Senator Borah Compares Farm Board Chairman With Alexander Hamilton

Washington, April 1.—Senator Borah, Republican of Idaho, who is credited with having induced Mr. Hoover to promise an extra session of congress for the purpose of enacting legislation for farm relief, recently took occasion to express his opinion of how that measure is working out under the Federal Farm Board created by the farm relief bill.

Chairman Legge of the Board, echoing the administration's opposition to the debenture clause of the tariff bill, of which Senator Borah is one of the foremost protagonists, declared that the debenture was unworkable, whereupon the Idaho Senator delivered his first public opinion of the Farm Board Chairman. Speaking from the floor of the Senate, Mr. Borah said:

"I judge from a reading of this morning's paper that the Chairman of the Farm Board, Mr. Legge, has taken a little time off from his arduous failures to tell us what he thinks about the debenture . . . I feel that I owe an apology to the memory of Alexander Hamilton in doing so, but I desire to place Mr. Legge's interview in The Record alongside of the statement of Hamilton with reference to a debenture."

Hamilton's statement concerning a debenture (bounty he called it) as inserted in The Record by Senator Borah is in part as follows:

. . . As often as a duty upon a foreign article makes an addition to its price it causes an extra expense to the community for the benefit of the domestic manufacturer. A bounty does no more.

Bounties are sometimes not only the best but the only proper expedient for uniting the encouragement of a new object of agriculture with that of a new object of manufacture.

The true way to conciliate these two interests is to lay a duty on foreign manufactures of which is desired to be encouraged, and to apply the bounty, either upon the production of the material itself or upon its manufacture at home or upon both.

Senator Borah's utterance is regarded in political circles here as forecasting some heated eloquence on the part of the Idaho orator if and when the debenture clause is eliminated in conference, as it has been freely predicted in the Senate that it will be.

April Is Here

Its name derived from a Latin word meaning "to open," April is one of the loveliest months of the year. It is the time of opening buds.

It is a season of new life everywhere. Grass becomes green, and trees and shrubs put forth their leaves and early flowers put in their appearance. The birds start northward and most everything that makes summer has started on its way.

Still April is a month of changing weather. Occasionally there are cold days; again the days are hot. Changes from flashing sunlight to pouring showers are sudden and frequent and William Watson's lines—

April, April
Laugh thy golden laughter,
But the moment after Weep thy golden tears

points an excellent picture of the month.

The flower of April is the daisy and its gem is the diamond

District Typing and Shorthand Contest

The District Typing and Shorthand contest will be held at Alamogordo April 11, 1930 at 9:00 a. m. Two members from each class in typing and shorthand will represent the Carrizozo High School there. The novice, or first year class will be represented by Katherine Kelt and Frank Shelton. The second year or amateur will be represented by Evelyn Grumbles and Dorothy Dozier. These students have been working on their machines a minimum of three hours a day for the past week, and hope to make a good showing in the contest.

The novice shorthand class will be represented by Julia and Mary Romero; and the second year, or amateur, class will be represented by Helen Frances Huppertz.

All of the students have been working hard and will no doubt do well in the contest.

The Commercial classes, are also sponsoring the show "Marianne" with Marion Davies besides some special numbers they will give with this show. Come and see this show and by doing so help the class in this work.

Capitan News

The Lincoln County Teachers' Association will hold its annual meeting in Capitan on April 18 and 19. Good outside speakers will again be on the program. Each teacher will be mailed a program of the meetings at an early date.

Exhibits are always welcome at this meeting. Teachers who have any outstanding work, or novelty, are invited to bring their exhibits.

All teachers who intend to stay in Capitan Friday night are asked to write Supt C. V. Koogler for room reservations. Rooms will be furnished free and an early request is asked in order to avoid a "last minute" rush.

A complimentary cafeteria lunch will be served to the teachers Friday evening, at 6 p. m., by the Home Economics Department of the high school.

The Capitan high school enjoyed a picnic on April Fool's Day in Baca Canyon.

In the school board election Mr. J. A. Brubaker of Capitan and Mr. Thomas Hobbs of Fort Stanton were elected to membership.

The Parent-Teachers' Association held its regular meeting in the High School Tuesday night.

Four Famous Scientists Born in Month of March

Four men famous in the history of electrical science were born in the month of March.

Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, was born on March 3, 1847, in Scotland. He died on August 2, 1922, at Baddeck, Nova Scotia, his summer home. George Simon Ohm, for whom the unit of measurement of electricity is named, was born in Germany on March 16, 1787, and died on July 7, 1853. William Konrad Roentgen, discoverer of the rays having the power of permeating objects impervious to light or heat waves, was born in Germany on March 27, 1846, and died on February 10, 1923. Chas. F. Brush, the last of the quartet, and inventor of the Brush Electric Arc Lamp, was born on March 17, 1849, at Euclid, Ohio. He died June 15, 1925.

Tariff to Conference

Washington, Apr.—After seven months tedious labor the United States Senate finally ridded itself of the Tariff Bill much to the relief of members who battled over each schedule through the weary weeks. What will happen to the voluminous measure when it reaches the conference report is a matter of conjecture.

A review of the Congressional Record of these months will reveal that Senator Sam G. Bratton, of New Mexico, played an important part in the Nation's affairs during the dreary debates. Time and time again he rose and with vehemence either defended or with vigor objected to various phases of the legislation. Outstanding among the work that he did in this connection is his stand and vote against increased duties on cement, brick, lumber and sugar when those proposals were presented singly and separately. The New Mexico Senator supported the move for increased duties on wool, hides and oil.

In the final vote on the bill, when all of the states were merged, a great many of the Progressives and Democrats, including Senator Bratton, voted to send the bill to conference. They felt that on account of the elimination of the flexible provision and the inclusion of the debenture plan as well as the general raising of agricultural tariffs some benefits would accrue to the farmers.

Used Car Sales Growing

Detroit, March 29—A marked indication of increasing business activity and excellent proof of the purchasing power of the country at the moment, is seen in the announcement by the Chevrolet Motor Company today that sales of used cars alone by its nation-wide dealer organization are proceeding at the rate of a million dollars a day.

Used car sales by the Chevrolet retail organization during the first 20 days of the month totaled 105,907 cars, representing an investment of more than $21,000,000.

This showing exceeds by a wide margin the best previous 20 day used car record in the history of the company and at the same time is the greatest 20 day volume of used cars ever sold by any automobile manufacturer.

Factory officials predict that the total for the month will exceed 150,000 used cars, which would compare with 130,000 for May 1929 the best previous month in Chevrolet history.

At the same time used car stocks in the hands of dealers are being reduced to a minimum, placing the dealers generally in excellent position to handle a large volume of new car business this spring.

Ancho School Notes

The pupils of the Ancho school are enjoying their recently installed basketball court and extend hearty thanks to Messrs. Drake and Gresham for making and erecting the backstops.

Swings have also been put up for use of the smaller pupils.

The pupils of the upper grades were favored recently by a short visit by Mrs. French, County Superintendent of Schools. She related many incidents of her trip east and talked very entertainingly of the Atlantic City Convention.

A number of new books have been ordered for our library.

Press Opinions on the "Grundy" Tariff Bill

Boston Evening Transcript, Republican: In no other way can senatorial tariff making of the last 10 months be given the smashing rebuke it deserves except by a veto of the bill if it is found to bear such ear marks as have been put upon it lately . . . It seems impossible that from the hodge-podge the Senate will send to the House any measure can emerge that can command the confidence of the people.

Minneapolis Tribune, Republican: The bill came out of the House not as an agricultural bill but as a Grundy bill. It came out of the Senate Finance Committee as a modified Grundy bill. He (Grundy) believes the contributors to the war chest should be rewarded. To his way of thinking tariff favors are bought, sold and delivered over the counter.

Detroit News, Independent: A final series of vicious trades in the Senate accomplished a set of exacting and extortionate tariffs far surpassing all former records and applying a higher scale of cents to clothing and building material as well as foods. Much is found to justify the current denunciation describing the bill as "a bundle of bargains and betrayals," written by an "unholy cabal"

Chicago News, Independent: The nominal leaders of the Republican majority in the Senate . . . failed from the beginning to make their influence felt . . . Much of its (the Democratic Progressive Republican coalition) work was undone when, through the activity of a new combination particularly solicitous on behalf of the sugar, oil, lumber and leather industries, the Senate reversed its earlier action on certain important schedules.

Why We Get the Blues

By M. K. THOMSON, Ph. D.

THE blues made jazz and jazz made the blues popular. There is a blue song for every occasion.

Life is rhythmic. An even temper and a steady emotional life are impossible. We all have our ups and downs. The ocean is not always calm. It is not always rough.

Human beings must therefore expect to have moments of depression as well as moments of elation. You can't have one without the other any more than you can have mountains without valleys.

Some of the more immediate causes for the blues are fluctuations in your state of health, fatigue, and mental condition. The world looks gloomy to a man with a severe headache. On the average a man is sick nine days out of every year. In addition there will be many days when he is much below par physically.

You can induce the blues by overworking and getting so tired that everything looks distorted and out of gear. The blues indicate a depression of some sort.

"That makes me sick," we say of some distressing experience. One can be mentally sick as the result of defeat, sorrow and disappointment.

Any experience which slows up or retards the smooth current of life produces a depressed state of mind we call the blues.

In a type of insanity known as manic depression there are times when the patient has his moments of extreme joy and elation. His mind fairly races. He is in high gear. He has a superabundance of energy. He will not be suppressed. This is followed by exactly the opposite mood of extreme blues when he is down in the dumps and refuses to be aroused or to take any interest in life.

We all approximate this type of change. A pathological case serves to illustrate the normal by its very exaggeration. In extreme cases a physician should be consulted, but a certain degree of fluctuation in moods is to be expected. No one can escape the blues entirely.

THE CORRUGATING WAZZLE

By Hugh Hutton. (Author of Nutty Natural History)

THE wazze is an over-size insect employed in the Parisian hatbox factories to curve the grooves in corrugated cardboard. An attempt has been made to train it to cut the milligator wrinkles in leather handbags, and although it likes the taste of leather, it has trouble in negotiating the curves.

The individual shown here is wandering about in a forest of shoe trees,

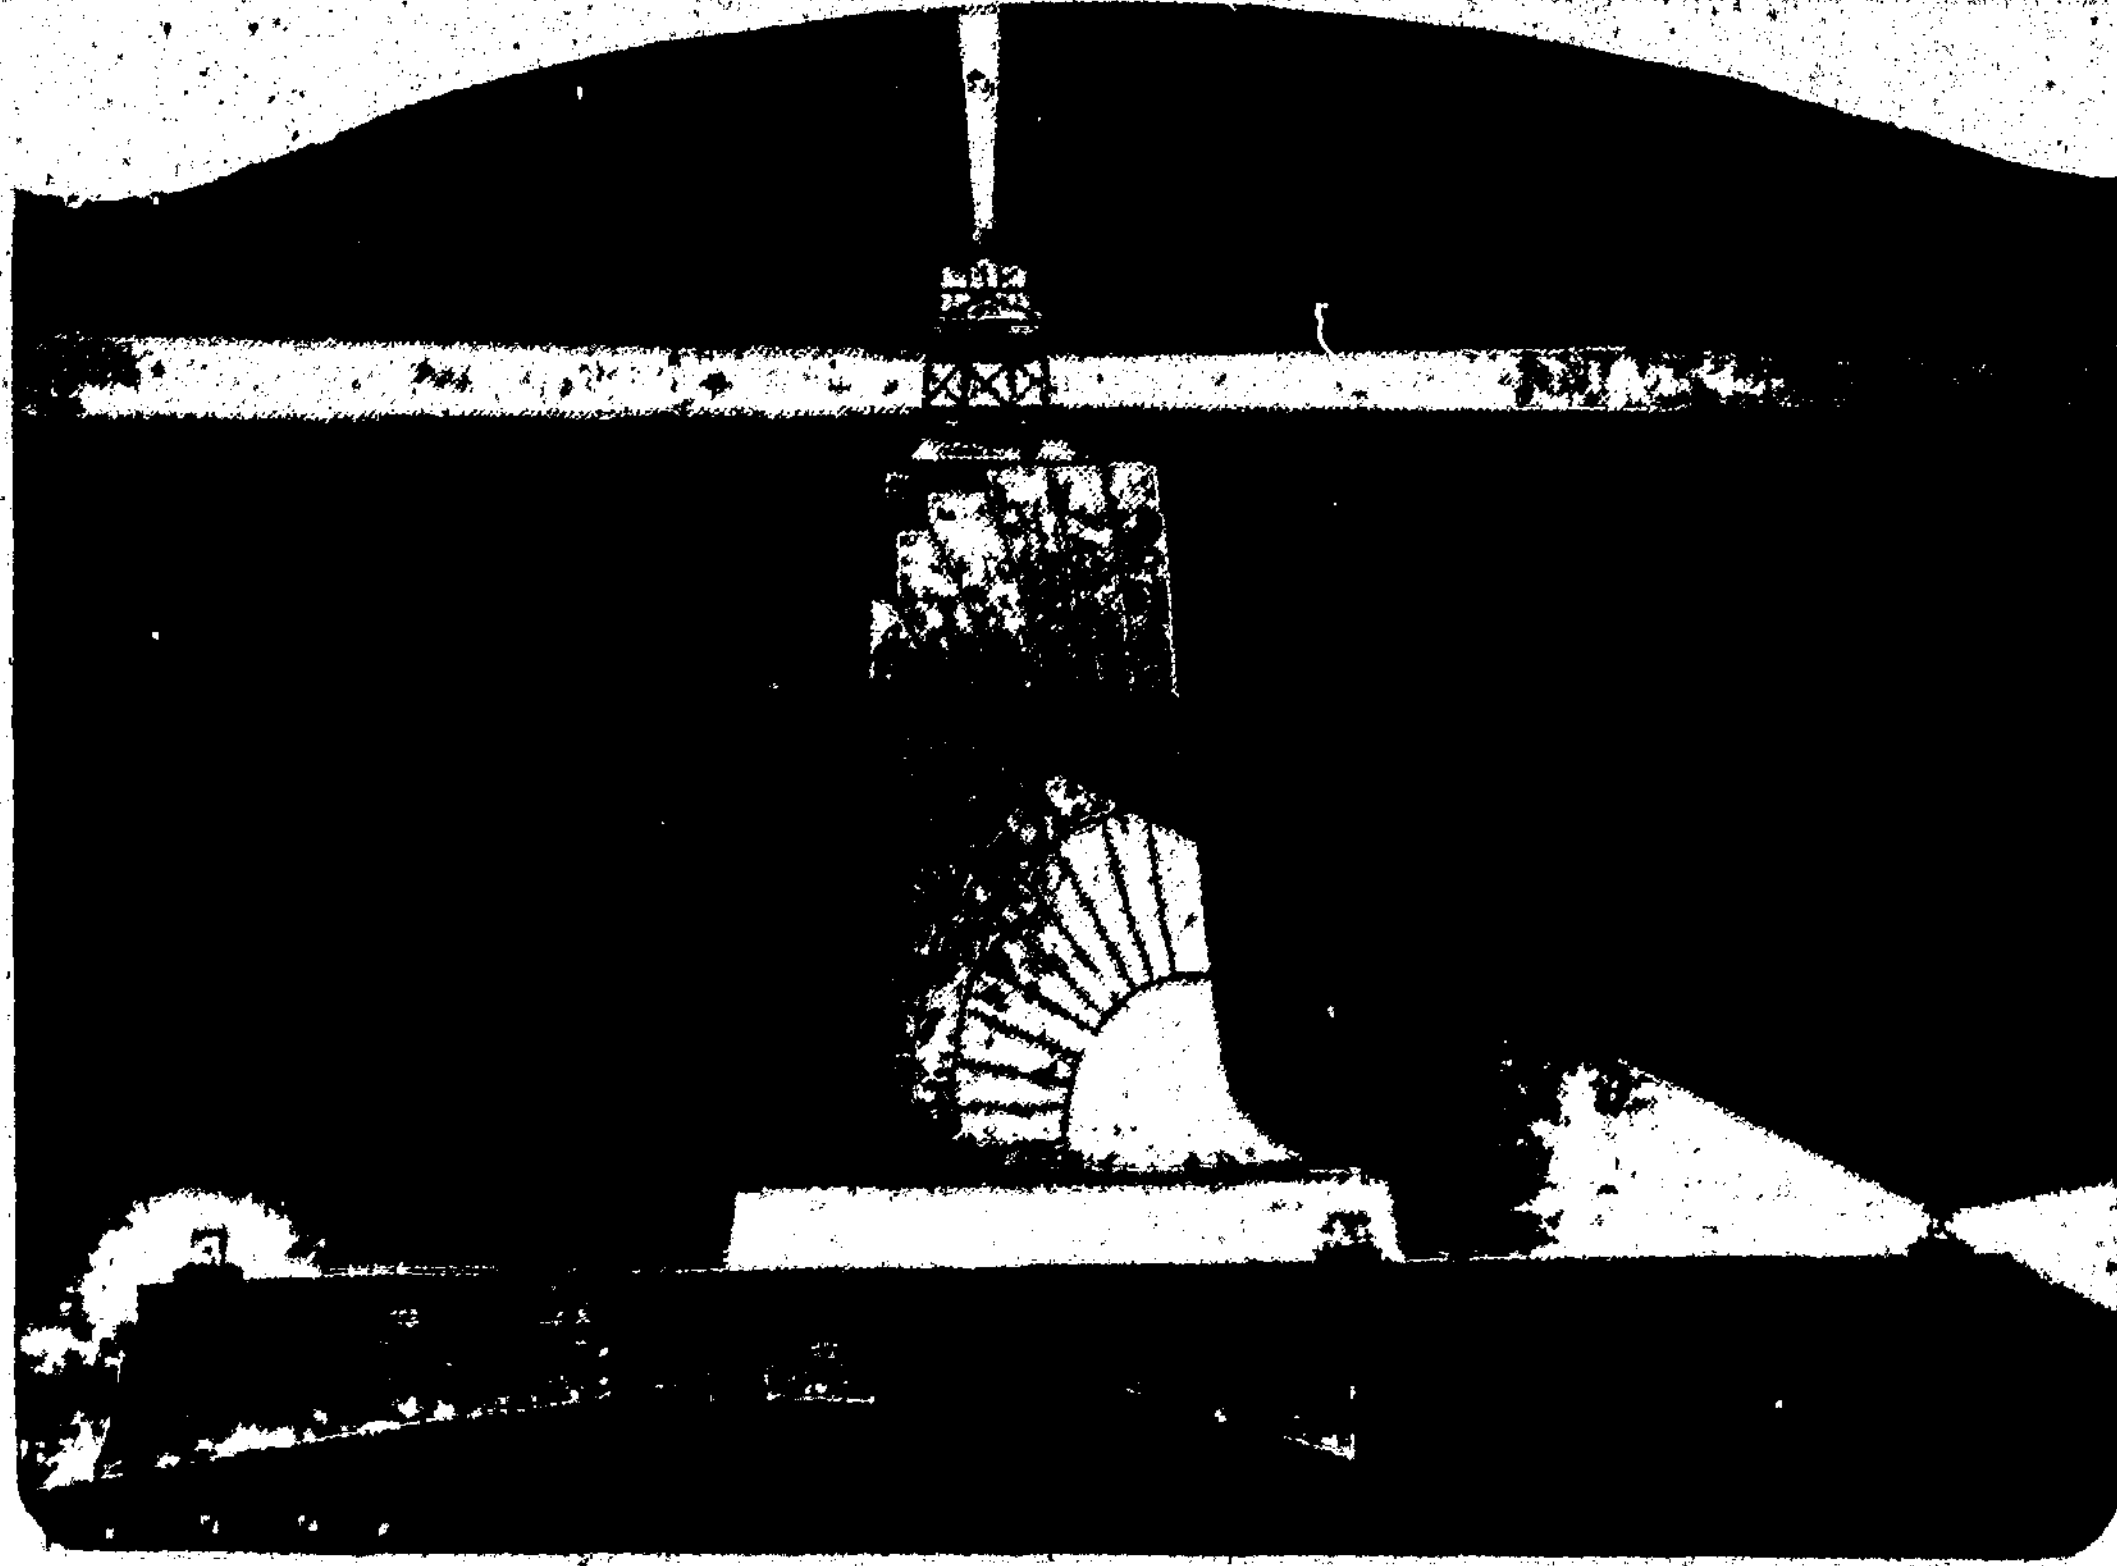

In search of a choice leather tidbit. The head and legs are formed of toothpicks, and the feet are made chiefly of split almond kernels. Pecan nuts form the body and head. The wings are lima beans, and the eyes split navy beans with ink spots.

Plan for Wright Memorial at Kitty Hawk, N. C.

After carefully considering 35 designs, submitted anonymously, a jury of award has selected this plan for the Wright memorial which has been authorized by act of congress and which will be erected at Kitty Hawk, N. C., to commemorate the first successful human attempt in all history at power driven airplane flight, as achieved December 17, 1903, by Orville Wright. The judges praised the "extreme simplicity" of the winning design, which is the creation of Robert F. Rodgers and Alfred E. Poor, New York architects.

BUT why smoke a pipe that smells like burning insulation? . . . The poor chap probably never heard of Sir Walter Raleigh's favorite smoking mixture. He doesn't know there's a tobacco so mild and fragrant it gets the O. K. of even the fussiest pipe-smoker. He doesn't know that true mildness needs a sacrifice body, flavor and "kick." ## GENUINE FELLOWSHIP

By Douglas Malleoch.

WHEN perishable man goes down into the inevitable earth, Who will be mayor of any town, And what will all your wealth be worth?

I wouldn't trade one hour of mirth For all the sorrows of a king, For joy is more than noble birth And happiness the only thing.

Whatever I may take along, It won't be money, I am sure, I figure, though I may be wrong, The only treasures that endure Are not the dollars we secure But dreams of joy that used to be, In heaven that the only poor Are spirits poor in memory.

So some of us are laying up The only treasures we have found, And life is like a loving cup We drink of and we pass around. The king will get six feet of ground, I'll get as much and something more. They say in heaven cymbals sound— Well, we're the fellows that it's for.

Good Things for the Family Table

By NELLIE MAXWELL

EVERYBODY likes potato pancakes occasionally. Serve them for noon time rather than at night as they are rather heavy for any but a good digestion.

Potato Pancakes.

Soak three large potatoes in cold water three or four hours. Grate and add one beaten egg, one-half cupful of flour, one teaspoonful of baking powder, salt and pepper to taste and add milk to make a pouring batter. Bake on a hot griddle and serve with sausages and gravy.

Spley Green Beans.

Cook one onion chopped, in four tablespoonfuls of fat until tender; add to one quart of cooked string beans, one teaspoonful of salt, one-half teaspoonful of grated nutmeg and one cupful of cream. Simmer for ten minutes and serve hot.

Spinach With Bacon.

Fry six slices of bacon retaining a tablespoonful of the fat in the pan, brown one-half cupful of mushrooms in the fat, add one tablespoonful of flour, one-half cupful of milk, salt and pepper with a dash of cayenne. Cook until smooth. Place one-fourth peck of hot, cooked spinach on a hot platter, place the bacon slices around the edge and pour over the mushroom sauce.

Baked Peas.

Take a pint of fresh peas, add them to six slices of bacon well cooked and drained. Put in a casserole, add one cupful of cream, salt and pepper to taste. Add the broken bits of bacon and cover with one-half cupful of buttered bread crumbs. Bake well covered for twenty minutes.

Red Dressing.

Take one-fourth cupful of oil, two hard cooked eggs chopped fine, one-half cupful of tomato catsup, one-fourth cupful of vinegar, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-eighth teaspoonful of pepper, one green and one red pepper chopped, one teaspoonful of chopped chives. Mix well and serve on any salad such as lettuce, asparagus or watercress.

Corn and Pepper Scallops.

To two cupfuls of corn add one-half cupful of milk, one finely chopped green pepper, one finely chopped pimento, one teaspoonful of sugar, one teaspoonful of salt and a few dashes of cayenne. Fill well buttered patties one-third full of the mixture, then sprinkle with buttered crumbs. Bake for twelve minutes. Serve hot.

A LAD OF OLD SALEM

There was not a brighter, jollier lad in Salem than Roger Ledlie. He had a ready smile for everyone, but his foster-father, Roger Williams, was first in his heart. When his young father and mother first came to the New Country, they settled with many others of John Winthrop's company, in a place called Naumkeag. It was afterward renamed "Salem," which is the Hebrew word for peace.

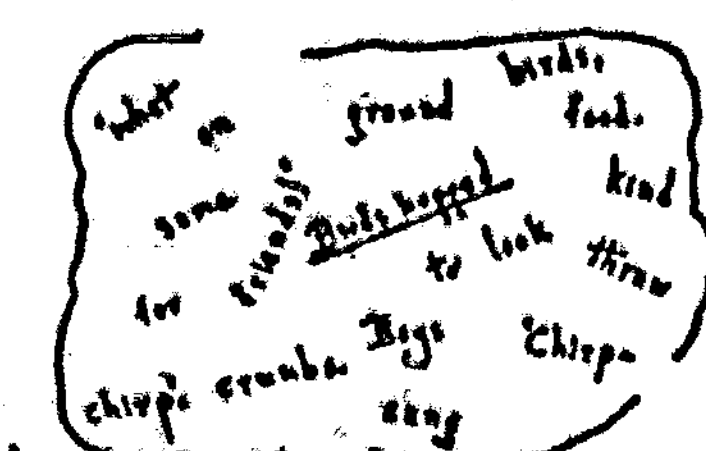

Roger's new home was, like all the rest, made of rough logs with the chinks carefully filled with mud to keep out the chill blast of the winter. There were only two windows, and Roger's father and mother their little home seemed a very Paradise. They however, were not to enjoy it long, for a dread fever which threatened to wipe out the entire colony robbed Roger of both his parents, leaving him an orphan in a strange land.

Pitiful indeed was his plight, for it seemed no one was brave enough to take another mouth to feed, when already there were grave fears of the food supply giving out. Finally it was agreed that each family having less than five members should shelter Roger for a short time, thus making him seem less a burden. Happily he had inherited his father's fine courageous nature and his mother's sunny small boats put out to welcome the arrivals. How good it was to have messages from loved ones after so long a time, while the food supply was truly a life-saver to the struggling colonists. Roger was living with the Ames family when the "Lyon" came to Salem and to them also came the young minister, Roger Williams. From the first the two Rogers were good friends, and when the elder learned the tragic fate of the child's parents, he took more than a passing interest.

Until his coming the colonists had been a sad-faced lot, any outward sign of rejoicing or merriment being frowned upon as sinful, but he had them put off their sternness, teaching them that to see and enjoy beauty was only another way of being thankful for it. It made Roger very happy to learn this, for his heart was ever aching with the beauty of the world and he longed to express it. At first only a few would listen to the young minister's teachings, but gradually others began to see the wisdom of these and to follow them. When his home was completed he took little Roger to live with him and in the long evenings beside the huge fireplace where a whole log burned slowly, there were lessons. No question was ever too trivial for the man to explain to the lad.

Often he made visits to the Indians, the Narragansetts being on excellent terms with their "White Brother." These trips proved a glorious time for little Roger, who soon learned to talk with the Indian boys and taught them a little of his own language. After one of their visits to the Narragansett camp the chief's son, a boy several years older than Roger, came forward with a most wonderful Indian costume, offering it to Roger as a gift in thankfulness for his teaching the "English." It was feather-trimmed and had gorgeous bead designs embroidered in many colors. There were beaded moccasins, too, and Roger had never been so proud in his life as he was when his foster-father had him put them on in honor of his friends.

Like Kitten Trying to Catch Its Tail

By JEAN NEWTON

"IT ISN'T what I do that harms me," said a woman who is known to be wearing herself out, "it's what I don't get done."

She's trying at one time to be a good wife and mother, to conduct a business, to keep up to the minute with everything that is being written or played, to be an up-to-the-minute dresser, and in addition to do almost as much socially as her sister who has nothing to do but entertain.

Unfortunate woman. For no matter how much she might "get done," there would always be something else that she would want to do.

It reminds me of an old Spanish proverb which says, "Women die for what is denied them."

That refers, of course, to women who spend their lives worrying over things they can't have, or in wanting everything that anyone else they know has.

Of course, no sensible woman would be guilty of that.

And yet many an otherwise sensible woman who knows better than to be a slave to having things, makes herself a slave of doing things. Witness, "If I can't get it done, it's what I am unable to do."

It is sometimes difficult, in a world that moves as fast as ours, to keep a true perspective and sense of values. But just as we can't have everything, we can't do everything. We can't see everything and know everything and take part in everything that is going on. We have to pick and choose.

But how much better to fill one part well, gracefully, in content and happiness, than to try to play the parts of seven women in one, necessarily getting full satisfaction out of none of them and fully succeeding in none of them—only in wearing herself out as does a kitten who gets dizzy spinning around in a circle trying to catch up with her own tail.

Lots of folks who think they have "indigestion" have only an acid condition which could be corrected in five or ten minutes. An effective anti-acid like Phillips Milk of Magnesia soon restores digestion to normal.

Phillips does away with all that sourness and gas right after meals. It prevents the distress so apt to occur two hours after eating. What a pleasant preparation to have! And how good it is for the system! Unlike a burning dose of soda—which is but temporary relief at best—Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

Dame Fashion Smiles

By Grace Jewett Austin

Just the other day Dame Fashion saw a phrase that caught her fancy. It was, "Today's bride is stately." That has quite a delightful ring to it, and brings a choice picture to the mind. Short-skirted dresses are as convenient as ever, and are in as good style for many purposes, but the flapperish bridal gown always had a certain incongruity about it.

So today the decree has gone forth that even though the wedding is not to be in the evening, the skirt of the bride's gown will extend to the floor. In the early spring there was a royal wedding over in Europe, with Princess Marie becoming the bride of the crown prince of Italy. While no American bride, in days of swiftly changing fashions, will sigh for a trousseau that would need two baggage cars to transport it, yet after all, little waves of influence go forth from such an event with far-reaching effect.

For instance, this royal bride wore a sleeveless bridal gown with long gloves, so the brides who may wish for this type of dress will have an important precedent to follow. Lace is not only a favorite material with brides, but it adapts itself admirably to gowns for varied occasions and all seasons. Dame Fashion's eyes shone with approval and admiration the other afternoon when she saw a distinguished looking woman, with gray hair and a grown son by her side, wearing a lace gown of coral red, with most becoming effect. It was at an afternoon function, and there were long sleeves of the lace. But when Dame Fashion had an opportunity for greeting, close by, she saw that a lace jacket was worn, which if removed, would leave the gown with a formal, and sleeveless mode. Spring, summer, autumn and winter all hold out hands of approval to the lace dress, and say, "You belong to me!"

It is only once in awhile that Dame Fashion tries her hand at writing of fashions for men, but there are some picturesque ones this year, which have been tried out during the winter at southern resorts and are quite likely to find a way into the summer wardrobe of men in the North.

Brown suits have long had their advocates, and men have found that the brown jacket is effective, as well as the blue one, with biscuit or cream colored trousers. There is quite a suggestion of a hip in, at the waist, in the jackets, but most men will balk at the suggestion of white buttons on a dark coat.

Golf lends itself well to color, but the sweaters that are promised for the summer are of small patterns without violence in effect. A green golf suit looks well as a man strides over the links. Not long ago Dame Fashion remarked that the little silk worms would have to keep unusually diligent this summer, to fill the demands for silk wear from women—but what about these prophesies that men may take to summer silk suits? Chinese men of affairs have known for centuries what a comfort it is to be clothed in silk, so why should American men be denied such a wonderful pleasure?

But the modern tan silk suit offered for a man would never give the least suggestion of any descent from a Chinese robe. That is left for the pajamas!

Horseshair, Woven Straw, Smart Paris Chapeaux

Top—A horseshair torban trimmed with a satin bow, for formal afternoon wear. Center—Black and white woven straw featuring a deep side brim and black satin bow. Bottom—Tan woven straw with tan velvet bow at the side.

The Capelet Frock for Semi-Formal Occasions

Shirtings emphasize the normal waist. A tied-on capelet, rounded front and low-placed flares are important style features. It is a typical frock for luncheon, bridge, tea or other semi-formal occasions. Made without sleeves, the dress is correct in an informal evening background. Made of plain flat crepe or georgette for day wear and of light shades of these fabrics and printed chiffon for evening.—Woman's Home Companion.

Slender Lines Feature Charming Spring Attire

Navy blue and white printed crepe silk is the newest idea to wear beneath your fur wrap. It is an economical choice, too, declares a fashion authority in the Philadelphia Ledger. For it is a favorite spring fashion. The cascading jabot frill of this model combines with a flaring lapel at center-front of the skirt to give length to the silhouette. This makes it most interesting for the woman of average full figure. A crushed grille keeps the hips slender. Even the sleeves have flaring, turn-down cuffs, which make the hand appear very dainty. Every detail seems to have been carried out to create a smart slender appearance. The plain crepe is in matching navy blue shade.

A black silk crepe with jabot rever collar and vest of eggshell silk crepe is dignified and chic. The cuffs of sleeves may be lined with the eggshell crepe. Crepe marocain, wool crepe and georgette are appropriate.

A jaunty one-piece dress that may be worn for mornings or sports, is a novelty rayon crepe that is tubular. It is in flattering nautical blue ground with navy dots. The vestee, scalloped collar, cuffs of kimono sleeves and belt employ plain crepe in the lighter blue shade. Grouped plaits at the front form a panel which slenderizes the figure. For resort it is most attractive in peach plaid flat silk crepe with white contrast. Yellow shantung is very smart. Men's shirtings, silk pique, silk broadcloth, linen and cotton pique make up splendidly for utility wear.

A quaint, pretty dress for small maids who like to be admired, is as practical as it is smart. It is a pique print that is very sturdy and washes beautifully, and is adorably dainty in french blue and white coloring. It's very simple to make. The scalloped yoke is finished at center-back for closing. The front and back of the dress are gathered and joined to the yoke following the notches for same. The scalloped hem of the dress is finished with bias binding.

Lowly Clip Ousts the Brooch in Jewelry Mode

Paris women are taking up the new jewelry fashion of wearing clips instead of brooches. The new type of pin is really not a pin at all, but is attached in the same manner as a paper clip.

Stylists in the French capital say that this new 1926 piece of jewelry is to be preferred to the brooch except in those cases where a jewel is worn away from the neckline or the belt of a garment, as in the case of the shoulder pin.

There are literally dozens of ways of wearing these new clips. Women are buying them not only in pairs and groups of three, but in sets of half dozens. Sometimes they wear all six of them on one costume—for example, two on the belt, one on each cuff, one on the handbag and one on the hat.

They are especially popular for wear in lieu of cuff links on long, tight-fitting sleeves and on the necklines of tailored dresses. Many women use them to fasten bags of plain black moire or satins.

In their favorite form they are entirely of diamonds, or rock crystal, although some of these are appearing with colored stones as well.

Why We Behave Like Human Beings

By GEORGE DORSEY, Ph.D., LL.D.

To Fear

A NURSE bathes a child each day, first tickling its feet or pinching its nose. A habit grows up, functioning like an instinct on reflex arcs. The mere sight of the nurse calls out a gurgle or a rage. If the nurse wears a blue dress habitually, the blue dress is enough. If the baby knows only one blue dress and that blue dress always means tickle or pinch, any blue dress becomes enough for gurgle or a fit. We come to hate everything associated with our early hates; afraid of everything associated with early fears. This random fears and rages come to be attached to new objects not contemplated in the original scheme of kill-or-cure emotional reinforcement. They become specific. The baby is not naturally afraid of lightning; it is afraid of a sudden crash.

Our emotions are conditioned in the same nursery in which our growing body learns its first steps. As the movements of motor mechanism become habits and so function on smooth-running reflex arcs, the emotions themselves become organized: the live-or-die glands and the autonomic nerves learn special modes of behavior. They take on habits, learn new responses, acquire new friends, new foes, new fears. The mouth waters under certain conditions. Fear is called out under certain conditions. Certain persons, things, situations, call out tantrums, cries, rages; others are sources of attachment, loves.

Practice makes perfect—hates and fears as well as tennis players and card sharps.

The function of emotion is quick action and a long memory. If I am the victim of a $100 counterfeit bill to oblige a stranger who needs change, I am not likely to oblige the next stranger requiring change. I might even "take it out on him." No such things. The horse buyer knows that a horse which has had the mango does not forget it: it is tied in. He strokes the flank of a prospective purchase. Lip quivers; that horse had the mango.

Love, fear, and hate start out together; they grow up together. Meanwhile, the reflex which enables the now born to support its body by its hands soon disappears; the human mother does not hang her baby on a limb to dry, nor does the infant have to cling to her while she climbs a tree. The primitive hate and fear types of behavior would also disappear if they were not at once set to work.

The adjusting mechanism learns—only too blindly. Until we ourselves are blind. Having eyes, we see not what there is but what we think we see. We see with a body that by nature has a huge capacity to hate that which threatens us, to fear that which endangers us, to love that which protects and feeds and tickles us. Our ancestors had to have a fear-response to the new, the unexpected, the sudden, and the strange.

There is no reason why we should jump, turn pale, sweat, gasp for breath, close our eyes and open our mouths, and feel creepy every time we hear thunder or gunfire, or are left alone in the dark, or confront a novel and strange idea. Nor should the same emotion that makes us fear the novel and the strange impel us to hate reason—even though reason interferes with our routine behavior, including attitudes, desires, ideals, ambitions, and loves. We do not get jealous of reason or want to fight it; but we do get so enraged at a book that we throw it in the fire, so mad at an opinion that we would like to crucify the man who expresses it.

The haunting fear in Dickens' day seems to have been poverty; the supreme dread, the almshouse. What is our haunting fear, our supreme dread? Have we progressed very far?

With "pep" we can make decisions, use our heads; but when the visceral nerves take charge, decisions are made for us—we are as human as iron filings around a magnet or famished hogs around a swill barrel. A man in a "towering rage" is more physically fit for murder than one in cold blood—that is what a towering rage is for, prepare the body for action with adrenin. Hate is biologically useful. Do we save it up for the hateful occasions and get the work out of it it can do, or squander it right and left?

Our hotly emotions find curious outlets: giggles, tears, laughter, shame, remorse, rage, grief, love, fear, as the case may be; and take us to fights, dances, games, theater, speculation, futile argument, Monte Carlo, or the court of Monte Cristo; or they may end in hysteria, phobias, manias.

The big question for each one of us individually is whether our acquired repertoire of specific loves, fears, and hates will suffice to keep us on good terms with ourselves and at peace with the world. Many a man loses his job because his viscera have never been educated nor his emotions trained. Note, too, that, under stress of strong rage or fear, activity in the digestive system slows down, predisposing to intestinal disorders including bacterial toxins and consequently to other far-reaching organic changes. Love on the contrary hastens food digestion and helps in metabolism. Love is a better tonic than rage or fear.

Barriers of Rock Dust Come In for Criticism

The so-called rock-dust barriers, which are being recommended by the bureau of mines to prevent the tragic, progressive explosions which take so many lives in the mines of the country, are effective only when properly installed.

Inspections carried on by the bureau have indicated that in many mines the barrier is a hurdle only and not a true barrier. In other words, the hinged shelves, upon which are placed large quantities of very fine rock dust, are erected anywhere from two to five feet from the ceiling of the mine passages, and, when tripped by an explosion, present a fine fireproof curtain from that point to the floor, but leave a sufficiently large opening above the dust for the flames to go leaping through.

Other shelves have been found so stupidly erected that no ordinary rush of air from an explosion would unseat them. Nothing short of a heavy charge of dynamite would get them into action.—Washington Star.

Nervine and General Strength Builder

Denver, Colo.—"I always have known that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the best general tonic. For any debilitated condition of health it is the best thing. I have taken it myself, in fact it is mainly from my own experience that I am recommending it. Besides I have never known this remedy to fail to give entire satisfaction. It's a blood tonic, stomach tonic, nerve and general strength builder."—Mrs. M. Gregg, 955 11th St. Fluid or tablets. All dealers.

Don't Like Swaying Homes? Apartment houses in the form of sky-scraper towers now are the vogue for homes among wealthy New Yorkers. Charles Driscoll tells of one such tower in which apartments near the top rent for $60,000 each. But high winds make the tower sway so violently that tenants who are not good sailors complain of seasickness. The result is vacant apartments and a new rental problem.—Capper's Weekly.

Hurray!

"That makes it easier," answered her father. "Now all you've got to do to make home happy is to forget the tune."—London Tit-Bits.

Harold's Mother Knew Answer

"Yes, sir, I am certainly proud of my little boy," says Mrs. H. M. Smith, 421 Topeka Ave., Topeka, Kansas. "He's five and weighs fifty-seven pounds. He's the picture of health as you can see, and I feel like he'll always be that way as long as I can get California Fig Syrup. I have used it with him ever since he was a year old. I knew what to give him for his colds and his feverish, upset spells because Mother used California Fig Syrup with all of us as children. I have used it freely with my boy and he loves it. It always fixes him up, quick."

In many homes, like this, the third and fourth generations are using pure, wholesome California Fig Syrup because it has never failed to do what is expected of it. Nothing so quickly and thoroughly purges a child's system of the souring waste which keeps him cross, feverish, headachy, bilious, half-sick, with coated tongue, bad breath and no appetite or energy as long as it is allowed to remain in the little stomach and bowels. Fig Syrup gives tone and strength to these organs so they continue to act as Nature intends them to do, and helps build up and strengthen weak, pale and underweight children. Over four million bottles used a year shows its popularity. The genuine, endorsed by physicians for 60 years, always bears the word "California."

Only the dog has sense to make friends with man and secure his affection.

The new Conoco-Germ-Processed Motor Oil is not only the fastest selling oil in Conoco history... it is establishing a new high mark in public acceptance... By a wholly new characteristic, Penetrative Lubricity, this motor oil is attracting motorists from other brands with a quickness unprecedented in the oil world... this would not be possible if this oil were not the finest and safest motor lubricant yet introduced.

It is the Germ Process which gives Conoco the essential points of superiority that make possible these things: 76% less motor wear; reduced carbon formation; lowered operating temperatures; greater gasoline mileage; resistance to dilution; and instant lubrication at the first touch of the starter.

The Germ Process adds to a supremely fine paraffin base oil, a precious ally essence lacking in all other oils. This makes possible the metal-penetrating safety factor that we call "Penetrative Lubricity." Try this new oil today... at the sign of the Red Triangle.

FRIDAY, APRIL 4, 1930

A PIONEER AND WONDERFUL CHARACTER PASSES

By Linton M. Oak, in N. M. Highway Journal.

The death of Jim Jones, pioneer resident of the Rocky Arrow section of New Mexico, is of more than local interest.

Who is left that can describe to the younger generation from personal knowledge the characteristics of Geronimo and Victorio, the famous Indian chiefs who fought so bitterly and bravely against the inevitable settlement of the Pecos Valley by white men?

Jim Jones has been one of the most picturesque characters of Southeastern New Mexico for the past half century or more.

When the Jones family emigrated from Virginia to New Mexico in 1807, they first settled in Ponce Canyon on the east side of the Pecos near Loving.

Jim Jones was the first to build a dugout at the vanished frontier settlement of Seven Rivers, north of Carlsbad.

His name is inseparably connected with the events at Last Chance Canyon and Blitting Bull Falls, famous sites for stirring battles in the old days.

When the bloodiest and biggest private war in the history of the United States broke out in all its vehemence and bitterness, Jim Jones was an active participant.

Imprisoned in the Lincoln county courthouse, at the close of the Lincoln county war between the cattle barons of the Pecos, Billy managed by quick thinking and a clever trick, to escape.

The ranks of the old-timers who participated in the stirring events of early New Mexico history are thinning out rapidly.

The back seat driver usually knows just how the car should be driven and as a rule is free to express an opinion on the matter.

The Livestock Situation

While the present predicament of the lamb feeders is a sorry one, those who have stayed with hog feeding and hog raising are making good money.

Those who have stayed with hog feeding and hog raising are making good money. There is no reason why this condition should not continue, especially in the western country where pork production falls so far short of pork consumption.

Range and pasture feed conditions are exceptionally favorable this spring, despite the fact that rainfall in practically all sections is below normal.

Financial institutions have been watching the trend of lamb market for some time, and have fully recognized that the industry was over the top and headed down.

There is no political or theoretical scheme which will permit us to get away from laws of supply and demand.

Hog values have been well maintained so far this year and those who have stayed with hog feeding and hog raising are making good money.

NATIONAL FORESTS OF SOUTH-WEST GROW IN POPULARITY

Santa Fe, N. M., March 29.—With the steady improvement of roads through the extensive eight National forests in New Mexico, their popularity is rapidly growing.

This factor and the increase of air travel, necessitates a continual campaign against carelessness to which most forest fires are attributable.

The National Automobile Club has appealed to travelers by air as well as by motor to cooperate with the Department of Agriculture in its campaign against throwing away lighted cigarettes and cigars.

Experimentation by the Forest Service has shown that lighted cigarettes thrown from automobiles and even from airplanes, continue to burn after hitting the ground.

LINCOLN FOREST NOTES

S. Strickland is up on the Gallinas, Capitan and Corona divisions of the Lincoln Forest on timber sales for a ten day period.

Work is progressing on the ten mile stretch of highway between Mayhill and Elk. A number of the farmers are aiding in the work by doing work with their teams.

A forest fence is being put in between the Alamo and Dry Canyon allotments. About four or five miles of fencing is being placed on Dry Canyon also to separate the winter and summer ranges.

Surfacing has just been completed the several ranges on the Highrolls to Warnock Mines road, which will become one of the finest scenic drives in the southwest.

Work will be started at once by the Forest Service on the Cloudercroft to Moscaero to put it in shape after the winter freezing and thawing.

A drift fence for stock is being placed from Dry Canyon south paralleling the foothills to a junction with the forest boundary fence east of Alamogordo.

George Messer, ranger of the Gallinas station, recently conducted the Lincoln county appraisal board over the National Forest ranges of Lincoln county.

FOUR FARM WOMEN'S CAMPS PLANNED FOR NEW MEXICO

Four District Farm Women's camps have been planned in New Mexico during the coming summer, for mothers and leaders.

The first camp will be held in Evergreen Valley near Las Vegas, and the Boys and Girls Scout cabin will be used thru the courtesy of the Las Vegas Chamber of Commerce.

The camp for the Northwestern District will be held in Cienega Canyon, near Albuquerque, at the cabin owned by the Business and Professional Women's Club of Albuquerque.

Women from DeBaca, Roosevelt, Chavez, Lea, Eddy, Otero, Dona Ana, and Lincoln counties, may attend the camp to be held at Cedar Creek, near the Redose June 17, 18, and 19.

The Southwestern District camp will be held at Tyrone, July 8, 10, and 11. The use of the building will be furnished thru the courtesy of the Phelps Dodge Corporation.

The cost at camp will not exceed $5.00. For additional information, get in touch with your County Agent or write to the Extension Service at State College, N. M.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. English visited Alamogordo Monday.

Sweetmilk, cream and butter, milk plentiful. Inquiries at West Dairy.

George L. Ulrich, member of the State Tax Commission, was here early in the week from Santa Fe.

Mrs. S. O. Sproles went to El Paso this morning to be with her mother and sister over the week-end.

Frances and Virginia Charles will go to Alamogordo for the week-end, to be with their grand parents, the Farleys.

W. H. Broadbuss—Optical Specialist—will be in Carrizozo, Wednesday, April 16, at the office of Dr. Shaver. Glasses fitted.

Cecil E. Moore and Mrs. Elsa Charles leave this afternoon for Las Cruces to spend the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Dan Peterson.

M. B. Paden has been quite ill the past week, and is little improved at this date. Hopes of friends hope for his early recovery.

J. D. Chandler, old-time car-wacker in the local yards, returned yesterday from the company hospital in Frisco. He is feeling fine.

The Orchestra and other entrants in the state music contest left this morning for Las Vegas, accompanied by a number of friends. Bring home the bacon!

Mrs. George F. Olden and little granddaughter, Marie, and Mr. and Mrs. Arch Campbell were here Sunday from Cloudcroft and spent the day with the Wests and Haleys.

Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Lovelace have exchanged their apartment house and adjoining property here for an apartment house in El Paso. They expect to go to El Paso at once to take over their new holdings.

J. H. Turner, of the Pecos Valley Baking Company, Roswell, was here yesterday, calling on the trade. Mr. Turner has one of the best equipped bakeries in the state, and has a good patronage for his products here.

Mrs. Paul Mayer, who returned this week from Tularosa, reports her mother greatly improved. Mrs. Mayer has spent the greater part of the past month with her mother, the latter having been seriously ill during that period.

The city election here Tuesday was so quiet that it seemed like Sunday. Only 60 votes were cast, but they were all alike—not a scratch on a single one—thus unanimously endorsing the action of the mass meeting which selected them.

The gravel crews on the road work west of the malpais are dismantling the machinery that has been used on that work, and are preparing to ship out. The finishing touches are now being given that part of the Cavern-to-Canyon Highway for which the T. J. Tobin company had the contract.

The Rainbow Girls

There will be special services at the Methodist church, Sunday, April 6, at 7:30 p. m. That date is the anniversary of the National Order of Rainbow for Girls, and that society has prepared and will present a sacred program, at the hour and place named above, consisting of music and short talks. Rev. Jno. L. Lawson will deliver the sermon, and familiar songs will be sung by a mixed choir.

This program is sponsored by the Masonic and O. E. S. bodies, and the public is cordially invited to attend.

Order Rainbow for Girls, Evelyn Grumbles, W. A. Helen Frances Huppertz, Sec.

Col. Harry Herring, of the Las Cruces country, spent last night here. He left this morning for Roswell. Col. Herring was Adjutant General of the State under Governor McDonald, and later served over seas where he won his title, and made a fine record.

John Bingham, formerly of Las Cruces but now at Albuquerque, was here yesterday enroute to the Pecos Valley. Besides being one of the best old scouts that ever came down the pike, John is an old time newspaper man and, naturally made our office a call that was altogether pleasing.

FOR SALE—Good Piano; will sell cheap. Mrs. Lumpkins, Capitan, N. M.

Nute, son of Ira Robinson, was accidentally shot by a younger brother, last Sunday, near Oscuro, while hunting rabbits. The ball entered near the knee, but encountered no bones, nor did it cut any ligaments, as was disclosed when the wounded boy was brought to the Johnson hospital for treatment. Barring infection, little danger is anticipated.

Mrs. Frank Abel and Frank Jr., returned Saturday from El Paso, where they had spent the past two weeks with Mrs. Abel's mother and sister. While there Frank, Jr., celebrated his birthday, which was represented at the table by two big cakes, each bearing three candles. Tempus fugit. When Frank, Jr., is three times three—and that'll soon roll around—Frank, Jr., will be more interested in telling his mother how he got his nose bloody at school, or why he landed on some opponent, than he will be in cakes. But that's all before Frank, Jr.

Ft. Stanton News

Mr. and Mrs. Miguel Peralta are the proud parents of a baby boy, born April 1st. Mother and baby are now doing nicely, tho the mother's condition was serious for awhile.

Rev. Smith has spent the past week redecorating the interior of the Community House, and landscaping the grounds and garden. Even this early the results are gratifying.

Uncle Jesse Perry, who makes his home with Mr. and Mrs. Elzy Perry, at Glencoe, had the misfortune to turn his car over, between the Fort and Capitan, Tuesday afternoon. He started to straighten the car, out on a curve and something had happened to the steering wheel. The car turned completely over, pinning Uncle Jesse underneath it. Some passers-by helped to get him out, righted the car and pulled it back to Capitan. Later he made his way to Fort Stanton and Jim Cavanaugh took him home. Aside from bruises and scratches he was not seriously hurt, but all agree that he had a narrow escape.

The snow was a God-send to all this part of the country, except to those fighting the forest fire on Pajarita Mountains.

Eric Williams, Harold Dicker, Scotty Gow, Red Lowery and Billie Cavanaugh went to see the forest fire, and, incidentally, to have dinner with Mrs. Cavanaugh at the Pajarita ranch. They made the trip fine until the last pull on Devil's Canyon, on their return. The snow was heavy and the car was abandoned for the night. But the boys say the trip was worth all the trouble, as they saw the fire, a herd of antelope and many other interesting sights.

Mr. John Major, who has spent the past several weeks a patient at Hotel Dieu, with a badly ulcerated eye, is again with us, jovial as ever and showing but little effects of his suffering.

Tom Hobbs is still confined to his home, but is much improved. Charles F. Gray, of Carrizozo, was a visitor at the Fort Monday, and was accompanied by J. A. Brubaker, of Capitan.

Democratic Committee Meeting Is Called

The Democratic Central Committee of Lincoln county is here by called to convene in the Court House, at Carrizozo, New Mexico, Saturday, April 12, at 1:30 p. m.

The purposes of the meeting are: to consider the resignation of the chairman, which will be presented at that time; to elect his successor; to fill existing vacancies on said committee, and to transact any and all other business that may properly come before the committee.

A full attendance is desired, but any committeeman who finds it impossible to be present is respectfully requested to send a proxy, to the end that each precinct may have an equal voice.
HERMAN E. KELT, Chairman.

Nogal Nuggets

Amos Gaylord was down from his ranch, on Nogal Canyon, last week, and reported a 2-foot snow at his place. A difficult proposition to get in and out of the canyon.

Nogal has another new family. Mr. and Mrs. Green and daughter Mr. Green is employed with a number of other men who are now at work on the Bonito, clearing out the timber around the dam site.

Conditions are excellent this spring for farming. We haven't had a better one for years.

The cold spell got part of the fruit, but after all there is quite a good crop left. If no more cold spells, we'll have plenty of fruit in the Nogal district.

F. W. Skinner purchased a real automobile—a Reo flying machine.

Joe McDaniel is doing some placer work on Dry Gulch. He reports he has taken out about $20 worth of gold dust and nuggets.

W. F. Peacock returned this week from Roswell and vicinity, and reports mining business very favorable, with the prospects of early mining operations beginning.

There will be another dance at the Nogal Amusement Hall April 12. Music by Mountain Boomers—a six-piece orchestra. The last dance was a very pleasant and orderly affair; thanks, perhaps, to the presence of the sheriff, who evidently kept the boys from getting too much mountain dew. The management appreciated the sheriff's presence. Bring your best girl to the dance on the 12th.

120,000 CENSUS TAKERS

STARTED THE COUNT OF NOS-ES, TUESDAY, APRIL 1

Washington, D. C., March 31.—The mighty 1930 census mill, which will tally and tabulate the population of these United States is mobilized and motorized, ready to go bright and early Wednesday morning.

Its 120,000 census takers, reporting to 675 supervisors, have been instructed on how to scrutinize every city apartment house and sleuth out every hermit in a hut on a remote river bank. To census headquarters here, every hermit is a family and must be counted as such. Tally must be taken too of the sailors out at sea. Everybody counts with Uncle Sam. His aim is to be accurate.

That is one reason why the month of April was set for census taking. It is considered a between-season time when the adventuring "average American family" is most likely to be found at home.

"Americans are god-abouts and the hardest question in the census is where to enumerate them," said one expert in the office of the bureau chief.

National illuminating facts on unemployment, illiteracy, industries, agriculture, and racial proportions lurk behind the marks the census taker makes in the little blank squares on the big schedules.

The many ramifications of the great 1930 census mill are therefore of vast importance and the basement packing rooms of the census bureau were full of last minute flurry today as plentiful extra supplies of big brown portfolios filled with schedules in variegated colors were being rushed out to supervisors.

With one of these big brown portfolios under his arm, and an assortment of 20,000 possible questions on the tip of his tongue, a census taker will come calling on you within two weeks after April 3, if you live in the city, within 30 days thereafter if you live on a farm.

CHAPTER IX—Continued

But nothing of these thoughts showed in Ginger's pliant face when she greeted the members of the household at breakfast on Monday morning. After all, she could not well announce to Hiram Buckworth—a rejuvenated Hiram Buckworth—it was, too, all genial affability, radiating pervasive good cheer—that if he had arranged for Marjory to enter the ministry, they, the Tollivers, had no idea of spending money to make a school teacher out of her. So she bided her time, taking a great inner satisfaction in Marjory's quickened radiance, her breathless brilliancy, her vivid joy, and admitting to herself that however disgusting this business of man-madness might be, it certainly wrought wonders in Marjory's physical appearance.

To Eddy Jackson she relieved herself of the burden of philosophy which had evolved from her painful experience.

"You know, Eddy, we really haven't any right to run other people's business—not even when we can do it a whole lot better than they can."

"No!" he ejaculated incredulously. "Absolutely. Even if they make a mess of it—why—there you are! Let them. One may be able to foresee the end, and to know far, far better than they where her conduct will lead."

"You'd better switch to the first person," he interrupted kindly. "You're getting in pretty deep."

"Well, anyhow, I can't run other people's lives—not Marjory's, nor anybody else in the world. It's too much like trying to play Heaven, I suppose." But she sighed a little.

But while she schooled herself to accept, even with a pleasant satisfaction, the degradation of her sister, there was one phase of the family affairs that she would never accept—the fact of her father's blindness.

"He can't be blind forever," she assured her own heart stoutly. "He simply cannot. He is too good, and too young, and too very, very dear. He shall go to all the doctors in the world, one after the other, until he finds the one that can perform miracles. Everybody says they do perform miracles now, the doctors and the surgeons. And they've got to do one for father. Just as soon as he gets stronger, and a little less worn out, and there is a little more money in the trunk, then he shall begin."

When she came to discuss her new scheme of family economy with her father, she encountered an unexpected obstacle.

"You must see yourself, father. It is just nonsense to spend money to make her a teacher, when she is going to marry a church."

"Eben, you must be mistaken—she is too young—"

"I'm not mistaken, father. I know this man business far as I can see it. I'm not so dumb. Besides—she just as good as told me. Oh, I don't think they'll be in any hurry about it—but it's on it's way."

Mr. Tolliver was silent for a moment. "I cover thought of that," he said slowly. "She is so young. And so beautiful. He is a fine chap. Then that is why she told me if it could be arranged any way she would rather go to regular college than to normal school."

"College! College! Marjory? And with us retired on pension?"

"She said she would work her way."

"Work! Marjory's father, why, she's—she's crazy."

"No. In love."

"College! And work her way! Why, father, the only thing in the world she hates more than study is work."

"Oh, that was before she was in love."

"Well, I hope you put your foot down hard—"

"Oh, I did. I told her I would make the arrangements."

"Oh, father, you would! It's so like you. Retired on pension—and college—and—operations—"

"Oh, there's no hurry about the operation. But college can't wait—especially if she is in love."

"But, father, darling, don't you see? What's the use to spend all that money on her when she is just going to get married, and keep house, and go to ladies' aid?"

So her father sat down with her, very quietly, and talked it all over. He said that Marjory was right. She must go to college. She would need the experience, the knowledge, the books, of people, and of things. Especially in these troubled times, would she need complete equipment so that in case she were thrown upon her own resources she could earn her own living, with dignity, with ease, even with pleasure.

"Oh, you needn't worry about that," argued Ginger. "Methodist ministers may not always be crazy about their wives, but they don't divorce them. They wouldn't dare."

He smiled at her. "I wasn't thinking of divorce," he said. "But suppose her husband died. Or suppose—"

Ginger clasped his arm. Quick tears burned in her eyes.

"Darling," she whispered. "But it is not altogether for the sake of the unpleasant and the unforeseen," he went on cheerfully. "She is so young. And Hiram is a brilliant student. Marjory will need training, and experience, and knowledge, to play her hand in his game."

As to the details, it could be arranged. Methodism makes education easy for the children of its ministers. She could work—she said she was willing to work—for her expenses in the dormitory. There are funds to take care of those who must borrow. Scholarships for those who will make the effort.

"But it is too bad to separate them," mourned Ginger. "They will have such a little while longer to be together. And twins are so very twiny."

"Oh, we can't separate them. They must both go." Ginger was uplifted at his cheerful acceptance of this wildly extravagant measure.

"Father, you—you're—you— Why, father, the less we have the more we get ready to spend."

"Oh, well, it says in the Bible, 'Believe that ye have received and ye shall have.' So if we just believe they've got their fingers on their education, they'll get it."

"I suppose so."

In her heart, for Miriam's sake, Ginger felt it was a very good thing. It would give her a much wider range from which to select a substitute for the can grocer. Besides, Miriam, except for her one aberration, was sensible. Education might really make something of her—she might go into politics, or literature, or—Ginger's imagination failed her. She knew the world offered wide avenues to brilliant women, but she knew not whither those boulevards finally led.

The whistle of the postman brought Miss Jenkins to the veranda.

"Why, Ginger," she ejaculated, "who in the world are you writing to? There are sixteen letters for you. Sixteen—"

Ginger's greedy fingers took them away from her. "Oh," she said sochalamantly, "I am looking up a lot of things, and I have a heap of books in half a dozen files. Let me tell you. Besides, you know yourself, father, I am too old to be questioned every time I write a letter."

"Dear Ginger," he said tolerantly. "I hope you strike Pay Dirt of your own. You deserve it."

Ginger was glad to make her escape without further discussion, and with her sixteen little white angels. Sixteen dimes tinkled out to join their brothers in the doll's trunk.

"Pay Dirt, I'll tell the world," she crowed. "Why it beats Sunday collections all to pieces. And besides, that has to be divided with the poor and the church and foreign missions—and every cent of it is a straight haul for the parsonage."

She read the letters, slowly, one after the other, sixteen letters, such friendly sympathetic letters, wishing such good fortune to the parsonage home, calling down God's blessing upon it in such words of faith, that Ginger's eyes filled with tears.

"You darlings," she whispered. "You dear, good, Christian darlings."

In spite of her enthusiasm, she could not quite banish a slight uncomfortable pang of regret that the home was not catering to as broad a field as its kindly donors thought.

"But after all, it is a very good thing to help the blind. Even one blind. And perhaps if we get enough money we can start a big one later on."

CHAPTER X

All Ginger's hottest arguments could not shake her father's determination. The small matter of his own vision must wait upon the education of the twins. The money they had saved during the summer—thanks to his own vacation at Pay Dirt, and to the presence of Hiram Buckworth as a regular paying guest in the parsonage—must go to their equipment for college. As for himself, he was to be in no hurry. The doctors had agreed

Warning That Caused Lion's Loss of Appetite

At the conclusion of a banquet given in his honor on the occasion of a visit to Poland, says an article translated from L'Europe Nouvelle, of Paris, Othier K. Chatterton was called upon for a speech. "An early Christian martyr," said Chatterton, "stood in the arena awaiting the lions, and he prayed to his God to perform a miracle that would save his life. And God gave him a divine inspiration. The grating in front of the lion's den was raised and a great tower hebet appeared, raised the air, shook his mane, roared and bounded toward the waiting martyr. The Christian stood with folded arms and when the animal drew near was heard to utter a few words. Immediately the lion roared and stood back to the grating. The man then he that the first thing for him to do was to become strong and robust, and to live at peace with all the world. This, then, was his present duty, and to it he bent all his energies.

Miriam, greatly to their surprise, evinced no real enthusiasm for college—Miriam, the student, the twin of judgment. It seemed to her a waste of time, she doubted if true education was to be derived from books, she was not yet sure what specific line she wished to follow as a profession. However, she yielded to their arguments, with the saving clause that she "might not go four years—a couple, anyhow—one can learn a lot in two years."

In this emergency, Mr. Tolliver departed from the established rule of the house, and arranged for a charge account at Joplin Westbury's dry-goods store. He cautioned the girls, in conference with Miss Jenkins, to use it as sparingly as possible, but what other young girls had for college, the twins, too, must have.

Ginger and Marjory held their own counsel. They used the charge account only enough to allay the suspicions of Miss Jenkins and Helen, who was back in the Thrush after her honeymoon, and living, strangely, in a small cottage some blocks removed from the parsonage. But mostly they drew upon the contributions to the home for the blind. It hurt Ginger afresh every time she drew a dime from the precious store that she had fondly hoped would bring the blessing of clear vision to her father, but he had decreed flatly that the twins came first. So Ginger obediently set herself to the accoutrement of the twins.

Already they were registered at Iowa Wesleyan. Already arrangements had been made for them to live at HERSHEY hall, giving service in return for their accommodations, Marjory at the telephone, Miriam in charge of the library. And already it was September, the public schools were opening, and the dedication of the new church was but one week away.

Mr. Tolliver and Miriam were back in the parsonage now, a sunburned, ruddy pair, with vigor in their steps, and with appetites that boded ill for the overtaxed store of dimes.

On Tuesday of that week, Eddy Jackson called Ginger to the telephone.

"Call out your brass band," he cried, with laughter in his voice. "I have a truly romantic figure lined up for you."

Ginger sniffed audibly into the telephone. "A farm hand, I suspect," she said unpleasantly.

"A false suspicion. He hails from New York."

"So did the can grocer. It seems it takes all kinds to make New York."

"Well, his father pays enough income tax to buy the whole state of Iowa. And this chap himself—thanks to the convenient death of a lot of remote relatives—is worth a cool million. Hot million, I'd call it, but he says cool."

"Is he a cripple?" inquired Ginger cautiously.

"No. He is not what I'd call an Adonia, but he is in good health. He played halfback at college. He is not disabled in any apparent way. Leading members of your sex have been known to make friendly overtures to him without much provocation."

In spite of her own best judgment, in spite of the many pitfalls she had found to await the unwary pursuer of romance and riches, Ginger's heart warmed to the chase. True, it had warmed in the past, warmed often and in vain. But after all, could so much hope, so much patience, and oh, so very much faith, fall in the end to be productive of good results? Certainly the time was ripe for the smile of fortune. Had not suffering prevailed enough nights in the old parsonage to merit the joy that cometh in the morning?

"Oh, Eddy," said Ginger anxiously. "I wish we could get rid of Miriam. She's so likely to say something smart just at the wrong minute, and get his mind off Marjory's looks. Won't you take her out somewhere?"

FOOT-AND-MOUTH DISEASE NOTICE

Bulletin on Serious Cattle Ailment Is Available.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Foot-and-mouth disease, is one of the ailments of cattle against which the United States Department of Agriculture has waged most determined and sometimes spectacular campaigns of eradication. Though the disease is almost universal in the rest of the world, persistent vigilance has kept it from spreading throughout the United States and has stamped out the plague on the nine occasions it has gained a foothold here since 1870. It is not the most malignant of animal diseases but it is one of the most infectious. The loss to the country would be staggering if the disease ever spread generally.

John R. Mohler, chief of the bureau of animal industry, has led the offensive against the more recent outbreaks of foot-and-mouth disease in the United States. In Farmers' Bulletin 680-E, just published in a revised edition, Doctor Mohler brings up to date the history of the counter offensive, explains why the United States favors the plan of slaughtering all suspected animals instead of trying to quarantine or cure them, offers brief and simple descriptions of the disease and its symptoms, suggests precautionary measures, and describes foot-and-mouth disease in man. The section on symptoms and diagnosis tells how to distinguish foot-and-mouth disease from other affections.

Farmers' Bulletin 680-E, which was first issued in 1915, has been revised to bring it up to date, and reports the eradication campaign in California early in 1920. It is available for distribution, and will be sent free to those who request it from the office of information, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Good Pasture Useful in Producing Good Pork

Rape may be sown several times during the season, from May 15 to July 15. In some cases oats is sown with rape, but the reduced yield of pasture does not seem to justify any benefit that may result from this practice. A combination in which oats does work well with Canadian field peas. Good pasture is secured when a bushel of oats and one and one-half bushels of peas are sown per acre at the normal oat planting time. It yields forage at a time when other crops are short, though it matures quickly, and prompt use must be made of same. The soy bean has use both for pasture and grain in pork production, although the latter's use is much greater. Hogs will graze soy beans, however.

Quantity and Texture of Wool Influenced

The production of wool, quantity and texture, is materially influenced by feeds that are rich in protein for milk production also. Feeding can overcome many of the objections made by wool buyers and sheep poorly fed and improperly housed cannot be expected to produce the fleeces desired by the wool trade. Shepherds need take care likewise to prevent the fleeces from becoming filled with chaff. A good fleece can be reduced to a lower grade by becoming chaffy. This may happen when the flock runs to straw piles or when hay or other feed and bedding are thrown carelessly over the backs of the animals. Successful flock masters recommend keeping the wool clean and dry, and it pays.

Live Stock Facts

Colic in horses is a result of or caused by indigestion.

Sows that are thin should be fed to gain in weight before they farrow in the fall.

Bleating seems more likely to occur when the animals do not have ready access to water, and when they do not obtain through water or otherwise a sufficient quantity of minerals.

If a sow has nursed a fairly large litter of pigs she is likely to be rather thin when bred. Hence she should be fed enough to put her in good condition again by farrowing time.

In addition to pasture, brood sows should be fed sufficient grain to keep them gaining a little. Enough grain should be fed to keep sows in good condition for fall farrowing, but they should not be given so much grain that they will become too fat.

Barley alone, used with alfalfa hay, is a poor mash-feeding feed, but barley used with alfalfa and proper supplementary feeds, such as wet feed pulp, corn silage, corn feed, and peat moss and cottonseed meal, is fully equal in value to corn as a fattener.

Analyzing ... YOU ...

With the New Science of Syllables
By C. J. COFFMAN
Dean of All the Enumerators

Georgia

"Arise and shine and be proud among your people." This might be said to be close to the meaning among the ancients, of the first four letters of your name, divided into two syllables, GE, and OIL.

You must be subject quite a lot, Georgia, to the old idea, "Let George do it." Among the Greeks, GEORGOS means farmer, and he did about everything. He produced the food, and generally for very tiny pay, that the argumentative and philosophical Athenians ate.

Laughter and amusement go well with you, but what people do not suspect is the wonderful capacity of your mind for law. Even when you have never taken any interest in the legal profession, all of your friends have discovered your well-balanced and decisive mind, indicated by your ting forehead.

One of the Georgians who has exemplified this tendency toward law is George Bullock, domestic court judge of Los Angeles, who is really doing a great deal more good in the world than will probably ever be known. The nature of her work is naturally very confidential and her wisdom must approach that of Solomon.

You could do things like that. Or you could take up another form of law, the law of health, for you would make quite a wonderful doctor. In this way, you could bring happiness and help to people, and your light would shine out beautifully. You might even emulate the example of another Georgian that I know, so much beloved by all her friends.

This is Georgia Bernard Brown of Sioux City, Iowa, counselor and friend to all who come to her, promoter of the good among women and helpfulness to girls, who is almost the mother of two states.

Gertrude

"Gertrude is her name and means She shall have dominion. None shall stop nor come between The rule of her opinion."

The outstanding fact signified by your name, Gertrude, is a curious combination of the meaning of your first syllable, GER. In the ancient languages of both the Hebrew and the Greek.

Combined from the two, the syllable GER means "Smooth Throat or stranger to old age." The inference is that you need never grow old!

Go to the mirror. See how smooth and round your throat is. It can always remain that way, but there is a special secret attached to its doing so.

That secret is simply the holding of kindly, unobtrusive, thoughts toward others in a superior position.

Going a little further into your name, we find the ancients giving part of it to mean, "a little chamber." This is the secret of your heart, and if you keep your thoughts true and clean, inside of this secret place, everything else will take care of itself.

The last syllable of your name, RUD (leaving off the modern E), really meant the presence of the Lord, and brings you the influence of dominion.

What a great joy it is to have perfect dominion over all the phases of your life, physical, mental and spiritual. You can do it by keeping your thoughts only on the ways you are going to proceed to win.

Simply ignore opposition. Read the little verse at the top again.

Look at the way Gertrude Elerie overcame the tremendous opposition of natural law and physical resistance when she swam the English channel. Think of it, 21 miles of cold, choppy and stubborn waves! And yet we shiver, sometimes, in our cold shower in the morning.

Or Gertrude Atherton, overcoming mental resistance in writing her novels. Go on, Gertrude, you can win.

The Dam

We can say little more about the company dam on Bonito than we had last week, except that the state engineer has issued the permit, the contract has been let and as soon as machinery can be placed on the ground work will begin in earnest. The work will go well into a year, and from 250 to 300 men will be employed. This is good news for Lincoln county, for it will be the means of closing up of some yawning gaps that were beginning to widen during these slack times.

Joins Silent Majority

W. B. Puckett, formerly a well known citizen of Lincoln county, died at his home in Childress, Texas, from heart failure, but notice of his death did not reach us until this week, when Mrs. Maggie Pfingsten, an old friend of the family, furnished us with a clipping from a paper published in deceased's home town, which contained the announcement of his death. The date of his demise was March 8.

Mr. Puckett was 65 years old at the time of his death, and came to Lincoln county from Texas in his youth. He was married in 1892, to the Bonito, to Miss Ella Connell, who with eleven children survive him.

Mr. Puckett and family, after many years residence in Lincoln county, moved to the Panhandle of Texas in 1906, and since 1914 made his home in Childress. Lincoln county lost one of its best citizens when Bill Puckett moved to Texas, and all humanity lost a friend at his death.

A Correction

Last week an error crept into our published program of the Junior Woman's Club. We had Mrs. McCammon appearing on the program, when it was her daughter, Ardeane. Inasmuch as the program was confined wholly to girls—mothers not even attending, much less appearing on the program—the error was all the more glaring.

By the Girls
We were very glad to have Mrs. French with us. She gave a very interesting description of her trip to Atlantic City, which was enjoyed by everyone.

After the program, refreshments of Butterfly salad, sandwiches, angel food cake and cocoa were served.

The color scheme was carried out in green.

An exhibit was given at this time. Garments made by the girls, art work, design, house plans, etc., were on display.

Everyone seemed to enjoy the afternoon very much.

STEEL ECLIPSE

Starts sooner—pumps longer

Two windmills stood just across the road from each other. With the first sign of a breeze one started up smoothly and quietly. When the breeze became a wind, the other started with a groan and lumbered away only as long as the wind raised a dust in the road. Then it stopped as abruptly as it had started, while the other continued pumping for some time—then it finally came smoothly to rest with the last trace of the dying breeze.

That is the difference between a superior windmill and just a windmill. It is the difference between accurately machined and fitted gears and ordinary cast gears; the difference between turned, ground and polished shafts and ordinary steel shafts.

In other words, it is the difference between the Fairbanks-Morse Self-Cleaning Steel Eclipse Windmill and just a plain windmill.

Come in and see this great advance in windmill construction. See the self-cleaning feature—the center shaft feature—the mechanism that enables the Eclipse to actually pump water during two-thirds of every revolution of the wind wheel. You will find a new idea of how good a windmill can be.
