"Panics" and "Prosperity"

Washington, D. C.—"If things that have occurred in the last year had taken place with a Democrat in the White House, and present economic conditions existed with that party in power, not a Republican spokesman or organ but would be crying about 'Democratic hard times,'" says a statement issued by the Democratic National Congressional Committee, of which Representative Joseph W. Byrns, Tenn., is Chairman.

"It has become difficult to tell the difference between 'Republican prosperity' and a so-called 'Democratic panic,'" the statement continues.

"With steadily growing centralization of power at Washington, the multiplication of boards and commissions, many of them with great power to control or affect the currents of business, the Federal administration is in a large degree responsible for economic conditions. During recent years, the country has heard much about 'Republican prosperity.' When prosperity existed, the Republican administration claimed credit for it. By the same logic, it must accept responsibility for adverse conditions.

"There has been prosperity and there is a degree of it now, but it is not general, and it should do no harm to point out that while some lines are making large profits, others are in a state of depression, some of them showing actual losses. One but has to look at the recent Treasury Department statement on 1928 income tax returns to see that prosperity has been in the main for a few, while the masses, the average wage earners, clerks and farmers, find the struggle difficult.

"Returns for 1920 showed the number of persons with a net income of one million dollars or more increased from 290 in 1927 to 496 in 1928. Their total net income was more than one billion dollars, so that approximately 500 individuals had incomes of about 4 per cent the total income of all the more than four million persons filing returns. Those with incomes of $100,000 or more each, numbered 15,780. Their total net income was about four and a quarter billion dollars, or nearly one-sixth the total income of all the more than four million people who filed income tax returns. Unquestionably those few individuals, numbering only one in every eight thousand of the total population, have been prosperous, or were until the stock market panic last fall.

"But what of the millions of farmers, laboring men, clerks, small struggling business men and others? Contrast with the huge incomes and profits of a few individuals and some of the giant corporations the condition of the farmer. The Department of Agriculture reports for the crop year 1928-29 that the per farm 'reward for labor and management' was only $669. This mere pittance is all the return the average farmer got for the labor of himself and the members of his family.

"Attention has heretofore been called to the heavy increase in bank failures last year, and the large number of business houses closing doors. Bradstreet's report for January, just issued, shows commercial failures for that month to have increased 29.6 per cent over December, 8.4 per cent over January of last year and to be 30 per cent above the January average for the last five years. The unemployment situation is serious. In Washington, according to the daily newspapers, five thousand skilled workers are idle, and several times as many common laborers. This is the situation in a city where the Federal government is spending millions of dollars of the taxpayers' money for building construction. It must be more serious in other cities where Uncle Sam cannot step into the breach.

"These conditions reflect a serious situation, and are an indictment of the Republican administration to the same degree that it appropriated credit to itself for prosperity when it did exist."

The Methodist Pastor

The local Chamber of Commerce received a most interesting letter this week from the mayor and secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of New Franklin, Missouri. A clipping from the News, published at the same place, accompanied the letter, and it, like the letter, relates very interestingly the activities of the present pastor of the Carrizozo Methodist church, who filled a similar office at New Franklin for a period of five years. Both letter and clipping have such a ring of sincerity that, coming unawares, we feel that good fortune was with us when Rev. Jno. L. Lawson was assigned to this station. Our acquaintance with the new pastor, though brief, convinces us that he is just the kind of man his old friends in the "Show Me State" picture him to be, and in presenting this commendable letter to our readers we derive much pleasure, and, at the same time, furnish an agreeable surprise to the pastor. The letter reads:

Chamber of Commerce,
Carrizozo, N. M.
Gentlemen:

As Secretary of the New Franklin Chamber of Commerce and Mayor of the City of New Franklin I know that one of the things a Chamber of Commerce is supposed to do is to keep a close touch and inventory on the resources of the town in which such body functions.

Good fortune has cast your way one of the finest men that I have ever seen my pleasure and good fortune to know in the Rev. John L. Lawson who as I have recently been informed goes to your city as Minister of the Methodist Church at that place. That you may not think that I am biased in this matter I will say to you that I am not a member of his church but that these words have been prompted by my knowledge of his work and worth here both in and out of the church. Laying aside the value of a church presided over by a good minister to a community I will say and you will agree with me to the near future that this man will be of as much good to you in your work as any man you may have had in your city in the past or is there at the present time.

This man is a builder in every sense of the word, regardless of whether it may be buildings of a material or a spiritual nature. He accomplished both while with us to an amazing degree. You can call upon him for anything that is for the betterment of your town and you too will be surprised to see how much he can accomplish in his quiet unassuming way. You can't hitch him wrong.

My idea in writing you is merely to apprise you of the assets which have come your way unsolicited and hope that you may put him right in the harness and begin to realize on your strike. Don't treat him with reserve and start to handle him with gloves, but let him help you and go right ahead just like you would with any other good red blooded man.

For any courtesies you extend him I will be very happy and you will be well paid.

C. B. Duncan, Mayor.

Ft. Stanton News

The Fort Stanton Eagles will play Alamogordo in Alamogordo Feb. 19 and will play the return game Sunday night, 7:30 in the Captain Gym. These will be good games which ever way the score goes.

Horseback riding and small picnics have been in order all week. The O. T. Shop is putting on a big picnic for about forty of the patients. These are affairs the boys all enjoy. The "cats" are always special and every one at this time of the year delights in the sunshine and getting out in the hills.

The Rev. Edward Smith, an Episcopalian minister, has arrived to take charge of the Chapel of the Redeemer. We are pleased with his appearance and trust his ministry here will be one of much benefit.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Hobbs and children and Mr. and Mrs. Tom Burleson were guests of Commissioner Allie Stover and family at Tinnie Sunday. Other guests were the Ramey family of Lincoln, and the Nelsons of Tinnie. All enjoyed the outing, the beautiful dinner and the friendship such meetings inspire.

Mr. Jack Herting, owner of the Fort Stanton store, made a business trip to Carrizozo Monday. He was accompanied by Harold Decker of the filling station.

Several of the children were out of school on account of severe chest colds. All are better at this writing. We hope to see the Lions' and the Tigers' local basketball teams in "deadly" conflict once more; so hope all the children can soon return to school.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Anderson were guests of the John Fosters at Captain Sunday. We are glad to welcome the family back in Captain, and, as we have said before, what's the use of leaving Lincoln county? The pot of gold is here if we can only find it.

Feb. 14th, St. Valentine's day, was observed at the Fort Stanton School after lessons were over. Many pretty valentines, some of them the work of the children themselves, were placed in the valentine box. Games were played, and a game appropriate for the day was pinning the arrow on the heart. Prizes for this were awarded Velma Burleson and Louise Cooper, while the consolations went to Max and Frank Paget. Candy was presented to the children by Mrs. Moorman and Miss Harris. Saturday, Feb. 22, will be observed as a Post Holiday.

Automobile Accident Toll

According to a bulletin issued by one of the largest life insurance companies in the world, "one-third of all the accidental deaths among policyholders of this company, during the larger part of last year, were caused by the automobile. It is the only form of accidental death now on the increase in this country.

During 1929, 31,500 people lost their lives in motor accidents. This was the largest casualty record in history, representing a 13 per cent increase over 1928. Motor vehicle registrations increased but eight per cent during the year.

To quote further from the insurance report, among the insured the automobile has caused as many deaths as measles, scarlet fever, diphtheria and whooping cough—the four principal children's diseases—combined. More than two per cent of deaths from all causes are, due to automobile accidents.

We have been pitifully inadequate in dealing with the careless, irresponsible, drunken or otherwise negligent drivers, who leave death and destruction in their wake. Compulsory insurance laws fall as accident preventatives.

Every town and state should modernize its traffic laws and discipline those who disobey them. Such a nation-wide program would decrease the accident rate.

This automobile accident menace is every citizen's problem—Industrial News Bulletin.

Alas!

(Santa Fe New Mexican)

"The evil that men do lives after them; the good is oft interred with their bones."

Let us hope that some good was interred with the osseous remains of the late lamented New Mexico legislature.

(Today, after the too-hopeful gesture of the governor in proposing a possible special session to fix the motor vehicle tax, a glance at the laws made and provided discloses that there is not a Chinaman's well-known chance.

We are sewed up, alas, in an iron-clad contract to maintain the present scale of auto license fees for ten long weary years, in the course of which period the price of cars may decrease 60 per cent, or airplanes or gliders may retire the automobile to that oblivion where Dobbin now munches his oats in idleness.

The use of gasoline as fuel, in fact, may be archaic and antiquated, not to say absolutely extinct, while we are still paying the motor license fee of the present day, to maintain the honor and credit of the grand old state of New Mexico, SS, as solemnly and legally pledged.

The Battling Legislature will live long in song and story. We've never a chance to forget it. And for ten years especially its memory is going to be vividly and gorgeously green in the heart of every motorist.

Public Interest Aroused

The public interest that is now being aroused in our crime-situation is a healthy sign of future action.

President Hoover's committee on law enforcement has made its first report and suggests that American judicial action be simplified and strengthened.

One of the most interesting factors in the situation is the agreement among many authorities that certainty of punishment, rather than severity alone, is a preeminent crime deterrent.

Although law-ridden, America is the greatest law-breaking country in the world.

It is time to stop passing crime breeding legislation; namely, thousands of new laws which make involuntary law-breakers out of otherwise law-abiding citizens, on the theory that an "anti this" or "anti that" law will curb crime. If the criminal obeyed laws the penitentiaries would have been empty years ago.

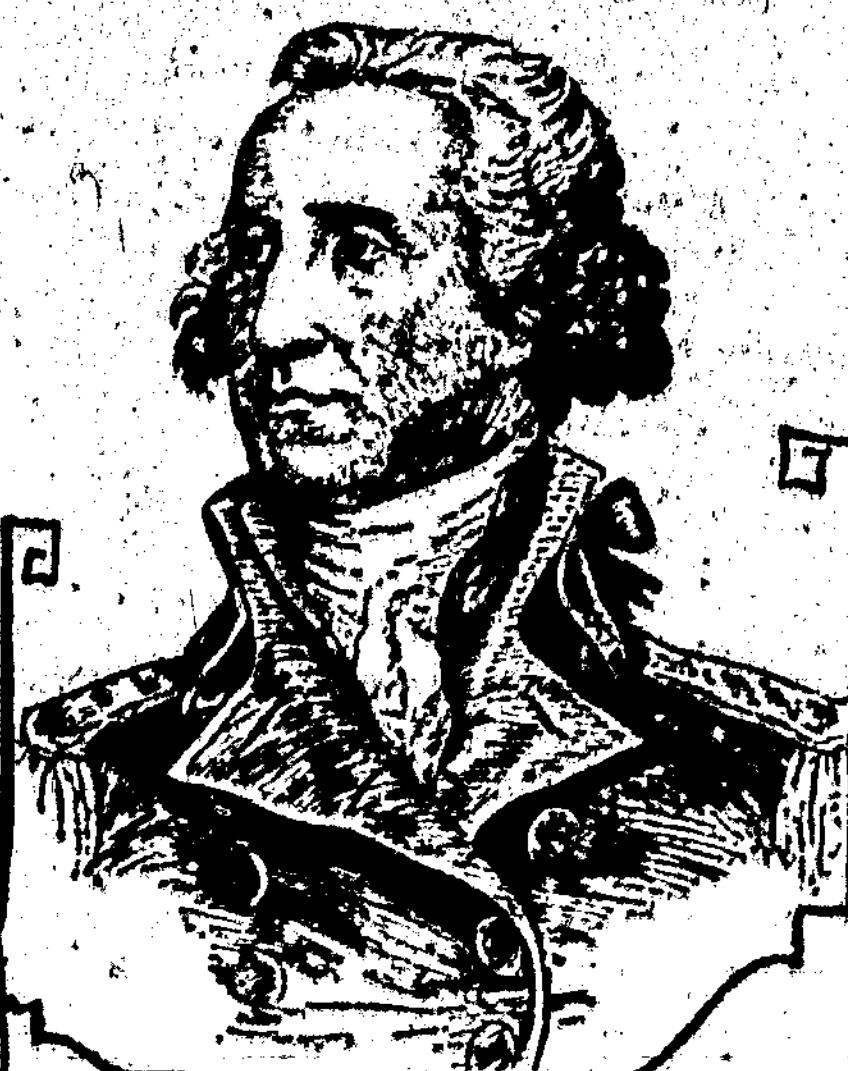

Moral: Law enforcement, not more laws—Manufacturer.

The federal farm board is trying to make it plain to the farmers that they can not do much for the farmer unless he lowers production. If the farmer does that by organization he does not need a farm board.

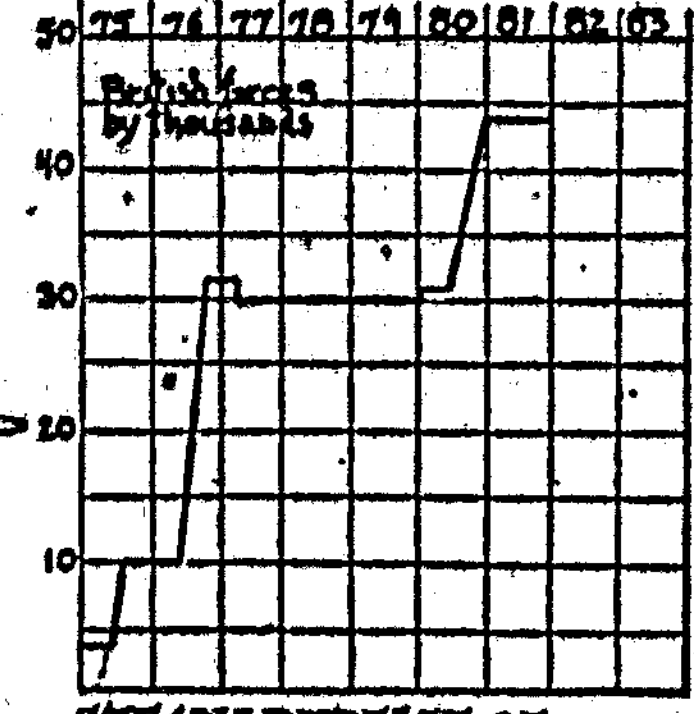

The Savior of the States

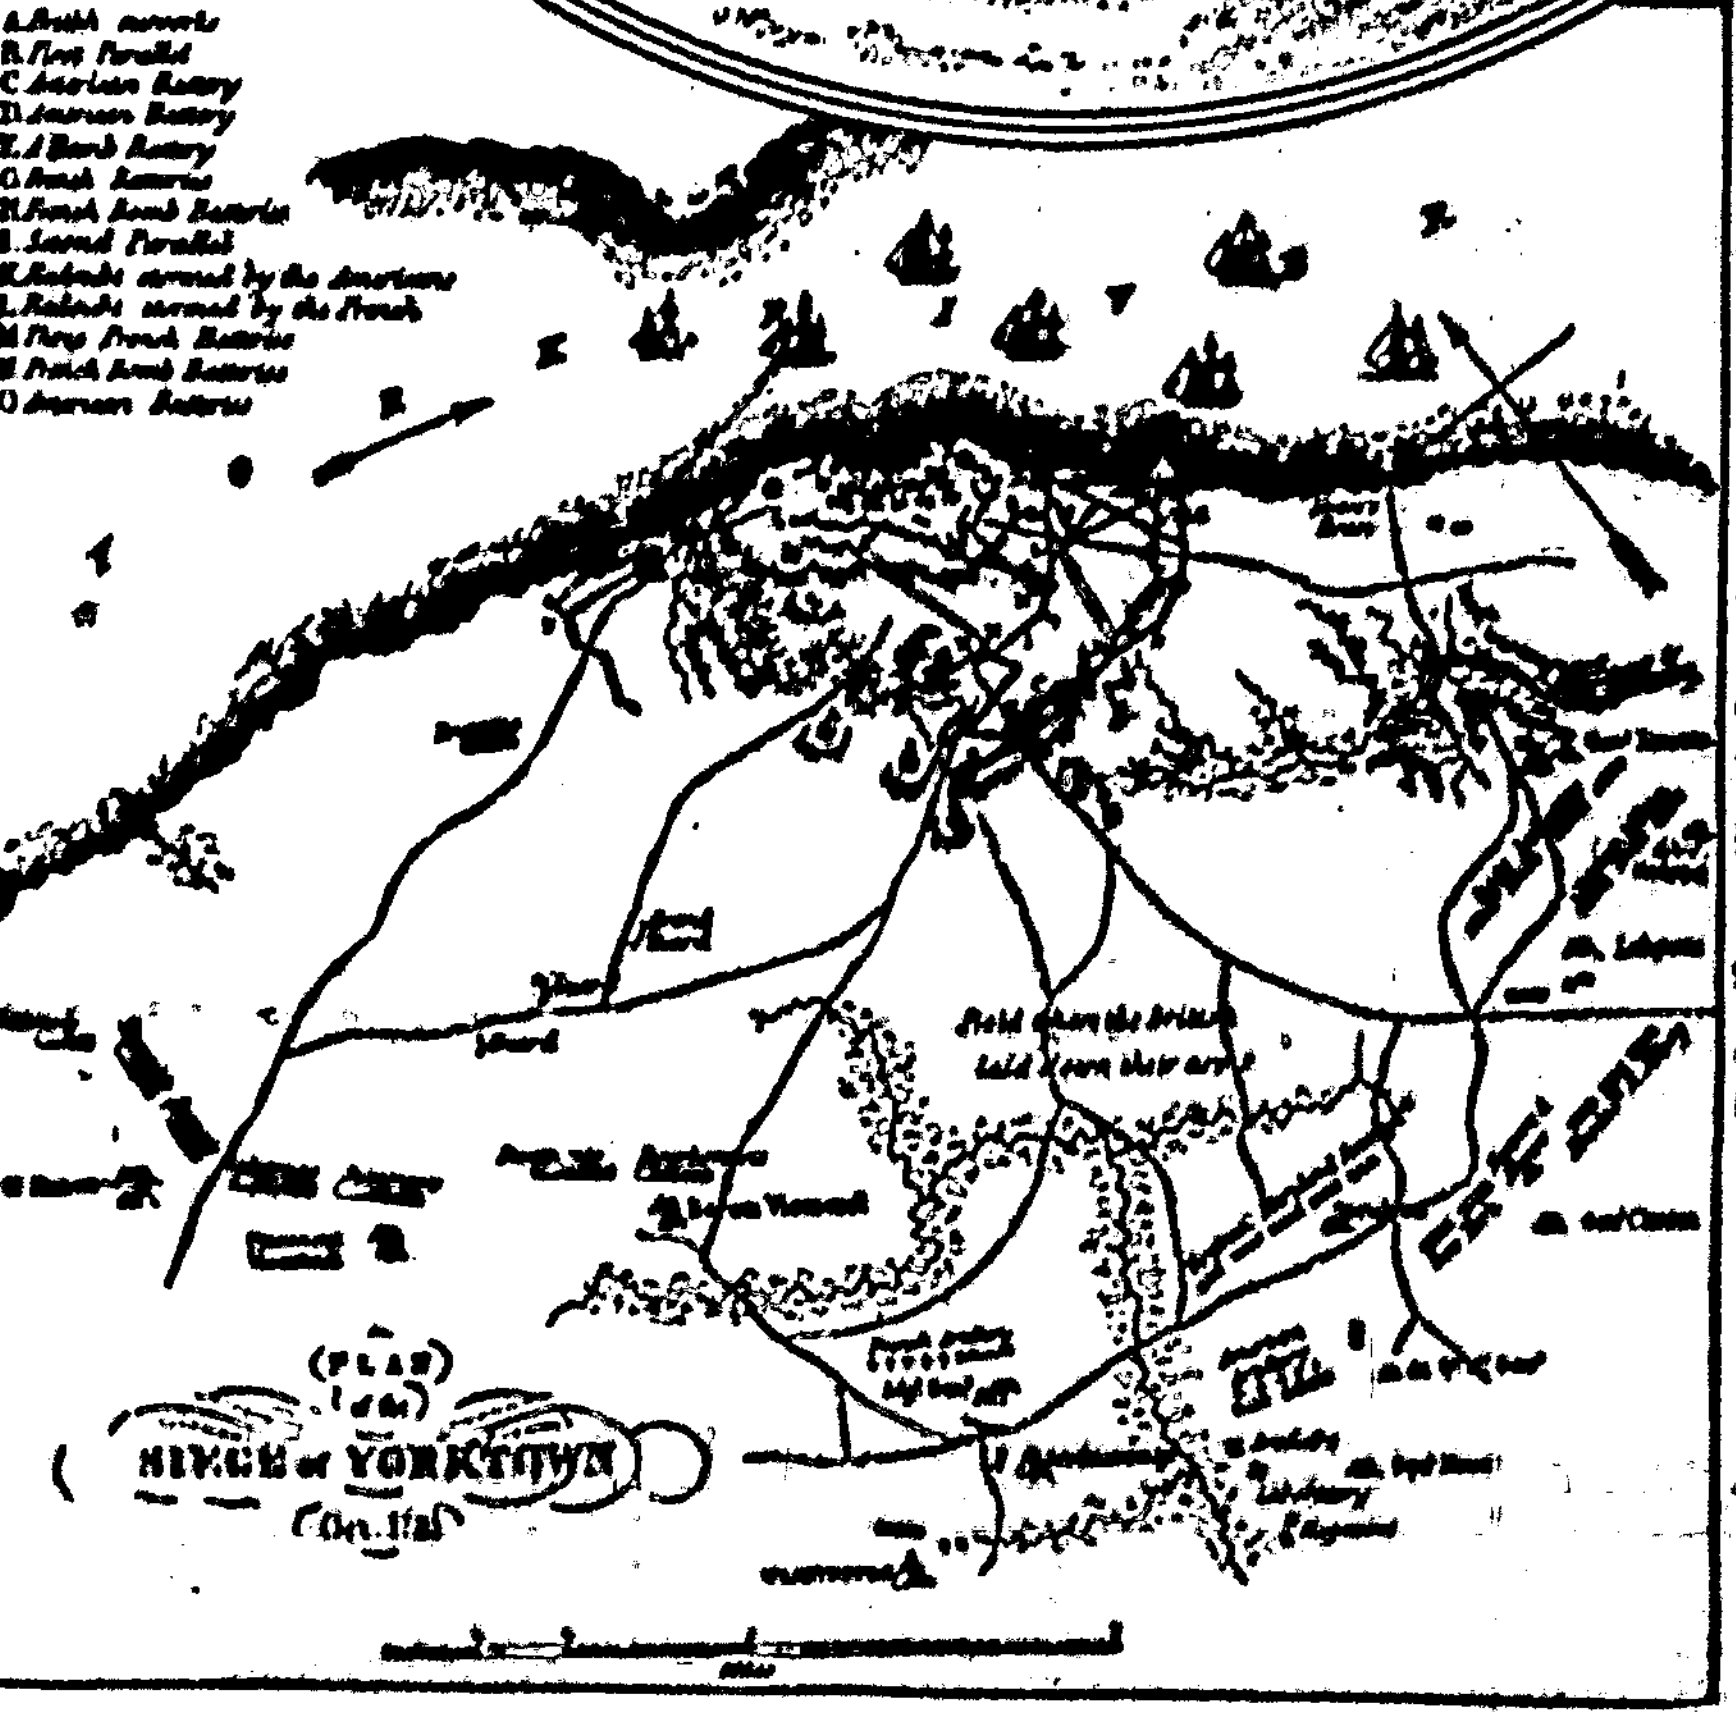

WASHINGTON AT VALLEY FORGE

GENERAL WASHINGTON

Maps and diagrams from Hughes' "The Savior of the States," courtesy William Morrow and Co. "Washington at Valley Forge" from Lossing's "Life of Washington."

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

It is common knowledge to most Americans that the greater part of the credit for winning the War of the Revolution, and the independence of the Thirteen Colonies belongs to one man—George Washington. But how many Americans, except possibly a few historians, know that Washington won, not so much because of the aid given him by the majority of the people in those colonies, but rather in spite of them? Yet that is the simple fact. And it is a fact which is presented so convincingly in a new book that to deny it or attempt to conceal the fact that Washington's gigantic task was made all the more difficult by the "corruption, treachery, and cowardice" of the very people he was trying to serve is to shamefully deny him the honor and reverence due him for accomplishing his task. That book is the third volume in Rupert Hughes' biography, published recently by William Morrow and Company and bearing the appropriate title of "The Savior of the States."

The graft and profligacy of the times was stupendous, and it is unfair to Washington as well as to truth to conceal any longer the fact that the generation of Americans which coincided with the Revolution was far from being the supremely virtuous race its descendants have been pleased to pretend," says Mr. Hughes. "I had either to suppress Washington's innumerable demerits or do something to justify them. Offensive as this material will perhaps appear to certain types of patriots, I regret that I could publish only a slight skimming of the vast cauldron of corruption, greed and selfishness." He then continues:

If the Americans of that time had been what their posterity imagine, or anything like it, they would have driven the British into the sea in a few weeks and set up a government of ideal beauty immediately. Because they were what they were and were not what they were not, poor Washington was never able to give his military abilities a real test, but was compelled to spend most of his time running away from a less enemy or keeping a safe distance while he sent out heart-breaking vain appeals for food, money, aid, shelter, soldiers, helpful legislation, the desertion of mutual jealousies, some unity of action.

The reader of this volume will feel that the author of it has a very fair opinion of the majority of Americans contemporary with Washington. This is true, and if there were room for more evidence there would be evidence of a still lower opinion—an opinion almost as low as Washington's own.

A few cowards, a few traitors, a few scoundrels and a few fools, suffered all the hardships and saved the country in spite of itself, while the majority ran away or kept aloof, grew fat and looked on. That was Washington's infinitely repulsive condition, and it is an insult to his memory to conceal it. Indeed,

The more I read of the American Revolution the more I am convinced that it could have succeeded. I can hardly believe that it did. As a matter of fact it never did succeed in the way it was meant at the beginning, and the results were not at all what they were expected to be at the end of it.

Insofar as the writer of those lines has been listed among the "detractors of Washington" and the publication of the first volume of his biography four years ago resulted in a lengthy controversy in which he was misquoted, misinterpreted and attacked by many who had not even read his book and depended upon hearsay for their slanders on the subject, the following lines in the new volume are significant:

The more I study Washington the greater and better I think him, yet I am not trying to prove him great or good. I am trying solely to describe him as he was and let him speak for himself. He was a man of such tremendous undeniable achievement that he does not need to be bolstered with propaganda, protected by a priestcraft of suppression, or celebrated by any more Fourth of July oratory.

Since in this book George Washington "speaks for himself" it would be a truly patriotic duty for Americans to read in Washington's own words of the agonies of mind and body which he suffered in their behalf and to realize, perhaps for the first time, the wisdom, the valor and the selfless devotion of the man whose birthday we celebrate on February 22. If they did that, perhaps the celebration of that day would have a new meaning for them.

This new volume in Hughes' biography begins with "The Dawn of '77." For Washington it was a cheerless dawn for "the year 1770 ended for him as a twelvemonth of almost unrelieved heart-breaks for which he could blame only his fellow-citizens." Written in his pages were the plot to assassinate him in New York, the failure of the expedition against Canada, the defeat and slaughter on Long Island, the shameful panic and stampede of his troops at Harlem, the defeat at White Plains, the loss of Fort Mifflin and Fort Mifflin and his flight across New Jersey with his army melting away so that he crossed the Delaware with only 3,000 of the 15,000 men he had had before the battle of Long Island.

His brilliant victory at Trenton the day after Christmas was one bright spot in the whole dismal year and when he would follow up that victory he found himself balked. For the terms of enlistment of the Continental troops would soon end and the only way to hold them was by offering a bounty. He could expect no help from Congress which had fled from Philadelphia at the approach of General Howe. However, as he wrote to Congress on January 1, 1777, "After much persuasion, and the exertions of their officers, half or a greater proportion of those from the eastward have consented to stay six weeks on a bounty of ten dollars." But nearly half of those who promised to stay changed their minds and left for home—leaving the bounty with them! So when he crossed the Delaware again on New Year's day he had 1,500 men, as compared to 1,000 with which he had crossed for the attack on Trenton.

With this slender force he converted the odds against him into an almost insuperable advantage.

one—how he outwitted Cornwallis, who thought he had the "old fox" in a trap, how he defeated the British force at Princeton, killed 100 and took 200 prisoners and then retreated safely to Morristown, while "Cornwallis went puffing on to Brunswick expecting to find Washington ahead of him."

But this was the last triumph which he was to enjoy for a long time. Before him during that year of the "three arenas" were the failures at Brandywine and Germantown, failures on the part of his officers but charged up against him because he was the commander. And in the north his rival, Gates, who aspired to succeed him as commander-in-chief, was triumphing over Burgoyne at Saratoga. Before him, too, was the threat of the conspiracy to supplant him, inaccurately known as the "Conway cabal" since, as Hughes shows, General Conway was in reality the cat's paw for others, and the terrible winter at Valley Forge.

Nor was 1778 much better. Against the recovery of Philadelphia, the success at Monmouth and the arrival of a French fleet to aid the patriots, must be checked the steady decline in men and money which threatened a total collapse of the fight for freedom. The same can be said of 1779 which ended in starvation and stagnation in the winter camp at Morristown. "Though it never supplanted Valley Forge in popular memory," says Hughes, "Morristown was the scene of far more cruel hardships for the army."

But if these years had been bad, 1780 was to prove the year of crowning disaster. There was the defeat of Gates at Camden and the loss of nearly all of the South to the British. There was the treason of Benedict Arnold and the failure of the French aid to bring any decisive result. And then at the beginning of 1781 came the mutiny of the Pennsylvania and New Jersey troops. But if the new year opened with despair it was destined to close with a triumph, the greatest in Washington's career as a military leader. For October brought Yorktown, the surrender of Cornwallis and the victory which assured the success of the fight for liberty.

This brief and necessarily inadequate epitome of those four fateful years can only hint at what the "Savior of the States" endured during that time. The full story of it cannot even be told in Hughes' thick volume of 700 pages, although it tells enough to justify his declaration that he cannot understand how the Revolution ever could have succeeded. Here is an amazing story of all the worst in human nature from which could be drawn up a terrific indictment of our forefathers. But depressing as that story is it but serves to throw into higher relief the gigantic figure of the man whom Americans ever since he suffered so deeply and surely so mightily in their behalf have come to honor as the "Father of His Country." If for no other reason than to show by contrast the greatness that was George Washington's that story should become a familiar one in the homes of the present day and of posterity.

Greek Names Rooted in History of Old Turkey

In connection with the new name that Constantinople is to have in the future, it is stated that the Kemalist government of Turkey by adopting "Istamboul" as a substitute for Constantinople has not succeeded in eradicating the essentially Greek etymology of the word. In the Turkish vernacular the city of the Constantines is named Istamboul, from the Greek Estin (poll), which, rendered into English, means "in the capital," or "in the city," as Constantinople is termed by Greeks and Turks alike throughout the Near East. The Turkish nationalists are endeavoring to remove the Greek or Armenian origins of most towns or cities without succeeding in finding appropriate substitutes for them. The conqueror of Constantinople, Sultan Mehmet II, was proud, however, of appropriating the title of "Sultan of the Romans" as the successor of the Constantines, but the present Turkish nationalists think that by a stroke of the pen they can uproot historic names of Hellenic origin, which not even the founders of "illustrious" Turkish dynasties have ever attempted to dispense with.

Neal's Mother Has Right Idea

Within a few months there will be no more feverish, bilious, headachy, constipated, pale and puny children. That prophecy would surely come true if every mother could see for herself how quickly, easily, and harmoniously the bowels of babies and children are cleansed, regulated, given tone and strength by a product which has proved its merit and reliability to do what is claimed for it to millions of mothers in over fifty years of steadily increasing use.

As mothers find out, from using it how children respond to the gentle influence of California Fig Syrup by growing stronger, sturdier and more active daily they simply have to tell other mothers about it. That's one of the reasons for its overwhelming sales of over four million bottles a year.

A Western mother, Mrs. Neal M. Todd, 1701 West 27th St., Oklahoma City, Okla., says: "When my son, Neal, was three years old he began having constipation. I decided to give him California Fig Syrup and in a few days he was all right and looked fine again. This pleased me so much that I have used Fig Syrup ever since for all his colds or little upset spells. It always stops his troubles quick, strengthens him, makes him eat."

Always ask for California Fig Syrup by the full name and see that the carton bears the word, "California." Then you'll get the genuine.

An iron "mauler" was used to do the actual grinding. The mortar originally came from Scotland, and is believed to be about 200 years old.

Analyzing YOU

With the New Science of Syllabics By C. J. COFFMAN

Beatrice "Ask and it shall be given to you, seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you."

It is curious that the first syllable of Beatrice, BEA, should also begin with the word beatitudes. In which is included the famous saying quoted above. Yet this first syllable of your name, BEA, literally means to ask, to seek and to desire.

Few people are blessed with a name that means more, for in your second syllable, TRICE, you indicate our modern word three or thrice. In other words, your ability to express desire in three ways, and get three answers. Is again multiplied three times by that last syllable, Trice.

If Beatrice does not live long, as has sometimes been stated, it is because this ability to ask and to seek, has been lowered too closely to the animal plane. That is, it descends into her eating.

This tendency, if not checked, may cause you to "BE-ATRICE" or starchy foods too often. There are better things than that for you, I feel sure you will find them.

To really find the highest things for your life, it is necessary for you to move everything in the direction of the spiritual. You must aspire to make more and more of your heartfelt desires take in spiritual truths.

With your fine, full lips and rounded features, you readily attract those who desire the mothering of a good woman. You may even move great poets, as the beloved Beatrice moved Dante in his writings. You have the power to make any man glad to do his utmost for your favor.

You can do your part by merely following the significance of the first two letters of your name, BE, and be his real mate.

Charlotte Charlotte, you represent the secret sign. It is up to you to determine what kind of a sign this shall be.

An old Greek rendering which uses your first syllable, CHAR, meant gladness and joy.

But no one must accuse you of lightness or frivolity, for a still more ancient use of your CHAR, indicated strength in anger. These two meanings will show you why you can make your own choice as to the use of the powers in your name.

If you feel quite modern in your attitude of mind, you can give dignity to very flapperlike costuming. On the other hand, if you love the ancient, you are capable of giving a very demure and modern effect to old ideas in dress and toilettries.

You can even display these versatility without making any effort on your part. Anyone who can read character would know it by looking at your ear with its adaptable nature displayed too clearly.

Adaptable indeed is this ear, from deep study and scholarly attainment, to the more frivolous "life of the party." Taken all in all, you are the secret sign of attainment, Charlotte.

Your chances of success will be very much by yourself, in the way you take hold of things, or fall to.

In another day, a Charlotte came, gentle, refined and beautiful, to free her people from a tyrant. She was Charlotte Corday, of whom you have no doubt read in your French history. What she did was not nice, but it was effective.

Or, with your adaptability, you might write and emulate the success of Charlotte Bronte. With your keen observation and good expressive powers, you are quite capable of writing effectively.

Steam Drill American Idea The steam drill was first made by J. J. Couch in Philadelphia in 1849. It was subsequently improved by Fowle of Boston and Burleigh of Fitchburg, Mass. Its first use was in drilling the Hoosac tunnel in 1860. The first patent granted for a steam shovel was to W. S. Otis of Philadelphia in 1837. However, this was not commonly used until 1880, when Count de Lesseps started the Panama canal.

Roman Orgies The Roman Colosseum was begun by Vespasian and finished by Titus in 80 A. D. It was 612 feet long and 515 feet wide. The opening ceremonies in the huge amphitheater were conducted on a grand scale and lasted for 100 days, during which it is estimated that 5,000 wild beasts were slain in the sport.

WHY WE BEHAVE LIKE HUMAN BEINGS

By GEORGE DORSEY, Ph. D., LL. D.

Four-Wheeled Machines and Human Machines

PRACTICE makes perfect. Even a car "drives" better after the first thousand miles. And as for the driver himself! At the end of the first day he ever drove a car he was a wreck. For two reasons.

Fear lest he wreck the car; too emotional. He suffered enough in anticipation to lose a dozen cars, several legs, ribs, eyes, livers. Other fears under his belt moved him deeply: was it safe, any possibility of its blowing up, would the gas hold out, etc.? He did not know his car; it was a great unknown; the unknown is always a threat. He did not know his road, nor its manners and its customs, its curves and its grades. The new way is always a threat; what is around the corner?

The other reason. His own motor mechanism was tired all over. Throughout the day his muscles had been tense, taut as fiddle strings, keyed up for emergency action.

Now he drives three hundred miles a day; is as fresh as a daisy; has a good time, sees the country, talks his hat off, smokes a dozen cigars. Does not give his car a thought the whole day. He is as automatic as his engine.

Same car, same road, same driver. And the same process in every act of learning, beginning with the act of standing up or the first walk in life. We have time for the high spots in life if we have learned how to cross the routine valley by force of habit.

Do you know which stocking you put on first this morning or which trousers' leg you filled first? Do you recall how you felt the first time you ever wore a dress suit, or how long it took you to put it on, or to learn to tie a bow-knot? Can you bathe, shave, and dress in six minutes? I can do it in less than five.

A skilled performer at the piano or typewriter or on the tennis court acts like an automaton. But no mere automaton—human or otherwise—ever makes a great performer.

For this reason: heightened sensitivity of the central nervous system increases the response of the reflex arcs. A tap on flexed patellar tendon elicits no kick when one is asleep. Sleep means that central has hung up. But try out the knee-kick with your teeth clenched or your fist tightly doubled up; more kick. Get real mad; more kick.

A good habit is a well-learned habit put to useful purpose. The competent driver guides his car as a clever boy his bicycle; the right muscles work to the right amounts at the proper time and in proper order. A car, or a curve, or a hole, or a honk ahead, is stimulus enough for eye or ear; the adjustment is made as though it were a reflex, as easy as pie. It is an acquired reflex.

All our habits act by force of habit because these paths are worn. We awake in the morning and "before we know it" we are at the breakfast table, or possibly "come to" only when some headline in the paper catches our eye—perhaps already half through our breakfast. And yet, before we "came to," we went through a thousand acts: dressing, shaving, etc., etc., some of them really complex performances requiring delicate adjustments.

Yet there were a thousand responses available for that breakfast stimulus. The stimulus was not necessarily followed by a yawn, a stretch, push covers down, one leg out, other leg out, slippers, etc.—one conditioned reflex touching off another. But that chain of reactions had been performed so many times that the paths connecting up these countless reflexes had been worn; all the other possible paths of response offered more resistance because they had not been worn by constant action.

A habit, then, is an act so often repeated that it runs itself; it does not need our conscious attention; we can give our attention to something else.

The average mortal has only one habit. The one stimulus which rouses him from sleep carries him through the day and back to bed and to sleep. All days look alike to him. Saturday night is also conditioned into the chain; no fresh stimulus needed for the bath! His body's clock is likewise set for Sunday. That day, too, goes by according to schedule, and when done is itself the stimulus to resume a new week. One habit after another, like a chain, functioning as one. Works like a clock wound up for life. Makes a perfect clerk, "hand," or maid.

This one-habit mode of existence is fine; it gives the brain a complete rest. The possessor need never have a thought! He is a skilled performer, but never great, on piccolo, at lathie, behind counter, or on a stool. He does not even make a good soldier. There must be visceral dynamics—generally called "guts"—behind a bayonet charge; and high-strung central—"brains"—in control for a sharp-shooter. The difference between action in an automatic machine and in a human genius is this.

"I THANK YOU IN THE NAME OF CONOCO"

Thank you for the immediate and tremendous response to our challenge, on the introduction of Conoco Germ-Processed Motor Oil. Thank you many thousands of Regular Customers as well as the many thousands of new users who have flocked to Red Triangle stations, until it has kept all of us on the jump to drain and refill crank cases with this remarkable motor lubricant. Because of unprecedented demands for Conoco Germ-Processed Motor Oil, it has been difficult for our refineries to keep all our stations adequately supplied, but new stocks are moving faster and you can depend on quick and efficient service at any station displaying the Conoco Red Triangle.

Conoco challenged the oil world last November with the revolutionary new Germ-Processed Motor Oil. During the first few months of the year, all of the country, this oil is now smacking all sales records. No reasonable person will use any other oil until he has heard the story of this new oil and its "Germ-Processed Lubricity." We invite you to stop at the Sign of the Red Triangle for your first Conoco fill.

MEETING N. M. BROADCASTING ASSOCIATION HELD IN ALAMOGORDO THURSDAY

Alamogordo News

A meeting of the New Mexico Broadcasting Association was held in Alamogordo at the town hall Thursday morning and afternoon for the discussion of the future of the New Mexico hour which is being featured over KOB station at State College every Friday evening.

The N. M. Broadcasting Association was formed in September for the purpose of establishing the New Mexico programs over KOB, since which time interesting stories and programs have been furnished by the various chambers of commerce over the state.

Of all the Chambers of Commerce in the state collected for material for the New Mexico hour, only one such organization has stated their lack of interest in the proposition, that one being the Chamber of Commerce of Albuquerque, according to the Association Secretary, Tom Charles, who wrote letters soliciting material.

Present at the association meeting today were: M. B. Stevens, Las Cruces, chairman; Tom Charles, Alamogordo, secretary; Dr. H. L. Kent, president of the State College; Evan Caroun, Dean of Engineering, State College, in charge of Station KOB; G. L. Guthrie, assistant to the State College President; Mrs. Janet Ord, secretary of the Grant County Chamber of Commerce, Silver City; Earl Callens, secretary of the Alamogordo Chamber of Commerce; Chas. Gullinan, Tulgrosa; Cloudy Herndon, and Archie Campbell, Cloudcroft; Liaton Oak, representing the Service Bureau of the State Highway Department, Supervisor O. F. Arthur, and Co. Agent Leslie Hearty.

Methods of financing the New Mexico hour over KOB, rolling the station to the people of New Mexico and chambers of commerce, and the matter of a director to prepare the programs were discussed as of primary importance.

It was tentatively agreed that the New Mexico hour shall be discontinued on April 1 until about September 1, on account of sun spots causing interference during that period.

CANCER SUFFERERS FLOCK TO SAN FRANCISCO HOPING FOR RELIEF; NO PROVED CURE

San Francisco, Calif., Feb. 15.—Victims of cancer, the malignant disease which kills 115,000 Americans every year and for which there is no known cure, flocked to San Francisco hopefully and in increasing numbers today to receive the new treatment originated by Dr. Walter B. Coffey and John D. Humber.

Facilities of the Southern Pacific hospital, to which Dr. Coffey and Dr. Humber are attached, were put at the disposal of the sufferers and arrangements were made to open other clinics in the hope that the new treatment would prove itself effective against the scourge which medical science so far has been unable to conquer.

Treatment Untried
Dr. Coffey and Humber, still insistent that their treatment has not proved itself as a cure, have obtained results which indicate that the serum they originated from the cortex of the adrenal glands of sheep, is able to dissolve cancerous tissues. It has given relief in a high percentage of cases and some of the patients appeared to have been freed of the disease, although in no instance was a patient pronounced absolutely cured.

Rich and poor patients, sharing the common desire to rid themselves of cancerous growths, besieged the clinic yesterday, more than 100 of them receiving injections of the new serum. They came in expensive limousines, rattling old automobiles, on foot and on stretchers.

Women Come by Airplane
Among the sufferers reaching here yesterday was Mrs. Irvine Edwina, wife of a Wenhatchee, Wash., orchardist. Edwina chartered an airplane, which was converted into an aerial ambulance, and brought Mrs. Edwina here late yesterday. The 700 miles were navigated by the airplane with only two stops.

Dr. Humber visited Mrs. Edwina at a hotel last night, made a preliminary examination and arranged to start treating her today. She was described as being near death, too weak to have survived the 700-mile journey by train. She was said to have suffered few ill effects from the long airplane ride.

With a corps of assistants Dr. Humber worked steadily yesterday with his hypodermic needles. Patients too ill to remove from their cars were treated at the curbing. There were about twice as many men as women. Opium from their faces as they bared their arms in the hope that the serum would rid them of the deadly scourge.

1929 TIMBER CUT LARGEST EVER MADE IN THE SOUTHWESTERN DISTRICT

Albuquerque, N. M., Feb. 10.—The 1929 timber harvest is the largest ever cut in any one year since the National Forest in Arizona and New Mexico were established. The year 1918 was the next largest year when 120,000,000 feet were cut. During the last calendar year (1929) 127,627,000 board feet, measure of timber valued at $316,720.02 was cut under commercial sales, and 49,109,994 board feet valued at $122,548.17 was cut under land exchange agreements from the forest, states Quincy Randles, assistant district forester in charge of forest management.

The money received for timber cut under land exchange agreement, explained Mr. Randles, is used to acquire private land of value for the production of future crops of timber for inclusion in the National Forests.

Timber cropping on the National Forests is handled on a selection system. Approximately 60 to 70 per cent of the timber is removed and there is left on the land the young, fast-growing trees and a few healthy, full-crowned trees for future growth and to reseed the cut-over land for another crop when needed. The volume of timber per acre reserved averages from 2,000 to 2,500 board feet. It is computed that timber lands harvested under the selection system will be ready for cutting again in 60 to 75 years. The timber left on the logged-over lands on the National Forests increases in volume at the rate of 50 to 100 board feet per acre per year. This rate of growth is determined by careful measurements for volume on selected sample plots located on logged-over areas on several of the National Forests. Some of these sample plots have now been under observation and measurement for as much as 20 years and very definitely indicate the rate of growth and value that may be expected in the future stand.

The timber lands in Arizona and New Mexico are located at the high elevations in the rough mountainous portions of the states and their high altitude is for the production of timber. Experience over the past 25 years since the forests were established shows that these lands can be made to yield successive crops of valuable timber if properly harvested and protected.

In addition to supplying needed timber products, Mr. Randles states, the forests meanwhile protect the land from erosion, exert a favorable influence in the run-off water. The growing and harvesting operations give an opportunity for the profitable employment of labor and capital and through taxes on the investments in mills, logging railroads, and other equipment contribute to the support of local and state government. Furthermore, 25 per cent of the net proceeds of the National Forest income from timber, as well as other sources, are turned over to the counties in which they are located for roads and schools, in lieu of taxes.

TULAROSA WOMAN'S CLUB

The Woman's Club of Tularosa met in regular business session on Friday afternoon, Feb. 14, at the home of Mrs. J. T. Darby. Honor was paid to the memory of Washington and Lincoln by quotations from these beloved patriots, and the regular routine business was transacted. There was a large attendance on the part of members of the club and several distinguished out-of-town guests. Among these was Mrs. Marshall Parker, of Denver, Colo., whose mother, Mrs. Ada Sanders, was one of the organizers of this club. Mrs. W. C. McDonald, wife of the former governor of this state, and Mrs. Albert Ziegler of Carrizozo, were also present. Mrs. Ziegler gave a wonderfully interesting talk, reminiscent of a trip abroad.

The next meeting will be held on Feb. 23, and the leader on this occasion will be Mrs. A. E. Thomas, of Alamogordo, who is one of the honorary members of the Tularosa club, and Miss Fidelia Duncan, also of Alamogordo. District Federation of Music, will be the guest of the club at that time.

If your distress, whatever it is, comes on at least two hours after eating food—even later is the rule—this points to ulcer. Some are nauseated, some have actual pain, some become distressed by gas. The point is, distress comes on when the stomach is empty, or nearly so; and the reason for this is, the excess of acid in the stomach reaches the surface of the ulcer, and sets up anything from gastric spasms to burning, burning pain, sour stomach, as well as many minor symptoms—always with an empty stomach, long after taking food.

This furnishes material for the second diagnostic point, which is this: Eating sometimes gives temporary relief in almost every case of peptic ulcer. When a patient comes to me with such evidence, I am led to suspect ulceration. The food relieved by absorbing the excess acid which causes the pain—takes it up much as the blotter takes up ink on paper. And a hyperacid condition is present in simple ulcer of the stomach. Taking "soda" relieves so many acid conditions that it is of lesser value in pointing to ulcer. Capable X-ray, of course, clarifies the situation.

My first requirement in ulcer is SOFT diet—and my reason is plain: If you had ulcer in the palm of your hand, you wouldn't rub it with salt-masticated radish, celery, fried meat or potato—and expect it to heal. No raw fruits, or acid fruits except possibly juice of sweet orange sparingly. Soft food always. No overloading.

Never make a business of washing out the stomach, once ulcer is definitely diagnosed. Most of the stomach washings are done in the

HATCH YOUR CHICKS EARLY IS THE EXPERT ADVICE

The month of the year when chicks are hatched has an important effect on their egg-laying ability, says E. E. Anderson, of the N. M. Agricultural College. In many cases it spells profit, and in too many cases loss to the poultryman.

The aim of all poultrymen should be not only to get the maximum egg production at the least cost, but to get the greatest production when eggs are highest in price.

One often hears and reads that early chicks pay best. An experiment run by N. M. A. & M. College bears this out. (Results printed in Bulletin No. 158). In this experiment White Leghorns only were used. Chicks were hatched every month of the year except December and January.

These figures indicate that pullets hatched too early pass through a partial molt the following fall. Those hatched late are slow developing and do not seem to produce as heavily as the earlier hatched pullets.

These results indicate the light breeds should be hatched in April for best results. Since it takes longer on the average to develop the heavier breeds they should be hatched earlier. The exact date for hatching, however, varies with the individual, since one person will develop a pullet and bring it into production much more quickly than will another person. The main thing to keep in mind is to hatch or buy chicks at a time that they can be developed and into production by October.

AUTOMOBILE BRINGS NEW FREEDOM TO THE PEOPLE OF AMERICA

Santa Fe, N. M., Feb. 20.—"The automobiles of America will travel approximately 160 billion miles during the coming year" according to an editorial in the February issue of the New Mexico Highway Journal. "This is an average of 6,000 miles per car. The total mileage Americans will travel in their motors in 1930 is equivalent to 2,000 trips to the planet Mars and back again.

The American people have greater freedom of movement than any other people on earth. The Chinese have least, as their transportation facilities are poorest. In all the countries of Europe, miles of travel per person are increasing rapidly, but the United States leads them all, in rate of increase.

The benefits of this freedom of movement are great, commercially and culturally. Being shackled to a narrow area has a tendency to develop narrowness of experience and outlook, or provincialism, as travel tends to develop broader experience and hence to break down a narrow provincial outlook on life. There is a tremendous social significance in the rapidly increasing number of car owners and the area traveled by the average motorist.

To states like New Mexico, offering the tourist a wealth of attractions, the opportunity to come in contact with different races and cultures, this increase in the use of automobiles is of particular importance. Both the tourist and the resident are benefited thereby."

ANCIENT ALASKANS MOVED FROM ASIA, SCIENCE SAYS

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 10.—Further evidence that ancient man migrated from Siberia into Alaska, across a stretch of land where now lies the Bering Sea, has been unearthed by an expedition operating under the auspices of the University of Pennsylvania museum. It was announced here today by Dr. J. Alden Mason, curator of the American section of the museum.

Skeleton remains and relics of a people differing from the Eskimo type has been discovered in the vicinity of Point Barrow, indicating that the inhabitants of Alaska at a remote age were of the Thule culture type, Dr. Mason said.

This theory is borne out by the discovery along with the human bones of objects fashioned from ivory, wood, and whalebone, the curator said.

All of the bodies dug up by the expedition, which was directed by Alfred H. Hoxson, were buried in skins of polar bears, deer, moose, and the musk-ox, and because of the frozen condition of the soil, were in an unusually well-preserved condition.

In addition to the graves, the expedition unearthed a number of unique houses, ostensibly used by the prehistoric Alaskans. These houses were rectangular affairs, as contrasted with the Eskimo igloo. Several indications that the ancient Alaskans were a settled people rather than nomadic, were discovered.

BILLION DOLLAR DISEASES

Plant diseases rob the American people of some $1,500,000,000 annually according to estimates of the Bureau of Plant Industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture. Since 1917, the bureau has collected data each year on reductions in crop yields due to diseases, and bases its estimates on a summary of the reports sent in. Losses from plant diseases are proportionally high in other countries. In Canada the estimated annual losses are said to average about 15,000,000 English pounds, while in England losses due to fungi in 1923 have recently been estimated at 18 per cent of the total value of all crops.

TOURIST ATTRACTIONS OF NEW MEXICO TO BE ROAD-CAST BY BIG MANUFACTURER

Santa Fe, Feb. 15.—A letter received recently from a nationally known manufacturer of a cleaning product states that the radio division of the company will use the materials of New Mexico which was recently sent them by the Service Bureau of the State Highway Department in the preparation of a radio program on the attractions for tourists in the state, in the near future.

Washington, the Man

One who fails to see the humanity of Washington fails to grasp the meaning of his life. And one who does grasp it can understand his saying is his historic "Farewell Address."

"Be Americans. Let there be no sectionalism; no north, south, east or west; you are all dependent one on another and should be one in union. Beware of the baneful effects of party spirit and of ruin to which its extremes must lead. Do not encourage party spirit, but use every effort to mitigate and assuage it. Keep the departments of government separate, promote education, cherish the public credit, avoid debt. Observe justice and good faith toward all nations; have neither passionate hatreds nor passionate attachments to any; and be independent politically of all. In one word, be a nation; be Americans, and be true to yourselves."

Fake Advertisers

WARNING TO MERCHANTS
The News is in receipt of a warning from National Merchants Bureau of Investigation, giving pictures and signatures of a bunch of fake advertising solicitors, who may, at some time, approach local merchants on a fraudulent advertising scheme. The medium these solicitors are said to use is the "Railway Journal," 630-631 Bryson Building, Los Angeles.

R. A. Edwards, who is reputed to be the acting manager of this Railway Journal, is a passenger brakeman, running out of Los Angeles, on the Union Pacific, and the other five are listed as crooks, confidence men and ex-convicts. We have copies of the signatures of the six men which appear in the warning, and two of their pictures, and our business men, to avoid possible loss, should take the precaution to come in and examine them.

The Ruler of the universe never intended that a farmer should ever get rich. No real farmer ever did get that way. Some folks who live on farms have acquired wealth through increase in value of land or lucky speculation, but real farmers who tilled the soil and grew crops from year to year, wore their land out or failed to accumulate wealth, as industry knows wealth. But the farmer is entitled to a competence if he is industrious and uses good horse sense.

The farmer is a peculiar sort of a cuss. Right now the bottom has dropped out of the price of butterfat. Iowa is the leading agricultural state, and yet Iowa uses 2,000,000 pounds of substitute butterfat per month. If Iowa alone had used butter instead of substitutes the past year, there would be little butter on hand today and the market would not be "shot into doll rags."

ADDITIONAL LOCAL

Mrs. M. B. Paden went to El Paso Tuesday and returned the following afternoon accompanied by her husband who had gone down the week previous.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Gallacher and children, Mrs. Jane Gallacher and Harry Gallacher returned Wednesday from El Paso to which point they had gone last Saturday.

Charlie Fritz and Ignacio Olguin were here from San Patricio Tuesday. They report conditions fair in their community but that orchardists are afraid these warm February days endanger the fruit crop.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Miller were here Saturday night, attending the Alamogordo-Carrizozo basketball games, and mixing with old friends whom they knew when they lived here in years past.

A Linen Shower was given Miss Josephine Gaffney, in the Nurses' home at Fort Stanton yesterday. Miss Gaffney is leaving Monday for Carmel by the Sea, California, where she will be married on the 28th.

Mrs. J. M. Rice and daughters, Misses Charlotte and Helen, and Mrs. J. M. Penfield and daughter, Ruth Lydia, were here Wednesday from Lincoln. The News acknowledges a very pleasant call from these ladies.

Maurice Lemon returned to Roswell the latter part of last week to reenter the Military Institute. Maurice has recovered from an operation, following an attack of appendicitis, and has been out of school since the holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Lemmon moved to Tucuman Wednesday. The move was made because Mr. Lemmon could be in closer touch with his work in the S. P. service. Mr. and Mrs. Lemmon are an estimable couple, have a son in the Military Institute at Roswell, and their going is regretted greatly by our people. It is to be hoped that conditions will so resolve themselves that they will soon return to Carrizozo, and take up their activities in the social and civic life of the town where they left off.

Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Sowder have returned from Midland, Texas, where they had gone to close up their ranch sale, and are in Santa Fe this week. Mr. Sowder, we are told, has purchased other holdings in this vicinity, since the sale of his ranch, which was noted last week, and will begin improving another ranch. They still remain residents of this section of the county, though at another point of the compass. Their intention to retain their home near us is quite pleasing to many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Sowder.

Edward Corn Dies

Edward Corn died Monday morning at the Johnson hospital, following an illness of several weeks, the last two of which were spent in the hospital. Funeral services were conducted in the Baptist church Tuesday afternoon by Rev. Joo. L. Lawson, of the Methodist church, the pastor of the Baptist church Rev. F. C. Rowland, being unable to officiate because of illness. The remains, followed by many relatives and a large concourse of friends, were laid to rest in the White Oaks cemetery.

Edward Newsom Corn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sherwood Corn, was born at Ingram, Texas, October 19, 1902. He came to Lincoln county with his parents when a very small boy and had spent the greater part of his life here. He married Miss Catherine Pine about ten years ago, and to this union a son Carroll, was born. Both wife and son survive. Besides these, he leaves to mourn his loss, a father and mother, and four sisters—Mrs. C. F. Grev, Mrs. R. H. Kiel, Mrs. Rolla Ward and Mrs. Cooper Hightower to all of whom a large circle of friends extend the utmost sympathy.

The deceased was a young man of exemplary habits; steady in the performance of the tasks in every day life and who had gathered around him many warm friends because of his open, generous nature. The sorrow that hangs over the desolate household at the loss of the only son is too deep for expression and time only can partially assuage the deep grief that now overwhelms every member of the family.

George W. Choate left Saturday morning for Separ, New Mexico, for an extended visit with his daughter, Mrs. A. R. Reichelt, and family. He expects to be absent two or three months.

To Try Gardening

Judge Hewitt has returned to White Oaks, after a stay for the greater part of the winter here. The judge told friends that he had to get home to start his garden, but did not intimate the magnitude of the undertaking—so we are left to guess as to that. When we see some of the products we'll be better able to associate the character of the task he is now assuming. However, as the judge is known to be methodical and thorough in his undertakings he'll probably hitch a gang of plows to a caterpillar and proceed to turn up Mother Earth in the latest approved fashion.

Talk Game--Eat

Pursuant to a announcement, quite a good-sized crowd gathered at the Community Hall Wednesday night to enjoy the banquet prepared by the ladies of the Missionary Society, and to hear talks on game protection, propagation, etc., by some distinguished visitors who have given this subject much thought and who desired to awaken a more general interest in this important matter.

After an appetizing banquet, in the preparation and service of which we want to doff our cap to the ladies, E. M. Brickley took charge of the meeting. He called upon President Shearman of the State G. P. A., who, at some length, gave a history of the inception and organization of the State Game Association. He was followed by H. P. Saunders of Roswell, who told the benefits of the local organization to his section, and was in turn followed by E. L. Perry, State Game Warden, and who covered the subject more generally, but quite interestingly. The last speaker was W. A. Losey, of Hagerman, a member of the State Game Commission, and who, judging from his expressions, is a sportsman in more than one way. It was a good meeting and aroused a splendid interest among Sportsmen.

Announcement Party

(At Fort Stanton)

What came as a delightful surprise was the climax to the Valentine Party given at the Nurses' Home February 14th. Bridge was played until a late hour. The score cards being wedding bells, hearts were all a flutter what did it mean? Who? As the ice cream was being served a tiny card on top said "see the scroll in the rose". Dainty heart shaped cakes were served with the ice cream. Later tiny pink roses were given as favors and a tiny announcement read "Miss Josephine Gaffney and Lieut. Wm. Shannon, March 28th, 1930—Miss Gaffney is our popular chief nurse and Lieut Shannon departed a month ago for service with the Coast Guard at Santa Barbara, California. The wedding at Santa Barbara is the culmination of a beautiful romance. The best wishes of patients and personnel goes with this popular couple. We regret to lose them. They will be at home after the wedding at Carmel by the Sea, California.

The announcement party was the work of Mrs. Fannie Miss Madeline Converse and Miss Milligan. May God's choicest blessings go with them.

TERRIFIC EROSION LOSS IN THE UNITED STATES

Approximately 17,000,000 acres of land in the United States formerly cultivated have been destroyed by gullying, or so severely washed that farmers cannot afford to attempt cultivation or reclamation. This is enough land to support a nation, says the United States Department of Agriculture, and it exceeds the total area of tillable land in Japan.

Philadelphia.—St. Agnes hospital attaches termed it the freakiest accident in their experience after they treated Vincent Valenta, twenty-four, for serious burns and shock from electricity.

Valenta, a heater and range repair man, was working on a heater under a store. He used an extension light, and, both hands being occupied, held the cord in his mouth.

Gripping hard, he cut through the insulation, causing a short circuit and shocking him. His jaws went rigid, clamping on the "live wire," stumbling back, he fell into a puddle of water, increasing the conductivity. His condition is termed serious.

STORY FROM THE START

"I wish Helen were here," said Marjory. "Why, I will have to sort out the head of the house myself—and I am not used to having ministers around—except father. But you are quite right. We must do what we can, and we shall take Mr. Buckworth gladly. What can we charge him?"

"We are to pay him fifteen dollars a week. I think 'en of that could go for his room, and board."

"That would leave him but five dollars a week for laundry, and collections, and—"

"We can do his laundry with ours," interrupted Ginger. "And I dare say he doesn't like as father does—it isn't as fashionable as it used to be. And we can't run the house on less than ten a week."

"Well, ten a week then. And if he objects, we'll come down to eight. He can have father's room, with the books—Miss Jenkins, you'll have to tell him about the money, and the laundry, and everything. I simply couldn't do it."

On Friday afternoon, Miriam returned with her father just in time for supper, a supper that was a banquet for many of the kindly members, knowing of the plan for his enforced vacation, had conspired to make his last dinner at home one to be remembered. There were baskets of fruit and flowers, fine candles, fragrant home-baked rolls and pastries, rich preserves and delicate jellies, pats of country butter and jars of cream, chickens all ready for broiling.

They were still at the table, merrily recounting the news of the week, the doings of the church, the letters from Helen, when Joplin Westbury came, or rather, was delivered in person, by Eddy Jackson. Joplin Westbury, clearing his throat in best treasurer-of-the-board manner, announced that on behalf of the church he came to present his beloved minister with a two months' vacation on full pay, in order to restore his strength for the great day of the formal dedication.

"Mr. Westbury, this—is this most awfully good of you and the board and the church," said Mr. Tolliver meekly. "It just happens—and this may surprise you—the doctors advised that I give up work and responsibility for a while, but I simply did not see how it could be done. I should not have asked it, I assure you. It is most generous, Joplin, most generous. Girls, I see the hand of the Lord in this."

"I see the hand of Eddy Jackson," thought Ginger Ella to herself, but not for the world would she have marred her father's pious gratitude with the voicing of her irreverent thought.

But Joplin Westbury, in spite of the good gift he had brought, seemed ill at ease and awkward, chattering under the united thanks of the innocent family, and hurriedly took himself off. When he had gone, Eddy extended the invitation, for himself and his mother, for Mr. Tolliver and Miriam to come to pay dirt.

They spent the evening talking together quietly, every seemingly light word overlaid an undercurrent of deep and glad thanksgiving, and then Miriam led her father out to the waiting car, the other girls trooping softly with them for a last good-by.

"Now you see, my dear little girls, and try to remember, that things do work together for good," he said, smiling. "Yes," whispered Eddy Jackson to GINGER, "but just the same, I wish you'd scold around among the members, and see if there's something underhanded going on. I don't like the look of old Jop. Ordinarily, he just loves to play Heaven, but tonight he has his eyes set on us. Between you and me, I think there's something rotten in Red Thru."

me, I think there's something rotten in Red Thru."

After all, Miss Jenkins was merely a temporary companion in the parsonage. It was Marjory, the pretty twin, who, since the marriage of Helen, and in the absence of Miriam, must reign as hostess. It was a pleasant experience for Marjory, and she took it seriously, superintending the entire arrangement of her father's room for the young minister, and merely permitting Miss Jenkins to dust and sweep, and Ginger to wash the windows.

All during the Saturday morning, as their hands were busy with their pleasant toil, they chatted eagerly of this strange and unexpected break in the even tenor of their lives. "Too bad Helen had to miss it," said GINGER.

"I shall be very dignified. I dare say he will think I am twenty-one."

"Well, remember he's a preacher, and don't waste your good powder on him."

"Mr. Westbury says he is a very brilliant student, very."

"Such a dumb name, Hiram," complained GINGER. "Wouldn't you just know his parents were Methodists?"

By one o'clock they were dressed for his arrival. Miss Jenkins, thoroughly rehearsed in her part, seated herself sedately in the living room with the Central Christian Advocate. Marjory repaired to her father's room to give a last deft touch to table, to curtains, to the fall of the face bedspread. GINGER, after meeting the postman half way down the flagstone path, started to the attic with her mail, six letters, each with a small hard roundness in one corner.

Six dimes were added to her hoard in the doll's trunk. GINGER shook the trunk affectionately. Two dollars and eighty cents now. Not so very much, yet, but still, considering the original outlay of three postage stamps, it was doing very well. And certainly, business was growing. Never a day passed now without at least one welcome letter for E. Tolliver, one dime for the home. But for all her immersion in her growing fund, GINGER did not overlook the immediate interest of the arrival of Hiram Buckworth. While she would scorn to betray an undue curiosity about any male creature, she did feel that a pre-knowledge of his general appearance would assist her greatly in forming an estimate of his character.

Finding that she could not command a view of the street from the high dormer window of the attic, not even by standing on the backless chair, she turned the key upon her accumulation of dimes, and went downstairs. In her father's room, the only one opening upon the street, she found Marjory, ostensibly draping the curtains to more becoming lines, but with a long-lashed eye upon the approach.

"I dare say he looks like most immature ministers," remarked GINGER coldly. "And judging by the Hiram, he will have baggy trousers and a wilted mustache."

She descended the circular staircase with great dignity. Miss Jenkins had abandoned the Advocate and crouched behind the portieres turning an anxious gaze to the corner, a block away, where the newcomer must first appear.

"I hope he sees you," said GINGER bitterly. "It will give him such a good impression of our disinterestedness."

"I—just wondered if he was coming," said Miss Jenkins, fluttering back to the Advocate. "Now, I am just to say who I am—and who you and Marjory are—when you come down, I mean—and tell him ten dollars a week—before you come down, I mean; and if he argues, I am to yield with dignity. And then I take him upstairs—after you girls come down, I mean—and say dinner will be served at six o'clock."

Obviously, the windows of the living room were closed to scornful GINGER Ella. (The vantage spot was left to her, the basement, and she repaired thither. As the narrow window in front was too high for her, she rolled an empty apple barrel to the proper position, stood it upright, and laid an old ironing board across it. Then she climbed up, with great care for her best summer frock, and was rewarded with a clear view of the entire street.

At exactly two-fifteen, Hiram Buckworth briskly rounded the corner, and made for the old brown parsonage, unaware that from various well-shaded recesses, three pairs of steady bright eyes bore silent witness to his approach. Hiram Buckworth saw only a pleasantly sun-burned, shingle-brown old house set in a well-trimmed lawn enoppled with broad-branched maples, saw an inviting pathway of old flagstones, bordered with pansies. The eyes behind the curtained windows saw a tall young man, who walked vigorously, with a vigorous swing to his arms, a vigorous swing to his legs, noticed particularly how the sunshine cast bronze into his dark hair, for, most unimportantly, he carried his hat in one hand.

"What a nice, clean, Christian-like he looks," approved Miss Jenkins in great relief.

"Why, how very young," wondered Marjory.

"He doesn't look any Hiram to me," was GINGER's private comment.

But Hiram Buckworth, unaware of these secret impressions, marched briskly up the flagstone path, set down his bag, and rang the bell. A decent interval was permitted to elapse—GINGER, holding her breath on the apple barrel counted the approved twenty—and at the very number, Miss Jenkins went to the door, a flushed and flushed Miss Jenkins, unused to doing the honors of a house.

"I am Hiram Buckworth," he said pleasantly, brown hand outstretched.

"Are you indeed?" stammered Miss Jenkins. "I am Miss Jenkins—I will introduce the girls when they come down. I was just to let you in—Oh, goodness me, what's that?"

There was a sudden crash from below, a splintering, a thud, and over all, a sharp expletive which is any other than a ministerial hope would have been considered distinctly profane. For GINGER, agitated at the stumbling confusion of the embarrassed Miss Jenkins, of which she heard every word, in impulsive eagerness to rush to the rescue of the parsonage reputation, had stepped too far on the end of the ironing board, so that it flew up suddenly and dropped her into the barrel which overturned on top of her. The silence that followed the first crash was an immense one.

"Nothing," chattered Miss Jenkins volubly, "nothing at all, you see. Just a noise—lots of noises here—house full of them—rais, I suppose—rais in the wall. Come right upstairs. I'll show you your room."

Marjory, holding her breath at the window upstairs, heard these horrible words. What was the woman thinking of? Her instructions had been positive, off-repeated, to take him to the living room, break the news of ten dollars a week, and hold him in conversation until the appearance of the two girls for formal introduction. Up the stairs—and Marjory spring upon him from the window! She ran toward the door, but already they were at the curve of the circular staircase. She threw a wild glance about the room—no possible escape—the closet, the bath with its single entrance! She, Marjory, presiding hostess of the house to be caught in this humiliating predicament? Not to be thought of!

As quick as thought, she dropped to the floor and crawled beneath the bed, where the fringe of the lace spread sufficed to curtain her retreat.

"It's a nice room," rambled Miss Jenkins nervously. "It's Mr. Tolliver's own room. I hope you like religious books. Mr. Tolliver never reads anything now, poor dear, what with his eyes—I suppose you've heard about that?"

"Yes, such a misfortune," (TO BE CONTINUED)

A population of 140,369 is prophesied for Phoenix in 1945 by the Mountain States Telephone & Telegraph Company, showing an increase over 1930 of over 71,500 souls, according to H. D. McVay, Arizona manager of the company.

Production of copper was cut 40 per cent beginning Feb. 1 by the Phelps Dodge corporation at its Morenci branch, officials have announced in Clifton, Ariz. The present condition of the copper market was given as the reason for the curtailment.

Lyman Garratt, for twenty-five years a peace officer of Grant and Hidalgo counties as deputy sheriff, constable and special officer for the Calumet and Arizona Mining Company, was found slain near the fall at the Val-deon mining camp near Lordsburg by school children.

Arizona wool growers were urged by Frank Hagenbarth, president of the National Wool-Marketing Corporation, to join the National Wool Marketing Council by acceptance of its wool sales program. The plea was made at a special meeting of the Arizona association held in Phoenix.

An unsuccessful attempt to bomb the residence of J. C. Hughes, president of the New Mexico Federation of Labor in Albuquerque, was made recently. The would-be bombers attached copper wires to Hughes' automobile which was in his garage, running the wires to a bomb placed under the back porch.

Preparations for the summer session at the Arizona State Teachers' College in Flagstaff are being completed rapidly. It was announced in Flagstaff by President Grady Gammage. The summer session this year will be divided into two five-week periods to make it possible for more students to attend.

One person out of every four thousand New Mexicans was killed in a highway accident in 1929, according to figures compiled by the New Mexico state highway service bureau. The death toll jumped from 73 in 1925 to 101 in 1929 on New Mexico roads. This is nearly a 50 per cent increase in the highway death toll.

A posse of deputy sheriffs, federal prohibition agents and police officers of Albuquerque captured six men who are involved in the fatal shooting of Deputy Sheriff Emilio Candelaria, in a gun battle between officers and alleged bootleggers in the Sandia mountains. One of the men was found to have been wounded twice.

Gov. R. C. Dillon of New Mexico recently ordered an audit be made of the Motor Vehicle Department and requested the state comptroller to abolish the so-called "two-bit notary fee." The governor likewise requested the comptroller to extend the time for filing applications for motor vehicle licenses from Jan. 31 to March 1 "because of present conditions."

Four persons, including the New Mexico state motor vehicle commissioner, were arrested in Albuquerque in connection with the robbery of the motor vehicle license bureau in the court house in Albuquerque last Dec. 19. The grand jury indictments were returned as the jury's answer to what Milton J. Helmich, judge of the District Court termed "an intolerable situation," in his instructions to the jury.

The ancient Indian Pueblo of Isleta near Albuquerque was in mourning recently. The entire village mournfully filed to its burial ground in the Sand Hills and laid to rest its beloved Jolola, 109 years old. Dolores Jolola, the wise man of Isleta. Jolola was a pagan to the end, a firm believer in the old order of things. To his dying day he believed that Montezuma, the great chief, would return to lead his legions against oppression.

The New Mexico Normal University has been invited by Governor Richard C. Dillon to send a number of its representatives to attend and take part in the radio program which will be broadcast March 1 from the Carlsbad Caverns. On this date the attention of the entire country will be called to the wonderful scenic beauty of this eighth wonder of the world when the New Mexico governor and other distinguished persons at the state broadcast speeches from the bottom of the caverns.

Lacking sufficient funds, the state of New Mexico is unable to prosecute an investigation into two unsolved deaths, Gov. R. C. Dillon said in Santa Fe recently. The slaying of Floyd Hamblin, Questa, N. M., postmaster and general storekeeper, who was killed with an ax by persons who robbed him of his savings last December, and the death of Arthur Rockefeller Manby, 36 years old, wealthy reclusive, whose decapitated body was found in his home on July 3, remain unsolved.

The Rockefeller Foundation, Dr. R. J. Stroud, Arizona state superintendent of health has announced recently allotted Arizona $3,175 to be used in public health work in the various counties of the state. This sum, he said, together with state funds totaling $16,650, would be used in child hygiene and maternal care work in the rural communities.

State warrants totaling $48,841.50, representing the third apportionment of New Mexico school funds, were sent out by the New Mexico state treasurer last week.

Twelve Years Mayor and Going Strong!

WHEN a man who has been mayor of a big city for twelve years finds out how to live, his words are worth listening to. Ex-Mayor E. N. Kirby of Abilene, Texas, discovered the simple way to health about ten years ago (he is now 64). "I am now a new man, and as active as a boy," says Mr. Kirby. "I feel fine all the time and rarely have an ache or a pain, although for twenty-five years I suffered with rheumatism, and sometimes was unable to stand or walk. I would not give up my simple health discovery—no, not for five thousand dollars in gold!" That discovery was Nujol.

Hon. E. N. Kirby, for twelve years Mayor of Abilene, Texas, who has discovered secret of success.

That's the wonderful thing about Nujol. Although it is not a medicine and contains absolutely no drugs, its harmless internal lubrication seems to make people feel better and look on the brighter side of life, whether they are old or young. Of course you can understand why this is so: we all of us have natural poisons in our bodies that make us feel headachy, sick and low in our minds. Nujol, which is as tasteless and colorless as pure water, helps to absorb these and carry them away, easily, regularly as clock work.

When BABIES are upset

Baby ills and ailments seem twice as serious at night. A sudden cry may mean colic. Or a sudden attack of diarrhea—a condition it is always important to check quickly. How would you meet this emergency—tonight? Have you a bottle of Castoria ready? There is nothing that can take the place of this harmless but effective remedy for children; nothing that acts quite the same, or has quite the same comforting effect on them. For the protection of your own one—for your own peace of mind—keep this old, reliable preparation always on hand. But don't keep it just for emergencies; let it be an everyday aid. Its gentle influence will ease and soothe the infant who cannot sleep. Its mild regulation will help an older child whose tongue is coated because of sluggish bowels. All druggists have Castoria; the genuine bears Cass M. Fitcher's signature on the wrapper.

Highest Sense of Duty in "Doing Unto Others"

Men talk much of duty, but chiefly spend the most of their lives in efforts to evade its full obligations as ideally expressed through the ages. Tennyson says: "Sweet it is to have done the thing one ought." To appreciate and realize this sweetness is the reward of duty. Sometimes it is hard to do the thing we ought to do, but conscious satisfaction invariably soothes the soul that has been true to itself.

spiritual growth and development always. We may evade, refuse to do our duty, but in so doing we invite suffering and loss of spiritual stature and estate.

FARM STOCK

STRAWSTACK IS POOR PROTECTION

Hogs Huddle Up and Get Too Warm in Winter.

"Any port in a storm, of course. But a straw pile is one of the poorest of all possible poor ports for the hogs when a blizzard or a sudden cold spell hits the farm," says J. W. Wulchet, extension specialist in swine growing, for the Ohio State university. "Letting the hogs burrow into a straw stack for shelter from the bad weather is better than leaving them to freeze to death, but not much better," says Wulchet. "The reason is that when hogs huddle into straw stacks they pile up in heaps, to keep warm they get too warm, and when they get out for feed or any other reason, are liable to pneumonia and other diseases. "Even more important is the fact that such a refuge is highly insanitary, and a hog is more susceptible to unsanitary conditions than most other farm animals. When hogs pile up under a straw stack their skins are caked with filth and get into bad condition, and their general health is affected. "Much better have some sort of houses, either central sheds or individual houses. In extremely cold weather bank these houses with straw to keep out the wind and conserve the body heat of the hogs, but be sure to leave sufficient ventilation."

Practical Plan to Feed Pigs in Creep or Pen

All pigs thrive much better if they start eating grain before they are weaned, according to W. L. Robinson of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment station. When this is done there is no noticeable setback at weaning time. Pigs will start eating grain when three or four weeks old but to do this the pigs must be able to eat unassisted by the sows. This is easily accomplished by providing a creep which consists of a pen with an opening through which the pigs can go but which will hold the sows back. A good ration for the young pigs is made of 64 parts of corn, 22.5 parts of ground oats, 8 parts of tankage, 4 parts of linseed oil meal and 1.5 parts of minerals. If the pasture is short or no green feed is available add about 4 parts of ground alfalfa or clover hay, or the leaves of either hay.

Alfalfa for Horses Fed in Balanced Ration Good

Alfalfa hay is good horse feed, according to A. O. Rhoad of the New York state college of agriculture, providing it is fed in a balanced ration. Corn and alfalfa make a balanced ration while oats, barley, peas and bran that are high in protein, would provide too much protein to feed alfalfa as the only roughage. In this case there should be some other hay such as timothy with the alfalfa. The first cutting is considered the best for horses. The usual recommendation of cutting alfalfa when one-third in bloom is best for cattle, but it is better for horses if cut when in the later stages of maturity, Rhoad states.

Live Stock Facts

- Docking lambs up to two months of age is practiced.
- Keep pregnant mares out of corn stalk fields. Provide them with plenty of pure, clean water.
- Normally one-third of the spring pigs die before they are ten weeks old, or of weaning age.
- Many castrate the ram lambs at the same time docking is done, but the preferred age for castrating is about four weeks.
- Feed the mare generously on sound whole oats, bran and mixed clover, or timothy hay. Avoid moldy hay or silage, damaged grain, woody, weathered fodder, dusty or rusty straw, or hay containing ergot.
- The mare in foal should be worked lightly or abundantly exercised every day. Exercise is absolutely necessary. She should occupy a roomy, clean, well lighted, and perfectly ventilated box stall.
- Long-legged, narrow-backed hogs do not have economical feeding quality, and for that reason have been forced into the discard.
- The brood sows which realize the greatest profits are those which are capable of raising two large litters of strong, healthy pigs each year.
- The ideal time for docking is when the lambs are ten days or two weeks old. At this age the job is simple and can be done with little risk of serious bleeding and little pain to the lamb.

Cold in Head, Chest or Throat?

RUB Musterole well into your chest and throat—almost instantly you feel easier. Repeat the Musterole-rub once an hour for five hours... what a glorious relief! Those good old-fashioned cold remedies—oil of mustard, menthol, camphor—are mixed with other valuable ingredients in Musterole. It penetrates and stimulates blood circulation and helps to draw out infection and pain. Used by millions for 20 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. Keep Musterole handy—jars, tubes. All druggists. To Mothers—Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musternole.

Whistling for Breeze
Fishermen in the Asturias whistle for a breeze and so do sailors in Scotland and the Annamites in the Indian ocean. All sailors whistle very softly for fear of producing a hurricane instead of a breeze.

Stuffed up inside?

Feen-a-mint is the answer. Cleansing action of smaller doses effective because you chew it. At your druggist—the safe and scientific laxative.

Goose Get Revenge
A gun battle was staged in California between a wild goose and W. J. Speedy, of Pittsburgh. Speedy killed the goose, but the goose, with strength ebbing, shot the hunter. With others, Speedy was hiding in blinds when a flock of geese appeared overhead. The hunter picked the leader and shot. The goose dropped into an adjoining blind. In its death throes it kicked over a shotgun of one of Speedy's neighbors and the charge struck Speedy in the hand.

Mother of Four Babies

"Although I am only 22 years old, I have four babies to care for. Before my first baby was born my mother urged me to take Lydla E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because I was so terribly weak. I had to lie down four or five times a day. After three bottles I could feel a great improvement. I still take the Vegetable Compound whenever I need it for it gives me strength to be a good mother to my family."—Mrs. Vern L. Jennings, 510 Johnson Street, Saginaw, Michigan.

About twenty members of Comet Chapter No. 29, O. E. S., motored over to Fort Stanton yesterday afternoon to attend a reception in honor of Mrs. W. S. Howson, a member of the Chapter. The hostesses were Mesdames Westhaver and Kunkel, assisted by Mrs. Berry and Miss Charlotte Rice. Mrs. Howson, with husband and children, leaves Fort Stanton for New Orleans, March 1 and the gathering was in the nature of a farewell party. The guests were assembled at the Kunkel home and the charming hostesses made the afternoon a pleasant one. Following felicitations for the welfare of the departing member, mingled with expressions of regret over her going, delicious refreshments were served, and the guests returned to their respective homes, highly praising the manner in which they had been entertained.

D. S. Donaldson Dies

D. S. Donaldson died at the family home in El Paso last Saturday morning. The body, accompanied by the sorrowing wife, passed through here Sunday afternoon, en route to the old home in Iowa for interment. A large number of old friends met the train as it pulled into the local yards, to meet Mrs. Donaldson and to express their sympathy.

Mr. Donaldson was a resident of Carrizozo over a period of considerable length, having been chief dispatcher during all the time of his residence here. Since leaving Carrizozo, he remained in the employ of the S. P. Company, stationed at different places, and virtually died in the harness. Mr. Donaldson was very highly esteemed by our people and was recognized by all as an upright, honorable and worthy citizen, and many close friends of the family were saddened over the announcement of his death and deeply sympathized with the bereaved wife and two sons.

STEEL ECLIPSE Windmill

Starts sooner—pumps longer

Two windmills stood just across the road from each other. With the first sign of a breeze one started up smoothly and quietly. When the breeze became a wind, the other started with a groan and lumbered away only to stop as abruptly as it had started, while the other continued pumping for some time—then it finally came to rest with the last trace of the dying breeze. This is the difference between a superior windmill and just a windmill. It is the difference between accurately machined and fitted gears and ordinary cast gears; the difference between hardened and ground steel shafts and ordinary steel shafts; the difference between machined and polished bearings and ordinary bearings; the difference between running in oil and running with dry gears. In other words, it is the difference between the Fairbanks-Morse STEEL ECLIPSE Windmill and just a plain windmill. Come in and see this great advance in windmill construction. See the STEEL ECLIPSE feature—the center fit feature—the mechanism that enables the Eclipse to actually pump water during two-thirds of every revolution of the wind wheel. You will form a new idea of how good a windmill can be.
