "We thought the poor man merely believed himself to be the learned professor."

"Lies, lies!" shouted Burton. "I have no man's blood on my hands. I demand that the police be called immediately!"

"What for?" Appleton asked. "To arrest me for trespass?"

"I am not thinking of trespass. I am thinking of murder."

"What murder?" Appleton asked pleasantly. "In murder cases there is always needed a corpus delicti—a murdered man. Where is he in this case? Can you produce him, professor?"

"Quite the best thing to do," said the woman, "is to let us go away. I have a good many things here, but I could leave tonight. I say tonight, because we don't want to be seen. These people—the professor and that nice-looking boy—have grievances against us, I admit, but to both instances it was their own fault. The boy assaulted a friend and almost killed him."

"Did you, Les? Junior demanded. "It was some fellow who hung around the house at night. Celia saw him, and called him a wild faun. Naturally I wasn't going to stand for that, so I laid for him and started something."

"Very jolly of you!" said the woman, smiling. "Wouldn't the yellow papers enjoy writing about it? I think you acted splendidly, but the reporters wouldn't. They make most fearful fun of youth and moonlight and romance. I'm sure Miss Hanby would enjoy it. We'll promise to be gone before daybreak tomorrow. You see, we haven't done any damage. Mr. Hanby, what is it to be?"

"I'll have to talk this over in private," he decided. "We will await your decision," Appleton said, smiling.

"But not here," returned Hanby. "I'm going to lock you up till I know what is to be the outcome." He smiled a little, and looked at the woman. "I'm a little afraid of you. I think you may be the brains of this whole affair. You shall occupy Leslie's cell for a while."

When they had gone, Burton turned to his cousin.

"Hill," he cried, "you don't think I killed that man?"

"Not for a minute; but you might have a lot of trouble explaining things, all the same. I'm relieved at his death, I'll admit. I didn't tell Dina, or even Bill, but Mrs. Smucker warned me that he had stolen some money from his old father, and had probably bought a gun. He was seen at the Grand Central, where he inquired how to get to Pine Plains. Mrs. Smucker said he had made threats to kill me. That ties up with Appleton's story. No matter what other reasons he had, I believe he did keep Smucker from trying to kill me."

"Do you mean to let them go, then?"

"It will depend on what we get from this thing that Les and Junior are bringing."

Jim Delaney had too much sense to try to escape from three armed men. The fortunes of war had changed, and he was already considering the favorable position of one who turns state's evidence. He sat where Hanby directed him. He could see that the owner of the Gray house was not to be trifled with.

"It's enough for you to know," Hanby began, "that Appleton and Belle are shut away in those cells. We know all about them. I'm going to ask you some questions. Lie if you want to."

"I'm not going to lie, boss," responded Jim eagerly. "That wouldn't do me no good now, would it?"

"None at all, but I don't want to influence you. Bill, take down his evidence, please. Just explain who you are, and why you are here."

"Luigi," Jim volunteered. "He's a wop from Sicily. Him and me are employed by Appleton. We've been storing the stuff and guarding it." Jim smiled ruefully. "I don't know who give us away, but you certainly came when it did the most harm."

"Naturally," Hanby commented, wholly ignorant of what the other meant. "I'm giving you the opportunity of telling me all about it in your own way."

"It all began," Jim declared, "when Appleton bought Seymour's booze. This Seymour was a rich man. His wife was from a swell family in the South, and he expected to live here all his life. He had the house on a lease, and he meant to buy, see? So he sends home to England for a stock of booze—whisky in barrels, and port in wood, and liqueurs, and champagnes, and everything a man wants. Them guys in England, when they're well fixed, buy wholesale, and they all have cellars and outlers to look after them. This Seymour, he put in enough so he'd never have to buy anything else if he lived to be a hundred. When his kids was drowned and his wife died, he went back home, and although he was past fifty, he got into his old regiment. Then his three brothers was killed in the war, and he's a lord or something. Money wasn't anything to him. He wanted to get out of this place, and he liked Appleton, so he took Appleton's check for the cellar. What does Appleton do but get Luigi to build a wall across one end of it? Luigi's a mason by trade. Appleton wasn't like me. I thought prohibition was a joke when it come in. I was tending bar down on Third avenue. Appleton had friends in Washington, and they knew booze was out for keeps."

Jim was here permitted to light a cigar, while Bill put down the main incidents in this recital.

"Yes," Jim went on reflectively, "that give Appleton the idea. He know booze was going to be scarce, so he started to make a place to cache it in till the price was right, and he could dispose of it all at one crack. He made new plans of the house, and left out the cellar where the stuff was stored. I guess that fooled you Mr. Hanby."

"It did," Hanby admitted. "He'll fool anybody," said Jim, who was enjoying the interest aroused by his story. "I'll say he's the slickest bird I've come across. He plans for the year after next—that's the worst of you be in. He had the lake partly filled in. There be had some negro laborers fix the stream, build a tunnel in here, and make the place livable. They didn't know what they was doing, and didn't care, so long as they was paid good. Then he put Luigi in as caretaker. You see the cops were after Luigi, and he didn't stand a chance with that build of his. Any dick could 'a nabbed him any time. Luigi likes to drink and sleep, and this was neat to him."

"What did you do?" Pelham asked.

and everyone is fixed, and now you bust up the party!"

"How were you going to have taken it away, if there's so much of it?"

"The road is going to be put under repair after dark, and all traffic will detour. That leaves us uninterrupted. We've got forty ten-ton trucks all ready. They'll get busy at the right time, and take out the stuff, which will be down at that lake by Boyle's barn. There won't be a hitch. This is a great fixing game, and I know how to fix the guys that might be in the way. This is big business," said Jim proudly, "Appleton expected to have two hundred thousand bucks tonight."

Jim was a gambler. He shrugged his shoulders. He had lost before. "Who killed Smucker?" Hanby demanded suddenly.

"Luigi. Served him right. He was trying to croak him, the dirty little rat! It was justifiable homicide, all right. Don't you waste no tears about Smucker. He come here to bump you off. I found him trying to set fire to the thicket, that night when we had that big gale, and the wind was blowing on to your house."

"Let's get this straight," said Hanby, when he had listened to other particulars. "You and Luigi were going to put these case goods in the stream, where they would float down to Boyle's place unseen. At Boyle's the same trucks that are working on the new road would be waiting. These would take the stuff and dispose of it. Is that right?"

"Positively, boss. Everything was fixed but your gang."

"Show me where it is hidden," Hanby said. "I wouldn't try to escape, if I were you. Those boys will shoot." At the edge of the large clearing, carefully stacked in piles, the searchers found thousands of cases of whisky, brandy, and old wines. Jim explained that there had been exhaustive experiments as to the length of time they would take to float downstream under the road and come to rest in Boyle's lake.

"It's a straightaway trip but for one place," Jim volunteered. "We found they jammed there sometimes, so we greased the boards, and now they ride pretty."

"What about the Seymour stuff under the lumber in the big cellar?" Hanby asked.

"That wasn't to go yet. I think Appleton was going to make a deal with you direct when the time came. He wouldn't have no difficulty in selling that. You can get any price for stuff that is absolutely old and genuine. There's lots of people afraid of getting wood-alcoholized yet."

Jim pointed to the cases all ready for the journey.

"This is all honest-to-goodness stuff," he went on, "but it ain't old, like it used to be, and it don't do a guy any good to lap it up when it's only two years old. I know. I've bin in the saloon business. Appleton trusted me because I'm off the stuff I keeps. Luigi, he drinks the cheapest sort of wine, like they used to make every morning in the red-link joints in the city. I'll say Appleton was a good picker. I don't yet get just how you busted in."

Hanby did not satisfy the fellow's zeal for knowledge. What followed puzzled Jim very much, but he made no remarks. He labored under the delusion that Leslie was anxious to shoot.

Nor did Luigi understand, but he, too, thought that his salvation lay in readiness to obey. Without pause he, Jim, Pelham, and Junior dumped the cases into the stream. Darkness was coming on when they finished. Jim had told them that by midnight the entire mass would be on Boyle's property, where Boyle and his sons would help to load them on the trucks.

"I can't keep the stuff," Hanby had explained to Burton, "and I want it seized on some one else's property. You can bet Appleton will keep his mouth closed!"

College women, girls with business experience, even talented singers and dancers, are helping to reclaim American deserts. Reclamation records in Phoenix, Ariz., show that many girls are abandoning careers to help their husbands tame the cactus and sage brush.

The Taos Valley Farms, Inc. were chartered by the New Mexico state corporation commission recently. The firm has authorized capital of $10,000 and begins business with $7,000. The incorporators are Gerson Gudorf, Emma Gudorf, John Hensch, J. H. Deuel and F. W. Beutler.

The bank at Lowell, Ariz., lost its case against W. M. Cox, Cochise county treasurer, when the State Supreme Court here ruled that debts incurred by a county which are not provided for in the county budget or authorized by the state tax commission as an emergency, are illegal and warrants issued for their payment are void.

The recent industrial employment survey report issued by the U. S. Employment Service of the U. S. Department of Labor, at Denver, states that there was sufficient farm help in Arizona available to take care of the increased demand for this class of labor. Some expansion was noted in dairying activities. Manufacturing plants operated at capacity, particularly those producing construction equipment. Metal mining increased and considerable new construction and development work is under way with the supply of skilled metal miners barely equal to the demand. A large number of skilled and unskilled laborers were employed on building and general construction which increased in volume. Among the larger projects under way or soon to start are a $2,000,000 improvement program at a copper mine consisting chiefly of the enlargement of a concentrator and power plant, the Stewart Mountain Dam, and considerable telephone construction work. Municipal improvements and highway construction absorbed many men. There was a slight increase in the forces employed in the railroad freight train department. There was an upward trend in employment in New Mexico throughout June and the surplus of labor apparent consisted principally of a small number of migratory seasonal workers. The farmers were busy with cultivation and harvesting activities and many laborers were employed in the cotton growing districts. There was a slight increase in operations in the plants manufacturing construction equipment. Metal mining activities increased and the supply and demand of this class of help were well balanced. Coal mining continued on the usual summer curtailed basis. Oil prospecting, particularly in the southeastern section of the state, gave employment to a number of men. The volume of building increased and various types of structures are under way including an airport and airway beacon and considerable telephone extension work. Municipal improvements and highway construction afforded employment to large forces. While the volume of employment increased in connection with building and construction projects, there was an ample supply of labor available for all demands.

The Lockett-McRae fleeces won first place in the second annual wool show held in Flagstaff, Ariz., in connection with the state wool growers' convention.

Governor R. C. Dillon of New Mexico accepted the telegraph invitation of Governors Bultrage of Idaho, Emerson of Wyoming, Patterson of Oregon and Dorn of Utah to attend a conference of governors and other officials of western states at Boise on August 26 and 27 to discuss problems relating to the development of public lands.

Variation Noticed in Sun's Rotation Period

The sun is as fickle in most of its characteristics as—well, supply your own simile. It has been found, however, that this inconsistency is probably a periodic function, so that the sun will vary from maximum to minimum in its behavior over a fixed period of years.

For example, Dr. Charles St. John of the Mount Wilson observatory in California has discovered that the period of rotation of the sun has been increasing. The sun, in other words, is slowing down. In 1876 the equatorial speed of the sun's rotation was 2.28 kilometers per second. In 1915 it was 1.96 and by 1928 the sun had slowed down to 1.89 kilometers per second. It is believed, however, that this decrease will not be constant, and that beginning in 1929 the sun will gradually pick up speed again until it reaches a maximum period of rotation within the next few years.

Kruger's millions are still the subject of much discussion. The latest story is that told by Mr. Horak, who was a commandant in the Boer forces. His story is that: "When the war was nearing its end, General Botha issued a notice ordering all British subjects who had fought for the Boers to proceed to Komatipoort and informed them that they would be given a passage to any country they wished. This was done in order that they would not be tried as traitors. Men to the number of about 2,500 gathered at Komatipoort and then Botha ordered that all bullion and gold in the possession of the state should be taken to Komatipoort and divided among the men as a reward for their services. The bars of gold were cut up and the men were given equal shares. Later the men sailed from Lourenso Marques."

A Modest Aim

Otto H. Kahn, the rich patron of the arts, was talking about art to a Chicago reporter.

"High brow artists," he said, "are content to make a living. The low brows want to make a fortune."

"A high brow wrote a play. It was put on at one of the little theaters, as high brow theaters are always called, in Greenwich Village."

"On the third or fourth night the author turned up and said anxiously to the box office man:

"Well, old horse, how's she going?"

"Oh, very much better," said the box office man. "Fewer and fewer leave now before the end of the show."

Dame Fashion Smiles
 By Grace Jewett Austin

Dame Fashion lately attended a large patriotic luncheon of women; old, middle-aged and young. And she thought that if she had a dollar for each one whom she saw wearing an ensemble she would have quite a plump pocket book. Furthermore, she decided that to take a feminine wearer, give her a silk crepe ensemble, where the coat has long lines and the fit of the shoulders is perfect; let her match it with hose, pumps, gloves and purse; let her choose a hat with tones partly to match and partly to harmonize—and just as she stands in that garb she is exactly right for the majority of the occasions that might arise, whether she is in New York, Chicago, on the Pacific sea coast, or at Paris, London or Constantinople. In short, it is a universal and multi-useful dictate of fashion.

One amusing bit of luncheon conversation ought to be quoted, for it has somewhat of clothes value. A friend was telling of her fondness for brightly colored and figured pajamas. A guest was kept for an unexpected night's visit, and a pair of these pajamas was offered for her use. At first she half refused them, declaring they would keep her awake! But she finally accepted and had no bad tales of broken rest. The sequel was that she was met a week later and somewhat sheepishly confessed that she had been made a convert and was now out buying gay pajamas for her very own!

At this same patriotic occasion Dame Fashion listened to a glowing address concerning many of the early patriots, and among other details, learned that President George Washington had such large and powerful wrists that special gloves had always to be made to order for him. And Dame Fashion wondered whether in his youth this was an anxiety and a cause for bashfulness to him, just as with so many young people, when some measurement is not just of the standard size. But with maturity comes content whether with the large head-size (for which, it might be remarked, the milliners are growing kinder, as long locks increase) or the large feet, which while perhaps not so graceful in pumps for the dance, are yet an excellent foundation for life's many forced marches.

To this same patriotic luncheon Dame Fashion had courage to wear her green shoes, and great was the comfort she took with them. Early in the season she asked her favorite shoe man if such a thing as a bargain in green shoes could not be found. Knowing the special last she likes, he shook his head and began to talk of an "order" for them, and "teen" dollars, so her word was "no, no, no." Then he suggested that she take a pair of last season's "champagne" shoes, now impossible to bring back to their tawny softness of hue, and try "lettuce green" enamel, of the best quality. Narrow satin ribbon of the same hue was bought for ties, and yet Dame Fashion waited a whole month for courage to wear them. But they were so comfortable—having been tested and tried the summer before—and with green touches in hat, bag and costume jewelry, she found they really gained quite a success—and all for 45 cents!

TON-LITTERS MAKE PROFITABLE PORK

Best Returns on Pigs When Fed to Full Capacity.

Producing a "ton-litter" of hogs—meaning a single litter which will weigh a total of 2,000 pounds or more when 130 days old—is more than a merely spectacular stunt which entitles its performer to membership in an agricultural honor club and may cost him more money than it brings in. Raising ton-litters is profitable, according to testimony of men who have raised them and who are now members of the Ohio Ton-Litter Honor club, sponsored by the agricultural extension service of the Ohio State university here. These men have reported to J. W. Wulchet, swine specialist in the department of animal husbandry, that their ton-litters have been the most profitable hogs ever produced on their farms.

"The reason is that the principles of producing ton-litters are the same as those of producing pork profitably in any amount," says Wulchet. "For one thing, it takes a large number of pigs in the litter to weigh a ton, and our records show that the cost of producing 100 pounds of pork depends primarily on the number of pigs marketed, per litter."

"In the second place, pigs which gain most rapidly make their gains on the smallest amount of feed, time and labor. Hogs are pork-producing machines, and like other machines, operate most efficiently and economically when operating at full capacity. And if fed to capacity for the most rapid gains, they reach the market at a more advantageous time than if they were given a limited ration and took more time to get ready for market."

Upright Swing Leads to Pivot

A UPRIGHT swinger does not always have an advantage on the flat swinger but he has the satisfaction of knowing that he is more orthodox and is nine times out of ten a more graceful and easier swinger. The upright swinger is always a pivoter. There is seldom any sway in his body at all. It will be seen in the picture here that the body has turned around to face the hole and that the clubhead has only completed about three-fourths of its journey. The ball is usually picked up clean with the upright club as it comes onto the ball directly from behind.

"Before My Baby Came"

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound puts new life into me and makes my work in the store and in the house easier. I took several bottles before my baby came and am always singing its praises to my friends. I recommend it for girls and women of all ages. It makes me feel like life is worth living, my nerves are better and I have gained pep and feel well and strong."—Mrs. A. R. Smith, 808 S. Lansing Street, St. Johns, Michigan.

They've All Got It

Mayor Walker of New York, was defending a statesman with a swelled head.

"It's no wonder his head is swelled," said the mayor. "Look how wise and successful he is. All great men have swelled heads. Look at Alexander."

"Pardon me, one of his generals, attempted to give Alexander advice after the victory of Issus."

"These peace offers, sire, are superb," Parmenio said. "I would accept them if I were Alexander."

"But Alexander gave a scoffing laugh and answered:

"Yes, so would I, if I were Parmenio."

Toy Balloon Traveled Far

A Swedish toy balloon recently made a safe crossing of the North sea, and landed in Yorkshire, in England. It was given away, with many hundred others, by a department store in Malmoe, in the southern Swedish province of Scania, and set loose by a youngster there. On the diminutive gas bag was printed the name and address of the store, for advertising purposes. The other day the manager of the store received it in the mail from a person in Yorkshire. It was deflated and wrapped in paper, but undamaged.

Corsets—Foundations
Extend From Waist Down

Corsets in the new mode are scarcely entitled to the name, for they differ entirely from the old-fashioned article, says a fashion writer in the New York Times. The latest model is a step-in which covers the figure as any combination does with the various delicate lines. It is a supple, boneless creation of fine silk, satin, crepe, lace and net, finished at the top with an edging of ribbon and at the bottom with a lingerie or lace trim and slashed, with lacet lace, net or elastic, with converts the lower part into panties.

Some of the new designs of this style—foundations as they are called in some shops—extend only from the waist down, the bandeau worn separately. Others are molded to cover the bust, and the neckline is cut to match the different styles of gowns. One that is especially designed for hot weather is made of fine flesh pink net, of double or triple thickness, with soft elastic set in the sides and forming the girdle. The bandeau is made of net, glove silk and elastic, and is held with satin ribbons over the shoulder.

Brassieres this season are either quite plain, of silk jersey, glove silk, crepe, in flesh tint or a color to match the panties, or they are made of lace and sometimes combined with ribbon. Sliding is often used instead of the usual elastic. Some models are made all of laced ribbon.

Step-in girdles now worn by the slim and youthful this summer. They are fashioned of rayon or silk, with panels front and back joined to elastic at the sides and widening over the hips. Many of the fancy girdles are shaped to give at least a little support in front, while having nothing above the belt at the back. Garter elastics are attached. One style that serves as a garter belt is narrow but shaped to fit comfortably and firmly over the hips.

Prevent Bone Disease by Feeding Minerals

The mineral substances which go into bone consist largely of compounds of lime and phosphorus derived from the food. In any case they are primarily derived from the soil, writes Dr. L. Van Es in the Capper's Farmer.

In some regions the soil is poor in lime and the vegetation it supports may not provide live stock with a sufficient quantity. Or, the mistake may be made of selecting feeds poor in bone building materials. In both cases, animals may come to suffer from bone softening because there always is an expenditure of the lime-phosphorus complex. Evidence tends to show that to utilize bone building materials the animal body must be exposed to direct sunshine. When sunshine is lacking or when the minerals are deficient, the bone is inadequately formed or it eventually softens. Such diseases as leg weakness in chickens, rickets and paralysis in swine, and the loin disease in cattle are traceable to these factors.

Animals should be so fed and kept that bone disease may be avoided. If the natural foodstuffs are deficient, supplementary feeds, such as milk or milk by-products, tannage or a small amount of steamed bonemeal must be added to the ration. Direct sunshine usually is not difficult to procure, but when it is, recourse should be had to codliver oil, especially for young animals kept indoors.

The Correct Way to Play a Full Mashie Shot

THE idea that a full mashie shot is one where the club finishes well around the back is erroneous. It is enough that the driver should go the full route. A mashie shot above all others should be compact. This means that the clubhead goes into the ball with a direct follow through toward the objective point. The club, even for a full shot, is not taken back very far, not more than three-quarters way at the most. The finish of the swing would not be any further around than the top of the swing.

The foot and knee action are about the same as in a longer iron shot and the body will do its share of the work. This is why an easy, graceful swing carries the ball a long way. Providing, of course, it has been perfectly timed.

Turned Off

The other evening while little Robert, whose home is in Newman street, was getting ready to retire, he suddenly reached toward the top of his head and made a motion as if he were turning a knob. "I can't grow now," he remarked.

"Why not?" questioned his mother.

"Because I'm turned off," he replied.

Crepe de Chine Scarf, Vestee Add Smartness

There is another very distinct type of chiffon dress that has made its appearance this season. It is the tailored chiffon dress, tucked or plaited, and is extremely popular with busy women who must have dresses that can be worn for luncheon and shopping as well as for tea and even dinner. These are often plain or combinations of plain and printed chiffon. There are two-piece dresses with printed blouses and finely plaited plain skirts. A very interesting model in leaf-green chiffon with a busy design in slightly darker green has a chic little plaited basque collar and border. Its corsage is rather snug, and it has a narrow sports belt.

Stiffer Silks for Fall, According to Prediction

Silks of rather stiff quality such as taffeta, satin faille, metals and erect pile velvet are included among the exclusive fabric fashions for the fall. Canton crepes, flat crepes and satin crepes will have style value in the order mentioned. Both plain and printed chiffon crepes reach the other extreme in weight and texture.

Printed moires, especially in the plaid designs are very interesting in the new domestic silk collections. Transparent velvet also is shown in printed patterns.

In colors the capucine or nasturtium shades find first place, then green, red, blues and browns.

Centers for External Parasites in Old Lots

While in continuous use, old hog lots and houses may become centers for external parasites such as lice and mange mites and more death-dealing microscopic organisms, those that cause pig diseases such as scurvy, scours, infectious nasal catarrh, bronchitis, infectious edema, swine pest, undesirable sequels to wound infections, eczema, necrobacillosis of the skin, nose, stomach, and intestines, and various types of pneumonia. Besides all these troubles, there are the ever-present round worm eggs.

Hog Cholera Prevented by Right Use of Serum

Let us not forget that hog cholera has not been entirely and completely eradicated in this country. Let us not forget also that the disease may be easily prevented by making pigs immune with the proper use of serum and virus. Let us keep in mind that after the disease gets a good start in a herd of pigs there is little that can be done to stop it. While we are at it let us be reminded that it costs less to luminate weanling pigs than 150-pound shoats. They are also more easily handled.

Higher Waistlines Are Indicated for Autumn

No doubt you have wondered whether very unusual silhouettes will distinguish the new fall coats. There is a hint of the lines that may prevail. The princess silhouette seems to be very prominent as is also a tendency toward a back flare. Higher waistlines are indicated in nearly all models as shown so far. A dipping back hemline was noticed on one striking model.

Here is an attractive frock for the vacationist. It is of blue rayon and wool and depends upon its lines and touch of charrusse in the crepe de chine skirt and vestee for its smartness.

Feeding Orphan Lamb

If the orphan lamb cannot be given to another ewe, it may be raised satisfactorily on a bottle. Of course it is better to get another ewe to adopt the lamb if possible. When necessary to raise a lamb on a bottle, it will need to be fed several times a day at first. The number of feedings may be reduced until by the time the lamb is six weeks old, three or four times a day will be sufficient. A creep should be provided where some ground grain may be kept for the lambs.

Feet Should Be Well Apart in Driving

TO MAKE a successful drive one must always look first to the stance. Unless one is an expert, laced feet should be well apart, a preventative against a sway or false movement of the body. It is very difficult for the body to get very far out of line when the feet are spread the right distance.

The right distance is not hard to determine. One can tell quickly if the feet are too far apart, as there will be a lack of security or the feeling that one is not balanced just right to hit a hard blow. The body will feel less assertive and the main force will come from the legs and arms with the body doing its part at just the right moment—the impact.

Bound Over

The Kingtons, father and son, of Ancho, charged with the killing of Claude Wilson, the shooting, from which death followed, having been done July 6, were given a preliminary hearing before Justice Harvey last Saturday. The state introduced the ante-mortem statement of Wilson. The nurse, who was present when the statement was made and who witnessed the dying man's signature, was called to verify the document. The defense offered no testimony. At the conclusion of the hearing, the defendants were remanded to jail without bond to await the action of the grand jury.

Army Plane Lands

Major Oscar Westhaver, in command of the United States Air Corps, at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, dropped down from the clouds Tuesday morning in a big army plane, landing at the base ball park. He is a brother of Sister Mary Eugenia, of the St. Rita School here, and, in his flight, stopped for a short visit, remaining over the night. Major Westhaver was accompanied by Sergeant McNeally as mechanic. The major is a noted aviator in the army corps, and before graduating from the government flying school at San Antonio, Texas, won the highest pilot's rating, and at the same field the war department decorated him with the Distinguished Service Medal for his work in the World War. A few years ago, he won the national balloon races, and competed in the international event as the United States entry.

The picture "Beauty and Bullets" is full of thrills and action that call for athletic ability and good horsemanship. The showing of this picture will give the friends and admirers of Mr. Wells an opportunity to see him taking the leading role in a good western action picture.

Cloudburst in The San Andreas

Las Cruces, July 30—Huge lakes stood for miles on the flats north of San Augustine pass Tuesday morning as the result of rains of cloudburst proportions which fell on the east slope of the San Andreas mountains Monday afternoon.

The rains were general throughout this section and roads from Las Cruces to Alamogordo were in bad condition. Roads to other sections were muddy but passable.

Personal Bias

I realize that in a matter of this sort every man is inclined to look at the question from his own personal standpoint. In the course of his sermon, a preacher once asked the question: "In time of trial, what brings us the greatest comfort?"

"An acquittal," shouted a low-brow who should never have been admitted by the usher.

Newell Orders Slot Machines be Closed out

Las Cruces, July 30.—J. Benson Newell, district attorney for Dona Ana, Torrance and Lincoln counties returned to his office Tuesday after holding court at Estancia for three weeks and announced that he had notified all sheriffs in his district to comply with Governor Dillon's orders to close out slot machines.

Mr. Newell said any attempt to operate slot machines in the future in this district would be vigorously prosecuted, and that machines being operated under the guise of vending machines must also be abandoned.

Sheriff Alfred Burch of Otero county Monday announced that slot machines being operated at Cloudcroft had been closed out immediately after Governor Dillon's letter to the district attorneys, and that no machines were being operated in Otero county.

STEEL ECLIPSE

Starts sooner pumps longer

Two windmills stood just across the road from each other. With the first sign of a breeze one started up smoothly and quickly. When the breeze became a wind, the other started with a groan and lumbered away only to stop as the wind died in the road. Then it stopped as abruptly as it had started, while the other continued pumping for some time—then it finally came smoothly to rest with the last breeze of the day's breeze.

That is the difference between a cheap windmill and just a windmill. It is the difference between accurately machined and fitted gears and ordinary cast gears; the difference between turned, ground and polished shafts and ordinary steel shafts.
